DOUGLAS BUSH AWARDED $2,500 FELLOWSHIP

The announcement has just been made of the award of a Guggenheim Fellowship to Dr. Douglas Bush, Proffesor of English in the University of Minnesota. These fellowships, of the value of $2,500, are awarded annually by the Guggenheim Foundation of New York to artists authors and scholars of distinction to enable them to carry on further work. Dr. Bush is to work in England during 1934-35 on a critical history of clasical mythology in modern English poetry, as a sequel to his recent book, "Mythology and the Renaissance Tradition in English Poetry."

Dr. Bush is the son of Mrs. Dexter C. Bush of Toronto, and the late D.C. Bush of Morrisburg. Having attended the Morrisburg Collegiate Institute, he entered Victoria College, University of Toronto, with the Prince of Wales and numerous other scholarships. He graduated in 1920 as gold medallist in Classics and English. From Harvard, in 1923, he received a Ph.D. in English, and a Sheldon Travelling Fellowship. After a year abroad, he was appointed to the tutorial staff at Harvard, and in 1927 went to the University of Minnesota, becoming a full professor in 1931.

Mrs. Douglas Bush is the daughter of Mr. Ellis H. Cleaver, K.C., and Mrs. Cleaver of Burlington, Ont. and is also a gold medalist of Victoria College.

MISS MARY ANN STEEN

After an illness extending over a period of several months, Miss Mary Ann Steen, one of Morrisburg's oldest and most highly respected citizens, passed away at her home, Main Street, Morrisburg, on Wednesday, April 4th, 1934.

The late Miss Steen was born in Aultsville on February 23rd, 1851, where she resided until about 20 years ago, when, with her sister, Miss Olive Steen, she came to reside in Morrisburg. For many years Miss Steen taught school in the Province of Quebec, having acquired her preliminary education in Aultsville Public School and Morrisburg High School, later graduating from Normal in Montreal.

The funeral service was held at her late home, on Friday April 6th, at 2 p.m., Rev. S.B. Holmes officiating. The remains were placed in the vault and later in the spring will be buried in the family plot, in Woodlands cemetery.

The pall bearers, all cousins of the deceased, were Messrs Sterling Vallance, Frank Campbell, Harold Anderson, Clifford Gove, J.W. Bredin and Irwin Smith.

Relatives from a distance attending the funeral were: Miss Mabel Steen, Toronto; Mrs. A.C. Robertson, Cornwall; Miss Gertrude Bredin, Montreal; Mrs. E.M. Phillips, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Gove, Mrs. George Anderson and Mr. Harold Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Shaver, Aultsville; Mr. and Mrs. F. McCleverty, Wales; Mr. J.W. Bredin and Mr. and Mrs. F. Campbell, Farran's Point; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vallance and Mr. Sterling Vallance of Woodlands.

Miss Steen is survived by several cousins.

SURPRISE PARTY

On Monday evening, April 2nd, about twenty guests gathered at the home of Alyce Cameron, in honour of Messrs Glenn and Dale Dawley who are about to return to United States. Dancing and games commenced at eight-thirty, and continued until twelve-thirty, when lunch was served.

During the lull after luncheon Glenn and Dale were called to the centre of the floor, where Orrie Casselman read the following address, while Walter Whitteker, at the opportune time presented Dale with book ends, and Graham Wells presented Glenn with a Parker fountain pen.

To Messrs Glenn and Dale Dawley:

We, a small number of your many friends, have gathered here this evening to express our deepest regrets at losing you from our midst.

I am sure we shall all envy the people with whom you shall be associated in the future, and without a doubt they shall never rue the day on which they accepted you two highly esteemed gentlemen into their social circles.

In the future walks of life our ways are sure to diverge, and we may be spread to the four corners of the earth. Hence, as a symbol of our appreciation at having you as our friends, we ask you to accept these small tokens, and may you always remember where and from whom you received them.

Signed on behalf of all present and wishing you the best of luck,

ORA CASSELMAN,
GRAHAM WELLS,
MRS. DONALD CASSELMAN,
ALYCE CAMERON.

Dancing and games were then resumed until the wee hours of the morning.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Isaac Hall, who departed this life so suddenly on April 6th, 1933.

I have lost a dear companion,
A life linked with my own,
And day by day I miss him more
As I walk through life alone.

Ever remembered by Wife and Sons.

S. H. MARSHALL PRESIDENT CHORAL SOCIETY

(Galt Daily Reporter)

In spite of most unfavorable weather, there was a splendid attendance at the regular weekly rehearsal of the Choral Society on Tuesday, and under the able direction of T.C. Pearse, a good workout was effected. During an interval, Tom Slater informed the choir of the decisions of a recent meeting of the executive committe, when various details in connection with the forthcoming concert in May and the visit to Hamilton were dealt with. He also announced that the committee had discussed the question of a new president, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late N.D. MacFadyen, and it was felt, as the season was so far advanced, it would be wise to choose a member of the Society who was well acquainted with the work, rather than an outsider. The unanimous choice of the committee was Sydney H. Marshall, who had subsequently been approached in this connection.

WHITE—STRADER

On Saturday March 31st, at 2 p.m., a wedding of interest locally took place in Stewarton United Church, Ottawa, when Dorothy Lillian, youngest daughter of Mrs. Alice Strader and the late Philip Strader, was united in marriage to Mr. Roy White, son of Mr. and Mrs. T.D. White, of Ottawa. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Milliken. Miss Eileen Brown, of Ottawa, assisted the bride, while Mr. John E. McIntosh, of Kingston, a cousin of the bride, acted as best man. Only immediate relatives of both parties were present.

Following the marriage, an informal reception was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J.W. McIntosh, uncle and aunt of the bride, from 2.30 to 4.30. Tea was poured by Mrs. Brown, of Ottawa, and Mrs. Strader McIntosh, of Williamsburg, cut the ices. Assisting in serving were Misses Iva Whitteker, Mary McIntosh, and Marion Gordon, of Ottawa, and Eva Donaldson of Winchester.

Mr. and Mrs. White left by motor for a short honeymoon trip to western points, the bride travelling in her wedding suit, a blue swagger, with accessories to match. Upon their return, they will take up residence in Ottawa.

MR. D. H. PRESHO

Mr. Daniel Harris Presho, well and favorably known in Morrisburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Presho, of Quebec City, died in St. Michaels Hospital, Toronto, on Saturday, March 31st.

The late Mr. Presho was born in Quebec City on Feb. 8th, 1876. On Sept. 24th, 1920, he was united in marriage to Miss Helen Jarvis, of Morrisburg, and for a number of years after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Presho resided in Montreal later moving to Toronto.

In 1914, Mr. Presho enlisted for overseas service in the Great War with the 60th Battalion. He returned to Canada in 1918.

The funeral service was held at the funeral chapel of Hopkins & Golden, Toronto, Sunday evening at 9 o'clock. Funeral left Toronto Monday morning at 9 o'clock via C.N.R. for Morrisburg, the remains being accompanied by Mrs. Presho and Mrs. R.B. Chalue. On Tuesday afternoon, the funeral service was conducted in St. James Church by Rev. Holmes.

The remains were placed in the vault, to await burial in St. James cemetery in the spring.

Surviving Mr. Presho are his widow; three sisters and one brother: Mrs. C.T.A. Hart, Montreal, Mrs. L.M. Baker, Minneapolis, Mrs. E. Wood, Calgary and Mr. N.A. Presho, London.

MRS. ADDIE E. CASSELMAN

Mrs. Addie E. Casselman, a native of the Township of Williamsburg, born on November 15th, 1867, died at her home, 851 E. 51st St., Los Angeles, Calif., on March 27th, 1934.

The late Mrs. Casselman, daughter of the late William and Phoebe Wells of Morrisburg, was a twin sister of Mrs. Ida Casselman, who died about ten years ago in Sacramento, Calif. She was educated in the Public School at East Williamsburg, where she spent her early life.

About forty-five years ago, she was united in marriage to Mr Harvey E. Casselman, and for a few years after their marriage they resided at Riverside. They later moved to Manitoba, where they resided for two years. They afterwards moved to Sacramento, Cal., where they resided for about three years, after which they took up residence in Los Angeles, where they have resided ever since.

The late Mrs. Casselman had been confined to her room since last November, when she suffered a slight stroke, which caused the loss of her voice. She, however, recovered sufficiently to be up and around, but on January 3rd, she suffered another stroke, from the effects of which she did not recover.

She is survived by her husband, Mr. Harvey E. Casselman, Los Angeles, Calif. She is also survived by Messrs Morley and Cornelius Wells of Morrisburg, Wm. Wells of Aultsville and Alwilda Casselman of New York; also several nieces and nephews residing in Canada and United States.

Tribute to Toronto

—The people of the Province of Ontario will rejoice with unfeigned satisfaction at the observance of the hundredth anniversary of the incorporation of Toronto as a city. The tremendous growth of Toronto in one hundred years is a tribute to the energy ,enterprize and enthusiasm of those who have conducted he affairs of the city in years gone by. Canaddians are proud of the Queen City ar its achievements. It has been a leader in every good work for the advancement of the country—The Brantford Expositor.

A Good Reason Too

—In Great Britain every other home has a radio set. And the folks do not have to listen to announcers asking, as in our fair land: "Are your corns bothering you tonight?" That's one reason why Britain has so many listeners.—Winnipeg Tribune.

Engine Without Steam

—There is only one recipe for curing the depression — more employment and higher wages. Those who have not learned that in the last four years can learn nothing. It is not in our modern world simply "his own affair" if a man cannot find work or has to work at starvation pay. This is also the "affair" of every one who produces things to sell or offers things for sale. The business system without public buying power is like a locomotive without steam. The machine is all right; but it won't move. Buying power, in the hands of people who need or want to buy things, is the prime mover of production and trade. —Edmonton Journal.

Anglo-Canadian Treaty

The whole Canadian press should mobilize its forces in support of the Anglo-Canadian trade treaty. The preference given to Canada in the British market constitutes the finest opportunity ever presented to Canadian exporters over there. It remains for our producers and exporters to profit by this opportunity on an ever-growing scale. It is surely up to every newspaper in the Dominion to preach this gospel continuously. — Toronto Mail and Empire.

Alberta's Solution

The Province has about reached the end of its borrowing possibilities for the present. The one promising solution of the problem is that some thing may be done in the way of reducing interest charges on the public debt, but if alleviation is to be secured only at the erpense of those who have invested in Alberta bonds, public sentiment will demand that the Government in turn should grapple more effectively and sincerely with the problem of reducing general governmental costs. Sacrifice should not be entirely laid on the shoulders of investors.—Calgary Herald.

Newspaper Style

Many of the editorial articles in The Ottawa Journal, the Globe, the Mail and Empire, the Montreal Gazette, just to name a few of the dailies at random, have a notable literary style and need no apologies on this score. There are weekly newspapers that despite the pressure of time and circumstances are still of distinctive literary flavor. There seems to be a tradition, however. that newspapers should not pretend to any literary style or carefulness, though if this were actually the case Canadian newspapers would not be as good as they are today.—Timmins Advance.

Sounds Better In Feet

—Somehow the news that Glacier, B.C., has had 369 inches of snow this season leaves us very cold.—Vancouver Province.

Man the Real Danger

"If I ever come out again, I will have another story for you," recited a radio talker last night, dilating on the alleged dangers of the great Canadian woods.

What is it makes men pose as brave souls, who blitnely defy cold, snow, wolves and wild animals in their talks?

The truth is that a man is safer from harm in our forests than on the streets of a village. He won't be robbed or attacked there. He can find free food and shelter and warmth in the forest. The records of a big city store show that its delivery men were bitten by dogs over 300 times in one year. Hardly a week goes by in the Summer that doesn't record the attack of a bad tempered rural bull, often with fatal results to man, woman or child.

Of course the real danger everywhere is man himself. Compared to him the beasts of the field and forest are as cooing doves. If you want to lead a perfectly safe existence, get away from your fellow man.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

Gun or Camera?

There can be no doubt that this steady annual slaughter of moose cannot continue indefinitely without in the end leading to serious depletion of the herds. For our own part, we would much rather see the camera taking the place of the rifle to a much greater extent in Nova Scotia.—Halifax Mail.

An Illustration

Those who have experienced this so-called good old-fashioned winter in Canada will have a clearer understanding of what is meant by a mean temperature.—Montreal Gazette.

A Pioneer

London Township has lost a faithful servant in the death of Miss Mary Grant, clerk of the township for nearly 35 years. It was in 1900, in the days before women had entered business life to-day, that Miss Grant became clerk of the township, the first woman in the Dominion to hold such a position, succeeding her father, the late James Grant, clerk from 1873 until 1900. She became an authority on rural municipal questions and her advice was widely sought. Miss Grant was one of the pioneers in the movement to introduce Hydro in rural districts of Ontario.—London Free Press.

The Empire

A Liberal Education

To induce the sense of being a shareholder in the treasure house of civilization is the essence of a liberal education. —George E. G. Catlin, in the Fortnightly Review (London).

Roosevelt's Trial

Roosevelt keeps in reserve his unequalled power of persuasion over the air, having wisely come to the conclusion that a President, while feeling free to talk on ceremonial occasions, should be careful in his use of the radio for statements of policy and appeals for public support. Franklin Roosevelt has yet to be tried in the fire, and tried beyond all question he will be. At present we can hail him as by far the most attractive man occupying high office in any part of the world. On January 30th, 1934 the American people accorded him an anniversary celebration which, in spontaneity and universality, must be described as unparalleled. This was his 52nd birthday. If it should be given to him, in 1935, to enjoy his 53rd amid circumstances in any way comparable, Franklin Roosevelt will indeed be a world's wonder.— S. K. Ratcliffe, in The Contemporary Review (London).

Pioneers

It is too much forgotten that our forefathers in similar times of crises, as, for example, in the early years of the Seventeenth and of the Nineteenth Centuries, organized great settlements in the New World. They did not, as some imagine, leave the populating of those newly discovered lands to a vagabond chance; but sent out well-equipped communities, and supported them in their early weakness with capital and necessities from home. It was thus that New England and Virginia and New Brunswick and New Zealand were planted, to mention few notable examples, and there are still empty and ample spaces for similar development if our nation today would show the same enterprise. But in this matter enthusiasm and expert knowledge must go together, and they must be backed by the energetic support of the Government.—London Morning Post.

Dominions and Immigration

The colonization scheme proposed by the Empire Development and Settlement Research Committee seems to us worthy of very serious consideration. The proposed Chartered Company, supported financially by the British Government, would go some way to meet the difficulties in the way of the emigrant that have revealed themselves in recent years. But the assent and cooperation of the Dominion Governments would, of course, be essential. And the difficulty here is that the change in world economy, which is throwing out of business the great food-producing provinces of the Dominions, is bringing the Dominion Governments face to face with the necessity of providing for the future of great sections of their own people. Until they see their way to settling that problem they are hardly likely to add a new one to it. But there seems no reason why the new settlers should not be self-supporting, and surely for such there must be ample room in the still very lightly populated Dominions.—London News Chronicle.

News Cheers Britain

There is always good news to make you forget bad news, British imports have risen. Canada's exports now rank her fifth among all nations. Australia will have a large export surplus. In Britain all railways carry more traffic, showing internal trade improvement. The chairman of the Westminster Bank comes out advocating slum clearance as a national investment. The banker suggests it should be done on the lines of public utility. Rejoice! The light is spreading.—London Daily Express.

Protecting Scottish Oats

The Government has at last made a definite move in the interests of the Scottish farmer in placing a genuine restriction on the import of oats and oat products. The new duty, which represents about 70 per cent on the value of imported supplies, is practically prohibitive, and should give the farmer every encouragement to maintain the acreage under this crop without leading to any evidence of scarcity to the consumer. Britain at present can meet all her requirements.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Australia's Problems

Australia suddenly finds herself caught up in the complicated design of Pacific events. That she must cooperate wholeheartedly in the plan of Imperial defence is too obvious to be disputed. But there is another responsibility. The peoples who dwell on the margin of the wide Pacific are uniquely different from one another in racial characteristics, in ways of living, in ambitions, and in colour. Yet the advance of science has narrowed the span of the ocean, and the problems of one people become more and more international. Among nations which share a common language and common customs it is often difficult to promote amity; it is infinitely harder to do so where there is no such common ground for meeting. In the Pacific, Asia and Europe meet.—The Australasian.

New Zealand's Air Force

In ordering eight new reconnaisance airplanes for the New Zealand Air Force, the Government is carrying out its avowed intention of increasing the effective strength of the Dominion's air defence. It is ultimately proposed to station four flights of four airplanes each at vantage aerodromes in both islands, thus establishing useful home defence units capable of operating over large areas of country. The significance of the Government's action will be fully appreciated by those who realize the practical value of aviation as applied to the protection of closely populated districts as well as to the patrolling of stretches of vulnerable coast-line. It has also been decided that torpedoes will not be carried at present, on account of the cost involved.—Auckland News.

Expects Large Business Gain

Magazine Forecasts Big 1934 Improvement in the Dominion

Montreal.—"Canadian business activity started on the up-grade exactly a year ago, and during the next twelve months the rate of progress should be accelerated," says Canadian Business, the magazine of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, in a survey of business conditions. The survery continues:

"This is not a casual observation. It is based on authentic reviews of the present situation, backed by precedence, and confirmed by the security markets.

"The advance in common stock prices has represented substantially more than a return of speculative fervor. While the recent uprush in quotations may be traced in part to the scramble to secure equities in time to share in the prospective business betterment, all the buying did not reflect unreasoning speculation.

"The increasing confidence and the concrete improvement in underlying conditions, have revealed themselves in the trend of the bond market. More than a handful of issues, which could be bought for less than 15 cents on the dollar, are now commanding prices which are materially closer to par. Higher grade industrialists have risen as much as 50 per cent. in value, while governments and municipals have been experiencing a keen demand with sellers at a distinct advantage.

"The financial situation ,however, is by no means healthy. Federal, provincial and municipal deficits have assumed precarious proportions, although Hon. Hugh Guthrie (Minister of Justice) recently forecast a balanced budget for Canada. Critical as our fiscal problems are, the ultimate effect of rising prices and the quickening of the business pulse must create counter forces which will ameliorate the burdens which we are bearing."

Dusty Act of 1713 Is Dug Up

Columbia, S.C.—Yellowed with age, a provincial Act of 1713 under which the "true and absolute lords and proprietors of this province" created a "night watch" at Charleston, was discovered here recently during a general clean-up of the basement of the State Capitol.

The historical document, entitled: "An Act for the maintenance of a watch to keep good order in Charles Town," provided a picked force of three officers and nineteen men to protect the young town from Indians, prowling pirates and evil doers in general.

An amendment to a previous Act was revoked in the following language: "For the better preservation of the said town and the keeping of good order and a careful and strict watch thereon, be it enacted by the most noble prince, Henry, Duke of Beaufort, palataniate, and the rest of the true and absolute lords and proprietors of this province, with the consent of the honorable assembly, now met in Charles Town, that the Watch of Charles Town shall consist of three officers and 19 watchmen." The personnel of the watch were to be between 16 and 50 years of age, and were to be properly armed and carry at least 20 "cartridges," a provision of the Act stipulated.

Million-Dollar Apples

Country Life in B.C.

That Million-Dollar Apple may be developed from one of the 1,600 seedlings that are now being nursed along, in this pious hope, at the Dominion Experimental Station at Summerland, B.C. One of these seedlings may combine the outstanding virtues of the McIntosh Red and the Winesap. If it does, it will be cheap at a million or even two million Government IOU's.

But this quest for the golden apple need ont be confined to an experimental station nor to technical pomological experts. Any apple grower, ambitious to get his cent a pound or better, may, if he uses his eyes, spot a sport in his orchard that will make him a fortune and add to the revenues of thousands of his fellow-growers.

Fairy Story—not a bit of it. Simply another of the lessons learned by trained experimenters. Time was when it was taken as a matter of course that certain things could not happen and could not be done. Nowadays nothing is taken for granted. Everything is subject to test and trial. And so it has been found that bud sports on apple trees may quite easily produce types that will have higher commercial values than the parent stock.

Sets Milk Record

St. Thomas. — Dowdie DeKol, Dorliska, a six year old Holstein cow, bred and owned by Duncan McBane, disrtict farmer, has just finished setting a record of more than a ton of milk a month. In her 365 day lactation period, the cow gave 22,109 pounds of milk containing 858,76 pounds of butter fat.

Boys' Needs Are Outlined

Character, Courage and Ability Given as Fundamentals

Windsor.—Character, courage and ability were outlined as the three qualities to be stressed in the moulding of the boys of to-day by Louis M. McNight, associate director of education of the Detroit Institute of Technology in an address at a recent father and son banquet in Lincoln Road United Church.

ADVICE TO FATHERS.

Mr. McNight's address may well have been labeled "Advice to a Father," for it was given almost entirely over to them, but his ability to illustrate points with humorous stories made his talk equally interesting to the boys in his audience.

"We look forward to the day when our boys will grow up and be ready to take their places as good citizens in the country," he said, "but too often we look too far ahead and forget about the little journeys they must make and expect them to make them by themselves. Modern engineers are not only improving the motor car so that long rides may be made fast and in comfort, but are also concentrating on the shorter runs. They realize that it is the shorter journeys, from stop light to stop light, that are important.

AGE OF SPEED.

"We sometimes worry about the outcome of the younger generation because of the changes in living conditions in the world. Time doesn't mean anything and distance isn't here any more. In the old days of the stage coach if we missed one and had to wait two or three days for the next one it was O.K., but now we get sore if we miss one section of a revolving door.

"It is true that to-day things are moving faster, but we must still take the long beaten highways in the building up of our boys," said Mr. McNight. "One's life to his neighbor used to be an open book, but now it is too easy to evade the responsibilities of good living. If one fails to make good in a community it is easy enough to move to another one."

Mr. McNight stated that in the United States they are doing great things by rearranging the alphabet with the AAA, CWA, and RFC, but by far the most important is the CCA. CCA, he went on to explain, stands for character, courage and ability.

MUST COME FIRST.

"You can strip young manhood of every other vestige and leave with or give him CCA and he will rehabilitate himself and go on living. Character, courage and ability by all means must come first for without it a young man cannot be successful. They are the old landmarks we can't desert, for in trials and and tribulations we can't do without them."

The home, school and church were given by Mr. McNight as the three centres around which the life of any boy must be built.

"Although many domestic duties," he said, "are now done in a shop and we travel miles to work, leaving the youngsters on a narrow lot to make their journeys alone, the home is still the place for association, but it must have something else to support the work, such as the schools and churches.

CHURCHES ENDURE.

"When one visits the British Isles and is pointed out ruins of many Roman buildings he gets to wondering just where is Imperial Rome. True it has left its imprint on our laws and customs but where is it? Some 1,900 years ago a Man was walking around teaching character, but Rome appeared to overthrow him. To-day we look down on the ruins of Rome but the church bells still ring."

The speaker told a story of how one of three friends on a train together fell asleep and his companions decided to hide his ticket as a joke. Rather than face the conductor the victim, although positive that he had purchased a ticket, hid under the seat while his friends covered him with their rain coats. When the conductor came to collect their tickets the two friends handed him the three, and when he asked where the other man was they told him he was under the seat, but preferred to ride that way.

"When the time comes for our boys to take journeys we must train them to stand up and face the conductor rather than get under the seat," he said.

Use of Sodium Illumination to Do Away With Glare of Lamps, Says Engineer

Toronto. — Illuminated highways that are sufficiently well lighted by the use of sodium light to permit of the driving of automobiles without headlights was seen as a possibility of the future by Mr. W. P. Dobson, chief testing engineer of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, who discussed new inventions and discoveries in the electric lighting field at the convention of Municipal Electrical Utilities Association here recently.

Illumination to an intensity of 3-foot candles could be produced by sodium light with an expenditure of two kilowatts a mile. The replacement of incandescent lamps with facilities to give cold light was foreseen, as well as great strides in the electro-chemical field.

Short Week At Ottawa

Debates Ahead — Committees Sit.

Ottawa, March 25. — A short week looms ahead for parliament, which is scheduled to adjourn Wednesday or Thursday for the Easter holidays. In the meantime it will discuss unemployment relief and a national marketiug board aud concentrate on committee work.

The bill to create a Dominion marketing board is scheduled to be brought down to-morrow. With the exception of the budget itself, this will be the most important legislation still to be brought before parliament. It is credited with containing provisions which may place the marketing of a considerable number of farm products under the direct control of machinery built up by the Dominion and provincial goverunments.

The Stevens committee will swing back into action Tuesday when representatives of the Quebec Retail Merchants' Association will be witnesses. The banking committee also will sit Tuesday, continuing its inquire into Canadian banks aud bankers.

The most important legislation of the session, the budgets will be presented after Easter by Finance Minister E. N. Rhodes, but the date has not been set. Officials of the finance and national revenue departments have been working on the budget for weeks but it was not expected to be presented to the House for a week or 10 days after the Easter adjournment. The length of the budget debate will be determined largely by the Finance Minister's disclosures but it is not expected to be shorter than a month.

Yesterday council was in session throughout the morning and afternoon, but no official information was disclosed. Some indication of the nature of the Minister's deliberations is expected to be given at to-morrow's session of the House.

It is anticipated that Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, will announce the goverumeut decision with respect to the 10 per cent. deduction from the salaries of civil servants. The general belief is that for the year commencing April 1 the lower paid civil servants will have their salaries restored to the level existing at the time the cut was put into effect two years ago.

Just where the dividing line will be is not known, but it is believed those getting salaries in excess of $1,500 or possibly $2000 will continue to suffer the 10 per cent. deduction for another year.

Jackson Dodds, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, who appeared before the Stevens Committee with Mr. Bennett and Mr. Beatty, will be questioned again Tuesday, with S. H. Logan, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, with further reference to the government's guarantees to the banks for wheat operations.

Canada to Buy Six War Planes

Ottawa.—Six new airplanes are to be purchased by the Department of National Defence at an estimated cost of $80,000. As the House of Commons in Committee of Supply approved Hon. Donald Sutherland's estimate of $1,805,000 for the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Minister told of plans to purchase the new planes from England.

The grant of $1,805,000 represented an increase of $400,000 over last year's.

Col. Sutherland declares that since it was agreed the Dominion should have an air force, it was considered it should be given as much assistance as possible. The force had suffered severe retrenchment in the last few years. Two years ago many men had been let out so as to maintaian the force within the reduced grant. Last year the vote had been further reduced, but now it was decided the force could not be fittingly maintained ono the low figure and consequently an increase was being sought from Parliament.

The Minister could not give details of the class of machine to be purchased from England, but declared they would be of the most modern construction and capable of filling the many needs of the force in carrying on advanced training.

Sprint of Fat Officer is Costly

MILWAUKEE.—Rushing up to a portly policeman, Edward A. Wieland, 27, pointed and breathlessly panted:

"See that truck two blocks down the street? there's a murder being committed in it."

Gun in hand, the officer ran top speed to the truck, kicked open the door and found nothing but a load of merchandise.

"Why," asked the policman, "did you tell me there was a murder there?"

Wieland replied:

"I just wanted to see a fat cop run."

He paid $5 for the privilege in district court.

Health Tip from Woman of 67

"For headache — constipation — rheumatism — I use Kruschen. And since I have used it, I am in very much better health. In fact, I hardly ever wake with those bad headaches and that general feeling of lassitude. Kruschen has helped me beyond words. I am 67 and feel young." — thus writes Mrs. M.G.

It is reasonable to ask why it is that headaches, constipation, and rheumatism all yield so completely to Kruschen? What is the secret of Kruschen's effectiveness against these different complaints? The secret is an open one. It is revealed in the analysis on the bottle—for physicians and everyone else to see. Six vital, mineral salts. That is the secret. Glinty Evening Frocks And Accessories

New York, Sept. 18. — Sliding-to-the-right toques and round brimmed felt hats, velvet and satin evening gloves, pieced together crepe evening slippers, Alice-in-Wonderland combs, and coral-colored fingernails are among the materialized ideas in the field of "accessories."

Bags for evening, if not of be-jewelled velvets are either of glossy metal or a trick satin with a sparkle in it.

The dresses they go with are likewise glinty, but this does not mean an ensemble is in order. On the contrary, contrast is much in the vogue. White gloves and sparkling white bags may go with any evening dress of gold metal, deep rich-colored velvet, or pale shaded crepe with narrow silver stripes.

Evening shoes, mostly crepe, likewise have a dash of brilliancy, sometimes combining the qualities of both dress and bag. Hence the pieced-together appearance.

Hats for the theatre are necessarily small. For cocktail parties they are as large as desired, and may sit on the back of the head.

Hydro Credit Continues High

Long-Sighted Policy Explains Recent Purchases Criticized by Many as Excessive

The Commission, like any other public utility, must look ahead and anticipate future needs. These must include a reserve, to cover temporary failure of water supply, or failure of equipment. From the nature of electrical development, future needs must be estimated over a considerable period. It is often several years, after a contract is made, before power is delivered, for a big power project takes a long time to construct and put into operation. Moreover, such projects cannot be undertaken at all if sales of power are not foreseen.

There are three main sources of water-power available for electrical development: the Niagara, Ottawa and St. Lawrence Rivers. The Niagara is international, the United States Senate failed to ratify the treaty for using more of its water for power. The Ottawa is interprovincial, and its development involves long negotiations. The St. Lawrence is partly international (this section is not yet available) and partly in the Province of Quebec. In view of these international and interprovincial complications, it was possible for the Commission to provide for future needs only by purchase of power developed in the Province of Quebec. Agreements were therefore entered into with the Gatinau, Beauharnois and Maclaren interests. At Chats Falls the Commission bought the Quebec share of the power rights before the development was made.

The power contracted for was the very minimum which could be expected to be needed, on the basis of the Commission's experience. Purchases were on the basis of under 8 per cent. yearly increase, as against actual 11 per cent. up to the time the contracts were made. The Commission's estimates of the demand proved to be conservative. The peak was in 1930, since then Hydro has suffered, like all other undertakings, from the world-wide depression. It should be noted, however, that the domestic load continues to increase and that other loads, such as street lighting, remain as they were: Hydro has not suffered from the depression as might have been expected, and its credit continues to increase and that other loads, such as street lighting, remain as they were: Hydro has not suffered from the depression as might have been expected, and its credit continues high.

Prince of Wales Cloth Favorite for Spring

You might as well make up your mind to get your angora. You can have it in almost any form that pleases you—dress, coat, hat or accessories, but angora is as important for summer as it has been, mixed with wool and tweed, for winter.

Of course, it has lightened in weight as well as color, and made into some of the early Spring blouses it looks like that old fashioned supn-sugar candy. In pale pastels with a dusty cast, the blues, inks, mauves, greens and yellows are lovely.

Next to angora comes the Prince of Wales Guard cloth, which is a smooth, lightweight wool in a very nice gray-blue color. This is an English fabric in high favor in Paris. A two-piece town or country suit of this fabric should be designed on very tailored lines with small revers, a hip-length jacket, straight skirt and cuffs of plain or striped pique. Double or single-breasted and with buttons of gold or silver-knots or nuggets serve as fastenings.

Hats run to sailors—the ancient kinds with wide brims—but the brims are turned up slightly at the base of the crowns.

IN THE ALPINE COUNTRY

Switzerland—Another small country—has an area of only 15,737 square miles and, for this area, it is probably the most mountainous country in the world. But the Swiss people know how to capitalize on this glorious scenery, consequently the tourist industry is the greatest business of the country. We have wonderful mountain scenery too but, on the other hand, Canada is so vast that these features have been almost entirely exploited by the railways—not so in Switzerland, there everyone is interested and rightly so. House and church architecture blend into the landscape; wood-carvers use natural objects as models for their wonderful productions; Swiss hotels and hotel managers are known and are to be found the world over. In this connection, one of the finest schools for hotel keeping is at Laucanne and its graduates are much sought after.

A LITTLE GEOGRAPHY AND HISTORY

Switzerland is a federal republic and is made up of 24 Cantons, the last three of which joined the federation in 1815. It is about the oldest of the present day republics and has been pointed out as a striking example of democratic government. These Cantons are independent, except in matters affecting the whole country, in which they are subject to the Federal Constitution. The languages of the country are four in number; the greater part of the population speak German, after which comes French, Italian and a dialect, allied to Latin, called Romansch. Roughly speaking, French is the language of the south-west; Italian that of the southern slope of the Alps; Romansch of certain districts in the Grisons and German the remainder of the country. English is spoken as an auxiliary language, particularly in the larger places. Climatically Switzerland has no standard; altitude has much to do with climate conditions and there is a great diversity of vegetation. Because of its central position and neutral attitude, throughout many generations, Switzerland has been chosen as the meeting place for many important gatherings of an international nature—this adds greatly to its importance in world affairs.

TWO WEDDINGS

Always of interest to the ladies—sometimes to the men also—is a bridal procession. We saw an interesting one at Lucerne and another a few miles away, as we were travelling along the road. The first one was going into the Cathedral at Lucerne; that interesting building, with its four-sided twin spires pointing heaven ward. At night, flood-lights illuminate this typical Swiss structure and the glory of the sight, as one comes upon it suddenly, causes a gasp of astonishment. The wedding procession differed from ours. First of all, because it was on foot; secondly, the bride and groom headed the procession, followed by the diminutive flower girl and the friends in pairs behind. The bride was demure and sweet—all brides are—and as the party came up the wide steps, leading from the street, passers-by stopped to smile and, I hope, to wish them joy and happiness. Some of the guests were dressed in national costumes, while the principals wore the conventional garb.

The second wedding party was less pretentious. It was seen on a road leading into Austria. Only one open carriage, drawn by a team of bay horses with nodding white plumes on their heads. In the carriage, facing the front, sat the bride in her finery, accompanied by her bridesmaid. On the other seat, facing them, was the groom and his best man. Around the hood of the carriage roses were entwined, the whole making a very beautiful sight, the only incongrous note was the driver in his shirt sleeves. At my motion, the carriage drew up for me to take a picture. It was just a group of working folk, but for the four participants, it was a big day.

A BOY AND A PIG

Another homely incident. Just outside of Lucerne one morning, as our car turned the corner of the road, we came across a boy taking a large hog to market. The porker was squealing and creating a terrific din but the lad was patiently trying to guide him in the way he was to go by means of a cord tied to the pig's hindleg. Of course I wanted a picture of this and the boy was most obliging. With some effort, he braced his feet firmly on the roadway and managed to hold a position long enough for me to accomplish my purpose.

Speaking about pigs, suppose we take you to Killarney in Ireland for the monthly market day. Watch for this next week.

"Travel Impressions" have been coming to us each week. These articles are a feature of this paper and are taken from the experiences of one who has seen what he writes about. We have been asked to bring to your attention a unique trip which Captain Reid is organizing and which he will personally direct this coming Summer. If you have no definite plans and desire to take advantage of a real opportunity to see the Old Land under ideal auspices, this selected motor party should appeal to you.

Here are but a few of the features: Lakeland — Lake Windermere, Loch Lomond and the Lakes of Killarney; the Welsh Mountains and the Highlands of Scotland; Cathedral Cities—Salisbury, York, Chester, Durham, Wells, Ely, Hereford, Lincoln, Peterborough, Winchester, etc.; Castles — Warwick, Blarney, Carnarvon, Edinburgh, etc.; Shakespeare, Scott, Wordsworth, Moore and Handy Country; The Fens; The Dukeries; Glorious Devon; Cornish Riviera; The Trossachs and the Garden of Ireland; Giants' Causeway. Lovely roads, beautiful scenery. London, Edinburgh, Belfast, Dublin, Douglas — all in one glorious holiday.

For further information regarding this or any other holiday you contemplate, address Capt. F. H. Reid, C.P.R. Building, Toronto.

Girl Millionaire Has Allowance Cut

Chicago—Vivacious Nancy Leiter, poor little rich girl whose monthly allowance has been cut to $5,000, is struggling with a new budget and wondering whether she will have to given up any of her ponies.

Nancy's only extravagance is her riding horses.

Judge John F. O'Connell in probate court decided that Nancy would have to get along the next few months on $5,000 a month instead of the $7,500 she has been accustomed to. Her mother agreed when she learned that only $50,000 is available until next November 14 when Nancy has her eighteenth birthday and becomes a very rich young woman.

On her birthday she will receive $500,000 in cash from the estate of her famous grandfather, Levi Z. Leiter, the capitalist, and $800,000 held for her by her mother.

She also will receive a handsome legacy from the estate of her father, Joseph Leiter, millionaire sportsman and capitalist, and later there will be another million or more from the Levi Leiter estate.

"If Nancy has to get along on $5,000 a month she'll be able to salt away only about $4,500," commented a young debutante at the Casino when she heard of the little rich girl's "plight."

Food Industry Gets New Scale of Wages

Montreal—A new wage scale for the food industry in Montreal and district was set recently by the Quebec Women's Minimum Wage Board, sitting under the chairmanship of Gustave Franco. Rates were set to range from a minimum of $7 for the lower class operators to $10 for higher grades for biscuits, jams, meat packers and "sundries" divisions.

Refuses to Play Opposite Mae West

HOLLYWOOD, — George Raft, screen actor, has notified his producers he will not play opposite Mae West in a forthcoming screen production. Studio officials said another actor would be chosen. Sequences in the picture call for a number of close-ups of Miss West with the back of the leading man to the camera. It was this fact to which Raft was reported to have objected.

The Wild Duck

Twilight, Red in the West.
Dimness. A glow on the wood.
The teams plot home to rest.
The wild ducks come to glean.
O souls not understood,
What a wild cry in the pool;
What things have the farm ducks seen
That they cry so—huddle and cry?
Only the soul that goes.
Eager, Eager, Flying.
Over the globe of the moon,
Over the wood that glows.
Wings linked. Necks a-strain,
A rush and a wild crying.

A cry of the long pain.

Canadian Chances In the Argentine

Discussing market possibilities for fish products in the Argentine Republic a recent report from the office of the Canadian Government Trade Commissioner at Buenos Aires suggests that Dominion exporters should "be able to obtain a share of the codfish and herring trade." The report indicates, too, that there is also a limited outlet in Argentina for canned fish and canned lobsters as well as for frozen salmon. Canadian exporters who may be interested in further information in this regard can obtain the report from the Commercial Intelligence Service of the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa.

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Starting Chicks

Supply water with chill taken off, in suitable vessels, charcoal, shell and grit or river sand. Feed the youngsters immediately on their entry to brooding quarters. A good starting mash consists of: middlings, ground yellow corn, ground oat groats, each one part; shorts, alfalfa meal and animal feed mixture, each ½ part; bone meal, 2 per cent.; cod liver oil, 1 to 2 per cent; and salt one-half per cent.

Couch Grass Eradication

After harvest cultivation is one of the most effective methods of controlling couch grass. This method consists of plowing the infested area imediately after the first cut of hay has been harvested, thoroughly working the land during the remainder of the season and replowing in the late fall. In the following spring, this treatment must be followed by an intertilled crop or a smother crop such as buckwheat.

Couch grass is a most persistent weed and its growth must be kept down for at least six months in order to secure complete eradication. This requires treatment during two seasons where crops are being harvested each year.

Will Assist Farmers to Purchase Seed Grain

To assist farmers in the purchase of seed grain, the Ontario Government is prepared to accept two-thirds of the responsibility for loans for that purpose, Hon. T.L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, told the Legislature. He read the following statement to the House:

"The representatives of the Department of Agriculture in practically every county in the province have been approached in reference to the purchase of seed grain. In quite a number of counties, there is a scarcity of seed grain, and in practically every county there are farmers without seed grain and without sufficient credit to enable them to secure it.

"Due to these extraordinary conditions, it is proposed to ask the county councils to appeal to the bank and to secure loans under Section 88 of the Banking Act for the purchase of seed grain in order to assist those farmers within their municipality who apply to them for help.

"In the event of counties losing any money in connection with the repayment of these loans, the Government is prepared to accept two-thirds of the responsibility, providing the municipalities accept one-third."

Getting Ready For the Lambing Season

Lambing is the shepherd's harvest, and it is also his most exciting time. Everything must, therefore, be in readiness for the coming of the new crop.

Ewes heavy in lamb require more pen and feeding space, if overcrowding and losses are to be avoided. Two feet of feeding space is the minimum required.

Large flocks should be divided by putting the ewes expected to lamb first in the warmest and most comfortable pen.

Have the floor level, dry, clean and well bedded. If possible provide equipment for making individual lambing pens. Folding hurdles are very handy for that purpose. The ewe is much quieter if kept alone.

Simple Insect Control

The control of most vegetable insects is not a very difficult or complicated matter if the grower will bear in mind one or two simple facts which can be quickly learned by watching the habits of the pests causing the damage. Insects, according to the type of injury they do, can be divided into two general classes: those known as biting insects, which in feeding actually bite a piece out of the plant attacked and those known as sucking insects, which suck the juices out of the leaves or stems without noticeably changing their outline. For biting insects (caterpillars, cutworms, etc.) three poisons are commonly recommended: arsenate of lead arsenate of lime, and Paris green. Sucking insects (aphids, plant bugs, leafhoppers, etc.) are customarily controlled by nicotine sulphate, either in liquid or dust form.

Advisory Fertilizer Board

Organization of the Ontario Advisory Fertilizer Board is an action which will result in mutual service and greater satisfaction to the buyers and sellers of fertilizers in Ontario, according to Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture.

The board will act as liaison between all fertilizer interests in Ontario, both manufacturer and user, and those charged with the administration of the Fertilizer Act of the Dominion Government. At the first meeting of the organization, Dr. Harcourt of O.A.C. was appointed chairman; E.K. Hampson, Potash Company of Canada, was named vice chairman, and George R. Paterson Ontario Department of Agriculture secretary. Other members of the board are: W.R. Reek, Experimental Farm, Ridgetown; W.J. Bell, of the Kemptville Agricultural School; R. S. Duncan, Director Agricultural Representatives Branch; W.J.W Lennox, Dominion Seed Branch, Toronto; J.K. Perrett, tobacco specialist, Simcoe; J.J. Tierney, Brockville E.F. Palmer, Vineland Station; C. Delworth, Weston; A.L. Smith President, Eastern Canada Fertilizer Association; and A. Mooney, Secretary, Eastern Canada Fertilizer Association.

Holding the number of fertilizer analyses within practical limits is indicated by the Minister of Agriculture as one of the primary objects of the board. In the past many fertilizers were marketed of analyses so similar that even the most intensive tests failed to show any appreciable differences when applied to the soil. Such a condition was bewildering to buyers and of no possible advantage to manufacturers.

Find Many Trees Severely Injured

While it is of course too early to tell whether fruit trees have suffered root injury as a result of the exceptionally low temperatures of the past winter, there is no doubt that considerable injury has been done to main branches and trunks of the more tender varieties of apples. According to a special committee which has been investigating the extent of damage throughout the province, the varieties which have suffered most are Baldwin, Wagner Russett and to a lesser extent Greenings. Trees of other varieties that bore a very heavy crop of fruit last season, or which were weakened for any other reason, have also suffered.

Outside of southern districts, pears, cherries and grapes have suffered extensive fruit bud killing. Considerable damage has been done to the trunks and branches of pears, Japanese plums and sweet cherries.

In view of the fact that the injured trees will be much weakened with recovery dependent on a healthy leaf and root surface, the committee recommend to growers that badly injured trees should be left unpruned until the extent of the injury is clear. nly very light pruning should be done on those trees showing moderate injury. Injured trees bearing fruit should be very heavily thinned or, where feasible, all fruit should be removed. Where the tree is worth saving, any considerable killed areas on the trunk and main branches should be bridge grafted. In this way, it may be possible to save many injured branches and trees that would otherwise die in the next few years.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

Continuing their record for thumping majorities, the Henry Government was sustained in the Legislature in passing in second reading amendments to the Liquor Control Act, providing for freer sale of beer and wine in the province, the vote recorded being 89-9, the largest majority the government has so far been accorded this session.

Beneath this division was recorded a spectacle that has not been witnessed in many sessions, according to veteran members of the House when no less than 12 members of the Opposition voted with the government in carrying the measure, including Progressive Leader Nixon. Only nine of the Opposition members voted against the measure, and only three including Dr. G.A. McQuibban, Liberal leader; W.E.N. Sinclair, K.C., South Ontario. and S.C. Tweed, North Waterloo, spoke against the measure. Mr. Nixon remained out of the discussion, but entered the House to record his vote approving the measure.

Premier Henry and Attorney-General W.H. Price led the attack for the government in urging adoption of the government's policy of freer sale of beer and wine. The Premier made the emphatic statement that the measure will not be proclaimed until after the election, leaving the matter to the electors, which he said is the proper form in all measures where government responsibilty is involved.

"My record as a man of temperance thought and action is sufficient guarantee for the statement that as long as I am Prime Minister of the province the Liquor Control Board will control," said the Premier, in announcing that hotel keepers and restaurant proprietors will, under the proposed regulations governing the sale of beer and wine, be vendors of the province under the direction of the Liquor Control Board.

The new measure, he added, is strictly a temperance move, and there is to be no opening of the "beer flood gates." Hotel keepers and those charged with authority to sell will be governed and watched closely by officials of the Board.

"I want to stress as Prime Minister that this measure is moving along temperance lines," said the Premier. "There is no line of parallel between the old-tme bar and the refreshment rooms which will be inaugurated under the act. In the old-time bar all liquors were available, but not son in the refreshment rooms. Any hotel found with hard liquors will not continue to dispense beer and wine. Control of the sale will be in the hands of the Liquor Control Board, but the government will dictate the thought, as it has been doing for years."

Continuing the Premier said: "I am quite ready and so are my colleagues and suporters to assume full responsibility for this legislation confident that this is legislation in the right direction, and that the freer useof beer will discourage the useof harder liquors. We are moving toward that goal and we will continue to move steadily onwards and from time to time we will amend the law to fit the conditions of the day."

Attorney-General W.H. Price, in moving second reading, made the declaration that it is the government's policy to provide a "cheap glass of beer", and further the government intends to see that the price is cheap, under the new law. He stressed the point that not all standard hotels would receive "authorities" to sell, neither would there bea wide-open sale in restaurants orany licensed eating place. Col. Price felt the new regulation would wipe out the menace of the home-brew "blind-pig" situation under which he said, there are 170,000 home-brew permits in the province compared with 350,000 liquor permits. Under this condition, he said, the home-brew manufacturers are making more beer than the breweries.

Col. Price made a spirited attack on Rev. Ben Spence and Rev. J.A. Irwin, of the Prohibition Union Forces, charging them with delivering bad leadership in leading the prohibition forces up against a stone wall in their policies of insistence of prohibition. Consumption of liquor and beer had declined Col. Price pointed out, there being a drop in both over the high figures of 1928.

Dealing with the question as to why the government should change the present act, Col. Price pointed to conditions existing at Ontario's boundaries. In Manitoba, Quebec and in the United States, he said wider liquor sales exist, and the United States—once a prohibition country—had the loosest law now of any land. The new law would have rigid enforcement.

"We're not afraid to stand behind it," said Col. Price, amid applause. "And what's more, go to the country ont it. We have reached the point where we have to amend this act and bring it up to date, so as to give our law enforcement officers a decent chance to control the situation, and give people a chance for cheaper beer."

The Government was sustained on the division to approve the report of the Legal Committee on the case of Magistrate Danie lMcCaughrin of Orillia, the voting being 59-11. The report found that the Magistrate was inefficient, should have been retired, and that there had not been bargaining or trafficking in offices. The vote was asked for by Progressive Leader Nixon, who held that the committee should report only the evidence, but it was argued by Hon. Charles McCrea Minister of Mines, and chairman of the committee, that the committee was within its rights in making the recommendations as presented. Mr. McCrea also questioned the tactics followed by Liberal officials in having the aged magistrate offer himself to such a proposition in an endeavour to make something out of the case to injure the Conservative party, while it was also recommended that the government give consideration to the question of providing retiring allowances for such officials, who after reaching a certain age are unprovided for.

Under legislation presented by Attorney-General W.H. Price, the word "police" is to be removed from the description of Ontario police magistrates and police courts, under an amendment to the Magistrates' Act.

"It is desirable and in the public interest that the word 'police' be dropped," stated Col. Price. "It leads to the mistaken idea that the magistrate and his court are closely identified with the police force. The magistrate does not function for the police, nor is he really connected with the police force. He is one of the judiciary of the province with authority in criminal and other matters to dispense justice."

Attorney-General Price introduced further amendments to the Liquor Control providing for areas which are now dry under the Canadian Temperance Act to vote for adoption of beer or beer and wine in standard hotels or beer in other authorized places and to permit present wet areas to vote for total prohibition. This measure solidifies the amendments previously introduced providing for freer sale of beer and lght wines.

Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, introduced an amendment to the highway traffic act providing for commercial vehicles; disabled on the highways, to have lights or flare placed 200 feet from the vehicle to warn oncoming traffic.

Premier Henry in discussing the estimates, criticized Welfare Commissioner Laver in the latter's charges against Toronto employers, declaring that Mr. Laver had not digested the data he had. The Premier held that if Mr. Laver had digested his niformation on alleged charges of low wages he could not have given this evidence.

Hon. T.L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, introduced legislation providing for the enforcement of the Federal Marketing Act in Ontario.

Shooting of moose anywhere in Ontario south of the French and Mattawa Rivers is prohibited in amendments to the Game and Fisheries Act introduced by Hon. Geo. H. Challies, provincial secretary and Minister of Game and Fisheries. he open season for muskrat south of the same rivers will be established annually by order-in-council through another amendment. This is because of variable climatic conditions which make the present definite open season unsatsifactory in many sections. Power to issue badges to hunters is given the Department and if they are issued hunters will be required to wear them in a conspicuous place. Blinds and decoys used in hunting water fowl in the waters of Burlington Bay are to be placed not more than 50 yards from shore, according to an amendment, the general province rule allowing them to be placed 200 yards out.

To provide emergency measures in all sections of the province to farmers who lack feed and grain, Hon. T.L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, introduced a bill to provide financing arrangements. Power is given municipalities to guarantee loans raised by farmers to buy seed grain. The province is authorized to repay to municipalities two-thirds of any money lost by the municipality through having to pay the loans it guarantees.

STRANGE ABSENCE

SYNOPSIS

Jean Graham and her brother, Euan, stay on the Riviera with Geoffrey Winton and his wife Doreen, who leads Euan on to gamble at the Casino. Jean coaxes him to go to Paris. While driving there Jean finds a string of pearls in Euan's pocket. He snatches them from her and the car crashes. The accident is discovered by Jerry Grant who takes her back to his hostess, Helen Gorst. Euan is missing. M. Rivaux investigates and he confronts Helen with the fact that Mrs. Winton's pearls are missing. Jean visits Euan's friend, de Laurier and learns that Euan is in debt to him.

Jerry Grant meets M. Perichon, famous detective, who assists them. Jerry proposes to Jean but she asks him to wait. The Baron insists on accompanying Jean to the Van Dyke party. The next morning Mrs. Van Dyke reports the theft of her famous diamond. Rivaux demands the presence of all. Jean is discovered missing.

"Of course Jean is innocent," snapped Jerry. The whole thing was appalling and here they were, doing nothing. He stopped his wondering and jerked: "For God's sake, let's do something."

Perichon raised both hands for silence.

"Du calme, mes amis. First I will telephone, if Madame permits."

Helen nodded and Perichon left the room.

"O, Boy! Isn't this sweet Hell?" ejaculated Washburn.

"Mrs. Gorst, what do you make of it?" asked Grant.

Helen made a helpless gesture: "It's all so absolutely incredible."

"It's the same thing exactly as the case of her brother. Both disappeared at the same time as a robbery occurred."

Perichon returned with a satisfied expression on his face.

"There is a telegram for me at the hotel; they will send it at once. I think I hope—it will help us."

Grant's face was white and drawn as he turned to the ex-detective. Euan Graham had vanished and had not been found; supposing that Jean—

"God, Perichon, can't we do something? Isn't there anything we can do besides stand here?"

The Frenchman shook a finger at the young man.

"We must be calm and think. Rivaux will act. Have no fear, he will act and think afterwards. But we—we will think first and win—I hope."

"But she must have been gone for hours," protested Grant.

Perichon nodded: "Yes. Therefore if she is dead it will not matter, and if she is alive we save much time by thinking."

Helen covered her eyes wth one hand and waited. She was speechless with horror at what had happened, and inclined to blame herself for not having gone into the girl's room on the night before. And yet why should she?

Grant, too, was beside himself. He had failed Jean hopelessly. Selfishness and jealousy had obscured his sense of justice; he had thought only of how she was treating him and not of her own need. She had begged him to stand by, had reached out for his friendship and he had practically rejected it. He saw her face as it had been last night, when he had asked her to dance—young and rather lovely, but pale and how worried. "O God, I'm a fool," he muttered beneath his breath. Swinging round, he addressed Perichon, who was ruminating by the window.

"Look here, sir, I think Miss Graham was being blackmailed by de Laurier."

"Ah!" The Frenchman regarded him interestedly. "And why do you think so?"

"Because I think she was frightened of him and yet she was always with him. There must have been a reason."

"O, there are not always reasons," said the old man vaguely. Then as if dismissing the suggestion, he turned to Dan. "That woman who came to look over Mrs. Van Dyke's villa. Was she ever alone in the house at all?"

"I don't know," answered Dan. "You'd have to ask my sister's caretaker.'

Perichon nodded thoughtfully. "Did she not give a name?"

"Sure, she gave me a card. Mme. Helga, of the Hotel Californie, Cannes."

"Ah, thank you." Perichon moved over to the telephone. "We will see." Lifting the receiver, he called Cannes and the Hotel Californie.

Grant watched him impatiently. Why bother about a woman who had looked over an empty villa two weeks ago? What had that got to do with Jean Graham and the fact of her disappearance? With difficulty did he control his voice as he suggested: "Aren't you wasting time?"

Perichon waved a hand at him for silence.

" 'Allo—'Allo—Is that the Hotel Californie? I would like to speak to Mme. Helga, please.—Yes, Mme. Helga." Smiling over his shoulder he said, "They go to get this excellent lady."

Helen nodded. What it mattered she could not see at all. Indeed, she felt almost stunned by the turn events had taken and sat staring at Grant's bulldog, Julia, who lay curled up in the sun. If only Sir Colin Graham could be reached, but for weeks he had been exploring the Oases of Southern Arabia and heaven alone knew when, if ever, he would receive their letters.

Suddenly Perichon's voice broke in upon her thoughts. " 'Allo—Yes, yes—You say there is no Mme. Helga there?—There never has been? Ah!" With a smile, the Frenchman replaced the receiver. "You see, my friends, there is—how you say— something fishy about your Mme. Helga."

"Well, I should say!" gasped Washburn.

"But, damn it, what has that to do with Jean?" Grant burst out impatiently. "Good God, man, don't you raelise that—that anything may be happening to her, and here we sit talking." Remorse, added to fears for the girl he loved so deeply, drove drove Grant frantic. All manner of terrible visions arose in his imagination. Jean shut up in some vile place; Jean in pain, in danger. Anyway, where was she? And who had taken her there? He would have suspected de Laurier had it not been that the man had never left the party and had been amongst the last to leave. Perichon watched Grant's working face and smiled.

"Come," he said. "Let us consult. You M. Washburn, have your auto here? You can drive fast?"

"You bet"

"Bon." Several times the Frnchman looked out of the window as if waiting for something. "You will go together then by the fastest route to St. Croix——"

"To that villa?" interposed Washburn.

"Yes, to that villa, but you must be good detectives you understand? You must see everything, but you must not be seen. Perhaps the life of Mademoiselle depends on you." Grant noddd. "You will get there as soon as possible. But do not kill chickens or children on the way; that would delay you. You will hide l'auto in the woods before you come to the beach and you will then go up to the villa as I did, crossing the rocks and climbing up the hill. But no noise—not a sound. If you are seen, it is finished."

"But the villa was shut," objected the American

"That is nothing. You must go there and—Ah, my telegram."

With eagerness Perichon took the telegram which Giovanni tendered and tore it open. As he read his head began to nod, and a smile of delight overspread his face.

"You see, mes enfants, Papa, he thinks!" With one finger he tapped the bald dome of his forehead. Seeing that Grant was leaning forward as if expecting to see the communication, Perichon held it out. "But of course you would like to see. Here, read, read—"

Grant began aloud "Roses despatchfied, fine blooms. Have other varieties Raoul Descartes; Julin Morin, Two and Five. Am sending. Please hold."

The young man stared blankly at the Frenchman, who chuckled.

"That does not tell you anything, eh? But to me it says much. It means that Papa is still a great one for putting two and two together and making four."

"Really?" Grant's face was a study of exasperation.

"It means—" Perichon pointed from one young man to the other as if to gain their attention. " It means that when you reach that villa you will hide and watch. I think that—someone—will come. Not until tonight perhaps. Whoever it is—you will perhaps get a surprise—" Perichon smiled mysteriously. "Whoever it is you will watch him or her. Do not let them see you, but watch and listen."

"Supposing he tries to leave the place again?" asked Grant.

"Ah, then you must stop him!" Perichon drew a revolver from his pocket and tendered it. "Take it, but do not use it unless it is necessary. I want to catch this bird alive."

"But d'you really think that Jean is in that villa?"

"I do not know. I hope only. Now allez! I will be at the villa too as soon as I have seen to certain matters."

"Right. Ready, Dan? Goodbye, Mrs. Gorst. We'll do our best, don't you worry."

Helen forced a smile: "I know you will."

In a moment the young men were slipping down the drive in Washburn's car. As they passed out of the gate Grant waved.

With her head seething with questions, Helen turned to Perichon: "Is there anything I can do?"

The old man shrugged his shoulders and said in his most gentle voice:

"Only pray, Madame. But perhaps that is the most useful thing of all."

"But do you really mean that Jean is in the villa?"

"Madame, I can only guess. Now I must go. I have much to do and time passes. I will go to Rivaux and tell him that he is an imbecile. It will give me so much pleasure."

A moment later Helen stood on the villa steps alone, feeling incredibly hopeless and wondering what she could do. For a few moments doubt assailed her, and she was tempted to believe that possibly Jean or Euan were guilty of these thefts. After all, she knew so little about them, having only met them a few weeks ago, and through Doreen Winton. Covering her face with her hands, she stood trying to steady her thoughts. Working of Hydro And What It Does

Five Items Listed Below Will Give Voter a Clear Outline

Hydro is publicly owned, and co-operative; the Commission acts as agent of the municipalities buying power from it, operating and administering the buyer's electrical plants. Hydro's generating plants and transmission lines are financed through the Commission by the Province of Ontario; the municipal plants by the issue of municipal bonds.

Hydro sells power to the purchasing municipalities at cost, this cost is made up as follows:

1. Interest on the Commission's capital investment.
2. Sinking fund charges, on a 40-year basis.
3. An annual charge for renewals, to maintain efficiency.
4. Contingencies.
5. Operation and administration.

These charges total up to about 11 p.c. on the Commission's investment. Where power purchased (not generated) by the Commission is being sold, the cost to the Commission replaces part of the charge under each of the five headings listed above.

The rates charged in any municipality must cover these charges of the Commission plus similar charges on that municipality's plant.

The investment in the Hydro undertakings had reached on 31st October, 1933, a total of about $400,000,000, of which three-fourths represents the Commission's generating plants and transmission lines, and one-fourth the municipal plants.

And He Is Still "Tired of It All"

Philadelphia—Announcing he was "tired of it all," Charles Hamilton, 34, drove his landlady, her two daughters and her son out of the house. Then he barricaded the doors and nailed fast the windows.

The landlady ran to a police station and patrolmen sprinted back to the house to foil the suicide. Breaking in, they found the prostrate Hamilton—asleep.

So Hamilton repeated he was "tired of it all."

What Does Your Handwriting Show

By GEOFFREY ST. CLAIR

(Grapho-Analyst.)

All rights reserved.

..(Editor's Note: These articles on Character from Handwriting have aroused enormous interest. Many readers are sending in specimens of their own handwriting for a personal analysis, and replies are being mailed as fast as possible. If you want your writing analysed, see the announcement at the foot of this article).

A Grapho-Analyst's mailbag is very interesting. It is a reflection of people's hopes and fears, worries and problems—it is a very mirror of life itself. And for each question, the Grapho-Analyst can supply an answer.

Handwriting shows so plainly the character of the writer. Grapho-Analysis is an X-Ray that cuts through the verbiage, and gets right down to the very nature of the writer.

A girl writes in tormented fashion, pleading for advice on how to deal with her brother and father. They are making life miserable for herself and her mother, and threaten to do bodily harm if the latter do not pass over some money that they have made themselves. The writing of the father and brother show greed and selfishness, with a brutal will that sometimes gushes over into violence.

Another girl is having trouble with her boy friend. Is he to be trusted. There are many letters of this kind. And very often we can give a reassuring answer. Sometimes, our advice will hurt—but the truth is what people are asking for.

A mother is very anxious to know the characteristics of her young daughters. And what talents they possess. In this way, she can encourage them along the lines in which they can make most progress and in which they will be happy.

Another mother is perplexed about her boy. He is the only child she has, but she doesn't understand him. Grapho-Analysis reveals his hidden traits, and suggests a line for the mother to work along.

A young man from the West says his life has been miserable, and try as he will, he cannot do anything right. His writing reveals the tremendous colour in his nature, and the need for great control. He has a hard row to hoe before he ran regain normalcy.

The letters show how many people are square pegs in round holes. Real talents wasted because the possessor is in a vocation totally unsuited to him.

Grapho-Analysis a very helpful. It reveals not only the major characteristics, but also those hidden tendencies that are gradually looming up, and will, ere long, affect one's mode of life. If they are strong points, they can be developed. Often, they are potential weaknesses, and need curbing. Grapho-Analysis shows the way.

What does your handwriting show? Let a skilled Grapho-Analyst tell you the secrets that your writing reveals. You will be surprised at the revelations. And the analysis may open the door of opportunity for you. Send a letter in your normal writing, with 10c coin and a stamped (3c) addressed envelope to: Geoffrey St. Clair., Room 421, 73 Adelaide St. W., Toronto. If you send two specimens of writing, enclose coin for each.

WATCH YOUR DIET

By Bon Sante.

It is the custom with many people in the Spring to take a spring tonic. They seem to need it to overcome that heavy feeling the result of too many proteins during the winter.

The best tonic one can take is fruits and vegetables. Eat them lavishly and in quantity. They will zip up the system better than any medicine ever conceived.

Also add fruit juices to your Spring diet. Several glasses a day are not too much—morning, noon and night. If fruit juices are not available take tomato juice, it is just as beneficial.

In fact, the need for a spring tonic should never present itself if one will only follow the rule of taking ample fruits and vegetables throughout the year. The noon-day meal should always be a salad, made from fresh fruits and vegetables, or both. Meat is a great mistake at noon—also heavy pastries.

We cannot emphasize too strongly this fact—that the basis of a balanced diet the year round should be whole meal products (no white flour), fruits and vegetables. Eat anything else you like, but always in moderation, and stick to meat only once a day. One heavy meal a day is plenty Make the other meals very light.

Canadian Hay in U.K.

On the point of quality there seems to be no doubt that Canadian hay of good clover mixtures is the most acceptable on the United Kingdom market, says the Canadian Trade Commissioner. There is apparently some possibility that demand for Canadian hay will develop in the United Kingdom about April or May this year.

Wasted Sympathy

It seems to be a sad and depressing fact that so much sympathy is wasted on the plausible rogues and on the notoriously evil characters that there is none of the heart interest remaining for those who are in trouble and distress through no fault of their own and who lack the spectacular and romantic touch that so many unworthy fellows know so well how to assume.—Timmins Advance

Woman's World

By Mair M. Morgan

WOMAN'S WORLD PANCAKES

Golden brown pancakes always have an appeal all their own and when served piping hot with sausages, bacon or maple syrp there are bound to be no left-overs. Here are some excellent-tried-in-the-blue recipes:—

YEAST BUCKWHEAT CAKES

One-half cake compressed yeast. ½ cup lukewarm water, 3 more cups warm water, 3 cups buckwheat, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons sugar, ½ teaspoon soda.

Soften yeast cake in ½ cup lukewarm water. When throughly dissolved add salt, sugar and 2½ cups warm water. Add buckwheat flour and mix until perfectly smooth. Cover and let stand in a warm place over night. In the morning dissolve soda in remaining half cup of water and beat into batter. Let stand for hot, well-greased griddle. The batter should be quite thin and runny. Buckwheat cake requires a hotter griddle than cornmeal or wheat cakes. Some of the batter may be saved and used as a "starter" for another baking instead of using a fresh yeast cake. They are even better after the first day as the "seed" seems to ripen and produces a better cake.

QUICK BUCKWHEAT CAKES

One and one-half cups buckwheat flour, ¾ cup wheat flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 5 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 tablespoon melted shortening, 1 egg, 2½ cups sweet milk.

Mix dry ingredients. Add milk slowly, stirring to make smooth. Add beaten egg and beat until smooth. Add melted shortening and beat one minute. Bake on a hot, well-greased griddle.

SWEET MILK CAKES

Three cups flour, 1½ tablespoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ cup sugar, 2 cups milk, 1 egg, 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Mix and sift dry ingredients; beat egg, add milk and pour slowly on first mixture. Beat thoroughly and add butter. Drop by spoonfuls on greased hot griddle. Cook on one side. When puffed full of bubbles and cooked on edges, turn and cook other side. Serve with butter and maple syrup.

CORN GRIDDLE CAKES

Two cups flour, ½ cup cornmeal, 1½ tablespoons baking powder, 1½ teaspoons salt, 1/3 cup sugar, 1½ cups boiling water, 1¼ cups milk, 1 egg 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Add meal to boiling water and boil 5 minutes; turn into bowl add milk and remaining dry ingredients mixed and sifted, then the egg well beaten and butter. Cook same as sweet milk cakes.

SOUR MILK CAKES

Two and half cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 cups sour milk, 1¼ teaspoons soda, 1 egg.

Mix and sift flour salt and soda; add sour milk and egg well beaten. Drop by spoonfuls on hot griddle and proceed as for sweet milk cakes.

BREAD CRUMB CAKES

These griddle cakes use stale bread crumbs to advantage.

One and one-half cups fine stale bread crumbs, 2 cups hot milk, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 eggs, ½ cup flour ½ teaspoon salt, 3½ teaspoons baking powder.

Combine crumbs and milk and beat until smooth. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder and add with remaining ingredients. Beat egg until light before combining with batter. Bake on a hot griddle and serve hot.

POTATO GRIDDLE CAKES

Two cups grated raw potato, 2 eggs, 1-3 cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 4 tablespoons milk.

Pare potatoes and let stand in cold water for several hours. Drain and grate. Beat eggs well and add grated potato. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder and add to first mixture. Beat well and add milk gradually. Drop from tip of spoon onto well greased griddle. Bake until brown first on one side and then on the other. Serve hot.

RICE GRIDDLE CAKES

Two and half cups flour, ½ cup cold cooked rice, 1 tablespoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup sugar, 1½ cups milk 1 egg, 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Mix and sift ingredients; work in rice with tips of fingers; add egg well beaten, milk and butter. Cook same as other griddle cases.

Some of the varieties of griddle cakes which we have borrowed from European countries are substantial enough for main dishes. The addition of meal or vegetables change them from a bread substitute to a hearty concoction to serve with gravy.

FOR SUPPER

Late suppers are very popular in the winter, after ski-ing, snowshoeing or tobogganing and the more informal they are the smarter—the main thing is food and friendliness, and if the former is right the other takes care of itself. One of the nicest and easiest things you can serve after outdoor sports or for after the game or theatre supper is pancakes. They are easily and quickly made and may be served in a variety of delicious ways to suit the occaion or to add variety.

One particularly appropriate way to serve pancakes for supper is to sprinkle the hot pancakes with grated cheese, which will melt and give them a delightful flavor. Serve with jelly. They may also be served with fruit sauces, preserved or fresh fruit, or in the good old-fashioned way with maple syrup, or combined with sausages or bacon.

SUPPER

The English method of serving plain wheat cakes adds interest to a company breakfast or Sunday evening supper. The cakes are baked as large as supper plates and are spread as they are baked with butter and jelly or butter and sugar or butter and marmalade and are piled one above the other. They must be kept warm until all are baked. Cut in wedge-shaped pieces, pie fashion to serve.

French pancakes are spread with butter and jelly creamed together and rolled quickly like a jelly roll. Each roll is dredged with powdered sugar. The finishing touch is added by scoring the sugar by burning with a red-hot poker. The poker, was carefully cleaned carefully. The cakes are quite as good without this last procedure, but they look quite intriguing and unusual.

BUSINESS GIRLS

The business girl has beauty problems that the woman of leisure never has to meet. When good grooming is urged upon her she is likely to say, "Yes, but I go to work in the rain many mornings and arrive at the office with gloves and stockings covered with mud and water stains. What if I did wash everything out last night? No one ever would know it!" It's a handicap but a little ingenuity and foresight will overcome it.

Keep extra pairs of clean gloves, hose and one or two fresh handkerchiefs in the desk drawer, along with cleansing lotion, foundation cream, cotton pads and a bit of powder and rouge. A clothes brush and a brush for suede shoes are other conveniences to add to the freshening-up list.

When it comes to white collars and cuffs, the problem is harder. Certainly it would seem a little inconvenient to keep an entire wardrobe at the office in order to appear always perfectly groomed. However, there's nothing to prevent carrying these accessories in a paper bag and pinning them on after arrival.

A FASHION NOTE

New Spring shoes, by all appearances, have come down to earth. 1934's Easter bootery features lower heels for which most of us will offer sincere thanks to the fashion gods. How can we wear the present styles gracefully if our walk is impeded by tottering high heels? Comfortable feet means at-ease carriage.

Colors and fabrics are the next item of importance. Navy blue, yellowish brown, prints and paisleys, depending on the costume to be matched.

FABRICS FEATURE

Palm Beach cloth, gabarine, silk crepes and tweedish linens for street and afternoon shoes. For evening there are satins, hand-painted linens and linens. Because the fabrics have that certain something, cluttering bows, buckles and gadgets have been dispensed with.

It sounds and looks like we have at last simplicity in line, plus comfort and that is the secret of charm and style. What say you?

Trade Gain Is Recorded

Favorable Balance of $143,421,473 Shown By Canada

Ottawa.—Canada had a favorable trade balance of $143,421,473 for the 12-month period ending with January as compared with $51,000,000 in the preceding 12 months, it was reported recently by the Department of Trade and Commerce.

TOTAL IS HIGHER.

Total trade was $961,630,577, as against $937,717,202. Exports increased from $494,000,000 to $552,000,000, while imports decreased from $422,000,000 to $408,000,000 in the 12-month period reviewed.

The trade figures continue to show a more rapid increase in trade with the British Empire than with foreign countries. Sales to the Empire were nearly $42,000,000 more than in the twelve months ended January 31, 1933, while purchases from the Empire increased by only $7,800,000.

Exports to the United Kingdom were $215,422,193, an increase of about $34,500,000 over the previous twelve months, and imports from the United Kingdom amounted to $100,032,820, an increase of $7,541,875.

ANTIPODEAN TRADE.

Trade relations with the Antipodes show a notable improvement. Exports to Australia were $10,805,075, an increase of $3,576,664, while purchases from Australia were $5,329,234, a decline of only $576,975. Sales to New Zealand were $3,883,777, an increase of $337,599, and purchases from New Zealand were $2,055,167, as compared with only $871,050 in the previous 12 months. Much of this increase was accounted for by large butter imports. Exports to British South Africa, under the stimulus of the conference agreement, increased by nearly $2,000,000, and sales to the Irish Free State showed an advance of $800,000.

An increase in exports to, and a further decline in imports from the United States produced a net improvement in Canada's trade relations with that country of nearly $60,000,000. Exports to the United States were $178,844,057, an increase of $23,492,161, while purchases from the United States were $221,844,310, a drop of $35,040,683.

OTHER COUNTRIES.

Exports to the Netherlands increased by $2,000,000; to Japan they increased by $1,500,000; and to Germany by $200,000. Sales to France dropped by $2,000,000, to Belgium by $800,000. As against exports to Russia in the previous 12 months of $1,815$,000, in the last year they almost disappeared.

As an indication of the extent to which the lifting of the United Stataes of quota restrictions upon Canadian products has stimulated the direct flow of liquor across the border, the movement of spirits to St. Pierre and Miquelon, the French colonies in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, has declined by one-half. For the year ended January 31 last they totalled $4,670,000, as compared with $8,760,000 in the previous 12 months.

Charm May Be Cultivated In the Training of a Child

Parents Have a Great Responsibility in Encouraging Natural Sweetness and Tact

Little children are charming. Charm schools are doing nothing more than trying to restore the unconscious grace and naivete that most of us have lost between the ages of four and fourteen, plus tact, of course.

But the charm we have to have taught us in later years is more or less a spurious article. It is merely top varnish.

How much better it would have been had we been encouraged through childhood to keep those graces that were ours by right.

Too Many Restrictions.

Take any child who not only has to elbow his way with his schoolmates, but has a job on his hands at home with his or her parents, and how much time has he for pleasantness and kindness and real mannrs?

Everywhere he turns it seems he is confronted with a "Don't" or some order or other that affronts every spontaneous urge in his system. We call it civilizing him. Of course we have to do it. to prepare him for social life. He can't grow up and be a savage.

Nevertheless, it is true that our overly-artificial system with children does destroy as well as build. If we older people had to conform to as many conventions foreign to our natures as children do, it would sap all the sweetness out of us. We would live in a perpetual state of chafing and resentment. We would shout, "To heck with charm. I have enough to remember without trying to be a sugar plum, too."

There is another thing that ruins the little child's charm early. This is the example of older people about him.

Which of us would think it worth while to be pleasant in a menagerie? And some homes are just about that—the various members of the family growling and snarling at each other all day long like so many animals. Almost any animal has his counterpart in the human. The lion who roars his rights, the dangerously cunning tiger, the laughing hyena whom we fear more even than the others. The lumbering boar with the thick hide stolidly indifferent to anyone but itself. The bleating sheep that can't stand up for itself and who manages, as it has done through history, to get everybody else into a tight place.

Cultivating "Charm".

A child loses sweetness in a household that has forgotten the word. To tell him to mind his manners and behave nicely is just so much lost breath.

A boy can tip his hat until his arm aches, but this isn't charm. Charm has to be in his heart. A girl can courtesy and whistle up a smile for effect, but this isn't charm if here are a hundred hates in her soul. The boy and the girl have to like people; they must feel that the world is a decent place, not something to fight. And they must feel that they count with oher people just as other people count with them.

No one wants a grinning nit-wit around muttering to himself, "I must be charming." Heaven forbid! But we do need more genuine, likeable boys and girls who think this world is a good place and show it.

Then watch rudeness vanish and natural manners grow.

Sunday School Lesson

THE RISEN CHRIST.—John: 20 1-16.

Golden Text.—If ye were raised with Christ, seek the things that are above, where Christ is, seated on the right hand of God.—Col. 3: 1.

TIME—Sunday, April 9, A.D. 30.

PLACb—Jerusalem.

PARALLEL PASSAGES — Matt. 28: 1-15; Mark 16; 1-11; Luke 24: 1-12.

(Peter and John at the Tomb,) vs. 1-10. (Now on the first day of the week.) Our Sunday, which has become a standing memorial and proof of this event, as the Christians, unwilling to celebrate the sad day on which their Saviour lay in the grave, gradually transferred that Sabbath from the Jewish last day of the week (Saturday), to the first day of the week. "Cometh Mary Magdalene early." She came with the other women, as related above, but instantly separated from them when she saw what had happened, being a woman of quick action and perhaps younger than the rest and more agile. "While it was yet dark." This explains why she did not enter the tomb, as the others did. "Unto the tomb, and seeth the stone taken away from the tomb." That was enough to suggest to her that something momentous had occurred, something about which the apostles should know at once.

"She runneth therefore, and cometh to Simon Peter." Probably the oldest of the apostles, one whom Christ had especially honored, and one who by his decisiveness of character (Mary probably knew nothing about his denial of his Lord) was most fitted to take the lead at this juncture. "And to the other disciple whom Jesus loved." John never names himself or relatives in his Gospel, being far too modest, but this description of the relation between hmself and his Saviour is a biography in itself. "And saith unto them." We can almost note the panting excitement of her speech. "They have taken away the Lord out of the tomb." She inferred this from the open door; for what other purpose would it have been opened? "They" means of course Christ's foes; his friends would never have committed such an act of sacrilege. "And we know not where they have laid him." "We" means Mary and the other women whom she had left behind. "Peter therefore went forth, and the other disciple." John still carefully preserves his anonymity. And they went toward the tomb." We may imagine the dawn beginning to break.

"And they ran both together." Both being eager to see what new outrage had been perpetrated against their beloved Lord. "And the other disciple outran Peter, and came first to the tomb." Being so much the younger, John could run much faster.

"And stooping and looking in." For the door of the cave-tomb was low. "He seeth the linen cloths lying." The cloths readily recognized as being Christ's grave cloths. "Yet entered he not." This was characteristic of John. In his profound reverence he hesitated to break the peace of the sacred place.

"Somon Peter therefore also cometh, following him, and entered into the tomb." There was no ohoesoitation in the conduct of the bold and decisive disciple. "And he beholdeth the linen cloths lying." The cerements were folded up carefully.

"And the napkin, that was upon his head, not lying with the linen cloths, but rolled up in a place by itself." This description conveys irresistibly to the minds of some scholars the impression of a chrysalis, from which the body has removed itself, leaving the useless shell in the shape of the body.

"Then entered in therefore the other disciple also, who came first to the tomb." John, of course, who will go to any extent to avoid the first personal pronoun. "And he saw, and believed." That Christ had risen from the dead, as the next verse shows.

"For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead." The Old Testament says little about immortality, hardly enough to make it a burning conviction in Jewish minds. Ps. 16 : 10 declares that the Messiah was not to remain in the grave, and Christ had repeatedly foretold his resurrection on the third day; but the prophecy seems to have made a greater impression on the minds of Christ's foes than on the minds of the disciples.

"So the disciples went away again unto their own home." To Peter's lodging in Jerusalem (Luke 24:12), though John had a house of his own in the Holy City (John 19 : 27).

"But Mary was standing without at the tomb weeping." She was overcome by the sad memories surrounding the place. "So, as she wept, she stooped and looked into the tomb." Possibly she thought the Lord's body was still there, but moved out of sight.

"And she beholdeth two angels in white," Clad in dazzling pure rainent, such as angels are usually represented as wearing. "Sitting, one at the head, and one at the foot, where the body of Jesus had lain." They were sitting on the stone slab, engaged in rapt contemplation and joyful memories of all that the Son of God had done for the world.

"And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou?" A question suitable to be asked of all who are burdened with sorrow for lost ones. Are not our tears selfish, concerned only with our loss and not with the gain of our dear ones? "She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him." She had rejoiced in the honorable burial accorded Christ's body by the senator, Joseph of Arimathaea, and she feared that her Saviour's body had been cast out.

"When she had thus said, she turned herself back." Becoming conscious as one will of the presence of some one whom she had not seen. "And beholdeth Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus." Death had in some way transformed our Lord's countenance.

"Jesus saith unto her. Woman why weepest thou? whom seekest thou?" We have here the first recorded words of the risen Christ "She supposing him to be the gardener." The tomb was in a garden and Mary supposed the stranger to be the one in charge there. "Saith unto him, Sir, if thou hast borne him hence." Mary may have thought that the gardener regarded the new tomb as much too good for a crucified criminal. "Tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away." A hard task for a woman to undertake! but love shrinks at no hardship.

"Jesus saith unto her, Mary." How much tenderness was put into that word! "She turneth herself, and saith unto him in Hebrew." That is, in Aramaic, the current form of Hebrew used by Christ. "Rabboni; which is to say, Teacher." Literally, "My Rabbi." "More exactly, 'Rabbuni.' This precise form occurs also in Mark 10 : 51

Book Published in 1573 Shows It Had Been Grown Many Years

Washington.—Long before Captain John Smith and his Jamestown pioneers discovered corn on the cob, Chinese mandarins were eating it. And several years before Miles Standish ate succotash, the combination had a place on the Oriental menu.

Indian maize, although a native of the western world, was prominent in the agriculture of the East many years before English settlers attempted to raise it.

According to a photostatic copy of an ancient Chinese book, published in 1573, received by Dr. Walter T Swingle of the Agriculture Department from the Chinese National Library in Peiping, corn had at that time been grown in China for years.

Dr. Swingle, who is conducting a study of maize culture for the Library of Congress, said the book revealed maize as the "imperial grain of China." Evidence, he added, pointed to its introducton from the west through Turkestan or Tibet.

It is likely, the official disclosed, that Spaniards discovered maize in the New World, probably South and Central Americ, and carried it back to Spain. Arabs then carried the grain to Mecca, from where it apparently spread eastward through Central Asia to China.

Oshawa's Power Bill Has Credit of $7,098

Oshawa.—The 13th power bill for Oshawa P.U.C. brings a credit of $7,098.57 from the Ontario Hydro Commission. Local commissioners breathed a sigh of relief when the bill was received, for last year the 13th bill was in the form of a debit of over $9,000. The committee, however, has a large deficit in the electrical department which will be reduced to slightly over $21,000.

EASTER SERVICES, UNITED CHURCH

The largest attendance at a Communion Service in the history of the United Church marked the morning service at the United Church of Canada, Morrisburg, on Easter Sunday. Several new members of the congregation were received and welcomed by the minister, Rev. Dr. Donald MacRae. Mrs. Florence Helmer, in her usual pleasing manner, rendered the solo, "I Am the Resurrection," (C.C. Stearns) during the offertory. Miss Jean Meikle also delighted the congregation with the rendition of "Open the Gates of the Temple".

At the evening service, the choir, under the direction of Mrs. G.M Gorrell, rendered the cantata, "The Resurrection Hope". Miss Maye Suffell and Mr. Trevor Allison excelled themselves in the duet, "Angels Vision". Both Miss Suffell and Mr. Allison are pupils of Mrs Florence McKee, Waddington, N.Y Solo parts were taken by Mrs. Chas. Mullin, Mrs. J. Edward Mullin, Mrs. F. Helmer and Mr. and Mrs. Carmi Thompson, and were all splendidly given.

The successful rendering of the cantata was largely due to the capable and efficient training of Mrs G.M. Gorrell, whom the choir members love and hold in highest esteem.

LUTHERANS HOLD JOYFUL EASTER SERVICES

Easter services in the Lutheran churches of this district were very impressive.

In St. Paul's, Morrisburg, a 6 o'clock Sunrise Service was held. Thirteen girls of the congregation presented a beautiful pageant entitled, "The Emblems of Easter". It depicted the events which led up to and away from this highest of Christian festivals. Each girl carried an emblem representative of some of those things intimately connected with the Easter story. The entire group of girls, dressed in white with palms in their hands made up the Palm Sunday Hosanna Chorus. A large cross draped in black, surmounted with a crown of thorns, represented the early part of Christ's Passion. The cross was then uncovered, and red roses were placed on its spotless, glittering white foreground, depicting the wounds inflicted on the body of Christ. An illuminated crown was then placed over the top of the cross, symbolizing the completion and acceptance of Christ's atonement. The next scene was one of radiant joy. The cross still remained, but the joy of Easter morn radiated from the countenances of five young girls who grouped themselves about the cross. One of these little ones sang the solo parts of a familiar Easter hymn, and the other four joined in the glad Gloria chorus. The last speaker carried the open Bible, and told again of Christ's great commision to His disciples and its meaning for His followers today. With the singing of the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" the pageant came to a close. During the last stanza, all of the girls grouped themselves about the altar. The benediction and the recessional added a fitting climax to this our first Sunrise Service, for which a large congregation of appreciatve worshippers had assembled.

At eleven a.m., Holy Communion was administered to the largest number in the past eight years. At the same service, a new and very beautiful altar cloth was blessed. The deep lace with christian symbolism forming its pattern, was handmade and was imported from India. This gift was presented to the Church by Mrs. J.C. Casselman.

The evening service afforded the large crowd of worshippers a rare musical treat. The choir, under the able direction of Mr. Miles Whitteker, rendered the cantata, "The Story of Calvary," in a most commendable manner. Many favourable comments were received by the choir after the Service.

The Church looked beautiful, decorated with the many lovely flowers which were donated from the organizations and friends

In St. John's, Riverside.

At 9 a.m. the Confesional Service was attended by a goodly Easter crowd. Following the Confessional Service, the pageant, "Emblems of Easter," was presented by a group of young girls from St. Paul's.

During the service, the new altar ornaments were blessed. Beautiful examples of artistic workmanship coupled with churchly symbolism make these gifts most appropriate and acceptable. The brass altar cross and brass bases are in memory of Levi Bell, and were presented by Mrs. J. Duprau. The altar desk altar service and the candlesticks are in memory of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Brydges, and were presented by Mr. Charles Brydges.

The Easter message of the Pastor was followed by the administration of Holy Communion.
