Tried to Hang Himself.

A young man named Arthur Wilson Blackman, who had been employed in the Frost & Wood shops at Smith's Falls for some months, was laid off last week and went to Carleton Place to seek employment. He had been in the town but a couple of days when he was discovered in the yard of the Mississippi Hotel with the end of a rope around his neck, the other being fastened to a third storey window of the building. When first noticed Blackman was trying to knot the rope, which was apparently too long for his purpose. He was placed in the lockup and later sent to the asylum. It is stated that he came there from Chesterville, but on enquiry we fail to locate his having resided here.

Cruelty to Home Boy.

Detective Keuly, of Montreal, Government detective, from information furnishrd him by the Barnado Home authorities at Toronto, laid complaint before Magistrate Collison on the 10th inst., against Arnel Johnston, of Dixon Corners, for unlawfully ill-treating and unmercifully beating a Home boy named Fred Quickfall, aged 14, who was in Johnston's employ. The boy showed black and blue marks on his face and back, where he had been inhumanly whipped. On one occasion a neighbor, Mr. Morehead, caugnt him in the act of whipping the poor little fellow and stopped him. There were seven witnesses against Johnston, but none were sworn as he pleaded guilty to the charge, and said he was sorry, which satisfied the complainant, who requested that the sentence of the court be not imposed. Johnston paid the costs of action $19, and the case was dismissed. The boy was taken from Johnston and placed with with Jacob Barclay, near Dixon Corners, who will give him a good home and treat him kindly, as a poor little orphan boy ought to be treated.—Iroquois News.

Only One Painless Corn Cure.

Hundreds have tried but no one has succeeded in making as good a remedy as Putman's Painless Corn Extractor. It's by far the best. Beware of substitutes for "Putman's."

$6,000 Fire at Brockville.

A store and dwelling owned and occupied by H. F. Judson, Frankville, was completely destroyed by fire at eight o'clock Friday morning with a loss of $6,000. Burning paper in a stove in the rear of the store was the cause. The flames spread so rapidly that the contents could not be saved.

Bridge Collapsed.

The new reinforced concrete bridge, over River Beaudette, near Lancaster, collapsed on Thursday at six o'clock. None of the workmen who were engaged upon the bridge at the time were injured. The steel work had all been finished. The workmen were about to start on the pouring in of the concrete, when the structure swayed and suddenly collapsed on to the foundation of the old bridge. The specifications called for a structure capable of bearing fifteen tons in addition to its own weight. The estimated loss is $4,000.

There will be an "At Home" and pie social in the basement of the new Methodist Church on Friday, 27th inst. A social and enjoyable evening may be expected. Tea served from 6 to 8.30. All will be made welcome.

Little Girl Saved Her Sister.

While some little girls were bathing in the St. Lawrence river near Point Iroquois, one of the number, Beryl Pelton, daughter of the editor of the St. Lawrence News, of Iroquois, stepped into a deep hole with a treacherous undercurrent. She was swept off her feet in a moment and was being carried out into the main current, when her sister Norma, only 11 years of age, standing on the bank, saw her danger. Without a momments hesitation, she rushed into the river with her clothes and shoes on, and, wading out nearly to her neck, succeeded in reaching her older sister, and with difficulty pulled her into shallow water, thus saving her life,

Had the young sister hesitated a moment or lost her presence of mind, the older sister would have been drowned, as the current is very swift at this poiht.

Sold Liquor on Sunday.

To two charges of selling liquor on Sunday, J. R. Duquette, proprietor of Algonquin Hotel, Stanley Island, pleaded guilty at Alexandria before his Worship, Mayor Smith. Mr. Roddie Pringle, ex-M.P., Cornwall, appeared for the defendant. The cases were laid by License Inspector McDonald, who was represented by Mr. F. T. Costello. A couple of adjournments had been secured, but when the cases were called Tuesday morning, the defence pleaded guilty, and gave his engagement to observe the law in future. The magistrate imposed a fine of $50 in each charge, and costs of $30.74, a total of $130.74.

Stock Buyer Loses His Money.

Isaac Montgommery, a cattle drover, of Irish Creek, Ont., is much concerned about the loss of $1050, which he sustained at Montreal after making a successful deal at the stockyards. He says he cashed a cheque of $1050 at the C. P. R. Stockyards Hotel, and he was paid in $10 bills. He put his pass in the same wallet with his money, and from that he infers that he must of had the wallet at the Windsor Station, as he produced the pass in order to get his ticket for home. With a friend belonging to the same district in Ontario he got on a St. Catherine street car for the station and he stated that he did not notice any jostling on the car, but he cannot say definitely whether he pulled the wallet out during the journey. When he got to the station he went straight to the ticket office and produced his pocketbook, and gave his pass to the ticket agent in return for his ticket. A moment later he missed his pocketbook and money. The friend was not seen again, and it is assumed that he caught the train which Montgomery missed by waiting to inquire about his lost money.

Mr. Hebert, ticket seller at the Windsor Station, stated that when Mr. Montgomery presented his pass he threw down a $10 dollar bill. He did not see a pocketbook.

Detectives working upon the case are of the opinion that men followed Mr. Montgomery from the stockyards and either while boarding the street car or near the ticket office at the station abstracted the wallet from his pocket.

LILY DOUGALL

The Novelist and Her Work.

In the old homestead, "Ivy Cottage," nestling under the shadow of Mount Royal, Montreal, Lily Dougall, one of Canada's most notable novelists, was born in 1858. In addition to the drop of ink that seems part of the chemistry of the Dougall blood, she inherited the strength of character, the love for humanity and the earnestness of purpose of her father, John Dougall, the founder of the "Montreal Witness." Miss Dougall's brother and sister show the same characteristics in their good work in journalism and philanthropy.

Miss Dougall spent her childhood in Montreal, and since then, because her health was not robust enough to stand the bracing rigor of Canadian winters, has spent much of her time abroad. The education she received under private tutors was supplemented by her study at Abbot Academy, Andover, Mass., and a course at Cheltenham and later at Edinburgh University, where she was honored with the degree of L.L.A. She has lived much of her time in England and Scotland, and confesses to cycling and traveling in out-of-the-way places unknown to Cook's tourists, as her pet recreations. In 1891 her first book, "Beggars All," appeared and, winning instant acceptance as the strongest and most original romance of the year, was termed a masterpiece of restrained and legitimate dramatic fiction. Two years later her novel "What Necessity knows," received high praise.

In 1895 her two books "The Mermaid" and "The Zeitgeist" won the appreciative approval of the critics and public by the boldness of their conception, the strength of treatment, mastery in the delineation of character, beauty in description, the broadness of view and sympathy they manifested, and the dramatic quality that held the attention of the reader throughout, and more than satisfied it in the ending. So uniformly good is her work that it is difficult to say which is best, many of her admirers, however, claim it is "The Madonna of a Day," in which the heroine, Mary Howard, a selfish young journalist, traveling along the Canadian Pacific Railway, is lost among the vast snowy solitudes of the mountains, and wanders into a lawless mining camp. The story is original throughout, and, though witty and cynical at times, there runs through it the thread of a mighty purpose, worked out with rare force and effectiveness.

With the work of many contemporary novelists one feels that having read one story one can predict just how the others will turn out; they seem literary stock companies where the characters may change their dress and their lines, but are in essence ever the same old characters in new masquerade. But Miss Dougall has that rare gift of continuous originality, each story having the charm of individuality and novelty.

PECULIAR ACCIDENTS.

The "Irony of Life" Illustrated In Stories of Falls.

The "irony of life" was strikingly illustrated recently in the news of a rustic who slipped from a six barred gate and broke his neck and of an Italian aeronaut who fell 1,000 feet with his collapsed balloon with no worse result than a sprained ankle.

A Frenchwoman, Mme. Morel, and her daughter, while climbing in the Alps, near Zermatt, fell a distance of 1,200 feet, not much less than a quarter of a mile, and, although the mother was killed on the spot, her daughter escaped with a few bruises. Mr. Whymper, the famous mountaineer, had a similarly miraculous deliverance from what seemed to be certain death when scaling the Matterhorn. Losing his footing, he fell from rock to rock to the bottom of a precipitous gully, 100 yards in depth, only to recover his feet with no worse damage than a badly cut head. And M. Parville, a French writer, tells the story of an East Indian living in the island of Oghin who fell over a precipice 1,000 feet deep with no more serious consequence than a good shaking, his fall being broken by the dense vegetation which grew at the foot of the cliff.

While climbing a waterworks tower 240 feet high in Chicago a steeplejack dislodged a loose stone and was precipitated to the ground from a height of 175 feet, fortunately striking telegraph wires forty feet above the street and thus breaking his fall. The spectators gasped with horror as they saw the man drop swiftly to destruction. A rush was made to pick up his shattered remains only to discover that he was practically unharmed. Not a bone was broken, and a week later he was walking about as if nothing had happened.

More remarkable and indeed almost incredible was the experience of Charles Woolcot when he was making a parachute descent in Venezuela. At a height of 3,000 feet Woolcot flung himself off his balloon into space, when, to the horror of the thousands of onlookers, the parachute failed to open. The man dropped like a stone with terrible speed until, when about 200 feet from the earth, the parachute flew open and at once collapsed. He was dashed to the ground, his right thigh and hip were broken, both ankles and knees were badly crushed, and his spinal column was dislocated, and yet, after a year spent in hospital, Woolcot was restored to soundness of limb after surely the most terrible adventure of which any man has lived to tell the story.

But it is in the history of ballooning that one encounters the most remarkable cases of sensational drops from the clouds. When Mr. Wise, a famous aeronaut of the early nineteenth century, was once making an ascent his balloon exploded at an altitude of 13,000 feet and began to drop swiftly to the earth, more than a couple of miles below. "The descent at first was rapid," Mr. Wise writes, "and accompanied by a fearful moaning noise caused by air rushing through the network and the gas escaping from above. In another moment I felt a slight shock, and, looking up to see what caused it, I discovered that the balloon was canting over, being nicely doubled in, the lower half into the upper."

The balloon had, in fact, formed itself into a parachute and, oscillating wildly, continued its descent until it struck the earth violently, throwing the aeronaut ten yards out of the car. "The car had turned bottom upward, and there I stood," says Mr. Wise, "congratulating myself and the perspiration rolling down my forehead in profusion."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Just Satisfied Herself.

People of all sorts weigh themselves on the penny in the slot machines found widely distributed in public places, but never before had this man, anyway, seen anybody weigh on one of them anything but himself or herself as this weigher, a woman, did in a subway station.

She came in carrying in one hand a muff and in the other a box of polished oak that was narrow and proportionately high and maybe a foot in length. That the box was heavy was shown by the fact that the leather handle had been stretched somewhat by its weight.

And apparently its present carrier had found it heavy and was curious about its weight, for now she set the box on the platform of one of those weighing machines and dropped a penny in the slot. It weighed ten pounds, certainly a heavy box to carry. That was all she wanted to know—didn't weigh herself. She just picked the box up again, this time with a smile, and went aboard the train.—New York Sun.

IF your baking goes wrong, investigate — find the cause. Look to your stove, your yeast, your baking methods.

If you succeed in pinning the trouble down to the flour—then take up the flour question in dead earnest.

Consider that flour, to be successful from a baking standpoint, must be fine to produce light bread or pastry, pure to make that bread or pastry wholesome, and rich in nutriment to make it nourishing.

Ogilvie's Royal Household has these three qualities in the greatest degree.

Ogilvie's Royal Household is milled by the most modern methods, and made only from Manitoba Hard Wheat which contains the highest percentage of nutriment.

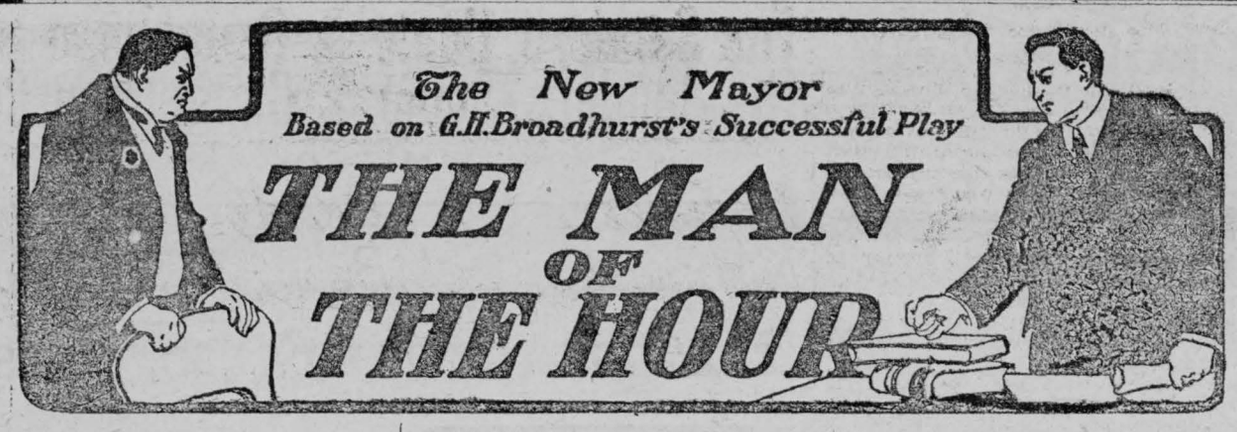
H. H. BEAUCAGE = The Tailor

An advertisement in the RECORD pays.



"All these generalities and vague accusations prove nothing, Bennett," answered Wainwright, drawing courage from Horrigan's colossal calm and speaking with more assurance. "Mr. Horrigan and I are not schoolboys to be scared by baseless threats. This is all guesswork on your part. Come, now, name one specific charge you can prove."

"One will be enough to convince you?" asked Alwyn. "Well, then, how about this as a first guess? Mr. Horrigan's bribe of $2,000,000 in money and 25,000 shares of Borough stock for agreeing to put through the Borough franchise? For 'guesswork' that doesn't seem to me very bad."

Wainwright's hard mask of a face twitched convulsively, but the steady brain that had carried him unshaken through a thousand risky financial deals came at once to his rescue.

"An excellent guess," he agreed in splendidly feigned amusement, "but unfortunately the courts demand proof before convicting a man, and there is no proof whatever of"—

"Are you sure?" queried Bennett. Turning to Phelan, he added:

"Please ask Mr. Thompson to come in."

The alderman, with an expansive grin, flung open the door of the farther room.

At sound of his secretary's name Wainwright had sprung to his feet and, dumfounded, was leaning heavily on the table, staring across the threshold of the suddenly opened door.

There, framed in the dark doorway, his face deathly pale, his eyes glowing with a strange light as of murder, stood Cynthia's brother.

His presence in the city hall was no mere chance, but the climax of a series of conferences between Bennett, Phelan and himself, dating from the night of the administration ball, when, despite his own resolve, the secretary's hand had been forced by the inquisitive alderman and his identity revealed.

Bennett had been let into the secret next day, and the trio had had a three hour talk from which Phelan had emerged with the gleeful air of one who had unexpectedly found a $1,000 bill. Thompson, too, had left that conference with a look of calm, intense satisfaction that transfigured him.

Other conversations had followed, one of them in the presence of notary, stenographer and lawyers. The trap at last was ready to be sprung.

The financier for the first time in his nine year close association with the secretary met the younger man's gaze without seeing the latter droop in deferential submission. Now he received back look for look from his former abject slave, and it was his own glance that wavered before that concentrated glare of hate.

"Thompson!" he cried, and his voice bore a world of incredulous reproach.

Before him stood the one man on earth in whom Wainwright had ever placed implicit trust; to whom he had confided his gravest business secrets; the man whom he had so shrewdly tested in countless ways and who had proved stanchly incorruptible and loyal, and now Thompson apparently confronted him in the role of traitor—of exultant spy.

Harry Garrison.

"Thompson!" he exclaimed once more, almost with a groan, as the secretary advanced into the room until only the width of the table separated employer and employee.

Then the newcomer spoke for the first time, in an oddly muffled voice, as though fighting desperately for self restraint.

"No!" he contradicted. "'Thompson' no longer. Henceforth I am Garrison."

Wainwright's face grew gray. Breathless, unbelieving, he peered across at the pallid features of his new foe, tracing in them the likeness to the old friend whose ruin and death he had caused. The haunting resemblance that had often vaguely occurred to him when watching Thompson at work now returned in double force. But now, as in a flash, it was explained, and he knew that his secretary spoke the truth.

"Yes," went on Thompson in that same choked, struggling intonation, "I am Harry Garrison. You wrecked my father's life. You drove him to suicide. You blasted his memory. You beggared his children. I am his son—Harry Garrison. Now do you begin to understand?"

"You see, Mr. Wainwright," intervened Bennett as the secretary's pent-up rage strangled the words in his throat, "my guesswork has a fairly reliable backing."

But Wainwright did not hear. He still stared, as one hypnotized, into the blazing eyes of the man he had trusted.

"You've—you've played me false!" he managed to gasp at length. "You have"—

"Sure he has!" cut in Horrigan. "What'd I tell you last summer, Wainwright? I said then you were foolish to trust him so. I said he'd stand watching. The minute I set eyes on that lantern jawed, glum face of his"—

"Played me false!" muttered Wainwright again, dazed and doubting the evidence of his own senses.

"Played you false?" jeered Thompson. "Played you false? Why else did I become your servant? What else have I been waiting all these horrible years for? I've sat at your desk and listened to your orders, never venturing to say my soul was my own. Now you'll listen to me."

"Why do you bother with the little traitor, Wainwright?" scoffed Horrigan.

But the financier was standing motionless, leaning on the table, his fingers spasmodically gripping its edge till the knuckles grew white. Ridiculously like a cowed prisoner before the bar of justice, he faced his fiery eyed young judge.

"They sent for me," went on Thompson brokenly, jerkily, scarce intelligible as the suppressed hatred of a decade battled for expression. "They sent for me. My father had killed himself. My mother lay dead, struck down by grief. Our honored old name was defiled. My sister was a pauper. Who had done all this? You! Oh, they hushed it up, but I found it out! I found it out! And by my murdered father's body I knelt and swore I'd pay you for it. I'd pay you if it cost me my life. I would ruin you in name and fortune, as you ruined my father, and then I'd kill you, as you killed him! I'd"—

"And then I'd kill you, as you killed my father."

With an effort that left him haggard and trembling, Thompson forced himself to calmer speech and continued:

"I answered your advertisement for a secretary. I had no experience, yet out of ninety applicants you chose me. That was fate. I knew then that one day I should have you at my feet, as now I have. Fate fought for me. I made myself necessary for you. I obeyed your hardest orders. I found out ways to please you. I fetched and carried for you. I ran to anticipate your lightest wish, as though I was your adoring son. It was 'I hope you're satisfied, sir,' and 'Let me do that for you, sir,' and 'I am glad to work overtime for you, sir, any time you wish,' while every minute I had to fight hard to keep from striking you dead!"

"I must go!" groaned Wainwright, shuddering. "I can't stand this. I"—

"Oh, I made you think me a paragon!" resumed the youth. "You took to testing my honesty and loyalty in clever ways that you thought I'd never discover. I stood the tests. Then you trusted me. You fool! As if the fact that I wasn't a crook proved I wasn't your enemy! You could see no farther than dollars and cents. When I didn't steal those or sell the market tips you gave me you thought I was incorruptible and devoted to your interests. And all the time I"—

"You were listening at the keyhole that day last summer," broke in Horrigan, "the time I pulled the office door open, and"—

"Then and always," answered Thompson, "and," he added, his eyes returning to Wainwright's, "I copied every confidential telegram or letter you sent. I took down in shorthand every private interview of yours. I tracked the checks that completed your deals, and when they came back from the vaults as vouchers I stole them. I've got proofs, I tell you—proofs—of every crooked transaction you have dabbled in for nine years. I've secured proofs of every step in this borough franchise bribery, and I've turned them all over to the mayor here. That evidence will send you to state prison! To state prison, I tell you! To a cell, with cropped hair and striped suit! I'll send you to prison, where you'll break your heart and be branded forever as a convict! And when your term is up I'll be waiting for you, and I'll kill you! Do you hear me, you foul criminal?" he shouted, screaming hysterically and foaming at the mouth in his abandonment of insane fury. "I'm going to kill you! To kill you!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

UNDER the maniac fury that blazed from Thompson's eyes Wainwright shrank back in panic dread.

"He's—he's mad!" cried the financier. "Don't let him at me!"

For Thompson seemed about to hurl himself on his foe.

"Go easy, son," adjured Phelan, laying a restraining hand on the secretary's shoulder.

The latter, recalled to himself by the pressure, relaxed his tense, menacing attitude and, with hysterical revulsion of feeling, sank into a chair, burying his face in his arms on the table before him.

"Nine horrible years!" he sobbed brokenly. "Nine awful years of slavery, of debasement! Watching, hating, longing to crush him, and, oh, the time has come, thank God! Thank God!"

"You're all in, lad!" muttered Phelan, passing an arm about the shaking youth and lifting him to his feet. "Come with me. I'll send out and get you a bracer."

Thompson, exhausted by his emotions, obeyed mechanically, but at the farther door paused for a moment and again fixed his wild, bloodshot eyes on Wainwright's haggard face.

"Remember," he threatened, his voice dead and expressionless, "when you get out of jail I'll be waiting for you. And as sure as God's justice lives I'll kill you as I'd kill a dog! Nine years waiting and—I'll murder you as you murdered my"—

Phelan had forced him over the threshold, and the slamming of the door behind the two seemed to break the strange spell that had fallen on all.

Wainwright straightened himself, glanced fearfully about, tried to regain his shaken composure and opened his mouth to speak. But the hurried entrance of Williams prevented him.

"Mr. Horrigan," gasped the excited newcomer, "I've been looking everywhere for you!"

"What's wrong now?" snapped the boss. "Has"—

"The Borough bill's come up at last, and"—

"The gallery crowd's rough housing the place? Then"—

"No, they're quiet as death; too quiet. And they have long ropes, and they're stringing them over the"—

"Call in the police, then!" ordered Horrigan. "Now's the time for them."

"I don't dare," protested Williams. "Those men in the gallery are desperate. They're dangerous. If"—

"The police?" interrupted Bennett sharply. "What are you talking about?"

"My orders!" returned Horrigan. "I sent for them. Tell them to"—

"Don't do it!" commanded Bennett in anger.

"Do as I say, Williams!" countermanded Horrigan. "Have them in and"—

"Phelan," interposed Bennett as the alderman, having left Thompson in other hands, came into the room, "go to the sergeant in charge of the police Mr. Horrigan sent for. Tell him I say he must keep his men where they are and take no orders except from me. Understand?"

"I sure do!" grinned Phelan, with a delighted grin at the wrathful Horrigan. "An' I'll see they"—

"You need not trouble!" croaked Wainwright, his throat dry and constricted with fear. "The bill is withdrawn!"

"That goes!" corroborated Horrigan. "Do you hear that, Williams? Mr. Wainwright withdraws the Borough bill. Attend to it in a rush, man. Never mind about the police."

"Well, Friend Horrigan," blandly observed Phelan as Williams hastened out, "I told you I'd cross two sticks of dynamite under you some day. Likewise I done it."

"What had you to"—

"To do with smashin' you? Only that I put his honor on to the bill in the first place an' then sicked him on to Roberts an' discovered Thompson an' turned him over to Mr. Bennett. That's about all. But I guess it's enough to make your p'litical career feel like it had a long line of carriages drivin' slow behind it. Chesty Dick, my old chum!"

Horrigan had turned his back on his victorious tormentor and was facing the mayor.

"Bennett," said he, "you forget I've still got that report about your father, and"—

"Tomorrow's papers will publish it," supplemented Alwyn.

"No, they won't," contradicted Horrigan. "That would be bad politics. The report will hold over till"—

"You're mistaken," interrupted Bennett calmly. "I've sent a copy of that report today to every paper in the city and have accompanied it with a statement that I shall make good to the city treasury every penny overcharged in the library and aqueduct contracts. So"—

Horrigan was staring at him open mouthed.

"Bennett," he muttered in genuine wonderment, "I don't know whether you're the craziest fool or the cleverest politician in the state."

"Your honor," humbly pleaded Wainwright, who for several minutes had been trying in vain to draw Bennett aside for a private word, "I am an old man. Is there no way of—of showing me mercy in my"—

"Yes," retorted Alwyn. "You shall receive exactly the same mercy you have always shown to your own financial enemies—no more, no less."

"Oh, cut out the whine, Wainwright!" sneered Horrigan in high contempt as he linked his arm in the broken financier's and hauled him roughly from the room. "What's happened to your nerve? You're almost as bad as Gibbs. You're still rich, and as long as you've got plenty of cash no law in America need ever bother you. There's lots of talk about indictments, and arrests, and investigations, and prosecutions, and all that sort of rot. But I don't see any millionaires going to jail. Come on across to my lawyer's."

The boss and financier departed without a backward look, leaving Phelan and Bennett alone on the late scene of battle.

"Say, your honor," observed the alderman slyly, "there's one very important engagement you've clean forgot. Sit right where you are a minute, an' I'll send the party in here and see that nobody butts in on you till you want 'em to. Oh, but we didn't do a thing to Horrigan! He'll have to watch which way his toes point to see whether he's goin' or comin'!"

The alderman sped on his mission, leaving Alwyn seated alone, dejected, miserable, in the deserted committee room.

Now that the crisis was past, his heart was strangely heavy. He had won. But at what cost? At the loss of all he held dear.

Alwyn Bennett knew, too, that the real fight was but just begun—a fight that had waged since the world began and must last to judgment day—the hopeless, uphill battle of decency against evil, of honesty against graft.

Horrigan's sneering words, "I don't see any millionaires going to jail," stuck disagreeably in the young mayor's memory. Their brutal, bald truth jarred on his belief in the inevitable triumph of good. After all, was the dreary, self sacrificing battle against an unconquerable foe worth while? Could the great god graft ever be checked in his mastery of the earth? If—

"I love you!" she said.

A rustle of skirts startled Alwyn from his dark thoughts.

"Dallas!" he cried, unbelieving, as he sprang to his feet half dazzled at the wondrous light that transformed her face.

Slowly she came toward him, her glorious dark eyes on his, her white hands outstretched in irresistible appeal. At last she spoke.

"I love you!" she said.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label, if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good!! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

Big Power Project

Citizens of Prescott Inspected New Dam to be Built Below Soo Rapids.

Prescott, Aug. 12.—A delegation from his town, including the mayor, several aldermen, and other influential citizens, made an inspection yesterday of the site of the proposed new dam to be placed at the foot of the Long Sault Rapids for power development purposes. The two companies interested are the Long Sault Development Co. and the St. Lawrence Power, the latter now owning and operating the power plant at the foot of Sheik Island, from which power is being supplied to Cornwall, Mille Roches, Wales and other towns.

The scheme now being devised if carried out will produce almost unlimited power. It is intended to utilize the Long Sault as a race head for three large power houses, provision also being made for a fourth if later required. Two dams will be constructed, one a V-shape from the foot of Barnhart's Islaad. Besides the construction of the dams and power houses, a huge lift lock will be built to permit vessels navigating the South Sault while the straightening of the course of various channels of the river will also be attended to. Taken altogether, it is one of largest engineering and electrical sehemes ever devised. The probable expenditure will be twenty million dollars, and the time for the work of coustruction from three to five years.

The interested companies have purchased 5,000 acres of land in the immediate vicinity. It is expected that at least 100,000 horse power can be developed.

This season I commenced to use Catarrhozone about one month before the usual time of attack, and it kept the hay fever away. I can recommend Catarrhozone for Hay Fever as it cured me perfectly."

Don't fail to nse Catarrhozone. Its cures are lasting, and it costs only $1.00 for a two months' treatment; all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston. Ont., and Buffalo, N. Y.

Anderson Sentenced.

Toronto, Aug. 12.—John A. Anderson, the Bank of Montreal clerk, who was in court this moruing on several charges of fraud, was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. He pleaded guilty to passing forged cheques on the T. Eaton Company, but he admitted a number of other charges. It will be remembered that he stole, or had made, an accepted stamp of the bank, and went all over Europe on the cash he raised by the fraudulent use of the stamp. He was arrested in Vancouver a fortnight ago, and came back here pleading guilty when first charged.

Crysler.

The Rev. M. G. Foole, of Crysler, and Mr. C. McManus were present at the unveiling of the Window in St. Peter's Church, Osnabruck Centre, on the evening of Aug 3, after which they proceeded to Aultsville, where they were the guests of old friends and the recipient of much kindness. They had several dips in the St. Lawrence and saw some fine harvest work accomplished, Mr. Isaiah Fetterly and Mr. Clarence Baker putting a load of hay on a wagon, with a hay loader, in eight minutes and taking off the same load in the barn in three minutes and a quarter.

Mrs. James Coulter, of Cobden, is a guest at St. John's Rectory, Crysler.

C.P.R. WILL EXTEND.

Line Into the Peace River Valley Is Rumored.

It is stated on good authority that next year will see the embarking of the Canadian Pacific upon a scheme for conquering a new empire for civilization. This will be the building of railway lines far into the Peace River country, in order to give transportation facilities to what is declared to be absolutely the richest portion of Canada in combined agricultural and mineral riches.

For some time past it has been known that the company's surveyors have been at work in this northern country, mapping out the route, and, although the company is keeping very quiet as to its intentions, it is now declared that next year will see the commencement of the new line north from Edmonton. The work of constructing the huge bridge over the river to give the C.P.R. entrance from Strathcona to Edmonton, has hindered the company in its proposed northern extension, but with the completion of this bridge all the supplies for the new line can be carried in.

Officials of the C.P.R. have just received information that in anticipation of the coming railway, a party of 35 Ontario people have made the long trek into the Peace River Valley in order to stake out land. Most of those in the party are farmers, but several Toronto boys were among them, including Donald C. Cranston, Garnet Truax, George Flint, and Samuel Sargent. The party started out from Edmonton on May 19 with 18 yoke of oxen and a year's supplies. Their objective was Beaver Lodge, Grand Prairie, a trek of 550 miles by the summer trail, and it is expected they have now arrived there. They have sent back letters from Shaw's Point, about half way, saying that they are charmed with the district, which is very beautiful, being quite near the Rockies. Spring, they declare, is three or four weeks in advance of many places in the West. Almost anything that can be grown in Eastern Canada, can be successfully cultivated. Tomatoes ripen in the open, and small fruits grow in profusion. Coal is found in great quantity. Settlers are flocking in this year, and it is predicted that as soon as the new railways are built the district will be quickly settled.

Scene of the Strike.

The Sydney coal-field, which has been much in the public eye of late owing to the strike at Glace Bay and Sydney, occupies the eastern shore of Cape Breton County. Its land area is estimated at 200 square miles, and it now forms the rim of an extensive coal deposit extending well out under the Atlantic. A careful estimate made some time ago puts the amount of available coal in these submarine areas at not less than 2,000,000,000 tons.

Nearly all the seams lie at easy angles, yield little water, and, owing to the generally fine character of the roof, they can be mined with cheapness and safety. So strongly marked is the impermeable nature of the strata, that at a moderate depth the submarine workings are perfectly dry.

The coals of this district are bituminous, and are especially adapted for gas and coke-making and for steam purposes. The Sydney coal is largely used in the Maritime provinces for domestic purposes, and large quantities find their way to the blasting furnaces of the Dominion Iron & Steel plant. Official reports made to the British Admiralty show that it contains 83.5 per centum of carbon, and that it is practically equal to Welsh steam coal. Newfoundland sealing steamers prefer Cape Breton coal to all others owing to the rapidity with which it raises steam.

Some idea of the enormous amount of available coal contained in this district may be gathered from the fact that the seams now open contain millions of tons.

An Italian Invasion.

Canada, it appears, is to get her share of Italian immigrants. A new line of steamers is to be established between Naples and Montreal. As Montreal is not exactly a feasible port in winter, Portland, Me., will be used during the frozen months.

This is the first time that an emigration movement of Italians has been directed so far north.

The great increase in recent years of Italian emigration is one of the curiosities of the history of the migrations of peoples. Many Italians, it is true, ultimately return to their native land, but also many stay in the land of their adoption and become part of its civic and social life; and this in such numbers that they cannot but have an effect upon the ultimate character of the nations with which they amalgamate. There is a certain class of Italian immigration which is welcome and beneficial to all nations. But there is another class against which all nations cannot bar their doors too securely. The Italians are moving upon the western continent in hordes, and now is the time to separate the sheep from the goats.

Locusts In Panama.

The method of exterminating locusts most generally adopted in Panama has been to dig a trench about fifty feet in length, two feet wide and one foot deep, with perpendicular sides, in which the locusts are driven by men beating the grass and trees with switches. In this way millions are collected and are destroyed with a solution of strong lye evaporada. The trench is then refilled with earth so as to bury the slain.

The Blizzard of 1888.

"I was living in O'Neill, Neb., at the time of the great blizzard in 1888," said a Nebraskan, "and had just left the office to go home for dinner when the blizzard struck. I started to cross the street to a drug store, but when I reached the other side I found myself halfway down the block from my destination. The fine wind driven snowflakes filled the air so that I couldn't see my hand before me. I finally worked my way back to the drug store, where a number of other men had taken refuge from the storm. School had just been dismissed for the noon recess, and we knew that nearly 300 children were out in the storm. Securing long ropes, the crowd started out to rescue them. We found them huddled in doorways and by the sides of buildings. The children caught hold of the ropes and were led to shelter by their rescuers, whose sense of direction gradually returned to them. Every one of the 300 school children in the town was got home in safety. But seven schoolteachers were frozen to death in the country during the blizzard and thousands of cattle died. The thermometer fell from about the freezing point at noon to 20 degrees below zero that night. It was the worst blizzard I ever saw, and I never want to experience another like it." — Des Moines Register and Leader.

Compensation For Poachers.

A gamekeeper on a northern estate tells an amusing story of the latest thing in the compensation line. When he was escorting the gentlemen round the coverts one day the party were alarmed to hear a loud cry just after shots had been fired. Running to the spot, a thick bush growth, the keeper found a man lying groaning on the ground.

"Some of them gents 'ave shot me in the leg," groaned the man.

Examination proved that the sufferer had indeed received a bird shot pellet in his left calf. It was a trivial injury, but was handsomely compensated for by the gentlemen in the party, who presented the victim with quite a good sum in gold.

That same evening the gamekeeper came upon two men in a quiet lane engaged in a hot dispute about the sharing of some money. One of the men had a shotgun, and, tapping it significantly, he said threateningly: "'Alf shares, or I'll go straight to the p'lice and split on us both. I'll give the game away. I'll tell 'em 'ow I put that pill in yer leg to knock money out o' the shooters."

Then the gamekeeper disclosed himself, and the two conspirators decamped.—London Opinion.

The Amoeba.

The amoeba (Greek "change"), the supposed pioneer in the line of living forms, is a naked mass of living matter, or protoplasm, flowing out in all directions in "blunt processes," and the endlessly varying form has earned for the simple animal the popular name of "amoeba" (Proteus animalculae). They are all minute, but some are distinctly visible to the unaided eye. The jelly-like creature flows along the surface of stone or plant by the slow protrusion of its ever changing processes and in this way gets around its food. It is all stomach, any part of it taking hold of and digesting the food that happens to come in contact with it. On attaining its maximum size the amoeba draws itself out and breaks into two, daughter amoebas, each of which contains half of the mother nucleus. This simple organism seems to exhibit in small compass the usual animal functions. It feeds, secretes, grows and reproduces itself.—New York American.

Nova Scotia Shipping.

Having lost the distinction of owning more shipping in proportion to population than any other town on the continent, through the advent of the steel steamer, Yarmouth, N. S., has decided to build steel steamers to regain that title and the prosperity that was hers before the Nova Scotian square rigger was practically driven from the seas. Where once were built the sailing ships that were to be found on the Seven Seas, there is now being constructed the first steel steamer ever built in the Maritime Provinces. Hull, boilers, and engines are all the product of Yarmouth, and every Yarmouthian hopes that she is the forerunner of a fleet that will make the port as famous in this era of steam as it was in the days of canvas.

Lot Brought a Fortune.

For Good Roads.

The word has gone forth that Ontario must have good roads and is going to have them. When that fact is once grasped the question of ways and means and of the just distribution of the burdens will be worked out. The good roads that already exist in some quarters are but an earnest of the roads we shall have throughout the province. Let there be no unnecessary delay.—Toronto Globe.

Your Nerves Are Weak.

You sleep badly, appetite is variable. You eat but gain no strength. Morning tiredness makes you wish for night. When night comes refreshing sleep is hard to obtain. You're run down, your blood is thin and watery, your nerves are grown weak, the thought of effort wearies you. You need Ferrozone; it makes blood,—red, strong blood. An appetite? You'll eat everything and digest it too. Strength? That's what plenty of food gives. Ferrozone gives hope, vigor, vim, endurance. Use Ferrozone and get strong. Results are quick—cure is lasting. New Primers Published.

Ten thousand of the new primers, the last book of the series of Ontario Readers to be published, were printed Saturday and placed on the market for the first time by the contractors, the T. Eaton Company. From the point of view of manufacture, the new text book is a great improvement upon its predeccssor. It has 96 pages instead of 64, and costs four cents instead of ten cents. But the most noticeable improvement is in the binding. In place of a limp cover, the new Primer has a cloth and board cover, similar to to that on the books of of higher grade, and 111 illustrations.

The new Primer contains old nursery rhymes, fairly tales, myths and stories which have been taught to many generations of children. Some of the selections are in script, and some in ordinary type of large size. The book is intended to teach reading, and the method to be adopted is left to the discretion of the teacher. The grouping of words, which was oqservable in the old Primer, is abandoned in the new.

Along with the Primer, and also with the other readers of the series, will be published manuals for the teacher. These will discuss methods of importing knowledge from the books, and will contain explanations of allusions and references in the readers.

A number of new text-books will be issued by publishers in the city in the course of a week, or in time for the opening of the schools. These are being considered and authorized by the department. The list includes a new Chemistry an Ancient History, and a Pgysical Geography.

Year's Progress of Oddfellows

Membership List Shows a Net Gain of 1755—$125,714 was paid in Relief.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug.11.—The annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows opened this evening in Bennett's Theatre, Grand Master McBride in the chair. About two-thirds of the members were given the Grand Lodge degree.

The civic welcome was accorded by Controller George H. Wilson representing the Council. A. T. Lawson, the D. D. G. M., read the addresses from the local Odd Fellows. The Grand Master eloquently replied.

The report of Grand Master A. E. McBride, of Waterloo, indicated that since July 1st, 1908, fifteen lodges had been instituted, and one has ceased operations. At the end of the Grand Lodge year there were three hundred and sixty lodges. The membership at the beginning of the financial year was 29,182, and the net additions 1,255 members, making the total on June 30th, 40,437.

The order had lost during the year some notable leaders, beginning with its grand-sire, John E. Nolaen, of Nashville, Tenn., who died two months after taking office. In Ontario the deaths numbered 287, many of the fallen being leaders in the fraternal world.

All the branches of oddfellowship were shown to the flourishing. During the year, according to instructions from last meeting, jewels had been procured for all the living Past Grand Masters, and $439.25 had been forwarded to Fernie, B. C., where one hundred Oddfellows and their families were sufferers from the fire. The British Columbia Oddfellows contributed $2,082.

The Deputy Grand Master, Hon. D. Derbyshire, of Brockville, and the Grand Warden, S. M. Thomson, of Brantford, added their summary of visitation to lodges. All the grand officers appear to have been very active in missionary service.

The Grand Secretary, J. B. King, of Toronto, contrasted in his report the condition of the order in 1880, when last the Grand Lodge met in Ottawa, with its condition now. Then it had 188 lodges and 12,166 members. Now it has 360 lodges and 40,000 members. The year just closing had been one of great progress in every respect.

Outlook is Promising.

The membership had been increased the beneficials enlarged, peace reigned supreme, and the outlook was bright and promising. The record of the dead was a lengthy one. In the list were many who had been conspicuous at previous sessions of the Grand Lodge. The new members during 1908 numbered 3,724, and the suspended, the dead, and withdrawn members, 1,968. The net gain was 1,755. The relief paid for the year amounted to $125,714.22, or an average of $344.42 each day. The total re- from all branches of the order in Ontario since 1855 was $5,797,826.23.

The Grand Treasurer, W. J, McCormick, Toronto, reported that the receipts during 1908 had been $24,919.31, and the expenditures $22,168.39. The supplementary reports show a balance of cash on hand on July 21st of $18,861.70.

Under-Drainage

O. A. C. Experts Demonstration at Brockville.

At Avondale, the farm of Mr. A. C. Hardy, just outside of Brockville, a drainage demonstration was conducted yesterday by Mr. W. R. Reek, drainage expert of the Ontario Agricultural college, and Mr. R. R. Graham, B. A., demonstrator of that institution.

Under-drainage is one of the live problems among agiculrturists to-day, and the fact that over fifty farmers of the adjacent vicinities left their work for an afternoon to discuss drainage methods and problems clearly shows that the farmers around Brockville are not a whit behind the time. A great interest was manifested in this subjet and a number were present who have done a considerable amount of tile drainage for years and they were not slow in testifying to the wonderful benefits they have received from underdrainage.

The physics department of the O. A. C., under the guidance of Prof. Day, has for some years past been sending forth drainage experts to help farmers in their drainage difficulties and the demonstration yesterday at Avondale was an example of the good work accomplished in scientific farming by taking levels over the land with a view to determing the location; depth, grade, number, etc., of the drains, estimating the size of the tile to be used the cost of tiling, the best methods of taking levels, digging ditches true to grade, excavating the trench, and discussing all drainage problems that arise. Throughout the meeting a great many questions arose and some healthy discussions followed.

On this trip east through Ontario, the second time for the year, Mr. Reek has already surveyed land for Messrs. Samuel Donovan and W. O. Landon, near Landsdowne; Matthew Steacy, Warburton; A. C. Hardy, Brockville, all of Leeds county, and a small farm near Morrisburg. On his return he will spend considerable time at Picton and Peterborough. There are four men like himself in this business this season and they will have done similar work in at least thirty counties of this province and for well near 200 farmers. Judging from the keen interest manifested in the drainage surveys and demonstrations held on this trip there is no doubt but that the draining will be general in Eastern Ontario shortly.

The footprints of dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this, druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart, and Kidney nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the heart or Kidneys. That is wrong, Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment, you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by W. G. Bolster.

This Cow is Fond of Fish.

Picton, Aug. 13.—Among a herd of young cattle, the property of Thos. McMahon at Milford, there is a two-year-old heifer which has developed a rather peculiar appetite, none other than a fondness for fish. As the eel fishermen of this section, in quest of bait, are running their shad nets, which are close in shore, the animal in question, with every appearance of anxiety, hastens to the beach where she stands waiting the distribution of the catch, and devours large quantities with as much relish as other cattle would the choicest of morsels known to the cow bill of fare.

August time, tells on the nerves. But that spiritless, no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course, full health will not immediately return. The gain, however, will surely follow. And best of all you will realize and feel your strength and ambition as it is returning. Outside influences depress first the "inside nerves" then the stomach" Heart, and Kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by W. G. Bolster.

GRAVEYARD OF PACIFIC.

Waters of Vancouver Island Cast Up Remains of Many Wrecks.

Much interest has been aroused in Victoria regarding the reports of the finding of the wreck of the long-lost sloop-of-war Condor, which foundered with her complement of 140 officers and men, under command of Capt. Schlater, during a heavy gale of Dec. 3-4, 1901.

There is scant proof, however, that the lost warship has been located. It seems that Mr. Harvey, a settler at Long Beach, situated between Ucluelet and Clayoquot, on the west coast of Vancouver Island and open to the Pacific, noticed that the waves broke at a distance of a mile and a half south from his ranch, where they had never broken previously. He noticed this first four years ago. Afterward wreckage of various kinds, some of which bore the admiralty mark, was washed ashore near his ranch, and a few weeks ago a spar repaired with copper after the manner of work done by naval men was found. About this time Bonnycastle Dale, a naturalist, who has been visiting the locality, questioned Mr. Harvey, who had never made public the news of his finds. On his return to Victoria, Mr. Dale put forward the theory that the hull of the Condor was the object over which the waves were seen to break off Long Beach. Since then the vicinity has been carefully patrolled, but nothing further has been found ashore. Investigation to prove or disprove the theory can only be made from the sea on a calm at low water, and no investigation has yet been made. It was near this place that the only flotsam that reached shore from the lost warship was found in January, 1902, by His Majesty's ship Egeria and the United States revenue cutter Grant, which were sent to patrol the coast when the reports arrived that the Condor was missing.

The west coast of Vancouver Island has been called "the marine graveyard of the Pacific." A wreck chart shows two scores of wrecks between Victoria and Clayoquot, some few of which still remain broken monuments of disaster, on the island coast. How many vessels were lost before the coast was settled fancy can scarcely speculate. The Indians tell stories of Japanese junks lost long before the white man came, and there is a partially buried wreck near the Columbia River from which cubes of wax marked with Roman numerals have been dug—a mystery nobody has solved. Coins and other things Japanese have been dug out at various points, and there is strong evidence that Indians of the Vancouver Island are the offspring of Japanese, or, at least, of mixed marriages between shipwrecked aliens from across the Pacific and the coast women. Stones bearing Chinese characters have also been found, which fact supports a statement that documents were found years ago at Pekin stating that a Chinese discovered the coast of Vancouver long before Columbus crossed the Atlantic.

A Wooden-Legged Rat.

Mr. Peter Ryan of Toronto has a reminiscence of his early days in the north of England that, though it sometimes provokes scepticism, is vouched for as true, for Mr. Ryan absolutely declares that he is no nature fakir. In those days, before the coal-oil lamp or illuminating gas had penetrated rural England, he was staying for a few days at a small inn there. To while away the evenings, he followed his beloved pursuit of reading, his light being a tallow dip. One night he was surprised to see a large rat stick his nose out of a hole in the floor and then come out, followed by several other rats. They made a rush for the candle, and made off with it before Mr. Ryan's eyes.

The next night he determined to be armed and well prepared and had a poker handy. When the rats duly made their appearance, he smashed at them. All succeeded in scurrying down the hole unharmed except one big fellow that was struck by the poker and left half of his hind leg, behind as he ran to his hiding place.

"Next day," says Mr. Ryan, "a large wire trap was set and several rats were captured. Will you believe it, one of them was minus part of his hind leg, but the intelligent animal had picked up a small spool and thrust the stump through it! Thus he had found a fair substitute for a wooden leg. Of course, I cannot say that it was the same rat, but the coincidence was remarkable."

The World's Biggest Bridge.

This immense bridge was necessitated by the determination of the C.P.R. to construct a line from Lethbridge to Macleod and thence to the great coalfields of the Crow's Nest, and as a link in their second great transcontinental line which will ultimately parallel the boundary. The old line which this will replace was very circuitous, and crossed between twenty and thirty trestles in the comparatively short distance between Lethbridge and Macleod. The new bridge is not yet ready for actual traffic, but the permanent tracks will be laid over it soon. The last of the sixty-five big steel towers upon which the bridge rests were completed at the end of June, and its great structure has begun to assume its definite shape—the biggest bridge in the world when both length and height are reckoned, representing in cost some two million dollars.

A GRAND KIDNEY MEDICINE

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him When Everything Else Failed.

Ulverton, Que., March 17th, 1908.

I wish to place on record, for the sake of others who may be suffering in the same way that I suffered, that no medicine I ever took did me so much real good as "Fruit-a-tives" did.

I suffered for many years with Kidney Trouble, with bad pain in the back.

I took every known kidney remedy and kidney pill, but nothing gave me any relief, and I was getting discouraged.

I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives" and did so—and this medicine cured me when everything else failed.

I used altogether fifteen boxes of "Fruit-a-tives," and from the outset they gave me relief and I am now practically well again; no pain, no distress, and all symptoms of kidney disease have entirely left me. I am very thankful to be once more well, and I freely make this statement for the sake of others who may suffer as I did. To them, I say try "Fruit-a-tives," as they are a grand kidney medicine.

THE SEA QUEEN.

Shall her great power go under,
Her ancient might decline?
This centuried Queen of the thunder
And surge of the billowy brine!
No! Back from the storms that rocked her,
From the line to the frozen floe,
Out of his great grey vastness,
Old Ocean thunders, No!
No! No! No! No!
Old Ocean thunders, No!
By her keels that lift
On his far-flung drift
Old Ocean thunders, No!

Shall she who bred great Alfred,
Whose navies smote the Dane,
Whose valiant, bold sea-captains
Made mock of haughty Spain—
Shall she of Nelson, Rodney,
Strike sail to any foe,
And out of its hero-splendors
Her great past answers, No!
No! No! No! No!
By her valiant dead,
Her sons who bled,
Her great past answers, No!

Shall she whose might is world-wide;
Whose children dwell afar,
One with the wise old mother
By western, Orient star;
Whose fleets are freedom's bulwarks,
To sloth and cowardice grow?
And out from its utmost confines
The Empire answers, No!
No! No! No! No!
The Empire answers, No!
O'er ocean's sweep,
Her vast and deep
World-fealty thunders, No!

RECTORS AT CRICKET.

Canon Welch of St. James' Had Everything But the Success.

The newly-appointed rector of St. James' Cathedral, Toronto, is a first-class cricketer, and when he was professor at Wycliffe College a few years ago, the followers of the game always expected some pretty batting when Dean Plumptree went to the wicket. He did not remain in Toronto long enough at that time to become firmly established in the church life, but he undoubtedly made a place for himself among the wielders of the willow. One enthusiastic supporter of the game described Dean Plumptree as the foremost of the dozen real cricketers in the country. The same person, bemoaning the annual defeat by the United States in the International match, exclaimed:

"There are only a few Canadians they are not Canadians!"
who know how to play cricket, and

If the rector of St. James' takes part in the cricket matches, he will not be establishing a precedent, for less than a month before his departure, Canon Welsh acted as captain of a team which played against a team of ladies on the grounds of Bishop Strachan's School. The popular Canon wore the regulation ducks and looked every inch a cricketer. He received an ovation as he walked out on the field and took the correct position at the wicket. He looked good for a century if style counted for anything. The young lady who was bowling did not always come anywhere near the batter, but her first ball to the rector was dead on the wicket. His stroke would have been good for a boundary, but it failed to connect, and bales flew in every direction. Clean bowled at the first ball! But a precedent had been established.

Cable Rates.

While in Canada Lord Milner had the opportunity to observe the beneficial effects of cheap Imperial postal rates, but he considers that as a means of promoting closer sympathy between the different British States a reduction in telegraphic rates would prove much more influential. He has said that very often, before oversea newspapers arrived, giving a full account of what had taken place, telegraphic summaries had gone forth which had been incorrect and misleading. He was not censuring anybody; but the fact was that, while rates were so prohibitive that messages had to be compressed into the extraordinary short form in which they were now compressed, it took almost a man of genius to send an account of an important speech or event without its being misleading.—News, Toronto.

Trade Transactions.

There possibly may be some reason why Canadian trade with Japan should be transacted through middlemen, who arrogate to themselves the right to a rake-off, but at this distance W. T. R. Preston seems to have acted in the interests of Canada in holding out for the right of this country to do its own business direct. There may be reasons in favor of the other systems, but they are not stated in the complaint, beyond the general allegation that such a course has a very disturbing effect on circles in the Orient. It can be quite understood that if the middlemen lose their rake-off it will have a disturbing effect on them, but it is difficult to discern why it should disturb Canada. And the Japanese evidently agree with this view.—Citizen, Ottawa.

An Appropriate Monument.

It is not generally known that Earl Grey was the means of having Watts' magnificent statue, "Physical Energy," sent to South Africa. The late Cecil Rhodes went to see the work while Watts was still engaged upon it, and was greatly struck with its beauty. After Rhodes died, Earl Grey approached the artist and asked him if a cast could be made of "Physical Energy" and set up in South Africa as a memorial to the famous empire-maker. "But," exclaimed the artist, "it is an unfinished work." "So is poor Rhodes'," replied Earl Grey.

Tom Won't Race For Barrel of Money.

Toronto, Aug. 13—Tom Longboat and his manager, Sol Mintz, have returned from Chesterville, Ont. where Tom ran a 5-mile relay race against five men. He did the distahce in 26.23, and beat the "stake horses." The largest crowd ever assembled at a track there turned out, and Rev. Father Fleming, who was in charge, was so pleased that he presented Sol Mintz with an Irish terrior pup, a son of that grand champion Celtic Badger.

"Tom will do no more running for two weeks," said Mintz to-day. "He has a bad cold. After that he is booked up for six solid weeks running exhibitions. I am after Tom Humphrey to handle him on his tour, so as to get him in shape to meet Alf. Shrubb at 18 miles. We got to win the next race. I think Humphrey is the man to get him right."

Alfred Shrubb, who is up in Winnipeg writes to Tom Flanagan asking him to use his influence to send Tom Longboat up there to meet him.

"There is a barrel of money for Tom and me here," he says.

Mintz says the Indian will not go West yet a while.

A Leader in Education.

Institutions, the same as individuals, are known by their work. An institution that has lived and prospered for fourteen years, under the same management, has long passed the experimental stage. There is some good and sufficient cause for such growth and prosperity. Merit and honest conscientious effort will be found behind such life.

For over a decade the Cornwall Commercial College of Cornwall, Ont., has been providing the very best facilities for practical education. It has always been in the front rank of commercial schools in Canada. This popular institution is one of the widely known establishments of Cornwall. It is an institution which, from its usefulness, magnitude, and prestige, provides civic rule. It is pointed out as one of the most reliable schools on this continent, both as an educational institution and as a business enterprise of the town and province. Indeed, its fame is abroad—far beyond the limits of Ontario. In 1908-09 seventeen provinces and states were represented in the student body.

We have just been favored with a handsome catalogue which the school has just issued and would strongly advise anyone interested in practical education to send to the principal for a copy.
