Blaze Extinguished Brewers Warehouse

For the second time during the past few months, firemen were called to the Brewers Warehouse on Lock St. about 2.30 Wednesday afternoon.

The fire was discovered by Gordon Smith, who turned in the alarm. The local fire brigade answered the call promptly and extinguished the blaze, although they were hampered by dense smoke from burning cartons. It is thought that the fire had its start from a spark from a nearby stove getting into the paper cartons. Several cases of the brew were broken or damaged, and loss is estimated at approximately $300.

BRIDE-TO-BE HONOURED

On Tuesday evening, March 14th, a number of Y.P.U. members of the Morrisburg United Church met at the home of Miss Alice Cameron to honour Miss Wilma Willard and Dalton Smith, on their approaching marriage.

The first part of the evening was spent in various exciting games and contests under the direction of Rev. Reeves and Charlotte Smith. Then with Rev. Reeves at the piano together with a rhythm band, a musical program followed.

The presentation of gifts followed, when Alice Cameron representing a fictitious "High Chief" of Hams and Bacon, of Smith Estate-Willard property, read an address regarding such. At the proper time Charlotte Smith, Stewart Blancher and Willie McIntyre, entered with a hoax gift, and then a genuine one—a Duncan Fife tyled coffee table. Then Dalton, on behalf of Wilma, thanked the Y.P.U. for their gift.

The party ended with the usual procedure — a gracious lunch around a nicely decorated table with pink daffodils .

The regular meetting of the Women's Institute was held in the Auditorium of the Collegiate Institute on Thursday evening March 9th with a good attendance. Mrs. Ray Coligan, in her usual pleasing manner, gave a reading "An Irish Legend", responding to an encore with the humorous selections "Mrs. Malone and the Censor", "Larry O'Dee" and "The Famous Mulligan Ball". These were much enjoyed.

Lee Ouderkirk, a promising young singer, favoured the audience with "Kitty of Cobram" and as an encore "The Harp That Once Thro' Tarra's Hall". He was accompanied by Mrs. George Gorrell. A short talk on the early days of Morrisburg was given by Miss Gertrude Campbell.

Two young singers, Deanna Dillabough and Marilyn Caloren sang very sweetly "My Wild Irish Rose" the audience joining in the second chorus They responded to applause with "That's An Irish Lullaby". Mrs. Geo. Gorrell was accompanist.

ONE FOR THE IRISH

This one is an oldie, but because it's St. Patrick's Day, here it is again.

An Irishman working for a Dutchman asked for an increase in pay. The Dutchman replied: "If you are worth it, Pat, I'll give it to you, but first let's see what you do in a year. We have 365 days in a year; you sleep 8 hours every day, which makes 122 days you sleep. Taken from 365 days, this leaves 243. Now you have 8 hours recreation each day, which makes 122 days, and taken from 243 days leaves 121 days. We have 52 Sundays in a year which you have off, leaving you 69 days. 14 days vacation off this leaves 55 days. You don't work Saturday afternoon. This makes 26 days in a year and you now have 29 days left. Now, Pat you allow an hour and a half for meals, which totals in a year 28 days. Take this off and you have 1 day left. I always give you St. Patrick's day off, so I ask you Pat, do you think you are entitled to a raise?"

Pat replied: "No, I guess not, but what the hell have I been doing?"

SPORTS-&-c

by A SIXBIT CRITIC

It looks as if these athletic popularity polls might be of some practical use after all—some use, that is, outside of providing weary sports writers with handy space-fillers. Since Jim Thorpe was voted to be not only the greatest footballer, but also the greatest athlete of the half-century, there's a move on foot to give the big Indian some of the credit—and a little of the cash—he richly deserves.

They're agitating for the return to Thorpe of the Olympic medals and trophies rudely wrested from him when a horrified Amateur Athletic Committee learned that Jim had, at an earlier date, not only played baseball under an assumed name but also—the cad!—accepted payment in cash for so doing.

The only difficulty about this is that nobody seems to know exactly where those priceless mementoes are located now, and we doubt if Thorpe is worrying very much, one way or the other. "A kiss on the hand is very thrilling, but a diamond bracelet lasts forever!" said the young lady in 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes'; and Jim Thorpe wasn't the first—nor will he be the last athlete to discover that something you can exchange for hamburger or groceries is often preferable to all the engraved athletic bric-a-brac you could stuff under Ringling's Big Top. * * *

So, as we said, we don't believe Thorpe is losing much sleep over when, if ever, those trophies are returned. He always did have a way of taking things in his stride. "You, sir," said the King of Sweden at the conclusion of the aforementioned Olympics, "are the greatest athlete in the world." "Thanks, king," was Mr. Thorpe's simple and dignified reply. And if, during the past twenty years or so, Big Jim has sometimes thought himself a bit shabbily treated by a sporting world that once hailed his every move, he's kept it to himself and gone about his business without bellyaching.

If Thorpe had been a bit more vocal about himself and his doings, chances are he'd never have come down to gatekeeping in a Hollywood movie studio as a means of existence. But he always preferred deeds to words; and getting an interview out of him was about as rewarding as trying to pull a hippo's teeth with a nutpick. "What was the most serious inury you ever got in football?" a reporter once asked him. Instead of coming out with a catalogue of breakages, contusions and stitches, the Indian merely shot back another query. "How could anyone ever get hurt playing football?" he asked—and it was a sincerely-meant question.

Pop Warner, athletic director of the Carlisle Indian School, was the man who first spotted Thorpe—and who developed him, so far as anyone could develop anything that was close to perfection from the start. Jim was just 15 years old and a hurdles race had already started when Warner saw him get up from the sidelines, take off after the leader, and beat him handily. And Thorpe wasn't even wearing athletic trunks or proper shoes.

That was Jim's start as a track-and-fielder. From then on he used to put on what were practically one-man shows of an almost incredible nature. Carlisle would schedule a dual athletic meet with some other college—generally one from double to ten times its own size. So Jim would spend a relaxed afternoon winning the sprints, hurdles, broad jump, high jump, shotput and a couple of other events, seldom less than seven.

Thorpe was lazy, and sometimes careless. If any man ever understood how to handle him, it was Warner. Yet Jim used to drive Pop almost crazy at times. For a long time Warner couldn't persuade Jim to do any line plunging. "Why run over 'em when you can run around 'em?" he would insist. Then there came a game played against Syracuse in heavy mud; so heavy that the first half ended in a scoreless tie. Thorpe, in his efforts to run the ends, had been stopped in his tracks. So he just started blasting straight down the middle, the final score being Carlisle 38, Syracuse 0.

More than that, Jim discovered in this game that line-crashing was plenty of fun; and from then on he was a quadruple threat. He had had few equals as a punter, booming the ball downfield for sixty or seventy yards, with plenty of height to allow his tacklers to get down under it, and placing it with uncanny accuracy, for one thing.

For another, he was a field goal kicker par excellence, whatever that means. In beating Harvard 18 to 15, Thorpe booted four 3-pointers, the last from the 48 yard line; and one of the added attractions, when he appeared later as a professional, was large James going out to the centrefield stripe, at half time, with a dozen or more footballs. These he would proceed to kick alternately over the opposite crosspieces, making this difficult stunt appear as easy as shooting fish in a drain pipe.

His ghostlike openfield running was helped tremendously by three tricks he had developed. He had a change of pace that was bewildering, and his ability to stop on the proverbial dime left intending tacklers floundering on all sides. If a tackler got a bit closer, he had a straight arm that was—unlike others we have seen—perfectly legal, yet which hit like a battering ram. And if a tackler got still closer, Thorpe had what have been termed the most highly educated hips in sports history. No fooling, he could stun a man with the swing of his hips; in fact, he frequently did.

Which will have to be all, at least for now, regarding Mr. Thorpe—except this. If it's true that he's going to appear this coming season as an assistant coach—and probably perform his half time drop kicking specialty — he'll be well worth going a Sabbath day's journey to have a look at. Fifty years from now you'll be telling your great grandchildren that you saw the best that ever pulled on a sweat-shirt—and they won't be able to tell you any different.

THE FARM FRONT

by John Russell

As I look out the window, I see a young blizzard swirling, and it looks as if the driveway will be drifted at least three feet deep before evening. Well, thank goodness, the son and heir has a heavy date tonight, and will have to do the shovelling—or else. So, let's think about something more pleasurable—strawberries, for instance.

It may not be news to you—although it was to me up 'til a day or so ago—that strawberry growers in many places have found something that will do a better job of weeding, and a cheaper one, than anything previously discovered. It's geese! Yes, GEESE—the plural of goose.

Last year, out in the State of Washington, a farmer named Theodore Berry put 16 geese on his weediest three acres of strawberries. Those geese cleaned that three-acre patch of all sorts of weeds—even quack grass—and they never even touched a strawberry leaf.

Those three acres made a good profit for Berry. The year before he had spent $500 hand-weeding them, and still the yield was so low that he lost money.

Needless to say, Berry started looking for more geese. He couldn't find any, so he hatched out a batch of goslings in an incubator. This year, he'll have 75 geese weeding 45 acres of berries.

Geese also have been used for strawberry weeding by growers in the berry area around Paducah, Kentucky.

"To find out why a goose will eat crab grass, saw brier, wild parsley, pig weeds and practically any other kind of weed you can name, and not touch a strawberry plant you'll have to ask a goose or a gander," says W. W. Magill, extension horticulturist.

Growers down that way keep the geese in the fields until the berries are ripe. They won't touch green stems or berries. After the crop is picked, the farmers return the geese to the field.

Most growers put up a simple range shelter about three feet high, consisting of four posts with cross bars to support the boards or straw to shade their feathered weeders in hot weather. They also provide plenty of drinking water and a small amount of shelled corn.

Theodore Berry has tried geese in raspberry patches as well as strawberries and says they are better than hand weeders. Any breed of geese will do.

But don't put them among your currant plants, he warns. They like currants almost as well as a nice piece of quack grass.

Well, there you have it—and it sounds like something worth giving a trial. And if it shouldn't work out—well, personally, I'd rather carve a hunk off a nice roast goose than sit down to all the strawberries you could cram into the Niagara Gorge.

Millions of dollars are spent annually, on fertilizers of various sort. But it's surprising how many folks don't get the most out of the money they spend just because they don't know how to apply those fertilizers.

South of the border, state agricultural colleges, in conjunction with the National Fertilizer Association, have been conducting tests over a period of many years. I'm passing along to you some of the recommendations made:

For Hay and Sod Crops

These include pastures and alfalfa. Drill the fertilizer three to six inches deep, either before or at the time of seeding. If you're making a very heavy application on hard, stony ground, and have trouble keeping the drill deep enough, plow down about half the fertilizer and drill in the rest before or during seeding.

Top dressing in early fall, late winter, or early spring, with a grain drill or spreader, helps keep a stand.

For Small Grains

Drill the fertilizer in the furrow with the seed. While the fertilizer may reduce germination slightly, it isn't serious, and yields are higher than when the fertilizer is broadcast, or drilled before or after seeding. Apply nitrogen as top dressing in late winter or early spring.

For Potatoes

If you're using more than 1,000 pounds per acre, and your soil is heavy, save 1,000 pounds for application at planting. Work any amount over that into the seed bed before planting. At planting time, place the fertilizer in bands two inches to the sides and slightly below the seed pieces. (The two bands should be about six inches apart)

NOTE THE EXITS IN CASE OF FIRE

The primitive urge for self-preservation has caused many a tragedy. Perhaps the greatest cause of panic is the cry of "Fire". When you are in a theatre or other public building, make a mental note of the nearest exit. If an emergency arises, walk, do not run, to that door. Sound, sensible thinking and acting during the early moments of a crisis will do much to avert loss of life. Any act for the common good is surely proof of "Good Citizenship".

PETER LAPIER

The many friends and relatives of Mr. Peter Lapier were deeply shocked to hear of his sudden death which occurred on March 8th at his home in Williamsburg. Mr. Lapier was born in 1878 near Grantley in Stormont county and resided there until three months ago, when owing to ill health he had to leave his farm and took up residence in Williamsburg. While there he made many friends.

On February 23 of this year he suffered another stroke whihch left him helpless and all that medical aid and loving care could do were to no avail and he passed away March 8th.

Mr. Lapier was the youngest son of the late Andrew Lapier and his wife Abigail Shey. On Dec. 13, 1911 he was united in marriage to Miss da Sheets, formerly of Wales, who still survives. Besides his sorrowing widow, he also leaves three daughters, Mrs. Harold Algire (Nellie) of Williamsburg; Mrs. Andrew Dawson (Lyda) of Sandtown and Mrs. Bruce Harper (Hilda) of Dundela. One daughter Alice predeceased him in 1923. Also surviving is one sister Ann of Cornwall and 4 grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews. Mr. Lapier was a loving husband and father and will be greatly missed by all who knew him.

The funeral service was held from his late residence at Williamsburg to Grantly United Church. The Rev. H. M. Beach of Finch conducted the service assisted by the Rev. G. Fee of Williamsburg. The hymns used were 'Nearer My God to Thee" and "Rock of Ages". The choir sang "Does Jesus Care?"

Pall bearers were Mr. Tyrell Waldroff, Mr. Alfred Dunbar, Mr. Earl Waldroff, Mr. Bert Winters, Mr. Roy Shaver, Mr. William Ostler.

The many floral tributes placed above the casket showed the esteem in which Mr. Lapier was held and his passing will be greatly mourned by all.

A BIT OF LEGAL MOCKERY

The degrading spectacle of John L. Lewis indulging in a bit of legal skullduggery in the courts to outwit the Government of the United States sets at naught the fundamental principle of union responsibility. It does so because not even a ten year old would be fooled by the UMW assertion, indefence of a contempt of court charge, that the prolongation of the coal strike resulted from the independent action of individual miners, and not from the action of the union itself.

Mr. Lewis' assertion, that when the miners declined to go back to work, they did so in contravention of his orders, suggests one thing and one thing only. That is, that the miners were no longer acting collectively through their union. If this is true, then it is fair to ask, by what right do Mr. Lewis and other Union executives, speak for the miners, bargain for them, and now sign contracts for them?

The foundation upon which unionism rests is that a labor union represents its working members, that it is a responsible agent for them. Union leaders both in the United States and Canada have themselves for years insisted on this principle. John L. Lewis' legal manoeuver does violence to this principle in flagrant ashion. If trade unionism is to main ain and enjoy public confidence, organized labor should be the first to denounce and disown the strategy whereby the UMW has successfully defied the Government of the United States and made a mockery of the law.

PENTECOSTAL RALLY HELD HERE ON MONDAY

The Pentecostal Tabernacle in Morrisburg, was filled to capacity on Monday, March 13, which was the day of the monthly zone rally of all the Pentecostal churches in this section. In spite of the wintry weather, ministers and members of their respective congregations arrived from points as far as Shawville, Que., in time for the afternoon service. Rev. E. H. Kerr, pastor of Bethel Pentecostal Tabernacle, Ottawa, brought a very inspirational message on the Christian's personal responsibility in carrying the good news of the Gospel to the world.

The evening service was attended by the greatest number with folk from Morrisburg, Brockville, and Cornwall making the contributing factor for a well filled auditorium. The highlight of the evening was the message from the Word of God, presented by Rev. Fred Parlee, evangelist from the Maritime Provinces. His theme, taken from Deuteronomy chapter eleven was: "Days of Heaven Upon Earth". Rev. Mr. Parlee is an accomplished pianist and accordianist and his musical presentations were very much appreciated. Additional music was provided by the Cardinal Pentecostal folk under the direction of Pastor Bill Scott.

The ladies of the local Pentecostal Tabernacle were well prepared for the occasion, and meals for all out of town guests were served in the dining room on the second floor of the building. It was also their privilege to serve a lunch to many more at the conclusion fo the evening service. Both of these provisions were made without charge to the recipients. A vote of thanks was made to all who had a part in it and for making the day a huge success, both in a material sense nd in a spiritual sense. Many compoliments were paid the local church for the splendid time enjoyed by those from out of town.

WHITTEKER — WHITTEKER

A very happy event took place at Williamsburg Lutheran Parsonage on Wednesday, March 8th, at 1.30 o'clock when Audrey Elizabeth Whitteker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Z. Whitteker of Williamsburg, was united in marriage to William Lawrence Whitteker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Whitteker, of Brinston. Rev. J. S. Neff officiated.

Mis Betty Whitteker, sister of the groom acted as bridesmaid, while Orlin Barkley was best man.

The bride was attired in powder blue moire cloth with navy accessories. The bridesmaid was gowned in powder blue also.

Following the ceremony the happy couple left for the United States. On their return they will reside in Chesterville.

IT IS NOT MONEY ALONE

More than a million and a half people deal with the Bank of Montreal, and they know that it is not money alone they deal in when they come to us. It goes beyond that. These people have confidence in the Bank; they know that their money is safe with us, and that they will be fairly treated in their business dealings.

We try to keep constantly in mind that the Bank is not primarily an impressive row of figures or an imposing building. We think rather of the Bank as the local manager and his staff, on whom our customers can always call for friendly counsel and service. Our branch-banking system is founded upon this relationship.

A man's relationship with his bank manager is, and should be, a highly personal one. Yet in each of our 549 branches, behind this confidential relationship, there stand the resources and stability of a nation-wide, century-old institution. Thus the strength of the institution is linked with human understanding in the service of the individual.

I believe sincerely that this is the spirit guiding our relations with the public today. Without such a spirit, the Bank could not maintain or justify its place in the economy of this country, nor would we be able to give our best to Canada in the years of great promise which lie ahead.

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: I am deeply in love with a young man who comes from a fine family. His background is all that mine is not.

"My mother never was married. She had three children, each with a different father. For the past 10 years, she has lived with a lazy, no-good man who drinks and mistreats her. When she runs out of money, she calls on me.

"I was the only girl. I was pushed around so much that at 16 I ran away, and lived with a family I worked for. Now, by hard work and saving, I have put myself through school with no help from anybody. I now have a good job and a good home. I have bettered myself, and have benefitted by my mother's mistakes.

"I am so ashamed! I am afraid to tell this boy. What should I do Discouraged."

Truth Is Best

If this fine young man has already told you he loves you and wants to marry you, that was the moment to tell him the truth. If you did not, then tell him when he does propose.

If he is a man of character, he will understand that the disgrace you feel so deeply is not your own, but your mother's. If he has the right stuff in him, he can only admire you more for the struggle you have made to rise above your inheritance. He will love you even better because you have suffered so much, and he will do all a husband can to protect you from any unhappiness in the future.

It is a high tribute to your innate decency and standards of thinking and living that you have arrived where you are today. In spite of your mother's loose living, you have made yourself a person whom any right-thinking man or woman should proudly welcome into the family.

"There are no illegitimate children; there are only illegitimate parents!" Remember that. Father up your courage, and tell this young man the whole story. No matter what happens, you will have the consolation of knowing you could not stoop to deceit.

To "Jean": I think the time has come to tell your husband that unless he stays home more, and takes you out regularly, you will leave him again. And this time you will not come back until he has found a place for you two to live alone.

When you consented to live with his mother, he made all sorts of promises. You two would be alone together most of the time; she would mind her own affairs and never interfere, etc. The opposite, you have found, is the rule. He is almost never at home, and his mother not only criticizes everything you do, she is entirely too curious about how you spend your money, and she has driven away almost all your friends.

What is your life now? Working in an office all day, coming home to do housework alone, waiting for your husband to wander in late at night. And you have been married less than a year!

If you two took a small apartment and furnished it, you would be content to wait for a house—so long as you were alone. If all your words have not convinced your husband of the justice of such a plan, then he will have to be shocked into complying with it.

If there is a skeleton in your family closet, keep it to yourself until there is a reason to reveal it. Then tell the truth. Anne Hirst will help you find the courage, if you write her at Box 123, Eighteenth Street, New Toronto. Ont.

For Sale—1 Stomach

An enterprising Japanese wants to sell his stomach for $2,000. He declares it is three times normal size and that he can swallow rat poison, broken glass, nails and needles.

He'll have to give better value than that for the money, I'm afraid. A soldier who joined a Guards regiment in London swalled a 10½-inch-long table knife, two boot studs, two collar studs, 16 trouser buttons, one 3-inch bodkin, two large needles and a tooth brush. All were removed during a 40-minute operation.

A French medical journal tells of a man who swallows corks. While being attended at a Paris hotel, he stole the doctor's watch, chain and seals—and swallowed them!

Brunel, the scientist, inhaled a half-sovereign while playing with children. After doctors had failed to extract it with specially made forceps, Brunel had himself whirled around on a centrifugal table built to his own design. The spinning produced convulsive coughing—and up came the coin.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM
by Gwendoline P Clarke

Some weeks go by as quiet and uneventful as drifting clouds on a summer day. But not last week—anything but! There was plenty doing both at home and abroad—the British election, our belated Canadian winter; installation of a milking machine and my one-woman quilting bee.

Dealing with these events by virtue of their importance rather than their natural sequence, we come first to the British election—because what happens in Britain, either politically or economically, certainly affects Ginger Farm and the rest of Ontario. Like most people we went to bed Thursday night expecting the British Labour party would be returned to power with a good majority. And we were a little fearful—fearful that the Socialist Government, in its headlong nationalization plans would be taking the people too far out on a limb, in a way so far removed from British traditions it was hard to imagine that it could be a success. But first thing Friday morning the trend showed signs of a change, and by noon—well, you know the story. When Partner came in to dinner, I turned on the radio. "Listen," I said, "listen to the news!" Partner listened—with growing incredulity. "But what happened—I thought Labour was in with a big majority?"

And what did happen? That is what everyone would like to know. And the end of the story is not yet. In fact, for quite a while, the rest of the world will be watching the British political crisis with increasing interest.

Well, while the British Isles were getting "hot," Canada was getting cold, with its first prolonged spell of winter weather. It snowed and it snowed; the wind blew and the mercury almost lost itself at the base of the thermometer. Highways were blocked; side roads impassable, and most farm lanes plugged as tight as could be. Then as we started watching our coal bins, the news of the coal miners' strike in the U.S. did not make us feel any warmer. Our lane filled in, along with the rest, and Bob was obliged to leave the car at the road. But when the wind dropped, he borrowed a snow plow—that is a tractor with a blade attached to the front of it—and it did a real good job of plowing out the lane. Now we can drive in and out with the greatest of ease—at least you can if you want to be out driving—which I don't. And it's thankful I am to have someone at home who can get the bread, pick up the groceries and bring in the mail.

Last week was also eventful at the barn. Another chapter written into the history of Ginger Farm—the installation of a milking machine, no less! This, of course, is entirely Bob's venture and only after plenty of consideration, pro and con. We heard all kinds of stories . . . a milking machine produces mastitis; if the cups are left on too long, they draw blood; some cows won't let their milk down at all, and we also heard of several farmers who had bought milking machines and after a while, gone back to hand milking. Granted all these instances were true, Bob figured they were in the minority; there were, on the other hand, hundreds of farmers, even some in this district, where milking machines were used to advantage, and without injury to the cows.

Came the night when the milker was used for the first time. I was just itching to go down to the barn, but concluded the less there were around the better. So I stayed in the house, waiting and wondering. Since not one of our cows had ever seen one of these mechanical contraptions, there was no telling what their reaction would be and I knew the nervous tension would be hard on Partner. At long last, the men came in for supper, including the agent from whom Bob bought the machine. And everything was wonderful! Not one of the cows offered to kick at all, and one cow which had always done plenty of stepping around stood as quiet as a lamb and gave more milk than usual. I thought everything was fine. But during the evening, Partner got deathly white. He was cold and his stomach became upset. I was alarmed until Bob figured out that it was a case of mild shock. Partner had been more keyed up than he or any of us realized; watching the cows, ready to deal with them should they become obstreporous. And then nothing happened! It was a complete letdown and the reaction produced the condition I have described. Bob said he had seen the same thing happen dozens of times during the war.

So Partner went to bed and in the morning, he was his usual self. Since then, everything has been all right. Of course, it is Bob who runs the milker, but I suppose the time will come when Partner will want to have a go at it, too.

Space all gone—guess my quilt story must wait until next week.

Easter Food Drive Launched by UEFB

Following urgent and repeated requests from its British Advisory Council, the United Emergency Food Fund for Britain is conducting a campaign through the Ontario committee, under the joint chairmanship of Mrs. J. A. R. Mason and Charles E. Rea, M.P.P., to meet the demands for food and clothing for the needy in Great Britain. The Easter drive is continuing to the end of March with a concerted collection effort in Toronto, set for Wednesday, March 22.

All Ontario citizens are being asked to contribute tinned foods. Clothing is also being sought, but it is urged that apparel donated be clean and in condition to wear. Most municipal councils have agreed to co-operate with local committes so that contributions may be left at fire halls. Otherwise, citizens are requested to forward their parcels direct to the Ontario headquarters of the U.E.F.B. in Toronto, at Melita and Rains Ave.

A large number of parcels have been received at the warehouse in Toronto where the tinned food shipments coming in are broken down and re-packed in eight-pound cartons. When these arrive overseas at the London depot, they will be dispatched to families in genuine need from a list of the most worthy, compiled by the impartial British Advisory Council, of which H.R.H. Princess Alice is president.

The British continue to subsist on a marginal and monotonous diet that works particular hardships on the infirm and aged pensioners, U.E.F.B. officials declare. It is expected that through the generosity of Canadians, in this land of plenty, those in more unfortunate circumstances in Britain will enjoy this Easter gift, one that will do much to bind more closely the ties between the people of these two countries.

The SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. R. Barclay Warren

The Faith That Sustained The Church

Acts 26:19-23; Rom. 5:1-8; Heb. 12:1-2.

Golden Text: I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day.—2 Tim. 1:12b.

There are a number of circumstances which indicate that within the next couple of years there may be a definite turning to the faith. There is an undertone of eagerness for reality which all the giddy pleasures of the world are not affording. The public press is giving more space to articles concerning the spiritual need of the people. There is a tendency to be more attentive to the ministry of those who are fearless in their denunciation of sin and who proclaim Jesus Christ as One who can save from all sin.

Paul was a Gospel preachcer. He showed to the Gentiles "that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance." Far from propagating something novel, he was "saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come: that Christ should suffer, and that He should rise from the dead, and should show light unto the people, and to the Gentiles." Being justified by faith, we have peace with God." Possessors of this peace can glory in tribulations for "tribulation worketh patience." The Christian can commute the apparent disaster into a blessing for faith knows "that all things work together for good to them that love God."

In the passage from Hebrews we are reminded of the many witnesses to the faith and of Jesus Christ, the Author and Finisher of our faith. It is by faith in Him that we can run the race successfully. Faith in a creed or a church will not suffice. We must have faith in a person. That person must be Christ who died for the ungodly. In Him we see God's love. With faith in Him we can say triumphantly with Paul, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

"Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star . . ."—Some folk thought it was a miracle when a star-shaped object hovered above the steeple of this new church, during opening services. But freckled, six-year-old Billy Strong (inset) had the explanation. He was flying his home-made kite near the church when a gust of wind broke the string and sailed it over the church where its wires were entangled in telephone wires.

- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ⅓ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 2 cups hot milk
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups cubed bread
- ½ package (3 ozs.) Bakers chocolate chips

Method — Heat butter and sugar in frying pan over low heat until sugar is melted, stirring constantly. Add milk gradually; stir to blend. Cool. Add eggs, vanilla, and salt. Arrange alternate layers of bread cubes and chocolate chips in greased 1-quart baking dish. Pour milk mixture over top. Place in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 45 minutes. Serve warm with cream. Makes 6 servings.

- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- 1 package (6 ozs.) Bakers chocolate chips
- ½ cup chopped nut meats
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Method — Cream shortening, add sugars gradually and cream together, until light and fluffy. Add egg and mix thoroughly. Sift flour once, measure, add salt and soda, and sift again. Add flour in two parts and mix well. Add chocolate chips, nuts, and vanilla and mix thoroughly. Drop from teaspoon on ungreased baking sheet about 2 inches apart. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 10 to 12 minutes. Makes about 50 delicious, tasty cookies.

Too Risky

A woman had called on the vicar with a distressing tale about her daughter who was very ill. She was anxious for the vicar to visit the the girl.

"I'll certainly call on her," said the yicar. "But I don't remember ever having seen you in my church. Do you attend often?"

"No," she replied. "We happen to be chapel people."

The vicar looked surprised.

"Then why didn't you send for your own minister?"

"Oh, it wouldn't be fair," was the reply. "You see, it's scarlet fever my daughter's got."

Real Compulsory Dental Service

Members of a tribe of natives in Northern Rhodesia have an infallible means of recognizing fellow members of the tribe—practically all of them, men and women, lack six upper front teeth. And all the missing teeth were deliberately removed. Some details of this queer, teeth-removing rite have been given by two missionaries who recently worked among the Baila-Batonga tribe.

At the age of puberty the same teeth—four incisors and two canine—are always removed. The "dentists" are old men and women belonging to the tribe who crudely knock the teeth loose with a hammer and iron chisel fashioned from disused agricultural hoes. The patients invariable endure the ordeal in complete silence.

Some girls who objected to undergoing the operation, said one missionary, were captured as they slept and dragged off to have their teeth knocked out. Those who resisted fiercely were bound and their mouths forced open.

The missionary surprised two girls admiring themselves in a school window-pane. One who was examining her perfectly white front teeth was heard saying: "I shall look very nice when my teeth are knocked out"

Zebras, which are tabooed by t he tribe were the origin of the custom. In order to appear as little like zebras as possible (the animals have front teeth) the natives knocked their own out.

One Way Out

The superintendent of a zoo was mailing an order. He began the note, "Kindly send two mongooses." Somehow that didn't seem right to him, so he started again with, "Kindly send two mongeese." Still he wasn't satisfied. Finally he settled his problem by writing, "Kindly send me a mongoose." Then he signed his name and added a P.S.: "Send another one with it."

Undies Are Outies — Hollywood designer Doris Cagan is not convinced that bras, corsets, girdles and similar restrainers must be worn as undergarments. Doris camouflages her undies to look like outer clothes, and one of the resulting "glamor-tops" she models above.

Miracle Drug May Become Cheaper

Compound E is made by applying three dozen successive chemcal processes to a complex material extracted from ox bile. But it takes over 12,000 tons of beef cattle to make enough to keep one person free from rheumatism for a year! That is why it is so costly.

But there's hope that it may soon be cheaper. It has been found that the same substance can be produced by applying only twenty processes to a material found in the seeds of a tropical African vine. American scientists are hoping eventually to cultivate this vine in America. Meanwhile, similar vegetable sources may be found. Now that scientists know what to look for, they may well discover a cheaper source somewhere in the plant kingdom. Nothing that might make this miracle drug generally available will be left untried.

Penicillin, for example, now costs a hundred times less than it did originally. It's cheaper than the packing and labelling materials used to market it. That surely looks well for Compound E. We can at least hope that it will not remain so costly.

Smart Elk!

A rancher in Wyoming's Star Valley hung a lighted lantern in his stock yard in the belief it would keep elk away from his haystack. E. Von Almen said he looked out late at night to see if the light was still burning. It was moving around the stock yard.

"I discovered," he said, 'that an elk bull had the lighted lantern hanging from one of his antlers and was showing the elk cows where the best hay was."

IN MEMORIAM

CASSELMAN—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Clara Casselman, who departed this life March 21st, 1948, Morrisburg, Ont.
Though her loving voice is silent,
And her true heart ceased to beat,
Yet we miss her well-known footsteps,
And her face we used to meet.
She was a loving wife and mother--
A mother kind and true;
A better friend never lived—
Her equals are but few.
—Sadly missed by Husband and family.

THOM—In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. M. Thom, who passed away on March 17th, 1949.
