LOCAL AND GENERAL

This may be the speed age, but we mainain that in our experience nothing goes quicker than the dollar.

A Professor says girls are outstripping the boys in regard to progress. "Outstripping" is the right word.

Where are the girls to be vaccinated now in order that the marks shall not show when they come to be flappers?

Merry-go-round, walking match, horse shoe pitching match, oratorical contest, horse races, ball-matches, and many more attractions are listed for the Winchester Fair this year.

Ottawa Exhibition opens next Monday and Toronto Exhibition the following Monday. But remember, the Winchester Exhibition don't open until a month later Sept. 19 20, especially the 20th.

One of the best articles we have ever read in favour of encouraging home industry was written by a fellow who used a pencil made in Sweden and paper stamped "made in U. S. A." The only thing Canadian was himself and his mentality.

The population of Canada on June 1st of this year was given as 9,996,000 by the Bureau of Statistics. This is a net increase of 138,000 over the same date last year and while it isn't as great as the wonderful opportunities of the Dominion warrant, it is some progress and prospects for the future never were brighter.

The boundary line that separates many Protestant denominations seems to be getting less distinct as time goes by. Almost a sensation has been created in church circles in Canada by tne calling of a rector of a Reformed Episcopal church to become minister of a United church in Vancouver. He has accepted. It would appear that the day of church union in Canada has not yet passed. Further, the congregation is a union of three historical downtown churches.—Exchange

Has Long Trip

Messrs D. L. Berry, J. McGee, C. Gilroy and W. Dulmage, of South Mountain returned home last week after a long motor trip of over 8,500 miles, and took in not only the western provinces and British Columbia, but many of the Western States. On the whole they found the travelling good.

Some Changes

Mrs. A. W. Curtis has purchased the McQuaig residence on Gladstone street. Mr. T. J. Wylie has purchased the residence on Gladstone Street, recently owned by Cyrus Carkner. Mr. John Fader has rented, from Mrs. Deeks, the house on Gladstone Street, recently occupied by Mrs. Curtis. Mr. Ben Hitsman intends moving to a house near the C. P. R. depot. Mr. Wm. Rennick has moved to a flat in the Armstrong Block. Mr. Clifford Stewart has moved into the residence annexed to the Beach Furniture Store.

Wages

What are the wages, I would ask, if but the choice were mine? What payment for the heavy task the passing days assign? Would it be more of shining gold to treasure year on year? Would it be honors manifold to crown a proud career? Would it be freedom that my feet across the world might rove? Or, would I ask, of all things sweet, a little more of love? A little more of tenderness from those I hold most dear. The feeiing of a swift caress to banish care and fear: these would I ask if it were mine to choose my living wage, then brighter would the sunlight shine on all this mighty stage. Then sweeter would the bird-songs ring, the hours more swiftly move; this charm would gladden everything; a little more of love.

Cattle On Highway

In the second division court in Toronto, a judgment was given dismissing an appeal which is of interest to motorists and to owners of cattle. While driving at night on a highway, the motorist turned aside to pass a couple of calves when a third bobbed up from the ditch and was struck by the car, the car being damaged to the extent of $300. The motorist sued the owner of the calf and secured judgment for the full amount. On appeal the judgment was sustained. The court held that the plaintiff was not guilty of negligence and the sole cause of the accident was the negligence and disobedience of a statutory duty owed by the defendant. By the Highway Improvement Act, R. S O., 1927 chapter 54, section 73 (3) it was pointed out, that, permitting one's cattle to run at large is forbidden; consequently the presence of these calves on the road was unlawful---quite as much so as if forbidden by a municipal law.

A Family Of 73 Enters Canada

What is easily the largest household to ever move to Canada, lock, stock and barrell, arrived recently, when seventy-three souls, all of them bearing the same name, Ammeter, and all related, marched down the gangway from the Montclare and then into their waiting train bound for Winnipeg. The household in question is headsd by Christian Ammeter, a venerable 80 year old patriarch, while his sons and daughters, relatives by marriage and grandchildren, ranging in age from 55 to 3 years old, comprise the remainder of the group.

They all came from Switzerland, and are bound for Winnipeg from which point they will be distributed by the Canadian Pacific Colonization Dept., under whose auspices they came to this country. There are twenty-nine adult males, twenty females, and even twenty children in the group, while an official of the Swiss Consulate in Montreal came down to Quebec to meet them and take them in charge until they reach Winnipeg.

Twelve distinct families make up this group in addition to the eighty year old leader and they range from Pauline Ammeter and her three children to Gottlieb and his six children; Emma J. and her six children, and Rosina and her six youngsters.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

Robt Beggs & Son, of Hallville, have received the contract to build a covered rink at Spencerville at a cost of $8,000.

The condition of Mrs. Martin Feader who was recently seized with a stroke is not much improved, and while conscious and able to converse some, she is not much improved.

The engagement is announced of Miss Lillian Higginson, R. N., younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Higginson, Inkerman, Ont., to Mr. C. Reginald Wiseman only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Wiseman, Napanee, Ont. The marriage will take place the latter part of September.

Hudson Trevor Allison, son of the late Hudson Allison, died at Ocean Beach, Me., from what is thought to be ptomaine poisoning. His body was brought to Chesterville and buried Friday morning. Trevor Allison, when two years of age, was on the ill-fated "Titanic" which sank with nearly all on board. His father and mother were drowned but Trevor was saved by his nurse. He has since resided in Montreal and was on a holiday in Maine when he passed away.

In an unsuccessful attempt to pass an American tourist car Friday night last on the highway, J. Hotson Meikle, accompanied by Mahlon Seely and Murray Ball, all of Morrisburg, struck the rear end of the car and crowded it into the ditch, whereupon his own car headed for the ditch, cut off a large hydro pole and turned completely turtle with all four wheels in the air. The only serious casualty was a broken ankle on the part of a lady in the American car. Meikle's car was righted and pushed to one side immidiateiy help arrived.

About Base Ball

To-night the play-off game of baseball between Winchester and Morewood will be played on the school grounds here and it promises to be a battle royal, and it means the championship to either one or the other of the teams. Now a word to spectators. The boys want some cash to keep up their organization There is no admission fee. Don't put a nickle in the hat with the idea that the collector will think it a quarter, You can't fool Nelson You would pay a quarter anywhere else. Give it on Thursday night and help the home boys.

On The Hike

Several parties have passed through Winchester lately "on the hike" with the packs on their backs. It seems to have become a fad in some parts of the United States for young men and young women to tramp through the country just for the fun of it. On Tuesday two young girls, one stout, and evidently healthy and strong, the other somewhat frail and a little bent, passed through. They had walked, or been lifted, all the way from Philadelphia, and were on their way to Ottawa, intending to return by way of Montreal. They were well tanned, and did not appear to be concerned. They are evidently the daughters of well-to-do parents who have supplied them with funds, and they are taking this way to have their fun out of it.

Two Important Meetings

Two important meetings will be held in the Town Hall, Winchester, to-morrow, Friday night. The first will last from 7 till 8 o'clock, and the purpose is to nominate a candidate for the Municipal council to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Patterson.

The second meeting is of much greater importance. This meeting which opens at 8 o'clock is a delegated Prohibition Convention and its purpose is to discuss the advisability of placing a candidate in the field in the coming provincial election. Three delegates are appointed from each polling sub-division in the County. The local delegates are Messrs N. W. Beach, Dr. McKendry, W. J. Cass, Wm. Dixon, J. H. Ross and Mrs. W. D. Edwards, with alternates, Mrs N. W. Beach, Robt Empey and Robt Rennick.

The United Church

Messages of real spiritual uplift were given last Sunday by Rev. Hector Beach. In the morning he took for his subject Jesus' parable of the talents which he said ought rightly to be called the parable of the goods He asked: "Do we live believing that Jesus has delivered his spiritual goods to us." He showed that the goods are not ours except to use for the present, and for the use we make of them we have to give an account. If we are His followers we have received His precious word; also love in abundant measure, which gives strength to overcome difficulties. He gives also peace and joy. If we can give a good account ot the use we have made of these, at the end of life we shall deserve the Master's "Well Done."

Rev. J. Brownlee asisted Mr. Beach in the morning service and in the afternoon the former preached an able sermon from from the parable of the leaven, to the members of the Royal Black Chaper who marched in a body to the church, accompanied by the Citizen's Band.

Rev, Beach spoke in the evening from the parable of the Householder's Treasure. He said this parable is a grand conclusion to those preceeding it. It is a parable for God's own people in which it is shown there must be spiritual insight. There is no reason, said the speaker, why a consecrated mind to-day cannot know the will of God as well as holy men of old knew it. We are to be treasure chests, and be able to share our treasures with those we meet. As treasurers we may have God's rich promises, the words and deeds of Jesus, the records of the martyrs, etc. Are we bringing forth these treasures? What about new treasures? Increase your joy by sharing them.

The choir at the morning service sang: "Still, still with Thee", Mr. J. D. Stewart taking the solo part. At the evening service "Pass me not O gentle Saviour", was very expressingiy and beautifully sung by Mrs. Everetts of Moose Jaw. The services of former members of our church were appreciated on Sunday when Rev. H. Beach, and Mrs. Everetts, formerly Miss Tressa Nesbitt, so kindly assisted.

Next Sunday Rev. John Hurst of Manotick will have charge of the services.

Miss Georgia Earl, of Ottawa, has been appointed head sales lady in the China and Glass Dept. of Henry Birks Ltd, Hamilton.

Miss Evelyn Cheney, of Mountain, and little Miss Aileen Cheney of Ottawa, and Miss Olive Johnston, were guests of Miss Laura Dukelow one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Kinkaid, Beulah and Russell, spent over the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Eagleson at their cottage St. Pierre de Wakefield.

Baseball Play-Off

In the first game of the D. A. B. B. League Play-Off on Tuesday night, the Winchester team was successful in defeating Morewood 5-4 on the latter's diamond. The game was full of pep from start to finish with very few errors, Tonight Morewood comes to Winchester for the second game and if the local boys can repeat Tuesday's score they will be acclaimed league champions. Let's hope they are successful.

Fixing Up

It is a good thing to see our merchants fixing up their premises. Les Suffell started it by having the outside of his store painted. Ernest Erratt followed his example. Dr. McKendry did some improving and T. O. Keyes has the outside woodwork of his block repainted, Mr Alex Duncan is having the inside of his store re-papered, It all shows enterprise and progress and other premises in town would be the better for evidence of the same enterprise.

A Suggestion

The popularity of the Band Concert of Sacred music on Sunday night last has led to many suggestions. One good one is for the band boys to invite the spectators to join in some of the familiar sacred songs. Another is to secure a good quartette to give a selection. And another is to take up a collection The band boys are very much in need of a couple of new instruments. These instruments cost a lot of money and the band has no source of revenue except voluntary. A collection would not be out of place.

Big Crowd At Sacred Band Concert

The Citizens Band struck a popular wave when they decided to give a concert of sacred music on Sunday night after the regular church services. The street in front of Hotel Winchester was packed with people and during the progress of the concert all traffic was stopped. The band played six or seven selections of well known hymns and the concert lasted from 9 till 10 o'clock. The Citizen's Band has maintained its reputation as a splendid organization and its services are in demand from many outside places. The concert on Sunday night proved a popular move and the wish is expressed that it may be repeated before the season ends

Once Lived Here

"Dan" Robertson, an official of the C. P. R. in many capacities, and who resided in Winchester and Smith Falls in years gone by, died at Ottawa last week in his 64th year. Dan could quote his Bible and Shakespeare better than any man we ever knew, and always had a ready and witty reply. He came to Canada srom Scotland and was working as a lad on a farm near Winchester. It was under the late Mr. Drinkwater of the C. P. R. that he became connected with that railroad company, and his progress was rapid. In later years he was connected with the Railway Commission at Ottawa. He was a great friend of the late George Ham, also an illustrious character connected with the C. P. R.

The Unspoiled West

It would be difficult. now-a-days, to find within a few days journey, a land so natural so utterly unspoiled, as the great Canadian West. The Western trip is a continous feast of beauty. And at this season of the year, particularly, the colours which Nature has painted so lavishly on her broad canvass present a glorious spectacle.

On your way, Jasper National beckons, with its surprising golf course set against primitive peaks and glaciers; Mount Robson with its proud height; Vancouver, Victoria and Alaska, the land of mystery.

Details regarding the most delightful vacation you have ever spent will gladly be supplied by any Canadian National Agent.

Annual Divine Service

There was a large gathering of members of the Royal Black Knights of Ireland, here on Sunday, August 11th for the Annual Church Service of the St. Lawrence County Chapter Chapter. The Sir Kts. gathered at the Orange Hall, and headed by the local Band paraded over Centre, Main, Louise and Church streets to the United Church The service was taken by Rev. Sir Kt. J. J. D. Brownlee, of Gloucester, assisted by Rev. Hector Beach, of Oxford Mills The text for the sermon was taken from Matt. 13;33. Emphasis were placed on the fact that "True Christianity" was not obtained by personal influence, Aims of the Royal Black Order are to establish this personal contact among its members by the personal observance of its rules. On returning to the hall, the meeting was called to order by the V. Wor. County Master, W. A. Awbury, and a motion passed, extending the thanks of the County Chapter to the preacher of the day, the Official Board for the use of the churca and to the Organist and choir. Brief addresses were given by Rt. Wor. H. P. Leslie, G. R. of Eastern Ont., Rt. Wor. H. B. Fetterly, P. G. M. of E. Ont.; Col. D. W. Beckett, G. M. of E. Ont.; C. A. Lunt, P. M. of E. Ont., and W. Sir B. Smith, Preceptor of the local encampment. The arrangements for this service were under the direction of the local preceptery and they wish to extend their thanks to all those who, in anyway, assisted in making this event a success. The offering was donated to the True Blue and Orange Orphanage at Richmond Hill, Ontario.

What Happened Before

Remember Steddon, a pretty, unsophisticated girl, is the daughter of a kindly but narrow-minded minister in a small midwestern town. Her father,

Rev. Doctor Steddon, violently opposed to what he considers "worldly" things, accepts motion pictures as the cause for much of the evil of the present day. Troubled with a cough, Remember goes to see

Dr. Bretherick, an elderly physician, who is astonished at the plight in which he finds her. Pressed by the doctor, Remember admits her unfortunate affair with Elwood Farnaby, a poor boy, son of the town sot. As Remember and Dr. Bretherick discuss the problem a telephone message brings the news that Elwood has been killed in an accident. Dr. Bretherick accordingly persuades Remember to go West, her cough serving as a plausible excuse; to write home of meeting and marrying a pretended suitor—"Mr. Woodville"—and later to write her parents announcing her "husband's" death before the birth of her expected child. Unable alone to bear her secret, Remember goes to her mother with it.

Her mother agrees with the plan of the doctor. Mem leaves town. On the train Mem accidentally meets Tom Holby, movie star, traveling with Robina Teele, leading lady in the movies, who are the cynosure of all eyes. The train comes to an abrupt halt, a disaster having been narrowly avoided, and the passengers get out and walk about.

Now Go On With the Story

The other passengers dawdled about, but Mem went farther and farther. She wanted to see what was on the other side of that butte as much as mankind has longed to see the other side of the moon.

When she started back the cool of the butte's shadow made her rest awhile. The heat and the hypnosis of the shimmering sand sea put her asleep in spite of herself. She awoke with a start.

The train was moving, a new locomotive dragging it and its broken engine. She ran, fell, picked herself up, limped forward.

She was alone in the wilderness, and the train was already a toy running through a gap between two lofty buttes. Both mocked the girl unendurably and she stood panting in a suffocation of fright, her hands plucking at each other's finger nails.

Then for the first time Mem understood what the desert meant to those who had seen the last burro drop and found the canteen full of dry air.

* * * *

For a trance-while Mem made a perfect allegory of helplessness on a monument. She heard a voice laughing with a kind of querying exclamation:

"Hello?"

The word was as unimportant as could be and it came from what she had just decreed the most useless thing on earth, a handsome moving-picture actor. He went on:

"Here we are, eh?"

Tom Holby laughed at fate as in his pictures.

"I've nearly died of thirst in the desert half a dozen times," he said; "but there was always a camera or two a few yards off and a grub wagon just outside. And the heroine usually came galloping to the rescue and picked me up in time for the final clinch. I see the heroine, but the grub wagon's late."

"Wh-what are we going to do?"

"Well, I'm not going to act, anyway, as long as there's no camera on the job. Let's sit down and wait."

"For what?"

"Oh, I guess the train will come back, or another one will come along and we can flag it in plenty of time. Sit down on this handsome red divan, won't you? I'm Mr. Holby, by the way."

"Yes, I know," she said, and told him her name.

There was a long silence. Then he mused aloud:

"'Remember,' eh? Great! Robina would have preferred that to the one she chose. Do you know Robina?"

"I've seen her."

"On the screen?"

"On the train."

"Oh, then you haven't seen her. That isn't the real Robina that walks about. That's just a poor, plain, frightened, anxious little thing, a Cinderella who only begins to live when she puts on her glass slippers. She has to be so infernally noble all day long that you can hardly blame her for resting her overworked virtues when she's off the lot. I used to be a pretty decent fellow, too, before I began to be a hero by trade. But now—gosh! how I love my faults! When there's no camera on me I'm a mighty mean man."

"Really!"

"Oh, I'm a fiend. I'm thinking of playing villains for a while, so that I can be respectable at my own expense outside the factory. But I'm so mussed up between my professional emotions and my personal ones that it's hard to keep from acting, on and off. Now look at this situation. If the camera gang were here I'd know just what to do. I'd be Sir Walter Raleigh in a Stetson and chaps. But since there's just us two here and I have you in my power—or you have me in your power—I don't know just how to act. It depends on you. Are you a heroine or an adventuress?"

"I don't understand you."

"Are you an onjanoo or a vamp?"

"I don't speak French."

"Then you must be an onjanoo," he said. "In that case I suppose I really ought to play the villian and— But here comes the train. Dog-on it! just as we were working up a real little plot. I hope I haven't compromised you. If you're afraid I have, I'll have to go back and hide till the next rain comes along. Or you can, for I imagine it's Robina that reversed the engine. She probably missed me and suspected that I was out here with a prettier girl than she is—pardon me! Shall I go hide?"

"Are you a heroine or an adventuress?"

"Oh, no! no! I couldn't think of it. Nobody knows me. It can't make any difference what they say about me."

"Gosh! what an enviable position. Stick to your luck, Miss Steddon. May I help you down?"

* * * *

That was a chapter in Mem's life. Holby had guessed right. Robina had missed him and when the helpless conductor protested against the already late, she pulled the rope sacrilege of reversing the Limited, herself.

She knew the signals, having played in a railroad serial, and she soon had the train backing at full speed.

She had half suspected that Tom Holby had a companion in the desert, and when she looked out and saw him with the pretty chit whose magazine he had picked up, she was tempted to give the signal to go ahead again.

But she preferred to give poor Holby her opinion of him. Mem crept back to her place, shivering with her first experience of stardom and its conspicuousness.

The train made up so much of its lost time that it was only two hours late when it drew into Tucson. Tom made his adieux and left Mem in a whirl. But her faculties went around in the mad panic of a pinwheel when a strange, sombre person spoke to her:

"Miss Steddon?"

"Yes."

"I am Doctor Galbraith, pastor of the First Church here. Your father telegraphed me to meet you at the train and look after you."

"Do you know papa?"

"No, but he found my name in the yearbook. I have found a nice boarding house for you, and my wife and I will look after you as best we can."

Mem was struck violently with the thought, "But what becomes of Mr. Woodville now?"

In her desperation she caught sight again of Tom Holby, who had walked briskly to the head of the train and was striding back to his car. A frantic whim led Mem to say, very distinctly, as she passed him:

"Good night, Mr. Woodville."

Holby could hardly believe his ears, but he laughed to himself, "This is fame!" bowed and went on.

The Reverend Galbraith paused, but Mem urged him along, saying, "That's an old friend I met on the train." And now she felt that she had established the existence of her Mr. Woodville. She was already unconsciously "planting" characters. "His face looked familiar; but I guess it wasn't."

The reason it looked familiar was that lithographs of it were posted up all over Tuscon. Holby was to appear there in a picture.

Mrs. Galbraith turned out to be a joyous Western woman raised on a ranch and of a loud and hilarious cordiality. She was distressed because she could not take Mem into her own little home, but it was spilling over with children.

On the way to her boarding house she noted many of Tom Holby's portraits. He was not the star of the picture. Robina Teele was the star. Mem felt a longing to see this heroic picture, but Mrs. Galbraith would not leave her for a moment, and the night was prayer-meeting night.

Mem attended the evening devotions. There was nothing strange to her in the drowsy, cozy atmosphere, the sparse company singing hymns and bowing in prayer and finding a mystical comfort in the thought of sins forgiven and in eternal home beyond the grave.

Doctor and Mrs. Galbraith took her back to her lodgings and left her. They had no objection to moving pictures and attended them often, but Mem did not know this, and she felt like a thief when her worser self compelled her better self to a dark dishonesty. Both selves went to the movies.

If the cinema store had been an opium den Mem could not have sneaked more guiltily into it.

When she had found a seat in the dark hall she was so illiterate in the staples of fiction that she tingled with excitement over hackneyed situations that left many a sophisticated child yawning and gave never a pause to the swaying jaws of the gum-grinding crowd.

But Mem was experiencing an agitation such as she had not known since her mother told her about Little Red Riding Hood and growled like a wolf, showing long white teeth.

She was astounded at the courage of Tom Holby. It wrung her heart to see him in this Alaskan picture plowing across white Saharas of snow, to see him challenge the barroom bully and beat him down and stand, torn, bleeding and panting, over him. Being a woman, she was not quite convinced of Robina's supersaintly innocences in the film, but she had no doubt of Tom Holby as Galahad.

In her room she remembered her parents. She had not written to them for two days, and she had not carried Mr. Woodville forward.

One thing was certain—she must free herself from the Galbraiths; she must get out of Tucson. She must become Mrs. Woodville at once.

She would probably have given up trying if a bit of luck had not befallen her. Mrs. Galbraith rode over in haste and distress to explain that her husband and she had to leave Tucson for a few days to attend his father's funeral. She promised to hasten back, and begged Mem Steddon's foregiveness for deserting her. It was plainly a time for quick and decisive action.

She threw caution aside and forfore to regard the perils of inconsistency. She wrote her father and mother a hasty letter to which the lilt of hope unconsciously contributed an atmosphere of bridal bliss.

My Darling Mamma and Papa: Well, you have lost your daughter—not by fell disease, but by fell in love. * * * You see, Mr. Woodville—John—was so attentive and kind and considerate and respectful—almost reverent, you might say—and he's so big and handsome and fine and noble, and I was so small and lonely and so far away for so long that—oh, I just couldn't resist. * * * We leave at once for Yuma, so address all your letters to me as Mrs. John Woodville, General Delivery, Yuma. Doesn't it sound grand, though?

With a few lines to explain that "Mr Woodville" was not rich—yet—She ended the letter.

She wrote the Galbraiths a similar letter and bought a ticket for Yuma.

Canneries For All Fruit Areas, Aim of Norwegian Women

Large Number of Small Plants Proposed by Farm .. Association

Oslow, Norway.—Small canneries, to be built in all districts where fruit is grown, are planned by the Peasant Women's Association of Norway. The cost of each cannery would be no more than 5000 or 6000 crowns and it is proposed to adapt them to all sorts of fruits and berries. These proposals follow the success of the great cannery which has already been built at Toten and which, however, only handles surplus apples.

The aim of the farm women of Norway is to stand side by side with the farmers' associations in their effort to raise the peasantry economictlly and culturally.

One of the great purposes of the association under the leadership of Mrs. Olga Bjoner, is to secure a better school system and to get better representation of women on the school boards. It also seeks to make education more suited to present-day requirements and to st strengthen the religious teaching in schools.

Their aim is also to elevate family life, to enlighten the people as to the evils of alcohol and to work for a better understanding between neighboring districts and between classes. As far as possible, libraries will be organized.

The association has taken up the development of all kinds of home industry, and in order to support these industries it tries to make people use home products. Spinning, dyeing, weaving are encouraged. It also aims at exporting different products of the home industry.

In order to promote the sale of different home products the association has formed sales offices in different districts.

Nordic Exhibition Is Held at Kiel

Hamburg—A most unusual exhibition and athletic meet of the Nordic countries has just taken place at Kiel, Ger., well expressing the present friendliness and community of interests of these northern countries. Artists, museums and collectors vied with one another in sending their choicest treasures, and leading men of letters and of sport arrived to represent their countries.

There were textiles, wood carvings and wrought iron work from Sweden and Lapland, fascinating old cupboards, chairs and carpets from Norway, fifteenth century and modern ceramics, textile and carvings from Finland, costumes, house utensils and pottery from Denmark. The Iceland exhibit was small, but showed interesting wood carvings and intricate silver filigree work.

Northern architectural tendencies of yesterday and today were illustrated in photographs, plans and models and modern painting, sculpture and arts and crafts in well-rounded displays.

Lectures were given by leading experts in art and general science, the premiers of "Paul and Virginia," by Sophus Michaelis, was staged at the opera and such operas and plays as "St. Matthew's Passion," Hebbel's "Herod and Marianne" and Strindberg's "To Damascus" were given before enthusiastic audiences.

Speed and Safety

London Daily News and Westminster (Lib.): It is not the motorist only who is concerened in this matter; the pedestrian has his responsibilities, which he has no right to ignore, for the promotion of the general safety; school teachers and mothers have theirs; the police and road authorities theirs also. Despite the continued rise in the percentage of accidents, there is no reason to doubt that the problems of the new speed age can be solved by common effort and a general recognition of the necessity of understanding the new conditions and acting appropriately. Even the animals are learning the lesson. The "road sense" of dogs has undoubtedly improved; even birds and the wilder creatures of the country-side are less commonly killed than they used to be, despite the vast increase in traffic. It is not credible that man alone should be unable, or unwilling, to learn by the use of his reason what instinct has so rapidly taught these.

Scotland and the U.S. Quotas

Glasgow Herald (Cons.): (The new U.S. immigration law, which came into forc eon July 2, reduces the Irish Free State quota by some 10,000 and increases appreciably the quotas from England and Scotland.) The new law, moreover, puts greater temptation than ever in the way of those inhabitants of Scotland who are inclined to emigrate either by natural wanderlust or economic pressure. Thousands who might have remained at home or gone to swell the population of our Dominions have now the opportunity of taking advantage of the easier means of access to Ellis Island which the new quota affords. Herein is a distinct danger both to Scotland and to the Empire. Thus we cannot utter paeans over this new American law. While admitting its usefulness to the States, we recognize all too painfully the obstacles it may place in the way of the continued well-being and progress of the Scottish race.

Empire Free Trade

London Daily Express (Ind. Cons.): The time is approaching when Free Trade will be the fiscal law of the British Empire, and when behind a tariff imposed on foreign goods and produce trade between the various parts of the Empire will flow as unrestrictedly as between the various States in the American Union.

Science Reveals Age Old Facts

Rare Relics of Ice Age in Austria Come to Light Through Man's Hobby

Vienna—Evidences of prehistoric life of man and animal in the Ice Abe are more or less abundant, in western Europe, especially in France, but in central and southern Europe they are extremely rare. The important results of excavations which have been carried on in the Teufelslucke Caves, near Eggenburg, in lower Austria, therefore, are all the more valuable.

Mainly through a local resident, Josef Krahuletz, who was an archaeologist by hobby rather than by training, for more than half a century excavations were carried on which led to the discovery of the relics of Ice Age known to present-day natural science—great elks, mammoths, wild horses, cave bears, cave hyenas, rhinoceroses with woolly hair, reindeer, etc.

Further, small flint tools and knives were unearthed, not bigger than safety-razor blades but of such stone as has indicated to geologists that either the primitive man who used them came himself from some far distant place where such flints are to be found or had connections with that district. Small heaps of charcoal excavated were recently examined microscopically by an expert, who has declared them to be the remains of coal which had been formed from the conifers, now found in only the highest alpine regions. Thus clear proof was supplied of the extremity of the climate 16,000 to 18,000 years ago.

Excavations are being carried on by Prof. Josef Byer, a leading Austrian authority on prehistoric man, who hopes to discover the remains of human beings from the Solutre period—contemporaries of those whose bones were excavated at Solutre in .France—in addition to other evidence of first importance to a scientific knowledge of the ice period. The excavations hitherto made in this cave, which seems undoubtedly to have served as a hunting station for prehistoric man, are all carefully preserved in the Krahuletz Museum at Eggenburg.

Tell the World

London Daily Telegraph (Cons.): British manufacturers are losing trade in Canada and elsewhere not because their goods are inferior or because their prices are too high, but because they hide their light under a bushel. .. .. Those manufacturers—and there are still too many of them in England—who think that, when they have made a good article and quoted a fair price for it, they can wait for buyers to come to them are laboring under a fatal delusion. Our potential customers in Canada and other Dominions cannot be expected to search out the British firms that might supply their eeds The mountain will not come to Mahomet, but Mahomet must go to the mountain. In other words, our would-be exporters need to make their goods widely known before they can sell them, and any lingehing belief that advertisement is a luxury instead of a necessary must be eradicated from the British business mind.

Talkie Talk

London Daily Chronicle (Lib.): Without the slightest wish to crab the much-talked-of Talkies, but rather with the intention of echoing the thoughts of most prudent people, we would suggest that the Talkies are being talked about a little too much and a little too loudly. The Talkies are a wonderful achievement, and all those patient and ingenious experimenters who have accomplished it are entitled to the warmest congratulations. But the assumption that the older "silent drama" has automatically become a back number should not be accepted without the soberest scrutiny.

He: Tom says you don't count at all with him.

She: No. He must have kissed me a hundred times, but I didn't count.

Conservatism and the Classes

Saturday Review (London): Shakespeare himself is the most effective of Tory agents. If English education consisted, like the Roman, almost exclusively of the study of the national poetry, our Socialists could shut up shop. The Englishman's political ideal, when he is not led astray to follow after strange gods, is the maximum of private liberty compatible with public order. That is also, in one of its aspects, the ideal of the Conservative Party; and it is what Shakespeare meant by that magical and most English phrase, "night's rest and neighborhood." . . . The tone of English literature is so incurably aristocratic that the Conservatives have no need to worry about propaganda. They have but to encourage the sale of cheap editions of the national classics.

Coins of Herod Come to Light

Three Tombs Found in Palestine Shed Light on Biblical History

Jerusalem—Discovery of three tombs belonging to three distinct periods of Palestine's history has been announced by Dr. William F. Bade, director of the Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Calif., excavating at Tell en-Naebeh, which Dr. Bade believes is the safe of the ancient Mizpah.

The discovery was made just as the excavators were preparing to end their work of the season The first tomb contained an assortment of pottery, beads and jewelry from the second phase of the Iron Age in Palestine, and may be dated from about 600 B. C.

There was evidence that earlier occupants had been removed during the Hellenistic period, because practically all the furniture was left intact.

Of special interest to Biblical students is the second tomb, because of a coin found in it dated in the reign of Archelaus, cruel son of Herod the Great who ruled from 4 B. C. to 6 A.D. During his reign, according to Matthew, the parents of Jesus, upon their return from Egypt to Nazareth, avoided Judea in order to escape persecution. Other objects in the tomb were equally interesting, belonging in point of time to the boyhood of Jesus.

An unusual assortment of pottery from the early Iron Age (1200 to 800 B. C.) was found in the third tomb. There were more than 50 intact saucer lamps and an equal number of broken ones. Scores of small black jars with loop handles, presumably for oil, and about 30 beautifully burnished bowls, including a unique jug in the form of a beehive were discovered.

Dr. Bade believes this is the largest tomb group ever unearthed in Tell en-Naebeh, and hopes a more definite date of its construction may be discovered after careful study of two fine Egyptian scarabs found there.—Christian Science Monitor.

Briand Pan-Europa Plan Held Result Of Years of Work

Vienna—Count Richard Coudenhove-Kalergi, founder of the Pan-European movement, and advocate of a United States of Europe, discussing in the press M. Briand's proposal to summon the first Pan-European government conference this year, says that many reports to the contrary notwithstanding, M. Briand's decision is not improvished, but is the outcome of his deliberate policy, upon which he has been working consistently through the meetings at Cannes and Locarno and through the Kellogg pact.

Only non-settlement of outstanding problems from the war caused M. Briand to postpone the summoning of the conference after the Pan-American conference last fall. M. Briand discussed the Pan-Europe proposal with the statesmen of the last League of Nations Council meeting in Madrid and found no opposition.

Count Coudenhove-Kalergi considers the present time favorable for M. Briand's action. Now, he says, a decision must be made between the old policy of balance of power, which led to the war, and a new policy of economic and political co-operation within the framework of the European cultural unity. "The fifteenth anniversary of the outbreak of the last war will soon come," says the Count, "when the question of war guilt will again arise; but a more important question is the responsibility in any future war. All opponents of the United States of Europe must share that guilt. In democratic states people have henceforth no right to blame the government alone for the decisions taken."

Naval Parity

London Observer (Ind.): Two things must follow from the definition of equality. The first will be a swift and drastic reduction of armaments, inevitable when cautious admiralties need no longer provide for J. R. Watkins, a large margin of safety to cover uncertainties. The second, equally inevitable, but even more significant, will be a disarmament of men's minds. With equality, established in measurable terms, there must needs vanish al suggestions of rivalry, all elements of covert competition, between Britain and America on the oceans. This is the very substance of the peace which we have all dreamed of since 1914.

Florence, Italy, Rocked By 'Quake

Florence, Italy. — Florence was shaken by an earthquake. The shock lasted about eight seconds and did considerable damage to wall and roofs in neighboring villages.

Roofs fell and crevices appeared in walls in Borgo, San Lorenzo, Vicchio, Barberino, and Firenzuola, but no personal injuries have been reported.

The quake which was of undulatory character caused many to desert their houses and spend the night outdoors. Its epicentre was believed to be about 25 miles distant.

The Piazza Michelancelino and Le Cascine were full of fearful people, while the population of the hamlet Mugelo went out into the fields to sleep.

At Bologna the shock was lighter than at Florence. At Defenza the inhabitants were greatly alarmed.

BELGRADE SHAKEN.

Belgrade.—A severe earthquake was felt here. The epicentre was estimated to be about 60 miles away in the Rudnik district.

POPULACE IN PANIC.

Buenos Aires.—The populace of four towns are recovering from panic caused by two earthquakes which rocked their homes. The towns were those of San Rafael, "Tweny-Fifth of May" (a town named for Argentina's independence day), Monte Coman and Colonia Alvear. There was little damage and no casualties.

"When'll ye be getting marrit, Donald?" "Och, I dinna ken. Sarah has some printed stationery she must use up first, and she disna write much on account of the postage."

Economics and the Empire

Winnipeg Free Press (Ind. Cons.): into force on July 2, reduces the Irish Empire trade solidarity is an inevitable thing, although the basis on which it is to be worked out is still to be found. It is not aided greatly by what Mr. Snowden calls the reckless enthusiasm of Lork Beaverbrook for free trade within the Empire and tariffs against all the world. It is not aided either by the South African treaty with Germany, nor again by Mr .Snowden's academic opposition to protection of any description. Economic pressure is welding the Empire more closely together, and thoughtful study of the whole question will have better results than the off-hand expression of theories which may or may not be supportable in view of the actual condition.

Home Sweet Home!

Coristine Jope-Slade in the Woman's Journal: Home is still there, but no one is living in it permanently but the bary. The other occupants wander cheerfully in and out and just leave it there till they come back. It isn't clamped over them like a cloche over lettuce for them to mature in any more. Let us be starkly honest about this home business. It is the exile's eyes that dim over "Home, Sweet Home," not the eyes of the daughter of the house sitting in the middle of the scene listening to the touching words over the wireless because it's the maid's night out.

THINGS START MOVING BUT WHAT'S IT ALL ABOUT?

Cameraman records a fast moment in a recent New York ball game between Brooklyn and St. Louis.

Fashions for Men

A courageous professor in Northwestern University, at Evanston, Ill., appeared on the campus the other day attired in a roomy blouse that topped conventional trousers, and left a V-shaped opening at the throat so that the Adam's apple might have a better chance to do its "daily dozen."

The blouse — long, trim, and full—completely hid the most irksome and unsightly of human harness, the suspenders, and was furnished with a broad, loose waistband at the meridian of the belt. Deep, wide pockets set within easy reach of the hands, and sleeves shortened to allow play of the wrists, added serviceability to the outfit. The innovation in costume appealed so strongly to the haberdasher who fashioned the blouse in accordance with the professor's specifications that he is planning to put it on the market, so that all men have a chance to become more comfortable.

This revolution in masculine attire, thus boldly proclaimed in the face of a stupid tradition that insists that homo sapiens shall move about the planet in a somber, heavy sack drawn tight at the neck and thickly wadded at the shoulders, should indee mark the beginning of an era for the emancipation of the fashion-trodden male.

For a generation women have enjoyed freedom from discomforts and unyielding conventions, have in fact audaciously developed novelties in dress that seize upon every beguiling color in the rainbow. Modistes blend, slash and fabricate so that the feminine frock to-day not only gladdens the eye, but also admirably serves every practical requirement, especially on a sultry summer day when an armored man becomes a wilted cabbage.

Let the courageous champion of reformed fashions for his fellows "carry on" his beneficent campaign, and thus usher in a new reign of freedom. Let him add riotous colors—perhaps deep purple or gorgeous crimson—to men's street attire, so that the sedate business suit shall be permanently relegated to the attic and the devouring moth. Let him discard that fluttering streamer of useless toggery known as a necktie. Let him originate some dashing waistcoat designs, perhaps even an artistic substitute for the old-fashioned vest, at present little more than a bulging envelope for pencils, fountain pen, and watch. Let him design a straw hat that reveals some touch of individual ownership, and doesn't look like a million other sun-kissed skimmers. Let this intrepid crusader try his wits on the conventional dress suit and tuxedo, for years strait-jackets of masculine misery.—Christian Science Monitor.

Why Not a Special Session?

Quebec Evenement (Cons.): The newspapers of Ontario and the West are demanding a special session at Ottawa to formulate a national policy on the question of the tariff.....An extraordinary session would cost the country a great deal of money, but we should take no thought of expense when so vital a question is to be considered. Cost what it may, Parliament must find a way to prevent the crisis which will burst on the day the Americans close their markets to Canadian products, and Canada must present to the world a commercial program, prepared with care by all parties interested. All these arguments are stated by many newspapers in the West. The attitude of our English-Canadian colleagues gives us the liveliest satisfaction. It proves that the return to the national policy, which made Canada the great country of the future, is making great progress.....It is the first time that they have demanded energetic action against the tariff hostilities of the United States.

Speeding and Accidents

Quebec Soleil (Lib.): Speeding is the cause of most of our accidents, and it is remarkable that they are more frequent in flat countries like Manitoba than they are in more or less undulating countries like our own. Evidently the temptation to burn up the miles is very great, and far too many fall victims to it. But it is inconceivable that practically ten per cent. of accidents can be attributed to drunkenness. This species of culprit is severely punished in this Province, when he is arrested. But is he arrested often enough?

MISS IS DIPPY

Having plunged to the cold Mississippi,
She was rescued repentant and drippy;
And when asked why she jumped,
"Just a psychical slump,"
She replied: "In a word, I was dippy."

Landsman: Hey, you sailorman, what makes you think you'd be a good baseball player?

Sailor: Oh, I've pitched and tossed on the ocean for ten years.

Outward Bound

As one on distant travel bent
Looks seaward from the shore
Of this familiar Continent,
Soon to be known no more.

So o'er the boundless deep I gaze,
Fearless, and yet alone,
Powerless to pierce the shining haze
That veils the vast unknown.

Tourist Camps And Public Health

U.S. Health Service Issue Bulletins Which is of Interest to All Ontario Towns

In planning long or short trips by automobile the ardent touring fan often seeks the out-of-the way roads in order to discover for himself the more beautiful spots of nature,, and, more practically, to avoid the beaten highways, which nowadays usually carry a very heavy traffic. This is particularly true if the person is planning to camp out. In preparation for an automobile trip, the U.S. Public Health states that careful forethought is usually given to the necessary spare parts for the machine, the kind of clothing to take along, or the camping equipment needed, but often too little thought is given to one's health and the safeguarding of it on the trip.

This latter point cannot be too strongly emphasized because, on such a trip, living conditions are often changed so much by evposure to inclement weather, lack of sleep, irregular hours, and other factors, that the bodily machine may, perhaps, become more susceptible to attack from disease than it would under the normal home conditions.

The safeguarding of the health of automobile tourists, both on the roads and in the camps, has become an important public health problem. As early as 1925 it was estimated that in thirty-five States there were more than 3,000 camps attended by over 2,000,000 campers. In 1928, it was estimated that, in California alone, there were 1,400 automobile camps. In other States, particularly those with well advertised scenic areas, there were probably several thousand others. Investment in camps of all kinds in the State of Maine has been estimated to exceed $5,000,000. Much has been done within recent years to improve tourist camps, but there is yet much more to do. For example, in one State in 1926 ,there were 233 camps inspected and only 104 of these could be approved.

The problem is not a simple one but involves three important factors; First, an intelligent understanding of the situation by the people; second, the co-operation of State and local authorities, and the support of official and voluntary organizations; and, third, and most important, the fixing of the responsibility for the maintenance of sanitary conditios.

In many States the resposibility for the sanitation of tourist camps has been delegated to State health officers by law, and in others, those agencies have undertaken it without express authority. In a few States where the State agency is doing the work, part or all of the authority has been transferred to district or local agencies or groups. Unfortunately, there are a few sections in which the responsibility for the work has not been positively assumed by any particular department or group. However, these sections are in the minority, because within the last few years much careful thought and dilligent effort has been given by health authorities as a whole to making living conditions for campers as nearly suitable for them as possible.

Such State agencies as have started tourist camp sanitation work have usully set up regultions governing the proper construction and maintenance of this kind of camp. The three principal items in any set of regulations might be given as follows: (1) Proper camp location; J2) Safe and adequate water supply; and (3) Safe and efficient waste disposal.

What is the effect of loction on a tourist camp-ground? This question might be sub-divided as follows: (1) Is the site of ample size? (2) Is it provided with a reasonable amount of shade and natural shelter? (3) Will the soil readily absorb and remove water? (4) Is the site accessible to the tourist? (5) Are utilities available from the city, and, if not, are conditions such as to permit the installation of the necessary facilities? (6) Is the site susceptible of surdivision into units? If these questions can all be answered in the affirmative in the selection of a particular site, that site should be an acceptable one.

Ways and Means

Edinburgh Weekly Scotsman (Cons.): If the Government manages to manoeuvre its way with safety among the rocks of controversial measures it can hardly escape the quicksands of finance, which, form all appearances, it is disposed to ignore. Schemes for the reduction of unemployment and the encouragement of industry will have general support if founded on a sound financial basis, but it augurs rather badly for the success of such schemes that the Prime Minister has already committed himself to the declaration that safeguarding must be regarded as a dead letter. What other method can be devised for the encouragement of the depressed industries, to which less objection can be taken, remains to be seen. The revenue of the country depends on flourishing industry, and although the Government proposes to inquire into the means of restoring the mining, iron and steel, and cotton industries, this prejudice against a tried and effective method is not hopeful.

Montreal's Prosperity

Le Canada (Lib.): Two factors are present to establish without contradiction that Montreal is brimfull with prosperity. We have, on one side, a substantial increase in the population and, on the other hand, an appreciabl reduction in the number of unemployed. This instantly leads us to the supposition that there is an improvement not only in construction, but also in all the branches of human activity. . . . . It appear that our industries are growing steadily, much faster, in fact, than we imagine.

FIXED ELECTION DATES

W. E. N. Sinclair, the leader of the Ontario Liberal Party, has declared himself in favor of fixed election dates, between June and October, every four years, for election to Provincial Parliament. Of course in case a government in power is defeated on a vote of confidence, the Lieut-Governor would be expected to order a new election if the party in opposition was not able to carry one without a shadow of doubt. The idea of fixed dates for both Provincial and Federal elections is sound, and should become law. There is something unsportsmanlike and unfair for a party in power to take advantage of circumstances, for which they are not wholly responsible, to win out in an election. It is also uufair for the party in power to take advantage of their position to withold from the opposition and the general public the date of an election. Premier Ferguson recently boasted that he would hold the Provincial Election when he considered it in the best interest of the Conservative party. The statement is that of a purely party politician and not of a statesman or patriot. A man may be loyal and love his political party but his first duty is to his country. Of course it may be offered in excuse, as Premier Ferguson has publicly stated, that the opposition has not a man big enough to take his place. But that is open to question, and when a public man begins to feel himself the whole show, he may get a shock that will open the cells of the common-sense portion of his egotistic brain.

STREET DANCES

There is something so rediculously silly about the modern street dance that one wonders how respectable people can lend their countenance and support to them. They carry one back to the early days when the native Indians in the forests went through just such silly performances. Up in Walkerton the town band proposed holding a dance on the public street and a citizen objected, threatened a suit for damages, and so the council had to refuse a permit. We suppose it is because it is something new and different, that it has taken such a hold in some places. Nevertheless it is a poor sort of entertainment and a vulgar one. If people want to dance let them go to a dance hall.

OUR PROSPERITY

The statement is made semi-officially that per capita the Canadian people are the most prosperous in the world. It may be so, probably is, and so far as the most of us know we are as progressive, as enterprising, as wide-awake, elert and capable as any people on the face of the earth. There is some satisfaction in knowing that, comparatively, we are well off. But does that alter the fact that we also realize that we could be a great deal better off. That while we lead in the matter of individual prosperity, do we lead in the way of fullfilling the ambition and object of every sincere individual, that of being of some assistance, some help, some comfort to those who are less fortunate. We hear much of increasing our population. India and Russia each are populous, so populous indeed that there is overcrowding, and yet those peoples are not prosperous, contented, happy, and progressive. China has a population that makes the Dominion of Canada look like a cipher in comparison, yet China is not prosperous, neither are her people happy. Canada in her prosperity has not yet lost sight of the fact, "Rightousness exalteth a Nation" and the observance of the sanctity of the Sabbath day means much to the prosperity of any people. Our prosperity should make us not only a happy people, but a humble and thankful people.

AN APPALLING RECORD

(Toronto Globe)

The first comprehensive analysis of the liquor traffic throughout Canada has been issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics at Ottawa. This record is official. Its figures are authentic. Its story is appalling. In all Provinces of Canada, with the exception of Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia, Government control is in effect, and the dragon's teeth sown when these measures were enacted by the various Legislatures are bearing a ghastly harvest today.

By far the worst feature of the report is the irrefutable figures set forth showing the close relationship that exists between increased consumption of alcohol and an increase in crime. Since time began liquor and crime have been associated. "Alcohol," says Sir Wilfred Grenfell, "has wrecked more lives, starved more children and murdered more women than any other single factor." The leopard has not changed his spots in Canada today. Strong drink is still filling the penitentiaries with criminals, ruining homes, breaking hearts, and creating the greatest menace to human life to be met with on the highways of the Dominion. What in this regard do these figures show? They indicate, for one thing, that convictions for indictable offenses have steadily facilities for obtaining liquor. The number of convictions for "illicit stills," first separated from other Inland Revenue Act offenses in 1921, reached a peak of 1 068 in 1923, and declined to 291 in 1928. Convictions for "driving an auto while intoxicated,' grew from 142 in 1921 to 1,322 in 1928, while the number of motor cars registered in Canada was slightly more than doubled. The proportion of immoderate drinkers among those whose use of liquor is recorded fell from 19.6 per cent. in 1914 to 9.9 per cent. in 1923, and had risen by 1928 to 14 4 per cent.

Convictions for drunkennes have increased from 21,026 in 1918 to 33,095 in 1928, although still far short of the prewar figures of more than 60,000 in 1913. Infractions of the liquor laws increased from 7,383 in 1919 to 15 150 in 1928.

The report records a steady increase in the number of deaths listed as caused by alcoholism, and also in the proportion they bear to the total. Deaths from alcoholism (excluding Quebec) have more than doubled in the seven years tabulated. The total deaths from cirrhosts of the liver show a similar increase. A slight decrease in the other Provinces in 1926 and 1927 is more than offset by the large number of deaths from this cause in Quebec.

No less illuminating are the figures shown in the report of the colossal sums spent each year on liquor. The total sales throughout the Dominion for the past year amounted to $107 694,384. The total Government revenue from this expenditure was $72,560,501, and the sum that came to swell the coffers of the various Provinces amounted to $22,755,210 In the Province of Ontario alone in 1928 the gross value of liquor sold is placed at $48,995,591. The revenue derived by the Ferguson Government from its policy of "liquor Control" was $8,130,390.

The economic loss that these figures spell to the courtry cannot be computed. To spend almost forty-nine millions of dollars in order to raise a revenue of little over eight millions may seem good business to Mr. Ferguson and the Liquor Control Board of this Province, but it will hardly appeal to the ordinary man or woman prepared to look facts in the face and base his conclusions accordingly. The figures themselves tell a sorry story, but they take no cognizance of the wages lost, the work spoiled, the health ruined, and the time wasted through the curse of strong drink. These things are beyond human calculation, but they are vital factors to the national well-being that must be taken into account in a consideration of the liquor question.

The same story is told in every Province of the operation of Government sale of liquor. It has resulted in increased drinking, in increased crime, in an increase of danger to human life through the operation of automobiles by drunken drivers. It has not fulfilled one of the many promises that were held out for it. The drunkard still reels in the street, the bootlegger piles his nefarious trade, the illcit still is with us yet. Of the last named, 291 were found in operation last year. The number as yet undiscovered and still pouring forth their product cannot be calculated.

The publicationof this report will provide the very finest kind of ammunition for those interested in promotion of temperance and sobriety in Canada. The material in it was assembled by Professor L. W. Moffit of Manitoba and Professor J. T. Culliton of McGill University. It will supply a need that has long been felt for concrete information on the operation of a traffic that has for millenniums been one of the greatest clogs on the wheels of progress, and one of the worst enemies mankind has had to fight.

International Sunday School Lesson for August 18
THE RETURN FROM CAPTIVITY
Ezra 1:1-6; Psalm 126:1-6
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Fulfillment of prophecy is finely exampled in this lesson study. Years before, Isaiah had declared that there would be deliverance for the Jews in bondage by one named Cyrus. Jeremiah in writing a letter of encouragement from Jerusalem to the brethren in captivity stated that after seventy years there would be a release. In that fulness of time the event took place which perfectly met both prophecies. It was just seventy years from the first deportation, in the fifth year of king Jehoiakim, to the first year of Cyrus. Also the same period between the destruction of Jerusalem and the completion of the second temple.

Keep in mind that Daniel was an old man when he interpreted that handwriting on the wall on the same night in which the Chaldeans were captured by Darius, as the waters of the Euphrates were turned aside and the enemy entered under the city walls. Within three years Cyrus became king in Babylon. If Daniel was still living he would surely be a man that Cyrus would wish to meet, for he had great fame as a man of wisdom and one who could interpret dreams. He had been a prime minister and anything he said would command respect from a thoughtful monarch.

When it was read from the Scripture rolls that Isaiah had said in prophecy that one named Cyrus would be the man to restore Jerusalem special attention was given thereto. Further, it was strategy to have a favorable people in Palestine, for that little country was on the highway to Egypt. The decree was promulgated giving permission to any captives to return to the land whence they had been taken. Many were so well settled in Babylonia that the opportunity did not appeal to them. The younger who may not have been fully satisfied where they were, the adventurous and those who were strict religionists and were ever thinking back to the Temple days were among those who said "We will go and rebuild Jerusalem and its Temple."

The brethren were urged to make gifts with which to further the work in the home land if they did not care to make the return personally. Cyrus did the noble thing, in contrast to Belshazzar who hurled insult by his use of the vessels taken from the Temple in plunder. These were given to the returning colonists. The total was 5,400. The route chosen by the 50,000 was probably by the more northern way of Aleppo and Damascus rather than the direct way across the desert. Safety was a greater consideration than speed on this journey.

Best Dressed Blonde in Paris Outlines Formula She Follows

Paris—Gentlemen dressmakers prefer design dresses for blondes. And among all the blondes, they prefer Lady Abdy, for she can lay claim to the title of the "best dressed blonde in Paris."

Lady Abdy is possessed of an English title by marriage and divorce, although born Russian and trained a Parisian. She is everywhere that the smartest of elite Paris society gathers and her presence is enough to stamp any gathering a success.

It is said of Lady Abdy that she never wears a hat twice. It takes a considerable fortune to be able to live up to such a reputation, for the hats that Lady Abdy chooses are not simple pieces of colored felt. She likes the bonnet type, moulding the head, for she has a perfect profile, knows it and is proud of it.

Her taste in dress stamps her an individualist. It would be hard to copy her clothes or hats and dress like her. So few women have ever been able to attain that perfect blonde color of hair, and even then who has the poise and charm that this beautiful Russian-English-French woman possesses?

Lady Abdy gave the United Press her formula for good dressing.

1—Be yourself, don't imitate.

2—Dress to your type. If you are a blonde don't wear brunette costumes because fashion demands it.

3—Black is perfect for afternoon or evening, alternating with subdued colors.

4—Dress to harmonize with the circle in which you are to be.

5—Don't cover yourself with doodads. If you are small wear small bracelets, if you are larger you can choose larger ornaments.

6—Don't be eccentric. Nothing is as distasteful as freak fashions, you are judged by the clothes you wear.

"If you are a blonde, you are blessed by nature with a decided advantage," Lady Abdy said.

"But if you belong to the millions of auburn or brunnettes, you must dress to fit your eyes, your hair, your complexion. Study well dressed women, study old paintings and find a personality that you fit. Then dress to support it. You would not wear bright red to a funeral, and it would be just as unwise to attend the opera in a sports suit.

"Yet many women do not realize that it is just as foolish to clash with their surroundings. Study where you are going, and then decide what to wear."

Lady Abdy wears much black, not because she is in mourning, but because she knows that black sets off blondes to their best advantage. At home she wears gorgeous colors, but on the street in the afternoons, she wears subdued tones of brown, blue, green or gray, also a rich blue-black.

She was a pioneer of the movement to bring dress lengths back to normal not for any structural fault of her own. She contends that short dresses are comfortable, but cut the line and fall of their esthetic purpose.

Blondes are so popular and so successful that Paris is fast becoming a Nordic capital. Once Frenchwomen were proud of the black tresses of the Latin, but hairdressers are booked solid for weeks to make blonde hair grow where black ones shore before.

Boys in Uganda

The schoolboys themselves trailed into the school grounds, where there was soon a hum and stir all over the place. Here from the carpenter's bench came the buzz of saws, the swish of shavings, and the tap of the mallet. Looking in at the windows of the shop one could see the boys making tables and desks, spade handles, chairs, and many other things that their forefathers never dreamed of. The very school itself was built by the boys, the bricks made and laid, the windows shaped and framed, and doors constructed. Most of these boys are the sons of local chiefs.

One boy was making a revolving bookcase for the king who, at the capital, can be seen driving down in his Rolls-Royce to the side of the opposite hill to the bookshop, which is run by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. There he can buy books that will help him and his prime minister and chiefs to rule their country, wisely. Other boys were weaving wickerwork chairs from tough twigs brought from trees near the lakeside.

In some schools, at six o'clock in the morning the boys, like thousands of other young men and women of Uganda, are up and out and off with hoes (iron hoes with crooked wooden handles) over their shoulders, their brown bodies gleaming in the early sun. They trudge barefoot along the footpaths into the fields. The fields are full of young cotton plants, and the boys are fighting the weeds that, under the hot sun in the warm damp earth, thrive like black magic. For two hours before school they work there in the cotton fields, where the plants grow so swiftly that, within three months of sowing, the white balls of cotton—and some of the best cotton in the wrld it is—are shining in the sun, and the boys are out picking and stuffing it into sacks. The cotton is then crammed into two-hundred-pound bales, which are carried on the heads of men down to waiting motor-lorries. The lorries come down one after the other in harvest-time, loaded with tons of cotton.

The lorries when loaded are driven along the road to a ginning factory. There the cotton is carried in the bales are undone, and in the ginning machines the cotton fabric itself is worked away from the seeds. The factory has a white man at its head, but the machines are tended by the men and older boys of the country. . .

Some of the boys enjoy reading and there are now a number of books, though still too few, printed in the language of Uganda. The youth even has his paper to read. It is called the Grey Heron. It is a quaint name for this paper, which is edited and printed entirely at Nairobi in Kenya Colony by Baganda men. The grey heron is a bird that stands in the fields of Uganda all day without showing any movement, but taking in everything that is going on. Then in the evening it flies away up into a tree, where it meets ten or twenty others, and they all chatter, making a terrible din. The Baganda say that the heron family are all discussing in the tree the things the grey heron has seen during the day; so that is the reason why the paper has that name. Through it the boy learns about the news of the great outside world: an industrial strike; a football match between American and British teams; an upheaval of anti-foreign feeling in China; attempts to fly to the North Pole (though he finds it difficult to understand what ice and snow are), and so on.—Basil Mathews, in "Black Treasure."

Community Living

Pleven, Bulgaria—The village of Petarnitsa, whose name signifies that it is built on the rocks, presents many striking examples of the working of the communal spirit that has long characterized the Slavs and especially the Bulgarians.

In this little town, which is strung along the steep banks of a narrow creek, there are 500 houses and an equal number of barns, almost all of which are new. They are solid structures of modern design made out of sun-dried or kiln-dried bricks, plastered over both inside and out. The dwellings have two stories and a basement, are roofed with excellent rectangular tiles and often have flowers in the windows and in the yard; while the barns, fashioned after models supplied by the Ministry of Agriculture, have brick floors, large haymows and cement reservoirs for manure. All of these structures have been built since the World War, in spite of hard times and political turmoil.

This has been possible because the people help each other. When the young people marry, the neighbors give them bounteous and useful gifts. Nowadays the young couples want to set up housekeeping for themselves. This is a new departure in Bulgarian customs. Formerly the households consisted of the parents, the sons their wives and their children. The absolute master of the household was the grandfather and everything was held in common.

All property belonged to the group. All worked for the community, as the grandfather directed, and all gains went into the common treasury, also held by the grandfather. Fathers, 45 or 50 years old, had to ask this chief for money to buy shoes for the children or slates or lead pencils, or anything else. Naturally, such a state of affairs seemed undesirable to the latest "younger generation" and they have insisted on having their own homes and enterprises. This has required much division of land and animals and machinery, and would have been very difficult if the whole community had not co-operated to help the young folks.

At a wedding in Petarnitsa wheat and corn and other products are given by the wago nload. No special invitations are sent out as everyone in the village knows that he or she will be a welcome guest. They come with full sacks and often supply the newly wedded with enough food to last them for more than a year. And as a general rule the poorer the bride and groom are, the greater is the liberality of the neighbors. It has become a proverb that Petarnitsa is a good place to be married in.

This village, as most others, possesses a large common grazing ground, public woods, a co-operative dairy and creamery, a credit co-operative, a co-operative bank, an gricultural bank, communal property for the support of the school, communal property for the support of the village library, a practical agricultural school, a communal stable for stock improvement and a communal nursery for supplying mulberry shoots, necessary for the feeding of silkworms which every family raises. Perhaps it is because they all help each other in this way that the peasants of "The Village on the Rocks" are so happy and so proud of their home town.

Labor in Queensland

Cape Argus (Capetown): Queensland of late years has been dominated by an oligarchy of workers, mostly unskilled, while the luckless primary producer fills the role of the coolie. Widespread discontent prevails and confidence is so gravely impaired that capital is rarely obtainable for new projects. Such a state of affairs is truly remarkable, for Queensland ought to be immensely prosperous. It is the largest of the States of the Commonwealth except Western Australia. Leaving out Russia, it is greater than any country in Europe. So rich is its soil and so varied are its serources, that it could be made capable of supporting in reasonable plenty a population of many millions. Actually the population of this country is less than that of Melbourne, the second largest city of Australia. The gem of the island continent has been brought to this sad pass by the rashness of its Labor rulers, who snapped their fingers at the economists when they worned them of what was bound to happen.

"When the maid has had an argument with the cook she takes steps to settle it while there's a cake in the oven."

From a Younger Country: New Zealand

This stubborn beach, whereon are tossed
White roses from the sea's green bough,
Has never sheathed a Roman prow
Nor flinched beneath a Norman host.

Yet in my bones I feel the stir
Of ancient wrongs and vanished woes,
And through my troubled spirit goes
The shadow of an old despair.

—A. R. D. Fairburn, in Poetry.

India

"Health progress is such an involved question in India. Hygiene is so dependent on education, engineering, economics, and the question of finance, that it is extremely difficult to define its boundaries," said Sir T. Carey Evans, F.R.C.S., at a meeting of the East India Association, reported in the "Asiatic Review."

"Statistics are extremely unreliable, and can only be approximate in a country where the registration of births and deaths is not carried out methodically. Still, these show a definite improvement. The infantile mortality and the general death-rate are still far too high when compared with European standards. Compared with ten years ago in such cities as Bombay, Calcutta, and Madras, from an average of between 600 and 700 per thousand it has been brought down to 500 per thousand.

"Though disease is being controlled, there are still the social customs and religious habits to contend with. The question of child marriage is a social problem which only Indians themselves can tackle. Great progress has been made both in India and this country with regard to food values and vitamins. The school examination of children which is carried out in certain areas of the Bombay Presidency showed that a high percentage of the children attending school were suffering from food deficiency diseases, 66 per cent., not from lack of food, but the wrong food.

"Again, 70 per cent. of the students at the University of Calcutta showed signs of some physical defect or other. Again, here, the evil effects of certain social customs is noted, and the only means of abolishing them is by health propaganda and also by encouraging the development of civic responsibility."

American Nationality

New Statesman (London): From the standpoint of Europe, the greatest of republics is a stupendous uniform mass. Its people are believed to have been welded into a mighty sameness; to have become a single standardized community, feeling, saying and doing the same things under the pressure of a common continental system. To the American himself, especially if he belongs to the older Anglo-Saxon stock, this European notion of the United States is an absurdity. So far from the American people being unified, they are to him a congeries of alien and dangerous communities. They continue to speak the languages of Europe. They are not within sight of the goal of assimilation.

Material Mortality

London Daily Telegraph (Cons.): For every thousand babies four mothers die. The losses of twenty years mean that "we are without the services of some 150,000 mothers, who, at a normal expectation of life, would be alive to-day if they had not been allowed to die with their first baby." But the dangers and injuries of maternity are not summed up in the death-roll. To these 150,000 deaths must be added many cases of infirmity and invalidism. Who will compute the suffering and the distress which such statistics imply?

The Radium Monopoly

London Daily News and Westminster (Lib.): (A director of the Belgian Company, which has a virtual monopoly of radium production, declares that the present price of radium—from £10,000 to £14,000 a gramme—is too low, and before long may go higher still.) The price is monstrously high. The skilled use of radium is the best reply science has so far made to the most terrible scourge of modern civilzaton. Yet hundreds of thousands of sufferers from cancer are being robbed of hope because radium remains the most costly substance in the world. It is morally indefensible that control of the production and price of a thing so vital to mankind should be vested in any private corporation. Here, if ever, there was one, is a case for international co-operation through the machinery of the League of Geneva, or some other properly constituted body acting on behalf of all national Governments.

The Australian Treaty

Toronto Telegram (Ind. Cons.): Of the imports from the Antipodes, it will be said that we should shut our eyes and take what the Australian treaty sends us. But no true definition of Inter-Dominion trade requires a Dominion to import from other parts of the Empire, what it can economically produce itself. If it did, there might be sound financial foundation for the scheme whereby the members of a community could exist by taking in each other's washing. It may be, of course, that Canada is too busy handling raw materials for Uncle Sam's factories to pay attention to dairying. But it would seem that there should be a place in an agricultural country for the odd cow or two to supply our own needs.

Inter-Imperial Trade

London Free Press (Cons.): Perhaps never in the history of the Empire was there such a general feeling in favour of development of inter-imperial trade as to-day. The sentiment is very apparent in this country; both parties are tumbing over themselves in favour of the such a policy. The press is almost unanimous on the subject. But the movement is not confined to Canada. In Australia, New Zealand and Great Britain there is the same feeling in favour of fostering, as much as is economically reasonable, trade with the Empire. The United States by its ultra-high tariff policy has biven an impetus to the movement.

Slow to Learn

Glasgow Herald (Cons.): The post-war economic and political education of the French people proceeded more slowly than that of any other nation. It is only now that they are beginning to realize that there are limits to what Germany can pay, that the evacuation of the Rhineland cannot be long postponed, and that their war debts to Britain and the United States must be paid according to the schedules contained in the Churchill-Caillaux and the Mellon-Berenger agreements. This last lesson especially, is an exceedingly hard one for them to learn.

Weird Denizens Of Deep Sought For Philadelphia

Caribbean to Be Ransacked for Rare Species by Aquarium Expedition

Philadelphia.—Dr. Robert O. Van Dusen, assistant superintendent of the Fairmont Park Aquarium, has gone fishing—not for common fish, but for "grotesque, weird, unusual, beautiful and rare species" of the deep for the park collection. Dr. Van Dusen and his party are now somewhere in the Caribbean and when they return they will no doubt have tangible evidence to back up their fish stories.

The search will be chiefly for the spiny porcupine fish and the cobbler fish, the latter characterized by long threads which trail from their dorsal fins. There is also a watch to be kept for the blue, black and white angel fish; the clumsy cow and the trunk fish, the box fish and the butterfly fish whose bodies are splashed with colors in exquisitely beautiful patterns. "But what we are after most of all," said Dr. Van Dusen, "is the squirrel fish which are very rare and which we have never been able to take before, a specimen that is as elusive as its furry land counterpart."

The party will travel more than 1000 miles in small boats in and o[n] of the coral islands within a radius of 100 miles of Key West, bringing the catch back there to the base every few days. As the specimens are brought into Key West they will be retained in large wooden tanks, which will be their homes until they reach the Philadelphia Aquarium. These tanks will be filled with water from the Caribbean Sea, and in order that th efish may continue in their home waters after arriving at their destination, 25,000 gallons of water from the Gulf of Mexico will be brought back in the ballast tanks of the ship. This water is used over and over again, constantly pouring in and out of the glass tanks of the aquarium and being filtered and aerated.

Kindness to Animals

BY HELEN DRUMMOND

Everyone should be kind to animals It pays to be kind, but it does not pay to be cruel to animals. The Hummane Society is doing wonderful work all over by stopping, in several different ways, cruelty. It is very easy to be kind to animals. In the cold winter-time, when one goes to the stable to harness a horse, the bit is too cold and frosty to put in the horse's mouth. Just hold the bit in your hand for a short time till it becomes warmer so that it will fit to put in the horse's mouth. Checks are also cruel to use on a horse. Checks take the pretty, natural curve out of the horse's neck and make it straight. It also hurts the horse's neck. Blinders are not so cruel, but they do not give the horse a chance to see all around it. The horse may easily be frightened by any object or noise behind it and may cause it to run away and do serious damage.

Dogs are very sensitive animals. One should not kick or stone a dog. It is better to be kind and gentle to them than to be rough, and they will be, in return, kind and gentle to you. Many other animals should be treated with kindness. When an animal is balky or stubborn, it is better to be kind to it than to be cruel to it, and it will not be so determined.

If everyone would be kind to animals they would profit in may different ways by it.

The Broken Music

"There is no music in a rest," says someone, "but there is the making of music in it." How does the musician read the "rest"? He beats the time with unvarying count ,and takes up the next note true and steady, as if no breaking-place had come in between.

In our whole life-melody the music is broken off here and there by "rests," and we foolishly think we have come to the end of the time. God sends a time of forced leisure, sickness, disappointed plans, frustrated efforts, and makes a sudden pause in the shoral hymn of our lives, and we lament that our voices must be silent and our part missing in the music which ever goes up to the ear of the Creator.

Not without design does God write the music of our lives. Be it ours to learn the time ,and not be dismayed at the "rests."

Doing Good

How often do we sigh for opportunities of doing good, whilst we neglect the openings of Providence in little things, which would frequently lead to the accomplishment of most imprtant usefulness? Dr. Johnson used to say, "He who waits to do a great deal of good at once will never do any." Good is done by degrees. However small in proportion the benefit which follows individual attempts to do good, a great deal may thus be accomplished by perseverance, even in the midst of discouragements and disappointments.—Crabb.

An Only Possession

A faithful friend is better than gold —a medicine for misery, an only possession.—Burton.

Discoveries Made in Syria

Fine Treasures are Unearthed in Tombs Dating Back to the Second Century B.C.

Beirut, Syria.—Archaeological discoveries of striking interest made in the Alaouite region were shown recently at an exhibition in the Hall of the Council of the Lattaque Municipality. Objects unearthed this season at Minet-el-Beida and at Ras Shamra by a French archaeological expedition directed by F. Schaeffer, of the museum at Strasbourg, assisted by G. Chenet du Claon, representative of the Ministry of Public Education, included several large tombs of the second century B.C.

On the hill near Ras Shamra the expedition uncovered huge underground structures, in which were contained the granite torso of an Egyptian form and ornamented tablets with inscriptions.

But the most interesting discoveries were tablets of burnt clay bearing cuneiform characters, archives of library volumes written in Babylonian and other dialects of that period, still undeciphered. M. Virolleaud, director of the department of antiquities and fine arts, has begun the deciphering and study of some of these pieces.

Besides these tablets, the expedition unearth a wealth of weapons and bronze objects, perhaps the finest collection thus far found, some of them with cuneiform inscriptions.

A fine large Egyptian vase of alabaster, taken from other Egyptian treasures, including statuettes, a golden pectoral, and a precious necklace, were displayed by the director of this expedition, who is returning to France..

Dublin Weekly Times. It is manifest that the Socialist Party's full program must be postponed until another Socialist Government has an independent majority in the House of Commons. Mr. MacDonald's present task, therefore, is to produce a policy which, by giving his party "something to go on with," will keep it in good humour, and will convince it that the essential "cause" is safe in his hands That something, however, must be designed with a careful eye to the Liberal vote.

Heart to Heart Talk

By Dr. John Joseph Daines

A REVERIE

Years ago a beloved poet wrote, "There's nothing true—but heaven." This, after saying how deceitful were the smiles of joy and the tears of woe. To my then youthful soul, the poet's words rang in the sweetest of chimes. Something at last would prove true!

Last week I read in a well-known publication the cold statement of a professional writer and profound theorist that this thing we call heaven is nothing more than a film of the fancy; that there is not an iota of ground for any such belief; that the idea is too silly, even for respectable fiction.

He would have it that way. He would wipe away at one sweep, the prop that has sustained many a pure life to the very margin of the grave under the weeping willows.

This modern wise man did not waste any time on the smiles of deceit, or the baby-tears of imaginary woe, although there is much that he might have said to the edification of the human race; but he aimed his poisonous shafts at the most precious of promises. He seemed to float in his ability to tear down something pure, beautiful, good, reassuring.

The heaven of which I have been hearing from my childhood up, has been one of the strongest of incentives working within me, to make of me a better man. I cannot think of a single atom of harm that my belief in a heaven has done me or any one else about me. I am persuaded that such a belief can never harm me. Just why any individual should buckle on his sword and rush to my rescue from such a belief, is too deep for me to fathom. Perhaps he has nothing else to do. And wants to be busy at something notoriously vivid.

So far as I am concerned, he has wasted his time and energy, though he may realize the few cents the editor paid him for filling the page sensational. I am for anything that goes to make men better, not worse. Aren't you?

YOUR HAIR IN SUMMER

Ever since the vogue of permanent waving became a nation-wide institution women everywhere have paid less attention to the care of their hair in summer than ever before. Once it was a difficult matter to keep straight hair softly curled and neatly arranged through the warm, moist weather. Women worked hard over their hair—they "fussed" with it—spent much time and energy in keeping it smooth, shining and well-groomed.

Now, fortified with a permanent wave they face the summer season boldly. No extra attention is given to the hair. A shampoo occasionally, a moment for pushing the wave into place with the fingers, and the hair is forgotten for a week, except for the hasty care it gets during the daily combing.

All this saves time during vacation days but it is exceedingly bad for the hair. Even permanently waved hair needs careful regular attention to keep it healthy and well-groomed looking. The operator who waved your hair may have told you not to brush it—that if you brushed it often the wave would come out. But I warn you to brush, and to brush frequently. The wave may be loosened slightly or it may not last quite so long, but your hair will be softer and more shining. The added gloss and life it has will more than make up for a little less in wave. And a wide, loose wave, remember, is much more fasionable than a tight one this season. If you are swimming daily in salt water you should take unusually good care of your hair. Since no swimming cap yet devised will keep the hair from getting wet when you dive or swim under water, you must remember to rinse your hair under a clear water shower after each swim. Salt left in the hair makes it sticky, dull and lifeless.

Exposing your head, hatless, to the warm, summer winds is excellent for the hair. To be fragrant and healthy it must be frequently sunned and aired. Continued exposure to the hot, midday sun, however, will burn and dry it dangerously. Wear a light straw hat if you are to be in the hot sun for any length of time—and if your hair already looks sunburned, use a hot oil massage before each shampoo.

Many Outstanding and New Features at C. C. Exhibition

For the Ottawa exhibition, which will open on Monday, August 19 for an entire week, the claim is made that there are more new and outstanding features than there have been in any previous year. In addition, grounds and buildings have undergone extensive improvements, and with the large number of entries received for the various departments, every indication points to a success that will eclipse all previous efforts.

Creatore and his band will be heard in two concerts daily from the bandstand, no extra charge being made for this stellar attraction. Headed by five or six Indian chiefs with their picturesque headdress of eagle feathers, about forty-five Indians will be seen in a typical indian village, with birch bark tepees and the primitive modes of living. Papooses will be seen on the backs of their mothers or in swinging cradles. The braves will execute war dances and, with the squaws, will make all kinds of Indian handicrafts. This village has been arranged through the co-operation of the Department of Indian Affairs to give the younger people in particular an opportunity to see the Indians of whom they have read.

The big music and dance revue will be the outstanding offering in front of the grandstand. This will be presented by a large cast of New York artists, mostly girls, with special costumes, stage, light effect and amplifying system. High class vaudeville and horse races will be included in the grandstand program, while for the closing day of the week the program will be augmented by sports. Phil Edwards, the fast Olympic star, will be among the entrants.

Capt. L E. Maynard, instructor for the Ottawa Flying Club, will be seen dailo in areobatics. Capt. Maynard is in a class by himself as a daring stunt performer, and his maneuvers make spectators fairly gasp.

An entirely new arrangement for the midway is expected to be a marked improvement. Here will be found the latest in riding devices and high-class shows. Notable in the midway offerings will be Silver King, the motion picture dog.

There is an exceptionally large sale of coupon tickets, which give five admissions for one dollar, effecting a saving of seventy-five cents. These are now available at the exhibition office, in many stores, and in the uarious branches of the Bank of Nova Scotia, but will not be sold after the opening of the exhibition.

Death at W. Springs

Mr. James Jeffrey, an old resident of Winchester Springs, and who last winter was, while living alone, found in a helpless state died on Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Merkley, where he had resided sinee his accident.

Morrisburg News

Mr. James Simpson, District Representative of the Department of Agriculture at Morrisburg, has returned to town following his marriage to Miss Florence Fairchild, of Simcoe, who will join him in a few days.

After her marriage to Mr. Leslie Morris, of Moose Jaw, Sask., Miss Pauline Harkness, of Morrisburg, left with her husband on a hiking tour to Mexico, last week.

Mrs. J. E. Christensen entertained thirty-two guests at bridge and afternoon tea at her home Saturday.

Mr. Malcolm McKenzie Weegar, of New York City, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton J. Weegar this week.

Mr. Ralph G. Fetterly returned Saturday after a lengthy trip through Quebec Province and Gaspe having visited Quebec City and Metis Beach.

Miss Evelyn Marsh, R. N., of Ottawa, is vacationing at her home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Marsh.

Mrs. G. W. Cook of Westmount, formerly of town, is visiting friends in town.

Provincial Highway Traffic Officer Edgar Seabrook reports no casualties or serious accidents over the week-end but a large number of reckless driving charges. The traffic through his beat was very heavy.

Mr. Roy Burkholder, although able to be about, is suffering from several broken ribs as a result of a car he was driving having been crowded into a gas pump last week.

Mr. Harry Tudor of Ottawa, is occupying Fentimen Cottage for the remainder of the summer months.

The palatial yacht, "Vagabondia," owned by the fourth richest man in the world, Secretary Mellon, passed through the Morrisburg locks Tuesday, westbound

Miss McLennan, of Ottawa, is a guest of the Misses Evelyn and Muriel Marsh, at their home.

A number of Morrisburg citizens attended the races held at Waddington, N. Y., on Tuesday.

Provincial Highway, No. 31, from Morrisburg to the Carleton Conty line, is becoming more and more popular as the road from the St. Lawrence to Ottawa, as indicated by the large and increasing amount of motor traffic on it this summer. The road bed is improved and will, in all probability, be rebuilt next year.

Grandmother's Day at Metcalfe, Ont.

The Metcalfe branch of the Women's Institute entertained the grandmothers of the community on Friday, August 9, on the spacious lawn of Mrs. Geo. G. Morris' home near Metcalfe.

The guests were received by the president, Mrs. Morris, assisted by the vice-president, Mrs. Frank Stanley and Mrs. (Dr.) Byers.

About seventy guests were present including nineteen grandmothers, three of whom were over seventy years of age, and one, Mrs. Leonard Stanley, over eighty years, who capturned the prize, a china tea-pot for the oldest grandmother. Mrs. David James, thirty-eight years of age, had the honor of being the youngest grandmother and received a dainty compact. Mrs. Thos. James, who had the largest number of grandchildren (thirty-three), was presented with a pretty box of handkerchiefs.

A varied program of appropriate songs and readings was given. Among the artists who contributed to this were Mrs. Jas. Dowser, Mrs. F. York, Mrs. E. H. Rolston, Miss. Evelyn Dair, and Mrs. Albert Stanley, with Miss Ida McLaurin as pianist. After the program dainty refreshments were served. The tables were centered with early autumn blooms kindly donated by Howard Morris. Mrs. James Dowser and Mrs. D. C. Dow both grandmothers belonging to the Institute poured tea. While Mrs. Walter Palmer and Mrs. Roy McAndrew cut the ices. The following ladies assisted in serving: Miss Ada Hughes, Miss Ethel Palmer, Miss Fanny Stanley, Mrs. Leslie Dowser and Mrs. Wm. Fisher.

United Church W. M. S.

The August meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the Sunday School rooms, Mrs. T. O. Keyes presiding, and Mrs. W. J. Cass convener of program committee. The Chesterville Auxiliary responded in goodly numbers to the invitation, extended some weeks previous, to be present on this occasion.

Encouraging reports from the various departments were given. Mrs. F. Davidson reported the missionary supply box valued at $56.00 ready for shipment and Mrs. Preston a bequest of $100.00 from the estate of the late Mrs. Catherine Blackburn.

Mrs. Earneest Steele sang very sweetly a solo entitled "Something for Others."

"Tired of Missions," a play with scenes changing from China to Korea then to India, revealed the need of an awakened interest and renewed endeavor on the part of tired and indifferent Societies in the home land, by showing the inadequate accommodations and equipment of our hospitals and the need of a greater number of nurses and teachers. Members of ehe Band, Circle and W. M. S. presented this excellent play in a realistic and impressive manner.

Mrs. Robert Latimer of Strathroy delighted the audience with her interpretation of "Kamewnoi-Ostrono" by Rubinstein.

Mrs. Cross and Miss Merkley of Chesterville, spoke of the pleasure of their auxiliary in meeting old friends and of their appreciation of the afternoon's program and expressed thanks for the refreshments served by Mrs. J. H. Ross, convener of the refreshment committee and her associates. Visitors, entertainers, officers and members present numbered one hundred and twenty.

Hints for the Home
by Nancy Hart

It is no longer sufficient merely to place on the dressing table a "set" of toilet ware. To be smart, one must have mirror, brush, comb and cream jars that complement the decorative scheme.

Created by foremost modern artists, period and modern designs in most exquisite colors have made their appearance. For the room of 18th Century influence there is a charming Watteau design, done in burgundy and cream in the toile du Juoy manner. Another and more formal pattern follows the classic lines of Napoleon's day; a third adapts the lines of modern art to the Wedgwood motif which has been a favorite for centuries.

When planning improvements in home-furnishings for fall it is well to remember this fashion trend which so definitely stamps the toilet table as to date.

Sunday's Menu

Shrimp cocktail
Fried chicken—cream gravy
Parsley potatoes
Succotash
Lettuce hearts—cheese dressing
Coffee Mousse
Wafers

Fish Scalloped with Vegetables

1 small onion, 1 cup water, 1 cup creamed fish, 1 cup chopped buttered carrots, 1 cup cooked spaghetti, 1 tsp. salt and a little pepper. Remove seeds from pepper, chop onion and cook the two 10 minutes in water. Add all other ingredients; put in baking dish, sprinkle liberally with grated cheese and bake in moderate oven for 30 minutes.

Rice Combination Salad

1½ cups cooked rice, 4 tbls. chopped celery, salt, 4 tbls. chopped pimiento, 3 tbls. grated cheese, 4 tbls. green peppers or olives. Combine ingredients and serve on lettuce with French dressing or mayonnoise.

Macaroon Bisque

Whip 1 cup heavy cream until stiff, sweeten with powdered sugar and flavor with vanilla. Break 6 macaroons into small pieces and add to the cream. Pile in sherbet glasses with a border of whole macaroons. Garnish with maraschino cherries and set away in refrigerator to become thoroughly chilled.

Apple Butter with Grape Juice

If a grape flavor is desired in apple butter it may be obtained by the use of grape juice. To each gallon of peeled and sliced apples, cooked into sauce and strained, add 1 pint grape juice, 1 cup brown sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt. Cook slowly and stir often for 2 hours, or until of desired thickness. Then add 1 teaspoon cinnamon.

Remember this when Ironing

If you iron with the threads—preferably lengthwise threads—the cloth is less likely to stretch out of shape. Real linen, all table linen and starched articles must be ironed perfectly dry to give them a gloss.

Protects Cut Fruit

If you place a sheet of oiled paper over cut fruit such as oranges, grapefruit, melons, and lay the fruit cut side down on a flat plate no juice will be lost and the fruit will keep perfectly fresh.

Ormond

The services were held as usual on Sunday and were conducted by Rev. H. O. Lloyd, M. A., pastor of Ormond Baptist Church. A large number attended Sunday School at 10 o'clock, at which the Sunday School Choir sang, "My God I Thank Thee."

The evening service commenced at 7.30 and about 30 enjoyed Mr. Lloyd's sermon on "The Love of God." The scripture lesson was read from the 8th chapter of John, verses 5-11. The choir sang "How Pleased and Blessed was I."
