R. V. Gibbons, 52, Injured in Collision of Cars on Highway.—A Well-Known Figure in Lethbridge For 28 Years.

(Lethbridge (Alta.) Herald)

The death, from injuries received in an automobile accident early Tuesday morning (July 31) of Richard Vincent Gibbons, better known to his intimate friends as "R. V.," came as a great shock to Lethbridge and Southern Alberta, where he had been widely known and highly regarded for many years. While it was realized that he had been badly bruised and terribly shaken up from being carried fifty or seventy-five feet in the collision that took place between two automobiles on the Macleod highway, his friends hoped that he would recover. The shock to the heart was too great, however, and he passed away around six o'clock Wednesday evening in the hospital at Macleod. Arrangements have been made to hold the funeral requiem mass at St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church at 10 o'clock Friday morning. His body will be taken east on Friday evening for interment alongside his mother and father and other relatives.

R. V. Gibbons had been to the fore in the business, political and community life of Lethbridge almost from the moment he took up his residence here in 1906. Before settling down here in the real estate and insurance business, which he had carried on until the time of his death, he had represented W. R. Brock and Company, Toronto wholesale dry goods firm, and had travelled for them from coast to coast, becoming well known to leading business men in almost every important centre in Canada. In Lethbridge Mr. Gibbons was active in business affairs for many years and owned considerable city real estate and farm property, being interested in a number of business concerns in the city. Few men were better known in Southern Alberta. At the time of his death he was president of the Lethbridge Liberal Association. From his first appearance in the city he identified himself with the affairs of the Liberal party ,and he managed the first two campaigns of the present Senator Buchanan, the provincial campaign of 1909 and the federal campaign of 1911. He had served as a returning officer in general elections and as a census commissioner. He was one of the leading Roman Catholic laymen in the city, and was devoted to the causes of his church. He had filled for a number of years the position of chairman of the separate school board and had been chairman of the board of St. Michael's hospital since its establishment. He had been a member of the Rotary Club almost since its beginning, and was a regular attendant at its luncheons and quietly and usefully worked with it in all its community movements. He was also a leader in sport activities, and was one of the promoters of the Lethbridge Arena.

Born in Ontario.

Mr. Gibbons was born in the township of Matilda in the county of Dundas, Ontario, 57 years ago. His father was the late Richard Gibbons, who died some years ago. His mother reached the fine old age of 93 and only passed away last Good Friday at Iroquois, Ontario. There were six sons and six daughters in the family: Thomas Gibbons, still residing at Iroquois; the late Mrs. McDonald of Winnifred; the late A. V. Gibbons of Lethbridge; Mrs. T. Flynn of Chesterville, Ont.; the late Edward Gibbons of Iroquois; Mrs. Jas. McGin of Iroquois; Mrs. A. W. Robertson, wife of the well-known contractor, Montreal; Mrs. V. W. Merchant, Sydney, N.S.; J. Maurice Gibbons, Picture Butte, Harold Gibbons, formerly of Maleb, now of Syracuse, and Miss Gertrude I. Gibbons, deputy sheriff at Lethbridge, with whom Mr. Gibbons resided on 14th St. W. G. Gibbons, collector of national revenue, is a cousin.

Mr. Gibbons was a member of the Knights of Columbus, the Chinook Club and the Lethbridge Country Club.

R. V. Gibbons was a quiet, unpretentious citizen. He never forced himself to the front; whatever public positions he held wre thrust upon him by citizens, who respected his outstanding qualifications as an organizer and his able business judgment. He had a devoted circle of intimate friends. They admired him for his good companionship and the loyalty that characterized his relations with them.

Ayrshire Breeders Hear Minister of Agriculture

Large Crowd Present at Agricultural School.—New Minister of Agriculture Addressed Gathering, and Other Speakers Heard.

A large crowd packed the gymnasium and the live stock arena of the Kemptville Agricultural School for the annual Field Day and Picnic of the Dundas - Grenville Ayrshire Breeders' Club. Judging competitions and addresses constituted the major part of the programme and those attending had the pleasure of hearing the new Minister of Agriculture for the Province of Ontario, the Honourable Duncan Marshall, who was the chief speaker.

Mr. Marshall made reference to his own travels through the County of Ayr, the home of the breed in Scotland, and spoke of the Ayrshire cattle of to-day as possessing beauty of form and having splendid production records as well. The dairy industry, continued Mr. Marshall, was the most important and largest industry in Ontario, and plans would be made to have its products properly graded so that each farmer may get a worth while return for his work. At the present time, many were forced to sell at prices less than was required to live on and it was the aim of the present government to overcome this condition. Efforts will be made to improve marketing conditions, and reduce expenses so that the farmer would eventually get more money for his labour. The new minister heartily endorsed the Kemptville Agricultural School and stated that he intended to utilize the school to its fullest capactity; that a campaign for more students would be started and consideration be given to reopening the girls' department, dropped two years ago. He felt that an Agricultural School such as that at Kemptville, of modest dimensions and catering to farm boys and farm girls, could exert a greater in fluence than did the agricultural colleges.

The meeting was presided over by Geo. T. Dixon, President of the Grenville-Ayrshire Club, and the visitors were welcomed by Professor W. J. Bell, Principal of the school. Dr. J. H. Grisdale, former deputy Minister of Agriculture for the Dominion, gave a most interesting account of the development of the breed from its earliest history down to the present day. Allan Fraser, secretary of the National Dairy Council, outlined the work of this organization, and Mr. Earle Ness, president of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association, briefly spoke of present day trends in the Ayrshire industry, and brought a strong note of encouragement to the breeders when he described the encouraging demand for Ayrshire cattle in many districts.

Previous to the luncheon, the business meeting of the club was held, and the following elected directors for the coming year:

Iden Merkley, Williamsburg; Hugh Bruce, Spencerville; C. B. Jamieson, Winchester; J. E. Sullivan, South Mountain; Geo. T. Dixon, Winchester; Howard Kittle. Chesterville; Geo. Gillispie, Ventnor; H. W. Graham, Kemptville; H. Cooke, Spencerville.

A request was present from the West Stormont breeders to be included with the Dundas-Grenville Club, and recommendation was made by the meeting that the request be given consideration by the executive committee.

In the judging competition for which Mr. Earle Ness, Mr. Melvin Beggs and Mr. H. W. Graham acted as official judges, the following were successful prize winners:

Men—Wm. McRoberts, Mountain; F. H. Bryce; H. M. Lee, Kemptville; Algie Wallace.

Ladies and Girls—Miss Edith Darling, Chesterville; Miss Mary McIntyre, Finch; Mrs. Geo. Walter, Mountain; Mrs. W. VanAllen, Mountain.

Boys — R. Bruce, Spencerville; Douglas McIntyre, Finch; Albert Frye, Soperton; Don C. Rausin, Soperton.

Witness at Tottenham: "The man and his wife were quarrelling in deaf and dumb language."

Solicitor: "But I understand they can both speak perfectly well."

Witness: "They can, but they are not on speaking terms."

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

Poultry Exports Double.

Reports at hand indicate that some 935000 pounds of dressed poultry were exported from Canada to the United Kingdom during the first five months of this year. Compared with the corresponding period of last year, this is an increase of approximately 537,122 pounds.

Take Out the Weeds.

Although modern seed cleaning machinery will do a great deal to take out weed seeds from grass and clover seed it will not make perfect separation in all cases. In fields for seed, weeds should be taken out in the summer so as to make possible high grades and best prices Such weeds as mustard, daisies, bladder campion, white cockle, and others classed as noxious should be removed during the summer so as to keep them out of seed crops and, what is just as important, keep them from seeding themselves down again.

Cutting Soybean Hay.

With an increasing number of farmers growing soybeans for hay it is important that growers should cut the crop at the proper time. Soybeans for hay should be cut when the pods are about half filled out. The most desirable combination of quality and feed value is obtained at this stage. Cutting should be done with the mower in the morning, after the dew is off. It is usual to leave the crop in the swath for a day or until the leaves are thoroughly wilted, then rake into windrows and allow to cure. Or it may be left two or three days in the windrows and then put into small cocks. The hay should be thoroughly cured before hauling and handled in such a way as to preserve the leaves as much as possible.

Head the Hive With Prolific Queen.

The foundation for the next year's honey crop, says the Dominion Apiarist, is laid by making sure that every colony is headed by a young and vigourous queen early in August so that she has sufficient time to produce a large force of bees before the end of the brood rearing season. To perform the duties expected of her, the queen must have ample room for maximum egg production and there must always be an adequate supply of food available for the brood she produces. Other conditions being satisfactory, strong colonies headed with a young vigourous queen in the fall, are the best assurance of strong colonies the following spring and a strong force of field bees in time for harvest.

Table Turnip Acreage.

That Ontario farmers appreciate the increasing demand for high quality table turnips is indicated in reports to the Ontario Department of Agriculture stating that, in many of the more prominent growing sections acreage devoted to this crop is larger by some 25 per cent as compared with that of last year. Sections where this holds true include Oxford, Brant, Wentworth, Waterloo, Wellington, Perth, Huron and Bruce counties.

Rains in the latter part of June stimulated planting as growers were hesitant to plant while dry weather prevailed. Approximately ten per cent is for early August and September shipment, which is 25 per cent decrease from lost year.

Federal-Provincial Bull Bonus Policy Discontinued

The Federal-Provincial Bull Bonus Policy is being discontinued in Ontario and no further inspection and grading of bulls will take place after August 1st. This announcement is made by L. E. O'Neil, assistant director of the Livestock Branch, who states that only those applications for bonus which are received at the office of the Ontario Livestock Branch on or before August 15th, 1934, can be considered for payment. His message further declares: "If you have sold any bulls subject to this policy, it will be necessary, if any bonus is to be paid, that you arrange to have the buyer send in his application along with the Canadian registration certificate properly transferred so as to arrive at this office before August 15th."

At What Stage of Maturity Should Crops Be Harvested?

Experiments by the Field Husbandry Division, of the Dominion Experimental Farms show that crops cut at the following stages give highest yields of best quality.

HAY—Alfalfa one tenth in bloom, red clover, full bloom, timothy when the bloom has fallen, grain for hay when the kernels are in the milk stage.

GRAIN—All grain crops should be cut when the kernels are firm and before the heads are too easily shattered.

SILAGE—Corn late dough, sunflowers 50 per cent in bloom, red clover full bloom, alfalfa full bloom and wilted 5 hours after cutting, oats and peas when oats are in the dough stage.

ROOTS—As late in the fall as possible.

POTATOES—When the tops are all dead.

Asparagus—A Long-Time Job.

The importance of asparagus may best be judged by the rapidly increasing demand both in the fresh and in the canned state, and during recent years also there has been a greater interest taken in asparagus culture by home gardeners as well as by market and truck gardeners. However, a word of warning is given by Mr. T F. Ritchie of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. "The in-an-out grower" is precluded from dabbling in this venture. This branch of industry is not adapted to the practice of growing a crop one year when the prospects of a rising market might be profitable, and out of it the next season if the probabilities of a lucrative return seemed poor. An asparagus plantation should last from 15 to 20 years. Asparagus can be grown on many kinds of soils, but the most desirable are those well supplied with humus, deep, rich loose and with sufficient moisture. The organic soils, such as peat and muck, are essentially humus in nature and should show a definite reaction where the addition of one or more chemical fertilizers are applied.

Feeding of Lambs.

Quality is important in lambs. Finish and weight along with breeding play an equally important part in determining quality. While improvements in the breeding and feeding of lambs has increased the quality of the finished product, there is still much to be done in order to supply the trade with what it desires throughout a greater portion of the year. Buck lambs do not please the consumers, and tend to discourage buying of lamb. For a number of years the price of buck lambs has been cut below that of wether and ewe lambs, and on and after July 2 of this year two cents more will be paid for ewe and wether lambs than for bucks. A premium will be paid for good quality, well-finished lambs up to 90 pounds over those ranging from 100 to 110 pounds. In order to get top price, castrate all male lambs not intended for breeding purposes and finish the lambs to a desired weight. This requires extra feed, and it will be necessary to grain the lambs on pasture. With the way this season is starting off grain feeding on pasture may be necessitated more than in the past. It is a good plan to pick out the earliest and fastest-growing lambs and crowd them for market. As the season advances the price may drop. Early summer sales are always at higher price than fall sales. Light lambs should be held back until they have taken on the desired fleshing. It is by paying attention to market requirements that the best returns are obtained from the flock.

SHOW HOURS CHANGED.

The management of the Cameo Theatre, Morrisburg, announces that hereafter. starting this week, they will run three complete shows on Saturday evenings starting at 6.30 and 8.30 and 10.15 o'clock, in order to give assurance to their patrons who come from a distance that they will be able to see the show. In other words, from now on, all Saturday evening shows will be continuous from 6.30 to Midnight.

The management desires to express to the people who came a considerable distance last Saturday evening to see "David Harum" and who were unable to get in, their regret at the inconvenience caused. It is intended to bring "David Harum" back for a return engagement as soon as possible.

United W.M.S. Ladies Thrilled With Accounts of Work Among Heathen.—Branch President Speaks.

A very pleasant gathering of the executive of the United Church W. M. S. convened at the noon hour on July 25th at Point Iroquois. Seventeen members joined in the dinner and social hour where friendships were renewed in the spacious tent under the lofty pines. Immediately following the lunch a business meeting was held with the president, Mrs. A. B. Allison, in the chair. Regret was felt at the absence of the recording secretary, Mrs. Stanley Knapp of Merrickville; Miss Jessie Cleland of South Mountain, and Mrs. Throop Maynard and Mrs. Merrill Foster of Mountain. Each member responded to the roll call with a memory gem or verse which was a real inspiration. Mrs. J. W. Ault, a member of the branch, was made secretary pro-tem. Mrs. J. I. Murdoch, president of the branch, was the guest of honour.

At two o'clock a large assembly of ladies listened to a very interesting programme. After a few remarks by the president, Mrs. Shaver, Mrs. Rorke and Mrs. Donnelly of Kemptville, conducted the devotion. The president then spoke of the honour of having the Branch President in the Presbyterial and then called on Mrs. Murdock who spoke for ten minutes, giving several valuable facts. Mrs. Mullin of Morrisburg then sang a fine solo. The special speaker, Mrs. Steed, wife of a missionary from Africa, took her gathering on an imaginary journey to Africa explaining all the details. She visited the missionaries, missionary schools and homes and kept her audience spellbound for an hour. The Misses Loucks of Morewood sang and again, by special request at the evening service. Dr. Barnes of Toronto, a missionary among the Indians for over 30 years, gave a glimpse of his work in the few minutes he had to spare. After a hymn, the session was closed by the Sunday school president, Rev. Mr. Knowles.

Chesterville's Hdyro Is Listed "Out of Debt"

Chesterville is listed in the new Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission 1933 Municipal Report as one of the 83 Hydro municipalities regarded as "out of debt,"—that is its local liquid Hydro assets exceed liabilities.

Public power was first turned on in Chesterville in April of 1914, since when the total number of customers has increased from 134 in 1915 to 295 in 1933; average housepower used has increased from 40.2 to 189.1; total revenue has increased from $2,795 to $12,036; revenue from domestic and commercial lighting increased from $24,767 to $282,683, and plant capital increased in value from $7,296 to $16,740.

During its 20 years of operation, Chesterville's local Hydro enterprise has piled up reserves and surplus of $43,580 These assets, amassed without imposition of a cent of taxation, are entered on Hydro books as follows:

Reserve for equity in Hydro system $17,050; reserve for depreciation on local plant $7,559; debentures paid $5,375; operating surplus $13,-594.

Chesterville lighting consumers have had their average lighting costs reduced from 8.51 cents per kilowatt hour in 1915 to 2.72 cents per kilowatt hour in 1933. Last year's Chesterville rates of 2.5 and 3.6 per kilowatt hour for domestic and commercial lighting electricity are to be compared against rates of 8, 10 and 12 cents per kilowatt hour in similar sized municipalities prior to Hydro.

Ontario's average domestic lighting rate under Hydro is 1.7 cents, including rural; that of 25 representative United States cities served by private companies is 5.7 cents; that of New York City is 6 cents.

Hydro statisticians compute that since its inception public power has saved to Ontario electricity users on their monthly bills over $600,000,000.

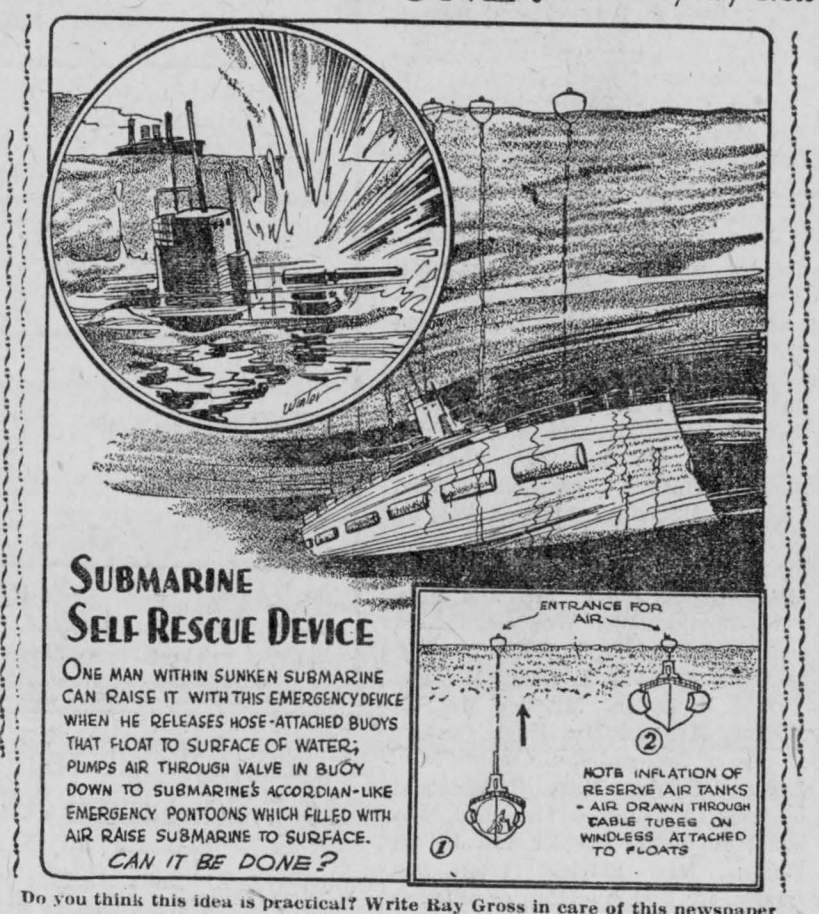

In the provincial field, the people's light and power business improved materially as to load conditions and reserves during 1933. In February of 1933 the load supplied to the municipalities reached the lowest point since 1929. Recovery was such throughout last summer and fall that in December of 1933 the Commission supplied to the municipalities on all systems the largest load in its history.

During 1933, $3,000,000 was added to Commission reserves, making a total Commission reserve of $69,000,-000, cash assets of Hydro light and power users. In addition $3,000,000 was added to municipal reserves, making total municipal reserves of $60,000,000, or total Commission and municipal reserves of $129,000,000.

Ontario Hydro users would be paying $50,000,000 more per annum on their electricity bills, according to Hydro statisticians, if they were assessed on the basis of average electricity rates in effect under private company services in the United States.

According to the latest 1933 statisticians, the provincial peak load has grown in the last decade from 669,080 to 1,511,033 horsepower; the number of municipalities served has increased from 393 to 757; total number of consumers has increased from 387,-983 to 617,000, including rural; capital Hydro investment has increased from $179,000,000 to $288,000,000; capital municipal investment has increased from $60,000,000 to $112,-000,000; miles of rural lines have increased during the decade from 605 to 9,000, and rural customers have increased in number from 7,700 to 62,000.

A BLACKSMITH'S WILL.

A BLACKSMITH with a sardonic humour drafted his will in the following manner:

I leave my equity in the business, and my car, to my son. He will have to go to work to keep up the payments.

"My good-will in the business I leave to the jobbers who sold me goods. They took some awful chances and are entitled to something.

"My shop equipment and tools I bequeath to the junk man—he has had his eyes on them for several years.

"I want at least six local farmers to act as pallbearers. I have carried them so long that I feel it is their turn to carry me for a little.

"I direct all my funeral expenses to be paid from my shop. Ask my helpers to keep track of these expenses. I never could get them to keep track of the expense of turning out a job.

"As regards flowers—I got so few bouquets when I was alive that my fellow blacksmiths need not bother when I am dead. Bury the coal shovel at my right hand; I may need it."

INJURED IN COLLISION.

When his automobile and a truck were in collision at Bank street and Carling ave Ottawa, George Weegar, of Chesterville was slightly hurt Saturday evening. The truck was considerably damaged.

According to Constable Robert Bayne, Mr. Weegar's automobile, which was turning on to Carling from Bank, collided with the truck, driven by Angelo Liberty, 162 Murray street.

A cut on Mr. Weegar's neck was treated by Dr. Randolph Barnes, 141 Carling avenue.

THE GAME OF BOWLS.

How to Skip a Rink.

THOUSANDS of words have been written about the humours of skipping a rink game of bowls. The Scots have provided us with much rare fun in this respect, but not many men can tell us clearly how to win games by successfully skipping three others in this co-partnership phase of the sport. What is wanted to win a rink game is : (1) a leader who will draw right up to the jack with his first wood and place his second either just in front of it or behind the sitting shot; (2) a second man who can draw or fire or generally place his woods where he is told to; (3) a third man who can also accomplish the deeds of the second player and can advise and use his brains in strengthening a position that is good, or reduce one that is bad; and (4) a skipper who can do all that he has been asking his partners to do, and find at a pinch a little more ability to even excel all the good work of the three men who have preceded him. A Canadian wit once said that a skip made such a noise in a game because he could never do himself that which he had been imploring his fellows to accomplish.

A good skip is he who is careful about the placement of the bowls of both sides as they come up to the jack-head. He should be for ever watching the lie of the land, keeping the score against him down to the lowest limits, and looking out for possibilities. These may come about in a dozen ways—a trailing shot, a drawing one, or a rapid-firing shot. He should never hesitate and never change his mind at the last moment. If he is prone to doing that his confréres will lose confidence in him. He should be coolness in itself and should be able to command and secure obedience from his three companions. He should not be above receiving a little timely warning from his third man, but he should rebuke any attempt on the part of his second man or leader to offer suggestions from their end of the rink. It is true they may see something he has not observed, but they should never make the fact public In passing each other along the rink, a suggestion from a leader or a second man may be taken in a whisper, but any shouting which may give the other side a clue as to what is on the board should be put down with a strong hand. The skip should be one who will inspire confidence among his companions. He should have the gift of being able to draw a shot or "fire" with accuracy. It needs a tip-top quality bowler to draw his second shot sweetly up to the jack immediately after he has used his first in smashing up the opposition.

I once saw a skip strike a most unlucky vein one night. He smote but twice—at what looked like a certainty on each occasion—but the shadows creeping over the green deceived him and he gave away seven on each occasion, or 14 in two ends. It was ill fortune sufficient to lose his side a league game. A man cannot always skittle with the same success.

To my mind the ideal skip is he who does not go in for compiling big scores by spectacular play, but he who makes a cast-iron certainty of earning one or two points. Some skips go "jack mad." They bring all their woods right up to the jack, either around it or level with it, and by so doing invite the ruthless skittler to smash up their pretty work. There is far more to be earned from the game by placing the woods around the jack head in such a manner that whatever happens the score can be only a low one, either for or against you. There is far more skill needed to just win an end than to fail miserably, as one often does in an effort to get a "hatful" of shots. One is then asking for trouble and it comes along in the guise of a ripping, tearing, firing shot which renders play merely a gamble and robs it of its skill.

The ideal skip also is he who does not lose his nerve or his courage if his side is down a few points at the outset. He should never rail at his men. They may still be gathered together and welded into something responsive to his calls. Even if fortune is dead against him, the ideal skip is he who smiles, and carries on, and hopes for a turn of the tide. Bowlers are but human, and the man who can lose well is to be honoured just as highly as the man who knows how to win.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

Conducted By
MISS HELEN LACEY, B. H. Sc.

IT IS SURPRISING WHAT YOU CAN DO WITH FRUIT JUICES.

DURING THE HOT DAYS in summer we must have something cool to drink. Cold water is undoubtedly refreshing and thirst quenching but we can hardly serve it to our guests when they drop in for the evening, or still less could we serve it as the sole beverage at a bridge party. Aside from the fact that cold beverages when made of fruit juices are more interesting to drink, they are of importance from the standpoint of minerals and vitamins.

Any combination of fruit juices will make a successful drink provided some of the more tart juices, such as those from lemons, sour oranges, apple cider or rhubarb, are present to give the necessary acidity.

A beverage sweetened with a sugar syrup is better than one to which unmelted sugar has been added, as the syrup gives a smoother mixture and is more easily mixed throughout the drink. Unmelted sugar has a tendency to sink to the bottom.

In making fruit beverages it is best to use glass, china or wooden utensils. Enamel utensils so often become chipped so that the underlying metal is exposed. This may become a real danger if acid fruit juices are allowed to stand for any length of time in such dishes, as the acid may react with the metal to form dangerous poisons.

RASPBERRY ORANGEADE.

3 cups orange juice
1 cup lemon juice
¾ cup sugar
1 cup raspberry juice
1 quart water

Make a syrup of the sugar and water. Boil five minutes. Cool and add fruit juices. Serve ice-cold in glasses. Cracked ice may be added. This recipe makes two and one-half quarts.

LEMONADE.

1½ cups sugar
1 cup water
Grated rind of 1 lemon
Juice of 6 lemons

Make a syrup of water, sugar and lemon rind. Boil 5 minutes. Cool. Add lemon juice, strain; dilute to taste with cold water, using about two tablespoons to each glass.

LEMONADE VARIATIONS.

Berry Lemonade.

To each glass of lemonade add two tablespoons of crushed, fresh or canned berries—strawberries, raspberries, blackberries or blueberries. Seedy fruits should be strained. Add a few whole berries and serve with crushed ice.

Lemon Mint.

For each glass squeeze the juice of one lemon over six or seven chopped mint leaves. Sweeten to taste, add chopped ice and water to fill the glass.

Currant Lemonade.

1 cup sugar
4 cups currants
1 cup water
Lemons

Cook the sugar and currants together until the fruit is soft. Add water, strain and cool. Allow one-half lemon and one-half glass of currant syrup for each serving. Fill the glasses with ice and water.

CHERRY DRINKS.

Cherry Lemonade.

Use twice as much cherry juice as lemon juice. Sweeten to taste. This will be a bright red colour.

Cherry Gingerale.

Use twice as much gingerale as cherry juice or use equal parts of orange juice, cherry juice and gingerale.

Cherry-Pineappleade.

Use twice as much cherry juice as pineapple juice This will make a mixed drink, blue-red in colour.

ORANGEADE.

Rind of ½ orange
1 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons sugar
Juice of 1 orange
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Pour boiling water over orange rind, very thinly shaved or grated. Add sugar, then cool. Add fruit juices, strain, chill and serve.

MIXED FRUIT PUNCH.

1½ cups water
1½ cups sugar
1 quart grape juice
2 quarts chilled water
Juice of 6 lemons
Juice of 6 oranges
1 pint grated pineapple

Boil water and sugar ten minutes. Cool and add other ingredients. Let stand one hour. Add chilled water and serve with chopped ice or ice cubes. This amount will make approximately 25 servings.

When making tea or coffee to be served poured over chopped ice, make it strong as it will be diluted by the ice.

* * * *

Serve lemon slices or sections with ice tea. Many people will prefer the lemon to cream when the tea is iced.

* * * *

Iced coffee is very delicious when topped with whipped cream or vanilla ice-cream.

* * * *

Mint is an herb, the leaves of which may be used fresh in salads, fruit beverages, jellies, conserves, ices, iced tea, sauces for meat and added minced to carrots and peas. It is also very delicious with apple combinations.

* * * *

Mint is easy to grow. A few roots planted in some unused corner will soon supply sufficient mint leaves to meet all household needs.

PANIC ON THE PLAINS

SAMUEL and Elizabeth Jeffries were twins. It was therefore should ccunt upon Elizabeth's wholly logical that Samuel hearty co-operation in his plan to take up and develop a homestead in faraway Montana. When he announced his intention, the whole family—there were four besides himself and Elizabeth—gasped. Elizabeth beamed. Samuel—or Red Top, as he was called in the privacy of home councils—was always right!

Samuel Jeffries, senior, kept books and lost hold on his youth in the dim offices of a wholesale dry goods house. He was beginning to walk with a stoop, to make unhappy remarks about his eyes, to grow gray about the temples and a little trembly in the hands.

Mrs. Jeffries kept house and lost hold on her youth doing all her own work; thus she enabled her children to take music lessons and enjoy other luxuries.

Samuel and Elizabeth together had talked matters over and decided that it was important to get the family away from the city. Thomas and Oliver were in the high school; they were neither of them very strong; life in the open would do them both good.

Samuel had been travelling salesman for a wall-paper firm and Elizabeth stenographer for the same firm. They had each saved a little money, which resolved to devote to the enterprise. Samuel was to build the little shack or cabin, put up fences and improve the land; Elizabeth was to furnish and keep the house and experiment with chickens and garden.

After coming to their decision, they took a year to prepare themselves Elizabeth studied housekeeping in the evenings under her mother. Samuel studied maps, government bulletins and books. And at last the day came when he and Elizabeth set out to make a homestead in Montana for the family.

After a few months of "ranching it' 'on their quarter section, the pioneers began to feel pretty well established. Logs hauled from the distant timber made the walls of their tiny two-roomed cabin. There was a gentle cow that Elizabeth learned to milk. A dozen hens clucked and cackled round the cabin; and the new little garden was coming on.

Elizabeth was lonely in her wide, treeless world. She did not enjoy the combined duties of cook, housekeeper, laundress, chicken fancier, dairy maid and gardener. The days when her brother had to leave her for hours to make necessary trips to the distant town severely tested her courage and endurance.

From one of those trips Samuel came home very much elated. Kingston, a rancher who lived thirty miles west of them, wanted help in putting up a shack and outbuildings. If Samuel would give him two or three days' labour, he, in return, would come with horses and plough and break the forty acres that Samuel wanted to put into winter wheat. Elizabeth was as pleased as her brother at the news. The sooner the land yielded an income the sooner the family could join them. But suddenly she exclaimed in dismay:

"You will be gone nights! Oh, Sam, take me along! I cannot stay here alone!"

"How can I, Betsey? I shall have to borrow a horse to ride out—you can't ride. Kingston is sleeping in his old sheep-herder's wagon. He has a tepee for visitors. Besides, there is Spot and the chickens. If you are afraid, though there's nothing to be afraid of, maybe we can get some one to stay with you."

But "some one" was not forthcoming. Elizabeth wept and lost heart. So when at last Samuel bade her good-bye, he tried to stimulate her courage.

"Don't be a child, Betsey. This is your 'stunt.' Now take hold of it. Mother would."

Had he only known how homesick his sister was for that mother! A brother, even your own twin, could not know everything about a girl's fears. She had been taking hold of "stunts" every day since he had first said the word "homestead;" and now to be preached to! Elizabeth turned quickly away to hide her tears, and for the first time she failed to wave to him as he passed out of sight over the rim rock.

The sun set that night in an unusual splendour of gold and purple, but Elibzabeth was blind to its beauty. She was vexed with her brother and vexed with herself.

The next morning seemed unnaturally sultry. A thick haze hid the mountains, and even the rim rock. The air burned throat and nostrils. A passing rancher brought the news that forests to the south were on fire.

"But there is no danger here?" Elizabeth asked. "There is nothing to burn here except the short grass?"

"Well," drawled the rancher, "that grass might kindle something fierce. I've seen prairie fires, and they're not to be sneezed at. Yes, it might catch us if that wind doesn't let up. This'd be a pretty decent country if it wasn't for the wind."

There was no living water on the Jeffries' quarter section. A well was a luxury that must wait. The cabin roof was guttered, and two barrels caught the precious sendings of the sky. A gasoline tank held the water that Sam had hauled in barrels from town. In Spot's pasture there had been in the spring small pond from winter snows, but it was gradually drying up. The cow was beginning to sniff disparagingly at the brackish pool.

For weeks no rain had fallen. The rain-water barrels were empty except for the little left in them to keep them from ruin. The parched land had taken on desert tones. Spot bawled in her pasture. The water in the tank was warm and stale; Elizabeth, although thirsty, turned from it in disgust. The hens huddled miserably in the scant shade of coop and cabin. The thermometer indoors registered one hundred and ten degrees.

"Oh!" wailed Elizabeth in utter discouragement. "Was I ever so wretched in the city flat?"

At noon, feeling disposed to revel in her misery, she went to view the garden, redeemed from natural sod to vegetable rows by the hardest kind of labour. Passing near the fence, she forgot her curling corn leaves and shrivelling tomatoes at a sight of a more pitiful thing. In the shade of every fence post stood a wild bird, with beak open, wings drooping, too much exhausted to fly at the sight of a girl.

"Oh, you poor, darling things!" exclaimed Elizabeth. "What a land to live in!"

Truly it looked weary and dreary. Elizabeth's eyes swept the plains: cactus; sagebrush; dying grass; crisp, crackly lichnose growths among the rocks; loco weed; mineral dust; baked gumbo; a snake curled up on a ledge—miles—miles—miles of sunburned earth wrapped in hot smoke under a heated, lazy sky.

Elizabeth went back to the cabin and, flinging herself down on her cot, let her imagination loose. There was her mother in a white dress, carrying a tall glass of lemonade all a-tinkle with ice; Tom and Ollie sprawled out on the vine-shaded back porch; her father was sitting in the three-cornered park near the home flat, watching the play of the garden hose. And there at home any of them at any time could have the joy of a big, cool, white bathtub full of water, water, water!

The second night drew on.

That night Elizabeth, tired out, slept in spite of the wind, which still raged and roared. About two o'clock she woke and sat up with a sense that something new and strange was happening. Joy! It was raining. That meant the garden saved, possibly a crop of wheat even, a parched land refreshed, fresh sky water to drink, a tub bath, a big wash of clothes!

Thunder roared, lightning played, hail rattled, wind shrieked, and the rain descened. The cabin was in the heart of the storm but the logs were stout, and Elizabeth knew her house would stand. She lay down to snuggle under the clothes and enjoy the heavenly witness, when in a sudden lull—what?

The storm voices she knew, but what was that other blood-curdling, cavernous cry, if cry it were? Three times, in the abatement of the storm, the sound floated over and round the lonely cabin. Elizabeth lay rigid with fright. Then a sense of her responsibility came to her. She flung back the covers and reached for a heavy woollen wrapper.

Something struck the wall of the cabin with a force that shook it. Again came that indescribable cry, and a terrific banging and pounding on the walls of the cabin accompanied it. The next instant a window was shattered and the wind swept in a sheet of rain.

Elizabeth managed to light the lantern. Then she pulled on a pair of top boots, and cautiously opened the cabin door.

She swung the lantern out and up, and something moved uncertainly in the circle of light—a gigantic, four-legged, immense-headed beast. It emitted again its terrible cry and plunged toward her. The girl bravely stood her ground and—in another minute was sitting on the steps in the pouring rain, helpless with laughter.

It was Spot—Spot, the gentle cow, in straits most dire!

Disdaining the dregs in her pasture pool, she had broken down the gate and come up to the house, thirsty and exploring. Into one of the water barrels she had thrust her head; her horns had caught, and there she was, invested with a most uncomfortable wooden nightcap.

In her efforts to rid herself of her unwieldy encumbrance the poor animal tried to climb the cabin walls, hurled the maddening headgear against the logs and bawled into its re-echoing depths.

With the lantern in one hand and a whip in the other, Elizabeth heedless of the rain, drove the cow into a small pen that Sam had only recently finished for some pigs that he was planning to buy. The corral was stout and served to keept Spot from injuring herself until help arrived.

When Elizabeth made her way back to the house the storm was over; the wind had quieted, and the stars were clear overhead. When the morning dawned she knew that she should never "hate" the plains again.

Spot, freed of her incumbrance, soon recovered her poise, but was always afraid of a barrel The winter wheat made a bumper crop. Chickens matured, eggs multiplied, gardens grew; and twenty-four months from the day when Elizabeth had started West she welcomed the dear ones to the cabin, now enlarged, and to the wonders and loveliness of the plains.

Low prices attract attention but fine quality is the best 'bargain' when it comes to tea. Fine tea is richly flavoured, clear as crystal and healthful. Common tea is merely an indifferent beverage.

Chicago to Have Irish Pageant At Big Show

That Edward J. Scanlon stage director of the Municipal Opera of St. Louis, will be master director of "The Pageant of the Celt" which is to be presented at Soldier Field, Chicago, on the nights of August 28 and 29, is the announcement just made by John V. Ryan, author of the pageant and president of Irish Historical Productions, Inc. Mr. Scanlon, who for the last 15 years has been employed as a stage director by the Messrs. Shubert, is being loaned to Irish Historical Productions, Inc., by Mr. J. J. Shubert, who has granted him a leave of absence from the St. Louis Opera.

During his long career as a stage director Mr. Scanlon has put on a long list of musical shows and spectacles, including "Blossom Time," "The Student Prince," "Bitter Sweet," "My Maryland" and many more. He was for a long time connected with the Winter Garden shows in New York City. He was chosen by the Shuberts to go to London when Blossom Time and The Student Prince were produced in the English capital and was in full charge of the staging of these operettas. Likewise, during his stay in England he was the director general of several pageants in which thousands of persons participated. For the past five years he has been in St. Louis where he has staged an extensive repertoire of operas ,operettas and musical comedies which have been presented at the Municipal Opera of St. Louis, and witnessed by about 78,000 persons each week.

"We feel that we are particularly fortunate in having been able to procure the services of Mr. Scanlon as master director of 'The Pageant of the Celt,'" says John V. Ryan. "He is not only an able stage director, accustomed to building artistic spectacles which will appeal to the eye and to handling large ensembles of actors, dancers and musicians, but he is thoroughly familiar with Irish history and alive to the possibilities of setting forth the drama with which its episodes are replete."

A staff of five assistant stage directors and a casting director is being engaged by Irish Historical Productions, Inc. These will supervise sectional rehearsals ,each working out the dramatic details of certain scenes as these have been outlined by Mr. Scanlon from the scenario of Mr. Ryan. During the rehearsal period Mr. Scanlon will supervise all rehearsals, taking charge of the various groups as these have been developed to a certain point by the assistant directors, introducing his own ideas and making sure of the uniformity of the entire production. Later, the general rehearsals will be entirely under his charge.

The actors who will participate in The Pageant of the Celt are being recruited from every part of Chicago. An effort is being made to get into touch with dramatic groups both independent and parochial as well as with individuals who are interested in this form of dramatic expression. Mr. Ryan has asked that those desiring to take part in the pageant either as actors or members of the massed chorus, apply in writing to Irish Historical Productions, Inc., 105 West Monroe St., Chicacgo. The music committee is receiving applications from groups or individuals desiring to form a part of the chorus of 1,000 voices which, with orchestra, will provide the musical setting of the pageant.

Interest in The Pageant of the Celt is widespread throughout the United States, Canada and Ireland. It is being recognized as the largest affair which has ever been given by an Irish group in this country, and there is every indication that thousands of persons will journey to Chicago to see it. Word has been received from Boston that parties are being organized for the purpose of attending the pageant and that some of these will go to Chicago on special trains. The newspapers of Ireland are heralding the affair and there is assurance that several persons high in the government of the Irish Free State, will be among those in attendance.

MORE PREVALENT?

IN a recent issue of the Quarterly Bulletin distributed by the Department of Health of New York City, there is an interesting article which is written as an answer to the question: "Is cancer becoming more prevalent?"

It is pointed out, first of all, that it is to be expected that there will be an increase in the total number of deaths from causes such as cancer, which occur in the older age groups. As is generally known, the average expectancy of life has increased considerably, so that to-day a larger percentage of the population are in the age groups attacked by cancer.

No one has questioned the fact, but many have said that after making due allowance for the aging of the population, there has been an actual increase in cancer. The New York figures do not support this view, and the conclusion is reached: "that cancer is probably no more prevalent now, in any given age group, than it was a generation ago."

We do not think that this ends the controversy, but we do believe that this note of comparative optimism should be heard. The cancer problem is serious enough that it does not require the slightest exaggeration to focus attention upon it. But it is equally desirable that we should not become unduly pessimistic.

These New York figures would indicate that, in so far as the population of that city is concerned, there is no new force or condition which has arisen in recent years to cause an increase in cancer. There is nothing to indicate that the foods used or the methods of cooking employed by civilized people to-day are leading to an increase in cancer.

Whether or not cancer is on the increase in the population is of little interest to the person who develops the disease. To him, the one and only question of importance is—Can anything be done for me in the way of treatment? The answer to this question remains the same as it always was. The chance of cure depends very largely upon early recognition of the disease, followed by proper treatment. No one can say just how many lives would be saved by early diagnosis and proper treatment, but we do know that in no other way can these lives be preserved.

Mrs. O'Brine: "Sure, me little grandson is so precocious, Mrs. Flynn. Only three years old, come Chewsday, and dhropping bricks from the windy on to th' cops' haids already."

A slightly hilarious guest at a party embraced a woman by mistake. He apologized: "Excuse me, but I thought you were my wife."

"You're a nice sort of husband for any woman to have, you clumsy brute," said the woman.

"There," said the convivial one, "you talk just like her, too."
