Dandelions

What is the colour of the dandelion? There are many dandelions: that which I mean flowers in May, when the meadow-grass has started and the hares are busy by daylight. That which flowers very early in the year has a thickness of hue, and is not interesting; in autumn the dandelions quite change their colour and are pale. The right dandelion for this question is the one that comes about May with a very broad disc, and in such quantities as often to cover a whole meadow. I used to admire them very much in the fields by Surbiton (strong clay soil), and also on the towing-path of the Thames where the sward is very broad, opposite Long Ditton; indeed, I have often walked up that towing-path on a beautiful sunny morning, when all was quiet except the nightingales in the Palace hedge, on purpose to admire them. I dare say they are all gone now for evermore; still, it is a pleasure to look back on anything beautiful.

What colour is this dandelion? It is not yellow, nor orange, nor gold; put a sovereign on it and see the difference. They say the gipsies call it the yellow-gold-orange plant. In the winter, on the black mud under a dark, dripping tree, I found a piece of orange peel, lately dropped—a bright red orange speck in the middle of the blackness. It looked very beautiful, and instantly recalled to my mind the great dandelion discs in the sunshine of summer. Yet certainly they are not red-orange. Perhaps, if ten people answered this question, they would each give different answers. Again, a bright day or a cloudy, the presence of a slight haze, or the juxtaposition of other colours, alters it very much; for the dandelion is not a glazed colour, like the buttercup, but sensitive. It is like a sponge, and adds to its own hue that which is passing, sucking it up.—Richard Jeffries, in "Field and Hedgerow."

Garden Chats

Rock Gardens

Rock gardening offers the solution for handling any steeply rising piece of ground and, in addition to beautifying such a spot, forms one of the most fascinating bits of work a person may tackle. In this sort of gardening the underlying principle is to create an environment for Alpine plants. We turn our actual slope, or a artificial one, into a miniature section of the Alps or the Rocky Mountains. We have our peaks, our upper gravelly valleys and our lower Alpine meadows. It is advisable to use irregular stones, arranging these carefully so as to get the mountain effect, but also so that they are securely anchored in the soil with the earth between connected up with the core of the slope so that the roots can penetrate to fairly permanent moisture. Where an elaborate garden is planned, one should provide himself with special literature as in creating a difficult replica of this kind there is great danger in overdoing the thing. It is usually necessary to bury the stones about two-thirds their depth in the soil and the site must be well drained. All seed catalogues list suitable rock garden plants.

Heavy Yielding Vegetables

It is really remarkable the amount of vegetables that can be produced in a small area. Sufficient tomatoes for a small family can be produced on six or eight plants. These, of course, should be staked and may be set in eighteen inches apart. The stakes are six feet long and are driven in close to the plant when the latter is set out. Pinch off all side shoots, training the single main stem along the pole and trying it about every foot. Every week during the growing season the plants should be inspected and all side shoots nipped off. In between where the tomatoes are going to be planted we can grow lettuce, using an early and late type, and also the Cos variety which will supply us during the late summer and early fall. One or two rows of beans are advisable as these yield very heavily for the amount of space taken up. Make two plantings about two or three weeks apart. Fifteen inches is sufficient space between rows. Carrots and beets will give very good returns and should have from twelve to fifteen inches between rows. Spinach is also a heavy yielder and as it comes on early is out of the way before the later vegetables require full room. On this account it, as well as lettuce and radish, can be planted in between the rows of carrots, beans, beets and tomatoes. Swiss Chard will supply a huge quantity of greens from ten or fifteen feet of row. The inner stalks are used like asparagus and the leaves like spinach. Onions could be included in the small garden and only need about eight inches between rows. Corn takes up quite a lot of room, but as it is never quite so good as taken fresh from the garden it is well to include it. It yields an average of three cobs to every two stalks and it may be planted in hills about a foot apart. Along the fences one can grow melons, cucumbers, pole beans, squash and similar trailing things. Peas require rather too much room for the very small garden as at least fifty feet of row will be required to give meals for a small family.

Do Not Be In a Hurry

The temptation is to sow all flower seeds outside as soon as the soil is dry enough in the spring, not thinking of the cold, frosty weather which is to follow, writes W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist. The result is that many seeds rot in the ground without germinating, and others germinate but soon after the plants appear above the ground they are killed with frost. Among the hardiest annuals and those which may be sown as soon as the soil is dry enough are the Sweet Pea, Virginian Stocks, Poppy, both the Shirley and California, Alyssum, Cornflower, Pot Marigold, Larkspur, Celendula, Coriopsis, Candytuft, Cosmos and Linaria. Included in the more tender annuals, which should not be sown until there is little danger of frost after the plants come up, are the Nasturtium, Balsam, Zinnia, Marigold, Aster and the ordinary Stocks. There is also the temptation to set geraniums, petunias and other similar bedding plants outside too early, especially potted plants which have been inside in the winter. In most parts of Canada these should not be planted outside until nearly the end of May. Cannas and Dahlias should not be planted outside until danger from frost is practically over, although Gladiolus can be set out as soon as the soil is dry enough. With roses, shrubs, climbers and fruit trees the sooner these are planted out in the Spring while there is plenty of moisture in the soil, the more likely they are to grow.

A Threshold

I never crossed your threshold with a grief
But that I went without it; never came
Heart hungry but you fed me, eased the blame
And gave the sorrow solace and relief.
I never left you but I took away
The love that drew me to your side again,
Through the wide door that never could remain
Quite closed between us for a little day.

Testing Character

The rich young ruler presented fine certificates of his own composition. Christ didn't tear them up, but He did what you tradesmen do with an applicant for a vacancy: He gave him a bit of work to try his hand on. The gentlemanly commandment-keeper wrote no more certificates.—Rev. John McNeill.

Selfishness

For every progress in strenuous work for God, there must have been a slaying of the selfishness which urges us to work in our own strength and for our own sake.—F. D. Huntingdon.

Against Clocks

By Amanda Benjamin Hall in "Troubadour."

Put not your trust in clocks, I say
For clocks are faithless fellows,
Begrudging further stint of day
Poor lads before the gallows!

Such tedious talkers, tick on tick,
Their discourse is the bane
Of persons lying parched and sick,
For they inform the pain.

How long it's pulse, how long 'twill run
Before it finds surcease
At last. When fevered nights are done,
When there is light and peace.

They set a swift, impatient pace
With a beguiling chime,
I've known one wear the straightest face
And tell the falsest time.

Once on a hill-top wreathed with flower,
In thyme and sun-sweet clover,
A clock's face, leaning from a tower,
Espied me and my lover:

Two, having neither dials nor charts
To count the minutes by,
With but the beating of their hearts
To gauge eternity.

Affronted, then it told the town,
It drove its engines hard
And fast—It would not throttle down
Their fury, nor retard

Their haste. When love lay like a seed
Sown deeply, silently,
It still ticked on—nor seemed to heed
That time had stopped for me.

Cut Flowers

Amid the clangour of the city's street,
The busy plying of industry's loom,
There is a spot where noise and nature meet,
A spot whence comes the soft sweet scent of bloom.
Fresh as the morn, the fragrant flowers lend
A touch of colour to the drab and grey;
And heavy-laden toilers as they wend
Look on them, and are spirit-borne away
To some far, lonely garden, where the sun
Is shadowed by the tree-tops all day long.
Where harmony and happiness are one,
And naught is heard save all the birds' sweet sound.
—Ruddick Millar.

"She likes publicity, eh?"
"Does she? Why, she thinks the society columns ought to make an item of it when she gives a little breakfast to a tramp."

England-Australia Air Line Suggested

Sydney, New South Wales.—"The time is ripe for an extension of the Indian air service to Australia," declared Sir Walter Nicholson, a director of Imperial Airways of England, in an interview during a recent visit here. "The service," he said, "cannot be run without some subsidy, but it should be established as soon as financial conditions in England and Australia permit. The amount involved is certainly not great ..... The proposed Australian service would link up with the Indian service at Karachi, and would be run weekly. The company has obtained eight 38-passenger machines. They are used in the European and African service, but might operate on the Australian route."

A representative of the Dutch line from Holland to Batavia is likewise in Australia, urging the Commonwealth to link up with that enterprise.

Soviet Levies Special Tax For Cultural Development

Mosow.—Soviet citizens, heretofore paying only one general tax on their incomes, must now meet a special new tax for cultural purposes. The levy is being collected to help achieve the government's five-year plan for cultural and economic development in the villages, the schedule contemplating erection of schools, clubs and theatres.

Workers who receive less than $37.50 monthly are exempt from the new tax. For others it runs from $4 to $65.

"Kulaks" or peasant farm owners, and other "declassed" sections of the population, already taxed heavily on their property holdings, must pay 100 per cent. more in cultural taxes.

Swiss Flier, Without Oxygen, Rises to 24,606 Feet Oltitude

Geneva.—Without the use of oxygen, the Swiss aviator, Nyfenegger, piloting the 200-horsepower monoplane Comte of the Schroeder Swissair Company, attained an altitude of 24,606 feet last week. The temperature recorded was 36 degrees below zero Centrigrade (approximately 33 degrees below zero Fahrenheit).

At an altitude of 18,000 feet, M. Nyfenegger reported, he began to experience an almost unbearable headache and was unable to utter a word, but he continued upward.

M. Nyfenegger said he will try to rise to 28,000 feet in another attempt to be made shortly, this time using oxygen.

Wisdom of Content

Who would not be covetous, and with reason, if health could be purchased with gold? Who not ambitious, if it were at the command of power, or restored by honor? But alas! a white staff will not help gouty feet to walk better than a common cane; nor a blue riband bind up a wound so well as a fillet; the glitter of gold or of diamonds will but hurt sore eyes, instead of curing them; and on aching head will be no more eased by wearing a crown instead of a common nightcap.—Sir W. Temple.

Happiness

Soviet To Stage Own Fashion Revue This Spring

Moscow.—The Soviet capital will soon witness its first "fashion show." It will be so different from similar shows in the outside world that it scarcely deserves the name.

An exhibition of sartorial models submitted by designers, artists, scientists and ordinary mortals is being organized, with prizes for those adjudged most suitable for Soviet conditions. Practical and sanitary considerations, it is pointed out here, rather than "fashion" or "style," will determine the winners

The exhibition, under the auspices of the clothing trust, raises an interesting question about the future of Soviet clothes. Will the new Russia follow the dictates of Paris and other foreign style centers? Or will it develop styles of its own? As yet the question is somewhat academic. There are not enough clothes to go around and no margin to spare for style.

Women in Moscow, Leningrad and other large cities, who are interested in clothes, do not think twice in answering the question. They definitely want to follow European styles. They watch carefully foreign motion pictures, the few foreign fashion magazines that are smuggled into the country and the dress of foreign visitors for guidance.

The clothing trust, however, is not so sure about this issue. Its officials talk about the "socialistic aims" of their industry rather than its fashion side. A spokesman of the trust said that capitalistic countries spent millions of dollars in producing new styles and discarding old ones. This was a form of waste, he said, which the Soviets would avoid.

The "fashion show" is one of the methods for interesting the public in this undertaking. Every one has been invited to submit sartorial ideas. The prize-winning models will become standards for mass production.

SAVED IMPORTED DRESS

"After a little wearing, a lovely green voile—an imported dress—lost colors so completely that it was not wearable. A friend who had admired it asked me why I wasn't wearing it any more. On hearing the reason, she advised dyeing it and recommended Diamond Dyes. To make a long story short, it turned out beautifully. I have a lovely new dress that really cost just 15 cents—the price of one package of Diamond Dyes.

"I have since used Diamond Dyes for both tinting and dyeing. They do either equally well. I am not an expert dyer but I never have a failure with Diamond Dyes. They seem to be made so they always go on smoothly and evenly. They never spot, streak or run; and friends never know the things I dye with Diamond Dyes are redyed at all!"

He was of a thrifty turn of mind, and he came from Aberdeen.

One day he was told by a friend that instead of putting shillings in the gas meter, much the same effect could be obtained by blowing smartly into the receptacle.

He tried the experiment with gratifying results.

"What's the matter?" asked the uneasy householder.

"Man," said the inspector in puzzled tones, "I canna understand it at all. The company appear to owe ye thirty-sivin and savpence."

Princess Elizabeth Sews Own Doll's Wardrobe

These are busy days in the home of the Duke of York.

Seventeen-months-old Princess Margaret Rose is learning to walk and her elder sister, Princess Elizabeth, is so engrossed in a new spring outfit for a huge doll that she has almost forgotten the approach of her sixth birthday.

Princess Margaret Rose now is known to her family as "Meg," a pet name given her by the Prince of Wales, with whom she is a great favorite.

Princess Elizabeth's doll, whose name is Julie, is always attired in replicas of the Princess' dresses. The doll's clothes are stitched entirely by her young mistress, who insists that Julie must be treated exactly as she is. Only in the coldest of winds does the doll appear in a hat, and when the Princess has a bad cold, Julie has to stay in bed, too.

Roman Treasures Found in Algeria

Algiers, Algeria. — Important discoveries have been made in the ruins of a former Roman town near Sauk-Ahras, south of Bona in the Department of Constantine, Algeria.

It is evident that the excavated area was the necropolis of the ancient town, for a large vault has been unearthed containing several niches for lamps, and gold and silver ornaments. Hidden in a deep well that has not yet been sounded were three marble statues. One probably represents the Roman god Silvanus, similar to a statute in the Louvre.

Our Weekly Scout Law. 1. A Scout's Honor is to be Trusted.

This is the first of the Scout Laws to which every Boy Scout throughout the world has subscribed. What more can be said of a boy or a man than that he is honorable? Shakespeare has said that "My honor is my life!" and it is certain that a boy is not much use without life, and it is equally certain that without a code of honor he cannot use his life to very effective purpose for the uplifting of himself or of his fellow men.

And what does honor mean? According to my dictionary a person who is held in honor is one who is esteemed, respected and upright. And such a person is one who can be trusted, so that when he gives his word on any matter there can be no doubt but what he intends to carry out his promise to the letter.

Thus a Scout is honorable, and may be trusted, because having given his promise to obey the Scout Law, of which this is the first clause, he will follow through to the very end any task which he undertakes "On his honor," and further, being a Scout and trying all the time to obey the Scout Law, he will not make statements which are not true.

Scouts At Famous English Schools

No less than eighty Old Country public schools now have their Boy Scout Troops. The latest additions are Epsom, Mill Hill, Oakham, Oundle, Tonbridge and Westminster. Canadian Scouts on tour after the great 1929 World Jamboree in England were much interested in a Scout notice board in the famous quadrangle at Eton, recording the activities of Eton Scout patrols prior to the summer holidays.

This is another token of the fact that it is generally recognized that the Scout Programme is beneficial to boys of all ranks and classes, and in every station of life.

It should be recollected that the "Public Schools' mentioned here are the old established boarding schools of England, which are attended for the most part by the sons of wealthy parents, who pay high fees for their boys' education at these colleges They should not be confused or compared with the "public school" as we know it in Canada.

Scouts For Hudson's Bay Co.

Old Country Rovers of several years Scout experience are being sought by the Hudson's Bay Co. for apprenticeship posts in Canada. Ten or more have been in touch with Dominion Scout Headquarters. A recent typical letter from a Scottish rover tells of two months alone as cook with his factor on an Ungava island, awaiting the freeze-up, then visits of Eskimos, the making of igloos, hunting seals and trapping foxes. All these young Scout adventurers write cheerily, reflecting the true Scout spirit under conditions that at times must be lonesomely trying

There are two boys away up in the far north of Ontario, who are working for the Hudson's Bay Company, having come out from Scotland for that purpose, who are on the roll of the Ontario Lone Scout Department. Travelling is so difficult in that country that we do not hear from them very often, but they are trying to carry out their Scout programme loyally away up in that lonely country.

An Emergency Guard of Honor

An interesting inside story of the role played by a Boy Scout Guard of Honour is told by President D. P. Cruikshanks of the Minto Skating Club of Ottawa. The occasion was the last visit of Viscount and Lady Willingdon to the annual skating carnival, the "Minto Follies," accompanied by distinguished members of the diplomatic corps and several provincial lieutenants-governors.

To facilitate the approach of the party to the vice-regal box a strip of carpet had been placed upon the ice. A few minutes before the arrival of the guests the director, on a final tour of inspection, stepped upon the carpet. It slipped under him.

Immediately came visions of a catastrophe—His Excellency or Her Excellency, or the Japanese Consul General, or the U.S. Minister—possibly even the whole distinguished party in a heap on the ice! And even broken bones!

The director thought rapidly.

Smartly uniformed Scouts were scattered about the auditorium on various duties.

Hastily he called them together. Quickly he explained, and placed them at intervals along the carpet, each boy's toes firmly clamping the carpet edge to the ice.

Their Excellencies and guests passed through the erect line of Scouts, smilingly appreciative of the youthful guard of honour—and reached their box in safety.

Boys who are interested in the Lone Scouts may obtain full particulars by writing to the Lone Scout Department, Boy Scouts Association, 330 Bay St., Toronto 2.

The Legislature In Brief

The Ontario Budget was carried in the Legislature with another big Government majority. The Hon. E. A. Dunlop, Provincial Treasurer, in tabling his budget, showed it to be a balanced one for the year 1932, together with an estimated surplus of three hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars. Increased taxation, amounting to four million three hundred and ten thousand dollars, coupled with governmental economies and expenditure cuts of four million, six hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars are also shown in the budget.

Increased Taxation

The increases in taxation include: raising the gasoline tax by one cent to six cents a gallon; a tax of ten cents a bottle on all imported liquors and wines and a tax of twenty-five cents a gallon on domestic wine; extension of the amusement tax to include tickets as low as twenty-five cents, and abolition of all exemptions except religious, charitable, patriotic and philanthropic bodies; increased taxes under the Corporation Tax Act, and increased charges for law stamps.

These new taxes are expected to net the following: Corporation tax, two million dollars; amusement tax, two hundred thousand; gas tax, one million three hundred and fifty thousand; liquor taxes, five hundred thousand; wine tax, sixty thousand; and law stamps, a hundred thousand.

Cut in Expenditures

The Hon. Mr. Dunlop announced a cut in governmental expenditures by four million five hundred thousand dollars. Referring to the new gasoline tax, he pointed out that automobile fees in Ontario are lower than any other province in the Dominion and that the present motor vehicle and gasoline tax together are fifteen per cent. short of road maintenance, interest and debt retirement.

The balance sheet shows the assets of the province exceeding liabilities by thirty-one million dollars, while the existing taxation is less than thirty-four per cent. of the total revenue.

There is also to be included two million, five hundred thousand dollars for direct relief, for unemployment, in the expenditures, and if the expenditure under direct relief last year had been eliminated Ontario would have had a surplus of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Having to include the necessary amount for direct relief this year and to secure a balanced budget, it meant that additional revenue to the extent of four million dollars had to be raised.

Liquor Board Not "Robbed"

From the Liquor Control Board, the Government had received ten million dollars, but the profits of the Board had been $1,509,346 less than this figure, the difference being realized from the surplus profits in the hands of the Board. "Any statement, however," said Mr. Dunlop, "that the Government had robbed the Board is entirely erroneous."

Power to declare a moratorium in the case of a municipality in default of payment of its bonds is provided for in the newly-created Ontario Municipal Board under provisions of a bill introduced to the Legislature by Attorney-General Price. The bill merges the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board and the Bureau of Municipal Affairs into one Board. This Board is commissioned to render upon any municipal matter and is empowered to scrutinize the debenture of any municipality and declare a moratorium when a municipality is in default and thus prevent suits against the municipality. The Board may inquire into the affairs upon the request of the municipality itself, or of twenty per cent. of its creditors.

Moratorium Act Explained

The Moratorium Act, where is especially applies to farmers, was explained by a member of the Government in the following way:

"If a farmer has a farm which is valued at fifteen thousand dollars, but to-day only shows a valuation of ten thousand dollars, then this Act will be in operation until such time as the farm realizes its proper valuation."

"The method of procedure is very simple," said this member. "If a farmer requires to use the Moratorium on Mortgages, the Act provides that he will apply personally to a Judge in Chambers and will give all the facts relative to his position and the Judge will decide the merits of his case. This guarantees absolute privacy of the farmer's personal business and, at the same time, prohibits the illegal use of the Moratorium.

Safeguards Taken.

"It will be realized," he said, "that every safeguard has been taken against the misuse of this Act, because anyone wishing to take advantage of the new Act cannot do so unless it has been passed upon by a local Judge."

There was strenuous opposition to the passing of the Budget by the Liberal and Progressive members, but the vote was a straight Party one, the Conservatives lining up solidly behind the measure, while the Liberals and Progressives voted for the Amendment, which resulted in a big majority for the Government.

Los Angeles To Try Five-Day Working Week

Los Angeles—Five thousand municipal employees will shortly begin work on a five-day basis according to the terms of an ordinance adopted recently by the city council and signed by Mayor John C. Porter.

Reductions in pay ranging from 2 to 10 per cent also were provided, the 10 per cent reduction to apply to employees now receiving more than $400 monthly and up to and including $600 a month. A sliding scale of slary reductions has been applied to employees within the lower pay ranges.

The ordinance — an emergency measure which was unanimously adopted—specifically exempts from salary reduction all officials who are appointed for a definite term of office.

Oxford Board Abolishes Examination in Scripture

Oxford, England.—"Divvers," the time-honored examination in Holy Scripture, has been abolished at Oxford, and the university congregation has rejected a proposal to make Holy Scripture a compulsory subject.

By a vote of 127 to 108, after a warm debate, the university ruling board decided that such study henceforth should be one for the student to assume only voluntarily.

Opposition to the proposal was led by G. Ryle, of Christ Church. He commented on the fear expressed by some members of the university that abolition of examinations in Scripture would result in schools paying less attention to Biblical study. In his opinion such fear were groundless. Schools had read and would continue to read Scripture, no matter what the university did, he asserted.

The Attacks on Insurance Companies

The attacks upon two Canadian insurance companies which gave rise to a recent debate in parliament have been deprecated not only by leading members of the House of Commons, but, since the debate took place, by dozens of influential newspapers throughout the Dominion. Seldom has the press spoken with so unanimous a voice.

One of the companies, the North American Life, has its head office in Toronto. The attacks upon it had to do with its recent mutualization under Mr. Thomas Bradshaw. Mr. Bradshaw and Mr. J. H. Gundy, who at one time jointly controlled the company, were denounced in certain quarters as men who had profited unduly from the mutualizing transaction. But as Hon. Charles Stewart pointed out in the House on Monday, the price which these gentlemen received for their shares was the price which they had paid. They did not make a profit.

So far as Mr. Gundy was concerned, he was already out of the company before mutualization took place. Late in 1930 he had transferred his shares to Mr. Bradshaw at cost. Mr. Bradshaw, finding himself in control and finding also that there was provision for mutualization in the company's charter, proceeded to submit a plan to the shareholders and policyholders which was carried by them without a dissenting voice. This plan involved the relinquishment of the Bradshaw stock at the price he had paid for it.

The sum of $1,275,000 which retired the stock to the shareholders and enabled the North American to function as a mutual company was secured from funds in which the policyholders had no interest or equity—chiefly from the surplus in the company's non-participating fund. The participating fund out of which dividends are paid to policyholders was not only left absolutely intact, but becomes entitled to all future surplus earnings of the non-participating fund which, under the old system, would have gone to shareholders.

During the debate in the Commons a number of influential members paid tribute to Mr. Bradshaw's part in the transaction. "Many of you know," said Mr. Bennett, "that he was city treasurer of Toronto for several years, and he enjoys, I believe, a reputation for probity, for honor and for integrity second to that of no man in this country." Mr. Mitchell Hepburn said: "I believe he is an honorable, capable gentleman, and I think he showed his unselfish spirit when he mutualized the company for the benefit of the policyholders." Mr. Cameron R. McIntosh (North Battleford) said: "I believe Mr. Bradshaw ought to be commended for taking a lead in the mutualization of that company. It was not to his private benefit that the company should be mutualized."

There are always those who are ready to impute selfish and improper motives to successful men. It is encouraging to find that on this occasion there has been a general desire to let the facts of the case be known and to repudiate the unfair attacks which have been made upon two citizens of Toronto and the institution which they at one time jointly controlled.—Toronto Star.

Current Events

As Viewed By The Press

The New British Tariff

Which particular Canadian products are most likely to derive benefit from the new British tariff? The subject is discussed in the Commercial Intelligence Journal of March 5, published by the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, by Mr. Harrison Watson, Canadian Trade Commissioner in London, who thinks that the the following are among Canadian articles in which our export trade is likely to be stimulated by the preferential duties: Flour, cereals (including possibly malting barley), cereal foods, apples, pears, concentrated apple juice, canned fruits and vegetables, honey, milk powder (and to a lesser extent evaporated and condensed milk), canned salmon, timber, dowels, handles and other woodenware, paper boards of various kinds, wrapping paper, wallboards, rubber footwear, gloves, silk hosiery, metallic office furniture, agricultural machinery and household electric appliances.

The outstanding fact from a Canadian point of view is that up to November 15 next the British Government has granted Canada and all Empire countries immunity from the 10 per cent. duty levied from March 1 on all goods of foreign origin, except a comparatively short list appended to Mr. Watson's report.—The Mail and Empire (Toronto).

The Empire Conference.

Strong as Empire trade sentiment may be, it is obvious that the success of the coming conference will only result if all parties approach the problem of Empire trade in a spirit of give and take. If, as Hon. C. A. Dunning pointed out lately, the conference is merely an aggression of sellers, no forward step will result. Quite as important for each part of the Empire as finding a market for their own products is the question of what they can or will buy from the others—Kingston Whig-Standard (Ind.).

Britain and the War Debt.

Britain is not accustomed to repudiating obligations. But the burden is so great that she may have no choice. She has already it must not be forgotten, through the Balfour agreement of August, 1922, asked her debtors that she wants from them and from Germany only sufficient money to discharge her debt to the United States. All the debts owing to her in excess of this amount—and they totalled more than five and one-half billion dollars—she has already wiped off the slate.—Vancouver Province (Ind. Cons.).

Financial Problems in the U.S.A.

Much is heard about the financial problems of Britain and Germany; but little about those of the United States. The latter are very serious, but there is fear of taking drastic action in the year of a presidential election. The consequence is that procrastination is marking the course of political Washington in grappling with the financial problems that beset the country.—Victoria Colonist (Cons.).

The Railway Commission.

The Canadian people will not permit a railway monopoly under private ownership. Neither are they in a humor at the present time to bring about a railway monopoly under public ownership. But so far no responsible public man, no responsible railway official, in fact, no one whose voice carried any weight of authority whatever, has advocated amalgamation. Mr. Bennett's last word on the subject was his well-known slogan: "Competition ever; amalgamation never." Mr. King is as vigorous in his insistence on the maintenance of both railways as independent systems. And from Mr. Bennett and Mr. King the list of those who have expressed unqualified opposition to any such idea could be prolonged indefinitely. To suggest, therefore, that the Royal Commission is going to pick up the idea out of the thin air and present it in any form as its major recommendation for the solution of the difficulties of the railways, staggers credulity. — Winnipeg Tribune (Ind. Cons.).

The Irish Government.

The popular conception of Mr. De Valera hand in hand with the bogey of anarchy is as completely unfounded as it is unfortunately prevalent. There will undoubtedly be attempts, in the Press and elsewhere, to discredit Mr. De Valera's actions from the beginning. Actually there is no necessity to judge Mr. De Valera of today by the Mr. De Valera of 1916. Power paradoxically clips the wings of fanaticism, and nowhere more strangely than in Ireland.—Spectator (London).

Britain's Foreign Trade.

If our people would only "wake up," it would surely be possible to increase our export trade enormously. The following quotation is from the recently published Basle report: "There is no instance in economic history of a crisis, no matter how great, which has not been followed by periods of stability and prosperity." Britain can take her part in the coming period of prosperity, but to do this successfully, our manufacturers must be prepared to meet the taste, the quality, and the price of the buyer, and this cannot be done unless we send abroad the right men, armed with the right goods.—Sir Harry Gloster Armstrong in the Empire Review (London).

If in future the millers are to buy 15 per cent. of their bread cereal expensively in Britain and are to be compelled to buy 55 per cent. from the Dominions, a dangerous situation may arise. If Dominion grain-growers were to organize a pool they might force up the price of bread grain almost to any figure. The English corn trade and millers would have no opportunity of buying enough cheap grain to keep the price of our loaf down, as their "free market" would have been curtailed to some 30 per cent. of their requirements. Nor could our Government meet such an attempted hold-up by reducing the quota, as the Dominions would have obtained a definite quota for their grain in return for giving us a quid pro quo for manufactures. So our industrialists would use their influence to oppose any curtailment in the Dominion wheat quota lest it react on their sales. But the effect upon British bread prices might be dangerous, even calamitous, on inter-Imperial relations and good will.—Viscount Aster in the Nineteenth Century (London).

"It Pays to Advertise."

"I can count on my ten fingers the department stores in this country that are doing more business today than they did a year ago," said Mr. Babson, "and in every case I find them also doing more advertising than a year ago." Mr. Babson is of the opinion that manufacturers and merchants who offer good quality, honest service and the lowest possible prices, and emphasize them by truthful, forceful and continual advertising will find 1932 a profitable year. In other and more familiar words, a year in which it will pay to advertise.—Boston Christian Science Monitor.

The Language of Broadcasts.

The talking motion pictures and the radio are undeniably having an effect on language as it is spoken. The microphone has definite limits, which are even further limited by the films and their technique. Long words, and particularly sibilant words with nuance of inflection, do not reproduce properly. So for the making of "talkies," there has to be a vocabulary censorship. This censorship has weeded out a long list of words. It is noteworthy that most of those words which have been retained have been those belonging, roughly speaking, to the Anglo-Saxon family. And many of those which have been banished are of distinctly Latin ancestry.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Building on Increase Dominion Figures Show

Ottawa.—A marked increase in building construction for the last two months, as compared with December, is shown by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The contracts in February were valued at $14,802,000. This compares with $12,738,000 in January and $11,357,000 in December of last year.

Canada's gold production in 1931 of 2,686,700 ounces, valued at $55,457,000, set a record for this precious metal, being 27 per cent. above the 1930 production.

Kansas Grocer Puts Customers to Work

Lawrence, Kan.—A neighborhood grocer here has his own remedy for the economic situation. Many of his customers had been out of work all winter and were indebted to him for groceries. And he wanted to build a new combination store and home. So he put his customers to work, paid them half their wages, and credited the other half on their bills. The men got work, Mr. J. C. Carter, the grocer, got the building, and the grocery bills diminished in size.

Stockholm.—Tents of the nomads of Swedish Lappland, a grazing district about the size of Great Britain, are to be equipped with telephones. It is believed they will enable the Lapps to overcome some of the ennui of their lonely lives.

1272 Token Melted for Gold

Liverpool.—A large gold love token dated 1272 and bearing the words, "My sword, my heart and my life are yours at command," was turned in for melting while the gold rush was on here.

Prohibition Course Popular

Delaware, Ohio. — So encouraging has been the response to a course in prohibition offered by the political science department of Ohio Wesleyan University that the course probably will be repeated next year, says Dr. Ben. A. Arneson, department head. Prominent wet and dry speakers appeared before the class.

Letter Delayed 26 Years

Bethune France.—"Delayed by accident" was marked on an envelope mailed in April, 1906, at Commercy and recently delivered after taking twenty-six years to travel 180 miles to Harnes, a village near this city.

Typewriter Will Void

Aix-en-Provence, France.—The Appellate Court held recently that to be valid a French will must be entirely in the handwriting of the testator.

As a consequence the city of Marseilles loses valuable paintings by Monticelli bequeathed to it by Henri Honorat. His last testament was a typewritten document and the court declared it was invalid.

Built 8-Sided House

Cedar Point, N.C.—Edward Hill did not like the wind whistling around his house, and so he built one with eight sides to lessen the noise His grandson, John S. Jones, didn't like the whistle any more than Hill did, so he took up his residence there also.

Built seventy-seven years ago, the two-story house has withstood gales, storms and salt air. Copper nails, soaked in oil, were used in the building to resist weather wear. The house, containing twelve rooms surmounted by a cupola, is situated on a 1,000 acre plantation that has been in the family's possession 167 years.

Norwegians Tip Best

London. — Scandinavians, Norwegians particularly, are the best tippers, the hall porters of three large London hotels aver. Spaniards come second. The Germans are the third best, but a long way ahead of the French, who saunter in the rear, neck-and-neck with the Italians.

Americans are just average; about half of those from the other side of the Atlantic tip better than any one else, but most of those who come to England on tours have very little money to spare and confine their tipping to the ten per cent. which is added to the bill.

Canada's Trade Balance 15 Millions Favorable

Ottawa.—Total exports of Canadian produce during the 11 months ended February 29 last amounted to $536,594,995. During the same 11-month period imports entered for consumption totalled $521,056,928. Consequently Canada came through the 11 months with a favourable trade balance of $15,538,667.

Trade figures, however, show a considerable falling off when comparison is made with those for the corresponding 11 months a year ago. Exports of Canadian produce in the period which ended with February 28, 1931, totalled $774,604,470. Imports entered for consumption during the same period amounted to $831,231,817.

Panic

Dr. Jones was sleeping soundly when his telephone bell rang. Dragging himself to the instrument, he answered impatiently.

It was the voice of Aaron Bimburg, who implored the doctor to "Come at vunce!" on a matter of life or death. Little Aaron had swallowed a shilling and his parents feared the worst.

The doctor dressed hurriedly, jumped into his car, and drove madly to the Bimburg's house. On his arrival he found the Bimburgs calm and apparently much relieved.

"It's all right now, doctor," said Bimburg; "you needn't have come. It was only a thruppeny bit. Ve found the shilling on the floor."

Chances

We miss the best chances for doing good by fixing dates. The commonest days may be made immortal to us and to others by fidelity to every passing moment.

Traffic Decreases On Panama Canal

Balboa, Canal Zone. — Panama Canal traffic for the first 15 days of February shows a slight average increase over the two preceding months.

Our Column

Ireland is returning to her natural state.

Praise spurns men on to greater effort; criticism never helps them.

Trees are being tapped and sap running freely during the past few days in this section.

Hard times, hard liquor and hard feelings sure do cause a lot of trouble in this old world.

The Editor is looking forward lovingly for a dose of Spring fever. Remember we said Spring fever, not Hay fever.

Think This Over: Woman's talk, like the little brook, goes on forever; but the little brook gets somewhere in the end.

Twenty years ago a motor car on the highway was considered just as big a nuisance as a horse and buggy on one are now.

Hunt up the fellow who never did anything for the community and he can tell you where those who have are falling down.

Saulte Ste. Marie Municipal Conncil has passed a by-law prohibiting girls under 18 years attending dance halls, unless accompanied by their parents.

Father, did Edison make the first talking machine?

No, my son, God made the first talking machine, but Edison made the first one that could be cut off.

First it's slippery, then it's sloppery, now you melt and then you freeze, now you cough and then you sneeze, watch the mercury hop and skip, it's not strange we have the grippe.

Bishop Seager says, "Canada is right in the line of development of great world events, and our children will live in a day of the 20th century which will be the greatest that has yet dawned."

One young lady, in a moment of rapture, exclaimed: "I'd just love to be a farmer, to live with the blue sky overhead." It might be all right if the blue sky was the farmer's only overhead!

High rates of interest. Low rates of wages. Low prices for goods. Unemployment. Whither is it leading us? All one can do is to shut your eyes and say, like the comic strip, "the worst is yet to come."

Daniel Hehir, Sandtown, a few miles west of Newington Glengarry county, is the proud owner of an Ayrshire bull calf which weighed no less than 110 pounds at birth, more than 40 pounds heavier than the average newborn calf.

In days of old when nights were cold,
It took two fleeces from the fold
To dress a lady fair.
But in these days of jazz and bob,
A little silkworm does the job,
With time galore to spare.

Recently a Los Angeles Shop received the following letter from a distressed debtor, "Dear Sir: I have many bills to settle, so each week I put them all in a hat and draw out one, which I pay. It may be your turn next, but no more of your threats or I won't put you in the raffle.

A cheque for $175, being a donation from the employees of the Prescott-Ogdensburg Ferry Company, for the relief of the unemployed in Prescott has been received by the Prescott town council. A similar donation has been made by the Ferry Company for the benefit of the Ogdensburg unemployed.

Hon. MacKenzie King says the houses of the Lieutenant-Governors of Canada should be padlocked for six months in the year. We would extend the time to twelve months, and apply the six months padlocks to many of the members of the House of Commons who talk more than they think, and to less purpose. The talking machines of the House of Commons cost the country about as much as the Lieutenant-Governors.

DEPARTMENTAL EXAMS

Announcement has been made of the dates departmental examinations for this year. Middle school examinations are the first to open, starting on June 20 and continuing until July 6. Upper school examinations also begin on June 20 and finish on July 6, while lower school examinations begin on June 23 and finish on June 29 Entrance examinations will be held from June 22 to 24. For the first time, middle school students this year may be promoted on the year's standing, if attaining at least 66 per cent. Those who fail to make standing during the year can try the final examinations by paying the regulation fees.

APPRECIATE GIFTS

Mrs. Robt. Workman, with many others in this section, contributed to the car of canned goods and clothing sent to Saskatchewan last Fall. Last month Mrs. Workman received a very appreciative note from a Mrs Hayes, at Trossache. Sask., telling her how much they appreciated the canned goods from this section. She writes: "I am a married woman with three children, oldest 4 years, youngest 3 months, and it surely means something in times like these to try and keep them fed and dressed. We are farmers, but this winter we have lived in a house in the village, as the house on the farm is so cold. I am sure the people out on the prairies cannot half express their thanks in the way they would like to to the people in the east, as they have been so very very kind in sending so much food and clothing."

PURCHASING HOLSTEINS IN CANADA

Purchasing Holstein cattle in Canada recently, R. H. Latham, Deer River, N. Y., bought one head from Edward Baker & Son, Winchester; seven head from Carmi Sproul, Moose Creek; one from Alex McRae, Moose Creek; one from the Est. of Alex J. McDonald, Moose Creek; one from A. D Emburg, Moose Creek; two from R. J. Cameron, Avonmore, and two from Duncan McAuley, of the same placer He also purchased three head from Fred H. Scott, Russell: two from John H. Stearns, Marvelville, and one from Domina Carriere, Maxville, Ont.

BUCK-HARKNESS

A pretty wedding was solemnized on Friday, March 25th, in the United Church Winchester, when Miss Florence Harkness, R. N., only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harkness, Kingston, Ont., and Clarence Austin Buck, M. D., only son of Mr and Mrs. Austin A. Buck, of Milton, Ont., were united in marriage. The bride was attired in a smart suit of navy blue with hat and accessories to match. She wore a beautiful corsage boquet of violets, lily of the valley and roses, and was attended by Miss Anna McDonald, of Kingston, while Mr. L. C. Williams assisted the groom. Miss Helen Smith, A. T. C. M., played the wedding march and rendered appropriate music during the ceremony which was performed by Rev. John A. Waddell. The Church was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies and other spring flowers. On their return from their wedding tour Dr. and Mrs. Buck will reside in Toronto.

THE UNITED CHURCH

(Contributed)

Easter lilies, ferns, potted daffodils and cut flowers in memory of departed loved ones, made the front of the Church look like Easter. A basket of Spring flowers was placed there in memory of Mrs. Flora by her family; another similar bouquet was donated by someone who gave no name.

Near the opening of the morning service the rites of baptism were administered for June Rosemary, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rowat. Six members were received into the Church, two by confession of faith, and four by letter.

Rev. J. A. Waddell delivered a very appropriate Easter message from the words: "He is Risen," which he said tell the story of the greatest fact in history. He also said that the Easter message was never more needed than now and hearts were never more receptive. The light of that glorious morning is with us still and we should let our hearts go out in thanksgiving for what Easter really means to us. We celebrate a victory and find that we are called to a higher and better life. At the conclusion of the sermon the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was commemorated by the large number present.

The Sunday School was well attended and a special song selection was given by two young girls, the chorus being sung by the boys of Mr. Mill's class

Rev. W. R. Johnston, of Spencerville, brought an earnest evening message to the members of the Mission Circle, this being the occasion of their thank-offering. Taking Mark 16:7 for a text he showed how Jesus called his disciples to establish a heavenly kingdom on the earth, a kingdom of love and kindness. He gave them a command and a promise and to-day He gives us the same command and if we walk in His way our life will be one triumphant fellowship with Him. Addressing the youth he said: "Never had youth so great an opportunity to express itself and so great an opportunity for service." "What is the task before the youth of today?" he asked. He replied it was to go or to send to all the world and transform life, bringing the knowledge that God is our Father, that Jesus came into the world and gave His life for us and if we would be like Him we must give our lives in service for others, working together with Him.

Miss Annie Walker and Mrs. Arnold Duncan gave an interesting dialogue on "The Stewardship of Thankfulness after which they were assisted by Mrs. Singleton and Mrs. Carl Rice in taking the Thank offering.

A full choir under the capable leadership of Miss Helen Smith rendered special Easter anthems. In the morning they were assisted by Miss Jean Beach, of Ottawa, who contributed a pleasing solo: "'Tis the Resurrection Morn."

AFFLICTED MISSIONARY

Mrs. Ella Male who was last week the guest of Mr. and Mrs J. H. Ross, is a sister of the well-known Missionary of the United Church, Miss Minnie Garrett. Miss Garrett, who has labored extensively as a missionary in India, Africa and China is at present an invalid in an hospital in Toronto with an affliction of the spine, and her physicians say that she will never be able to again engage in active service, even if she is able to ever walk again. It was when on her last trip to China the steamer she took passage on encountered very heavy seas, and one night she was thrown out of her berth to the cabin floor. At the time the injury was not considered serious, and when she reached Honolula she was able to be about and engage in some work. However the old trouble came back unexpectedly and very severely and she was rendered quite helpless. She was placed on a steamer to return home, but had to wear a steel cast and was unable to even sit up. She reached Toronto more dead than alive, but since she has been in the hospital has shown a slight improvement and her doctors are hopeful that she will be able to again sit up and perhaps walk with aid. Of a most cheerful and optimistic disposition Miss Garrett has never been downhearted but always hopeful and during the last week, so earnest is she in her work, that proped up in her bed she wrote and sent out to friends of the Missionary cause over two hundred missionary messages of cheer. On a recent visit to Canada, before her accident, Miss Garrett addressed many missionary organizations in Toronto and parts of Ontario and her labours in that field have been very influential and helpful. Her experiences would make a most interesting volumn, and some of her escapes from iniury and death are really miraculous. Miss Garrett was born in Smiths Falls, Ont. Mrs. Male herself has travelled extensively in Europe and recently returned from a visit to China and Japan.

After an illness of more than a year, during the last months of which she suffered intense pain, which she bore with wouderful courage, Mrs. Eloda Winnifred Casselman passed away at her home in Berwick, on Sunday, March 20th, in her 55th year. Deceased, only daughter of Mr. M. J. Casselman, of Morrisburg, was twice married, her first husband being the late Mr. Webster Keyes, to whom was born one son, Hubert C. Keys, dentist, Kitchener, Ont. About twenty-four years ago she was united in marriage to Mr. Aden Casselman, who survives, with five children. She is also survived by her father, Mr. M. J. Casselman. Morrisburg, and one brother, Claire Casselman, M. P., Prescott.

A CHANGE FOR ANN

By William Freeman

Ann Carslake was twenty-eight, and there was no other girl in her department—Ribbons and Gloves, Winkworkers (Oxford Street) Limited — over twenty-five. None of them had been there more than three years, while Ann's record was nine, and the total effect was to make Ann feel old. She had good features, and her eyes, if they hadn't been habitually tired, would have been beautiful.

The sports grounds of the firm were near the river—a dozen pleasant acres overlooked by a pavilion. Ann joined, but she didn't go there often as she hadn't the energy. She preferred to slip away by the gate which led to the towing path, and to saunter along by the river.

She stood on the towing-path one Saturday afternoon watching the dinghies, and the punts, and the grimy and indolent barges. But she was only giving them half her attention. Her mind was straying away among the people who made up the background of her life. She wondered vaguely why they mattered so little. There was Mr. Heeps, of course, the floor-manager, plump and middle-aged, with his little toothbrush moustache, and eyes that seemed to see everyone and everything. He mattered. One couldn't ignore Mr. Heeps. Ann knew he liked her.

A tanned and good-looking youth in grey flannels approached. He had no hat, and didn't look as if he ever wore one.

"Excuse me," he said, "but I suppose you haven't noticed a car—a Rolls—hanging about in the lane?"

Ann said she hadn't.

"That's the third time," he murmured, "that Jack Purley's let me down." He paused. Then, as Ann turned away, a sudden idea seemed to strike him.

"Look here, are you doing anything just now? It's a frightful cheek to ask, of course."

"To ask what?" said Ann.

"If you'd help me spend the rest of the afternoon. I've got a canoe hanging about the landing-stage there, and we might paddle up towards Teddington for a bit. Assuming——"

"It's assuming a good deal," said Ann. "Because I don't know anything about you. Or you about me."

"We can soon put that right. My name's Grist—Jim Grist. I haven't a card, but I hope you'll take that much for granted. Your name——"

Ann, still a little hesitant, told him. They walked along the path to the landing-stage, and stepped into the canoe. Ann, leaning back against a red cotton cushion, watched the cheerful swing of the paddle, and wondered whether she was behaving with ordinary sanity, or whether the overdue sunshine hadn't gone to her head.

Her companion began to talk. He told her things about himself—that he hadn't any people, that he was studying law, that he was living in the Temple. To Ann it sounded a pleasant life.

"It's your turn now," he said suddenly stopping.

Ann was embarrassed. Her usually pale cheeks were unusually pink. "I'm in a shop," she said. "I serve people with gloves, and get very tired of it. Especially in warm weather, when their hands are hot and sticky, and their tempers short."

"Rotten!" said Mr. Grist. "But we'll do our best to forget it this afternoon. What about an ice?"

They paddled to the floating ice-cream man, and then continued the journey up-stream. Ann let her mind drift—and drift. Presently she became aware that Mr. Grist was suggesting tea. She assented. He tied up the canoe at a big waterside restaurant.

It was a pleasant meal, and they didn't hurry. The afternoon was cool, small breezes ruffled the water, and still they lingered. Their waiter, duly signalled, presented the bill.

Jim Grist slid his hand into his pocket. Abruptly he got up. "Out of cigarettes,' he announced. "Will you excuse me a jiffy?"

Ann, as she watched him step out into the sunlight, found herself wishing the afternoon could begin all over again. Because there could never be an afternoon quite like this one. She became aware of the waiter again, a hovering shadow. Later he was joined by another shadow, the proprietor. Tactfully he asked her if her friend was likely to be long.

Ann explained.

"We sell cigarettes here," said the proprietor. "I saw him myself go past the restaurant and across the road, where there are no shops."

Ann's heart sank. All the brightness seemed to fade. In the voice of a kind-hearted judge who passes sentence because it is his duty, the restaurant proprietor went on to explain that it was quite common for youths to hang about the river, "pick up young ladies who weren't experienced," spend a pleasant afternoon with them—and disappear, leaving the bills for the boat, the tea, and any other distractions unpaid. Ann, fumbling in her bag, produced half-a-crown and three pennies.

"That, said the proprietor, "will barely pay for your own tea. And, of course, you will have to get home. If you care to leave me your address, and forward the money——"

"What about the canoe?" asked Ann. "I can't paddle back."

"You may, if you like, ring up the boat-house people from here and explain. Their name will be painted on the canoe."

"Thank you," said Ann, wearily. She went to a telephone booth and rang up the boat-house. Though in possession of a deposit, they were less sympathetic than the restaurant-proprietor, but eventually undertook to collect the canoe. And, once more giving her address, promised to send the money.

Half an hour later a tall, pale girl, with hard lines about her mouth and tired eyes, stepped into a third-class compartment at Teddington Station. It was empty then, but almost immediately afterwards a plump, middle-aged man with a toothbrush moustache joined her.

"Good evening, Miss Carelake," said Mr. Heeps.

Ann said "Nothing."

"Come, come," said Mr. Heeps. "You can't bluff me like that. You've had an upheaval of some sort. If I can be of any help——?"

Ann shook her head. Mr. Heeps, with a shrug, moved to the window and stood there, massive and determined, until the train started. Then he dropped back into the seat beside Ann, and abruptly asked her to marry him.

Ann listened with a hysterical desire to laugh. He was urging her to be his wife in exactly the tones he would have used in urging a hesitating customer to buy a pair of eight-and-elevenpenny gloves instead of a six-and-elevenpenny pair. He dilated on his position at Winkworkers', his prospects, his freehold house at Streatham, his furniture, his hobby—chicken-keeping, his tastes. Ann's feeble "It isn't any use, really, Mr. Heeps," did nothing to check the flow

"Think it over, and let me know on Monday," said Mr Heeps They were running into Waterloo as he spoke "I'm not one of them easily-discouraged chaps. I know what I want."

Ann slept very badly that night.

Monday morning dawned. Ann went down to breakfast looking even paler, more tired than usual. She would marry Mr. Heeps; she would become a typical housewife. She would try to be interested in hens. She would blot out the memory of that afternoon.

She had been at her counter less than ten minutes when she saw Mr. Heeps coming towards her. A wave of blind panic swept over her; she began to tremble so excessively that she had to put down the drawer she had been sorting and grip the edge of the counter. She heard Mr. Heeps' voice. "You're wanted, Miss Carslake . . . in the restroom, please."

Ann moved blindly to the little room. As she went in, Jim Grist came towards her. One side of his face was bruised, and his right arm was in a sling.

"Thank Heaven!" he said, and Ann idiotically said "Why?"

He began to explain. He had discovered, when he came to pay for their tea, that he had left his wallet in another suit, that he hadn't more than a few pence. Then he had remembered a pal who lived near. He had hurried out—and collided with, and been knocked senseless by, a two-seater. The drived had picked him up and carried him to a doctor's surgery; by the time that he had recovered it was too late for anything to be done that evening. The restaurant was closed; he had had to wait till Sunday to call there. They had given him Ann's address. And the landlady had sent him on to Winkworkes'.

Ann waited until he had finished. Then she said, unsteadily: "I'm dreadfully sorry you were hurt . . . But I'm glad you're not—not——"

"A complete rotter?"

"Yes! Only there's one thing you haven't told me. It's a question I wouldn't ask even myself at the time; I was too happy. But I've asked it since. Why did you speak to me in the first place? Because you couldn't have been waiting for a car in that lane. It's forbidden to traffic altogether. There's a notice saying so, only it's being repainted."

"Shall I tell you?" said Jim Grist. "Here goes then. I've seen you in that recreation ground half-a-dozen times, and you always looked so—so isolated and aloof that I wanted, frightfully, to have a shot at cheering you up. I'm one of the lonely ones, too. I concocted that fool story about the car because it was the first that came into my head. Now you know the truth, Miss Carslake. Shall I ring for the chucker-out?"

Ann shook her head.

"You really mean it?" said Mr. Heeps, incredulously, when he intercepted her on her way to lunch

"I'm afraid so," said Ann.

"I could offer you——"

"I know, Mr. Heeps. But I don't really care for you in that way."

"People can care for other people quick enough if they let themselves," said Mr. Heeps, irritably.

"I know," said Ann, again, and a queer, tremulous smile twitched the corners of her mouth. But she was not thinking of anyone at Winkworkes, but of a certain bronzed young man whom she was meeting after closing-time. Of things hinted rather than said—of dreams which might come true.—Tit-Bits (London).

All Square

Stories of absent-mindedness were being related in the smoking room of an Atlantic liner.

"I'm very absent-minded myself," said a hitherto silent man. "I often find names and telephone numbers written in my notebook, but can't remember what persons they represent. Recently I had a general checking up. The name and address of one man baffled me, so I wrote to him asking if he had ever heard of me, and if I was supposed to do something for him.

"He wrote back a cordial, almost affectionate letter, saying I had already done it. He was my wife's first husband."

Travel Figures Show Heavy Falling Off

Ottawa.—About 5,000,000 motor cars entered Canada from the United States last year, which is 500,000 fewer than in 1930. Nearly two-thirds of these were for a period not exceeding 24 hours, and only 700 were for more than 60 days.

The number of Canadian motor cars going out fell off proportionately to a greater extent, being only 537.000 in 1931, as compared with 747,000 the previous year. Nearly three-quarters of the American motor cars entered Canada by way of Ontario.

Seed Shortage Seen in Russia

Collection Programs Are Reported 50 Per Cent. and More Delayed

Ottawa.—During the past month interesting news has been forthcoming from Russia in connection with the difficulties that the Soviet authorities are experiencing as a result of poor harvests in some areas last year, suggesting that Russia has exported more wheat than was justified by the crop harvested in 1931. This information was contained in a recent statement issued by H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Apparently Russia is now experiencing difficulty in gathering supplies of wheat adequate to seed the 1932 crop, says the statement. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has received a cable from a correspondent in London stating that official Russian statistics show that, in the case of collective farms, 51.5 per cent of the necessary seed grain had been collected up to March 1, whereas the plan called for completion of the entire collection program by March 10. In the case of individual farms, seed collections amounted to only 29.6 per cent. of the plan on the same date.

Another factor of great importance in the Russian gricultural program is the maintenance of tractors and power machinery. The extensive depreciation on motor equipment in Russia has been noted by visitors to that country.

In a cable reiceived by the Bureau early in March it was stated that at the end of 1931 there were 150,000 tractors in Russia, of which number 70 per cent. required repairs. Up to Feb. 20 only 44.3 per cent. of the damaged tractors had been reconditioned.

A further cable received on March 15 stated that up to March 1, 50 per cent. of the tractors needing repairs had been placed in operating condition.

Iceland Grant Air Concession Detroit-to-Copenhagen

London.—A recent despatch from Reykjavik, Iceland, said a bill authorizing a concession to the Transamerican Air Line Corporation for air mail and passenger service between Detroit and Copenhagen via Iceland had been passed by parliament.

The bill authorized the corporation to build radio facilities and other concessionaries which would be exempt from income and property taxes as well as import duties on building materials for the first five years.

It was further stipulated the company would pay a five per cent. gross income tax on all air traffic over Iceland.

The concession was to extend for a period of 75 years, and one condition was that for the first 15 years no other American company can be granted a similar concession.

Beautification of Roads Planned in San Diego

San Diego, Calif.—Two projects to beautify the country highways and the bay front by tree planting have begun here.

The immediate aim will be to stop the destruction of ornamental trees and shrubs along the roads, Mr Fred J. Hansen of La Mesa, Calif. chairman of the planning commission said. An ordinance, passed by the supervisors last June, prohibits such destruction.

Winter is Gone

Winter is gone, snow but an old wives' tale;
Winds have forgotten it. Poplar and alder
Lean on skies in slow conflagration, colder
Than April sun. The young year grows pale.

With an ecstasy of light. Star and hill
Perplex each other, apart and together,
And in the long afternoon, gorse and heather
Are cropped by sheep of sun that stray and spill.

Here the shepherd raises his drowsy note
Darkling among birches slender like girls, and hooded,
White with May; April has faintly brooded
Among them. Swiftly the spinning mote.

Ends a mad dance, drowning above the stream.
The shepherd pipes, that his love in the dusk may follow;
And across the evening arching, the swallow
Is his flute note blown within his dream.

—William Faulkner, in Contempo.

Additional Land For Bird Refuge Plan

Raleigh, N.C.—Acquisition of 3600 acres of land contiguous to tracts previously approved for purchase in the Swan Quarter migratory bird refuge in Hyde County has been authorized by the Migratory Bird Conservation Commission, it has been announced here by Col. J. W. Harrelson, director of the State Department of Conservation and Development.

The refuge area will be consolidated by the new areas authorized for purchase and its value as an inviolate sanctuary increased. Including water areas within the reservation, the refuge will now total an administrative unit of about 25,000 acres.

Code of the Sea

The Globe (Toronto)—Recently the crews of two Canadian ships contributed to the thrilling annals of rescue work on the sea. Off the Halifax coast the ocean was in turmoil. A wrecking vessel, herself on a mission of mercy, succumbed to the fury of mountainous seas. Through the storm her distress signals reached the C.P.R. liner Montcalm; and the age-old call for help was answered in the age-old way.

Then travelling through Southern seas, the Canadian National steamship Prince David, carrying holiday-makers to more salubrious climes, struck a reef some distance from Bermuda. Haste was imperative in getting the passengers off the vessel; but there was no confusion. True to the best traditions of the sea, each officer leaped to his post, knew his duty, and did it. One boat after another, laden with men and women, pulled away from the stricken vessel, and was rowed three miles to a waiting ship. And as usual, the captain was the last man to leave the gradually listing Prince David.

The rescue off Halifax was effected by able seamanship and by the bravery of dauntless men. Down by Bermuda, with all the elements of tragedy present, other able seamen, by their coolness and efficiency, averted panic and saved the lives of all the ship's passengers. There seems to be something about the sea that develops the courage and nerve of those whose lives are spent on its treacherous surface. Britain's seamen, on many oceans and on countless occasions of peril, have brought to their country imperishable glory; and it is gratifying to learn that Canadian vessels are manned by officers and crews of the same calibre.

The World's Fastest Speed Driver

There may be some New York taxi drivers rounding street corners who hold unofficial records, but Sir Malcolm Campbell still has the undisputed title for the fastest traveling over land. Recently at the wheel of his racer on Daytona Beach, he went eight miles an hour faster than he had ever gone before. His speed was nearly 254 miles an hour.

Breaking records has became a Campbell habit. Only seven years ago he held the world's automobile speed record of 156 miles an hour; now he has clipped almost 100 miles from that. And when he touched 206 miles an hour four years ago, it was said that the brain and nerve reactions of man would make it impossible for him to achieve more than 250 miles an hour over the ground.

Sir Malcolm has two apparently incurable ambitions; one is to drive 300 miles an hour, and the other is to seek pirate gold. He has attempted both. He is 47, looks 35, and says he will be driving racing cars when he is 70. He prefers to travel by plane rather than by train. He would rather walk than ride, and he would rather sail a small boat than do either.

The man who drove a mile in less than 13½ seconds has no fondness for being at the wheel of a car in city traffic. The latter is dangerous, he believes. On the other hand, he has not been before a judge for speeding for more than thirty years.

"I was riding down hill on a push bicycle and going 27 miles an hour," he says of that incident. "A brazen cop stopped me at the bottom of the hill. I was not arrested, but only 'had up,' which is the more euphemistic term we have in England for the same thing. They had me up and fined me 30 bob. A man who was 'had up' at the same time for beating his wife got off with a fine of half a crown. From that I deduced that it was safer to beat your wife than to go fast in England."

Nevertheless, Sir Malcolm doesn't beat his wife, and he has gone fast in England. Mechanically he has progressed from bicycle to automobile, to airplane and to automobile again. He was a flier before the war, and in the war, too. A few years ago the idea occurred to him that in all the desert wastes of the Sahara there might be a smooth stretch of hard sand ideal for testing in secrecy his four-wheeled motor projectiles, and this project he abandoned after a venturesome airplane flight.—The N.Y. Times.

Airplanes To Be Used In Colonization Plan

Bogota, Colombia.—Modern transportation is to play an important part in Colombia's colonization plans in the remote but immensely fertile Caqueta and Putumayo regions of the Amazon basin near the frontiers of Ecuador, Peru and Brazil.

Two eight-passenger amphibian planes have been ordered and will be placed into service on regular runs from Bogota to the two districts as soon as army air men have completed a survey of the best routes. Although the distance from the capital to the frontier regions is only several hundred miles, intervening mountains and dense tropical jungles make the trip by ordinary means of travel one of several weeks' duration.

Variety is Keynote Of Spring Fashions

Sport Ensemble Rules During Day — Organdie New Note for Evening

London dress designers decree that spring costumes should be of the utmost simplicity for both day and evening dresses. Dresses are cut on flowing, and in some cases almost classical, lines. They reach to the ground for evening wear and up to ten inches from the ground for day wear.

Day dresses are mostly being shown in light-weight tweeds in plain colors. For evening dresses a new and attractive material known as "Angel-skin Jersey" is much in evidence. This material gives the appearance of heavy silk stockinette. In pursuance of the aim of retaining simplicity, there is little trimming on any of the clothes, and artificial flowers, which last year were considered vital to very fashionable evening dress, are no longer worn.

New Fo Evening

While organdie is already a qualified favorite for evening, the adoption of printed lawn and pique represents something different. The acceptance of pique for evening is not news.

Sporty Wear

All daytime costumes show a sporty tendency, with the emphasis on knots for country wear, heavy silks for town, bright sweaters an sweater blouse effects.

Wrap Around Suit

The woman whose figure is not qualified for the youthful type suit, the long-coated straight wrap-around suit, with belted waistline, should be a good suggestion. It has, definitely, the approval of smart houses.

Belts

Belts play an important part in the spring fashions right on through the day. Long strips of material make sash-like contrasting belts for daytime wool dresses. Sash belts feature in both beach and lounging pajamas. A twisted girdle of plain material accents a printed crepe or chiffon evening dress. Belts of self-fabric are the rule for the majority of evening dresses. Velvet ribbons encircle the waists of youthful evening frocks. Rhinestone belts enliven dull fabrics.

Patou's Blues

Patou introduces three new blues in his spring collection and calls the shades "midnight," new blue" and "flax blue."

Liberty

This season, instead of being tied down to one color, or two obvious color contrasts, in one outfit you are free to combine two, three, or four subtly differing colors. The results, as seen in practice during the winter, will be delightful or appalling according to the wearer's taste.

The Large Chiffon Handkerchief

The vogue for carrying a large and pretty chiffon handkerchief has a great importance, since it serves to supply the contrasting color note that a frock so often needs.

Handbags

In Paris at the present time the flat satchel shape daytime handbag, with or without handle, remains popular. Rounded envelopes in stitched or embroidered satin or velvet, with rounded handles of pearls are smart for afternoon.

Perfumes

Women are using the lighter type of flower perfume this spring in preference to the more exotic type of scent, according to the statement of a representative of the famous Bond Street perfumery establishment whose carillon is one of the "sound sights" of London.

English garden scents are much in favor, and this applies to all toilet accessories. The newest powder has the delicate intangible perfume of a bouquet of mixed flowers.

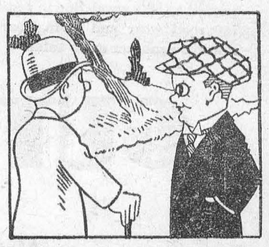
New Ringlets

The new coiffures look sufficiently inviting that it won't be long before the sausage roll steals quietly into oblivion. If it weren't for the almost excessive use of brilliantine and nifty lotions, the new hair arrangements might be likened to a blizzard, but it so happens that all the amusing little ringlets are plastered tightly to the head with various hair dressings.

For six months, French girls have been toying with their coiffures in place of changing their appearance with expensive hats and new jewel sets, and now this fancy is striking America The ringlets should be various lengths to give the modern, sky-scraper, set-back lines to the hair-dress There should be ringlets near the temples, the ears, the nape of the neck and occasionally on the forehead. Keep the effect well flattened, and change your hair-do for day and evening, or as often as you like. It's a pleasure to report this new item of public entertainment.

Smart Men

Give your husband's clothes the "once over" at this season. Men care too little for dress, and will let themselves go if their wives don't keep them up to the mark. It is the well turned out man who gets the business these days, and a wife shares her husband's business successes—also the spruce looking man is as pleasing as the fashionable turnout of the feminine members of the family.



"I suppose your little girl is quite big enough now to be a good deal of help to her mother?"

"No, she won't be any help to her mother until she can play a better game of contract."

Desert Balks Australians Seeking Fabled Gold Cave

Adelaide, Australia.—The great central Australian desert once more has vanquished party seeking the cave of gold said to exist somewhere in its vastness. Returning prospectors said they barely escaped with their lives, although sent out well equipped and armed by Central Australia Gold Mines, Ltd.

To reach the legendary cavern they had to penetrate a country inhabited by orgines, who trailed the party day after day, remaining in the darkness outside the light of the campfires at night, awaiting an opportunity to attack.

The gold hunters were within sixty miles of the supposed cave when they ran short of water. They will try again next winter.

The cave was discovered by C. A. Lasseter, a famous prospector, who lost his life in trying to return to it.

London Fog Eats Stone In Cleopatra Monument

London—Cleopatra's Needle, famed landmark on the Thames embankment is crumbling away. The monument stood 3,000 years in Egypt's sunshine, where Cleopatra saw it and Moses may have known it, but fifty years of London's fog and damp have been too much.

Sulphuric acid, which forms in the air when chimney smoke mixes with fog, eats into the stone. Plans to save it include a suggestion that it be given a monthly bath with fresh water.

How to play Bridge AUCTION and CONTRACT

by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

ARTICLE No. 15

Many times in these articles the writer has strongly urged the necessity of making original bids mean something.

There are certain definite requirements of bidding that should be complied with at all times, if the player wants to become a sound bidder. These requirements are more or less arbitrary and vary with the position of the bidder. For example, if you hold five hearts to the ace, king, it is a sound heart bid as dealer but if three players have passed, it is not a sound bid by fourth hand. In the same way a bid may not be sound on the first round of bidding but may be perfectly justified on the second round.

The real reason for these so-called conventions of bidding is the fact that all sound bidding is part of an harmonious whole. Each bid, if it be sound, should consider not only the bid itself but also its effect upon and interpretation by one's partner. If it tells him the truth, it is a sound bid; but if it deceives him or may be misconstrued, it is not sound. When ever you make a bid, think not only of your own cards but also of your partner and what he may do after he hears your bid. You should also consider your own course of action if the bid you intend to make should be overbid by your opponents. Have you started something that either you or your partner can carry to a logical conclusion? If so, it is a sound bid but not otherwise.

When you are dealer and bid one no trump or one of a suit, you should convey the exact information to your partner: First: In case of a no trump bid, that you have at least two and one-half quick tricks, distributed in at least thre suits; Second, in case of a suit bid, that you have a suit of at least four cards and two and one-half quick tricks in the hand, one of which is in the suit bid. Original bids should always give exact information for they are the first bids of the hand and have the chance to start partner off on the right foot by telling him what you have. This is the time you should tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. If you don't tell the truth, you are laying up trouble for yourself.

Lay a firm foundation for the partnership and you will get good results; but, if you build your house on the sand of untruth or misinformation, look out, for trouble is sure to result.

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win all the tricks against any defense?

Solution: Z should lead the king of clubs and A must discard. He cannot discard the king of diamonds or Y's jack will be good, so is forced to discard the four of spades. Y should now discard the jack of diamonds and B must also discard. He cannot discard the jack of hearts or Z's eight will be good, so is forced to discard the seven of spades. Z now leads the jack of spades, Y overtakes with the king and makes the balance of the tricks.

This forcing of discards is the so-called "squeeze" play and, as both A and B were forced to discard, it is a good example of the "double squeeze."

Hearts are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win six of the seven tricks against any defense?

Solution: Z should lead the queen of diamonds and trump in Y's hand with the jack of hearts. A should discard the four of spades and B follows suit. Y should now lead the six of hearts, B should play the seven and Z the ten. A should discard the nine of clubs. Z should now lead the king of hearts and A is again forced to discard. He cannot discard a club or Z will lead a low club, place A in the lead and thus force him to lead a spade. Y will win two spade tricks, on which Z will discard one diamond and one club Y will then lead a club, which Z will win. On the third trick, therefore, A is forced to discard the nine of spades. Y should discard a club. Z should now lead the six of diamonds. A's discard is immaterial. Y should discard his last club and B must win the trick. As B has nothing but spades left in his hand he must lead spades up to Y, who thus wins the rest of the tricks.

Atoms Weighed In 2-Ton Scales

New Scientific Instrument Records Minute Particles

New York, N.Y.—Completion of a two-ton scales which weighs single atoms at the Bartol Foundation, Swarthmore, Penn., is announced by the American Institution of Physics. An atom weighs about one sextillionth of an ounce. Yet this invisible bit of matter swings the pointer of the new scientific instrument about half an inch. as much as flopping a pound or more of meat upon a butcher's scales.

The pointer is a stream of electrified atoms, called ions, shot out of a vacuum tube into a magnetic field between two immense magnets, whose size accounts for the great weight of the scales. It works like the spray of a fountain. The atoms rise into the magnetic field, curve over to one side and fall straight down. They are caught on a photographic plate.

The heavier particles shoot higher and curve wider, so that they fall farther out. Thus a "fat" atom will land farther out on the sensitized plate than a "lean" one. Each one will leave a black mark where he strikes. The distances between these black marks shows the varying atom weights just like the lines on the butcher's scales.

Whether there are "fat" and "lean" atoms is not certain, but the differences in weight have been proven beyond a doubt. The latest was discovery of hydrogen twice as heavy as ordinary. Several kinds of gold atoms have been found. The scientific term for the weight differences is isotopes. The fat and lean weights all are due to differences in the composition of the nucleus of the atom. The discovery of these differences and their actual weighing is one of the world-wide scientific plans for breaking into this baffling nucleus. Out of it is expected a pandora's box of tricks, useful rather than pesky. One is hope for power to operate engines, another more and better synthetic products, and the oldest dream of all—alchemy.

Landing Field Magnetized To "Draw" Flyers in Fog

Dayton, Ohio.—Landing fields like huge magnetized bulls' eyes drawing planes to their centers may be the result of experiments at Patterson Field here under the direction of the Army air corps.

Two installations consist of a series of cables laid in concentric circles beneath the surface of the landing field. Electric currents establish a magnetic field which extends five miles from the center. A pilot, flying blind in fog and seeking a landing, will pick up in his headphones a dash-dot-dot signal informing him that he is in the vicinity of the airport.

If he is headed toward the center of the airport, a visual indicator will point to zero; if to the right or left the indicator will swing accordingly. When the flyer crosses the boundary line of the field, the auditory signal changes to an uninterrupted dash sound. A dot-dot-dash signal informs him he is within the field. He noses down gradually.

A dot-dot signal warns that he is within the zone where he should level off, and as the signal grows sharper he pulls slowly back on the stick for contact with the ground.

One of the installations at Patterson Field is a miniature and has been useful for experimental purposes. The full-sized installation is incomplete..

Unthrifty Pigs

Worm infestation is frequently the cause of pigs not doing well. A few worms in the intestines or in the lungs of a pig may not cause any noticeable symptoms, but many worms will bring on all the evidence of unthrift. The young pig from a few days old on up to four months old, is more seriously injured by worms than the older pig. So we say protect the young pig. Both Round Worms and Lung Worms cause pigs to cough. This symptom should be regarded with suspicion, as indicating the presence of worms if the pigs are unthrifty and not making satisfactory gains. Oil of Wormseed is one of the most satisfactory drugs to use in removing Round Worms. Pigs must be very hungry to take Oil of Wormseed, which may be given in the feed. See Ontario Bulletin 340 "Parisites to Swine." Pens should be thoroughly cleaned up and then kept as clean and dry as possible. Sanitary conditions will prevent in a large measure re-infestation, which takes place when the pig swallows the infective worm egg. As a matter of interest I mention that the large Round Worm of Swine is capable of producing 20,000 eggs a day, each of which will develop into a worm should it find its way into the intestine of a pig. To destroy the worm eggs, maintain sanitary conditions and scald the pen floors. This is important, no eggs o worms. Hot water is a cheap disinfectant and the best worm destroyer. Apply it freely to the pen's floors.

Soviet Peasants Reported In Need in Grain Shortage

Riga, Latvia—Reports from Miscow say that 40,000,000 Russian peasants, affected by a failure of the harvest in various parts of Russia last fall, will require food relief, with a resulting interference to the Soviet government's spring grain program.

In the Ukraine in particular the backwardness of preparations for the spring sowing is causing anxiety, the reports said, with not more than half of the grain required for sowing now read. Joseph Stalin ordered 1,000,000 tons of grain sent to the distressed regions last month, the reports added.

Plants and trees will be ordered jointly by the cities at wholesale prices. Five varieties of shade trees have been recommended by the Texas forestry service as suitable for planting—the Chinese elm, green ash, American elm, silvery maple and honey locust.

Masses of Silk From Old Bottles

Scotland Find Use for Broken Glass—New Material Proof Against Rats

This is a romantic story told about broken bottles and discarded bottles. When the Crystal Palace was given birth in the reign of Queen Victoria a record event in the history of glass took place, but since that time science has marched undauntedly forward, groping for the mysteries and possibilities held by Nature, but hidden from the ordinary eye. Hours of experiment were spent in ferreting the possibilities of glass and its uses and now the message is broadcast from Scotland that mountains of silk are being spun daily and fashioned from the remnants of broken glass bottles.

Resists Vibration

The uses to which this material is designated is for insulating purposes, and electricians, engineers, railway companies. shipbuilders, etc., welcome the arrival of this new fabric, which is particularly efficacious in resisting vibration. The old bottles are tossed into a furnace, medicine bottles, scent bottles, wine bottles, in fact, every kind of bottle, with the exception of the colored beer and whiskey bottles.

After the bottles have been shovelled into the furnace and melted, the molten liquid is then allowed to flow from the furnace by a series of perforations, minute holes. Revolving drums operated by girls holding glass rods, who gently touch one of the perforations, drawing forth a thin thread of redhot melted glass. With a deft touch they attach the thread to the revolving drum and, viola—the glass continues to wind itself from the furnace to the drum in a long continuous thread. It is swiftly done, very simple. When sufficient silk has been wound on the drum the thread is cut and the long skeins are taken to the drying room.

Mountains of Silk

Layers and layers of varying thickness are piled up and the enormous snowfall of glass is patted, cut into lengths and packed like mattresses, then teazed out again to form long gossamer veils. Granted, the threads are not very thick, truth to tell, they are about half-a-thousandth of an inch in diameter, or, in other words, width and texture as fine as a spider's web.

Another advantage in the manufacture of glass silk is the fact that vermin, such as rats, etc., abhor glass silk, and glass silk has put a barrier against all vermin. Also the white ant in the tropics has little love for this type of table delicacy. It is sound proof as well as vibration proof and the future of this mysterious fabric is still in the making, with a rosy horizon line as a promise of future vitality.

Trip to City Takes Farmer 37 Days

Adelaide, S. Aust.—A visit to Adelaide, after an absence of four years, cost Mr. Wilfred Steele, manager of Yeeda "station" in the northwest of Australia, 28 days motoring and nine days in a train in order to reach his destination.

Yeeda station is 25 miles from Derby (Western Australia), the largest cattle-shipping port in Australia, and 2815 miles from Brisbane.

Traveling by motor from two to 320 miles a day, along the Fitzroy Valley, the sole road into the Northern Territory, Mr. Steele and a companion passed through three stations, carrying from 80,000 to 100,000 sheep.

The first rains the motorists encountered bogged the car for nine hours, and later on they were marooned for nine days near Victoria Downs station. During the nine days, when 17 inches of rain fell, the travelers covered the car with canvas, converted the seats into bunk and read by the spotlight until they ran out of provisions, and had to get replenished at a station.

Canada's Maple Sugar Season Gets Earliest Start in 11 Years

Montreal—Announcement is made by the Pomological and Fruit Growing Society of the Province of Quebec that the 1932 maple sugar season is at hand. Prevailing frosty nights and sunny days with unusually low temperature has brought the earliest start for Quebec's maple sugar industry in eleven years, although successful experimental tapping was reported in some districts during the mild spells of last month.

While some of the best maple sugar and syrup is produced in Quebec, particularly in the eastern townships, the bulk of the production of this province goes to the southern states, where it is employed in the sweetening and flavoring of chewing tobacco.

Nature has no mathematics
Such as banks and merchants use.
She cannot make her unshod feet

Nor recipes for turning

And yet it always comes.

APPRECIATION

At the last regular meeting of the Official Board of the United Church, the following resolution was unanimously carried: Moved by W. J. Cass, seconded by J. W. Stewart, that we, as a board, desire to give expression of our sincere appreciation of our pastor's evangelistic work on this charge, particularly among the younger members of the congregation, as evidenced from time to time by additions to the membership by professions of faith.

H. S. LITERARY SOCIETY

The programme of the High School Literary Society, held in the Town Hall on Thursday last with the President, Lawrence Vail, in the chair, contained two items of particular interest.

After the selections by the School Orchestra, the reading of the editor's notes and the giving of some impromptu speeches, the Principal introduced Mr. J. D. Stewart, Vice-chairman of the High school Board, who has always been much interested in shooting and in previous days a crack-shot himself. Mr. Stewart, in a neat little speech, then presented pins and badges to the successful marksmen and a silver medal to Mr. Harold Keyes, who has also taken a keen interest in the shooting. Those who received pins were: Sam Ault, Gordon Durant, Lloyd Dixon, Lloyd Pierce, Morris Wilson. Bronze, Silver and Gold Pins—Carl Barrigar. Marksmen's Badges—Carl Barrigar, Lloyd Pierce, Lloyd Dixon, Dwight Jones Sam Ault, Harold Lee, Gordon Durant, Morris Wilson.

Then followed a scene from Henry IV, the dating of which reflected credit to the students themselves and to their instructor, Mr. T. J. Hawkins, M. A., and gave much pleasure to the audiehce.

Those taking part were Jas Stuart, as Falstaff, Harry Rodney as Prince Hal, Vivian Lee as Frances, Myrna Robinson as Poins and Desmond Dixon, Mac Summers and Morris Wilson as attendants.

The next meeting, to be in charge of third and fourth forms, is being eagerly looked forward to because, although part of the school work, these meetings give the students an opportunity to develop their dramatic, literary and musical talent.

HY. BESSIN ENTERTAINS HIS HOCKEY TEAM

The members of the Bessin's Buzzers Hockey team, Winchester District Champions and holders of the Melvin Trophy, were guests at a banquet in Ottawa given in their honor by their manager, Hyman Bessin, at the residence of his mother, Mrs. R. Bessin, 30 Beechwood Ave. The party left Winchester yesterday afternoon and proceeded to Ottawa where they had their pictures taken at the John Powis Studio Supper was served at 6 o'clock at Hy. Bessin's family home. Those assisting at the supper table were the Misses Tessie Bessin and Jeanette Peters. After several impromptu after-dinner speeches, "Punch" Gemeroy entertained with a comedy song. Harry Goldman, Abe Palmer and Joe Barrett, personal friends of Hy. Bessin, entertained the champions to a humorous song, "I can get it for you wholesale," which was well received. The evening was spent in a pleasant manner, light refreshments being served before returning to Winchester at midnight.

Those making the trip were George Corry, Harry Williams, Ray Brown, Cecil Crowder, Hugh Slater, Archie Collison, Clifford Summers, Art. Hitsman, Keith Summers, 'Punch" Gemeroy, Gordie McDonald and Claire Carkner.

WINCHESTER PRESS

AN OWL CAME THROUGH

There was some excitement at the home of Mr. R. B. McQuaig, Main Street, this morning, that might have caused a superstitious person to imagine that the very devil himself had got loose. A noise in the stove pipe of fluttering wings that came from the chimney to the stove, caused the family to wonder what in the world had got loose. Finally they determined to investigate, and when the noise got near the stove the pipes were taken apart, and out dropped a big owl. The poor bird is now in the land of the spirits, and the family restored to normal. But they don't want any more owls coming down the stove pipes.

WILLIAMSBURG WEDDING

A quiet Easter wedding was solemnized at the Lutheran parsonage, Morrisburg, at 4 o'clock on Easter Monday, when Ada, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Whittekar, of Williamsburg, was united in marriage to William Cecil Hanson, son of Mrs. Blanche Hanson and the late John Hanson, of Matilda. Rev. W. A. Mehlenbacher officiated and the couple were attended by Miss Ethel Hanson, sister of the groom, and Flyd Whittekar, brother of the bride. The bride was prettily attired in a brown georgette dress with other accessories to match. Following the ceremony the bridal party motored to Spencerville to the home of Dr. and Mrs. P. A. MacIntosh, uncle and aunt of the groom, where a wedding supper was served to immediate relatives and friends. The happy couple will reside in Matilda where the groom is a promising farmer.

ROBERT McKENDRY

Robert McKendry, life-long resident of the Ottawa district and a prominent farmer of Metcalfe for many years, died Sunday at his home in Metcalfe after a lengthy illness. Mr. McKendry was born at Vernon, Ont., 80 years ago, and spent the early part of his life there. After his marriage to Ellen Miller of Williamsburg, he moved to Metcalfe and started farming. For the past 12 years he has been retired and has been living in the village of Metcalfe. His wife predeceased him six years ago.

Surviving are three sons, William, of Russell: Hamilton and George, of Metcalfe; one sister, Miss Margaret McKendry, Metcalfe; one brother, William McKendry, Los Angeles, Cal. The funeral took place on Monday, March 29, and the service was held in the Metcalfe United Church. Rev. F. L. Jobb conducted the service. Interment in Springhill cemetery.

GOOD-FRIDAY GATHERING

Cass Bridge School House was filled to capacity on Friday evening last, when the members of the Sunday School and their friends rallied to a service that proved to be one of the most inspiring held in years.

Rev. J. A. Waddell led in a service of song, the hymns chosen being in keeping with the Good Friday and Easter occasion.

The Junior Choir of the School under the leadership of Mrs. D. Stanley rendered a beautiful little chorus, "Easter time is here" while Miss Geraldine Summers and Mr Ollie Summers gave two appropriate selections which were greatly appreciated.

Mr. Waddell referred to the significance of the season and its relation to the life of all present. It ought to be a time, he said, when each one should face up to that question, "What will you do with Jesus" He brought a most heart-searching message to parents and teachers and challenged all to do more intensive personal evangelism.

At this point Mr. Waddell called on the Rev. John Ross, of Salem, Oregon. In extending a warm welcome to the speaker he said Cass Bridge School was proud to welcome him, as under the influence of this school he had been led to consecrate his life to Christ and later to the service of Christ and His Church. Mr. Ross expressed his delight at being present and was in quite a reminiscent mood. As he talked one could visualize the old scenes. He recalled the lives of men and women in the community who had left indelible impressions on his life for good. It surely was a source of great encouragement to the teachers and workers as they listened to his inspiring message. Mr. Ross is now in charge of some financial undertaking for the Methodist Episcopal Church. This work brought him to Watertown Coming so near to the old home he decided he would seize the opportunity and visit the Hogoboam family and others once again. All were delighted to greet him. In behalf of the School the genial Supt., Mr. James Patterson, conveyed in kindly terms the thanks of all present to Mr. Ross and Mr. Waddell for their helpful and stimulating messages. At the close light refreshments were served by the ladies. At the Sunday School session on Easter Sunday there were forty present. The Superintendent and his loyal staff of workers are greatly encouraged and are planning for more aggressive work in the interests of the Sunday School.

Helene Madison, 17, of Seattle, broke the world's record for women by doing a mile in 24.25 in a Bronx pool. She holds two U. S. titles.

BESSIN'S WIN

Bessin's Hockey Team ended the season with a victory when they defeated the Winchester All-Stars by a score of 3 to 1 at the local Arena on Friday night last. The brand of hockey was good and the crowd of local fans enjoyed every minute of it, judging from their cheers.
