At a recent meeting of the Smith's Falls council, notice was given of a by-law to reduce the number of hotel licenses in Smith's Falls. Last year two licenses were cut off, leaving only five in town, and now an effort is being made to reduce the number to four, three hotels and one shop. By a majority of one the motion has since been defeated.

The fruit crops in Canada may be affected next spring by a plague of the periodical cicada or seventeenth-year locusts. Two giant broods of these remarkable insects, that come to ravage orchard vegetation only after incubation intervals of thirteen and seventeen years, are scheduled by scientists as due to descend upon this continent within the next six months. Only the birds that can be counted upon to eat up by thousands the units in this swarming locust plague will avail to avert serious losses in the coming season, it is declared. Dr. Hewitt, Dominion Entomologist, on being interviewed, said that he knew of the coming plague of cicada. He did not, however, consider that Canadian fruit crops would be materially affected by it.

The case of this corporation against J. W. Relyea for breach of the transient traders bylaw came up before Magistrate Eager on Monday night last at 7 o'clock, and was adjourned to the 27th inst. at the same hour. Mr. R. F. Lyle, acting for the corporation, stated to his worship that a settlement of the case had been arranged over the telephone with the defendant's lawyer, Mr. R. A. Pringle, of Cornwall, that morning, by which the case was to stand adjourned for one week and in the meantime the defendant was to pay the transient traders license of $100, together with all cost including Mr. Lyle's fee. Pursuant to the agreement Mr. Lyle stated that the case be adjourned for one week, which was granted. The defendant appeared on Thursday and paid the license fee and costs as above. He gave the matter considerable publicity at his sales room by telling his customers how he was going to tune the town, but upon consulting his lawyer he found his own law would not stand the test. It is always wise not to yell until you get out of the woods.

Cornwall lost a very highly esteemed resident on Saturday, when Mrs. Graveley, widow of the late Chas. Locock Graveley, passed away, aged sixty-seven years. Her maiden name was Mary A. Harley, and she was a daughter of the late William Harley, South Branch. Shortly after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Graveley went to reside in Cornwall. Mr. Graveley died thirteen years ago. The deceased is survived by two sons and six daughters: William Graveley, Ottawa; John A. Graveley, Toronto; Miss Effie Graveley, Montreal; Miss Lillian Graveley, Grand Mere, Que.; Misses Thorah, Edith and Elizabeth Graveley at home.

Dr. Chamberlain, with his characteristic hospitality, has been for the past couple of weeks entertaining the residents of town to six o'clock suppers at the Sanatorium, and enjoyable evenings. He has been taking them in sort of relays to the number of fifteen or twenty. Possibly the most notable gathering was one evening this week, when some twelve elderly gentlemen, all of whom were over 70 years of age passed the evening with him, and had a delightful time. All who have been his guests and have inspected the sanatorium, were loud in their praises of the institution, and also expressed surprise at the completeness of its fitting up as a hospital.

MGR. GAUTHIER WAS INSTALLED.

French Laity's Address was Presented Despite French Society's Refusal.

Ottawa, February 22.—The enthronement of Mgr. Charles Hugh Gauthier, formerly archbishop of Kingston, as the new spiritual head of Ottawa archdiocese, took place at the Basilica last night. He received four addresses of welcome, one the much-debated address from the French laity. Three archbishops took part in the celebration of the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament: Mgr. Bruchesi, of Montreal; Mgr. McCarthy, of Halifax; and Mgr. Howley, of Newfoundland. The bishops were Mgrs. Emard, of Valleyfield; Larocque, of Sherbrooke; O'Connor, of Peterboro; Archambault, of Joliette; McDonnell, of Alexandria; Scollard, of Sault Ste Marie; and Bishop Fallon, of London. Two hundred and twenty-six clergy took part.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was present, as were also Sir Elizear Taschereau, Hon. Charles Marcell, Senator David, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Sir Richard Scott and Hon. Chas. Murphy.

The address of the French laity was read by Mgr. Routhier and was greeted with interest, if not surprise, after the decision of the French Educational Society not to have one. Hon. Charles Murphy read the respects of the English laity.

LONG SAULT DAM COMPANY

Has an Illegal Charter—Measure Introduced in New York State Legislature to Repeal it.

Washington, February 22.—Mr. J. W. Allison received word from Albany to-day that a bill will be introduced in the New York Legislature to-day to repeal the charter of the Long Sault Company.

It was found that an old law prohibited the granting of perpetual charters, and that the Long Sault charter came under this prohibition.

THE REDDICK MINE

Debt Being Paid Off, and the Mine Will Shortly be Re-Opened.

(Montreal Gazette.)

Announcement was made on Monday that all doubt had been removed as to the re-opening of the Dr. Reddick mine at Larder Lake, as half of the debt was paid yesterday and the other half will be paid in the near future. In about ten days a new manager will leave for the mine, and it is highly probable that work will be begun next month, preliminary to the starting of the mill, as there is already a good quantity of ore on the dump.

M. C. I. vs. ST. ALBAN'S SCHOOL

Fast Game at Brockville in Which the Score Was a Tie.

The M. C. I. hockey team went to Brockville on Friday, 17th, to try conclusions with the St. Albans team. The result of the match was feared by our boys, as the fame of St. Albans class work had reached them on several occasions.

From the start, however, the M. C. I. team had the best of the playing, and only St. Albans excellent defence saved her from a severe beating. The M.C.I. defence, on the other hand, did a lot of aggressive work, particularly in the first twenty minutes of play, when "Mooney" scored a goal for the collegiate.

In the second twenty minutes the St. Albans crowd picked up considerably but their repeated rushes were persistently broken up. In the last three minutes they managed to drift one in between M. C. I. nets leaving the score tied.

The game on the whole was rough, but as fast as could be expected, owing to the softness of the ice.

Don't fail to see the return match on Morrisburg ice on Tuesday, 28th. The M. C. I. boys have been working and hope to break the tie.

Game called at 7.45 sharp.

Cornwall Board of Trade Outspoken

Cornwall, February 21.—There was a large attendance at the annual meeting of the Cornwall Board of Trade last night, when a resolution was carried heartily endorsing the proposal to dam the Long Sault Rapids, providing Canada gets half of the power developed.

The following resolution was passed after a warm discussion:—

"That the Cornwall Board of Trade views with grave apprehension the evident intention of the Dominion Government to secure the ratification by Parliament of the reciprocity agreement with the United States, and would respectfully urge upon the Government the necessity for the most thorough and careful consideration of the possible and probable results of such action before committing the country to the agreement."

"This Board is of the opinion that the adoption of the agreement would not be in the best interests of Canada. While certain sections or interests might be benefitted temporarily, the gain would be more than offset by the loss and injury which would accrue to other sections and interests."

"Furthermore, we are of the opinion that the carrying out of the agreement would tend to weaken the ties which bind Canada to the British Empire. This country is just on the threshold of a period of remarkable development and prosperity, and cannot afford to make any hazardous experiments. We should continue to develop our own resources for the benefit of our own people."

With the Curlers.

Monday night saw two interesting and closely contested matches, in which the scores were low and exceedingly close. The contestants were rinks skipped by F. R. Chalmers and Geo. Merkle, on the west ice, and Harry Armstrong and Harry Winstanley on the east ice. The scores at the finish were: Chalmers 10, Merkle 9; Armstrong 10, Winstanley 8.

Tuesday night Dr. Davy's rink defeated Winstanley's by 21 to 10. Harry attributes his defeat to Murphy carrying his lucky rabbit's foot with him.

LONG SAULT DAM KILLED

Col. Hughes, Back From Washington, Says It Is Now Dead

Ottawa, Feb. 22.—Col. Sam Hughes has returned from Washington. He reports that the bill pending before Congress, authorizing the construction of a dam across the St. Lawrence river at the Longue Sault rapids, has been killed and this time for keeps.

Vice-President Schurman is authority for the statement that the matter will not be further considered by the Senate. A great deal of the credit for this is due to Mr. J. Wesley Allison, of Morrisburg, who has been in Washington for weeks, opposing the measure. Col. Hughes while in Washington was the recipient of many courtesies from leading men at the capital. He expressed himself as satisfied that the McCall Bill ratifying the reciprocity arrangement with Canada, would be passed by the Senate at this session.

COL. HUGHES IN WASHINGTON.

Well Known Canadian M.P. Now in the U. S. Capital.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 20.—Well-wishers for international peace had a scare Saturday when they learned that the American capital was to be visited by no less a promoter of British imperialism the world over than Colonel Sam Hughes, M. P. of Ottawa, and Toronto.

The Colonel came on Saturday night, and instead of a regiment of blue and grey he faced merely the red-capped colored porters, ready to take his suit case and his loose change. President Taft ate his dinner in peace and quiet, undisturbed by the clamor of arms. The sunset gun was fired and the men at Fort Meyer retired as usual. There was no burning of the Capitol as in the case of the last British invasion in 1815. Col. Hughes had come to confer with a friend, J. Wesley Allison, who is engaged in defeating the Longue Sault Power Bill, now before Congress, and for other reasons.

Au Revoir

We have all heard the remark, "The best of friends must part." This was plainly brought to our minds when about forty five neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. John Scott on Tuesday evening last to say a fond farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Scott and family before leaving for their new home in Mountain. The evening was spent very pleasantly in games and social conversation until about 10.30 o'clock, when all repaired to the dining room, where oysters and other dainties were very tastefully served. Before leaving an address was read by Mr. George Smyth, which voiced clearly the regret felt by one and all in severing their connection with Mr. and Mrs. Scott and family.

To Mr. and Mrs. Scott and family,—Dear friends and neighbors,—For the past few years you have lived among us as neighbors and friends. During all that time we have ever found you kind and helpful, always willing to lend a hand whenever needed, for the accomplishment of any good cause. We, the people of Rowena and vicinity cannot let you go from us without conveying to you our best wishes and most sincere regret at your leaving us, and for this purpose we have met here to-night. Pleasant as the evening may be spent still one thought still lingers with us; we have met here to say good-bye, for a time at least, but may this gathering ever remain a link that shall bind us together in the years to come. In your new home we pray that God will ever bless you and make the coming years bright and prosperous. We shall miss you, and shall always look forward with pleasure to a re-union again, if not permitted here, around the Great White Throne, where parting is unknown. Believe us, our best wishes and most sincere prayers go with you ever.

Signed on behalf of the citizens of Rowena and vicinity.

Thomas Carter,
George Smyth,
William Mullin,
Isaac Markell.

The Passing of John Broder.

Mr. John Broder of St. Joseph, Mo., died suddenly at his home on the morning of Jan. 12th in his 81st year. The surviving members of the family are Mrs. Eleanor Sweet of Hemmingford, P. Q., Mrs. James Cowan, Morrisburg, Ont., Andrew Broder, Morrisburg, Ont., and Henry Broder, St. Catharines, Ont.

Broder left Canada when he was quite a young man and located in Ohio where he went into railway work. Later on he became a contractor and built lines in Ohio, Illinois, Tennessee, Missouri and Kansas. In 1860 he was one of those in laying the first track west of the Missouri river, four and one-half miles of the St. Joseph and Grand Island line. In 1875 he was city marshal of St. Joseph and later was appointed chief of police, a position which he held for fifteen years. He was a prominent Mason and took an active interest in the work to the last, having attended a lodge meeting the night before he died. The funeral was conducted by the Scottish Rite of the Masonic Order.—Press.

BLIND HERO TO MARRY

Trooper Mulloy's Engagement to Miss Munro Announced.

The following despatch from Ottawa will be read by residents of Dundas county with great interest, the person referred to being a native of Winchester and a graduate of Morrisburg Collegiate Institute:—

"Ottawa, Feb. 22.—A marriage of much interest to Canadians generally will be celebrated in the Methodist church at Waddington, N. Y., on Friday, March 5, when Trooper L. W. R. Mulloy, the blind Canadian hero of the South African war, will lead to the altar Miss Jean Munro, daughter of a Seattle (Wash.) millionaire, and herself the possessor of half a million in her own right. Trooper Mulloy will be in the novel position of having never seen his bride, as the romance which culminated in the present engagement only began some years after he received the terrible injuries in the war which resulted in his complete loss of sight. He met Miss Munro in London, England, about six years ago. The trooper himself gave out the news of his intended marriage yesterday. Miss Munro is an accomplished musician and the possessor of a magnificent soprano voice. She has studied in Italy for five years and was a companion of Madame Tetrazzini. Trooper Mulloy recently received the appointment of secretary of the Conservative Association of London, and besides this he is secretary of the Imperial Pioneer Association. It is anticipated that he will now enter politics, and stand in the Conservative interest on his return to England for one of the two constituencies offered him at the recent general elections. The marriage will be very quiet."

Morrisburg Farmers' Club Meeting

The largest audience that ever attended a Farmers' Club Meeting in Morrisburg listened to Prof. F. C. Elford for one and one half hours on Saturday last. Professor Elford is a pleasing speaker, and, by his clear explanation of the weaknesses of present day poultry methods, and his answers to numerous questions, showed to his interested hearers that he was an authority on the rearing of poultry. He claimed that the poultry are badly neglected on the average farm, that the profits are such that farmers could well afford to give more attention to the hen. He recommended cheap houses, preferably the colony house, large enough for 25 hens. It should be well ventilated and dry and does not require to be warm—one thickness of lumber is sufficient. Every means possible should be used to save labor. He would feed but once a day and that about the middle of the afternoon. At Macdonald College a hopper with bran in it was before the hens all the time. Their practice was to feed a grain ration of 1-3 wheat, 1-3 corn and the balance any other grain handy. Grain was thrown on chaff; hens filled themselves before going to roost on the corn which was plainly visible and then spent the next day scratching for the smaller grains. Such fowls as would lay when eggs are high priced—that is November, December, January, should be kept. To get eggs next winter begin now. Have chickens hatched in April or early May and they would lay early next fall. Nothing older than two years old should be kept, unless for a keepsake. Only laying strains should be kept; some hens never make profitable layers. For this section the American breeds—Barred Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds and Wyandottes—are the best, and when pressed for an answer Mr. Elford admitted that he preferred the Barred Plymouth Rock for a general purpose fowl. An upturned sod made the best nest for a sitting hen. Young chicks should not be fed from 24 to 48 hours, after that some bread or hard boiled eggs is good. To prevent hens from sitting put in a swinging cage and feed well. In the few minutes at his disposal Mr. Elford said that the loss in the handling of eggs was very great. There was too great a margin between the price received by the producer and the price paid by the consumer. This was largely due to the large quantity of stale or bad eggs sold. The farmers paid this loss, as the wholesaler regulated his price so as to suffer no loss. Farmers were not careful enough in gathering and merchants not careful enough in handling.

During a discussion which took place after the address it was brought out that many present were anxious to put forth an effort to place the handling of poultry on a better basis, and a committee composed of Messrs. I. Smith, Dundela; Stephen McPherson, Bouck's Hill, W. G. Robertson, R. Ashton, Allan Lewis and A. D. Campbell, was appointed to look into the co-operative handling of eggs and report at the next meeting.

Professor Elford will probably address another meeting in the town hall this winter and the building should not be large enough to hold the audience.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE; OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER VII.

Derrick muttered something not complimentary to the newcomer, but the next instant he was exchanging a warm handclasp with Sir Humphrey; while Nancy, scarcely knowing what she said, hurried away to coax some red roses from Mr. Murdock, the autocratic head gardener of Ripstone Hall.

"Well, Derry, my boy, and so your mother is coming down to-day! God bless me, what years since I have seen Anne! We must make her as comfortable as we can, you know, but I am afraid she will find it very quiet."

"Don't you worry about her, Uncle Humphrey; rest assured my mother will have the best of everything, wherever she may be."

Darnley spoke dryly, though not unaffectionately; but had Sir Humphrey been more observant, he must have noticed that there was an air of suppressed excitement about his nephew, and that Mr. Darnley's gray eyes were fixed persistently in one direction.

"What are you going to do—meet your mother? Oh! well, I suppose I ought to go too. Yes—yes, my boy, I must treat Anne with all due respect, so we had better be off at once; not that way, this is the nearest to the stables."

But Derrick Darnley, muttering something about returning is a moment, rushed down a side path after that slender, blue-robed figure, leaving Sir Humphrey a little amazed, but not at all enlightened.

A few strides brought the young man up to Nancy's side; he had no chance of speaking to her privately, for just in front of them stood the mighty Mr. Murdock himself. His back was, fortunately, turned to them, however, and, by a clever movement, Darnley got that red umbrella at a convenient angle.

"Nancy," he said, in eager haste, "I must speak to you when I come back—I must, my darling! I—I cannot wait any longer! Oh! you understand me, my dearest, do you not? Yes, I read it in your eyes—those exquisite, maddening eyes! I love you—I love you, Nancy, my own, my darling one!"—and, as the soft, eager words died away, he stooped and touched her half-parted lips. "Meet me by the lower lake this afternoon about seven. You can slip away from the crowd easily," he murmured, in low, tender tones. "My love—my darling you will not fail me!"

Once again his lips pressed hers, and then, before she realized that it was no heavenly dream, he had disappeared, and Mr. Murdock was at her elbow with the roses she required.

It had been a freak of Dorothy's that she and Nancy should be dressed exactly alike at the tennis tournament; and, despite our heroine's expostulations and gentle resistance, this desire was carried out.

The dresses chosen were both of Parisian make, being a delicate shade of pink silk, draped with the finest lawn, and trimmed with Valenciennes lace; a large shady hat, with a bunch of the most natural-looking pink roses, was sent to be worn with each of these dresses, and the two girls also carried the most exquisite pink sunshades. The effect was indescribably charming, both to Dorothy's golden hair and fair loveliness, and Nancy's russet locks and cream-white skin.

"Yes, it is very beautiful, dear, and I must confess I look nice," Nancy said, as Dorothy led her to the long mirror in triumph, and showed her her own reflection; "but I don't feel happy in it. I am not you, dear, nor am I your sister. I have no right to this splendor. After all, I am only a bird in borrowed plumes, and some—"

But here Dorothy Leicester placed her hand over her rebellious lips, and then silenced them with a kiss.

"You dare to talk like that, Nancy! You dare! My sister!—my dear, darling sister! I mean to let all the world know you as you really are." She kissed the trembling lips again. "You love me, Nancy?" she asked.

"Love you!" repeated Nancy, with deepest emotion. "Oh, my dearest! how can you ask me such a question? Love you? There is nothing on this earth I would not do for you, Dorothy!"

"Then you will oblige me by refraining from talking in the future as you have talked this morning, there—with another kiss—now we will never mention the subject again. Look at ourselves, Nancy. Don't we look too sweet for words?"

"There will be no one to compare with you, dear," Nancy said, softly.

"Except you; and I am not jealous of you."

Dorothy slipped her hand from Nancy's arm, and went to the window.

"There go Aunt Anne and Derry. I wonder if—will he like these dresses, Nancy? He is a great authority on dress, you know."

There was a pretty tinge of pink on Dorothy's cheeks, but Nancy had grown rosy red.

She only dimly heard Dorothy talking; her mind was back in the rose garden. She saw those two dark-gray eyes, drawing, as it were, her very soul through her own blue ones. She felt only the indescribable enthrallment of his presence, his touch on her lips. All else was forgotten—buried in this blissful ecstasy.

Dorothy's pathetic eagerness to please her cousin was completely lost. She knew nothing, saw nothing, heard nothing, but Derry—Derry's love, his passionate, tender voice, murmuring his words of love in her ear.

"There, now we are ready. Come along, Nancy; we must go down. I have to introduce you to Aunt Anne and everybody. I wanted you to meet her this morning, but I could not find you. What did you do with yourself, pray, mademoiselle?"

"I went into the village. I wanted to see Mrs. Wortley."

Nancy's voice was low and hurried; it sounded strange in her own ears.

"Naughty girl! If I had only known it, what a scolding you would have had! No wonder I thought you looking pale just now."

"Oh, Dolly!"

And Nancy belied that accusation by blushing deeply again.

And then she followed Dorothy downstairs, and out on the lawn.

"And who are these, pray?" inquired Mrs. Darnley of her son, as she beheld the two dainty forms approaching.

"Don't you recognize Dorothy?"

"Ah! so it is; but the other?"

Mrs. Darnley put up her gold eyeglasses and surveyed Nancy through them carefully. "Surely, that is not Gladys Leicester's girl, Derrick?"

"That is Miss Hamilton."

Derry said it very hurriedly, but his voice would thrill.

"Miss Hamilton?" Mrs. Darnley dropped her glass. "My dear Derrick, what a lamentable thing! I quite agree with Lady Merefield, Humphrey should be confined in a lunatic asylum. Did any one ever hear of such utter madness! And to carry it to this pitch! An unknown girl, coming from the gutter, to be decked out identically with Dorothy, as if she were, in very truth, her sister! Oh, I must speak to Humphrey without delay!"

"Do you think it womanly, or just, mother, to condemn an innocent girl in this harsh and unmerciful way?"

Mrs. Darnley looked at her son's face with its drawn brows and hot flush of anger.

"Humphrey is not the only madman, apparently," she observed, coldly, and with that she sailed majestically away, just as Dorothy and Nancy were approaching her.

"Where is Aunt Anne going? I want to introduce Nancy to her," Dorothy said, as they reached Mr. Darnley's side.

"She has forgotten to greet Lady Merefield," he answered, quickly, feeling a desperate longing to crush Nancy in his arms, and so defy his mother and all the world.

Dorothy frowned slightly.

"Well, there is plenty of time, Nancy," she observed. "Aunt Anne is going to stay here some time, so papa tells me."

There was not an excess of pleasure about Miss Leicester as she remarked this, a fact which Darnley noticed at once.

Nancy, fortunately, saw nothing wrong. She was so enveloped in the wonderful, the delicious sensations that had lingered with her ever since the early morning, and now deepened as she stood in her lover's presence again, that her usually keen perception was dull to the fact that Mrs. Darnley had moved away purposely to avoid her.

And treated her with a want of courtesy that was making Derry's blood boil; but as Nancy did not dare lift her eyes to his face, his contracted brow and vexed look were lost on her.

"Nancy, we must separate," Dorothy said, as carriage load after carriage load drove up to the entrance and densitized groups of delicately attired ladies on the lawn.

"I must stay here. Will you go to the tents? Papa will present you to every one you do not know already. Darnley, you will stay with me, won't you?"

Mr. Darnley had made half a movement to accompany Nancy, but he was obliged to stop at his cousin's request.

"Here comes Merefield, fully prepared to follow you about like a dog all the day," he said, languidly, his eyes dwelling on the vanishing form that was dearer to him than his life. "You must be kind to him to-day, Dolly."

"I am always kind to him," Dolly retorted; "but he is such a bore."

"Few women consider it a bore to be loved."

"It depends on who loves them," Dorothy replied, softly, a tiny blush coming to her cheeks; then, very hurriedly, just as she went to meet her guests, "Derry, Aunt Anne means to be nasty about Nancy, and I won't stand it. I give you fair warning that I shall be very disagreeable if she is rude to Nancy—she is very dear to me."

"And if she is dear to Dorothy, what is she to me?" communed Darnley with himself, as he stood for an instant alone. "My darling! there seems some marvellous fascination about her—she seems to have bewitched me. I feel as though I could fold her in my arms now and carry her away from everybody. There is nothing I would not do for her; she will find me her knight as well as her lover. If any one dare to insult her, they must answer to me—even if it be my own mother."

His eyes went to that mother's form as she stood haughty, regally tall and handsome; he knew that if Anne Darnley loved any one on earth she loved him; that if any human creature could strike a spark of womanly feeling and warmth from the cold, proud, worldly heart, he alone was that person; yet his own heart failed him. He thought of Nancy, and recalled his mother's hard, angry face as she discussed what she was pleased to term Sir Humphrey's madness about this girl.

"There will be a fight," he said to himself, with half a sigh—"there must be a fight; but I shall conquer. And what if I do not? Why need I care? I have my darling—her love is all I ask; for with her by my side I can face the world, poverty, hard work, I care not what!"

And then he roused himself to go among the chattering, laughing girls, all eager for the tennis affair, and paid his court to the dowagers with all his usual grace of manner.

The Misses Chester were in exuberant spirits, rushing about, clad in scanty white flannel garments, with extraordinary caps on their heads, and useful, though by no means ornamental, shoes on their large feet.

Lady Burton surveyed her progeny with much maternal pride.

"How devoted Lord Merefield is to my dear Ella! Do you observe them?" she remarked to Mrs. Darnley, totally blind to the fact that poor Lord Merefield was being towed about—there is no other word for it—by the energetic Ella, his face looking as sullen and cloudy as the proverbial thunderstorm.

Mrs. Darnley smiled with a scarcely concealed sneer.

"It is a pity," she said, laconically, "that Merefield has nothing with which to support his proud old title. His father might have left him at least a pretence of an income; as it is, he must marry money!"

But Lady Burton was impervious to the broad hint—money or no, he possessed a coronet, and that was everything to her.

"I suppose we shall see dear Mr. Crawshaw here," she remarked next, sweeping the fast-swelling throng with her eyeglasses in search of the millionaire.

Mrs. Darnley frowned.

"Surely they do not admit the man here on such terms of intimacy!" she protested.

WORTH THINKING ABOUT.

Suppose you do have to spend $100 for tile to drain that big swale in one corner of the farm. It may be the means of bringing the worthless land into a crop that will more than pay the expense the first year. Try it.

If we don't chew our food well we have dyspepsia. Too many of us have bitten off more land than we can farm well and the result is soil indigestion and dyspepsia of the pocketbook.

If your neighbor casts a longing eye on your best brood mare be sure she is worth as much to you as to him and hang on to her.

The time to clean seed wheat is in the winter. We will have time to do a better job than then the day before we commence sowing in the spring.

Going to raise a third crop of corn on the same land next year? Great mistake.

HOW TED SHARED.

Ted was cross. That very morning, when he found the ground all covered with snow, he had sat down to the breakfast-table feeling that it would not do him any good, anyway. "For you see, papa, I haven't a sled, it just isn't any fun at all without one," he said.

Papa laughed. "Well, Ted, we must see about that. A snow-storm without a sled would be a good deal like a mince pie without any mince. How much will a sled cost me?" he asked.

This was encouraging. "I can get a beauty for two dollars!" cried Ted, eagerly. So after breakfast he started for town as fast as he could go, with his shining silver dollars tightly squeezed in his hand.

On the way he stopped in for his intimate friend, Ned, who lived in a small house with so many children in it that Ted used always to think of the old woman who lived in a shoe. But they were the happiest family you ever saw, which was fortunate, for if they had quarreled, it would have been so much harder for the little house to hold them.

"Have you a sled yet, Ned?" asked Ted, as they tramped down the road.

"Not yet," answered Ned, cheerfully. "I did earn a dollar to get one, but Mamie needed shoes just then."

It did not take long to buy the sled, and then, as it was Saturday, they went to the hill to try it. But some way Ted did not enjoy it as he thought he would. And when he came home, he sat down before the grate fire and fell into a brown study. And it must be confessed, it was not a good-natured one, either.

"What is it, Ted?" asked mother, after she had heard two or three long sighs.

"I do wish everybody was rich. You see, Ned gave up his sled to buy shoes for Mamie, and I'm such an old stingy I never thought of buying him a dollar one and one for me, too. And it just took all the fun out of it when I was riding to have Ned up there waiting for his turn, with his hands in his tight pockets—they're always too little. And now I've used the sled, I don't s'pose they'd take it back."

"I think I could arrange that if you would really like to, dear," said mother.

Another struggle went on in Ted's mind.

"I think it would be nice for papa to give him two dollars for one, don't you?" he said, at last.

"No, I don't, dear. I believe you will enjoy a cheaper sled better if you take it for Ned's sake," answered mother.

"Well, I'll try it," said Ted. So he took the sled and note from mamma down-town; and when he came in again, his eyes were like stars. "You're right, mother," he said. "She goes like a top. And Ned is as happy as I am."

"So am I," whispered mother—YOUTH'S COMPANION.

A PIECE OF A MORTGAGE.

In another column is announced an opportunity to purchase 6 per cent. bonds of the Dominion Canners, Limited, of Hamilton.

THEY IMPROVE FERTILITY.

Live stock on the farm will supply manure necessary to soil fertility and maintenance of humus in the soil. Live stock, in the experience of the Minnesota Experiment Station, requires clover, corn and other forage crops to keep up an ample supply of manure. The experiment Station records show that the largest yields of the various farm crops are secured when grown in rotation, including clover and corn, with the application of barnyard manure. These crops in conjunction with grain crops in a three to five-year rotation provide a good way of keeping the farm free from weeds.

NAMED IT AFTER YANKEE
DOWNING STREET, LONDON, IS FAMOUS.

Identified With Governing Power,
Owes Its Existence To An American.

Visitors from all parts of the world who gaze their way through London are not aware, perhaps, that the very hub of the British Government owes its existence to an American. Downing street is synonymous with the governing power in the United Kingdom, and it was named after a Yankee. True, George Downing—Sir George Downing they had to make him in the long run—didn't know he was a Harvard graduate. In his day there wasn't any Harvard so far as the name went. The present University was the only public school of Massachusetts. But young Downing was graduated from it just the same, and his name is entitled to a place with those of other dead-and-gone alumni. And it was he who built England's world-famous Downing street.

George Downing was born in America. His was a constructive genius. He put up his own rooms in what now is Harvard—bought the boards and nails and glass himself, and built the little wing with his own hands. Then, having provided a college home for himself, he set about his studies. He studied to such purpose that when he went to England in quest of a career he found one cut out for him. They made a diplomat of the man. Charles II. sent him to the Hague as Ambassador, and incidentally, being a thrifty as well as a merry monarch, took occasion to sell him the little lane along which Henry VIII. had been wont to stroll from Whitehall Palace to see cock-fights. Sir George afterwards became Secretary to the Treasury.

FIRST BRICK HOUSES.

Downing street is 100 yards long and 10 yards wide. In its confines Sir George built the first brick houses of importance ever put up in London. His children and grandchildren owned the whole street until Baron Bothmar, then Danish Ambassador to England, bought No. 10 in 1734. About the only thing the Dane did worth chronicling was to die there. No. 10 reverted to the Crown, and George II., thrifty as the Merry Monarch, offered it to Sir Richard Walpole. Just what King George expected to get in return from his Minister is not known. Sir Robert was too fine a fellow to take the great house as a gift, but he accepted it as the official residence of the Lords of the Treasury. As Britain's first Lord of the Treasury usually is Prime Minister, well, No. 10 Downing street is the headquarters of the Premier.

PITT'S DWELLING PLACE.

A desperate attack, fizzling out to mere window-smashing, was made on No. 10 by the Gordon rioters, when Lord North lived there. The great Pitt was so fond of No. 10 that when he could avoid it he never slept elsewhere. He dwelt in the house twenty years. All that time Downing street was getting a reputation. Until 1780 the Ministers dated all their official communications, "The Cockpit, Whitehall," as the place had come to be called early in the sixteenth century. Not until 1793 did "Downing Street" definitely take the place of "The Cockpit," at the head of the Government papers. Downing street was built on a swamp, and the ground under the big houses is sown thickly with age-blackened wooden piles.

$25.00 FOR A LETTER

CAN YOU WRITE ONE?

Eight Prizes to be Awarded in a Letter Writing Contest Open to Every One in Ontario

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People have been used in Ontario for a generation. Hundreds of remarkable cures have been reported during that time and there is scarcely a family in which the remedy has not been tried with beneficial results. This furnishes the material for the letter to be written in this contest. There is no demand upon the imagination; every letter must deal with facts and facts only.

PRIZES:

The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont., will award a prize of $25.00 for the best letter received on or before the 20th day of March, 1911, from residents of the province of Ontario, on the subject, "Why I Recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." A prize of $10.00 will be awarded for the second best letter received; a prize of $5.00 for the third best letter, and five prizes of $2.00 each for the next best five letters.

CONDITIONS:

The cure or benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills described in the letter may be in the writer's own case, or one that has come under his or her personal observation.

More than one cure may be described in the letter, but every statement must be literally and absolutely true.

The letter should be no longer than is necessary to relate the benefit obtained from the remedy in the case described.

Every letter must be signed by the full name and correct address of the person sending it. If it describes the cure of some person other than the writer of the letter, it must also be signed by the person whose cure is described as a guarantee of the truth of the statement made.

The writer of each letter must state the name and date of the paper in which he or she saw this announcement.

Fine writing will not win the prize unless you have a good case to describe. The strength of the recommendation and not the style of the letter will be the basis of the award.

It is understood that The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. shall have the right to publish any letter entered in this contest if they desire to do so, whether it wins a prize or not.

The contest will close on March 20th, 1911, and the prizes will be awarded as soon as possible thereafter. Do not delay. If you know of a cure write your letter NOW. Observe the above conditions carefully or your letter may be thrown out.

Address all letters as follows:

THE CAPE TO CAIRO RAILWAY

Amount of Freight is a Revelation to Everyone.

The last section of the Cape to Cairo Railway from the north, viz., from Khartoum to Wad Madani, about 100 miles, was opened on Jan. 1, and the traffic during the first half-year's working has surpassed all expectations.

The amount of produce secured from this new section has been a revelation to everyone. The freight returns for the first month's workings were $50,000. From most parts of the Sudan hitherto served by the railway one or two loads a week would be considered good. On this new section a train every day has hardly been sufficient to carry down all the stuff, chiefly dhurra (native corn), gum and cotton. The fourth-class passenger traffic has produced almost enough to pay the working expenses of the section.

This is the first portion of the railway to leave the desert part of the Sudan and break into the edge of the land naturally fertile without irrigation. If the success of this first 100 miles is any index of the rest of the country to the south, it would appear that the most sanguine forecast of the country's commercial future were about to be realized. The rail head is now some distance farther south, and the section will probably be opened to traffic next winter.

"A critic said my last painting lacked warmth. What do you suggest?" "A fire."

A GREAT WORKER.

Viscount Gladstone, Governor-General of South Africa.

Lord Gladstone, the Governor-General of the Union of South Africa, is not merely such a "young politician" as many people imagine, for he is in his 58th year. To look at him one would not take him for a day over 40—a youthfulness which may be attributed to the whole-hearted way into which he enters into his duties as well as his pleasures. Until the time of the Armenian atrocities Viscount Gladstone was teaching history at Keble College, but his strong sympathy with the suffering Christians of the East caused him to seek election to the House of Commons, in which he sat for thirty years. No man could get through more dry official papers and statistics and assimilate them with greater promptitude than he. He once told a West Ham meeting that he would like to give work not only to all West Ham but to a good many in the West End as well. He was asked if he liked work himself. "I guess," he replied, "that I have done as much work as you in my time. If you care to shoulder a pick, a spade or an axe I am willing to compete with you." Probably the heckler would have been severely defeated, for, like his father, Viscount Gladstone is a firm believer in exercise.

SUICIDE OR MURDER?

Every Death From Typhoid Is One or Other, Says Dr. Wiley.

"Every man who dies of typhoid is either a suicide or is murdered. If he deliberately drinks impure water, then he is a suicide. If a city furnishes water impregnated with the germs of typhoid it commits a murder, and the dead person's family should be in a position to collect damages." Such was the declaration of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the pure food expert of the United States Department of Agriculture, at his lecture in Buffalo, N.Y., under the auspices of the local medical men.

"How many people in Buffalo know what they get in their water supply?" asked Dr. Wiley. "Are you sure you get water? Thousands and hundreds of thousands are spent here for public buildings and streets, but I understand you still continue to drink unfiltered water."

As a suggestion for what the city might do to increase the span of life of its citizens, Dr. Wiley suggested a municipal dairy. The percentage of infant mortality can be cut in half by such an institution, and it would prove self-sustaining, as it has in other cities. The health of the babies of the country, he declared, was the greatest national asset of which he knew and he urged the creation of public sentiment which will compel a movement for the conservation of their lives.

TRAVEL BY "PIPES."

To measure distance one usually speaks of miles or leagues or some established length, but some old Hollanders have another sort of measure along the canals of their fatherland. If you could ask one of these old boatmen a certain distance he would be likely to tell you that it is so many "pipes" away. His meaning would be that to travel that distance would take the time required in smoking that number of pipes. It is an easy measure for Dutchmen, because they seem to be never without their pipes, either in use or near at hand.

MAKE TEETHING PAINLESS

Teething time is always a time of anxiety to mothers. At this time baby becomes cross, restless and nervous. His gums pain him, he is troubled with constipation or diarrhoea, spasms, colic or convulsions. His little life is in danger unless a medicine is given him to keep his stomach sweet and pure and his bowels regular. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets. Nothing can equal them during the teething period. They have lessened the worries of thousands of mothers. Among them is Mrs. W. A. Yeado, Halifax, N.S., who writes:—"I have used no other medicine for baby but Baby's Own Tablets and I would not be without them. Last summer baby was greatly troubled with his teeth until I gave him the Tablets. They helped him and now he is a big healthy child." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

You may drive some men away from drink, but they will trot back of their own accord.

The proud peacock of to-day may be only a feather duster to-morrow.

WORKED WONDERS IN THIS CASE

RHEUMATISM AND WEAK HEART CURED BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

The Doctor helped Mrs. Stephen Roy, but there was no complete cure till she tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Rock Mills, Grey Co., Ont., Feb. 13 (Special).—"I must say Dodd's Kidney Pills worked wonders in my case," says Mrs. Stephen Roy of this place. "I suffered with Inflammatory Rheumatism in my right arm, and though I tried several remedies the swelling increased and was very painful. My hands and limbs were also badly swollen."

"I got a doctor and he helped me, but the swelling never entirely left. He said it was because my heart was weak. Then I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and, as I said before, they worked wonders."

Rheumatism of any kind is caused by disordered kidneys failing to strain the uric acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure it by curing the kidneys. They also cure the weak heart by making pure blood and lessening that organ's work of propelling the blood through the body.

Dodd's Kidney Pills only cure the kidneys, but they always do that. And with healthy kidneys you can't have Rheumatism, Lumbago, Heart Disease, Dropsy or Bright's Disease.

Mrs. Brown—"Goodness, Mary, what a kitchen! Every pot, pan, and dish is dirty, the table looks like a jumble sale, and it will take you all night to clean things up! What have you been doing?" Mary—"Sure, ma'am, the young leddies has just been showin' me how they bile a pertater at their cookin' school."

An Oil Without Alcohol.—Some oils and many medicines have alcohol as a prominent ingredient. A judicious mingling of six essential oils compose the famous Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, and there is no alcohol in it, so that its effects are lasting. There is no medicinal oil compounded that can equal this oil in its preventive and healing power.

The Foe of Indigestion.—Indigestion is a common ailment and few are free from it. It is a most distressing complaint and often the suffering attending it is most severe. The very best remedy is Par-melee's Vegetable Pills taken according to directions. They rectify the irregular action of the stomach and restore healthy action. For many years they have been a standard remedy for dyspepsia and indigestion and are highly esteemed for their qualities.

DORIES THAT WON'T SINK.

And That Have Many Novel and Useful Arrangements.

The new non-sinkable fishermen's dories now coming into use on the Newfoundland fishing banks have several ingenious features. Four watertight compartments, located under the bow, stern and cross seats, keep the staunch little craft afloat and provide receptacles for the storage of clothing, food and water.

Watertight portholes in the tops of the seats give access to the interior of the tanks. The bow and stern tanks are alone sufficient to keep the dory afloat, and at the same time, says Popular Mechanics, they provide receptacles for the storage of a limited supply of dry clothing, while one of the cross seat tanks is partially filled with food and the other with water.

Most important and ingenious, however, are the portholes which give access to the tanks through the bottom of the boat, should it be capsized. These are set in the flat bottom, and unless a sea is continually breaking over the little craft the ports may be unscrewed, one at a time, and the food, water and clothing reached. The two false keels are provided with handholds as an aid to the men clinging to the bottom.

THOUGHT IT WAS CANCER.

Sores Spread From Eye to Neck.
Miss Mary Conley, of 184 Colborne St., Montreal, writes: "Over a year ago I became bothered with an unsightly spot on my right cheek. The sore spread until the whole cheek was covered from the eye to far down on the neck, below the ear. It was so noticeable that people asked me if I had cancer, and I began to feel I had."

"I was about to consult a specialist when a lady friend spoke of Zam-Buk, and advised a trial of it, first. Acting on her advice I procured a box and was surprised to notice the immediate effect the balm had on the sores. I used three boxes only, and as I kept applying it each evening before retiring I could see how the sores were being cleaned and dried up. This improvement continued until my face was cleared of sores completely. Zam-Buk is certainly a marvellous balm."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bites, ulcers, blood-poisoning, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Try Zam-Buk Soap! 25c. Tablet.

A Sure Corrective of Flatulency.—When the undigested food lies in the stomach it throws off gases causing pains and oppression in the stomachic region. The belching or eructation of these gases is offensive and the only way to prevent them is to restore the stomach to proper action. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will do this. Simple directions go with each packet and a course of them taken systematically is certain to effect a cure.

ESCURIAL STILL EXISTS.

The Escorial, or Escorial, is still in existence, though somewhat dilapidated. This gloomy pile was begun by Phillip the Second in 1563 and completed in 1586 at a cost, it is said, of some $50,000,000, reckoned in our money. According to Francisco de Santos, the total length of all its rooms and apartments is above 120 English miles. Its form is that of a gridiron, in honor of St. Lawrence, on whose day the Spaniards gained the victory over St. Quentin. In 1872 the building was struck by lightning and came very near being destroyed by fire. The Escorial is some 25 miles northwest of Madrid.

THE GROUND FLOOR.

Once upon a time, as the story goes, a fox and a groundhog went out for a walk, and their talk ultimately drifting on to the subject of the various schemes which even in that day were being presented to a credulous public by which they might get-rich quick, the fox, recognizing the increasing interest of the groundhog in the subject, remarked: "Would you like, my boy, to get in on the ground floor of an absolutely sure thing?" and the groundhog's readiness to embrace such an exceptional opportunity being immediately communicated, the fox said: "All right then, you have only to open your mouth and the plum will fall into it—there you are," and suiting the action to the word, he pointed to a juicy piece of meat which was hanging from a bush near by. As the groundhog reached for it, the carefully concealed trap, to which the fox had all along been leading him, was sprung, and the fox walked off with the meat. The foxes which are on your track today are more numerous than ever, and the number of get-rich-quick schemes with which you are beset is also increasing. The ground-floor-plan is worked over-time, and the "fox" in ninety-nine times out of one hundred walks off with the "plum." If, however, the people of Canada are seriously looking for a "sure thing" in which to invest their savings, that sure thing is available to them in the Canadian Government annuities proposition, by which, for the payment of a small sum each month they can provide an income to begin at any age after the age of fifty-five ample for all needful requirements, and which no process of law can deprive them of. You should be interested in the subject, and information will be supplied you either by your postmaster or by the Superintendent of Annuities, Ottawa, to whom letters free of postage.

WILLIAMSBURG COUNCIL.

Pursuant to adjournment, the council met in Pitt's Hall, Williamsburg, on Saturday, the 11th of February. Members all present. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. The auditor's report was adopted, and the clerk was instructed to publish the abstract statement in both Morrisburg papers. The stones piled on George Merkle's property, when crushed, are to be placed on the road in R. D. No. 9 by statute labor. The old crusher belt was sold to Thomas Casselman for $6. A resolution, opposed by J. M. Casselman, was passed, giving Durham Wells and Morley Wells permission to build wire fence at 20 cents per rod. John H. Deeks was authorized to move the township tile from off the property of Eli Nicholas. Tae wages to be paid for labor under road superintendents, for the winter season, was fixed at the rate of 12½ cents per hour. Silas Swerdfefer and Arthur Beckstead were granted 20 cents per rod to build wire fence along the nine mile road, north from cross road through their cleared land. The following officers were appointed for the current year:—

FARMERS AND RECIPROCITY

The Canadian Century of Montreal believing that Reciprocity with the United States would imperil the future of Canada and that it would be specially disadvantageous to Canadian farmers, wishes to place its view of the question before the whole farming community and has arranged for a series of articles in newspapers of both political parties.

The first article follows and others will be published from week to week.

The Door Wide Open

(From The Canadian Century, Feb. 18th.)

If the reciprocity compact merely opened the door of the Canadian food market to American farmers it would be very injurious to thousands of Canadian farmers. It costs no more to transport American farm products to Canadian towns and cities than it does to transport Canadian farm products to cities of the United States, and the American farmers have the advantage of an earlier season. Moreover there are at least ten times as many farmers in the United States as there are in Canada, and so ten American farmers will get entrance to the markets of Canada for one Canadian farmer who gets entrance into the markets of the United States. That the American farmers will take advantage of the open door there can be no doubt. Even with a tariff wall against them they have succeeded in selling immense quantities of farm products in Canada, more than Canadian farmers have been able to sell in the United States. With reciprocity in farm products the ten American farmers will crowd the one Canadian farmer pretty close in his own market.

But this is not all that the Canadian farmer has to face under the reciprocity compact. Owing to favoured nation treaties, any tariff advantages granted by Canada to the United States must apply to the following countries: Argentine Republic, Austria-Hungary, Bolivia, Columbia, Denmark, Japan, Norway, Russia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Venezuela.

Then it is provided "that the advantages granted to the United States shall extend to the United Kingdom and the several British colonies." This will bring about free entrance of farm products from those great food exporting colonies, Australia and New Zealand.

In fact Canadian farmers will have to compete in their own home market with farm products from all the great food producing countries of the world.

Adding to the Uncertainty.

There is always some uncertainty about farming. The farmer never knows when he puts seed in the ground what the weather conditions will be. There may be frost or hail or drought or too much rain.

Added to all these uncertainties due to nature's variations there is the uncertainty regarding the prices which will prevail when the crop is harvested. How many acres should be devoted to one crop and how many to another depends upon a guess as to what demand there will be for the different agricultural products at the time of harvesting and what prices will prevail. What is true of farm crops is also true of live stock. It is comparatively easy for the farmer to study the conditions of the home market, but when he has to compete with the farmers of the world at large it is much more difficult to determine what the future will be. It is now proposed to add to the uncertainty of Canadian farming. Imported farm products from the United States, the Argentine Republic, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Russia, Australia, New Zealand, and a number of other countries coming into Canada without payment of any duties will, to a considerable extent, displace Canadian farm products in the home market as a result of the reciprocity compact.

To make up for losses in the home market the Canadian farmer will have to very greatly increase his exports to the United States. In sowing seed, in raising stock, in growing vegetables and fruit he will always have to consider what is most likely to satisfy American demands. And after he has made his arrangements, while his crops are still ungarnered and the live stock, which he is raising specially to suit the American market, is half grown, the United States Congress may suddenly decide to shut out Canadian farm products of all kinds. Remember the Reciprocity Compact is not a treaty. It may be ended at will by the United States Congress or the Canadian Parliament. It is well that we are not tied down to a permanent arrangement. Even the Free Trade Farmers' Convention in Ottawa on December 15 and 16, 1910, recommended that a permanent treaty should not be made, but that any understanding arrived at should be put into effect by concurrent legislation. All classes of the community were of the same opinion in this regard, and the Government could not have defied the unanimous sentiment of the community. So when we point out that either the United States Congress or the Canadian Parliament is at liberty to end the agreement at short notice we are not blaming the Government for this. We believe that Canadians in general, including both farmers and city people, will find the arrangement so unsatisfactory that they will be thankful Parliament has the power to terminate it, but if this forecast should prove wrong there will always overhang the cloud of uncertainty regarding the attitude of the United States Congress.

There will always be strong influences at work in the United States that may cause Congress to alter the tariff. American farmers may be dissatisfied or American manufacturers may think they are not getting enough out of the agreement and demand better terms. Mr. Taft has made no secret of his expectation that the United States is to get greater concessions later on. If the United States Congress endorses the compact it will be because of this expectation. Under such conditions with what feelings of uncertainty will the Canadian farmer plan his work for a year ahead.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. ##### AULTSVILLE

Miss Harrington, of Montreal, visited her sister, Mrs. S. Gove, here, recently.

A number of the friends of Mrs. Albert Whitlaw, gathered at her home on Wednesday p.m. to express their kindly feelings for her and Mr. Whitlaw and their regret at their intended departure for the west shortly. After all had done justice to the tempting viands provided those present called on Mrs. S. Casselman to occupy the chair. After a brief address by the chairman, or rather chairwoman, Rev. Mr. Bell was called on for a speech and replied in his usual affable manner. Then Mr. Whitlaw was asked to say a few words and after much persuasion and cheers took the floor, and although much affected thanked the friends for their kindness, and referred to the friendly relations which had existed among them as neighbors, and their sadness at leaving their friends in the east. During the evening hours, which passed all too quickly among other vocal selections given Mrs. S. Casselman sang the old Scotch ballad, "Half Past Ten." The rest of the time was given up to reminiscences of the past and best wishes for the future. Mr. and Mrs. Whitlaw will be missed here by their many friends. On Saturday evening the friends again returned to the home, each with a small gift for Mrs. Whitlaw as a remembrance of Aultsville.

Miss Mae Weaver, of Montreal, is visiting friends here this week.

The Misses Bessie and Laura Robertson returned home from Massena, N. Y., on Monday.

Lou Alguire, of Lachine, is spending a few days in town.

All of the members of the local lodge, A. O. U. W., Aultsville, are requested to attend the regular meeting of that order on Feb. 27th, as important business is to be transacted. This community was shocked on Monday when the news was received here of the death of Samuel Stata, of the 2nd concession Mr. Stata, who had been in poor health this winter, is a brother of S. P. Stata and father of Mrs. Elden Alguire, of this village. The funeral will take place on Thursday.

On Saturday evening, Feb. 11th, a successful masquerade was held on the rink. We were not able to obtain all the skaters and their costumes, but some of them were as follows:—Florence Smith, Dolly Varden; Carrie Markell, Miss Valentine; Bertha Gillespie, Snow Shoe Girl; Mrs. C. S. Ault, Japanese Lady; Addie Cramer, Syrian Woman; Lelah Loueks, Canada; Nellie Eacutt, Gymnasium Girl; Beulah Stata, Canada; Ruby Smith, Grace Smith, Spinners; Eva Markell, Summer; Lera Zeron, Sun Flower; Hettie Sampson, Star Girl; Muriel Nash, Lucy Hanes, Red Riding Hood; Geraldine Fetterly, Mother Hubbard; Alena Stillwell, Mother Goose; Beatrice Baker, Starlight; Mable Baker, Queen of Hearts; James Markell, Hockey Girl; Clifford Gove, Doctor; Morley Nash, Spanish Grenadier; Ford Cook, Fat Man; Erwin Stillwell, Buffalo Bill; Claude James, Soldier; Ivan Cameron, South African Soldier. The lady's prize for best costume was awarded to Miss Carrie Markell dressed as Miss Valentine.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Weagant and children, of Archer, spent a few hours here on Saturday.

Stirling Vallance, of the M.C.I., spent the week end here the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. Markell.

Mrs. Chas. Summers, who has been very ill for the past two weeks, is not much improved yet.

Rev. R. C. Armstrong is spending a week here with his family.

Word was received here on Tuesday from Miss Hazel Markell, Tyotown, of the landing of the La Presse balloon in a field adjacent to the school house, where she teaches, Monday a.m. Needless to say, the arrival of the aviators caused considerable excitement among the pupils, a good many of whom did not reach school in time on account of the air visitors. The teacher however, excused their tardiness. The Ottawa Valley Journal, of Tuesday, gives the following account:—E. Barlatier and Miss Somonne Riviere, who were travelling from Ogdensburg, N. Y., to Montreal in the La Presse balloon, landed about 8 o'clock this morning on H. Loney's farm, Tyotown. They left Ogdensburg at 9 p.m. yesterday, and travelling with a tail wind, passed Cornwall about 5 o'clock this morning. Near Summerstown they met an adverse air current, the wind having changed to the east, and were driven west as far as Tyotown, where they deemed it advisable to descend. They were not frostbitten, but the woman seemed to have suffered much from the cold. They were taken to Joseph Tyo's, where they were provided with a hot meal. Afterwards they made another start in the balloon and landed at Cornwall just before noon. After replenishing their gas they will return to Ogdensburg.

IRELAND

Recent Happenings Told By Mail From the Land of the Shamrock.

A farm in Co. Down, containing 152 statute acres, was recently sold at auction for $850.

John Naughton was fined $250 at Ballinasloe, for using a defaced penny stamp on a letter.

A fire in which a butcher shop and fancy ware store were consumed took place recently at Larne.

The Irish Parliamentary fund for 1910, just closed, reached within $60 of the magnificent total of $75,000.

While among a gay throng at a meet of the Tipperary hounds, at Fethard, Capt. Murphy of Coolmore fell from his horse and died before aid could reach him.

In Dublin, at Mary's Abbey, William McKeown and his wife Elizabeth were found dead with their throats cut. A blood-stained shoe-maker's knife was lying near them.

At the opening of the Commission of Oyer and Terminer in Dublin the Lord Chief Justice was presented with white gloves, emblematic of the county's freedom from crime.

Mary Hamilton, of Drumbow, Irvinestown, has died in the workhouse at Irvinestown at the age of 104. She retained all her faculties and was in good health almost to the end.

In the ancient Abbey, convenient to the town of Donegal, recently there were laid to rest the remains of two centenarians: Wm. Warke, Winterhill, and Miss Margaret Melly, Donegal.

Eugene Walsh, ex-manager of the Kilmore and Anghrim Dairy Society, was remanded at Carrick-on-Shannon on a charge of embezzling funds to the amount of $535 belonging to the Society.

Although only nineteen years of age, Jas. Coyle, student, Maynooth College, recently obtained the B.A. (honors) degree of the National University of Dublin, winning a very high place in the list of graduates.

Patrick Greavy went out recently to bury a large boulder near Ballina. He did not return, and a search party found the rock had fallen on him, killed him, and buried him in the hole made for the boulder.

At the recent Honor Degree examination in Trinity College, Dublin, Miss Georgina Revington, elder daughter of John Revington, Tralee, obtained first place, Senior Moderatorship, and large gold medals in Natural Science, an unusually high answering. This is the highest distinction awarded by the university.

for Europe, else you spend the whole of next winter getting over the heat of a summer spent where you are. Everything has increased in price. The old houses are unfit for habitation and the new ones want $1,250 a year rent for five rooms. Then you can only stay there half the year. Added to this you must come and go with your family and you must keep alive somewhere during the other six months.

"You can at exorbitant wages throw out your servants when you leave, but it is better to pay them a reasonable rate and keep them through the summer. After all, they too have got to live, and their wives and children; also if you get a reputation for closing the house no servant living will take much interest in your welfare and will incessantly rook you during the winter months because he must."

"The cook's wage is high, but he has to pay rent, a family to keep and no summer work available. You must feed your English cook and pay her rent. It averages the same with the good one, and the bad ones we do not keep at all. Your black butler boy is your English parlormaid and in these days quite as haughty. He also stops at the silver and the door and will not touch the dustpan."

"There is little to choose in these days between the price of a good flat and service in Cairo and the same."

IN THE CENTRE OF LONDON.

You can get everything now sanitary, well-built flats, telephone, electric light and gas stoves, motor and electric trams just at the corner, but also you must have not less than $5,000 a year. In England if you are comfortable you can stay there all the year round, but in Cairo the more babies there are and the more the expenses increase, so much the more urgent it is that you must move out in summer and repeat all your bills in another country more sanitary and with better climate.

"That is what makes Cairo so expensive for the poor man. I have seen humbled creatures with humbler wives arrive full of joy at a salary of $3,000 a year. With the best intentions, both pulling the load, living in summer on their people, with only one child and cheap servants, they could not make both ends meet. You cannot help yourself out of the trouble. You cannot go to market, you cannot visit your own kitchen full of Arabs, you cannot help being cheated."

"You must pay, or else you must do with cheap, bad servants who are stupid and inefficient. If a cook is clever at cooking he is clever at your accounts, and you may stand over him while he weighs the beef—he will still get his proportion. He has only six months in which to make enough to keep him going while you are away during the summer. Pay, and he will give you the best of good times—good dinners, no worries, no tempers, the house running on oiled wheels; but you must pay, remember that."

FACT AND FANCY.

What can't be cured supports the doctor.

English lawyers never wear mustaches.

It is better to be a dark horse than a black sheep.

To say a man is happy because he is rich is as unwarranted as to say a man is healthy because he has enough to eat.

NO ALTERATION IN MEXICO

THE WORLD'S MOST CONSERVATIVE COUNTRY.

Habits and Customs of the People Have not Yet Changed in Centuries.

Mexico is the graveyard of modernity—the most un-American country in all America. It has been stated that Mexico B.C. and Mexico A.D. are practically one and the same thing, and certainly there is a great deal in Mr. W. E. Carson's "Mexico" to bear out this assertion. All Mexicans are slaves of habit. If anything is not customary it cannot be right or worth considering. Thus, if a servant were asked to sweep the floor when her usual duty was to cook, she would politely refuse, with the phrase, "No es costumbre" (It is not the custom). You order a chop at a restaurant, with a tip to precede it, and the soup comes half an hour after the chop. You complain, and on your next visit to the restaurant, you order both courses to be served together. But the waiters resolutely refuse. "No señor," they say politely, "no es costumbre."

AN EDITORIAL MAXIM.

If you are in a hurry to catch a train, and implore the waiter to be quick, he puts his thumb and forefinger gingerly together and says, "Un momento, señor," as if a moment were a fragile piece of spun glass, and he was afraid of breaking it. Then the swarthy villain strolls off and disappears for nearly an hour. That is costumbre.

It is this spirit of conservatism, too, which has retarded the education of the lower classes, and very few of the poorer people in Mexico can either read or write. Thus it is that the "public newspaper reader" is enabled to earn a living in the land where the flowers are without perfume by making the rounds of the drinking places, and reciting the news of the day. A certain amount of literary skill is required to follow this strange calling successfully, and the reader is, in fact, a sort of peripatetic news-editor, for he selects only two or three items which he knows will please his audience.

Yet even the newspapers themselves show a great lack of enterprise, and in the smaller towns editors rarely publish any bright local news, and never hesitate to publish intelligence at least a week old. An amusing reason for this was given by the editor of one of these Mexican products of modern journalism. "Good news," he said, "is like good wine. It improves with age. It is always better to hold news over for a week. If it is true, we shall get more facts and if it proves to be false why should we print it?"

"GOODS AT THE CUT PRICE.

Sometimes, however, the Mexicans do attempt to be up to date, and certain departmental stores make desperate endeavors to copy the go-ahead style of the twentieth-century Yankee.

Plastered over the windows are such appeals as "Ojo, gran garata, ojo" (Look at the great bargains; just look at them); "Precios muy reducidos" (Prices greatly reduced); "Gran reduccion" (Great reduction). One worthy shopkeeper, with a limited knowledge of English, announced "Goods at the cut price," evidently a Mexican variation of the popular American expression, "Goods at cut prices."

Some shops, in a desperate attempt to Anglicise themselves and appear very up to date have christened themselves "Fashionable," "Old England," "High Life" (pronounced "high leaf"), "Five o'clock," "Royal Club."

In one restaurant an attempt has been made to "English" the bill of fare, with such lamentable results as "beef-steak viete" (for sirloin steak) and "cocteel" (cocktail). In another, the proprietor essayed the experiment of translating the names of the various modern breakfast foods into his native language, and shredded wheat biscuit became "bisochos de avena." The translated terms were not exactly a success. Mr. Carson ordered some "bisochos de avena," and the waitress brought an omelette!

Every shop has a name painted over the door, and sometimes these are very quaint. Thus one drug store calls itself the "Gate to Heaven," and a drinking saloon is "The Bait of the Devil." The streets, too, bear picturesque names as "The Love of God Street," "Pass If You Can Street," "Lost Child Street," "Sad Indian Street," and "Street of the Wood Owls."

Yet, with all their faults, the Mexicans are nothing if not polite—too polite sometimes, as Mr. Carson shows.

TAKEN AT THEIR WORD.

Mexicans of the upper class have a pretty way of telling you that their house is yours—"Su casa es numero," meaning literally, "Your house is No. —," giving their address.

dress. Of course, this is a mere manner of speaking, and must not be regarded as a serious invitation. A story is told of a "Wild Western" American who, visiting the capital, was casually introduced in the street to a Mexican señor, who extended to him the formal invitation. Later in the day, when the Mexican returned to his home, he was amazed to find the American seated in his drawing-room in his best chair, his feet perched on another, his portmanteau at his side, puffing a big cigar, and at being greeted with a boisterous "Wai, colonel, I've come!"

If you express admiration of any article in a house, the polite Mexican will take it up and say, "It is at your disposal, señor," and insist on your accepting it. You are, of course, supposed to refuse, firmly, and politely, saying, "No, no señor, many thanks, but it could not possibly be in better hands." I was told of a Western mining man, however, who took a mean advantage of this venerable custom.

He had done some business with a wealthy Mexican in one of the large towns, and had spent quite a lot of money in entertaining him, giving him dinners, taking him on automobile drives, and giving him a trip in a private railway car. The Mexican, who was extremely parsimonious, did not return any of these little attentions. On the day he was leaving, the American called at the Mexican's house, and there saw a fine collection of golden Aztec relics, which had been dug up in that part of the country. He expressed unbounded admiration for them. The Mexican immediately summoned his man-servant and said, "Juan, the American señor has honored me by admiring these things. Pack them up and send them to his hotel at once!" "No, no, señor!" exclaimed the Westerner, sweeping the curios into a bag which he carried, "don't put yourself to all that trouble. I'll take 'em along with me right now!"

Forthwith he said good-bye, and departed with the whole collection, leaving its late owner wild with rage.

CRANES HERD SHEEP.

Yakamik is the Name of the Only Known Shepherd Bird.

The yakamik of South America is, so far as is known, the only "shepherd bird" anywhere. We have all known of course, of dogs that, unaided, may be trusted to shepherd a flock of sheep, but a shepherd bird, which will drive its charges to pasture, protect them from prowling animals, and gather them carefully together at nightfall to bring them safely home again, is indeed a unique creature.

The native owners of sheep and poultry in Venezuela and British Guiana are the possessors of this species of crane—for to that family the yakamik belongs—are entrusted sheep, ducks and other poultry. The South American sees them depart for their feeding grounds, secure in the knowledge that the crane will bring them all back safely. Any unlucky animal detected by the yakamik while prowling about to steal gets very much the worst of it. The bird savagely attacks the marauder with wing and beak, forcing it to retreat in haste. A dog is no match at all for the yakamik.

At dusk the bird returns with its flock, never losing its way, no matter how far it may wander, for its sense of location is extremely acute. When it arrives home, the yakamik roosts upon a tree or shed near its charges, to be ready to resume its supervision of them when they are let out again in the morning.

This queer bird is said to be as affectionate as it is trustworthy. It will follow its master about with capers of delight, showing its appreciation of any attention given it by the most extraordinary evolutions.

DEATH OGLES MIDDLE LIFE.

Startling Increase in Tale of Victims Past 40 Years of Age.

While the death rate of persons under 40 years of age has remarkably decreased since 1890, the death rate of persons over 40 years of age has markedly increased.

Why? One reason is that science has done comparatively little against the non-communicable diseases. Then medical science has nursed along weak constitutions which in earlier periods would have succumbed in infancy or adolescence, and has carried them across the boundary of middle age, but has not been able to assure them a ripe old age. A third reason, of course, is the increasing complexity of life, which brings heavier burdens and stresses and overwhelms some persons as soon as the impetus of their youthful vitality is spent. A fourth reason is that people do not replenish this vitality and prepare for the problems of middle life.

There is really nothing cheaper than the attainment and preservation of good health. Fresh air and sleep are nature's free gifts, and bodily activity a normal impulse of the blood, while it costs less to eat frugally than to over eat.

NEW TOWN MADE TO ORDER.

Modern Suburb Will Arise on Ruins of Estate, Near London.

After a competition among sixty-two architects, many of them of international distinction, plans have been chosen for the great ready-made town on the outskirts of London, England, which is to be created on the Ruislip estate of King's College, Cambridge. The place is eighteen minutes by fast trains from the West End. The estates of the college extend to some 1,300 acres in the two Middlesex parishes of Northwood and Ruislip. An "aerated suburb" is what the papers call it.

The Ruislip town-planning experiment will be the most extensive undertaking of the kind in the world. There are to be more than 7,600 houses, divided according to rental as follows:

$500 or more rent.....	21
Not exceeding $500 rent.....	524
Not exceeding $300 rent.....	3,541
Not exceeding $150 rent.....	3,556
Total.....	7,642

About 337 acres will be devoted to building plots, 225 acres to parks and other open spaces, and 184 acres to roads. Nowhere on the estate are there to be more than ten houses on an acre. This is the same rule as is usually followed in suburban development in America. In some places in Ruislip there will be only two or three dwellings per acre.

The central avenue of the Garden-town is to have a fifty-foot grass strip along its centre, flanked on either side by thirty-foot roadway; a church will face each end of the avenue. There are to be, of course, a theatre, a club, a municipal building, schools, an arcade, a concert hall, a library, a monument, a golf course, a hospital, an abattoir, baths, a laundry, a garage, possibly an aviation ground, and every other up-to-date suburban facility.

The Ruislip Manor Garden Suburb is the first great scheme under the new Act of Parliament. The London County Council is carrying forward several large suburban housing developments.

GREATEST BEER DRINKERS.

According to Statistics Recently Issued.

The Strassburger Post of Berlin, Germany, has recently devoted space to a comparative statistical study of thirst, as shown by the amount of liquor consumed by the inhabitants of various European States. The task is complicated by the varieties of liquid refreshment which are met with in different countries, and which are common to few. It appears, however, that the Dane drinks on an average 104 litres of beer, very little wine, but 24 litres of brandy each year. The Swede is satisfied with 56 litres of beer and 3 of alcohol. The Norwegian is one of the most temperate of northern nations, consuming but 31 litres of beer and 3 of brandy per head of population.

The Russian takes 5 litres each of beer and vodka, whereas his ally, the Frenchman, needs 32 litres of beer, 10 of brandy, and 103 of wine. John Bull imbibes 6 litres of whiskey or gin, 2 of claret, and 122 of beer or stout. The Dutchman rests content with 28 litres of beer and 8 1/2 of brandy. His neighbor, the Belgian, is more capacious, being satisfied only with 221 litres of beer and 9 of alcohol. The Austrian and the Hungarian each absorb 11 1/2 litres of schnaps and 16 of wine, the former needing in addition 20 litres of beer, while 11 will suffice for the latter. Of all the inhabitants of Europe the Italian is the one who drinks least beer, a mere 2 litres, and the least alcohol, 1 1/4 litres; he imbibes 98 litres of wine, however.

The figures for Germany are not given.

MATRIMONIAL RECORD.

Couple Married, Divorced and Remarried Within a Year.

M. and Mme. Horgen, who live at Zurich, Switzerland, have just created a new kind of matrimonial record. They are each aged 19 years, but have been married, divorced, and a few days ago remarried at Zurich.

The young couple married at 18, and the wife became homesick and left her husband for her parents after a short time. They agreed to a divorce, and obtained it, but regretted the step later. A reconciliation took place, which has been followed by a second marriage and a second honeymoon within a year.

It may be explained that a decree nisi becomes absolute in Switzerland as soon as it is pronounced, and the parties are free to remarry next day. Further, if both parties agree, a divorce is a question of weeks, and very cheap in that country, a $25 note often covering full costs.

CAPT. COOK'S EXPEDITION

THE EXACT SPOT WHERE THE MEN DIED.

Relics of Massacre Discovered at Queen Charlotte Sound Recently.

The exact spot where 10 members of Capt. Cook's expedition were massacred by the Maoris 137 years ago has been definitely determined and some interesting relics of the ancient tragedy discovered by Robert McNab in Grass Cove, Queen Charlotte Sound.

It may, perhaps, be remembered that on Dec. 17, 1773, the captain of the Adventure sent two officers and eight men across the sound to gather wild geese for the ship's company. They failed to return, and searchers who were sent out finally discovered evidence of a tragedy in a number of baskets containing human flesh and fern root, also a hand of a white man. Grass Cove was previously conjectured to be the scene of but Mr. McNab, however, has settled the question once and for all by discovering the exact spot where the Englishmen were murdered.

After Mr. McNab and the party of friends with him had decided that the massacre took place in a certain bend in Grass Cove—a conclusion to which they came by comparing the locality with the description given in Cook's papers—they went ashore and spoke to a settler, Mr. Greensill, who was living on the spot, regarding any evidence of the massacre that he may have seen. Mr. Greensill said he had dug up in his garden an old flint-lock, a barrel, a bayonet, and some other kind of a weapon he was unable to identify.

This latter weapon Mr. McNab at once identified as

which was doubtless the one used by Midshipman Rowe, who was in charge of the boat's crew. There was a description of the sword given in the accounts and they corresponded exactly with the weapon dug up.

It was with that hanger that Midshipman Rowe killed two Maoris and wounded the chief before being overpowered and killed. This discovery places beyond a shadow of a doubt the exact locality of the massacre, which took place on the spot now occupied as Mr. Greensill's garden in Grass Cove. Mr. McNab discounts the idea that the weapon may have been carried there from the fact that the locality exactly corresponds with the description given by Capt. Cook.—London Standard.

MAKING DIAMONDS.

Specimens Manufactured at One Fifth Cost of Real Stones.

After nine years of experiment a young Englishman has succeeded in producing what he calls "Synthetic diamonds," of a quality he claims never before approached. Their hardness is 98 per cent. of that of the natural diamonds. They can be stamped upon with the heel without injury. A London Daily Mirror Scientific representative has heated one in a spirit-lamp flame and kept it red hot for three minutes without damaging it.

The color is so good that even by daylight an expert can scarcely detect the difference between these stones and natural diamonds. And though the smaller ones are slightly better than the larger, they can be made satisfactorily up to a weight of one carat (four grains).

Two months ago the inventor had succeeded in turning out stones which defied detection at night by the ordinary untrained eye. His latest stones are still better. Their density is practically the same as that of natural diamonds, and they are absolutely permanent—unaffected by the atmosphere.

But they are deficient in that distinctive steely-blue shimmer which the best natural diamonds possess. Of course, the maker does not disclose his process. The base is presumably mineral, and the stones are made by compression, simulating the formation of natural diamonds through the contraction of cooling mineral matter.

Diamond makers, by dissolving sugar in iron, or some other substance which exerts tremendous pressure upon its contraction by cooling, have often obtained very small but perfect stones of more or less effective appearance. But this newest inventor has produced stones of remarkable size and brilliancy. He estimates the cost at about one-fifth that of the natural stones, at present prices.

Many a learned man has succeeded in making a fool of himself in several different languages.

If a girl has made up her mind to marry a young man she is not inconsistent that he ask her father.

LIVING IN CAIRO, EGYPT

MODERN CONVENIENCES, BUT THEY COME HIGH.

An Englishwoman Writes of Her Experiences in Housekeeping in That Country.

"When I first went to Egypt to live, about twenty years ago, residence in Cairo was very different from what it is now," writes an Englishwoman in the Queen. "Houses were inconvenient, had neither pantries nor bathrooms, and servants had no English training at all in the way of orderly housekeeping."

"Of course there were always the one or two exceptional servants to be had and occasionally a decent house or two to be found, but these things both cost a mint of money and were not available to the young official. The English community was small, perhaps 300 or 400 souls at the outside, and their residences were scattered over a wide area of many miles."

"Mrs. Jones had called; but where did she live? Right away on the other side of the city, down the riverside road, under a gateway, through a cotton repository, and then into a one-storied flat bungalow surrounded by gardens. And Mrs. Smith, where did she live? Out on the desert, two miles from nowhere in a corner of the old soldiers' barracks; no address, no road, no signposts."

"Still you had to find it, and in doing so you made great friends for your pains, and everybody absolutely knew everybody else. In winter times were quite gay, but funnily enough in summer

THEY WERE STILL GAY.

All the unfortunates who were left behind to spend the heat in Cairo clubbed together, full of real friendliness and good will, to give each other a good time.

"I am afraid that sort of thing is quite done away with now. Cairo has grown too big, too prosperous, too busy to bother with the next door neighbor. The change seemed to come with the change of government. In the old days when the Sudan was a military fighting unit the pick of the English army spent its holidays from Haifa to Assouan with us in Cairo, coming and going throughout the year and made up of England's best form of sportsmen."

"In Cairo itself the present influx of hundreds of young educational officials had not yet come into vogue. The club, not full to overflowing, was quite small, very cosy, very homely, very dear. The men had no wives and we few ladies had our drawing rooms always full with delightful bachelors."

"And now, twenty years later, what has happened? One's winter is spent in returning endless calls from unknown acquaintances sent from other acquaintances just passing through. You pass friends you would like to know only in the rush and tear of Savoy dinners or other hotel dances. You are out every night and in bed all day resting for the next bout."

EXPENSES ARE HIGH.

"Rents are enormous, servants' wages are ruinous. You must have endless dresses for such a climate, and in April, when your money is all gone, you still have got to leave

TESTED RECIPES.

Corn Beef Hash.—Buy a good piece of corned beef—the rump piece is best, especially the half with little bone. Put in large kettle and cover with boiling water; keep gently boiling until tender, supplying water as fast as it boils away. No vegetables except potatoes should be boiled in the water or with the meat. When meat is tender take it out and set away the water in which it was boiled to cool. Take off the fat that rises when it is cold. My mother called it "the top of the pot" and thought good hash could not be made without it. Use one-third more cold boiled potatoes than meat. Remove all gristle, but leave some fat, not too much. Chop the meat about half enough, then put in the potatoes and chop all together about the size of small peas. Pepper (and salt if necessary) should be added while chopping, to avoid mixing or stirring when cooking. Never grind meat for hash. Now take some of the "top of the pot," perhaps a couple tablespoonsful, according to amount of hash to be cooked—judgment is necessary here—melt it in an iron spider, put in the hash and press into shape a little, dot it over with small pieces of butter, or if butter is scarce use little pieces of the same tallow as was put in first; cover closely, and set over a very slow fire or an asbestos mat, and let warm through slowly. Examine, and if it looks dry add a few drops of milk here and there—cream is better, never water—till it is soft, cohesive mass, but not wet. Hash should not be stirred when cooking, and it can be prepared as above and baked if desired. Good hash is delicious, but many concoctions called by the name are an abomination.

Flaky Pie Crust.—For a large pie take one and three-fourths cups of flour, from one-half to three-fourths cup of lard, according to richness desired. Mix the flour, lard, and a little salt quickly but well together, then take out as much of the mixture as you can hold in your closed hand, say a couple of tablespoonfuls, and lay one side on the board. Wet the remainder, a few drops at a time, with ice cold water, only sufficiently to make it hold together, working it as little as possible. Cut off enough for lower crust, roll, and put on pie tin, trimming off all that is superfluous, wet edges, and fill with desired fruit. Take the large piece of crust, spread, and hollow it out a little with the hands (it is easier to do than to tell), then put the mixture of flour and lard that was laid one side in centre, gather edges around and over, and put the trimmings from lower crust on, turn it over with smooth side up, roll out, and use as usual.

Bachelor's Pudding.—Six eggs, one cupful of dry bread crumbs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half teaspoon of cinnamon, one-half teaspoon of cloves, one-half nutmeg grated, one cup of sugar, three large apples chopped, one and one-half cups of currants. Steam two hours, use any kind of sauce.

BANANA NUT SALAD.

Boil one-half cup each of sugar and water five minutes. Add juice of one-half lemon and boil two or three minutes. Select small, ripe bananas, peel and roll each banana in cold syrup and then in chopped nuts. Dispose on heart leaves of lettuce; put dressing on each and sprinkle dressing with bits of candied cherries. Dressing: Put beaten yolks of four eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, dash of paprika, one tablespoonful of lemon juice into a saucepan. Set over hot water, stir until it thickens, and when cool beat into one-third cup of heavy cream beaten solid. This salad is easily made during the winter months when fresh fruit is scarce and expensive, and the whites of the eggs can be used next day for a meringue, for a cranberry and banana pudding.

CAKE.

Sunshine Cake.—Six fresh eggs, one cupful flour, pinch of salt, one and one-fourth cups sugar (granulated), one-half teaspoon cream tartar, one-half teaspoon almond or vanilla extract. To make: First separate your eggs, putting the yolks in small bowl and the whites in your mixing bowl; beat the yolks with a revolving beater until light and add salt to the whites; whip with a wire whip until frothy, then add the cream tartar, whip until stiff and dry. Meanwhile have the sugar with about three tablespoonfuls of water boiling slowly until it hairs from the spoon, as it does when making boiled frosting; pour this on the beaten whites and beat well; when partly cool add the yolks and beat until well mixed; now add the flavoring and the cup of flour, measured with measuring cup after being sifted five times; place around the edge of bowl and fold in lightly towards the center, using the egg whip for mixing it in; do not beat; keep the mixture light and foamy; pour in a medium sized angel cake pan, ungreased; start to bake in cool oven, turning the gas burner quite low until the cake has raised to the top of the pan, then increase the heat slightly to finish baking. Will raise in from twenty-five to thirty minutes and will bake in fifteen to twenty; when done the cake will shrink slightly from the sides of the pan; take from the oven and invert cake until cake is cold; remove from pan and ice with a boiled white frosting; best results come with the use of cake flour. You will notice that boiling the sugar before pouring on the whites is a new idea which assures its fine texture. This recipe makes a large, light cake, suitable for children's birthday cake when nicely ornamented, as it really is a golden angel food when properly made.

COOKIES.

Splendid Cookies.—One sifter of flour, one teaspoonful soda, and pinch of salt; sift and then take lard and mix in, as for pie dough. Two cupfuls of brown sugar; flavor with maple and vanilla; roll out and sprinkle granulated sugar thickly on top; cut out with a large cookie cutter and press a raisin or nut in the centre of each; just before putting in the oven take the tip of the finger and wet the top, and the cookies will be crinkly and crisp. If sweet milk or water is used two teaspoonfuls of baking powder in place of soda.

Ginger Cookies.—One cup of brown sugar, one cup of molasses, one cup of lard, one cup of boiling water, into it dissolve one tablespoon of soda; one teaspoon of ginger, and flour to make soft dough. Roll out and bake same as cookies.

DON'TS FOR PARENTS.

Don't talk about children in their presence.

Don't rebuke or praise children before visitors.

Don't allow children to interrupt any one who is speaking.

Don't bring up children at hotels and boarding houses if it can possibly be avoided.

Don't allow children to make unfavorable comments about people.

Don't take children travelling except when it is absolutely necessary.

DOMESTIC POINTERS

To cool a hot dish in a hurry, place it in a vessel full of cold salt-water.

If mixed with milk instead of water mustard will not get dry, but will keep nice and fresh until it is all used up.

A good way to tell when ham is fried enough is by the fat. When the fat is brown (not burnt) the ham is done.

A little vinegar put in the water in which eggs are poached will keep them white and prevent them from spreading.

If you want to keep lemons string them with a packing-needle and hang them in a dry place, but do not let them touch each other.

When using valuable vases for table decorations fill them with sand, for this makes them stand firmly, and renders them far less liable to be knocked over and broken.

When lace curtains are to be washed baste a narrow strip of muslin along each outer edge, and let it remain until the washing and drying process is completed, and you will find your curtains straight, and they will not sag.

FUTURE EXISTENCE ON SOME CELESTIAL BODY.

Life Much the Same—Lillian Whiting Thinks There Will Be Little Difference.

That in the life to come the spiritual beings of men and women will walk, ride (perhaps in automobiles) and eat, much as they do in their earthly existence, and that undoubtedly a community of life of the departed spirits exists on the planet Mars or some such heavenly body, is the conclusion to which Miss Lillian Whiting, Boston's foremost woman writer and thinker, has arrived in her latest attempt to unravel by scientific laws the mysteries of the future, says the Boston Post.

"It would seem to me," said Miss Whiting, "that the change we call death is merely the withdrawal of the spiritual body from the physical body, and that we are much the same person immediately after this that we were before. Only we probably enter on finer conditions and better opportunities for progress."

"The latest discoveries," Miss Whiting argues, "is that the strange substance called ether is the most substantial—perhaps the only substantial thing—in the universe. After the change known as death, when the spirit withdraws from its material envelope, we pass into this ethereal realm and live either in space or

PERHAPS ON SOME STAR

"Does it seem too much to say this? Is it prying too deeply into the secrets of the unknown to say that we, after death, are assigned to live in some definite spot, be it Mars or some far off sun, or even in the ether of space? I think not. The unknown is not the unknowable," said Bishop Brooks.

"For if we live after death, it is obvious that we must live somewhere. And is it not logical that we should live in one community or city, just as we do here? According to my conception, the things we shall find in that community will be very much the same in their general nature as they here. There will be men and women, there will be animals and plants, there will be natural scenery."

"Our forms will be unaltered in that future place. We shall be just the same except, of course, that we shall be refined, idealized, in that more abundant life. If I should undergo that experience called death, here and before your eyes, nothing whatever would happen to my spiritual self. I should merely lay aside my physical body, as I might take off a cloak."

"The things we shall do in heaven will be, I should think, very much the same that we do here. Swedenborg, who was one of the greatest of thinkers, teaches that the physical body is merely the replica, of the spiritual body; if that be true, our form will be the same, and the ethereal body will be the same, and one ethereal body will have its eyes, ears, hands, feet—all, in short, that the physical body has. Why should we not walk and talk and work and pursue our aims there as we do here?

THE OUTER COVERING,

"There may be vehicles not so unlike our motor cars there moving by some form of electric energy; and surely our intellectual and moral interests will create occupations for us as they do here."

"Psychic research reveals to us that there are lectures, preaching, music and art there, and, in fact, all that makes for our development and for being of use to others."

"Shall we take food there?" she was asked.

"Perhaps the ethereal body may have its own demands for some form of sustenance, why not? The spiritual body will need food, just as the physical body needs it, although, of course, it will be of a different kind."

"Foods, by their reaction on the vital powers, are a contributing factor to the purity of the inner life. It is not that it is morally wrong to partake of one thing and morally right to choose another, but it is that the food that hinders the physical mechanism from being the best possible vehicle of expression for the higher energies offers its own reason for its elimination."

"As it is the psychic body which is the motive power, the food should be selected with some reference to this delicate and

ETHEREAL ORDER OF BEING.

The quality of food controls and pre-determines achievement to a far greater degree than is generally realized.

"Animal food produces in us coarse and harsh vibrations; it is not suited to this finer self, this ethereal body. The food that is best adapted to this psychic body is that of grains and fruits."

"What about sleep?" she was asked.

"Many people believe that death and sleep are much alike, the differference being that in sleep the withdrawal from the physical body is merely temporary and partial, while in death it is final and complete. And I, for one, believe that in sleep we are often released into the ethereal world, and that many so-called dreams of our friends who have died are really actual meetings and talks with them, spirit to spirit."

"This journey of the spiritual body from the earth to its abiding place is not unusual. It could be no more strange to us to-day than the wireless telegraph could have been to the men of fifteen years ago."

"There is nothing scientifically impossible about it. It is mechanically plausible. In ether there is no friction, and without friction a body will move on forever when once it is started. Besides, in our other life we shall live more freely, more easily. We shall not be hampered by the obstacles which now beset us."

"There will be much to do in that other world. Although there will be none of the physical wants to be provided for which now take up so much of our time, there will be limitless opportunity for development both of

ONE'S SELF AND OTHERS.

"For there will be progress; we must not think of the next life as a final state. There will be the opportunity to go farther and farther onward. This life on earth, and the next life in the other—all these are but steps on the flight of stairs leading upward and on."

"For there have been worlds before this, just as there are worlds after this. Progress in any of these stages means farther advancement in the one which is to come. It is apparent that the better men and women in this world will have an advantage in the next. They will be there, as they have been here, the helpers of their fellow beings. They will be writing books in their houses or delivering lectures in their universities or preaching sermons in their temples."

"All then, that we do in this world will be of benefit in the hereafter. Many in this world are more developed than others. Many perceive something of life beyond. Many have prepared themselves for what is to come."

"To sum up it is, in the ether of space that one must search for those conditions that surround the next phase of life immediately following the change called death."

"The life abundant is becoming to us a definite term, a phrase that is invested with a certain clear and comprehensive significance."

"Silence is penetrating into the nature of ether; into its problems of light, electricity and magnetism. And it is revealing to man the existence of a superphysical world, apparently adapted to a superphysical life."

"Dr. Percival Lowell discovers conditions on Mars that argue the direction of an intelligent consciousness, and he postulates the existence of an intelligent life. This is but one of the examples of science, verifying that which has been laid down previously by thought and religion."

A PREHISTORIC ZOO.

Representations of 30 Ancient Monsters on Shore of Lake.

The latest attraction at Carl Hagenbeck's famous animal park at Stellingen, near Hamburg, Germany, is a series of representations of the great monsters that inhabited this earth in the distant past. In all, thirty have been erected, but more are to follow.

These beasts of the past occupy a portion of the grounds to themselves. They have been built up of cement by J. Palenburg, around the shores of a little lake.

The animals are depicted standing by the water's edge amid the shrubs and trees while in the lake itself, says the Strand, are shown huge crocodiles and strange looking creatures, half fish and half mammal. Additional realism is added by representing a few of the beasts in the act of battling with specimens of their kind.

There are several representations of the dinosaurs, including the iguanodon, which towers some twenty-five feet in the air, making the trees around look quite small, the diplodocus, whose length of 66 feet and height of 18 feet render the modern elephant a mere pigmy; the stegosaurus, with its bony plates on its back and spikes on its tail; the triceratons, with its three horns on its face and huge collar of spikes around its neck; as well as representations of the sloth, dodo and mammoth.

There are even huge flying reptiles with an enormous spread of wings, birds with formidable teeth, not to mention giant lizards, tortoises and toads, compared to which the present living specimens are in size no more than a dog to a cart horse. Some of these tortoises and toads are twelve feet and more in length.

BACK TO ANCIENT TIMES

MILITARY CUSTOMS AND THEIR ORIGIN.

The Salute Forms a Guarantee That No Treachery Is Intended.

Why does a soldier, when saluting a superior, raise his hand to his head covering? The beginning dates back to the time of the Borgias, if not to an earlier date. In those days assassination was in vogue, and, in order that an inferior might not have a superior at advantage, the inferior was compelled, when coming into his superior's presence, to raise his right hand, palm to the front, to show that no dagger was concealed there. From this oldtime custom our hand salute has come down.

The salute with the sword was not done that way in the beginning without any reason. When Knights of the Crusades received their orders it was their custom for them to call upon God to witness their assumption of the order given. To do this the sword was raised to the front so that the hilt reached the lips, when the cross formed by hilt and blade could be kissed and an oath registered to carry out the orders faithfully. The dropping of the sword, point to the front,

INDICATES SUBMISSION.

Why should we wear medals and decorations on the left breast and not the right? These gallant Knights of the Crusades placed their medals and insignias on the left breast because it was the shield side and also because the heart that beat in honor and fealty to its king was on that side under the badge of honor.

Why, in the funeral cortege of a mounted officer of soldier, is the horse saddled and equipped with the boots of the late rider placed heels to the front in the stirrups, led to the place of burial? To show by reversal of the boots that the owner's march has ended.

We must go back to the days of the Romans for the reason why in the service three volleys are fired over the open grave of a comrade. Among the Romans the burial consisted of the throwing of earth three times on the coffin. Three times was the dead man called by name, which ended the ceremony, and as the friends and relatives departed, each said "Vale!" three times. So, as a farewell to our dead comrades, we fire three volleys over the grave; then the service call taps is sounded, this closing the ceremony.

Why should the call taps be sounded in preference to any other? Because taps is the call for "Lights out!" and the lights of life are out in the comrade who has "joined the silent bibouac of the dead." This ending of a service funeral dates back to the early '40's; but did not become a fixed custom till late in

THE CIVIL WAR.

There was a reason for causing all witnesses before a military court to remove the glove from the right hand before taking the oath. The raising of the hands and eyes toward heaven when taking an oath is of great antiquity. When the Bible was printed, the bare hand was laid on the book, which was afterward kissed. But the Bible was not always at hand when needed; so the custom of raising the right hand and uncovering the head has grown into general practice. In olden days the criminal was branded in the palm of the right hand, and for this reason the custom of requiring the removal of the glove came into vogue in order that the hand might be inspected.

The colored silk sash long worn by officers of our army, which for many years has ceased to form part of the uniform, except for general officers, was not adopted simply because it looked pretty. It was originally intended that this sash, which was very strong woven, of silk and could be stretched out to over a yard in width, should be used as a hammock in which wounded officers could be carried off the battlefield.

And likewise the gaudy colored horsehair plume that flowed from the helmet was not placed there because it looked so well. The origi-inal hair plume hung down on the shoulders of the wearer, and it was intended that it should be a safeguard against a sabre cut aimed at the back of the neck; for the long thick hair would turn the blow and save decapitation

OR AN UGLY WOUND.

To-day the little hair tuft seen on the head dress of mounted soldiers is the result.

We go back to Crusaders for the reason of the "sheers" or those chords sounded by the band before and after completion of the march down and back in front of troops at parade. The soldiers selected for a crusade were formed in line; the other soldiers not selected were lined up also, the two bodies being separated. The band then marched in front of those selected for service and back to its place, thus singling out and honoring those chosen to uphold the cause. The assembled populace no doubt cheered the selected soldiers, and the "three cheers" now given by the band were symbolic of the cheers for the Crusaders.

There is a reason why the flag at half staff, as an indication of sorrow, must always be hoisted to the top of the staff before being lowered. The flag is saluted when raised and lowered only when it is at the peak of the staff. So, when it is necessary to display it at half mast, it must be raised to the top before being finally lowered; for at this time the gun fires its salute, and either the band or the trumpeters are sounding the appropriate music or call.

TWENTY-ONE GUNS.

the number fired in the international salute, were not selected at random. The number was chosen by our Government because it was the number long used by the British for their international salute. Why the British use twenty-one guns was no doubt due to an early custom which had for a warship salute seven guns. A fort was allowed to fire three times as many guns as a warship, because in those days it was difficult to keep powder in good condition at sea. It could be kept in good condition on land, and consequently the shore battery was allowed a larger number, or twenty-one. When the time arrived when better powder was made and it could be carried at sea without deterioration, the warship was allowed the same number of guns as the shore battery, and the twenty-one of to-day are the result.

It is generally known that the army toast is the one word "How!" The origin of this has been discussed often in military circles. It is conceded that it came from the Indian. An old chief, having heard the officers at a frontier post make some remarks each time they took a drink, asked the interpreter what was said. As the best explanation he could make he told the chief, "They say, 'How d'y'e do.'" When the chief was given his next drink, he raised his glass and said "How!"

We go back to knights of old for the reason why we mount a horse

FROM THE LEFT SIDE.

Those gallant knights wore a sword on that side, which made it inconvenient if not impossible to mount from the other side; so it was chosen as necessity, and such practice is almost universal in civil life to-day and a requirement in the service.

As an illustration of how an instruction given for which there was a reason in the beginning will be carried out without question for years, the following story is told in army circles: In a German fort near the position of a sentinel, was a wooden garden bench. One of the special orders of the sentinel was not to allow anyone to sit on that bench. One curious young officer found that some seven years previous the bench had received a coat of green paint, and, in order that no one might make use of it till the paint was dry, the order had been issued to the sentinel. And so it had been carefully transmitted every forty hours from sentinel to sentinel for over seven years, and without a reason for doing so.

If new enamel saucepans are placed in a pan of warm water, allowed to come to the boil, and then cool, they will be found to last much longer before either cracking or burning.

Queen's University

One of the most brilliant addresses of the college year was that delivered by Dr. Leacock, of McGill University, before a mass meeting of Queen's students last week. Last fall the undergraduates of McGill inaugurated a scheme by which there would be an exchange of speakers between the two universities, the visitors to address the student body on subjects of popular interest. In accordance with this arrangement, Dr. Hyde, from Queen's, visited McGill in November last, and in return McGill sent Dr. Leacock to Queen's. The lecturer took for his subject: "What the University Can do for Canada," and in his address fully justified his wide reputation as lecturer, humorist and student of national affairs. The main point of his address was that our rapid development as a people, our material efficiency, our demand for the practical, our worship of success, had pushed the development of culture for its own sake into the background. The best the universities could do for Canada was therefore the correcting of the bias in our national standards and the holding out of a new and higher criterion of success. In the course of his remarks Dr. Leacock made humorous reference to the examination system as the "aome of dreariness" yet a necessity. He also paid a tribute to the teaching of Latin and Greek as being in the highest degree practical. It is understood that McGill is endeavoring to arrange a similar reciprocity treaty with Toronto. Queen's men hope that the arrangement will be made and co-operation between the different universities be increased as far as possible.

The Science dance held last Friday practically ends the social functions of the year. It was an unqualified success both in the numbers attending and in the enjoyment. An interesting feature of the decorations of Grant Hall was a model of a dirigible airship, beautifully constructed, supported over the platform. It was brilliantly illuminated with revolving electric lights and had a propeller busily turning.

For some time the Arts Society has been agitated over the question of smoking in the Arts club room. At present the senate has a rule in force prohibiting smoking and it was the desire of many to see this rule rescinded. At a special meeting of the society, however, the question was finally settled for this term at least. By a considerable majority it was decided that the senate should not be asked to change the rule.

Last week the annual hockey encounter between Philosophy and Political Science took place on the college open rink. There was a stiff battle but fortune was on the side of the Politicon men. It needed all the supports of Philosophy to enable the vanquished to sustain the defeat of 7-2.

Last week the Historical Society, of Queen's was favored with an address from Dean Bidwell, of Kingston. The subject was the historic position of the Anglican church. The point of chief emphasis in the address was the historic continuity of the Anglican position. Queen's is always glad to welcome Dean Bidwell, and it would be a benefit if representatives of other churches could be heard from occasionally regarding their particular points of view.

The university sermon was preached last Sunday by Prof. Dall, of Queen's. It had been arranged that Dr. Carmichael, one of Queen's most distinguished graduates, now of King, Ont., should conduct the service, but he was unable to be present. It is expected that Dr. Carmichael will be able to come in the near future.

Queen's had an interesting visitor lately in Mr. Lionel Curtis. He delivered before the History Class an extremely interesting address on South Africa. It may be remembered that Mr. Curtis was a member of the late Transvaal Government which was established when the Transvaal became a crown colony. Later he served as secretary to Lord Selbourne and had a great deal to do with the debates and negotiations which culminated in the union of the South African colonies.

Another visitor from afar last week was Miss MacDonald, from Tokio. Miss MacDonald for several years has been engaged as secretary of the Y. W. C. A. doing work among women students in Tokio. She came to Queen's to interest the students in her work in Japan, and the addresses which she delivered before different bodies were of deep interest.

The Y. M. C. A. have just appointed the new executive for the coming year. Mr. F. C. Casselman has been elected president, and Mr. W. A. Sutherland remains general secretary.

Oh You County Councillor

The Glen Payne correspondent of the Cornwall Freeholder puts it up to the county councillors in the following little poem:—

If you have lost your money in the Farmers' Bank
And all your hopes to the earth have sank,
Just start again on another blank,
And run for County Councillor.
In a game of chance 'tis often said
You'll surely win if you play on the red,
But fortune also falls on the head
Of the present County Councillor.
One member got up on Council Day
And made a motion in this way,
"Five dollars a day" should be the pay,
Of every County Councillor
Ere they finished their business they adjourned
For another day's pay so easily earned
Oh you, County Councillor.
