The Molsons Bank

Forty-First Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders Took Place on Monday.--- A Very Satisfactory Year.

BUSINESS INCREASES, AND $500,000 OF NEW STOCK WILL BE ISSUED TO SHAREHOLDERS.

The statements submitted at the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Molsons Bank were of a satisfactory kind. The earnings reported were $434,668, over 14 per cent. on the paid-up capital. The dividends of 10 per cent. took $300,000, and $115,000 was expended on the bank premises at branches, which had been increased in number by eight during the year. The opportunities for the profitable employment of the bank's capital have been such, also, that the directors have thought it well to ask for power to increase the capital by another half million dollars. All this speaks of progress and prudent and capable direction and management, at the branches as well as at headquarters, which is what people have come to expect from the Molsons Bank.

REPORT OF DIRECTORS.

The general manager, Mr. James Elliott, read the annual report of the directors, as follows:

The directors beg to submit the following report for the year ending 29th September, 1906.

The business of the bank has been prosperous and shows a steady growth.

The profits for the year, after providing for bad and doubtful debts, amount to $434,668.34, which, together with $31,417.93 brought over from last year, have been appropriated; to payment of four quarterly dividends of 2½ per cent. each; to business taxes, $13,709.49; to Officers' Pension Fund, $10,000; and to expenditure on bank premises at branches, $115,389.55, leaving at credit of profit and loss $26,987.23.

Since our last meeting eight branches have been opened in Ontario and Quebec at points which seemed to offer business advantages, or to protect our existing interests, and at Edmonton, Alberta, it was thought advisable to establish one in view of the prospect of great increase of population and wealth in that district.

All the branches have been, as usual, carefully inspected. The officers of the bank have faithfully discharged their duties.

WM. MOLSON MACPHERSON, President.

Lord's Day Alliance Meeting

The inclement weather of Monday last made the attendance at the Lord's Day Alliance smaller than it otherwise would have been. However, a fair audience gathered in the Presbyterian Church to show their sympathy with the great work of the Alliance. At 8 o'clock the meeting began by devotional exercises. The choir of the two congregations rendered a chorus. The speaker of the evening was the Rev. D. Moore, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance. Mr. Moore ably pointed out the great need for the orginization of which he is a secretary. He vividly showed the necessity for the defence of the Lord's day. All present agreed that Mr. Moore's address was one of the best they had ever heard, and the only regret was that there were not more present to hear it. The Rev's Mr. Runnells and Crawford spoke briefly their appreciation of Mr. Moore's timely word. The officers of the local branch were re-elected for another year. The meeting was closed by singing and the benediction.

A DESTRUCTIVE FIRE

Exhibition Buildings at Toronto Were Burned.

A despatch from Toronto says. Apparently insignificant at the outset, a fire which broke out on the Canadian Exposition Grounds on Thursday night under the influence of a brisk breeze assumed gigantic proportions, and in a few hours had swept from the eastern to the western boundaries. Commencing at the large grand stand the flames reduced it to a heap of smouldering ruins, spread to the first tier of stables, of which it demolished seven, leaped to the Transportation Building, and destroyed it in a miraculously short space of time. The blaze broke out in the east end of the grand stand at about 10 o'clock, but apparently remained unobserved for some time, for it was 10.24 before the alarm was given at Queen and Lisgar Streets, by some one who had noticed the bright reflection which colored the sky. The force which responded proved inadequate and at 11 o'clock the whole city brigade was summoned.

At the outset the wind blew strongly from the south-east, and the huge grand stand, composed largely of wood, burned with great rapidity. Before it sank into a heap of embers and twisted girders, however, tongues of fire leaped across the road at the rear of the building and ignited the first of the tiers of stables to the north. These, also constructed of wood, burned fiercely and for a time it seemed probable that the whole block, with the large wooden Women's Building, Poultry House, Dog Building, etc., would be destroyed. Providence intervened, however. The wind shifted so that it blew directly from the east, not, however, before five of the stables had been totally consumed and several others stood in ruins. In some of the stables were stabled a number of horses belonging to Graham Bros., Claremont, and a number of the chargers of the members of the Royal Canadian Dragoons. These were all released and ran aimlessly about the grounds.

FIRE SPREADS WEST.

With the change in the wind it seemed that the conflagration was under control, as a large open space seemed to check the advance of the flames. The firemen were gathered to the west of the still fiercely-glowing cauldron of fire, and were endeavoring to extinguish it when a cry arose from the crowds, who were observing the scenes from every point of vantage, that the Transportation Building was alight. The old Crystal Palace was fairly alight, and was soon blazing merrily. It was 11.30 o'clock when the building was ignited. In three-quarters of an hour the old Main Building, once the pride of the Exhibition directors, was practically destroyed. All efforts to save it were fruitless, for the numerous panes of glass in the walls broke with resounding cracks and served as draughts to fan the flames.

The old building, which has witnessed many a scene of splendor, furnished to the drenched onlooker a much more striking picture in its destruction than ever before in its history. Every window, and they are legion, was outlined in black against a gorgeous background of fire. As the flames seized upon the roof they leaped high in the air, scattering embers in every direction, and making a fearsome pyrotechnic display. Finally dull crashes were heard, and the roof began to fall,, the girders sank to the ground, and all that remained was a number of scattered black pillars of iron, like giant arms stretched imploringly to the scarlet sky. The wooden buildings to the north were apparently never in danger, but it seemed for a time the home of Park Commissioner Chambers, which stands at the western limit of the grounds, would go.

LOSS AND INSURANCE.

The loss is approximately estimated at $125,000. The insurance on the Transportation Building is $40,000 and on the grand stand, kitchen, lunchrooms, ticket-boxes, and entrance to grand stand and fences, $54,000. In respect to the horse stables there is an insurance of $1,670 on each on Nos. 1 to 12 and 14 to 18, and Nos. 22 to 25 $4,000 each. On the cattle sheds there is an insurance of $1,000 each.

The insurance is placed by the city, and there are 48 companies participating in the total amount, which is placed at $1,773,913, the insurance being divided into 100 parts or shares.

MANGLED BY EXPLOSION.

Dynamite Causes a Tragedy Near Belleville.

A despatch from Belleville says: Between the hours of 4 and 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon Wm. Bowler and George Rion, two employes of the Belleville Portland Cement Works, met instantaneous and terrible death. The two men were engaged in tamping a hole filled with dynamite, preparatory to blasting rock for the manufacture of cement, when an explosion of great violence occurred, caused, it is supposed, by one of the men shifting a percussion cap. Bowler was thrown some 60 feet. He was terribly mutilated and not a vestige of clothing remained on the body. Both feet and hands were blown off and rocks were embedded in the body. Rion was thrown some 80 feet in an opposite direction, the body landing in a tree and finally falling to the ground. He was decapitated and parts of the body were picked up at some distance from where the explosion occurred. Rion was a widower, 32 years of age, his wife having died only three weeeks ago. Two little girls are thus orphaned. Bowler was 19 years of age, son of Mr. Geo. Bowler, who resides near the works.

GOLD IN THE NORTHLAND.

Many Claims Staked in the Larder Lake District.

A despatch from Toronto says: The discovery of gold in the vicinity of Larder Lake, which is about fifty miles north of Cobalt, and between the Blanche River and the Quebec-Ontario boundary line, has led to a rush to the district. Already some 250 claims have been staked, and applications for more are coming in. The district is reached by wagon road and trail from the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway. The gold appears to occur in small quartz stringers, which are numerous in places, though not all of them are gold bearing, and it has not yet been determined whether the rock as a whole will be payable to work.

GRUESOME TRAGEDY.

Twenty-three Chinamen Fell a Thousand Feet.

A despatch from Johannesburg, Transvaal, says: The rope of a cage which was descending the East Simmer gold mine here on Saturday snapped and the cage fell a thousand feet. Twenty-three Chinese laborers, who were being lowered into the mine, were dashed to pieces.

KITCHENER TO VISIT CANADA?

Report That He Will Reorganize the Land Forces.

A despatch from London says: It is rumored in India that Lord Kitchener on the expiration of his term in India will visit Australia and afterwards Canada with the object of putting the land forces on a satisfactory basis.

NEW GRAIN CARRIER.

The Steamer Dundee Launched on the Clyde.

A despatch from London says: The steamer Dundee, specially built for the Mackay interests of Hamilton for grain trade on the great lakes, was launched on the Clyde on Wednesday.

VESTIBULE DOOR WAS LOCKED.

Mr. Homer Taylor Falls Off a Train and Is Killed.

A despatch from Montreal says: Mr. Homer Taylor, of this city, dealer in railway supplies, while returnig home from Ottawa on Saturday got off the train at Alexandria to lunch, and started back just after the wheels had begun to revolve. By the time he reached the platform the train was going at a pretty good speed, but he managed to catch the hand-bar of the last car and swing up to the platform. Unfortunately it was a vestibuled parlor car, and the door of the vestibule was shut. No doubt Mr. Taylor expected some one to come and open the door, but no one came at first, and the train increased its speed, so that the man on the step outside dared not jump off. About five miles out from Alexandria a passenger happened to see a figure clinging to the hand-bar, he ran into the vestibule to open the door. The man outside was already swaying, so no time was to be lost, but the door would not open. Then the porter was called. He managed to get the door open, but just as he reached forward to grip the coat sleeve the fingers relaxed, and the body was hurled into the ditch. The train was stopped and a few hundred feet back the body was found lying at the side of the track quite lifeless. Mr. Taylor was one of the oldest members of the Commercial Travellers' Association.

EARTHQUAKES IN MAINE.

Two Shocks Destroy Part of a Temporary Bridge.

A despatch from Portland, Me., says: Two earthquake shocks destroyed about one hundred feet of the temporary highway structure known as Vaughan's bridge, which crosses the upper harbor, on Saturday night. The first shock was felt at 6 o'clock, the second at 7.07. Both shocks were light, but were distinctly felt. It is feared that great damage has been done to the foundation of the new highway bridge nearby, for which a quarter of a million dollars was appropriated recently.

SHOT THROUGH BREAST.

A Young Farm Hand Was Killed at Metcalfe.

A despatch from Ottawa says: A young farm hand from Englewood named Harry Cummings, aged 23, was shot and instantly killed at Metcalfe on Thursday. Cummings with two others was out shooting, when one of the party handed him a loaded rifle. In the act of taking the weapon it went off, and the charge entered Cummings' breast, killing him instantly. A sad feature about the case is that a brother is on his way out from the old country to join deceased.

CUBA STORM-SWEPT.

Fears Are Entertained for Numerous Vessels.

A despatch from Washington says: A tropical storm passed over Cuba on Thursday. All Cuba and the Southern Atlantic coast of the United States have been swept by one of the wildest hurricanes known to the tropics. It is believed great loss of life and damage resulted. Wires are wrecked along the Florida coast. It is known the devastation extends as far north as North Carolina. Great fears are entertained for the City of Havana and numerous vessels that were out when the storm broke.

DEATH AT SILVER WEDDING.

Two Dead, Many Seriously Ill, Near Caledonia.

A despatch from Caledonia says: Two people dead with 85 made more or less seriously ill, is the outcome of a feast held a short while ago near here at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hector Foster, to celebrate their silver wedding. Chickens were served, dressed with gelatine and boiled in copper pots. Shortly afterwards, some within a day and others in lesser or greater periods, the guests were stricken down.

It was first thought to be an epidemic of typhoid fever, and Drs. Maw and Morrow were called. Some of them quickly recovered from the effects — others did not recover, two succumbing. One was Mrs. Ferguson, wife of Rev. Mr. Ferguson, and the other was Mrs. Foster, mother of Hector Foster.

Of those who are critically ill, Rev. Mr. Ferguson is considered to be the worst. His condition is extremely critical. Hector Foster, his wife, and two children were taken ill, and required medical attendance. Fred Foster, his brother, was also ill, and his family suffered. Mrs. Wm. Murray and children were stricken down.

John Sen, of York, was in a critical condition. Allan and Mrs. Anderson were ill, but recovered after a brief illness. Miss Laidman, Blackheath, was also stricken, but is not regarded in danger. A couple of hired men were laid low, but their recovery was quick. It is reported that ten people in one family were ill as the result of eating the chicken.

ISLAND ENGULFED.

250 People Drowned at Elliott's Key, Florida.

A despatch from Miami, Fla., says: Elliott's Key, an island 25 miles south of here, was swept clean by the waves thrown up by the cyclone of Thursday, and 250 people drowned. The steamship St. Lucie was crushed against the island and 25 of its passengers killed. A barge, which was lying alongside a wharf of the key, was torn from its moorings and 50 of the 100 persons on board were drowned. A steamship reached here on Friday night with 60 wounded, among them Capt. Bravo, of the St. Lucie, who brings the information. He is badly injured. Capt. Bravo says that he anchored on the lee side of Elliott's Key on Thursday morning, and soon after the waves engulfed the island.

It is believed now that a portion of the Florida Fish and Produce Company's fleet were destroyed, and Manager Adams sent out one of their boats on Friday morning to look for the men and their boats. On their return they reported no sign of the fleet.

ASPHYXIATED IN HOTEL ROOM.

Oil Springs Man Found Dead in Bed at Sarnia.

A despatch from Sarnia says: Alexander McFadyn, of Oil Springs, aged 48 years, was found dead on Sunday morning in his room at the Hotel Northern here as a result of asphyxiation. He arrived in Sarnia on Friday evening, registered, and, after being assigned to his room, was not seen again. In the morning on Saturday the chambermaid spoke to the proprietor, Joseph Peterson, asking why the room was not open, but Mr. Peterson supposed he was feeling tired. Later he asked the porter if Mr. McFadyn was around and was told he had gone out. Nothing more was thought of him until Sunday morning, when a smell of gas was noticed and the door was broken in. Deceased was found in bed and the gas jet was turned on. It is supposed that in turning off the electric light on the combination fixture he had accidentally touched the tap of the gas, which worked very lightly.

JAPAN FOMENTING TROUBLE.

An Anti-British Yarn Published by Russian Agency.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: The St. Petersburg telegraph agency has received a despatch from Tokio saying that the anti-British movement in India is receiving much encouragement from Japan, where every effort is being made to foster a feeling of kinship between the two dark races, and to preach the lessons of the Russo-Japanese War. The Buddhists of the two countries are fraternizing and exchanging visits, and steps are being taken to encourage the coming of Hindoo students into Japan, where they will be surrounded with an almosphere of disaffection.

The Hindoo students now in Tokio, the correspondent of the agency continues, have just published an address, in which they appeal to India to heed the call of "Asia for the Asiatics," and to rise and cast off the British yoke.

Taking advantage of this Anglophobe foment, certain merchants of Japan have sent a mission to India to endeavor to supplant the boycotted British merchandise with Japanese goods. The efforts are meeting with a warm welcome.

RUSSIA WANTS A DREADNOUGHT.

The Finance Minister Refused to Provide Funds.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: The Admiralty intends to build a battleship of the Dreadnought type. In order to overcome Minister of Finance Kokovseff's refusal to supply him with funds Vice-Admiral Birileff, Minister of Marine, appealed direct to Emperor Nocholas, who brushed obstacles aside and ordered M. Kokovseff to transfer to Admiral Birileff $9,000,000.

OVER TWO HUNDRED DROWNED.

Russian Steamer Sunk While Leaving Vladivostock.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: While the Russian steamer Varygin was leaving Vladivostock on Sunday she struck a floating mine, and was so badly damaged by the explosion that followed that she sank in two minutes. She had on board 200 passengers, all of whom, with one exception, were drowned. The crew went down with the steamer.

ONTARIO HEALTH RETURNS.

Typhoid the Only Contagious Disease Very Prevalent.

The returns regarding the province's health during September are satisfactory in every regard but that of typhoid fever. Dr. Hodgetts, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, gave out the following statement on Thursday:

The health of the province, based on the returns for September of 750 division registrars, so far as deaths caused by contagious diseases are concerned, may be considered satisfactory, with the exception of typhoid fever, which generally becomes more prevalent during the fall months. In New Ontario this disease assumed an epidemic form in some localities, eight towns and villages having reported 277 cases and 25 deaths from a population of 22,264, a death-rate of 1.12 in 1,000. This is much higher than was reported from thirteen cities and towns in the older settled parts of Ontario, where 215 cases and 23 deaths were reported from a population of 384,476, the death-rate being only 0.05. While the returns from 750 divisions give 668 cases and 83 deaths, the mortality is much lower for September, 1905, the figures being respectively 12.4 and 16.1.

It will be observed that smallpox, scarlet fever and diphtheria have reached a low point.

The total deaths from all causes are 2,381 from a population of 2,070,613, which makes the death-rate 13.79 in 1,000.

SERIOUS FRACAS IN TORONTO.

Dominic Trivari Was Wounded in the Right Thigh.

A Toronto despatch says: Thursday afternoon Louis Gurofsky of the Elm Street branch postoffice was gashed on the left ear and cheek with a knife, and Dominic Trivara, an Italian, 25 years old, of 226 Teraulay Street, received a bullet wound in the right leg. Gurofsky's brother, Joseph W., is under arrest, charged with doing the shooting. The trouble was the outcome of the Gurofsky brothers' father David being jostled off the sidewalk in front of his home, 174 Chestnut Street, about 4 o'clock, by three Italians. Taking his whip he used it on one of the three, whereupon a knife was drawn. Mr. Gurofsky's coat bears marks of a knife, and his daughter says she was followed up on the steps of the cottage and brutally assaulted. A boy who saw the trouble rushed down to the postoffice on Agnes Street and summoned Louis Gurofsky, who returned with a revolver. The Italians gave him two knife wounds in the ear and face and took the weapon from him. Louis was running with the Italians at his heels when his brother came to his assistance with another revolver. By this time a great crowd of people had gathered and excitement ran high. There was a pitched battle at Edward and Chestnut Streets, and a riot call was sent into the Agnes Street station. Constable Robinson arrested Joseph Gurofsky. His 38-calibre revolver had five empty chambers. The weapon taken from Louis Gurofsky had not been fired off. Crown Attorney Corley refused an application for bail.

COOKED AND ATE WIFE.

Revolting Story of the Doings of King Than-Thai.

A despatch from Marseilles, France, says: The mail advices which reached here on Wednesday from Indo-China brought another and more revolting story of the doings of King Than-Thai of Annam, showing that he went to the extent of cannibalism. After killing one of his wives he caused the body to be cooked and served up for dinner, forcing his entourage to eat it, under pain of death. Some of the King's wives were bound and burned with boiling oil, and subjected to other cruelty, while naked women were thrown into the cages of wild beasts, where they were devoured before the King. Finally the French authorities made him a prisoner. He has been adjudged insane by Dr. Dumas of the French colonial staff. The "Royal Guard" has been disbanded, the palace has been placed under the protection of 150 native soldiers, and the terror-stricken inmates of the palace have been rescued from sufferings. The majority of the latter were women, who bore the marks of revolting tortures. Some of them were terribly mutilated, their faces being slashed and tongues cut out, while others had been suspended by pincers attached to the fleshy parts of their legs, to increase their agonies.

THREE MONTHS' COMMERCE.

Increase of $22,408,173 for First Quarter of Fiscal Year.

The imports amounted to $78,408,244, an increase of $13,095,738. Exports of domestic produce totalled for the quarter $61,938,024, being an increase of $9,312,435 for the three months' period. The duty collected on imports was $12,587,199, as compared with $11,213,696 collected during the first quarter of the last fiscal year. The foregoing statement takes no count of exports of foreign goods or of coin and bullion imports.

REMARKABLE WRECK-RAISING.

A somewhat unusual operation in wreck-raising has been carried out in Kiel harbor. Some time since the torpedo-boat "S 126" sank in port after collision with another war-vessel, and notwithstanding the known condition of the sunken boat, the authorities decided to have it brought to the surface. For this purpose two floating cranes of formidable dimensions were utilized, and the broken and twisted hull was fished up from the depths and swung through the air like a bale of merchandise to a lighter, on which it was laid. The boat was of steel, and it is proposed seriously to essay and turn the aparently inextricable mass to some use.

NEW ELECTRICAL HOME

MAKES HOUSEKEEPING A JOY AND PLEASURE.

A Wealthy Man of Schenectady, N. Y., Has the Most Complete Outfit in His House.

Time, 7 a.m. The electrical awakening alarm over Katie's bed goes off, and she opens her eyes languidly. But, with a sudden realization that the master's breakfast must be ready in half an hour, she becomes more awake, and, reaching one hand from the bed, she touches a button embedded in the wall nearby. This button is marked "Tea Kettle." Then Katie touches in succession other buttons, labelled "Porridge," "Oven," and "Bath."

Leisurely she arises, dons her clothing, and goes downstairs. In the kitchen the tea kettle is boiling merrily, the perridge is steaming away in its receptacle, and as she opens the oven the blast of heat indicates that all is ready for placing the breakfast rolls, made the night before, in the oven for quick baking.

Upstairs the master can be heard splashing in his morning bath, which has been heated to just the right temperature. In a few minutes another maid comes downstairs, sets the table, and promptly at 7.30, when the master appears in the dining room, breakfast is set upon the table, prepared to perfection.

Who did it? Katie was the "first one up" in all the house. Then who started the kettle boiling? Who turned on the fire under the porridge steamer? Who got the oven ready? One extra servant, an unpaid, unfed servant, who never sleeps, but is always at the call of anyone who will touch the button. And the servant's name is Electricity!

The house is the Electric House. It is no fancy dwelling, for with the advance in electricity is has become quite possible. Indeed, one such residence already exists and is quite successful. A Mr. H. W. Hillman, a wealthy man of Schenectady, N. Y., is the inventor, and owner, and occuppant of the House of Electricity.

IN THE KITCHEN.

In kitchen appliances the Hillman house surpasses all others in the perfection and up-to-dateness of its electrical equipment. And if a cook cannot be contented in this house, she can be contented nowhere.

This is an age when the science of man is bent on saving the precious moments, and in the Hillman home no time is lost. The electric kitchen equipment is simplicity itself. It consists of a wooden table equipped with many regulating switches for turning the current on and off. Three heats can be given—the maximum, medium and minimum. In the morning the girl turns a switch in her room when she gets up, and by the time she is dressed the tea kettle is boiling, the electrical frying pan and coffee pot are as soon ready, and breakfast can be cooked in less than half the time usually consumed with the gas or coal stove. The three heat switches are used, so that the cooked food can be kept warm until used.

Water can be heated, and an egg cooked on the stove in the wonderful time of three and three-quarter minutes. Other cooking utensils are equally as fast, and prepare the food in a manner to tickle the palate of an epicure. The oven can be heated ready for baking in less than fifteen minutes. Most interesting about the kitchen utensils is the fact that so many combinations have been arranged. The hot-water heater is later used to cook the porridge, then to boil the eggs, and later the potatoes are steamed in it.

In the laundry, in the basement, the nine-gallon water boiler keeps a steady supply of hot water, all the machinery is run by electricity and the clothes are ironed by a six-pound electric flat iron, which is always ready for work.

THE DINING-ROOM

is equipped with a small table wired for the chafing dish and coffee percolator, where pleasant evening dishes can be made.

All the rooms of the house are heated with the luminous electric radiators. The radiators are instantaneous, and as soon as the switch is turned the fire glows and throws out a strong heat. They give more heat than any gas heater, do not use the oxygen in the room, and are far cheaper, costing less than seven cents an hour for heat.

The bathroom is replete with electrical inventions and conveniences. Water in the bath tub is heated quickly with an immense coil. In forty seconds water can be heated in the shaving mug.

The miscellaneous electrical contrivances about this house are almost without number, and are being added to every day. The sewing is done on a sewing machine run by a small motor, and a little three-pound electrical flat-iron in the sewing-room is more than useful; it is a necessity. An electrical massage motor is another device. There is also the electric heating pad, which takes the place of the old hot-water bottle. It is as light as a blanket, and can be kept for hours at the same temperature.

Matches in the house are an unknown quantity. Cigar-lighters on the verandah, in the den—the only places where matches would be used—remove every excuse for a match in the house. There are also telephones upstairs and down.

A great many of the devices mentioned can be used in almost any home where electric lights are used, such as the shaving-mug, tea and coffee pots, chafing-dish, flat-irons, cigar-lighter, sewing machine motor and laundry iron.

COULD SCARCELY WALK.

A Rheumatic Sufferer Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Rheumatism is rooted in the blood—that is a medical fact every poor rheumatic sufferer should know. Liniments and outward applications cannot possibly cure rheumatism. They are a waste of money, and while the sufferer is using them the disease is steadily growing worse—is slowly but surely taking a firmer grasp upon the entire system. Rheumatism must be treated through the blood. That is the only way in which the poisonous acid can be driven out. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood and thus always cure rheumatism. Every dose of these pills helps to make new rich red blood which sweeps the poisonous acid from the system, loosens the aching joints and muscles and gives the rheumatic new health free from pain. Among those who can bear witness to the truth of these statements is Miss Dorsina Langlois, of St. Jerome, Que., for weary months she suffered from rheumatism and had begun to think she was incurable. "I could not straighten up," says Miss Langlois. "My limbs were almost useless, so stiff were they. For many months I endured such pains as only rheumatic sufferers can understand. Although only thirty years of age the suffering I endured actually made me look like an old woman. I used liniments and tried several medicines, but got not the slightest help until almost by chance my attention was directed to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I began taking them and in the course of a few weeks I could see they were helping me. Little by little the pain began to go, and the stiffness to leave my joints. I continued taking the pills for several months when every symptom of the trouble had disappeared. I have not felt a twinge of rheumatism since, and I bless the day Dr. Williams' Pink Pills came to my notice."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills never fail to cure rheumatism because they go right to the root of the trouble in the blood. That is why these pills cure all the common ailments due to poor and watery blood, such as anaemia, headaches and backaches, indigestion, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, general weakness, and the distressing irregularities that afflict women and growing girls. If you need a medicine you will save money by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once. See that the full name, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is printed on the wrapper around every box. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SCOURGE OF AFRICA.

Cure for Sleeping Sickness Said to Have Been Found.

Two Europeans are reported to have been cured of sleeping sickness in the Watermael Hospital.

The authorities decline to give details at present, but it is understood that the treatment consisted of the injection of strychnine and atoyrl.

British, French and German investigations have been made in Africa to combat this strange disease, which has swept away hundreds of thousands of natives. Hitherto it has been regarded as incurable.

Its ravages have been described by Livingstone, Selous and other pioneers of exploration on the Dark Continent, and Col. David Bruce discovered that it was caused by the parasite "trypanosoma," which is carried by the tsetse fly.

The disease is at first often put down to laziness, but develops until the victim cannot keep himself awake, and may fall asleep at any time, even while eating. He wastes to a skeleton, and in eight months at the outside is a dead man.

A THANKFUL MOTHER.

"I thank you with all my heart for what Baby's Own Tablets have done for my little girl," says Mrs. Antoine Charette, Jr., of St. Boniface, Que. "When I began giving her the Tablets she seemed to be pining away, but after using less than a box she was rapidly gaining and she is now a fine, fat, healthy little one, and I write you this as the acknowledgement of a mother who will never forget what Baby's Own Tablets have done for her child." Letters like this must bring hope and comfort to all mothers who have feeble or sickly children. Baby's Own Tablets will cure all the minor ailments and can be given just as safely to a new born baby as to a well grown child. If you cannot get these Tablets from your dealer write The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and get them at 25c a box.

IGNORANCE.

"Well, Harry," said the hostess to her small guest, "did you rest well last night?"

"I don't know," answered Harry.

"You don't know!" echoed the lady.

"No, ma'am," replied the little chap, "I was asleep all the time."

FROM BONNIE SCOTLAND

NOTES OF INTEREST FROM HER BANKS AND BRAES.

What Is Going On In the Highlands and Lowlands of Auld Scotia.

Major E. W. Blunt, the husband of the Countess of Cromartie, has assumed the name of Blunt-Mackenzie. Her surname, like that of her son, Vicount Tarbat, remains Mackenzie.

The largest quantity of fish that has ever been brought to Kirkwall during a peroid of four days, was landed there recently, 13 large Grimsby trawlers landing 200 tons of fish.

The top stairs in a house in Walmer Crescent, Ibrox, a fashionable Glasgow suburb, collapsed the other day, and brought down the lower staircase. The tenants were rescued by means of a fire-escape.

The coming of age of Mr. John Peter Grant, jr., of Rothiemurchus, son of Sheriff Grant of Rothiemurchus, was celebrated by several functions held at the Doune House, Rothiemurchus, near Aviemore.

The death has occurred at Berwick of Mr. Thomas George Turner, a well-known townsman. Mr. Turner was 74 years of age. He had been for the past quarter of a century secretary of the Berwick and Tweedmouth Gas Company.

Sir Wm. White is a believer in the turbine for maritime propulsion purposes. In a lecture on the 26th ult in London, on "Modern Warships" he refered to the turbine machinery of the Clydebank-built Cunarder Carmania as a marvel of modern engineering. He expressed satisfaction that the turbine is to be adopted in all new British war vessels.

After six years' waiting, the Victoria cross and donation, together with the usual annuity, has been received by John Ross, who was a trooper in the Highland Mounted Infantry at Paardeberg, and at great personal risk ran to a wounded officer's aid and carried him out of the zone of fire. The incident was seen by General Lyttelton. Ross is now a gardener in the employment of an Elgin nurseryman. He is 33 years of age and a native of Aberdeen.

Information has been received at Stornoway of the death at Lucerne of Mr. William Lees, an old and well-known citizen of Stornoway. The deceased, who was 84 years of age, was in his early life a shipmaster, having served his apprenticeship with his father, who was a well-known master mariner, sailing out of Stornoway in his own vessel, in which he visited nearly all parts of the world. After his retiring from the sea, Mr. Lees was appointed harbormaster and collector at Stornoway.

Mr. George Ferguson, the oldest master joiner in Glasgow, has died at his residence in Lenzie. Born eighty-four years ago at Carstairs, deceased became a joiner on his own account as far back as 1846, and among his contracts were Coats' Spinning Mills, Paisley; Kelvingrove Art Galleries, and the Technical College. He was a widely travelled man, and was a keen curler and bowler.

The Docks and Pilotage Committee of the Aberdeen Harbor Board reported that they had under consideration the subject of providing an additional pontoon dock. They recommended that, as suggested by the harbor engineer, the dock should be 150 feet long, 42 feet wide, with draft on keel blocks 16 feet, and a lifting capacity (deadweight) of 600 tons, to cost £17.850.

There has passed away in her hundredth year Miss Macrae, who resided with her nephew, Bailie Macrae, Beechwood, Nairn. She retained all her faculties up to the last, and could tell many stories relating to stirring times of last century. Miss Macrae was present in Ferintosh Church when the joyful news of Wellington's victory at Waterloo was announced, and she could recall the rejoicings in Aberdeen on the coronation of Queen Victoria.

WISE.

Mother—Now, Isidor, go and give the new governess a kiss.

Isidor—No, thank you, not me. I know her. She will give me a slap on the face like she did papa.

DO NOT ALLOW yourself to become alarmed because you have lost your appetite and are losing flesh, but commence taking "Ferrovim" the best tonic. It will build you up quickly.

Ethel: "I rather like that young Doubleday. He has a good firm mouth and chin." Myrtle: "Goodness! Has he been kissing you, too?"

There can be a difference of opinion on most subjects, but there is only one opinion as to the reliability of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. It is safe, sure and effectual.

A gentleman who was on a visit to Niagara (when the car raised and lowered by steam-power was in use) went into the starting-house to witness the descent, being too timid to go down himself. After the car started, fully impressed with the danger, he turned to the man in charge, and said, "Suppose the rope should break?" "Oh," replied the man, who had no eye for anything but business, "they all paid before they went!"

NO COLORS IN ACTION.

Some people may not know that colors are now taken into action. Before a regiment proceeds on service, the colors are placed in safe custody as suits such honorable insignia, and "when Tommy comes marching home again" they will be all the fresher for not being carried through dusty lands and trying rivers. The men whose duty it would have been to carry them and stand by them to the last are nowadays employed in less sentimental, if more useful, duties.

It Needs no Testimonial.—It is a guarantee in itself. If testimonials were required they could be furnished in thousands from all sorts and conditions of men in widely different places. Many medicines are put forth every year which have but an ephemeral existence and then are heard of no more. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has grown in reputation every day since it first made its appearance.

Harry: "Blanche says she has insuperable reasons for remaining single." Horace: "Yes, I know what they are." Harry: "Then she has told you?" Horace: "No; but I have seen her."

MONTH AFTER MONTH a cold sticks, and seems to tear holes in your throat. Are you aware that even a stubborn and long-neglected cold is cured with Allen's Lung Balsam? Cough and worry no longer.

Ferdinand: "And do you really love me?" Penelope: "Love you, Ferdinand? Why, only yesterday papa asked me if I wouldn't sooner have a pug dog, and I refused!"

Are you a sufferer with corns? If you are, get a bottle of Holloway's Corn Cure. It has never been known to fail.

"Madam," said the master of the house, authoritatively, "when I put my foot down it stays there!" But the little tack on which he brought it down took all the point out of his illustration.

THE JAPS did it. They supplied the Menthol found in the "D & L" Menthol Plaster, which relieves instantly backache, headache, neuralgia, rheumatism and sciatica.

Mrs. Hastymatch: "I had a dozen proposals before yours. And from smarter men than you, too" Mr. Hastymatch: "They must have been. How did they manage to crawl out of it?"

Be There a Will Wisdom Points the Way.—The sick man pines for relief, but he dislikes sending for the doctor, which means bottles of drugs never consumed. He has not the resolution to load his stomach with compounds which smell villainously and taste worse. But if he have the will to deal himself with his ailment, wisdom will direct his attention to Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which, as a specific for indigestion and disorders of the digestive organs, have no equal.

A CLOUD OF HAY.

At Sprimont, in Belgium, on June 7th, an hour before noon, people at work in offices were surprised by a sudden darkness which obscured their rooms. Going outdoors, they saw above the centre of the town a dense cloud, like a great mattress, which hid the sun. Here and there the extraordinary cloud was gathered into thick flocculent masses, from which filaments were seen falling to the earth. These filaments turned out to be sprays of hay, and in a short time they lay thick in the market-place. The cloud was composed of a great quantity of hay, which had been carried up into the sky by a whirlwind, and then transported to a great distance by the wind. The cloud drove from north to south, and occupied nearly 10 minutes in passing over the town.

1,066 acres of clean unbroken prairie, the finest wheat land on earth, on the banks of the Red River, 45 miles from Winnipeg, four miles from two railway stations. $15 an acre takes it, $5,000 cash, balance easy. No better farm, no better investment.

"His wife is very accomplished. She can cook or play a piano with equal facility." "That is an accomplishment. I have never before heard of anyone cooking a piano."

A Clear Healthy Skin.—Eruptions of the skin and the blotches which blemish beauty are the result of impure blood caused by unhealthy action of the liver and kidneys. In correcting this unhealthy action and restoring the organs to their normal condition, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will at the same time cleanse the blood, and the blotches and eruptions will disappear without leaving any trace.

Passer-by: "I thought you were blind?" Mendicant: "Well, mister, times is so hard and competition is so great, that even a blind man has to keep his eyes open if he wants to do any business at all."

A SKIN THAT BURNS with eczema, and is covered with eruptions that discharge a thin fluid, may be made smooth and sightly with Weaver's Cerate. But this external remedy should be used in conjunction with Weaver's Syrup.

Mistress: "Bridget, I don't suppose you mind having dear little Fido in the kitchen with you when we go out?" Bridget: "No, mum; Oi loike t' have him here. Y'see, whin things go wrong an' Oi gits me dander up it's a moighty big relief to have something to kick 'round."

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhœa, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

SEEMINGLY.

"Life," moralized the doctor, "is not what it seems."

"Perhaps," suggested the professor, "you have never looked on the seamy side of it."

Mother—"I hear that Mr. Jones had the impudence to kiss you at the station. What did you do?" Daughter—"Oh, I kissed him too, so as to make the people think we were relatives."

The Molsons Bank.

The Molsons Bank, the report of whose annual meeting, the first in its second half-century of existence, appears elsewhere in this paper, is one of those magnificiently solid financial institutions which shows a reserve of one hundred per cent upon their capital, a regular dividend at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, and a volume of business which makes an enlargement of the capital highly desirable and keeps the officers hustling to attend to it. One inkling of the way in which these eminently desirable results are produced is shown in the report submitted on Monday, Oct. 15th, 1906, in which $29,000 was shown as taken from the profit and loss account for bonuses to officer's state of things, which could readily be afforded, seeing that the net profits of the year, previous to this deduction, were $35,000 higher than the year before. The total sum in the bank's charge this year shows an increase of $2,000,000, which just about shows the increase in interest-bearing deposits and shows that the old bank is not to be elbowed out by any new-fangled methods. The projected half-million stock issue is the second since the vote of 1903, authorizing an increase to $5,000,000, by $500,000 at a time.

The Late Mrs. Oliver Smyth.

After a long and painful illness Mrs. Oliver Smyth passed peacefully away to her reward on Saturday last. Her sickness, which was of such a strange nature, was borne with patience and complete trust in her Saviour. She was ever waiting for the divine summons to come home. She will be greatly missed not only in the home, but by the poor to whom she was always a friend. She leaves to mourn her loss eight children, viz: Mrs. C. Ford, Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Freeland, British Columbia; Mrs Dr. G. Cook, Toronto; Mrs. Wm. Locke, Irena; Samuel, Dundela; Lindsay and George, Rowena; and a number of grandchildren.

The funeral service which took place from her late residence, was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Lundy of North Williamsburg, after which the remains were placed in the family cemetery. The sorrowing friends have the deepest sympathy of the whole community in their bereavement.—Morrisburg Leader.

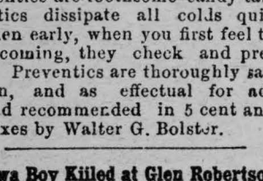
Ottawa Boy Killed at Glen Robertson.

Andrew Graham, son of Mr. John Graham, roadmaster on the G. T. R., residence 17 Park avenue, Ottawa, fell from the van of a work train at Glen Robertson station on the G. T. R, and was killed, being run over by the car. The accident occurred about 9 o'clock Friday morning. He was standing in the rear door of the van and the train was backing up slowly, when he fell out. He was run over by the van before it could be stopped and died almost immediately.

The Harvest Tea a Success.

The annual Harvest Home tea of the Morewood Presbyterian congregation, was held in Morewood on Thanksgiving evening. There was a large crowd present. Mr. John Hodson of Finch, Miss Lois Wallace of Metcalfe, Mr. Loucks of Morewood, Mr. Rondeau of Casselman, and the Morewood choir, furnished a very acceptable program. About $71 was netted by the entertainment.



Only part of the wheat berry is fit for food. Yet much that isn't often gets into flour. You cannot see it or taste it, but it's there. It is simply a case of the miller getting more flour from his wheat and your getting less nourishment.

The Late Patrick Gormley.

On Tuesday of last week death removed one of Morrisburg's old landmarks in the person of Patrick Gormley, postmaster. He had suffered a stroke of paralysis some time ago, since when his strength had gradually diminished, and he was confided to his bed some time prior to his death.

The late Patrick Gormley was born at Alexandria, Glengarry county, in 1836. In 1861 he married Mary, daughter of the late Cornelius Flinn. Eight children blessed their union, two—Leo and Annie, having predeceased him. They are Wm. and Frank, Butte, Mont.; George and Vincent, Nelson, B. C.; Mrs. W. H. McGannon and John, of Morrisburg.

Mr. Gormley was identified with the early history of Morrisburg, having been in business there with the late Thomas Dardis and the late Alfred Clement. In 1874 he was appointed postmaster, under the Mackenzie regime, succeeding James Holden, deceased, and his duties in that position were performed with eminent satisfaction to the public. The deceased enjoyed the friendship of a large circle, and by his courteous and obliging manner and strict integrity he was held in high esteem by all classes in the community. Mr. Gormley's home was ever open to the young people who wanted a jolley evening, and there was no amusement into which he and Mrs. Gormley did not enter most enthusiastically with their guests.

The funeral took place at 9 o'clock Thursday morning at St. Mary's church, where for so many years he had worship ped, a solemn high mass being celebrated by Rev. Dr. Salmon. The pall-bearers were Messrs. M. C. Gibson, William Meikle, Andrew Broder, M. P., Thomas Campbell, Johiel Derosiers and Thomas McDonald.

Edgerton—McLean.

On Wednesday, Oct. 17th, 1906, one of the prettiest home weddings of the season was celebrated at the residence of Mr. Wm McLean, of this place, when his daughter, Jennie C., was united in holy wedlock to Wilburn, son of Mr. John Edgerton, of this place, the nuptial knot being tied by the Rev. Mr. Mason, Presbyterian minister of Dunbar. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Bertha McLean, who acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. John Nottell ably filled the position of best man. Promptly at three o'clock and to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Ada McLean, the bridal party entered the parlor, the bride leaning on the arm of her father, and took their respective positions under a magnificient arch of ever-greens and autumn leaves, decorated with flowers and maiden hair ferns. The bride looked charming in a handsome costume of mauve silk gloria, the bodice having a cream silk over-lace yoke and applique trimming, and wore a boquet of white floss and maiden hair fern in her hair, while the bridesmaid wore a beautiful gown of pearl grey, trimmed with over-lace and medallions. It is needless to say only a few minutes elapsed before the two were made one, and joined with a ring, never to be separated. After congratulations had been given and received, the invited guests were invited to the dining room, where a beautifully decorated table awaited them, and, after singing the Doxology, all sat down to do ample justice to the good things provided for the occasion. Miss Minnie McLean, aunt of the bride, did the duties of mistress of ceremonies, and Miss Lulu McLean entertained the guests with vocal and instrumental music. After tea the newly wedded couple left on the local train amid showers of rice for points west on their honeymoon.

The bride's going away suit was pearl grey cloth, with reseda green trimming over a white silk blouse, and wore a grey hat to match. The presents were very elaborate; among them were noticed some from Ottawa, Iroquois, Gouverneur, N.Y., Athens and Chicago.

The RECORD with a host of friends, all join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Edgerton bon voyage on the ocean of life.

On their return they were tendered a reception at the home of the groom's father.

I. O. O. F. Lodge of Instruction.

Morrisburg was en fete Thanksgiving Day, when a lodge of instruction for St. Lawrence District No. 43, I. O. O. F., were the guests of Zeta lodge. For several weeks the announcement of the meeting has been attracting attention and the fine weather that prevailed helped to make the event a huge success. About 300 brethren throughout the district were present, and the different parts of the work was exemplified in a very careful and pleasing manner.

The first meeting opened at 4.30 p m., when the iniatorial degree was displayed by Riverside Lodge (Iroquois). An adjournment was then made to 7.30.

At seven o'clock a special train arrived from the west, carrying about one hundred three linkers from Brockville, Prescott and Cardinal. A large gathering at the station awaited their arrival, and a procession was formed, passing through the principal streets en route to the music hall, where the proceedings were taking place.

The evening meeting was specially enthusiastic and the fraternal interests brilliantly exhibited. The degree work was put on by the lodges from Massena, Cardinal and Prescott, each in excellent order.

At the close of the meeting a banquet was tendered the visitors in Zeta lodge rooms.

Aged Woman Suicides.

Brockville, Oct. 21—A few rods from her home, near Carthage, was found the body of Mrs. Emmerson Peek, aged 63, with an ugly cut in her throat. Nearby was a large butcher knife, which explained the cause of death. She had just recovered from the effects of a stroke of paralysis and her mind was unsettled.

Township Council.

A meeting of Winchester township council was held at Morewood on Saturday, all the members being present.

On motion of P. Kirby and J. W. Bogart, by-law 115 was put through its final stages.

Moved by J. W. Bogart, seconded by P. Kirby, that the sum of $15 by which the assessment of the towuship of Winchester for the construction of the Stoney Creek drainage work is increased by order of the drainage referee, made upon the appeal of the township of Finch, and dated the 8th Sept. 1906, be added to the assessment of the township for the construction of the Devanney branch of said drain, and that by-law No. 104 for the construction of the said drainage work be amended accordingly.—Carried.

Moved by P. Kirby, seconded by J. W. Bogart, that by-law 104 to provide for drainage work in the township of Winchester, in the county of Dundas, and for borrowing on the credit of the municipality $4,373.28, the proportion to be contributed by the township of Winchester for completing the same after deducting from assessments the allowances for ditches already made up and used in such drainage work, as amended by the court of revision and under the order of the drainage referee, be read a third time and passed, signed and sealed in open council.—Carried.

Moved by Geo. Black, seconded by Wm. Clark, that by-law 105 to provide for the construction of the Stoney Creek extension drainage work be read a third time and passed, signed and sealed in open council. Carried.

In Memoriam.

These verses were written and are contributed in loving memory of Charles Ralph Feely, who was accidentally killed at Ashtabula, Ohio, Sept. 21st, 1906:—

One more friend from the list of friends
Gone to our Heavenly Father's care.
One more loved one gone safely home,
We give farewell with tear and prayer.

Comrades and friends have gathered,
But oh! their steps are slow,
Not as they were wont to meet,
In the days not long ago.

Where is the loving voice that had
Music in it's tone and breath?
Why comes he not his friends to greet?
Hush! Comrades, this is death.

And ah for the lonely hearts,
That yearn for thee to-day,
That upon thy love had rested,
And have seen laid away.

In the fond hopes were centered:
Yet death marked thee for his own,
And as the reaper gathers his harvest,
Goeth thee to his unknown home.

Loved tears of friends are thick by falling,
For their hearts are torn to-day.
The parting makes them lonely,
Angels beckoned Ralph away.

Good-bye! oh, we miss thee;
He who lent thee has recalled thee,
Dearest, fare thee well,
Back to Him, and it is to dwell.

Cannamore, Ont. J. A. FEELEY.

Why are the days so lonely?
Why are the days so long?
And why these feelings of sadness;
Is it that Ralph is gone?
He left in the early evening,
His heavenly crown to win,
And angels just then whispered:
"Beautiful soul, come in."

He's finished his early mission,
And gone to the better land,
Where with his dear ones departed,
He sits on Christ's right hand.
The lips closed to those who loved him,
Are now singing praises to Him.
All glory to God on high,
And peace on earth to men:

A soul so dear to the Master,
Look on thy children here,
And teach us thy footsteps to follow,
And feel that thou art ever near.
May we be like the kind and loving,
And when this, our life, is done;
May we meet with thee, kindest of brothers,
In the realms beyond the sun.

C. W. CASSELMAN,

Mine Paying 1000 Per Cent.

New Liskeard, Oct. 20—The Temiskaming and Hudson Bay company mine is proving a rich bonanza for the original shareholders. A dividend has been declared which is equal to the dazzling profit of 1000 per cent. The shares were sold originially at $1 and the dividend declared is $10 a share. To show how this works out, a farmer near here who was reputed to be on his "last legs" financially, scraped enough together to buy 1,300 shares at $1, which was paid for on easy terms. That farmer, on this second dividend, gathers in $13,000 on his investment. The first dividend was much larger, so that his luck is simply phenomenal. The reports from the mine are that other dividends are to follow and any holder of the stock would be foolish to sell. Nearly all the rich mines are continuing to "pan out" much beyond the most sanguine expectations.

Hugh T. Bennett.

VARICOCELE NERVOUS DEBILITY CURED.

If you have transgressed against the laws of nature, you must suffer. Self abuse, later excesses and private diseases have wrecked thousands of promising lives. Treat with scientific physicians and be cured. Avoid quacks. E. A. Sidney, of Toledo, says: "At the age of 14, I learned a bad habit and at 19 contracted a serious disease. I treated with a dozen doctors, who all promised to cure me. They got my money and I still had the disease. I had given up hope when a friend advised me to consult Drs. K. & K., who had cured him. Without any confidence I called on them, and Dr. Kennedy agreed to cure me or no pay. After taking the New Method Treatment for six weeks I felt like a new man. The drains ceased, wormy veins disappeared, nerves grew stronger, hair stopped falling out, urine became clear and my sexual organs vitalized. I was entirely cured by Dr. Kennedy and recommend him from the bottom of my heart."
We Treat and Cure Syphilis, Gleet, Varicocele, Emissions, Stricture, Unnatural Discharges, Seminal Weakness, Kidney and Bladder Diseases.

GRANTLEY.

An unusually charming charming wedding was celebrated in the Methodist Church, when R. Leslie Minier, of New Richmond, Wis., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Marie A. L., daughter of Mr. James J. McMillan. Rev. T. Roy, the officiating clergyman, was assisted by Rev. Jas. Shaver, of Kingston. The church was effectively decorated with autumn foliage and ferns. The bridal party stood beneath a large arch, magnificently decorated with foilage and flags. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of white taffeta, trimmed with embroidered chiffon and applique. She wore a veil and orange blossoms, and carried a boquet of white carnations The bridesmaid, Miss Edith McMillan, wore white crepe de la ehene and a large dark picture hat, while the maid of honor, Miss Ada Mattice, of Denver, Col., wore pink voile, with large white picture hat. The groomsmen were Mr. Donald Gordon and Mr. Jas. O. McMillan. Mr. Howard Beckstead and Mr. Heber McMillan, the ushers, had difficulty in seating the large number of friends. Miss Nellie McMillan presided at the organ. After the ceremony about eighty guests returned to "The Pines," where a recherche dinner was served. A large number of beautiful and costly presents testified to the popularity in which the contracting parties are held. About twenty young people accompanied the bridal party to Finch, where they took the train for Ottawa, amidst showers of rice and good wishes. In the evening tea was served to the young people who had returned from accompanying the bridal party to Finch, and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

WARM WEATHER WILL HELP.

Now is the Time to Get Rid of Your Catarrh by Using Hyomei.

Every one who is afflicted with catarrh should take advantage of the warm weather to get rid of this annoying and distressing disease, for the right treatment in August and September will give benefit much more quickly than in the winter and early spring.

The germ killing and health giving Hyomei when breathed in the summer months has an even more beneficial action than when used in the colder weather. It is Nature's own remedy for the cure of catarrh. It goes to the most remote air cells in the nose, throat and lungs, killing and driving from the system the catarrhal germs.

Hyomei is the simplest, most pleasant and the only guarauteed cure for catarrh that has ever been discovered. It is sold under a guarantee to refund the money if it does not give complete satisfaction.

At this season of the year, the first day's use of Hyomei will show a decided improvement in health and in a short time there will be no further trouble from catarrh.

You take no risk in buying Hyomei. The complete outfit costs but $1.00, extra bottles 50c.

MONKLAND.

Oct. 23rd.

Monkland is busy and is certainly alive.

Messrs. J. and T. Gagnon are erecting a new store, which is to be well stocked, and we wish them every success.

M. McGillivray is starting building, and is moving the kitchen to the west end of the hotel.

Messrs. Jackson & Coulthart had a great drawing match. Our sympathies are with the loser.

Turkey raffles are the order of the day.

J. S. Munro has a fine stock of furs and winter clothing. It would be advisable to give him a call. Large and varied stock kept.

Good luck, long life and happiness attend Mr. and Mrs. J. Selway. But what is the matter with local ladies.

M. J. Garlough is leaving us to go to Williamsburg. We wish him luck, but shall miss his smiling face?

Mr. J. Shannon has returned to Monkland.

Mr. F. Potterie met with a nasty accident, but is getting along nicely, thanks to the attendance of Dr. P. Lawson.

Once more a score for Monkland. We see the McGillivray Bros. did the trick at Athol, and were certainly out after the money. The share would have been more, but as the mare seemed to be fond of grass, and certainly cut a piece off by going across the field they were deprived, but are not kicking.

W. H. Farrell is paying another visit; on business we presume.

Winnipeg's building permits for the year have exceeded $11,000,000.

Saskatoon city debentures have been sold at 96 7 or $122,013 for 125,000

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The awe-stricken women drew nearer to gaze upon the murdered man.

"Grandma, he is not dead! He breathes," exclaimed Gem, whose young eyes had detected the slight, very slight motion of the man's chest.

The old woman knelt down beside the body, and began to examine it more closely. The shirt-bosom, vest, and coat front were soaked with blood, that still seemed to ooze from some hidden wound.

She hastily unbuttoned his clothing, and found a small, round, blackened bullet hole over the region of the left lung.

"Turn him over on his left side, men," she said, half rising from her knee.

As they followed her directions, the blood flowed freely both from the wound and from the mouth of the man.

"Joe, mount Fleetfoot and gallop to Blackville as fast as you can go and bring Dr. Hart, though I don't believe it will be a bit of use; but still it is our duty. And, Tabby and Libby, stop wringing of your hands and rolling of your eyes, and go upstairs and fetch down the cot bedstead to lay him on, for it stands to reason we can't carry him upstairs without hastening of his end," said the old woman, as she busied herself with stanching the wound in the chest.

All her orders were immediately obeyed.

The cot bed was made up in the corner of the room, and the wounded man was tenderly raised by the two laborers, and laid upon it.

"Now, stand out of my way, all of you, and don't ask any questions, but be ready to fly the minute I tell you to do anything," said the dame, as she stood over the injured man and still pressed a little wad of lint over the bullet holt to stanch the blood.

The other women and the men withdrew to the fireplace and waited.

"He is very nasty and uncomfortable-looking, lying here in all these stained clothes, but I am afraid to undress him, for fear of starting the wound to bleeding again, and that's the sacred truth," said Mrs. Winterose.

"No; don't move me," spoke a very faint voice, which, as she afterwards said, sounded so much as if it might have come from the dead, that the old lady withdrew her hand and recoiled from it.

"Brandy! brandy!" breathed the same voice.

"Tabby, get the brandy bottle and pour some into a glass and bring it here. Quick!" she exclaimed.

Miss Tabby, too much awed to whimper, brought the required stimulant, which Mrs. Winterose immediately administered to the patient.

The effect was good. He breathed more freely and looked around him.

"Now, be of good cheer! I have sent a man on a fast horse for the doctor. He will be here in an hour," said Mrs. Winterose, encouragingly.

The wounded man laughed faintly, as he replied.

"Why, what can the doctor do for me? I'm shot to death. I'd like to see a magistrate, or a lawyer, though."

"Would you? Then you shall. Hey! one of you men, run out to the stable as fast as you can, and see if Joe's gone. If he isn't, tell him to fetch Lawyer Closeby as well as the doctor," said Mrs. Winterose.

Both of the laborers started on the errand.

Mrs. Winterose turned to her patient.

"What place is this; and who are you?" he inquired.

"Why, don't you know? This is Black Hall, and I am the caretaker."

"Black Hall!" echoed the man, starting up and gazing around him with an excitement that caused his wound to break out bleeding again. "Black Hall! Is it here that I must die? Here, and—great Heaven!—in the very room where the crime was committed! In the very room haunted by her memory!"

And, covering his face with his hands, he fell back upon the pillow.

"Tabby, more brandy!" hastily exclaimed the old lady, as she nervously pressed a fresh piece of lint into the gushing wound.

"Yes, more brandy!" he faintly whispered; "keep me alive, if possible, till the lawyer comes."

Miss Tabby brought the stimulant, and Mrs. Winterose put it to his lips.

"But, oh, this room! this fatal room! this haunted room!" he murmured, with a shudder.

"Be quiet, good man; this ain't the room where the lady was murdered," said Miss Tabby.

"And which is haunted by her ghost to this day," put in Miss Libby, who had come up to the side of the bed.

"Not—not the room where Rosa was murdered this day fifteen years ago?" murmured the man, gazing around him. "Am I delirious, then? It seems the very same room, only with different furniture."

"It is the correspondial room in this wing. T'other room is in t'other wing," explained Miss Tabby.

"And yet what difference? what difference?" he murmured, restlessly.

"Mother," whispered Miss Tabby, "it seems to me as I've seen this man before."

"Shouldn't wonder," replied the old lady, in a low tone. "Mr. Horace Blondelle has been living at the Dubarry Springs, within ten miles of us, for the last thirteen or fourteen years, and it would be queer if you hadn't seen him before."

"Queer or no, I never did see Mr. Horace Blondelle, to know him as sich, in all my life before. And that ain't what I mean neither, mother. I have seen this man in a fright somewhere or other."

"The man in a fright?"

"No; me in a fright when I saw him."

"Hush! don't whisper! See, it disturbs him," said the old lady.

And in truth the wounded man had turned to listen to them, and was gazing uneasily from one to the other.

When they became silent, he beckoned Miss Tabby to approach.

She bent over him.

"Now, look at me well, old girl," he whispered, faintly, "and see if you can't recollect when you met me last."

"Ah!" screamed Miss Tabby, as if she had seen a ghost. "It was on the night of the flood! And you rescued of us!"

"That's so."

"Well, then, my good gentleman, it ought to be a comfort and a conserlation to you, a-laying wounded there, to reflect as how you did rescue us from drowning that night," said Miss Tabby, soothingly.

"I don't know, as far as the rescuing of you is concerned, old girl, whether the act will be found set down on the debit or credit side of my account the last day," he said, with a gleam of his old humor sparkling up from beneath all his pain of mind and body.

"So this was the man," said the old lady to herself, while Miss Libby, and even Gem, looked at him with a new interest.

"Mr. Blondelle, can you tell me how you came to be wounded?" inquired the old lady.

"No, not now. I must save all my strength for what I have to say to the lawyer. Give me more brandy. And then let me alone," he said, speaking faintly and with difficulty.

His request was complied with, and then the three old women, with Gem, withdrew to the fire.

The two laboring men came in from their errand and joined them at the fire.

"Did you catch Joe?" inquired the dame.

"Yes, mum, just as he was riding off. We had to run after him and shout; but we stopped him, and gave him your message."

"All right; and now tell me—for I hadn't a chance to ask before—how came this gentleman to be wounded?"

"Don't know, mum. We was on our way to a little Hallow Eve merry-making at a neighbor's house in the quarries, when we fell in long o' Joe, who had been to the pine woods to gather cones; and we was all joging along, Joe foremost, when he stumbled and fell over something, which proved to be this man, which, to tell the truth, we took to be dead at the time," replied one of the men.

"And have you no idea who shot him?"

"No more than you have yourself, mum. You see——"

A groan from the injured man interrupted the conversation.

"Hush! we disturb him. I ought to have known better than to talk," whispered Mrs. Winterose, and then she walked to the bedside, and inquired:

"What is the matter? Can I do anything for you?"

"No; let me alone, and be quiet," was the feeble reply.

The old woman went back to the fireplace, and sat down in silence. The two laboring men, uninvited, seated themselves at a short distance. All thoughts of going to a merry-making were given up for that night.

And a weary death watch commenced, and continued in awful silence and stillness until it was interrupted by the sound of horses' feet in front of the house, and soon after by a loud knocking.

Miss Tabby sprang up to open the door and admit the doctor and the lawyer.

"This is a terrible thing, Mrs. Winterose," said Dr. Hart, as he shook hands with the old lady, and bowed to the other members of the family.

"Terrible, indeed, sir," replied Mrs. Winterose, as she led the way to the bedside.

"I am sorry to see you wounded, Mr. Blondelle; but we shall bring you round all right," said Dr. Hart, as he took the hand of the dying man.

"Doctor, you know, or you soon will know, that you cannot do any such thing. So let us have no flattery. But if you can give me anything to keep me alive until I shall have finished a statement, that it may take an hour to make, you will do the only thing you possibly can do for me," said Mr. Blondelle, speaking faintly, with difficulty, and with frequent pauses.

"Let me examine your injuries," said the doctor, gently.

"Do so, if you must and will. But, pray, occupy as little of my precious time as possible," pleaded the dying man.

The doctor proceeded to make his examination.

When he had finished it, he made not a single comment.

"I told you so," said Mr. Blondelle, interpreting his silence. "And now give me something to keep me going until I finish my work, and then send all these women out of the room, so as to leave us alone with the lawyer; but let them supply him with writing materials first."

"I will do as you direct; but, meanwhile, shall I not send for your wife?" gently inquired the doctor.

"No; what would be the use? It will be all over with me before she can possibly get here," answered Mr. Blondelle.

The doctor did not urge the point; he probably agreed with his patient.

When he had administered a stimulant, he whispered to Mrs. Winterose to place writing materials on the little stand beside the cot, and then to take her daughters and Gem upstairs.

When the women had left the room, the doctor bade the two laboring men to retire with Joe to the kitchen, where he himself would have followed them, seeing that the rest of the house was closed up and fireless; but at a sign from the dying man he stayed, and took a seat by the bedside.

The lawyer sat between the bed's head and the little stand upon which pens, ink, and paper had been placed.

"Is it a will?" said Mr. Closeby, as he rolled out a sheet of parchment he had taken the precaution to bring.

The dying man laughed low as he replied:

"No, it is a confession. I can make it now, when it will redeem her life without ruining mine."

The lawyer and the doctor exchanged glances, but made no comment.

What Mr. Horace Blondelle's confession would be they had already surmised. What it really was will be seen presently.

The work occupied something more than an hour, for the narrator was very weak from loss of blood, and spoke slowly, faintly, and with frequent pauses, while the lawyer, at leisure, took down his words, and the doctor from time to time consulted his pulse and administered stimulants.

Meanwhile, the three old women, with Gem, remained upstairs, gathered around the small fire in their bedroom. Awe hushed their usually garrulous tones, or moved them to speak only in whispers. Never seemed an hour so long. At length it was past, and more than past, when the door at the foot of the stairs was opened and the doctor's voice was heard calling upon them to come down.

"Is it all over?" whisperingly inquired Mrs. Winterose.

"The work is over."

"But the man, I mean."

"It is not all over with him yet. He still lives, though sinking fast."

"Don't you think he ought to have a clergyman?"

"He would be dead before a clergyman could be brought here."

This rapid, low-toned conversation took place at the foot of the stairs, out of hearing of the dying man, whose senses were fast failing.

Mrs. Winterose then came down into the room and took her seat at the bed, and from time to time bathed the sufferer's brow with her own preparation of aromatic vinegar, or moistened his lips with brandy and water.

Tabby, Libby and Gem sat around the fire. The doctor and the lawyer stood conferring in a low tone at a distant window.

Thus the death watch was kept in the silence of awe, until Miss Tabby, unable to resist her desire to do something for the sufferer, crept up to the side of the cot opposite to to which her mother sat, and "shook his sands," by asking him in a low tone:

"Is there no one in the world you would like to see, or to send a message to?"

"No—no one—but Sybil Berners—and I have written a message to—her; but—to see her—is impossible," gasped the man at intervals.

"Tabby, go sit down and keep quiet. You only worry the poor soul!" said Mrs. Winterose.

Miss Tabby complied, and the silent death-watch was resumed, and continued unbroken except by the howling of the wind, the beating of the rain, and the rattling of the leafless trees, until at length — inexplicable sound! — wheels were heard grating over the rough, neglected avenue and approaching the house.

Who could it be, coming at that late hour of a stormy night, to a house to which even in daylight and good weather scarcely a visitor ever came?

The sound of the wheels ceased before the door, and was immediately followed by a knock.

"Burglars never come in wheeled carriages," said Miss Tabby to herself, as she recovered her courage and went and opened the door.

She recoiled with a loud cry.

Every one started up, and hurried forward to see what could be the matter.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Sybil Berners stood before them! Sybil Berners, in magnificent beauty! Sybil Berners, developed into a woman of majestic dignity and angelic grace!

Yet they all knew her in an instant.

The scene that followed is indescribable, unimaginable.

Forgotten was the dying man! Unseen was Lyon Berners, whose fine form filled up the doorway.

They crowded around her, they caressed her, they cried over her, they exclaimed about her, they asked her a score of questions, and, without waiting for a single answer, asked her a hundred others.

"God bless my dear old home, and all the people in it," were the first words that Sybil spoke after she was permitted to catch her breath.

"And you, my darling, you! God bless you in coming home!" fervently exclaimed the old woman.

"Now, where is my child, Mrs. Winterose? Where is my Gem?" the lady inquired, looking eagerly around the room.

"Gem, come here," said the dame.

And the beautiful young girl, who had been timidly lingering in the background, yet with some suspicion of the lady's identity, too, came modestly forward, and was silently folded in the arms of her mother.

A moment they clung thus; and then Sybil lifted the young head from her bosom, and, holding it between her hands, gazed tenderly down in the sweet face.

"My daughter! my little Gem!" she murmured. "It is but a few months since I knew that I possessed you."

"But I always knew that you were my mother. I always knew it, though no one ever told me!" sobbed Gem.

"And did you think that I had deserted you all this time, my daughter, my daughter?" inquired the lady, lingering on the last word, and tenderly gazing into her dark eyes.

"I thought you were compelled to do it, mother!"

"What! to leave you here alone, uncared for and unschooled, all these long years? No, my daughter; no, no, no. I did not know that I was blessed with a daughter; I did not know that you lived, until within a few months past. Mistaken love for me, inordinate care for me, induced all those who were nearest to me to conceal your existence from me, lest, if I should know it, I should compromise my safety, my liberty and life, Gem, by seeking to see you!"

"Oh, mother!"

"And they were so far right, my darling, that as soon as, at last, your father informed me of your existence, and of a necessity to bring you over to us for education, I became so impatient that I could not wait for you to be brought to me. I felt that I must fetch you, at all risks, for the sake of seeing you some few weeks earlier than I could by waiting for you over there! So here I am, my daughter!"

"But, oh! dearest, dearest mother, at what a hazard!" sighed Gem.

"I do not believe it, my darling. I do not believe, after all these years, that any one will seek to molest me for the few days that I shall remain here, even if my presence should be suspected, which will be very improbable, as I have taken and shall take every precaution for secrecy. I have travelled only by night, Gem, and this is the first time I have raised my thick veil."

"But, oh, mother!" she said, giving an alarmed look around, for she suddenly remembered that there were the doctor and the lawyer in the house; but she did not see them. They had discreetly withdrawn into the back room.

"And now, dear Gem, here is your father, who is waiting to embrace you," said Sybil.

And Lyon Berners, who had forborne to interrupt the meeting between the mother and daughter, and who was standing apart, talking in low, eager tones with Mrs. Winterose, now came forward and folded his daughter to his hearte, and laid his hand upon her head and blessed her.

"But who is that?" exclaimed Sybil, in a startled tone, as she turned her eyes upon a ghastly and blood-stained form, sitting bolt upright on the cot bedstead, and staring in a death panic at her.

At her exclamation all eyes were turned in the direction that hers had taken, and Mr. Berners looked inquiringly towards Mrs. Winterose, who hastened to reply:

"Oh, I forgot. In my joy at her arrival, I forgot all about the poor, dying man! Sir, he is Mr. Blondelle, who owns the great Dubarry Springs up yonder. He was set upon and murdered by—the Lord only knows whom—but he was found by Joe lying in the pine woods, and with the help of two laborers he was brought here. We sent for the doctor, but he could do nothing for him. He must die, and knows it," she added in a whisper.

In the meantime, Sybil, staring at the ghastly face which was staring back at her through its glazing eyes, recognized an old acquaintance.

FEEDING IN STALL OR SHEDS.

This question during recent years has been the subject of much discussion, while it may not be correct to say that it has been fully settled, the experiments conducted during recent years have thrown considerable light upon the subject. These experiments have resulted, as a rule, in favor of feeding in sheds, and allowing the animals to move at liberty in the barns and in a protected yard at hand. An experiment thus conducted by the writer at the Minnesota station came out in favor of feeding the animals in the shed rather than in the stall, writes Prof Thomas Shaw.

It was thought a few years ago that animals could be fattened better if they were tied in the stall and kept perfectly still during the fattening process. I can remember discussions in Ontario at public meetings as to whether animals tied in the stall should be allowed any liberty of exercise. Some claimed that they would finish better if tied up when the feeding began, if furnished with water in the stall and only taken out when the feeding was completed. Others claimed that they should be allowed to take exercise in a yard for an hour or so, two or three times a week, but the best feeders seemed to think it was necessary to house them all the while and tie them in the stable. This view seems to be in accord with the idea of olden times, as reference is made in holy writ to animals fattened in the stall.

There is one argument in favor of stall feeding that cannot be gainsaid. It provides for feeding animals just the amount of food that they should be fed. Some can take more food than others without injury. When they are tied in separate stalls the food can be distributed to each just in exact proportion to its needs. In this way each animal may be kept on feed and it may be fed without any waste of food. It is not possible, or, at least, it is not easy to apportion to each the exact amount of food that it ought to have, as some animals eat more quickly than others and, therefore, get a larger share proportionately. The only way to avoid this is to tie the animal while it is taking its food.

The following arguments against keeping animals tied hold good: They lose to such an extent the ability to move about or to stand any jostling that they do not bear up well in going to market, on foot, by rail, or by steamboat. The difference in this respect is very marked between them and cattle finished in the open shed and yard. More time is called for in feeding and watering the animals and also in removing the litter. This item is important. In these days of expensive labor it is very important. One man may care for many more animals when fed in boxes and not tied than when the animals are tied in stalls. The cost of housing is also less. The stable with stalls and floors is more costly than the shed without floors, hence, though the animals should make equal gains, those fed in the shed will be fed the more cheaply, because of the saving in the various items referred to.

THOSE LOOSE CONSUME MORE FOOD.

It may be asked how can more profit be made from animals that are fed loose when they consume more food. They take more food because they take more exercise and are exposed to lower temperatures. The effects of both exercise and cold are to sharpen the appetite. The answer to this question is found in the greater relative gain made for the food fed. This result would seem to show unmistakably that some exercise tends to secure a more thorough digestion of the food.

This more complete digestion in several of the experiments conducted to determine this question, is partly responsible for the greater profits that have been secured from feeding in the open shed. While the consumption of food has been greater out of doors, the relative increase has more than kept pace with the consumption of food.

The influence of exposure is liable to be misunderstood. An animal is not really exposed until want of shelter makes it uncomfortable, and it is not really protected until protection adds to its comfort. Viewed from this standpoint, housing in the stall does not necessarily protect, and feeding in a shed and yard does not necessarily expose. The animal will make the greatest gains when it is kept comfortable, properly speaking, other things being equal.

Now, while in stormy weather it would be easy to expose animals so much that they would be uncomfortable, in mild weather it is easy to house them to the extent of being uncomfortable. When fed heavily on heat-producing food, as corn, it is easy to keep animals uncomfortably warm. This explains in part, at least, why in this northwest, with its bright but cold days, animals will prefer lying out of doors on a bed of straw in many instances to seeking the shelter of a shed.

When feeding animals loose in sheds, it will be greatly advantageous to give attention to the following facts: The animals should be dehorned, if possessed of horns, when the feeding period begins, otherwise they will injure each other, it may be seriously. They should have access to a yard protected from cold winds and kept well bedded. They could be fed more correctly if they had access to stanchions in the shed or feed lot, so that each could be kept in place while eating the grain ration. Care should be taken to keep them sheltered from storms of rain or snow, and they should not be allowed to wade through deep mud in yards. The comfort of the animals should be most carefully studied.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

The best pork and the cheapest is made from hogs that never have been wintered.

A colt may be carefully driven or worked all the time after he is two years old without harm, but good sound judgment and common sense must be used.

There is no system of farming that to so great an extent conserves the elements of fertility as dairying, especially when only the butter fat is removed and the skim milk left on the farm to be fed.

Most horses will drink as soon as they have eaten in the morning. Then allow them water. Most horses after working two, three or four hours will desire to drink. Then water them. It is more liable, far more liable, to be the horse that man tries to dictate to in his drinking that has colic than it is the horse that can never have water when he wants it.

There is no room for doubt that the very best breeding must always lean for results on good feeding. The cow that will give ten times her bodily weight in milk for a year and put so much butter fat in that milk that from it butter may be made equal to one-half or more of her live weight, is a creature of very remarkable artificial development. She must do this great work of milk production and fat elaboration from the feed she is able to consume, digest, and assimilate. Therefore, the amplification of good dairy breeding must be in producing an animal capable of this heavy food consumption.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Excessive fat is detrimental to all kinds of breeding stock, especially hogs.

A large colt put at work when three years old is full of spirit, and if allowed to do all he is willing to do, will be able to do much less at four years of age.

Experiments and long continued practice of feeding barley furnish evidence that this grain is a useful and economical food. But when taxed to the limit by hard work it is found that horses cannot be supported upon barley quite as well as upon oats, and that it is worth but slightly less per pound than oats, with animals performing a medium amount of work.

SOLOMON UP TO DATE.

Sicilian Judge in an Attempt to Repeat History Got Left.

A case that bears a striking resemblance to the familiar problem the solution of which is inseparably bound up with King Solomon's fame came up recently for decision here before the circuit judge at Georgia, Sicily. Two peasant women claimed with equal vehemence ownership of a pretty baby boy, one accusing the other of posing as the real mother, after having had the child in temporary charge. The judge remembering the Scriptures, thought he could do no better than follow King Solomon's example. He ordered the child to be tied to a bench, and, producing a carving knife, spoke the famous words that ought to have led to the immediate discovery of the true mother. But times have changed. If the Italian newspaper report is to be believed, the two women cried out simultaneously:—"If you must cut it up, Excellenza, you may as well keep the pieces!"

"I like to believe that all men are honest," said the moralizer. "Same here," rejoined the demoralizer; "still I always draw the line at taking the same patent medicine for liver complaint that I use for toothache, no matter how the label reads."

ADDRESS INSIDE —Life.

FEAT NOW WITHIN REACH

THE WORLD MAY BE CIRCLED WITHIN FIFTY DAYS.

An Achievement Which Canadian Enterprise Is Helping to Make Possible.

Around the world in fifty days seems now a feat within reach. With the launching of two new Cunard liners destined to reduce the voyage to four days and a half, and with the prospective re-opening of the Trans-Siberian Railroad and the Manchurian Railroad in the hands of the Japanese, the possibility of cutting down the record is brought nearer. The present record is held by Henry Frederick, who in the summer of 1903 went around the world in fifty-four days seven hours and twenty minutes. James W. Sayre, of Seattle, was only two hours and twenty-two minutes longer, and, strangely enough, their voyages were almost simultaneous, the former starting on July 2 and the latter on July 26, the former travelling eastward, the latter westward.

THE RUSSIAN LINK.

The possibility of beating these records depends principally upon the new schedule of the Trans-Siberian Railroad, which has not yet been issued. The road is open now as far east as Irkutsk, on Lake Baikal, but beyond that it is in the hands of the Russian Government, which is monopolizing it for the transport of its armies from the scene of the recent war. How soon it will be opened no one can tell, not even the Russian Minister of Railways, to whom the International Sleeping Car Company applied a few weeks ago for information which would enable it to plan round-the-world tours for the coming season, and who replied that he would advise them to make no such plans over the Trans-Siberian road for the present. But by next year Russia will have ceased to need the road for military purposes, and the line will have been so improved and repaired that it will be possible greatly to reduce the running time between St. Petersburg and the Pacific.

Prince Hilkoff, the Russian Minister of Railways, made the prediction a few years ago that it would soon be possible to go around the world in thirty-three days, and when asked for details gave the following figures: New York to Bremen, 7 days; Bremen to St. Petersburg, 1½ days; St. Petersburg to Vladivostok, 10 days; Vladivostok to San Francisco, 10 days; San Francisco to New York, 4½ days. But Prince Hilkoff's figures have never yet been approached. Instead of 10 days from St. Petersburg to Vladivostok it takes 17, and often much longer, and instead of 10 days from Vladivostok to San Francisco the fastest steamers take 12 from Yokohama to Vancouver, and anywhere from three days to a week must be added to this for getting from Vladivostok to Yokohama. Again, he made no allowance for time lost in making connections.

But that Prince Hilkoff predicted ten-day trains across Asia is good evidence that they are not only possible, but that it is the intention of the Government to have them in operation. It is not improbable that they may be running next year, in which event it should be easy to reduce Mr. Frederick's record by nearly a week to forty-eight or even forty-seven days.

SKETCHING THE ROUTE.

Now let us see how one would set about reducing the round-the-world record. In the opinion of the managers of Cook's Tourist Agency and of the International Sleeping Car Company, the new four-and-a-half day boats of the Cunard Line may be left out of the calculation entirely, for they would not reduce the Atlantic voyage sufficiently to make up for the inevitable loss of time in crossing England and the English Channel. Both these experts say the speediest route from New York to St. Petersburg is unquestionably by a steamer landing its passengers at a Continental port, a French liner to Le Havre, or a German liner to Cherbourg, or even to Bremen or Hamburg. As the Trans-Siberian trains run only twice a week, starting from Moscow on Wednesdays and Saturdays, one would have to select his steamer with a view to making the closest possible connections. Five hours must be allowed from Cherbourg to Paris, forty-seven hours from Paris to St. Petersburg and 12 from St. Petersburg to Moscow. That is the actual running time of the trains, and another twelve hours must be added for making connections and waiting for trains. If the traveller go via Bremen he must allow about thirty-six hours for the railway journey from there to Moscow.

At Moscow he boards the Trans-Siberian Express, but he would make a great mistake if he were to go to Vladivostok, for on reaching there he would have to make inquiries as to the next boat leaving for Japan and he might have to wait several days before one sailed, and then it would be a small, slow freighter, that might land him in Japan in four or five days. The wise traveller would take his ticket for Dalny, changing at Soungari, the junction of the Trans-Siberian and Manchurian railways. Regular steamers ply between Dalny and Shimonoseki, Japan, two or three times a week, making the passage in two days and a half.

BY STEAMER TO VANCOUVER.

At Shimonoseki the globe-trotter would take the train for Yokohama and reach that port in twelve hours. There he would get a steamer for America. If lucky or accurate in his calculations, he would catch one of the Canadian Pacific steamers, which would land him at Vancouver in twelve days. From there via Winnipeg, St. Paul and Chicago he would come East by the fastest trains he could select, but about five days is the best time he could make.

This figures up forty-five days of actual travelling, but it is manifestly impossible to make so many connections without delays. The traveller might lose one or two days between landing in Europe and taking the train to Moscow or St. Petersburg; he would probably lose a day or two at Dalney, and again in Japan, while the possibility of a steamer being delayed by accident or bad weather might throw all his calculations out of gear and cost him a full week of delay at some point. But if he set out to girdle the world in fifty days he would, according to the foregoing figures, have five days to spare for such delays. Summarized the schedule is as follows:

New York to Cherbourg	144 hours
Cherbourg to Paris	5 "
Paris to St. Petersburg	47 "
St. Petersburg to Moscow ..	12 "
Moscow to Dalny	408 "
Dalny to Shimonoseki	60 "
Shimonoseki to Yokohama ..	12 "
Yokohama to Vancouver	288 "
Vancouver to New York	120 "
Total	1,096 hours

But it must be remembered that all these calculations are based upon the assumption that the Trans-Siberian Railroad is to be opened soon. If the running time on this road be cut to ten days from Moscow to Dalny, seven days can be subtracted from the forty-five, which would show that it is possible to go around the world in thirty-eight days. The time is not far distant when this will be perfectly true.

In this connection it is interesting to recall the figures published by the projectors of the tunnel under Behring Straits, which may be summarized as follows:

New York to Paris	149 hours
Paris to St. Petersburg	47 "
St. Petersburg to Behring Strait	312 "
Behring Strait to Chicago ...	192 "
Chicago to New York	17 "
Total	717 hours

or 28 days and 2 hours.

But the Behring Strait tunnel is not likely to be dug for many years to come, and anyone who is ambitious to beat the world's record for globe-girdling had better wait for it, for by that time airships may have put railroads and steamships out of date.—N. Y. World.

MISER LIVED IN MISERY.

Gold and Notes to the Value of $50,000 Found in His Rooms.

An extraordinary story of a miser's misery and wealth was told to the Middlesex (England) coroner the other day, when an inquest was held at Edmonton Workhouse on the body of John Sewell, aged 71, who died in the infirmary.

About a week ago the man was removed to the workhouse in a most wretched condition from his house in Handsworth road. The house itself was more like a pigsty than a human habitation, but when searched £440 in gold and £465 in notes were found, while script to the value of at least £10,000 was lying about the rooms. The place was a veritable treasure house.

In addition to the treasure, there was also a well-stocked armory, consisting of four loaded revolvers, a number of powerful air guns, and a long knife.

Mrs. Coventon, who lived next door, told the coroner that Sewell never permitted anyone to enter the house, and he never spoke to the neighbors. About ten days ago, as she did not hear him moving about, she went to the police, but when a constable went to the house and called out, asking Sewell if he wanted anything, the man answered "No."

On Monday groans were heard, and the police again went to the house. They found the front door locked and barricaded, but broke in from the back. Sewell, dressed in indescribably dirty rags, lay on the floor of one of the rooms. He was very weak, but when the police entered the room he struggled to reach a knife at his side, and when this was taken away from him a loaded revolver was found in his pocket. There was only a bed in the room.

He was taken to the infirmary, where he subsequently died from apoplexy accelerated by the terrible condition in which he lived.

At the inquest Mr. W. Mattingly, clerk to Sewell's solicitor, said that his firm's client refused to tell them where his money was invested. His capital amounted to more than £10,000. Sewell's two sisters, who are also rich, are at present in lunatic asylums.

A verdict of "death from natural causes" was returned.

MOBBED BY BEES.

A Traveller's Experience With the Honey-Seekers in Abyssinia.

Bees abound in certain parts of Abyssinia, and, as the land is almost waterless in the dry season, the insects suffer much from thirst. In "The Source of the Blue Nile" is an interesting account of the manner in which, on his journey, the author was mobbed by bees, which were after his drinking water.

Every drinking vessel was crowded with them. Our boys drank from calabashes, and when they were put upon the ground, bees clustered on the edges and crawled toward the liquor. Impatient successors thronged upon the first comers and pushed them into the water so that in a few minutes the surface was a mass of "struggle-for-lifers." In spite of the heat we had to keep moving; for when we settled, so did the bees—all over us.

We halted for luncheon in a small ravine, and the bees did not find us till we had nearly finished the meal. We smoked them with cigarettes, cigars, and a bonfire, to no purpose. Then we shifted our quarters, but they followed. All of us were stung, and we were ont quit of them till we mounted our camels and outdistanced the swarm.

They get their their honey from the flowers of the mimosa-tree. We camped that night among the mimosas, thinking that we had been delivered from the plague of insects, but we were mistaken. A host of the honey-seekers thronged and crawled on one's candle, one's book, one's face and one's hands, adding insult to injury by stinging us. It was more than twenty-four hours before we were free from them.

AUDIENCE WITH SULTAN

FAILURE OF A FOREIGN DIPLOMATIST'S MISSION.

He Went to Obtain an Archbishop's Consecration Through an Interpreter.

A diplomatist recently accredited to the Sultan describes in the London Standard how he once secured an audience of his Majesty and how he fared.

His object was to obtain the confirmation of an already chosen Archbishop to a Macedonian see. For weeks he was thwarted by officials of the court, and then for more weeks by the Sultan himself, who professed to be too busy to see him. However, at last he was really received, and this is what happened:

"His Majesty awaited me in a small but richly furnished room. He stood in the uniform of a Turkisn Colonel by a low sofa, with his gloved hand on the hilt of his sword. His rather long, melancholy countenance was curiously and subtly lighted by a sort of good-humored latent smile. Even in his dark and usually sad eyes the same strange laughter seemed to lie. In them one could read either suppressed merriment or irony. Probably he was foretasting the humor of the diplomatic transaction which was to follow, and

ENJOYING IT QUIETLY

"I sat exactly opposite the Sultan, who took a place alone upon the sofa. About a yard away on his left the accomplished dragoman of the palace, Ibhahim Bey, occupied a small chair, and on my left was my own dragoman. Looking me straight in the face, Abdul Hamid said a couple of phrases in musical Turkish, speaking very low. Ibrahim Bey bowed low, made the Temenala and began to translate. This he did afresh each time the Sultan spoke, till, at the end of the audience, he was quite weary with the gymnastic exercise. He began thus:

"'His Majesty comands me to say how much he regrets not having been able to receive you sooner. It was a great annoyonce to him, as he had a subject he particularly wished to discuss with you. His Majesty is pleased to see you, and hopes that you are ready to enter upon the subject.' I replied that I was deeply sensible of the honor conferred on me, the more as my Government had charged me to bring to the personal notice of His Majesty a question of some importance. I was especially delighted to find His Majesty so ready to enter upon details.

"The Sultan bent his head slightly toward me and murmured a few words with a sphinxlike smile. 'Before his Majesty begins to talk about that matter he wishes to know how long you were accredited to the Court of St. James's.'

"This seemed a curious introduction to the decision of the Archbishopric in Macedonia question, but I replied that altogether I had been about

SEVEN YEARS IN LONDON.

"'Then you must be well acquainted with English society?'

"I replied that in my modest way I thought I knew something of the English.

"'Very well! His Majesty is most anxious to have your opinion on English women.'

"In spite of myself I cried out 'What?' and looked to my interpreter to see if Ibrahim Bey had translated aright. He nodded, and Ibrahim Bey repeated, 'His Majesty would know what a man like yourself, who is familiar with English society, thinks of the ladies.'

"'They are good and pretty,' I answered briefly, wondering what the qualities of English women had to do with the case of my unconsecrated Bishop.

"'His Majesty says that when he was in England he saw many beautiful women.' I opened my eyes wider and wider, and ventured to ask: 'Was His Majesty ever in England?'

"'Certainly; I and my elder brother, Murad, accompanied our uncle, Sultan Abdul Aziz—Heaven rest his soul—to England to visit Queen Victoria.' His Majesty uttered these words scarcely above a whisper, looking very seriously and sadly at the floor. We were all silent for a minute, in deference to the recollections of his uncle and brother awakened in his pious memory.

"Then, however, he broke into a long speech, which Ibrahim rendered quickly into French.

"'His Majesty says that a tall and fine officer was attached to his suite; a very agreeable officer. His Majesty fancies to have read or heard that this same officer fell like a brave soldier on the battlefield later. When we were in England the officer ordered and soda water to be placed on a little table in the anteroom, and made a speech to my brother and me on the sovereign virtues of this drink. He also tried to convince us that it was impossible that the Koran should forbid its use. When he found he could not persuade us he concluded by trusting that though we did not partake ourselves we would not take it ill if he did.'

A BOTTLE OF SCOTCH WHISKEY

"Evidently the Sultan understands French perfectly, as Ibrahim Bey had no sooner ended the translation of one phrase than he began another, punctuating here and there with audible laughter.

"'His Majesty says that the officer often repeated these tactics. At last, says his Majesty, when my brother and I saw bottle after bottle of Scotch whiskey disappear, we said to ourselves, 'The officer is a nice fellow and a fine soldier; he is our friend, and we are his friends. We are not doing our duty as friends if we don't tell him that he drinks too much.' So we remonstrated with him; and what was his answer? He gazed at us in amazement, and then burst out laughing. 'Is it possible that your Royal Highnesses think that I drink too much of this whiskey? What would your Royal Highness say if you could see how much many of the ladies in our best society drink?' And he laughed louder still. 'And now, your Excellency,' concluded Ibrahim Bey, solemnly, 'what his Majesty wishes to know from you is this—is it really true that English ladies drink?'

"I answered warmly that whatever may have been the case thirty or thirty-five years ago, his Majesty might take my word for it that English ladies.

DID NOT DRINK NOWADAYS.

"His Majesty's ironic smile departed. He looked grave, as if meditating some great problem, and then said: 'It gives me great pleasure to hear you say so. You confirm my own view. Often since then have I asked myself, 'Could the English nation be what it is if the women of England drank more than or even as much as the men? I am glad that your observations in London support my own theories.' His ...ajesty then went into a long praise of English women, referring to the saying Non Angli, sed angeli. I seized this allusion as a drowning man reaches at a straw.

"'Sire,' I interrupted, rising and bowing deeply, being copied by Ibrahim Bey, "your Majesty's mention of angels reminds me of heaven, and heaven reminds me of churches, and so I am brought back to the thought of that excellent man and most true and worthy servant of your Majesty the Archbishop of Macedonia, whose consecration——"

"Here his Majesty showed how well he understood French, as he would not let me go on, but broke in with, 'Certainly; but you would never mix up a Bishop in our interesting conversation on English ladies. No, no. The time has not yet come to talk about your Bishop. Leave it to me to choose the opportune moment. Of a surety our talk then will be as satisfactory as it has been interesting to-day.' Thereupon his Majesty arose, and with a slight inclination of his head and a suspicious smile hovering around his lips and mouth I was graciously dismissed."

GHILD DETECTED ROBBER

GOLD STOLEN FROM ROYAL BANK AT MUNICH IS RECOVERED.

Child Noticed That Man Paid Fare From Purse Full Gold Pieces.

The authors of the great mint robbery at Munich, Germany, have discovered, and the police have recovered possession of nearly all the stolen coins. The merit of the discovery belongs to a child who, while sitting in a tramway car the other day, observed that her neighbor, a man in workman's clothes, paid his fare from a purse full of golden ten-mark pieces.

With a quick sense of apprehension the child turned to the conductor and quietly observed, "This man has got stolen money from the mint." The conductor signaled the driver to stop the car, and handed the workman over to a constable, who conveyed him to the police headquarters. There the prisoner confessed to having been associated with the burglary, but averred that he had not actually committed the crime. He gave his name at Max Ruf, by occupation an expert mechanic.

A REMARKABLE COINCIDENCE.

Meanwhile, by a remarkable coincidence, the police had discovered, independently of Ruf, the real burglar. This was a soldier named Koenig, who, before he began his two years' compulsory service in the army, was a worker in the mint, where his father is still employed. On the night of the burglary Koenig was absent from barracks, and this fact came to the cognizance of his superiors through a postman.

At about midnight on Thursday last a letter marked "express" was brought to Koenig at the barracks and his bed was found to be empty. Early on the following morning he climbed over a railing and regained his sleeping berth. To the corporal who called on him for an explanation he said he had been on an amorous quest.

MAN IS WATCHED.

From that day Koenig was watched, and at the very hour when the child in the tramway car was calling the attention of the conductor to the contents of her neighbor's purse, Koenig was arrested at the dwelling of his sweetheart, where large quantities of gold were found. Further sums of money were discovered in a house on the outskirts of Munich, where Ruf, the accomplice of Koenig, had established a workshop for the execution of repairs to motor cars.

The rest of the coins were unearthed by a detective in the celebrated English garden in Munich, where the burglars had buried some $15,000 of their booty under a heap of twigs and wood. Altogether a sum of $30,000 has been regained.

SMOKING JUSTICE.

An offensive thing in our law courts one has the misfortune to notice nowadays is smoking on the bench, says the Calcutta Indian World. Among assistant and joint magistrates and the deputy and sub-deputy magistrates, and even among munsiffs and the subordinate judges, one is getting more and more largely accustomed to the picture of blind justice holding the scales with a cigarette between his lips and sometimes with a cigar or a pipe in his mouth.

MILITARY KITES.

The efficient military kite is of the well-known "box" type, and, like the captive military balloon, each kite is attached to a cable drum, mounted on a waggon when in use. These "aids to observation" can be raised by a very light wind, and notes have been taken at an altitude of upwards of 3,000 feet by their instrumentality. A light telephone is used by the observer attached to the kite in transmitting observations.

VICAR'S GHOSTLY VIGIL

A MIDNIGHT SCENE AMID SILENT GRAVES.

Sacriligious Thieves Enter Churchyard, But are Met by Revolver Shots.

The Rev. Forbes Phillips, vicar of Gorleston, England, told a London Daily Mail representative the other day how he kept a watch by night in St. Andrew's churchyard and shot at two burglars—of whom nothing has since been heard—who, he thinks, intended to rob the collection boxes or steal the pre-Reformation plate, of great value, in the church.

"After the Sunday evening service," said Mr. Phillips, "I slipped a bulldog revolver into my pocket and went to the churchyard to watch. It was a fearful night of wind and rain; I was speedily drenched to the skin. I had tried to induce the police to set a watch, but owing to an ancient legend that the ghost of an old Abbot perambulates the churchyard not a man would undertake the job. The standing tombstones and high grass made splendid cover for any intruders, and I walked about several times, keeping careful watch.

"HANDS UP!"

"About a quarter to one I saw two men rise above the wall from the lane and leap into the churchyard. One was tall, the other short. The tall one stopped by the wall while the other hastened across to the tower entrance. I heard a low whistle from the tall man just as I stepped from the priest's door, as if to indicate all well. The short man ran towards the tower door, I from the priest's door down towards him. A shout from the tall man warned me he had seen me.

"Simultaneously I cried to the short man ahead of me, 'Halt! Hands up, or I fire!' He paid no heed, but ran. I fired to warn him; then, as he reached the edge of the sunken pathway, I fired low at his legs. He leaped into the air, uttered a frightful shriek, turned almost a complete somersault, like a winged partridge, and came down prone on the gravel walk. He groaned and writhed, clawing with both hands furiously at the gravel and earth.

"I said to myself, 'You are accounted for, at any rate,' and wheeling round, ran after the tall man. He dodged behind tombstones, until at last I caught sight of his face between two of the stones. I fired. I never saw him after that. I next ran to the sexton's house for assistance. He was asleep and took a lot of rousing. Then we lighted a lantern and returned to the scene.

"My wounded man was gone, but in his agonies he had almost dug himself a grave with his hands in the gravelled walk. The rain was pouring in torrents so that we could find no blood marks over on the other side of the lane. Outside the church grounds we found a piece of stiff cardboard smeared with blood. The fellow had evidently dragged himself over to a dust-heap there, and lain on it for a while, or, what is more probable, his accomplice had returned and borne him away. Not a trace of them has been found since."

Last week, said Mr. Phillips, the church was broken into twice, and similar crimes are reported from many places. On Friday, while he was in the vestry, a tall man and a short man entered, and were taken aback to find someone there. They scrutinized the safe, though they explained that they wanted to copy an ancient inscription above it. Mr. Phillips is convinced they are members of a gang with a motor-car, which was seen near the church on Sunday. He suggests that the wounded man was conveyed to London in the car.

All the police and all the hospitals in East Anglia have been warned, but no clue has been found, beyond a report that a tall man and a short man were seen loitering at Lowestoft, and hired a boat at Yarmouth and rowed up the river one day last week. Mr. Phillips adds that burglars have an inducement to steal the old church plate on account of the prices offered for it by Americans. He advises every country clergyman with such valuable property "to try the shot-gun method."

HUNGRY ZOO LIONS.

Desert Kings in England's Famous Zoo Have Big Appetites.

The London Zoo lions have been showing bad temper and indignation. And no wonder, for they have had to starve for nearly a whole day. The usual horse with which the animals at the Zoo are fed failed to arrive to time, and breakfast was not served till five in the afternoon.

This is how the daily horse is apportioned at the Zoo:—Ten lions, 11 lbs. each; three lion cubs, 6 lbs each; eight tigers, 13 lbs each; ten leopards, 6 lbs. each; three jagaurs, 6 lbs. each; smaller animals and birds, 60 lbs.; grand total, 376 lbs.

The superintendent of the gardens told the Daily Mirror that many carriage people send their old and infirm horses to the Zoo, where they know they will be humanely killed.

The largest firm of horse-flesh dealers in London threw some light on the horse-flesh traffic the other day.

"From September to May we slaughter nearly 1,000 horses a week in our yards," said the manager. "Most of the flesh is purchased by cats'-meat men."

An East End dealer told the reporter that live horses, sometimes numbering 1,500 to 2,000 are shipped every three days to Germany and Austria. They are sold for about $5 apiece and mostly made into sausages.

UNINTERESTING.

"You say it was not an interesting oration."

"Not very interesting. The crowd was so orderly and did so little cheering that you could hear every word of the speech."

THINNER AND LIGHTER BOOTS.

Foot Covering Becoming as Soft and Pliable as Gloves.

Boots and shoes as thin and as pliable as gloves are probable in the near future.

In response to the demand of the public, boots for some time have been steadily becoming thinner and lighter, and now, with glace kid supreme in the place of patent leather, there are boots in shop windows so pliable, in spite of quite normal strength, that heel and toe might be bent to meet without detriment to shape. Why not have boots approximating to gloves? the public has begun to ask—boots with flexible soles a little thicker than the uppers, which shall fit the foot with the lightness and closeness of silk? To this ideal the bootmakers are rapidly approaching.

"For a long time past," said a manufacturer in London, "the public has been asking for thinner soles and thinner uppers. The lighter the boot the more comfortable to wear, the smarter in appearance. You may guess how the recent hot summer has emphasized the cry. Where in the past we sold ten pairs of patent leathers, we now sell one. Glace kind, light and neat and strong, has now supplanted everything.

The question, however, is whether even the lightest kind of leather will be light enough in the future. We may even see silk boots with strong, thin leather soles, or in the summer lace 'open-work' boots and shoes with hardened paper soles. At the present time, such is the insistence on comfort and lightness, that ladies are wearing sandals, though for the most part they hide them from view by long skirts."

In Womanly Ailments and Weaknesses

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure Soothes, Heals and Cures while the Patient Sleeps.

The best remedy which physicians know for Female Weaknesses is composed of parts of a certain white lily. To this are added other remedies which draw out the poisons and heal the inflamed membranes. This soothing antiseptic local application is known by druggists and physicians everywhere as DR. SHOOP'S NIGHT CURE—because it cures while the patient sleeps and the morning finds the pain, the inflammation, the discharges, abated. The lives of many women are records of martyrdom. EMPIRE ! EMPIRE ! EMPIRE !

The Empire Cream Separator outwears other Separators, lasts longer and requires fewer repairs, because—It's simpler in construction and—It is more carefully built. That has been the Experience of thousands and thousands of farmers who have used the Empire. Its easy to see why. Being so much simpler in construction it has fewer parts to get out of order. The bowl being so much lighter and there being so much less mechanism, there naturally is lessfriction and wear. It will pay you to consider these things.

I can truly say that I have tried several methods of handling milk, and can recommend a separator to be far inadvance of all other moethds.

I can also say that I have tried several other makes of separators and prefer the EMPIRE to any of the others on account of it being easily cleaned, a close skimmer, and the lightest to operate. I am

JOHN FOSTER, Chesterville,
Agent for Winchester and Finch Townships.

To the Editor of the Record, Chesterville.

Dear Sir,—It was with some little amusement that I read your communication in last week's issue, evidently from the pen of some lacrosse enthusiast of Berwick, who desires to magnify the merits of the Berwick club, in the eyes of the public.

My object in replying is not to justify the Morewood club, as no club is perfect (not even Berwick), but to correct some misstatements. Your correspondent evidently blames the Morewood club for their failure to appear in Chesterville at the picnic on Oct. 3rd. I may say in reply that up to Saturday evening before, the Morewood club were willing and ready to play, but as the Chesterville committee would give no guarantee of expenses, and as it was with the understanding that Morewood in the first place agreed to play, the blame can be placed with the Chesterville committee, and not with the Morewood club. It seemed hardly reasonable that the boys should give up their work in a busy season and go to Chesterville without any hope of expenses.

Your correspondent also says that twice before Morewood has failed to play in Berwick. This is not so. On only one occasion did Morewood disappoint Berwick, and then no definite pledge was given to go. Morewood promised to send word on a certain Thursday evening whether or not they could go. Word was sent on Thursday evening of their inability to play on the following Saturday owing to the busy season. Surely it was not the fault of Morewood if Berwick had posted notices about the game before they had had any definite word.

We have always tried to use Berwick as well as possible and our players have in many instances helped Berwick out when they had a particularly hard game to play.

Perhaps the Berwick correspondent was sore because his club was unable to exhibit the two ringers from Cornwall who were coming up to play at Chesterville on Oct. 3rd. We are also very pleased to learn that we are to be bothered no more with Berwick wanting a game. This certainly is a good way to kill the sport, which I venture to prophesy is at the present time, as far as Berwick is concerned, on its last legs.

Owing to the expected rush of immigration next year and the inadequacy of the quarters at the Union station, Toronto, to accommodate the influx during the busy days of the past season, the Ontario government is reported to be negotiating for the purchase of a residence near the corner of Peter and Wellington streets The building will cost about $12,000, and will be used as a shelter and distributing point.
