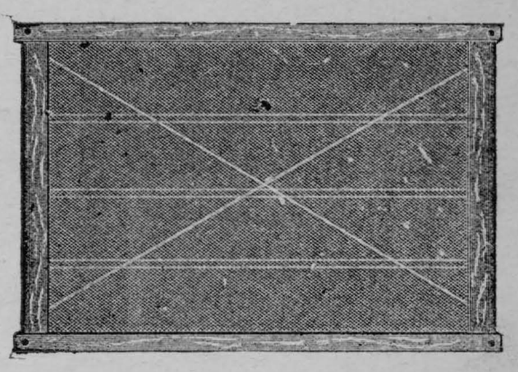
VOL. XII NO. 44. CHESTERVILLE, ONT., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1906. $1 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE

Fall Announcement.



We want to save you money and to make business for us. We want your trade, and we hope to give values that will merit your patronage. After visiting the largest retail furniture establishments in this country, we find that we are in a position to give you as good value as they offer. With those concerns you pay freight; you run all risks. You find your goods scratched and sometimes broken. Our goods are always turned out in good shape, and you have no freight to pay. Nearly 20 years' experience as a furniture manufacturer, surely fits us for our business. There is not another dealer within 20 miles of Chesterville, who is a practical mechanic. They cannot tell any better than you can whether a piece of furniture is what it should be from a mechanical standpoint. Every piece of Furniture that comes into our establishment is examined, and when it can be improved, the improvement is made.

It is not our wish to advertise cheap furniture. Good goods will always suit you best, and establish a good reputation for a dealer, but there may be those who may feel disposed to buy low priced goods. For the benefit of such people, we quote prices of goods as follows, asking you to bear in mind that all our better lines are proportionately low priced. These prices are quoted to convince you that you cannot buy elsewhere as cheaply as from us.

HARDWOOD BEDROOM SUITE, Extra Large Dresser, with 3 Drawers, and 24x20 inch Mirror. Regular Price $14 00.....Our Price $10 55

SIDEBOARD, with 24x20 inch Mirror. Regular Price $8 00.....Our Price $5 90

COMMON BED.....$2 00

EXTENSION TABLE, very smoothly finished, very substantially made of the best material. Handsome quartered oak finish. No other dealer anywhere near here handles this Table, nor can he get it, and you cannot equal it for value anywhere. This is our leader, and it is substantially set up, and will give you perfect satisfaction.....$6 00

Think of a 5 piece Walnut Frame PARLOR SUITE covered with the best Velour, at.....$20 00

We have a Solid Birch CHAIR, suitable for kitchen or dining room, a Chair well worth 75c. These we will sell at.....60c. Each

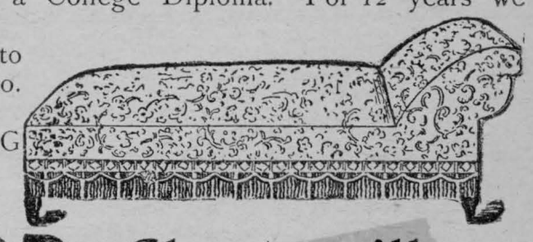
And you will pronounce them Splendid Value.

We wish to make the following announcement to those having photos to enlarge. When FRAME and PICTURE are both bought, we give a 70c. Easel, Absolutely Free, and bear in mind the price will be lower than you expect.

When requiring Undertaking and Embalming, remember that no other embalmer in these parts possesses a College Diploma. For 12 years we have been thus qualified to embalm. Our equipment is complete, and all work done to your absolute satisfaction,

Finally we wish to say that 5 per cent. discount will be given off every cash purchase. Our aim is to please. We hope to make this a record year for business. It will be to your interest to help us to make it so. Remember the Inducements we offer, Corteous Treatment, Best Vales.

Call during December for a Beautiful Calendar, but call at once for FURNITURE, PICTURE FRAMING and ENLARGED PHOTOS.



Bring your Pictures to Frame, Our assortment of Mouldings was never so Complete as now.

Respectfully Yours

APOLOGY.

To Whom it may Concern:—

A it is alleged that I have made certain false and defamatory statments implicating Mr. Duncan McDermid of the township of Finch in the County of Stormont, in picking my pocket of $15.00 or aiding or abetting the same, at Berwick on July 12, 1906, I take this early opportunity of making full and absolute retraction, and I further state that if I made any statements that bore such an interpretation I do not know what I was saying. Such statements or any statements so implicating Mr. McDermid would be absolutely false and entirely without foundation, and must demand a full and ample apology. I verily believe that Mr. McDermid knew and knows nothing of the taking of my money at Berwick, and I regret very much that such a wrong has been done Mr. McDermid.

Berwick Fair.

The Finch township fair was held at Berwick on Monday and Tuesday of this week, the last day being the principal one. Quite a large crowd were present and some very keen contests were made for the red ticket. In Roadster class Mr. Jas. McAvoy of this place captured the red ticket and in the carriage class he got second. He also secured first prize in the contest for style, speed and action. In the speeding contest, Bessie B, owned by Mr. S. Bogart of this place secured second money. The most interest during the afternoon seemed to centre in the running race, for which there were four contestants. They were green horses and the track was not wide enough to accommodate them so they took the field when occassion warranted it. While this was very interesting, still it proved very serious before the finish, when one of the riders by the name of Hugh Ferguson tumbled off and when examined by Drs. Marcellus and Gormley, it was found that his leg was broken. The injured man was conveyed to Finch where his wounds were attended to

A great deal of credit is due for the success of the fair to Mr. S. Hutt.

THE CRIMINAL'S CONFESSION

OR, SYBIL BERNER'S VINDICATION

CHAPTER XXII.

The day after the terrible disaster the sun arose upon a scene of awful desolation!

Great was the devastation of lands and dwellings, and the destruction of life and property, by the memorable Black Valley flood.

The Black Valley itself, from its very form, position and circumstances, seemed doomed to suffer tremendously from such a disaster.

It was a long, deep and narrow valley, shut in by two high mountain ridges, which interlocked in rude, rocky precipices at its higher extremity, where the Black Torrent, dashing down the steeps, formed the head of the Black River, which, fed by many other mountain springs, ran down the whole length of the valley, and past the village of Blackville at its lower end.

By the fatal deluge of rain, all the mountain springs were raised to torrents, and the Black Torrent was swollen to a cataract, and all poured down vast floods of water into the Black River, which rose and overflowed its banks even to the mountain's side; so that the Black Valley became a black lake.

The advance of the day, and the retreat of the waters, showed at length the full extent of the disaster.

The dwellings in the valley, and in the village at its foot, were nearly all swept away. Only the strongest buildings, and those on the highest grounds, escaped destruction.

The hotel, the courthouse and the church, were each damaged, but not destroyed.

The prison was carried away, and several of the prisoners drowned.

The family of Dr. Hart were saved, though more than once submerged, they clung to the floating roof until they were carried down into calmer waters, where they were picked up by the men who were out in boats to rescue the drowning.

The Black Hall Manor suffered severely. The Hall itself was too strongly built, and upon too high ground, to be even endangered; but its detached offices and laborers' cottages were swept away by the flood. Their inmates, happily, had saved themselves by speedy flight up the mountain side, and were found the next day safe at Black Hall, where they had taken refuge.

But the sunlight also discovered many more wretches made homeless by the flood, and now sitting and shuddering upon the rocks, up and down the mountain sides.

But the dwellings of all those who had been so fortunate as to escape injury by the flood were freely opened to receive the homeless sufferers.

It was late in the day before the condition of the ground enabled Lyon Berners, attended by some villagers, to seek the site of the late prison.

Not a vestige of the building remained. The very spot on which it had once stood was unrecognizable—a vast morass of mud and wreck.

The warden and his family, with Miss Pendleton and a few of the officers of the prison, were found about a mile beyond the scene, grouped together on a high hill, and utterly overcome in mind and body by the combined influences of cold and hunger, grief and horror.

"For the Lord's sake, where is my wife? Where is Sybil?" anxiously inquired Lyon Berners, though scarcely knowing whether he hoped or feared she might be alive.

Beatrix Pendleton, who had sat with her head bowed down upon her knees, now raised it, and said:

"Heaven knows! I tried to make them go and save her; but they would not! I refused to leave the prison without her, but they forced me on the boat."

"We couldn't have saved her," spoke the warden; "her cell was right at the corner of the building, at the joining of the creek and the river. It was overflowed before we got here, and the water, which must a-busted in the window, was a-rushing down the corridor and filling up the place so fast that we had to run up the stairs to the next story to save our lives."

"Heaven's will be done!" groaned Lyon Berners, who, heart-broken as he was, scarcely understood or believed the warden's explanation, or knew whether he himself was merely resigned, or really rejoiced that his wife had met this fate now, rather than lived to await a still more horrible one.

"And the poor woman who was attending her and the young child have also perished?" added Mr. Berners, after a pause, and in an interrogative tone.

Beatrix nodded sadly, and the warden said:

"Yes, sir, of course, which they all three being in the cell together, shared the same fate! And if we could a-reskeed one, we could a-reskeed all!"

"And where are your other prisoners?" inquired Mr. Berners.

"Some on 'em was drowned, sir, unavoidably. And some on 'em we reskeed by taking of 'em through the windows, and on to the boat; but, Lord love you, sir, they gave us leg bail the first chance they got; which who could blame them? Most on them as we reskeed has made off up the mountain, sir; and little use it would be to try to catch them, sir, even if we succeeded, seeing as we have got no place to lock 'em up. And, as for me, my 'okkerpation's gone,' as the man says in the play! But I'm not thinking of myself, sir. I'm mortal sorry for the poor wretches called so sudden to their accounts," added the warden, brushing the tears from his eyes with the sleeve of his coat.

"Come, Martin," said Mr. Berners, who, even in the midst of his own despair, could not forget the claims of humanity—"Come, Martin! You and your companions in misfortune cannot sit here longer without great danger to health and life! You must get up and come away. The road, though very difficult, is passable, you see, since we come by it. Come away!"

"Come where? To the almshouse, I suppose," groaned the warden, dropping his head in his hands.

"My poor fellow, the almshouse has gone with the rest. There is no almshouse now."

"Then we may as well stay here and die; for there is no other place for us to go," groaned the ruined man.

"There are half a hundred places to go to. Every house that has been spared by the flood has, in gratitude to Heaven, opened its doors to receive those who are rendered homeless by this disaster. Come, my good friend; come with your companions to the village hotel. A number of us who have lost no property by the flood have already clubbed together for the relief of those who have lost all. Come! If you sit here longer you will surely catch your death."

The warden arose with a groan; and his example was followed by all his comrades.

"My dear Beatrix, take my arm," said Mr. Berners, helping Miss Pendleton to rise.

"My brother! Where is my brother? He was far enough off to be safe from the flood; but why is he not here now?"

"My dear Beatrix, he could not possibly get here yet. As soon as the water shall have settled he will come, no doubt," said Mr. Berners, as he led her down the hill toward the village.

The road was very bad. In some places it was nearly half a leg deep in pools of water, or in mud. But they reached the half-ruined village at length. And Mr. Berners, accompanied by the whole party, took Miss Pendleton to the hotel to await the arrival of her brother.

All the sufferers were hospitably received by the landlord's family, who furnished them with dry clothing, warm meals, and good lodging.

But it was not until evening that the subsidence of the waters permitted Captain Pendleton to make his way down the valley to the village, to look after his sister.

The meeting between the brother and sister was very affecting.

Beatrix wept on his shoulder.

"Thank Heaven, you are safe, my dear sister!" were among the first words that he said.

"Yes; I am safe, I am safe, Clement. But she is lost! Oh, Clement, she is lost!" cried Beatrix, bursting into tears.

Captain Pendleton started, and looked up to the face of Mr. Berners, as if asking for a confirmation or contradiction of these words.

Lyon Berners sorrowfully bent his head, and then turned away to conceal the strong emotion which he could no longer control.

It was not until the next morning that the waters had gone down sufficiently to enable them to go up the valley as far as Black Hall.

And up to this time but few of the dead bodies of the victims had been found; but all these had been easily recognized, and were now prepared for burial.

Mr. Berners engaged special agents to watch for the appearance of Sybil's body, and to advise him the moment it should be discovered; and then, having made every necessary provision, in case of its recovery during his absence, for its reception at the church, and its retention there until his return, he set out for Black Hall, accompanied by the two Pendletons.

As no carriage could possibly pass along the roads in their present condition, our party were forced to go on horseback.

After a heavy and tedious ride through the deep mud left by the flood, they reached Black Hall, which they found half full of refugees; and where they were warmly welcomed by their faithful servants, who, up to the hour of their arrival, had supposed them to be lost.

But then came the question:

"Where is Miss Sybil?" asked almost in a breath by Joe and Dilly and Aunt Mopsa.

And grave and sorrowful faces answered, even before the tongue spoke:

"Lost in the flood!"

Then for a time loud wailing filled the house. But after a while it ceased, and comparative quiet followed.

"Where is Raphael and little Cro'?" at length inquired Mr. Berners.

"Raphael? Bless your soul, marster, Raphael ain't been seen in this house since you yourself left it," answered Joe.

"Then I am very much afraid the poor fellow has been lost," sighed Mr. Berners.

And then, having called Dilly to show Miss Pendleton to a bedroom, and ordered Joe to perform the same service for Captain Pendleton, Mr. Berners went to a back building of the house, in which the poor refugees were gathered.

Here he found the people in great distress, mourning over the sudden loss of all their worldly goods.

He consoled them as well as he could; reminded them that, with all their losses, they had lost no members of their families, and promised them that he and his neighbors would rebuild and refurnish their cottages, and finally invited them to stay at Black Hall until shis should be accomplished.

Thanks and blessings followed his words, and then he asked:

"Has any one heard from my old overseer, Winterose? His house stands high, and I suppose that it is safe."

A half-a-dozen voices answered in a breath:

"Law, yes, sir; his house is safe."

"He's had a stroke, sir."

"They thought he was dying."

"But he is better now; and his wife, who is a good judge, thinks he'll get over it.'"

"It gratifies me to hear this, my friends. But although the old man's house is safe, he has met with a much greater misfortune than any of you have in the loss of all you possess," said Mr. Berners, very gravely.

"Law, sir, what?" inquired a dozen voices at once.

"He has lost his eldest daughter," answered Lyon Berners, sadly.

"Who? Miss Tabby? Law, sir, no he ain't!"

"She's home, fast enough!"

"She was brought home by a quarryman yesterday morning."

It was the habit of these people to talk all at the same time, so that it required a shrewd listener to understand them.

But there seemed so large an interest at stake in their present communications, that Mr. Berners understood even more than was intended.

"Miss Tabby saved?" he echoed.

"Yes, sir," answered a score of voices.

"And who with her?"

"No one as we knows on, sir."

"No one?"

"No, sir."

"How was she saved?"

"Don't know, sir."

"Nobody knows, sir."

"She don't even know herself, sir."

These replies were all made in a breath.

"Don't even know herself! What is the meaning of that?"

"Yes, sir. No, sir. You see, sir," began half a hundred voices.

"Hush, for Heaven's sake! Speak one at a time. Mrs. Smith, do you answer me. How was Miss Tabby saved?" inquired Lyon Berners, appealing to the oldest and wisest woman of the assembly, and silencing the others by a gesture.

"Indeed, we don't know how she was reskeed, sir. She was brought home by a quarryman, but she was in a cowld fever, and couldn't give no account of herself, nor nothing," replied the old woman.

"Where is she?"

"Up to her father's house, sir. The carried her there."

"I must go there and see her at once," said Mr. Berners, seizing his hat and hurrying from the house.

He walked rapidly through the kitchen garden, vineyard, orchard and meadow, to the edge of the wood where the overseer's cottage stood.

He found old Mrs. Winterose with her hands full.

Mr. Winterose, who, three days before had had a paralytic stroke, that had nearly brought him to the grave, had now so far rallied as to give hopes of his continued life.

He lay sleeping on a neat white bed in the lower front room of the cottage. His wife was the only person with him.

She came forward in great haste to meet Mr. Berners.

"Oh, sir!" she cried, "My child, Miss Sybil! Was she reskeed?"

"Ah, Heaven! That is the very question I came to ask you, or rather to ask Tabby,' sighed Mr. Berners, dropping into a chair.

"Oh, sir! Oh, sir!" wept the old nurse, "then I can't give you any more satisfaction than you can give me. Tabby don't know nothink! She's in bed upstairs, in a fever, and outen her mind, and Libby is a-watching of her."

"Does she talk in her delirium?"

"Talk? Law, sir, she don't do nonothing else at all. Her tongue goes like a moll clapper all the time!"

"Let me go and see her. Perhaps by her rambling talk I may gain some clew to my poor wife's fate."

"I'm 'fraid you won't, sir. I ain't been able to yet. But you're welcome to come up and see her if you will," said the old woman, rising and leading the way to a neat room overhead, where Miss Tabby lay in bed, babbling at random.

Miss Libby, who was sitting beside her, got up and courtesied, and made way for Mr. Berners, who came forward and bent over the sick woman, spoke to her kindly and inquired how she felt.

But the old maid, who was quite delirious, took him for the sweetheart of her young days, and called him "Jim," and asked him how he had dared to have the "impidence" to come into a young lady's room before she was up in the morning, and she requested Suzy—a sister who had long been dead—to turn him out directly.

But, though Mr. Berners sat by her and succeeded in soothing her, he gained no information from her. She babbled of everything under the sun but the one subject to which he wished to lead her thoughts.

At length, in despair, Mr. Berners arose to depart.

"Where does that quarryman live who picked her up and brought her home?"

"Up at the quarries, sir, to be sure."

"But there are fifty cottages up there, scattered over the space of miles."

"Well, sir, it is in the whitish stone one, the nighest but three to the big oak, you know; which his name it is Norriss, as you can find him by that. But, law, sir! he can't tell you no more nor I have!" said Mrs. Winterose.

Before she quite finished her speech Mr. Berners ran downstairs and out of the cottage, and bent his steps to the quarryman's hut.

It hapened just as the old nurse had foretold.

The man could tell Mr. Berners nothing but this: that Miss Tabby had come to his house just about daylight, having her clothing wet and draggled nearly up to her waist with mud and water, and shaking as with an ague, and sinking with fatigue.

He having neither wife nor daughter, nor any other woman about the house, had no proper dry clothes to offer her; but he made her sit by the fire, while he questioned her as to the manner in which she came to be so much exposed.

She answered him only by senseless lamentations and floods of tears.

When her chill had gone off a high fever came on, and the quarryman explained, he knew that she was going to be ill, so he offered to take her home; and, partly by leading, and partly by lugging, he had contrived to carry her safely to her father's cottage, which she reached in a state of fever and delirium.

This was all the information that Mr. Berners could get from the honest quarryman, who would willingly have given him more had he possessed it.

Lyon Berners went back to Black Hall, where he found Clement and Beatrix Pendleton waiting for him in the parlor, and wondering at his prolonged absence.

He apologized for having left them for so many hours, and explained the business that had called him so suddenly away, giving them the startling intelligence of Mis Tabby's unaccountable safety; which, he added, left the fate of his beloved wife in greater uncertainty than they had supposed it to be. She was probably drowned, but possibly rescued. He could not tell. He and they must wait patiently the issue of events.

Wait patiently? Twice more that day he walked up to the overseer's cottage to find out whether Miss Tabby's fever had gone off and she had come to her senses, and he came back disappointed. And again, very late at night, he walked up there and startled the watcher by the sickbed with the same question so often repeated:

"Has she come to her senses yet?"

"No; she is more stupider than ever, I think," was Miss Libby's answer.

"What does your mother think is the matter with her, then?"

"Oh, nothing but chills and fevers. Only Tabby has a weak head, and always loses of it when she has a fever."

"Well, Miss Libby, as soon as she comes to herself, if it is in the dead of night, send some one over to the Hall to let me know, that I may come immediately; for my anxiety to ascertain my wife's fate, which she only can tell, is really insupportable."

Miss Libby promised to obey his directions, and Lyon Berners returned to Black Hall.

But not that night, nor for many nights after that, did Miss Tabby come to her senses. Her illness proved to be a low type of typhoid fever, not primarily caused, but only hastened by the depressing influences of fear and cold from her exposure to death, and to the elements, on the night of the great flood.

For many weary weeks she lay on her bed, too low to answer or even understand a question.

And during all this time nothing occurred to throw the faintest gleam of light upon the deep darkness that still enveloped the fate of Sybil Berners.

This period of almost insupportable anxiety was passed by Mr. Berners in doing all that was possible to repair the damage done by the disastrous flood.

He was the largest subscriber to, and also treasurer of the fund raised for the relief of the victims, and passed much time in receiving and disbursing money on their account.

A SNAIL'S PACE.

A snail's rate of travel was ascertained by experiments in Florence. Half a dozen snails were permitted to crawl between two points ten feet apart. Exact time was kept from the start to the finish, and thus the average pace was learned. The figures were then put into tables of feet, yards, and furlongs, and it was found that it would take a snail exactly fourteen days to travel a mile.

VIOLET CURE FOR CANCER

SAID TO HAVE MET WITH MUCH SUCCESS IN ENGLAND.

Cures Have Been Affected After all Hope of Recovery Had Been Abandoned.

In the summer of 1901, says a writer in the Westminster Review, Lady Margaret Marsham was sinking from a serious affection of the throat which no treatment relieved and which her physicians diagnosed as cancer. A specialist removed part of the growth and the experts at the Clinical Research Association, to whom it was submitted for analysis, pronounced it to be without doubt cancer.

All hope of recovery had been abondoned, swallowing being impossible. A friend proposed an application of hot infusion of green violet leaves, not with an idea of curing, but to relieve the pain. The patient reluctantly consented, and the relief was sufficient to induce a continuance. Within a fortnight from the commencment of the treatment every trace of the swelling had disappeared.

This remarkable case of recovery by their use drew public attention to violet leaves as of possible value in the treatment of cancer. In the spring of this year this was revived by the publication in the newspapers of a case reported in the Lancet of March 18 by Dr. William Gordon, physician to the Devon and Exeter Hospital.

In this case a man aged 53 had consulted Dr. Gordon on November 8, 1904, for a very painful and serious affection of the tongue which had been developing for the last six months, and which Dr. Gordon and four surgeons, all men well from their extensive experience in consulting work, pronounced to be cancer. Immediate and extensive operation was recommended.

This the patient refused and treated himself at home by taking and applying fresh infusion of violet leaves. On January 23, 1905, he was so much better that his employers sent him to Dr. Gordon to show himself. Almost all the symptoms had disappeared and he had gained two stone four pounds in weight. On February 20 but little remained of the deep, ragged, indurated ulcer except a hard scar.

"Personally," said Dr. Gordon, "I am now advising the trial of this violet treatment in all cases of undoubted cancer which are inoperable."

Perhaps the most remarkable property of violet leaves is the anodyne action they exert in cases of cancer. So great is this as, apart from any question of cure, to more than justify their employment as the most valuable treatment at present known for cancer.

The writer then gives details of a number of cases in which the violet treatment was employed with results which, according to the reports, were quite extraordinary.

"In view of the painful increase of cancer," he continues, "and the fact that the medical faculty has nothing but operation to offer, the foregoing cases constitute a consensus of strong evidence that is of more value than any at present employed in the disease.

"That the absolute cures as yet recorded are few is no serious impeachment of its value, for, as an experienced doctor remarked to me, patients are so afraid of being told that their symptoms are cancer that they often delay seeking medical advice until they are practically past help.

"Further, the violet treatment is mild and slow in action, and in all recorded cases cure has resulted from its unremitting and continued use. Not only do patients try it in a fitful and half hearted manner, but they seldom resort to it to even that extent until every other resource has failed them, and they are almost in extremis.

"Moreover the local symptoms of cancer do not appear until the morbid causes of which they are the index have reached such a serious stage that it is difficult to arrest them and bring the constitution back into a healthy orbit.

"If, then, the violet leaf treatment can effect so much in the relief and cure of cancer under the unfavorable and irregular conditions above described, it is legitimate to infer that under reverse conditions such as its regular and persistent use in the earlest stages of the disease combined with all other collateral means that aid recovery, the results obtainable would be such as to

SURPRISE THE MOST SCEPTICAL.

"Its physiological effects, from my own observation and experience, are those of a mild deobstruent, discutient and resolvent, unloading the glands and gently relaxing the entire system. It has also the effect of moistening the skin and promoting flow of saliva. A tendency to sleep sometimes experienced after taking it seems due not to any directly sedative action which it exerts, but to be the indirect result of relief of the system from functional tension.

"Its action when applied to the skin is highly emollient, rendering it extremely smooth and supple. It would doubtless exert the same effect upon all the membranes with which it came into contact. To what property or combination of properties its extraordinary power to relieve the suffering peculiar to cancer is due, remains to be determined.

"So far beyond our comprehension are the susceptibilities of the human constitution, so subtle the relations existing between it and other offspring of mother earth, that to dispise 'the meanest flower that blows' is the reverse of wisdom.

IF I SHOULD DIE TO-NIGHT.

If I should die to-night,
My friends would look upon my quiet face
Before they laid it in its resting-place,
And deem that death had left it almost fair;
And, laying snow-white flowers against my hair,
Would smooth it down with tearful tenderness,
And fold my hands with lingering caress,—
Poor hands, so empty and so cold to-night!

If I should die to-night,
My friends would call to mind with loving thought,
Some kindly deed the icy hands had wrought,
Some gentle word the frozen lips had said,
Errands on which the willing feet had sped;
The memory of my selfishness and pride,
My hasty words, would all be put aside,
And so I should be loved and mourned to-night.

If I should die to-night,
Even hearts estranged would turn once more to me,
Recalling other days remorsefully;
The eyes that chill me with averted glance
Would look upon me, as of yore, perchance,
And soften in the old familiar way.
For who could war with dumb, unconscious clay?
So I might rest, forgiven of all to-night.

Oh, friends! I pray to-night,
Keep not your kisses for my dead, cold brow:
The way is lonely, let me feel them now.
Think gently of me; I am travel-worn;
My faltering feet are pierced with many a thorn,
Forgive, oh, hearts estranged, forgive, I plead!
When dreamless rest is mine I shall not need
The tenderness for which I long to-night.

A man never spends his money more foolishly than when he gives the Lord a dime looking to get a dollar back.

DO IT NOW.

"Never put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day" should, with "Do it now," be rigorously lived up to. Thinking of what has to be done seems to magnify the work tenfold, whereas if done at once the difficulties which we thought almost unsurmountable will have practically disappeared, and more time has been wasted in wondering how to remove the obstacles than it has taken to accomplish the task. The woman, or man either, who cultivates the habit of diligently applying herself to the work generally finds that she has not only accomplished most work, but has also the most leisure at her command, though that does not necessarily mean it is spent in idleness.

Diana's "No"

The course of true love might have run smoothly enough in the case of Diana Mowbray had she not parried the all important question, and implied "No" when she really intended her final answer to be "Yes."

Dick Relton, her lover, was, unfortunately for her, one of those prosaic, matter-of-fact individuals who expect a plain answer to a plain question. He contemplated matrimony with even an unusual degree of seriousness, for he loved Diana truly and felt assured, moreover, that she loved him.

In this momentous question of his life he came straight to the point at once, even though it meant the turning point of his easy-going bachelorhood existence. He put the question in the concise and simple form in which it occurred to him without any preliminary assertions or unnecessary expansiveness of expression, so indulged in by the lovers of to-day.

He never troubled about fluency of speech or flowery language, for he reasoned that Diana understood all that prompted the question. 'She knows that I love her," he thought. "What need to talk about what is so apparent?"

It chanced one summer afternoon that Dick found Diana in her favorite nook, among the flowers in her garden, and he stood to watch her for a few moments, for she made a picture fair enough to delight the heart of any man. She was unaware of his coming, her thoughts were far away in the world of romance; she was intent upon a book, an ideal love story, wherein the lover made love in a manner entirely after her own heart. She put herself in the heroine's place and pictured just such another wooing in real life.

Then all at once she heard her lover's footsteps; she closed her book, perhaps a little reluctantly, and waited for the realization of her dream and fancies. There followed the lovers' glance into each other's eyes, the lovers' touch of hand, a few moments speaking silence, and the question fell abruptly on Diana's ears.

"Diana, will you marry me?"

Diana's moods were varied as her charms, her mind was wandering in the land of ideals, and so the question came at an unpropitious moment. It sounded too abrupt, and it wounded Diana's romantic susceptibilities. Where were the protestations of love, the endearments, the ardor of the anxious lover? Diana glanced up surreptitiously at the tall figure beside her, careful, however, not to show in her face all the love that was in her heart, for she knew that she loved this matter-of-fact wooer, but why, oh, why couldn't he make love in the proper way.

She meant to say "Yes" in the end, but, well, she had a fancy to be wooed after a fashion of her own, with vows of eternal fidelity, with more lover-like demonstrativeness, and so she resorted to prevarication as a means to an end, confident of her own power, never doubting what that end would be.

"Marriage? I? Absurd," she exclaimed, and made pretence of finding the lost place in her book; and, alas, he did not see the smile which curved Diana's mobile lips, or the light which shone in her deep grey eyes. The words without the smile spoke volumes, and her tone conveyed perhaps more than she had wished. Her lover came hastily to a conclusion.

"And so," he said, "youve just been amusing yourself all this time, you never really cared. Diana, you're just a heartless flirt," and he strode away without even a backward glance in his ladylove's direction.

Little wonder that Diana's pride was hurt—no woman likes to be called a heartless flirt—especially by the man she really loves. Things had assumed an unexpected aspect. Diana had not anticipated such a contingency. She could not raise her voice in protest, she would not now if she could, she would assume complete indifference.

"Absurd," she said to herself, "but he'll come back, I'll wait." And Diana went on waiting and presumably reading till late on that summer afternoon. She waited in vain, for her lover did not come back. She turned the pages of that last romantic chapter of her novel without so much as a glance to see "how the story really ended," and then wended her way across the old world garden to the house beyond, a smile still upon her lips but with the light of battle in her eyes.

The worst of it was that this foolish pair of lovers lived very near to-gether—a stone's throw Diana called it, from her own ivy-covered house to Dick Relton's more imposing residence.

Diana had been wont to roam at will across the sunlit meadows through the flower-decked orchard into her lover's domain, and he had grown to watch for her daily coming, and to delight in the moments when they wandered together over the sunny fields. Then they had drifted from friends to lovers, happy in the thought that each knew the other's secret.

Now everything was changed. Diana turned her steps obstinately in the opposite direction and took her daily walks in uninteresting pathways and dusty roads, while Dick ignored the orchard and the meadow and went out of his way to avoid Diana's favorite nooks. Alas for the course of true love.

The days went by and their thoughts were ever of each other; a fortnight passed, a month, it semed so long to waiting lovers; Diana grew uneasy, thoughtful lines puckered her smooth brow.

"Everything has a limit," she reflected; "my patience might wear out, Dick's love might grow cold," but somehow it was hoard to picture his love as anything but enduring always; yet the time was ripe for action and Diana was resourceful. She did not, however, mean to be the first to bridge over the little gulf that divided her love and herself, she would not speak the first word of reconciliation, only by some means or other she wanted "things put straight." She pondered on the ways of lovers, their eccentricities, their weakness, and, possibly judging her lover by herself, she came to a conclusion.

"I'll go away," she decided on returning one day after an unusually uninteresting ramble. "Right away, somewhere."

The "somewhere" was vague, but Diana's future destination was at present only in her imagination. "Distance lends enchantment," she remembered, and she meant her lover to be brought to reason by the distance she would put between them.

The distance might be real to him, imaginary to her, that did not matter, the result would be the same—thus Diana reasoned with a lighter heart. She felt sure there would be no need for actual departure. Dick would hear through local gossip of her contemplated flight to lands afar, then old reminiscences would crowd upon him, for the sake of old times he would come to say good-bye to her, if only as a friend, and Diana smiled to herself as she pictured the silent natural process by which she would make him understand.

There were somethings, however, which Diana had not duly considered, and she had yet to learn that man may occasionally act upon impulse or resort to a ruse as a means to an end; moreover, that he may sometimes take upon himself the prerogative of "setting things right" without impairing his own dignity or asking a woman's advice.

Dick had a tiresome feeling that he had been too precipitate in accepting Diana's "No," and he desired nothing more than to be quite sure of the real state of her feelings. So by a strange coincidence he hit upon the same method of procedure as Diana herself.

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder," he mused, "I'll go away, and if she does care I shall see her coming once more across the meadow. We shall meet and she will try to say 'Good-bye.'"

Dick's lover-like intuition pictured the scene which would follow, and in which he and Diana would once more be made happy.

Hence it came about that the day after these lovers had resolved to put the ocean between them that rural gossip set the ball a-rolling, and with something like dismay Diana heard of Dick's intended voyage to Australia, and he in turn heard that she was off "almost immediately" to America. How terribly distant and unenchanting these countries sounded to their anxious ears.

Diana almost gave in; then she stood her ground once more. For one weak moment she contemplated a complete surender and an inevitable explanation, then she drew back again into her shell of well-assumed indifference.

Dick's love almost got the better of him; he longed to take Diana in his arms and ask her that same question with ardent protestations of his love; then he scorned his weakness and let the moment pass.

So they waited, each for the other to speak, to give some sign. The waiting grew tense, and apprehension dawned on Diana's lovely face. Each morning they gained new courage with the thought "One more chance," each evening they acknowledged that "Hope deferred made life unbearable."

Obstinate determination at last gave way to desperation, and one morning the early train puffed and panted out of Fairtree station carrying a resolute young man with a huge portmanteau.

Then, reflecting that she would not be behindhand, Diana also packed and made her exit, calmly, judiciously, with a pile of luggage and a deck chair.

Alas for the dreams of youth and the mighty resolutions formed in lover's minds! As the train dashed on, carrying Dick farther and farther away from the home of his youth and from Diana, he sat and gazed moodily out on the passing landscape, the sweet English pastures, the woodland hills, and the quiet homesteads. How peaceful it all looked, how familiar, bathed in the afternoon sunlight, and he was leaving it all for—"Banksmere," called out a porter. The train had stopped, and Dick noticed with an appreciative eye some well-remembered hills over which he had had many a delightful scramble. "I'll give Jack a look up," he decided suddenly, "Australia can wait. Diana won't know where I am," and then he made his way out of the station with the air of a person thoroughly accustomed to his surroundings and with a happier look upon his face.

Diana's train likewise bore her swiftly along; she, like her lover, beguiled the time in sad reflectiveness and mute farewell. "What might have been," she mused in the melancholy quiet of her first-class compartment; "how happy we might have been if only—" "Hillsdene," screamed a voice outside the window. Ah, how well she knew Hillsdene. What jolly times she had often had there. It was near here that she had first met Dick. That dance, how she recalled it now.

Without another moment's hesitation (for the train would have started on) Diana alighted, gathered her belongings, and vanished in a station cab. "Won't Molly be surprised?" she thought, "and there is no hurry about America, Dick won't know and the rest of the world doesn't matter."

So Diana stayed at Hillsdene and found some consolation in a true friend's sympathy, whilst her lover was at Banksmere with no intention of quitting his friend's hospitable roof—just three miles apart—all unconscious of of each other's nearness.

In the rosy hues of morning, life looked somewhat brighter. Diana sauntered out for an early ramble and, passing strange, she wandered lovewards, while Dick, unaware of her proximity, took a walk towards Hillsdene. Presently Diana rested beneath the welcome shade of an overhanging tree; Fate led Dick in that same direction.

She looked up to see a casual passerby, then a pair of grey eyes and a pair of blue ones met.

"You?"

"You?"

"I thought—" she stammered, and left her thought unspoken.

"And I thought, too," he remarked, and came to a full stop.

"Australia?" she questioned, veiled sarcasm in her tone.

"America?" he said, reproachfully.

There was silence for some moments, and then a smile broke over Diana's face like the one which her lover had missed before. Diana had not spoken, but Dick read all that he wanted to know.

"Why didn't you say before, Diana, that which would have put things right?" he questioned.

After all Diana had to be content with a very simple wooing. — Pearson's Weekly.

"THE THISTLE." FIFTY YEARS AFTER.

Mr. C. T. Christie of Montreal, who was the secretary of the Toronto St. Andrew's Literary Association for several years after its formation in 1858, has recently found among the papers in his library several poems written for the association's magazine in that year by the late Rev. Prof. John Campbell of the Presbyterian College, Montreal, who was then a lad of about eighteen. The verses show that Prof. Campbell developed very early in life the talent for the muse. "The Thistle," one of the poems in the "Doric," follows, and may perhaps recall to the few old men now surviving who met almost fifty years ago in the Temperance Hall to listen to the reading of the verses some of the pleasures of the past:—

When oor patron saint, St. Andrew, descended frae the skyes,
He brocht a Thistle doon wi' him—'twas a plant o' muckle size.
He set it on the Heelan hills, for a' the warld to see,
An' cried: Wow! but he'll nae be wise that meddle daur wi' thee.

Some fashious Roman bodies cam' frae England's southern plain,
An' thocht to batter doon the Thistle's head wi' chucky stanes,
But Thistles' leaves are sharp an' strong, an' sure the lads did flee.
An' cried: "He gets nae muckle scran that meddle daur wi' thee."

Then frae the Scandinavian north, proud Denmark's fleet set sail;
But when they saw the Thistle's head, their courage 'gan to fail.
An' as they fell at Largs red field they cried, "Ochonie!
It's naught but death or wounds he gets that meddle daur wi' thee."

An' mony English kings hae tried to houk the Thistle up,
But found it nae sae easy wark, wi' Heelan hills to cope.
An' tho' their minds fu' aft they changed—yet did they a' agree,
That they were nane the richer for their meddlin' wi' thee.

An' noo that to the rose it's joined, an' strength an' beauty blend,
An' round the three-leaved shamrock green its keen, sharp blades extend.
It rears its head on Britain's throne, an' shouts wi' muckle glee,
"Oh, whar's the cheil sae venturesome that meddle daur wi' me?"

O'er this, our young society, lang may the Thistle wave,
An' may we on our name an' laws this motto bright engrave:
"Let weel alane, an' like unto the thistle down I'll be,
But woe to the uncanny han' that meddle daur wi' me."

FREE FOOD IN SCHOOLS.

British Parliamentary Committee Recommends Midday.

A midday dinner will be provided for hungry children in elementary schools if the suggestions contained in the report of the Select Committee on the Education (Provision of Meals) Bill issued are acted upon, says the London Daily Mirror. The committee's chief recommendations are:—

The local education authority should be empowered to organize the provision of a midday meal for children attending public elementary schools, and to establish committees to deal with school canteens.

That power should be given for the local education authorities to raise loans and spend money on the provision of suitable accommodation and officials, and for the preparation, cooking, and serving of meals.

That in extreme and exceptional cases, and after the consent of the Board of Education has been obtained, a local authority may have recourse to the rates for the cost of the actual food, the rate for this purpose not to exceed ½d in the £.

That steps should be taken to secure that parents able to do so and neglecting to make provision for the feeding of their children shall be proceeded against for recovery of the cost.

The committe urge that it ought not to be part of the conditions of the appointment of any teacher that he (or she) shall assist in dispensing meals provided for children.

WHAT HE COULD DO.

An unkempt-looking fellow stopped at a suburban residence, and asked for employment. The lady of the house, who at the moment was superintending the removal of some plants, emerged from the greenhouse, and asked him if he were a gardener.

"I ain't had much experience," was the reply.

"Well, can you plant these shrubs?"

"I shouldn't like to risk spoilin' 'em, ma'am."

"Well, what can you do?"

"Well, ma'am," he replied, meditatively, "if you'll give me one of your husband's cigars, I'll sit in the green house and smoke out the insects that's eatin' up the leaves of them rose bushes."

WON WRONG WOMAN.

Wanted the Daughter, But Her Mother Fell in Love With Him.

At Grenoble, a grocer has just hanged himself, and thereby hangs a story, which, despite its tragic sequel, has in it more of the elements of farce comedy than tragedy.

The grocer had established a snug little business. He was 27, good looking and of good address. He cast around for a wife. His choice fell on the pretty eighteen-year-old daughter and only child of a rich tradesman. From the grocer's point of view it was a most desirable match. But he was aware that it would hardly present itself in the same light to the rich tradesman. A girl with a big dot in France and especially a pretty one, to whatever class she belongs, is considered as entitled to a husband higher in the social scale than a retail grocer.

To overcome this difficulty the grocer decided on the plan which generally proves most effective in overcoming parental obstacles. He resolved to make himself exceedingly agreeable to the rich tradesman's wife—his intended mother-in-law—a buxom woman still under 40 and by no means unprepossessing. He succeeded so well that she soon gave her consent to his suit. Unfortunately for him, his success did not stop there. She found his society much more agreeable than that of her own husband, who was too much engrossed in business to fill a woman's life.

She began to talk of her own heart-hunger, and he listened sympathetically. She said she wished that she had her own life to lead over again and sighed. He soon found that he was seeing considerably more of the mother than of the daughter. She received him with long and tender pressures of the hands and

LANGUISHING GLANCES.

At last the terrifying discovery dawned upon him that he had won not the daughter but the mother. It was an embarrassing situation. Discretion suggested that he should cease visiting the house. But if he did that, he would lose all chances of winning the daughter. So he continued to play the dangerous game. He wasn't cut out to play the role of Joseph to Potiphar's wife.

The death of the rich tradesman left him in a worse plight than ever. The widow wanted to marry him and he wanted to marry the daughter. At last he summoned up courage to tell her that he would never take the place of her departed husband. Tears and protestations; threats and entreaties failed to move him.

He set to work courting the daughter for all he was worth, and dodged her mother as best he could. His wooing prospered. The girl accepted him and they were married.

Scorned and rejected, the affection of the elder woman turned to hate. She planned a terrible revenge. When the bride retired after the wedding to change her dress for the honeymoon journey, her mother told her all. Then there was a scene. The bride refused to see her husband. The mother saw him, though. It was her hour of triumph and she made the most of it. She just let her tongue loose upon him.

In the commotion the bride was lost sight of. When the grocer finally succeeded in escaping from his mother-in-law and went in search of her, he found she had left the house. The best man was also missing. She had speedily found consolation.

For a week the grocer hunted the couple in vain. Then he closed his shop, shut himself up in his lodgings and hanged himself. Maybe there is a story somewhere. Several dramatists are of the opinion that there is a good play in it—for the French stage—and are working upon it.

ARMADA'S TREASURE AGAIN.

One More Attempt to Recover Treasure Ship of Spain.

Another attempt—the third within two years—will shortly be made to recover the treasure said to have been on board the Admiral of Florence, the treasure ship of the Spanish Armada, when she sank off Tobermory, Isle of Mull, in 1588. The difficulty of reaching and exploring the sunken vessel is owing to the fact that the floor of Tobermory Bay is composed of fine shifting sand. Capt Burns, of the British Marine Salvage Association, who is in charge of the operations, has now invented an apparatus by which this sand may be removed. The expenses of the enterprise are being defrayed by a syndicate of Glasgow merchants to whom the Duke of Argyle delegated his ancient rights conferred on an ancestor by royal charter in 1641.

As early as 1661 a Swede identified the ship with the poop, where the gold bullion is still, sanding up, undamaged by the explosion which had blown up the deck from the mizzenmast forward. This Swede brought up a heavy iron canno. Later the ninth Earl of Argyll instituted a search by which a metal-bound chest was recovered. In 1687 William Phipps invented a new form of diving bell, and companies were formed for the recovery of goods and treasure from sunken ships around the coast. The Argyll of the period headed one of these companies, which carried on operations in Tobermory Bay, and on the other side of the Sound of Mull, where another galleon was reported to have been sunk. In 1740 John, Duke of Argyll, recovered a beautiful brass cannon in Tobermory Bay. This was three yards twenty-two inches in length, and of most elaborate and excellent workmanship. The ornamentation and engraving showed it was a French piece, and the metal work was attributed to the great Benvenuto Cellini.

AN OLD PLAN WITH HIM.

Layman: "A railroader friend of mine told me the other day that on nearly every line of road they had changed the make-up of the trains so as to have the sleepers in front."

Minister: "That's no innovation. My congregation have been built on that plan for years."

THE TROUBLE WITH HIS EYES.

For a man of his age, Grandfather Sampson had remarkably good sight, but the time had come when he could no longer see well enough to read ordinary print. Yielding to the inevitable, he went to an optician's and had his eyes fitted with a pair of spectacles.

He wore them only while reading, but his delight in his new aids to vision was unbounded. To be able to read once more was like having a new lease of life. At the end of a week, however, he began to have misgivings. The spectacles were hurting his eyes. The words on the printed page grew blurred and dim.

"The trouble is," he said to himself, "that I have been overdoing it. My eyes haven't got used to the things yet."

For a week longer he used the glasses less frequently, but this did no good. His powers of vision seemed steadily to fail, and in great distress he went back to the optician's.

"See here," he said, "when I got these things they were all right, but now I can't use them at all. What do you suppose is the trouble?"

"Let me see the glasses," said the optician.

Grandfather Sampson handed them over. The optician wiped them carefully and put them back on his eyes.

"What do you think is the trouble, Mr. Sampson?" he asked.

"Nothing—now!" exclaimed the old gentleman, picking up a scrap of a newspaper that lay on the show-case and holding it up before him. "I can read with them as well as ever. Was that all they needed?"

"That was all."

"Say."—the old man lowered his voice.—"don't say anything about this to my folks, will you?"

And sometimes a woman's so-called love grows cold because her husband declines to hand out the cold cash.

HYPNOTIZED IN TRAIN.

Man with "Shining Eyes" Robs a Lady Traveller in Geneva.

A new danger threatens the travelling public. Recently, when the train arrived at Lausanne from Pontarlier, Switzerland, and everybody had departed, the guard found a woman sitting in a rigid position, with her arms and legs held out before her and her eyes fixed in an expressionless stare. He failed to arouse her, and, thinking she was in a fit, called a doctor, who at once stated that the woman had been hypnotized.

The doctor made the regulation passes and the woman recovered slightly, but was unable to speak. On searching her some valuable shares were found, but she had neither purse, money ,nor jewels. Her name, according to some papers discovered in her possession is Melaine Verne.

She was conducted to the hospital and placed under the care of Dr. Houdart, who also confirmed the fact that she had been hypnotized in the train and probably robbed. The woman, who is of middle age, has not yet recovered her senses completely, and talks vaguely about "a man with shining eyes."

In Japan, fish have to be sold alive, and they are hawked through the streets in tanks.

Horrible Accident.

Kingston, September 10—On Saturday evening an accident occurred at Marlbank, a village north-west of this city, on the line of the Bay of Quinte railway. A fireman named Corintia Hences was at work before his locomotive, when the engineer without knowing of his presence, pulled the throttle and as the engine began to move Hennes attempted to get from under; in doing so he had both legs cut off at the thigh. Death ensued at one o'clock on Sunday morning. The deceased was twenty-five years of age and came from Montreal.

Honors for the I. H. S.

The Iroquois High School has planted its colors a long step in advance this year, and not only step the High schools of Ontario in the Matriculation Scholarship examination but jostles the largest Collegiate Institutes of the Province for the first place. Owen Sound C. I. alone has won great amount in prize money. John H. Dixon has been awarded the 2nd Edward Blake General Profiency Scholarship ($199.00) and the Dickson (Trinity) Scholarship in Science ($184) The total value of the two is $383.00 but owing to the fact that each includes tuition fees for the four years ($144) the net value is reduced to $239.00, a handsome penny nevertheless. The second scholar ship in Classics and Mathematics was also his but could not be held with one in general profiency already to his credit.

Aruthur Cooper, the other I. H. S. candidate, has a choice of the 7th Edword Blake General Profiency or 2nd science and holds a general proficiency, which is worth $138.00.

The boys have done honor to themselves and have made a record for the school that has never heretofore been approached and which it cannot be expected to equal except with an abnormally strong class. The citizens of Iroquois and Dundas have good reason to be satisfied with the work of the High School and no effort should be spared to maintain its efficiency.—Iroquois News.

Beautiful and Brilliant Colors Guaranteed when Ladies Use

DIAMOND DYES.

Each year thousands of letters come in from all parts of this vast Dominion telling of victories and successes with Diamond Dyes in the home.

The marvelous and immense sales of Diamond Dyes in Canada have induced adventurers and speculators (who know nothing about the chemistry of colors) to go into the putting up of package dyes. Such dies are adulterated and crude; the colors are muddy and blotchy, bringing ruin to the materials you try to dye.

DIAMOND DYES, the choice of wise women, are the kind used when bright, full, fast and brilliant colors are wanted. No disappointments possible when you use Diamond Dyes.

DIAMOND DYES are sold by all leading druggists and dealers. Refuse to accept substitutes when you ask for Diamond Dyes. Send to Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, Montreal, P. Q., for New Direction Book, Diamond Dye Cook Book, and Illustrated Booklet, entitled "Diamond Dye Longjohn's Winter and Summer Sports." Sent FREE to any address.

WINCHESTER EXHIBITION.

Better Than Ever—A Splendid Exhibit of Live Stock.

Thursday and Friday last were fair days at Winchester. The weather was ideal and on Friday a large crowd was present. There was a good showing of horses and the expert Judge was taxed to his utmost to give just decisions. However, he went at it in a buisness-like way and his choice seemed to be popular in most cases. Truly 4000 people were on the grounds the last day and it is stated that $260 more was taken in at the gate this year than last. This exhibition is growing more popular every year, and the President, Mr. Jno. Hutt is thoroughly pleased with this year's result, while a great deal of credit is due to the efficient Sec'y-Treas., Mr. J. W. Laflamme, for its success. The following is the result of the speeding contest:—

The Electrical Storm Severe.

Sunday's electrical storm is reported to have been very severe throughout the southern and western districts of Carleton county and much damage was done. At 7.30 that evening lightning struck the barn of Matthew Arbuckle, whose residence is about two miles from North Gower village and burned it to the ground. The fire was noticed immediately but no progress could be made in fighting the flames, as the building was filled with hay and grain.

About 400 people witnessed the fire and succeeded in getting the horses, cattle and implements from the burning structure. One thoroughbred bullock, however, perished.

The barn was a fine one, with stables and drive house attached and contained a large quantity of hay and grain, the season's crop The total loss will exceed $400.

Through the efforts of those who witnessed the blaze the house was saved.

Another fire is reported from Carleton Place where the buildings of Mr. Robinson was struck by lightning and completly gutted. Mr. Robinson's loss is about $3,000.

Hymneal.

A very pretty and interesting house wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hanes, Dundela, at 7 p.m., on Wednesday, Aug. 29th, when his daughter, Lucy, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Lorne M. Casselman, of Morrisburg, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. A. Lundy of North Williamsburg, in the presence of about fifty guests, including several from Ottawa, Montreal and Osnabruck Centre. The wedding march was played by Miss Pearl Hamilton, while Miss Annie Hanes, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, the groom being supported by Mr. Stanley Casselman of Morrisburg. Miss Eva McLean acted as flower girl. The bride looked charming in a costume of figured Roxena cloth, and carried a beautiful boquet of cream roses, while her going away gown was of grey Ombu homespun. The bridesmaid wore a handsome dress of wool Bingaline, and carried a bunch of pink roses.

After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room, where a sumptuous wedding super was awaiting them, to which they did ample justice.

The happy young couple left on the 11 p.m. train to visit Toronto, bearing with them the congratulations and best wishes of a host of friends.

Serious Crime is Charged.

Charged with stealing a gold watch and a knife, the property of Thomas Hicks, North Gower, and a pair of trousers from Mr. J. Eilig, Pearce's Corners, James Greene, a 19 year-old English boy, who came to Canada several years ago as an immigrant, was on Saturday arrested by County Chief of Police Hamilton. The arrest was effected at Beckett's Landing, and was preceded by some interesting details. The watch and knife of Thomas Hicks were taken from a cheese factory. Greene was found to be missing and suspicion rested on him. Some time afterwards, entrance was effected into the residence of Mr. Eilig, and a pair of trousers was taken. The alleged robber was chased, and while going through a corn field is stated to have flung aside the pants and the knife belonging to Mr. Hicks. This was a circumstance that directed suspicion once more in Greene's direction, with the result that he was finally arrested. The lad appeared before Magistrate Clark Craig and a remand was made. County Magistrate Smith will take up the case this week.

Pearl Wedding.

On the evening of Thursday, Sept. 6th, 1906, the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ingram Smith, to the number of about sixty-five, assembled at their residence, on the Maple Ridge Road, to help them celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of their wedding. At 9.30 the guests sat down to a beautifully decorated table, loaded with delicacies. After the most fastidious taste had been satisfied, the Rev. Mr. Runnells, in a congratulatory speech, proposed the health of Mr. and Mrs. Smith. It is needless to say that the toast was drank with enthusiasm. By request Messrs. R. D. Fulton and J. S. Cowan responded on behalf of the host and hostess. After the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," the guests departed expressing the wish that Mr. and Mrs. Smith might live to celebrate their diamond wedding. The presents were both costly and numerous and appropriate to the occasion, pearls predominating.

Accident to Montrealer.

Joseph LeClair, a brakeman on a G.T.R. way freight, met with a serious accident at Morrisburg late Thursday night. He was on top of the cars while an attempt was being made to couple up the train, and the sudden jolt threw him in between the cars, one of which passed over his leg and thumb. He was taken to Cornwall, where both leg and thumb were amputated at the General Hospital. LeClair is expected to recover, though his condition is very serious. His home is in Montreal.

Where Does Consumption Begin.

The first little tickle becomes a cough the cough grows severe, is neglected and travels down to the lungs. Treat throat trouble before it gets severe. Catarrhozone heals, allays inflammation, cures throat and bronchial trouble quickly. A marvel worker is Catarrhozone, which prevents thousands of Catarrh victims from contracting consumption. Recommended by doctors, proved by time to be unfailing. Catarrhozone is just what you need. 25c. and $1.00, sold everywhere.

A Lad Shot Dead.

Kingston, Ont., Set. 10—On Friday a distressing accident happened about three miles from the village of Parnham, which resulted in the death of William McGregor, the six-year-old son of a well known resident of that vicinity. From reports received here it seems that the unfortunate young lad was fooling with a gun in company with his brother, Charles. It accidentally exploded, the contents hitting the boy in the left breast and penetrated the heart. Deceased was a bright young lad.

BLOOD DISEASED MEN

If you ever contracted any blood disease you are never safe unless the virus or poison has been eradicated from the system. Have you any of the following symptoms? Sore throat, ulcers on the tongue or in the mouth, hair falling out, aching pains, itchiness of the skin, sores or blotches on the body eyes red and smart, dyspeptic stomach, sexual weakness—indications of the secondary stage. Don't ruin your system with the old fogy treatment—mercury and potash—which only suppresses the symptoms for a time only to break out again when happy in domestic life. Don't let quacks experiment on you. Our New Method Treatment is guaranteed to cure you. Our guarantees are backed by bank bonds, that the disease will never return. Thousands of patients have been already cured by our New Method Treatment for over 20 years. No names used without written consent.

Mr. E. A. C. writes: "Your remedies have done me more good than Hot Springs and all the doctors and medicines I had previously tried. I have not felt any of those pains or seen any ulcers or blotches for over seven years and the outward symptoms of the loathesome disease have entirely disappeared. My hair has grown in fully again and I am married and happy."

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

Dr. Hamilton Gives a Full and Satisfactory Explanation.

Look at your tongue!

Sometimes its heavily coated, sometimes it's clear and red.

Study this out and you'll find some interference with the functional activity of the body.

This means the bowels are not regular, the liver is sluggish and the blood is contaminated.

Strong cathartic pills act so destructively on the intestines as to provoke deathly sickness; this often frightens people from taking medicine when they badly need it.

To the multitude of dangerous purgatives now on the market, Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a notable exception, they neither gripe, cause sickly feeling or headache, yet they cleanse and purify the entire system in one night. No other laxative acts with such mildness and certainty. Giving proper stimulas to the liver and kidneys, strengthening the stomach and lending valuable aid to digestion, it's small wonder that such marvelous results accompany Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Mr. Geo. O'Hogarty, of Amherst, N.S., writes: "Last winter I worked in a lumber camp and neglectsd my health. I was dreadfully constipated, and had a headache that fairly made me reel at times. I was sick and miserable, and hadn't the slightest ambition to work or stir around. I felt heavy and dull and had a bad taste in my mouth. I sent into the city for Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which I knew were good for my condition. They fixed me up very quickly and I have been in good condition ever since. There are other men in the camp that use Dr. Hamilton's Pills also. They say they wouldn't be without the pills for ten times their price."

Every dealer in the land sells Dr. Hamilton's Pills—25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co, Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kiugston, Ont

Great Specialist in Stomach Catarrh.

Though often they fail to give even temporary relief, Mr. W. Seymour, of Huntsville, Ont., cured himself with Ferrozone. "My trouble," he says "was chronic catarrh of the stomach. There was constant bad taste in my mouth, I was costive and usually nauseated before and after meals, I also had a gnawing sensation in the stomach. Ferrozone gave me great relief, and I also used Catarrhozone which is good for catarrh. Although it took a number of boxes of Ferrozone, I got back my health and to-day am quite well." For stomach catarrh, indigestion ank kindred disorders nothing excels Ferrozone. In a thousand cases it has proved a wonderful success. Try it yourself, 50c. per box at all dealers.

NORTH WILLIAMSBURG.

It is our sad and painful duty to record the death of Mrs. C. W. Norval, which occurred on Friday, the 31st ult, after a brief illness. Deceased had been in apparent good health up till within a few days of her death, when she was taken suddenly ill, and all that medical skill could do, a kind wife and affectionate mother passed peacefully into rest at 7 o'clock a.m., on Friday morning. Mrs. Norval was a faithful member of the Presbyterian church and was actively connected with the several church organizations, She was of a kind disposition, and will be greatly missed, especially by the poor, with whom she was ever in sympathy, always offering a helping hand to those requiring assistance. She leaves to mourn her loss a devoted husband, one son and a daughter. The funeral took place on Monday, the 3rd inst., the services being conducted by the Rev. R. A. Lunday, after which the remains were taken to Brockville, thence to Morrisburg and placed in the family plot near her old home. The casket was covered with wreaths, flowers, etc., from I.O.O.F., and W.F.M.S., as tokens of the estimation in which deceased lady was held. The community generally join in sympathy with the bereaved family.

Was Sam Low Done to Death.

Kingston, Sept. 7—The dead body of a man was found floating about eleven o'clock this morning in the harbor at the King street esplanade and was removed in an ambulance to Corbett's undertaking establishment. Now it has been identified as that of Samuel Lowe, a well known citizen, who has been missing from his home since last evening. The deceased was treasurer of the Independent Order of Foresters, and started to a meeting of that lodge last night, but did not reach there. He is known to have had a considerable sum of money, constituting lodge dues, in his possession, and when found this morning there was only a small amount of change in his pocket. This fact led to a suspicion of foul play and an inquest has been ordered by Coroner Sands. The deceased was a prominent Conservative and was a member of the local executive.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Summer is Best Season to Cure Catarrh. Hyomei Sold Under Guarantee.

Summer is the best time in the whole year for the treatment of catarrhal troubles, and we urge every reader of the Record to use Hyomei now and be permanently cured.

Unlike the ordinary treatment for catarrh, there is no stomach dosing when using Hyomei. The remedy is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes in every outfit, and its balsamic healing air penetrates to the most remote part of the nose, throat and lungs, searches out and kills the catarrh germs, in all parts of the respiratory organs and soothes and heals any irritation there may be in the mucous membrane.

Hyomei is not alone the only natural treatment for catarrh, but it is the only one sold under an absolute guarantee to refund the money unless it gives satisfaction. It kills all disease germs and restores the mucous membrane of the throat, nose and lungs to perfectly healthy condition.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1.00, extra bottles 50c.

For sale by all dealers. The R. T. Booth Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Hon. W. A. Weir was returned to the Quebec Legislature by acclamation in Argenteuil, and Mr. W. F. Vilas, Liberal, and E. W. Westover, Independent Liberal, nominated for Brome.

Stormont W. C. T. U.

The annual convention of Stormont County W. C. T. U., was held in the Methodist Church, Cornwall, Aug. 6th, afternoon and evening sessions. Mrs. Bigelow of Cornwall, called convention to order at 2 p.m.

After roll call of officers and delegates it was found that representatives from the following unions were present Aultsville, Newington, Finch, Berwick and Cornwall.

Mrs. Binnie, President of Cornwall Union, then greeted officers and delegates in a few well-chosen words, expressing her pleasure in welcoming such earnest workers, and closed by way of encouragement when difficulties presented themselves ond work seemed discouragingly, in giving that beautiful comforting text—"Fear thou not for I am with you, be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea I will help thee; yea I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness."

Mrs. Grey of Berwick, replied on behalf of the visiting delegates, expressing her appreciation of the courtesies and kindness extended to them by the ladies of Cornwall, and the fact of being interested in one common cause, made all feel one in Christ. The singing here of "Blest be the tie that binds," seemed to give a fresh impetus for renewed efforts for God and Home and Every Land.

Rev. G. G. Huxtable, secretary of the Quebec branch of the Dominion Alliance, was called on to say a few words and encouraged all present by stating that the temperance cause was never in such a prosperous condition, the world over, as at the preseut, and cited many instances where the work of Archbishop Bruchesi in Quebec has been eminently successful, several hundred families having signed the total abstinence pledge.

Mrs. Kirk reported for Finch, Mrs. Pollock for Berwick, Mrs. Jardine for Newington "Y", Mrs. Morgan for Aultsville, Mrs. Sincennes for Cornwall.

Scientific temperance instruction in schools occupied several minutes, and much regret expressed, that the subject was not given more attention in schools. In conclusion Miss Bigelow then presented the following motion, which was seconded by Mrs. White and carried unanimously: "Resolved that Stormont W. C. T. U. memorialize the Provincial W. C. T. U. to the effect that they secure an efficient and influential teacher, will attend and address, in behalf of scientific temperance in our public schools, all the county teachers associations in the province."

Election of officers was then proceeded with, the ballot resulting as follows:—

President—Mrs. Geo. Bigelow, Cornwall.

Vice-President—Mrs. R. Binnie, Cornwall.

Cor. Sec.—Mrs. D. P. McKinnon, Finch.

Rec. Sec.—Mrs. D. D. McIntyre, Avonmore.

Treasurer—Mrs. J. D. Pollock, Berwick.

The Superintendents of the Departments:

Evangelistic—Mrs. S. Hutt, Berwick.

Scientific Temperance—Mrs. Bigelow, Cornwall.

Temperance in S.S.—Mrs. (Dr.) McGill, Cornwall.

Lumbermen—Mrs. G. F. Jardine, Mewington.

Mothers' Meetings—Mrs. J. D. Mclennan, Cornwall.

Press—Mrs. A. B. Warner, Cornwall.

Juvenile—Mrs. J. R. Kirk, Finch.

Franchise—Mrs. Bigelow, Cornwall.

Anti-Narcotic—Mrs. McMillan, Finch

Railroad Employees—Miss Bush, Aultsville.

Flower, Fruit and Delicacy—Miss Jean McLean, Finch.

Unfermented Wine—Miss Steen, Aultsville.

Much regret was felt at the absence of our recording secretary, Mrs. D. D. McIntyre, and it was moved and seconded that a letter be sent to her expressing the sympathy of all present in the loss she had sustained by the death of her son,

Before closing it was also moved that this convention place on record its appreciation of the work of our vice-president, Miss C. Marjerrison, formerly of Gravel Hill, and a letter be sent to her expressing our regret at the removal from our county of such an efficient worker, and hoping that in her new home in the far West she may be eminently successful.

The singing of the temperance doxology closed the afternoon session.

Admitted Murder of Child.

St. Thomas, Ont., Sept. 10—Mrs. Louisa Smith, about sixty years of age, was arrested last night on a charge of murdering her daughter's baby. The daughter, Lizzie Smith, is weak-minded. She became a mother on Thursday night and the child was cared for by a neighbor in Victoria block, where mother and daughter have rooms. It was noticed by persons in the building that the babe had disappeared and the police were notified. The child was found last evening dead, in the peach basket hidden in the back of Thornton's barn, in the west end of the city.

Mrs. Smith admitted to the police that she gave the babe poison, which killed it and then she took its body and placed it where found. She told the police where to find it.

RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT'S POLICY

It Includes Useless Restrictions Against the Jews.

REFORM PROMISES.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: The declaration of policy by the Government, of which lately several forecasts have appeared, was issued on Wednesday. It promises many liberal reforms, including the immediate withdrawal of useless restrictions against the Jews, increasing provincial autonomy, reform of the police and other public services, the establishment of zemstvos in Poland and the Baltic provinces, and the institution of an income tax. Meanwhile the Government is determined to maintain order, and it accordingly decrees court martial for political crimes, and increases the penalties for carrying on the revolutionary propaganda.

TWO HUNDRED ON TRIAL.

A despatch from Cronstadt, Russia, says: The trial of two hundred participants in the recent mutinous outbreak, including M. Onipke, one of the peasant leaders in the outlawed Parliament, and fifty other civilians began here on Wednesday behind closed doors. There are over a thousand witnesses, and, therefore, the proceedings are expected to be protracted.

OFFICERS RETURN THREAT.

A despatch from Sevastopol says: In answer to the publication of a notice from the terrorists that a sentence of death has been imposed on Col. Dumbadze, commander of a rifle regiment here, the officers of that corps in an open letter have announced that in case of an attack being made on the colonel they will exact vengeance on the leaders of the progressive parties.

FEARS THE NAVY.

Admiral Skydloff, commander of the Black Sea fleet, and the military commander here are very apprehensive of the attitude of the sailors of the fleet and the garrison of the fortress. The annual cruise of the training squadron as well as the regular fleet manoeuvres have been abandoned.

POLICY CLEARS THE AIR.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says. The Government's declaration of its policy has had a favorable effect in commercial and financial quarters. There was a general rise in prices on the Bourse on Thursday, where the first business in the recent internal loan was transacted, while 4 per cent. bonds rose to 70.

The Moderate and Liberal newspapers praise the agrarian proposals, and only condemn the depression of the revolutionary propaganda in the army because it is retroactive. On the other hand, the revolutionists and extremists of all kinds continue irreconcilable.

SECRET TRIALS.

Under the Imperial ukase of Wednesday Governor-Generals and similar authorities in districts that are under martial law are empowered to send accused persons before a field court martial without preliminary examination. The court consisting of a president and four army or navy officers, will make its decisions in camera within eighteen hours, and the sentences will be carried out within twenty-four hours.

CORRESPONDENT BEATEN.

The London Standard's correspondent at St. Petersburg says that J. Foster Fraser, the Standard's special correspondent, and his secretary, were arrested in Tuesday's round-up of 2,000 persons in the streets and were taken to the yard of the Governor's palace, where they were beaten by the Circassian guards. Probably only the intervention of the adjutant of Gov.-Gen. Scallon saved their lives.

UNIVERSITIES TO REOPEN.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: At a meeting on Thursday night of Social Democrats and Social revolutionary university students it was decided not to oppose the reopening of the universities, which is scheduled for Oct. 14, thereby furnishing a strong possibility that the paralysis of the educational life of the country, which has lasted for two school years, may soon be ended. Many revolutionary students favored abandoning entirely the obstructive attitude.

Reports from Moscow, Odessa and other university centres are to the effect that an unprecedented number of prospective students have registered, owing to the accumulation consequent on the two years' stoppage of instruction.

POLICE CHIEF KILLED.

A despatch from Sebastopol says: The chief of the gendarmes was assassinated on a street car here on Friday.

IMPRISONMENT FOR LIFE.

A despatch from Warsaw says: The trial of the agitators and soldiers of the Warsaw garrison charged with spreading the propaganda of the military league, including two officers, resulted on Friday in the sentencing two of the accused to imprisonment for life. The officers were found guilty only of cognizance of the propaganda. One of them was exiled to Siberia, and the other was condemned to three years' imprisonment in a fortress.

MURDER AT LODZ.

A despatch from Lodz, Russian Poland, says: Twenty armed men on Thursday entered the house of a policeman, killed the policeman and a soldier and mortally wounded the policeman's wife.

BIG FIRE AT POWSIN.

A despatch from Powsin, Russian Poland, says: A fire started here on Thursday by terrorists, who were angered at the refusal of the inhabitants to grant their demands, resulted in the destruction of 177 houses. A boy perished in the flames.

KILLED FELLOW-LUNATICS.

A despatch from Warsaw says: An inmate of the asylum for the insane at Gorakalwaria, near here, secured an axe on Thursday and killed several of his fellow-lunatics before he was overpowered.

SIEDLCE RUNS WITH BLOOD.

A despatch from Warsaw says: At 6 o'clock Saturday evening two soldiers who were guarding the Government alcohol store at Siedlce, 55 miles southeast of Warsaw, were shot and killed by Terrorists. A detachment of infantry, alarmed by the sound of the firing, rushed up and fired a volley, kiling two men and wounding two others. Sunday morning the Terrorists retaliated, beginning a massacre of policemen and soldiers patroling the streets. At noon the infuriated troops attacked the Jewish quarter, destroying houses and shops. It is reported that over a hundred persons were killed. The city is in flames.

A late message from Siedlce, timed 1.35 a.m., Monday, states that the massacre continued all day. The soldiers attacked all civilians, Christians and Jews, robbing and murdering without discrimination. The authorities have sent a regiment of infantry from Biela to restore order.

The Jews in Warsaw are panic-stricken. Alarming reports are circulated throughout the city.

BEATEN ON WAY FROM WORK.

An Englishman the Victim of a Brutal Assault.

A despatch from Bowmanville, Ont., says: Saturday evening, about dusk, a brutal assault was committed on an Englishman named Richard Ford while near the G.T.R. track, on his way home from work. Ford, who has not been in the country very long, resides with his wife and family in a house belonging to Mr. E. Burk, on the lake shore. He worked with Burk for a time, but some dispute arising between them, he left his employ, and secured a position in the foundry, walking some four miles to his work every morning and returning in the evening. He was on his way home on Saturday evening when he was attacked by three men and his hands tied. He was then blindfolded, knocked down, and severely kicked and beaten. He finally managed to get on his feet, and, with his hands still tied, kicked at the parties until they decamped. He found his way to the residence of Mr. Samuel Allin, who brought him to town, where his wounds were attended to by a doctor. During the scrimmage, tar was rubbed in his hair, and he was warned to leave the neighborhood at once. There is no doubt but that it was local parties who committed the crime, and it is likely that arrests will follow, as Ford is positive that he can identify his assailants, who also took what money he had. Chief of Police Jarvis has the case in hand.

MILK FED PUMPKIN LATEST.

Pint a Day Developed it Into Monster of 100 Pounds' Weight.

A despatch from Bloomington, Ill., says: A milk-fed pumpkin is the latest development in agricultural circles. Two pumpkins, grown on the same vine, were on exhibition at the Tazewell County fair. They stood side by side, but one was ten times larger than the other. The giant was given a pint of milk a day through a hole cut in the vine which was attached to the stem. The milk was completely absorbed over night. The small brother attained natural growth, but the milk-fed one weighed 100 pounds.

HORSES AND ALL BURNED.

Peculiar Accident Near Macgregor, Manitoba.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: A peculiar mishap at the farm of W. Jefferies, near Macgregor, on Saturday. While a team and load of sheaves were passing a thrashing engine, a spark set fire to the load and the horses, taking fright, ran away, and cramped the wagon, which was consumed, together with the animals. The fire also spread to the separator before being extinguished.

STEAMER SERVICE TO MEXICO.

Two Years' Arrangement, Conditional on Parliamentary Sanction.

An Ottawa despatch says: The Trade and Commerce Department was officially notified on Wednesday by the Mexican Government that arrangements had been entered into with Mr. Warsnop, representing British capitalists, for a steamship service between both countries on the Pacific. The arrangement is for two years, and is conditional on the Mexican Congress and the Canadian Parliament approving of the same.

INDIA RICE FAMINE.

Prices Abnormal and Crowds are Looting the Shops.

A despatch from Calcutta says: The rice famine in the northern provinces of India is becoming worse and is extending toward Bengal. Prices are abnormal, and crowds are looting the shops.

A DRIVER'S LUCK.

Son of Wealthy South African Leaves for Inheritance.

A despatch from Montreal says: On the Allan liner Tunisian there sailed on Friday a saloon passenger, one James Broderick Roach, who a week ago was worth a few dollars, and to-day is possessor of $350,000. The story reads like a romance, with the difference that it is real, for the driver of a rig has become a wealthy man. Mr. Roach came to Canada and settled in Montreal some years ago. His father went out to South Africa in the days when Kimberley and Johannesburg were unknown to the world and the race of South African millionaires had not yet come forth. After his son left home at Newcastle, in Natal, the father was lucky, and at his death left a million dollars. By the terms of the will his son has not to come into his share until he reached the age of 25. The news was conveyed to Mr. Roach on his birthday week, by cable, from Messrs. Shirley and Johnson, solicitors, at Plymouth. Mr. Roach soon after his arrival in Canada joined the 8th Company of the 5th Royal Scots, and at the time of his departure was a sergeant. Friday night the non-commissioned officers and men of the company gave him as a token of their esteem and friendship, a handsome bloodstone signet ring.

TRIED TO SAVE HAND-CAR.

Section Man Has Both His Legs Broken Near Guelph.

A despatch from Guelph says: In trying to save a G.T.R. hand-car from an on-coming freight near Guelph on Friday morning, section foreman Martin Sosnoski had a narrow escape, and one of his gang, Vincento Marticardi, married, aged 32, was struck by the train, and had both legs broken. The two were working on their regular run from Guelph to Rockwood, and were driving the lorry a mile out of Guelph towards Trainor's cut, when a west-bound extra freight came out of the curve of the cut. The sectionmen stopped their lorry as soon as possible, and the freight tried to slow up on the down grade. Sosnoski and his assistant had almost got the lorry clear of the track, and Marticardi, who was on the track side, sprang across to escape the engine, but the cowcatcher struck him below the knees, breaking both legs.

SPINAL CORD SPLICED.

A Remarkable Operation Performed at Medicine Hat.

A despatch from Medicine Hat, Alta., says: A very difficult operation was performed on Engineer Glover on Thursday afternoon in the Medicine Hat General Hospital by Dr. C. F. Smith, assisted by Dr. C. E. Smyth and Dr. Goodlands. In the head-on collision here last Friday night Glover's back was broken and the spinal cord mangled. No hopes of his recovery could be entertained unless the cord could be replaced, and this operation was undertaken Thursday, the spinal cord of a dog being used to take the place of the original one for about an inch. The case is being watched with extreme interest by medical practitioners.

SOUTHERN INDIANA SHOCKED.

Succession of Earthquakes Cause a Panic in Many Places.

A despatch from Indianapolis, Ind., says: Southern Indiana was visited by a succession of earthquake shocks between 10 and 11 o'clock on Friday morning, and in some places they were so severe as to frighten the people, causing them to leave their homes and rush into the streets. At some points as many as three shocks were felt, while at others there was a succession of tremors that lasted several seconds, but not distant enough to be recognized as separate shocks.

GUARDING ST. LAWRENCE.

Powerful Guns in New Fortifications Below Quebec.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Over 100 men are now employed upon the new fortifications, which are being erected ten miles below Quebec by the Militia Department. The fortifications consist of two masked batteries, each mounting two guns of the latest and most powerful description, and capable of sweeping a 12-mile stretch of the St. Lawrence. It is estimated that the work will be completed in two years.

DOUKHOBORS REFUSE TO EAT.

Incarcerated in Jail They Are Forced to Take Food.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Fourteen Doukhobors, incarcerated in the jail here, absolutely refuse to partake of food. Nourishment has to be forced through their teeth by scientific means. These men are leaders of the famous band that braved the prickly cactus with naked feet while they wandered in nude condition over the face of the prairies. But humiliation has only steeled their hearts with a firmer determination, and they have resolved that if the police authorities will not allow them to turn Saskatchewan into a veritable garden of Eden they will starve their bodies.

BOYS LOSE THEIR RIGHT ARMS.

Two Receive Injuries in Winnipeg of Similar Character.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Harold Griffith, of Norwood, was thrown under the wheels of a work car on the Street Railway on Wednesday and his right arm was nearly cut off near the shoulder. The victim is 17 years of age, and now lies at the Winnipeg General Hospital in a critical condition.

A similar accident occurred on Main Street, when a boy named Hanley, 15 years old, a messenger of the C. N. R. Telegraphs, rolled under the wheels of a car and lost his right arm. The right grip of his wheel handle came off, causing him to lose his balance.

CHILDREN'S COURTS.

Law Now Requires That They Should be Established.

Youthful offenders under sixteen or homeless children should be removed entirely from the jurisdiction of the regular Courts and be dealt with by a specially organized Children's Court. In connection with this Court there should be a detention home and probation officers to investigate charges of youthful wrong-doing and homelessness, etc, and submit to the judge a report of each case. Children charged with petty offences should be placed temporarily under the care of these officers, who would supervise the home life, help to procure employment, or take whatever steps might be necessary to remove the cause of offence Judge Tuthill, who had charge of the Children's Court in Chicago for a time, was asked what he thought about the born criminals and degenerates. He is quoted as replying "There are no born criminals. If I felt that I should lose faith in God. Society makes criminals, and environment and education makes criminals, but they are not born so." He further expressed the opinion that if the best children in the world were submitted to the same influences as the children daily brought before him they would commit the same offences. The home surroundings and early training of children are all important factors in determining their subsequent career. When children get into conflict with the law it is rarely their fault, and their cases should be studied in a kindly parental way by persons whose love of childhood is greater than their sense of so-called justice. Only in this way can they be permanently removed from the criminal classes.

THE HERRING INDUSTRY.

Scotch Expert Has Proved Value of Canadian Fish.

A Montreal despatch says: Mr. J. J. Cowie who has been employed by the Canadian Government for two seasons demonstrating the Scotch method of herring-curing and packing, has accomplished most encouraging results this summer in the Baie des Chaleurs. Heretofore the fishermen of Gloucester have made no use of the large runs of Spring herring excepting as bait and garden fertilizer. Mr. Cowie, however, with his up-to-date methods of handling this fish, has shown that they have a value quite equal to the Scotch article, and a pack has been made that will probably realize from ten to twelve dollars a barrel in New York.

The Fall run has now begun, and Mr. Cowie says he never saw such herring in his life. The Canadian fish of this class has never commanded a high price, owing to the primitive way in which it was cured and packed.

AN ADVANCE IN LEATHER.

A Radical Increase Decided Upon by the Tanners.

A Toronto despatch says: Leather is to go up in price. An advance, which will effect consumers throughout the entire Dominion of Canada, was decided upon on Thursday, when at a meeting of the tanners' section of the Board of Trade resolutions were unanimously adopted, that in view of the continued advance on hides and tanning material, harness leather be advanced two cents per pound above August prices, measured leather one cent per foot, and that all other leathers be advanced in proportion, and that the discount on all leather sold to the retail trade be 2 per cent., in accord with the cash discount now given by the jobbing and wholesale trade.

GERMANY'S NEW BATTLESHIP.

Projectiles 280 Pounds heavier Then Any Used at Present.

A despatch from Berlin says: According to the Cologne Gazette the new German 19,000-ton battleship, which will be a rival of the British Dreadnought, will carry 16 big guns, compared with the Dreadnought's 10. They, however, will be of rather smaller calibre, although their enormous length, 46 feet, will enable them to carry an unusually heavy charge, while the projectiles will be 280 pounds heavier than any of the present German projectiles.

NEW ENGINES FOR C. P. R.

Fifty Ordered from Montreal Machine Co.—Angus Shops' Output.

A Montreal despatch says: The C. P. R. have placed an order with the Locomotive & Machine Company, Montreal, for fifty locomotives of the heavy consolidated type for freights. These engines will mean a total outlay of almost one million dollars. While the order is being filled the C. P. R. Angus shops will continue to turn out one engine a week. This means that within the next year the locomotive equipment of the company will be increased by a hundred of the most modern and efficient engines.

LUMBER MILLS SHUT DOWN.

Low Water in Ottawa Has Checked the Supply of Logs.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The water is so low in the Ottawa River that it is impossible to get logs over the slide in Hull, and as a consequence mills whose supply comes from the Upper Ottawa have been forced to shut down At Hawkesbury the big mills of the Hawkesbury Lumber Company are idle and about six hundred men are out of employment. In Hull the Eddy Company's saw mill has suspended operations in the day-time, and runs only at night. At J. R. Booth's the big mill is running full in the day-time, but only half of it is operated at night. It is years since the water has been anywhere near so low as it is at present.

MR. CARNEGIE AT HOME

HOW THE MILLIONAIRE AMUSES HIMSELF AT SKIBO CASTLE.

Enjoys Himself in Summer Time at His Beautiful Scottish Home.

If anyone doubts that a multi-millionaire can be a perfectly happy man, said a friend of the writer, I should advise him to arrange, if possible, to spend a day or two with Mr. Andrew Carnegie at Skibo Castle, in his summer house in Scotland, and I guarantee that his doubt will speedily take wings; for I do not think there are many men in Great Britain, rich or poor, who so thoroughly enjoy life as this wonderful Scotsman, who has made almost as many millions as he has lived years. This at least was the conviction forced on me when I spent a few delightful days as his guest a couple of years ago.

But, indeed, it would be rather difficult for any man not to enjoy life under such ideal conditions and in such a lovely environment. Skibo Castle, you must know, stands on a slight eminence near the shores of Dornoch Firth, in the far north of Scotland and but a few miles from Dunrobin, the regal home of the Dukes of Sutherland. Behind it rise magnificent, heath-covered hills, and in front stretches a glorious panorama of loch and moors and hills, such as you will scarcely match even in romantic Scotland; while the castle itself, which Mr. Carnegie has largely rebuilt, is a stately pile, beautiful to look upon and

FULL OF HISTORIC ASSOCIATIONS.

To this splendid retreat the millionaire "laird" loves to retire every summer; and here he spends an ideally happy time with his wife and little daughter, entertaining his countless friends and finding each day too short for his many recreations and activities.

Naturally a man who has led such a strenuous life finds no plasure in idleness. Full of irrepressible energy, he must always be doing something, and at Skibo he finds plenty to occupy his time very agreeably. In fact, the place is his hobby, and he is always planning some improvement to add to its charms. Now he is enthusiastically superintending the laying out of golf links; now he is diverting the course of a stream to make a beautiful lake; and again, he is constructing a road through the mountains—schemes which give him infinite pleasure and also provide employment for a small army of men.

And these are but a few of his many activities, mental and physical. Every day, from all quarters of the world, there pours in on him all of which demand attention; and although the majority of them (chiefly of the begging order) are suppressed by his secretary and never come into his hands, his daily correspondence usually occupies a large part of his morning. He is a great reader, too, and spends an hour or two daily with the newspapers and periodicals which are scattered in lavish profusion all over the place, or with the treasured volumes in his splendid library.

Almost more than his books Mr. Carnegie loves music, and one of his greatest pleasures is to sit in the hall of Skibo while the castle organist, a highly-paid artist of great skill, conjures sweet music from his magnificent organ. Another form of music which delights the millionaire is the skirl of the pipes, to which the household, in good Scottish fashion, awakes every morning. Mr. Carnegie also spends many pleasant hours in the billiard-room, where he handles the cue with great enthusiasm and no little skill; he loves to work in his beautiful gardens, and to take long tramps over the hills

WITH THE BRISK STEP OF A BOY.

But undoubtedly Mr. Carnegie's happiest hours are those spent with his wife and daughter—"Madam" and "Missie," as he playfully calls them—to both of whom he is devoted.

When, as is often the case, the castle is filled with his friends, he is one of the most hospitable and thoughtful of hosts, and the days programme is a full and merry one. He takes his guests for long and delightful drives, accompanying them on fishing expeditions (he is a keen disciple of the great Izaak), takes them on his steam yacht to explore the romantic castles on Dornoch Firth, and aranges shooting parties on the moors and matches on the golf-links.

Mr. Carnegie, by the way, is one of the most enthusiastic of golfers, and it is said that he is prouder of his progress in the game than of making his millions. In this connection an amusing story is told. One day an interviewer ran him to earth on the links to ask his opinion of a threatened crisis in the steel trade. After Mr. Carnegie had listened patiently to a long string of questions, he said: "Well. I know nothing about all that, but I'll tell you something. Yesterday I broke my record. I went round this course in five strokes fewer than ever before."

FEASTING FOR EIGHT DAYS.

At Sezeged, in Hungary, there has come to a close a triple weddeing-feast on a scale of profusion rare even for that country of medieval survivals. Three brothers were married together, and the festivities lasted eight days. Seven hundred guests assembled, and at the first day's feast there were served two oxen, two calves, eighteen lambs, 130 head of poultry, 200 dishes of pigs' feet and ears in jelly, and eighty enormous cakes. When the first dance, a czardas, was called, 200 couples stood up. Feasting in this way, with singing and dancing, continued daily, and during the whole of this time music never ceased day or night, quite a number of bands taking successive turns. But the company could hardly stand the strain. When the eighth day closed, only a dozen young folks remained to take leave of their hosts.

WIRE WOUND CANNON.

Miles of Wire Wound Round the Inner Tube of Gun.

Three plans of constructing heavy guns are pursued. They may be cast and the business may stop there. Or a gun thus built may be reinforced by the addition of one or more tubular jackets at the breech. To place a jacket it is first heated so as to expand the metal sufficiently to allow it to slip on over the rest of the gun. When it cools it contracts and fits snugly. Still another plan is to make the gun chiefly out of steel wire, the latter sometimes being wound around a set of thin, loose segments which resemble barrel staves.

Lieut. A. Trevor Dawson, a British ordnance expert, has recently indicated in the columns of The London Times his reason for thinking that the wire wound gun is preferable to the "built up" gun. Flaws occur in metal which are not discoverable if it is used in masses. With wire one can be absolutely certain about its condition. The wire is tested before being used throughout its entire length, whereas in the case of the solid steel construction of guns the test is only carried out upon a small sample taken from the steel forming each part of the gun. At Woolwich the practice is to use steel wire of a breaking strain of between ninety and a hundred and ten tons a square inch, and of this something like 110 miles are used on a 12-inch gun, forming a band around the tube more than equivalent in strength to the series of shrunk rings in the

SOLID STEEL CONSTRUCTION.

In England it is usual to substitute for the segments a tube. Indeed, two tubes, one inside of the other, are commonly employed, the outermost being known as the A tube, and the inner one being scarcely more than a lining to the bore and intended for removal and renewal when it becomes badly affected by the gunpowder gases. For the A tube it is customary in England to use a grade of steel having a tensile strength of from 34 to 44 tons a square inch. That is to say, it must be strong enough to stand a lengthwise strain of so many tons. Other qualities, such as the ability to stretch 17 per cent. before breaking, are required.

The effect, so far as the strength of the whole structure is concerned, may be briefly explained. The wire tension and shrinkage are so arranged as to give an internal compressive stress of twenty-five tons a square inch at the breech end, varying to fourteen tons a square inch at the muzzle—this, of course, is the condition when the gun is in a state of repose. Even when the gun is fired with charges to attain the high velocities now reached there is still an enormous margin of safety. This is due, first to the fact that the steel for the inner and A tubes has a yielding point of over twenty-one tons to the square inch, while the working stress, based upon accurate calculation, is estimated not to exceed eighteen tons to the square inch. The tension with which the wire is wound on the gun results in a very much higher yielding point than would be the case with solid bands. This tension depends, of course, upon the thickness of the inner and A tubes, and upon the number of layers of wire, or tape, as it might more correctly be termed. As a rule, it ranges from about fifty-four tons to the square inch on the inner wires to thirty-two tons to the square inch in the outer wires. It varies at the different sections in the length of the gun to suit the gaseous pressure along the bore to be supported.

TEETHING TIME.

Every mother dreads that period in her baby's life known as teething time. The little gums are swollen, inflamed and tender; the child suffers greatly, and is so cross and irritable that the whole household is on edge. All this is changed in homes where Baby's Own Tablets are used. This medicine allays the inflammation, softens the swollen, tender gums, brings the teeth through painlessly. In proof Mrs. W. C. McCay, Denbigh, Ont., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets a splendid medicine at teething time. My baby was very sick at that time, was cross, restless and had no appetite. After giving her the Tablets there was a marked improvement, and in the course of a few days she was not like the same child. The Tablets are just the medicine to help little ones over the trying teething time." You can get Baby's Own Tablets from any druggist or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TERROR AND BLOODSHED.

Results of the Greek and Slav Feud in the Balkans.

The murder of Greeks in Bulgaria and the destruction of their property is bringing about a dangerous complication in the Near East.

Race hate, as between Slavs and Greeks, and religious hate, as between the Bulgarian and Greek Churches, have become intensified by the present outrages, and preparations are being made for reprisals on a large scale.

Macedonia will again be the field of action, for it is there that the rival factions can freely make war. Already 200 people a month are being murdered by the bands, and property is being destroyed wholesale. This in spite of the supervision of the powers.

A leading Bulgarian comitadji, who is now in Vienna, says that plans are being made to carry the war more actively into the Greek camp. It is known that Greek bands are crossing the frontier in large numbers. They are well armed and well supplied with funds. The Bulgarians are not so well off. They are short of money and are sending agents to their countrymen to make an appeal for help.

Meantime the Turks are interested onlookers. They regard their duty not so much to prevent disorders as to allow the bands to destroy each other. They occasionally destroy a small band themselves, and it is noteworthy that in these encounters the band is almost invariably Bulgarian and not Greek.

There is every probability that the powers will be compelled to take drastic measures to put an end to the prevailing anarchy.

HER ADVICE.

Miss Anteek: "If you were me would you marry a man who proposed to you by telegraph?"

Miss Pert: "Yes, and I'd catch the next train in order to meet him halfway."

They Wake the Torpid Energies.—Machinery not properly supervised and left to run itself, very soon shows fault in its working. It is the same with the digestive organs. Unregulated from time to time they are likely to become torpid and throw the whole system out of gear. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills were made to meet such cases. They restore to the full the flagging faculties, and bring into order all parts of the mechanism.

Mrs. Klubbs (severely): "I've been lying awake these three hours waiting for you to come home." Mr. Klubbs (ruefully): "There now! And I've been staying away three hours, waiting for you to go to sleep."

The delicious flavor of "SALADA" Tea is due largely to the care used in the cultivation and preparation and to the fact that it is packed in sealed lead packages which prevent it coming in contact with articles that would affect its flavor.

"Am I to understand that you were cashiered from the army for a mere breach of etiquette?" queried the interested friend. "Yes, sir," boldly asserted Colonel Blupher. "What was it?" "Turning my back to the enemy."

Sunlight Soap is better than other soaps, but is best when used in the Sunlight way. Buy Sunlight Soap and follow directions.

Lying is like trying to hide in a fog. If you move about you are in danger of bumping your head against the truth; as soon as the fog blows up, you are gone anyhow.

Pale, sickly children should use Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Worms are one of the principal causes of suffering in children and should be expelled from the system.

"Why," said a youngster to his elder brother, "do herrings have so many more illnesses than other fish?" "Who says they do?" asked the youth addressed. "Why, this book says that thousands upon thousands of them are cured every year."

Tiny tubercles on the skin of scrofulous people produce the hideous disease called lupus. Weaver's Cerate, used in time, will save the skin from destruction. Apply to all affected parts. Cleanse the blood with Weaver's Syrup.

Anne Teeke: "Mr. Gasser is such an interesting talker. Always saying something one never hears from anyone else." Hattie Hottewunne: "Has he been proposing to you too?"

Suffer no More.—There are thousands who live miserable lives because dyspepsia dulls the faculties and shadows existence with the cloud of depression. One way to dispel the vapors that beset the victims of this disorder is to order them a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are among the best vegetable pills known, being easy to take and are most efficacious in their action. A trial of them will prove this.

Mrs. Jones: "I wonder what it is that makes baby so wakeful?" Mr. Jones (savagely): "Why, it's heredity, of course—this is what comes of your sitting up at nights waiting for me!"

In Fields Far Off.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is known in Australia, South and Central America as well as in Canada and the United States and its consumption increases each year. It has made its own way, and all that needs to be done is to keep its name before the public. Everyone knows that it is to be had at any store, for all merchants keep it.

HOOKED.

Mrs. Newlywed: "The night you proposed you acted like a fish out of water."

Mr. Newlywed: "I was, and very cleverly landed, too!"

UNDER BLUE SKIES.

The fields and woods are Nature's sanitarium. Have you ever noticed how soon and how completely we forget our aches and ailments when we come under their spell? Somehow it does not seem to fit in well with our surroundings to talk of being sick. Health is all about us, and the abounding strength of Nature is communicated to the physical system by some process we understand but dimly, and we outgrow the weakness and infirmities we have been in the habit of complaining about so much, and all at once we wake up to the fact that we have none left to talk about. Unconsciously we have absorbed the vitality of the earth as God made it, and with a thrill of delight we feel it tingling in our veins, and it is a joy just to live and breathe. The men and women who shut themselves up within four walls and stay there from one year's end to another only half live.

William H. Reed.

"For several years I have been troubled with gas around my heart, shortness of breath, my food did not digest properly. It turned sour in my stomach, causing me great distress; often, too, I had disagreeable attacks of belching gas and heartburn, and severe pains across the small of my back.

"I tried Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill and from the very first found relief. Anti-Pill has indeed cured me."

Here's Just the Right Bowel Laxative

Gentle, Sure—Pleasant to Take—A Tried and True, Genuine, Nature's Remedy.

If you do not have free, easy and regular movements of the bowels you lack the prime and first essential of good health. There's more harm done than mere uncomfortableness, sluggishness and bilious ness—retention of food wastes in the bowels pollutes, irritates and poisons. You make the circulatory system—the blood—a scavenger instead of a fountain of purest life and untainted vitality. The ills of constipation are not trifling but nearly always are fraught with vital significance. Seek your relief in Nature! Accept the gentle, natural aid of Lax-ets! Be sure not to force and crowd the delicate organs of the stomach! Avoid all the danger of powerful and unknown medicines! Your safety and your health are always secured—if you take Lax-ets. The formula is on every box—show it to your family physician. Lax-ets are put up in a flat metal case in handy tablet form—one tablet taken before meals or on retiring always brings relief. Pleasing to take—the most potent yet gentle of all remedies—a genuine help of Nature's—a bowel laxative which cures constipation. Recommended and for sale by

SUED FOR THE CAPTURE MONEY.

Policeman Claimed the Whole Reward for Chartrand Arrest.

Brockville, Sept. 5—In the division court to-day was heard before Judge Reynolds, the action of County Constable Mallory, of Mallorytown, against Warden Platt, of Kingston penitentiary, to recover $100 reward offered by Platt last May for the arrest of one Chartrand, alias Charlebois, a prisoner under life sentence for murder, who escaped. Mallory arrested the convict near Yonge Mills a week later, and Robert Eyres and John Dans, who took some part in rounding up Chartrand, made equal claim with the constable for the reward. Subsequently it was decided by the government officials at Ottawa that the $100 hung up by Lt. Col. Sherwood, commissioner of the Dominion police, should be distributed equally among the three claimants. Mallory refused to accept the money in settlement, and to day's suit was brought to recover $100 from Warden Platt as independent of and entirely apart from the $100 offered by Colonel Sherwood. The judge, after hearing the evidence, upheld the contention of the defence that Warden Platt being a government official, his offer was the government's offer, which was repeated by Col. Sherwood a few days after the warden's publication of it. He accordingly dismissed the case. Col. Sherwood was present in court but not called to the stand. Dr. Platt testified in his own behalf.

Dan Patch's New Record.

St. Paul Minn,, Sept. 8.—The Peerless Dan Patch set the world's record a notch lower this afternoon by pacing a wonderful mile in 155 flat. The weather and track fine and the air of expectancy was noted in the perfect silence maintained by 20,000 persons when he was given the word, but this changed first to a murmur, then to a roar as the first two quarter posts in 26½ seconds each. The third quarter is a little upgrade and was also facing the wind. This he made in 29¼ seconds and when he came home in 28 3-4 the mile in 1,55 a riotous demoustration ensued.

Hersey, his driver was carried to the judge's stand on the shoulders of the throng and crowd cheered themselves hoarse while Mr. Savage, Dan Patch's owner was introduced.

Fired Barns for Revenge.

Port Hope, Ont., Sept. 10—William Lee was this morning committed for trial on the charge of having on two occasions set fire to barns belonging to his half-brother, Alfred Harness of Zion. Several witnesses swore that Lee, in the presence of Provincial Detective Reburn. confessed to them that he had set fire to the barns, and that he also stated that the detective had promised to get him off if he confessed. His reason for the fires, as given in his confession, was that Harness had burnt down his house 25 years ago, and he thought that he had an equal right to destroy Harness' property. Several witnesses swore that they considered the prisoner to be of weak intellect. The magistrates were Mayor Chalk and Thomas Long, J. P. Mr. Holland of Coburg, appeared for the Crown, and Mr. White, of Port Hope, for the prisoner.

Rheumatism is not incurable, Stub born? Yes! But Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy will if faithfully used drive it out of the system. Its the blood thats at fault. Silver in Hailburton.

Peterboro, Sept, 6.—There is considerable excitement in the Hailburton county over the discovery of silver on the land of a farmer named McKniff. McKniff bought two hundred acres of land from the government twenty years ago and has been farming it ever since without discovering that it covered rich silver deposits. A week ago an American prospector discovered that the property was rich with ore, a portion of which, when sent to Torouto for analysis was found to contain a large percentage of silver. Since the news of the discovery has become known McKniff has refused several opportunities to sell his farm, at a price far above its former value.

Jumping With Nerve Pain.

That's how you feel with neuralagia. But why lie awake all night, grumble or complain—get busy with a bottle of Nerviline, It does act like magic, seeks out the pain and destroys it. Harmless and certain, instant in effect, nothing is so popular as Nerviline for aches and pains of all kinds. Try it for lumbago, test it in rheumatism, prove it in neuaralagia, pleursy or colds. You'll soon acknowledge that Polson's Nerviline beats them all. Sold everywhere in large 25c bottles.

Townships Must Pay Damages.

Toronto, Sept 6,—Judgment has been handed out awarding Duncan J. Campbell and his wife $500 and $1,500 repectively against the townships of Brooke and Metcalfe. Campbell and his wife were driving on the town line on March 29 when owing to a defect in road they were thrown from their carriage and both injured. Campbell claimed $3,000 and his wife $5,000 damages.

Old Man Died in Jail.

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 6—An old man named Stone died in the jail, and a jury rendered a verdict of natural death, but strongly commended on the inhumanity of sending old persons, destitute and uncared for, to a criminal institution, especially when they were not guilty of a crime. Coroner Mundell declared infirmaries for old people should be attached to houses of industry, where the destitute poor could be properly cared for, and the government should support such needed institutions.

Aged Offender Gets One Year.

Perth, Sept., 10.—Oscar E. Henderson 62 years old, a well known business man of Almonte, appeared before Judge Sinclair in Perth Saturday, charged with an offence against the person of Arnold a 12-year old Almonte girl, was sentenced to one year in Central Prison, Toronto, Henderson pleaded guilty to the charge and no evidence was taken. In connection with this case the preliminary hearing was held at Almonte on Aug 28, and the case was a topic of considerable comment there. The offence was committed on Saturday, June 30, in Henderson's store.

The interests of the crown were looked after by Mr. E. G. Mallock of Perth County Crown Attorney, and Mr. J. T. Kirkland of Almonte was present in the interests of Henderson. The judge in passing sentence and speaking on the gravity of Henderson's offence, remarked that the public had to be protected.

Unscrupulous dealers actuated by large profits often recommend corn cures "as good as Putman's," There is only one genuine Corn Extractor and that is Putman's Painless which is a miracle of efficency and promptness. Use no other.

Toronto Fair Closed.

Toronto, Sept. 8—An attendance, estimated in round numbers at 800,000, represents these who had admission to the Canadian National Exposition of 1906, which closed to night. There was not one day during the fortnight that was not ideal weather. Another fortunate feature has been the remarkable absence of serious accident or misadventure. To days cut rate brought out thousands of children, who re-visited the points of interest. The King's and Rothschild's horses are in Ottawa and will be in London on Wednesday. The Ontario Government mineral exhibit will also be shown in Ottawa.

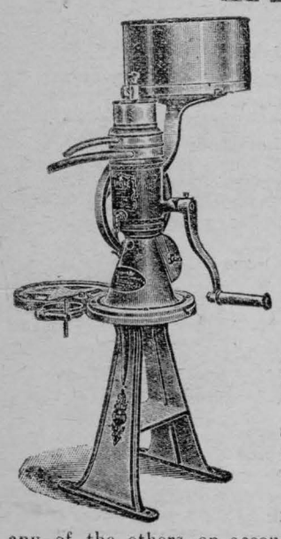
EMPIRE ! EMPIRE ! EMPIRE !



The Empire Cream Separator outwears other Separators, lasts longer and requires fewer repairs, because—It's simpler in construction and—It is more carefully built. That has been the Experience of thousands and thousands of farmers who have used the Empire. Its easy to see why. Being so much simpler in construction it has fewer parts to get out of order. The bowl being so much lighter and there being so much less mechanism, there naturally is lessfriction and wear. It will pay you to consider these things.

Gentlemen:—I am using one of your EMPIRE Separators and am pleased to be able to recommend to all who intend to buy machines.

I can truly say that I have tried several methods of handling milk, and can recommend a separator to be far inadvance of all other moethds.

I can also say that I have tried several other makes of separators and prefer the EMPIRE to any of the others on account of it being easily cleaned, a close skimmer, and the lightest to operate. I am
