HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

On Thursday and Friday night of this week Morrisburg High School presented their annual commencement. The program was very entertaining and as a result the auditorium was filled to capacity both nights. Our hhearty thanks goes to all the teachers and students who helped to make this one of our most successful commencements.

Morrisburg High School is beginning to look lean and new again. Last week the gymnasium flloor was painted and the library walls have been washed in preparation for paintings. Also many of the desks have been refinished by the students. This is only the beginning of a campaign to make M.H.S. one of the better schools in the county.

In the final square dance competition held at Prescott last Tuesday night Edward Hanson's set from M. H.S. won top honors. This set will now go to Ottawa on Dec. 2 to compete with other groups from Eastern Ontario and Quebec.

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: Mine is a unique problem. I have a very attractive sister who is married to a perfect husband, and has four beautiful children. My husband and I are horrified by her conduct.

"For four years she has been seeing another man—and she thinks no one knows! Long ago we both thought the affair would soon end, but instead, it is getting worse.

"She has everything to make her happy — a beautiful home, the latest model car, this wonderful husband, and her children. Yet she has told me she lives only for this one night a week 'to herself' as she calls it!

"How can I tell her that we know what is going on? I feel we must. Shall I? I feel so badly about her husband. I am sick over the whole thing. HELP ME."

WILL IT HELP?

You can tell your sister that her affair is no secret, and ask her whether she is willing to take the consequences which one day she must face when the truth comes out — which of course, it finally will.

She will do one of two things: Admit her guilt, and end the affair — or deny it fiercely and end it or not — but hate you cordially. Are YOU prepared to face that?

You can, of course, assure her that her "secret" is safe with you, and promise to help her in any way you can. You will not dwell on her guilt, but let her feel you understand how such things happen.

A woman cannot always keep her heart at home, but the great sin lies in allowing it to wander for so long. You can be sure that your sister from time to time has suffered agonies of remorse.

I understand how pained you are by such degradation, how you dread the shame that is bound to follow its discovery, and the effect on her devoted husband and the children. But you must make the decision yourself.

You have all my sympathy.

To "R. M. B.": I do not wonder you are discouraged. When you took your husband back, he promised to make you happier than you had ever been.

Yet now he does not take you anywhere, and spends all his leisure time at his mother's — who, you tell me, was instrumental in his leaving you in the first place, and still influences him against you.

Have another try.

Instead of begging him to take you places, try to interest him in his family. This youngster you have is at a winsome age; if his father helped you train him, he would soon discover how thrilling it is to be a parent. Can't you appeal to his pride in the child, stress how much the boy needs him, and build up a more congenial family life for you all? You will not get anywhere by nagging him, you know.

Look your prettiest when he comes home, use your imagination and your charm, and plan evenings together that will amuse him. Have him bring his men friends home, (also these brothers who like you) and make them welcome. Let your husband see what an engaging hostess you can be — he needs to be proud of you and to respect you more than he does now.

If he does not respond to these ideas, you can only remind him how much you love him, how you have counted on his co-operation, and how vastly disappointed you are. If he does not want to lose you, he will make a new effort to be more attentive. Tell him it is up to him now, for you have done all you could.

If you have a problem, tell Anne Hirst about it. Her long years of helping other troubled people have given her an insight and a deep sympathy that you can trust. Write her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

Maybe We Canadians Shouldn't Kick

Only 86 persons in Britain are left with yearly incomes of more than £6,000 ($16,800) after taxes, government figures show.

In 1939 there were 6,560 persons in this category, the annual report of the Island Revenue Department showed.

Names of the 86 were not revealed but most were believed to be persons who made their money long before the war.

The majority of Britain's 20,000,000 workers were left with the equivalent of between $14 and $28 a week, the report said.

Most businessmen in the upper grades pay income tax of 19s. 6d. on the pound sterling—97.5 per cent.

A man making the equivalent of $5,600 a year pays 45 per cent of it in income taxes.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM
by Gwendoline P Clarke

For once I feel like saying "I told you so!" Remember the news story last week about the meteorite flashing across the sky? Well, when the news broke I remarked,—"Now we can look for some drastic change in the weather." And no one can deny that we got it! Last week must surely have set some kind of heat record for late fall. But wasn't it wonderful—even though it does make it a little harder to accept the snow than if we had led up to it gradually. Maybe some of you industrious people made good use of the sunny days to get an extra spot of housecleaning done. I had other ideas. I had quite a few trips I had been wanting to make for ages—partly business, as my trips usually are—and, I thought, now is the time . . when the weather gets cold and rough I have no ambition to travel around very much, especially if I have to drive the car myself. So away I went on my round of visits. Start-ind on Sunday I was away part of the day every day of the week. However, none of my trips were very long—all within a forty mile radius. Altogether I accomplished a lot of business, met some very interesting and entertaining people, and on the whole, had a most enjoyable time. I still have to make a trip to Toronto—after that I shall probably be ready to hibernate for the duration of the winter.

It has been said that houses take on character from the people who live in them. There can be little argument against that—it is often so very obvious. For instance one house I visited was almost new and the very last word in comfort and convenience—streamlined to the very last detail. Picture windows, drapes that pulled right across, very smoothly, by manipulating a hidden cord. Hardwood floors throughout—except in the kitchen, bathroom and basement, where there was rubber tile. Four-piece bathroom on the ground floor; three-piece in the basement. And that basement really won my heart. There was the usual modern laundry—also workshop, complete with fireplace, sleeping cot, large desk, sewing machine and oodles of cupboard room. The friend who was with me said laughingly—"I can just imagine what you would do with this room if you had it!" Another attraction—the men could go in and out to the basement by the rear door, smoke a pipe or take a shower, even if there was a tea-going on in the living room.

Needless to say this extremely modern and charming home was exactly the right setting for the lady of the house, whom I knew to be a most efficient and meticulous housekeeper.

Later in the week I visited, for the first time, another home. And in regard to it I shall only attempt to describe one room—it was all that registered with me anyway. This room was very large. A picture window reached almost entirely across one end of it—and this window led out to a flagstone terrace—complete with a background of ornamental evergreens—and overlooking a ravine through which ran a gurgling stream. If I lived in that house I don't think I would ever want to move out of such a delightful room. One couldn't possibly tire of it. Inside the room there were huge oak beams supporting the ceiling which was a lovely shade of palish-blue, a pleasing contrast to the boor which was Chinese red—but the red was not too obvious because of the scatter rugs and the subdued tones of the chesterfield suite and other furnishings. There was an immense stone fireplace and a beautiful grand piano—both of which belonged to the room as naturally as a gilt frame to an oil painting. I need hardly say that the family in this home was extremely artistic—but not "arty"—if you get what I mean. This room in particular was expressive of the best form of art since it had a "lived-in look", thus creating an atmosphere of pleasure and comfort.

Did I come back discontented with out humble home? I did not. I knew that a house like either of the ones I had visited was entirely beyond our means. Certainly it was a joy to see such beautiful homes, but still what we have within our own four walls are things which we have worked hard to get; they are what the children have grown up with; every piece of furniture, every picture and ornament, every convenience is interwoven with life as we have known it at Ginger Farm—through the depression and the War years. Even now, it is often with a spirit of thankfulness that I switch on the lights, remembering the days when coal-oil lamps were our only means of illumination. Envious . . . no. Appreciative . . yes. After all to admire that which is beautiful it isn't necessary to own it.

TABLE TALKS

by Jane Andrews

If you count, among your relatives or acquaintances, a number of men who like to go hunting, you can always start a real argument over the proper methods in preparing game for the table. Individual preferences vary so widely that it is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rules.

However, there are certain general procedures that are always pretty safe to follow. For instance, all game should be dressed just as soon as possible after it is shot and allowed to cool thoroughly. The flavour, too, will be much improved if the game is hung for several days to season.

Most of those who should know about such things agree that game birds are better plucked, rather than skinned; for if the skin is taken off the meat will be drier and less flavourful. Easiest method of removing feathers from ducks and geese is to rough-pick the birds, then dip them into paraffin that has been melted in water. When the paraffin has hardened, the small feathers and down can be removed by peeling off the paraffin with a knife.

Small game animals, such as rabbit or squirrel, are always skinned; but the skin may be left on until ready for cooking or freezing.

And now, here are some recipes that have met with wide approval:

VENISON POT ROAST

3 Pounds Venison Pot Roast (Rump, Chuck or Round)
½ Cup Flour
Salt and Pepper
½ Cup Fat
½ Cup Water
6 Small Whole Carrots
6 Small Whole Onions
6 Medium Potatoes

METHOD — Dredge meat in flour, and season with salt and pepper. Brown on all sides in hot fat in a Dutch oven or roaster. Remove from heat, slip a rack under the meat, and add water. Cover and simmer 2½ to 3 hours, or until meat is tender. About 45 minutes before the meat is done, add the vegetables. Make gravy from the drippings and serve with the pot roast.

VENISON ROLL-UPS

1 Pound Venison Round Steak (½-inch Thick)
½ Teaspoon Salt
⅛ Teaspoon Pepper
¼ Pound Pork Sausage
2 Small, Cleaned Carrots
¼ Cup Flour
¼ Cup Fat
¼ Cup Water

METHOD — Pound steak with meat hammer to ¼-inch thickness. Cut into rectangular pieces, about 2 to 4 inches. Sprinkle each piece with salt and pepper. Cover with sausage. Cut carrots into strips 2 inches long and about ¼-inch thick. Place carrot strips on top of sausage. Roll and tie each with string, or fasten with toothpicks. Flour lightly. Brown in hot fat. Add water, cover and cook in a moderate oven (350°F.) about 1½ to 2 hours, or until tender. Makes about 6 small roll-ups.

VENISONBURGERS

1 Pound Ground Venison
1 Egg
1 Teaspoon Salt
¼ Teaspoon Pepper
½ Cup Milk
8 Slices Onion (⅛-inch Thick)
8 Round Buns

METHOD — Combine meat, egg, salt, pepper and milk. Knead to mix well. Form into thin patties (¼-inch thick). Put a slice of onion between two patties and press edges together. Place on a greased broiler tray and put in a preheated broiler, 2 inches from the heat. Broil about 4 minutes on each side. Serve between toasted buns. Makes 8 burgers.

HOW CAN I?

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I remove old hardened putty?

A. Pass a hot soldering iron or red-hot poker over the putty. Don't let the iron touch the glass or it might crack it. Another method is to cover the putty with soft soap and allow it to stand for several hours. It can then be removed with any sharp instrument.

Q. How can I refreshen wilted vegetables?

A. Add a slice of lemon to a pan of water and soak the vegetables in it for about a half hour. This is particularly effective for spinach, lettuce, and parsley.

Q. How can I remedy a hairbrush which seems too soft after washing it?

A. Dip it into an equal mixture of milk and water; then dry before the fire or in the sunshine.

Q. How can I successfully measure molasses?

A. Grease the cup lightly before measuring the molasses, or dip it full of flour and then empty it. Either of these methods will enable every drop of molasses to come out of the cup without sticking.

Q. How can I prepare a good home-made paste?

A. Take one-half cup of lump starch and mix it thoroughly with the same quantity of flour. Stir this thoroughly into one quart of water and boil slowly for a few minutes.

Q. When should grape vines be transplanted?

A. They should be transplanted in late November. Cut back to about three feet from the ground and leave with as much of the roots as possible.

Q. How can I treat new kid gloves?

A. The new gloves should be warmed before putting them on for the first time. This makes the leather more pliable. A little talcum sprinkled on the inside of the glove will also make them easier to put on and take off.

Q. How can I add a different flavor to apple sauce?

A. Fold stiffly-beaten egg whites into the sauce. Chill, and before serving, garnish with chopped crystallized fruit.

Hints That Others Have Found Helpful

With rubber tires so widely used on the farm, we did away with the hand tire pump. We mounted an old refrigerator compressor, no longer usable for refrigeration but adequate for use as an air pump, onto a length of plank, with electric motor connected by a V-belt for driving it. We made the outfit portable with a pair of small wheels at one end of the plank and an old lawn mower handle at the other. We can use it wherever there is a plug outlet for electric current. A small gasoline engine could make the pump usable without depending upon electricity.

To store sweet potatoes so they will remain firm and not sprout, I clean them, then dry thoroughly and store them in a basket between layers of oats. I keep them in a dry, warm place.

When putting grain in a granary or when taking it out, I like to get closer by backing to the window to make shovelling easier. Usually hired help backs up until the truck hits the granary, often breaking the siding. To end this, I nailed a 2" by 12" plank in a vertical position on the granary for the truck box to strike against when backing. Thus no damage is done to the building when grain is loaded.

The inside of our barn is much brighter since we painted the walls opposite the windows a light colour. In the spring after I have finished my painting in the house, I put together all of the light-coloured paints for use in the barn. If this is not enough, I may buy a little white paint to add to it. Besides making the walls lighter, the paint preserves them. We find that dust and cobwebs don't stick so easily to a painted wall.

To keep my 300-gallon, wooden spray tank from drying out during the winter months, I put in the tank about 100 gallons of water to which I add from 50 to 100 pounds of flake calcium chloride as an anti-freeze. This liquid can be put in wooden barrels during the summer and used again from year to year.

A worm met another worm coming up from the ground and declared, "You're very beautiful and I'd like to marry you." "Don't be a dope, was the reply. "I'm your other end."

Attractive Gift That's Easily Made

If you saved your Christmas cards last year, with some pinking shears, a punch, some yarn and a needle, you can make some most attractive boxes for small gifts. These will be intriguing little packages to whet the interest of all your friends. Marmalade or jam in small glasses make very welcome gifts and take on a festive air when placed in one of these little boxes.

Just select six cards as nearly the same size as possible. Cut to exact size with pinking shears—taking off the name of the sender—and punch around the edge with holes about one inch apart. Be sure to choose a perky "Hello" or "Hi" card for the lid. That adds merriment to the opener.

Then sew the punched cards together to form a box with the varicoloured yarn and you have one of the most attractive little gift boxes you can imagine. No one likes to throw pretty cards away and this is an enjoyable and profitable way to make use of them. You'll find that your friends are pleasantly surprised with the idea. These little boxes make different containers for box socials, too.

Takes The Back-ache Out Of Gardening

In his one-acre garden in the Yorkshire mining village of Middlecliffe, 72-year-old, ex-miner, Arthur Guest has fulfilled a gardener's dream. He has evolved a no-digging system which not only works but is paying handsome dividends.

So successful are his methods that gardeners from many parts of the country have been visiting his land to gaze enviously at his outsize broad beans, onions, carrots, peas and other vegetables. For Mr. Guest has been quietly running his no-dig garden for nearly four years, although some people thought him a crank at first.

He will tell you that his method is no secret. He's taken the backache out of gardening by a simple method based on the well-rotted vegetable compost which he places around the seeds as they are set and at intervals as they grow.

The compost not only nourishes the soil and kills weeds before they can ruin crops, but it encourages worms which aerate the land. Seeds are sown into the compost layer, and if weeds show signs of flourishthey are promptly smothered with a mulching of sawdust. And Mr. Guest never, never digs. His ideas are being tested by horticultural experts who declare that results achieved compare with those obtained by more normal methods.

WHAT JUST ONE VOTE DID

One vote changed the rate of a nation, perhaps Europe—and who knows—the world? In 1875 the National Assembly of France met to decide whether France should be a republic or a monarchy. Jules Leureant, a monarchist, suddenly became very ill and had to be hurried home. After he left a poll was taken, and France remained a republic by one vote!

There is no doubt that the illness of Jules Leureant at that hour has affected all our lives.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it absolutely required that a person give the reason for declining an invitation?

A. It is not obligatory that one do so, but unless it is a very intimate reason, one should explain why, and with regret. Otherwise, the hostess might resent a curt, "Sorry, I cannot accept," and might be discouraged from repeating any invitations in the future.

When ice cream is served with pie (a la mode), should this be eaten with a spoon or fork?

A. The fork should be used.

Q. Should a girl ever send a gift to a man whom she likes?

A. Not unless she is engaged to be married to this man, and then the only gifts necessary are at Christmas and on his birthday.

Q. Is it considered good manners, when a guest has finished his meal, to push his plate away from him?

A. This is very ill-mannered and would seem to give the impression that he's had just about enough of that meal and is glad he has finished. The dishes should never be moved.

Q. Does etiquette demand that men give up their seats to women on crowded buses and trolleys?

A. No, this is not required anymore, except when the woman is elderly, has a baby in her arms, or is a very good friend of yours.

Q. When introducing two persons, is it proper to say, "Mrs. Johnson, this is Mr. Norton; Mr. Norton, Mrs. Johnson"?

A. No; it is altogether unnecessary to mention the names twice.

Q. When passing a salt or pepper shaker at the table, should one place it on the table or hand it directly to the person who asked for it?

A. It is less awkward to put it down on the table and let the person pick it up, than to try to hand it directly to him.

Q. Is it necessary for a woman who is travelling alone to prefix "Mrs." or "Miss" to her name when signing a hotel register?

A. Yes, this is necessary so that the hotel attendants may know how to address her.

Q. When should the bridegroom give his gifts to his best man and ushers?

A. These gifts are usually put at the men's places at the bachelor dinner.

Q. Which is the correct form of introduction, "Mrs. White, this is my husband," or, "Mrs. White, this is Mr. Walker?"

A. The correct form is, "Mrs. White, this is my husband."

The SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. R. B. Warren, B.A., B.D.

The Stewardship of Money

2 Corinthians 9:6-8; Philippians 4:10-18.

Memory Verse: Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver. 2 Corinthians 9:7

A boy had been given a dollar for the collection. He also had ten cents. When the plate was passed the father noted that his son put on the ten cents. When he inquired of the son later he received this reply; "The preacher said 'The Lord loveth a cheerful giver.' I could give the ten cents more cheerfully than I could the dollar." There are some adults like that, too.

Giving for the extension of God's kingdom must be on a voluntary basis. Otherwise it is taxation, not giving. It is tragic that so few of us realize that all that we have belongs to God. We are but stewards. To give to God one-tenth of our increase, or the tithe is but acknowledging that we are stewards. Tithing was begun before the giving of the Law by Moses, for it was practised by Abraham. (Heb. 7:9). We owe God the tithe. Let us pay the debt. If all church members would systematically tithe, there would be no frantic appeals for funds. Not only would the church be able to run its local program and care for its needy, but it would have much to meet the needs of the heathen around the world. The man who does not give is shrivelled in his soul. He has missed the joy of knowing that, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20:35).

Paul appreciated the gifts sent to him in Thessalonica and in prison in Rome by the church at Philippi. However, he did not depend upon gifts. He said "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." Such were his riches in Christ Jesus that he could triumphantly exclaim to the Philippians, "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus:" He that is in Christ is rich indeed.

To bring this anti-aircraft gun into action calls for a full crew — skilled men trained to fight as a fast-thinking, fast-acting team. To train such a crew takes time: gun crews must know how to handle modern scientific equipment — electronics, radar, radio, telephone; men must work together with the closely timed co-ordination of a championship football team.

The Canadian Army Active Force needs men today . . . keen young men who can begin training immediately as anti-aircraft gunners. You can take your place at the side of the men who defend Canada by reporting for training without delay. Act now — and help make Canada strong.

THE CARLING BREWERIES LIMITED
WATERLOO, ONTARIO

THE FARM FRONT
by John Russell

According to experts of the United States Department of Agriculture a great many farmers are tossing away ten per cent or more of their stored grain simply by letting insects chew away, uncontrolled, after the harvest is in the bin. And those same experts claim that such wastage is by no means necessary. The inroads made by insects can be stopped by measures which almost any farmer can use.

* * *

It is estimated that if all small grain and corn could be protected from loss the gain would be around a billion dollars a year; and that's south of the border only. Add the losses we suffer here in Canada, and the total would be appaling, even in these days when big money figures are juggled around so carelessly. And while I realize that many of the following recommendations come to you too late for use this year, they might be well worth clipping out, saving, and acting upon when the time comes.

In a recent study, entomologists carefully weighed grain going into average farm storage in many locations, and then reweighed the same grain when it moved out of storage in the spring. They found that after allowing for moisture losses, insect damage had caused actual shrinkage in weight of from one to two per cent per month. Insect damage not only reduces market value of grain per bushel; it actually reduces the amount of grain.

Most insects that destroy grain will work when the temperature in the bin is above 60 degrees F. That's why damage is greater in the South than in the North. But farmers in the North have to take into consideration the fact that grain in a bin cools off very slowly and may stay warm enough for insects to work in it two or three months after cold weather arrives. So the damage may be going on when the outside temperature is considerably below 60 degrees F.

Small grain or shelled corn should be fumigated as soon as it is put in the bin. Corn left over from last year in the crib can be protected by shelling it, putting it in tight bins, and fumigating it.

The official recommendation for fumigation is as follows:

Use a mixture of one part by volume of carbon disulphide, and four parts of carbon tetrachloride. Do not attempt to mix it yourself—you'll find it for sale already mixed under some trade name. This liquid fumigant will not harm your grain as food, feed or seed.

Level off the surface of the grain in the bin to at least six inches below the top of the side walls. Use three gallons of the mixture for each 1000 bushels of small grains in tight wooden bins, twice that for shelled corn. Increase the dosage to eight gallons per 1000 bushels if the grain is in shallow bins with a large surface area.

Apply it evenly over the surface of the grain in the bin. You can use an inexpensive bucket sprayer if you chose, and you need not enter the bin. The liquid turns into a gas after it has been applied, and this gas sinks down through the grain and kills the insects as it goes. Avoid breathing the fumes, and wear a gas mask for your protection if you are exposed to it for more than a very short time.

Bins must be tight, or the fumigant won't do the job well. Tack laths or strips of heavy paper over cracks. A slatted crib won't hold the gas unless completely lined, or covered outside with roofing or building paper.

Select a still day in mild, warm weather to do the job, or wind may blow the gas away before all the insects are killed. If the grain is warm, 65 to 75 degrees F., low outside temperatures will not hinder fumigation.

Properly done, one fumigation soon after harvest will hold stored grain free of insect damage until warm weather the following spring. But, insects are busy whenever and wherever there is mild weather. They will increase in number and do an ever-increasing amount of damage during mild weather until the grain is used or sold. This is particularly true when the moisture content of the grain is high, when the grain isn't very clean, or if the bin wasn't cleaned out thoroughly before putting the grain into it.

Even grain that has been fumigated should be inspected at least once each month. Look for warm spots, or areas where the grain may be webbed or caked. Take a sample of the grain from such areas and look for small worms, weevils, beetles, moths, and kernels that are chewed or have small holes in them.

If you find that insects are working in your grain, refumigate immediately.

A new way to protect stored grain from insects for a much longer period of time, developed by a commercial company, is under investigation. It consists of applying a dust impregnated with pyrethrins and piperonyl butoxide to the grain as it goes into storage. This method, unlike the fumigation treatment, provides a residue of insecticide and has the advantage of preventing grains from becoming infested. Fumigation kills all insects present at the time, but protection ends when the fumigating gas disappears.

The pyrethrin and piperonyl butoxide mixture is well known as one of the safest insecticides in use today. And, properly applied to newly harvested uninfested grain going into storage, it may give protection from insect damage for as long as a year or more. If this newly discovered method of treating grain in storage for insect control works, without complications, it will be a major scientific advancement.

Entomologists have developed a year-round program to prevent insect damage to stored grains. The procedures outlined below will protect stored grain.

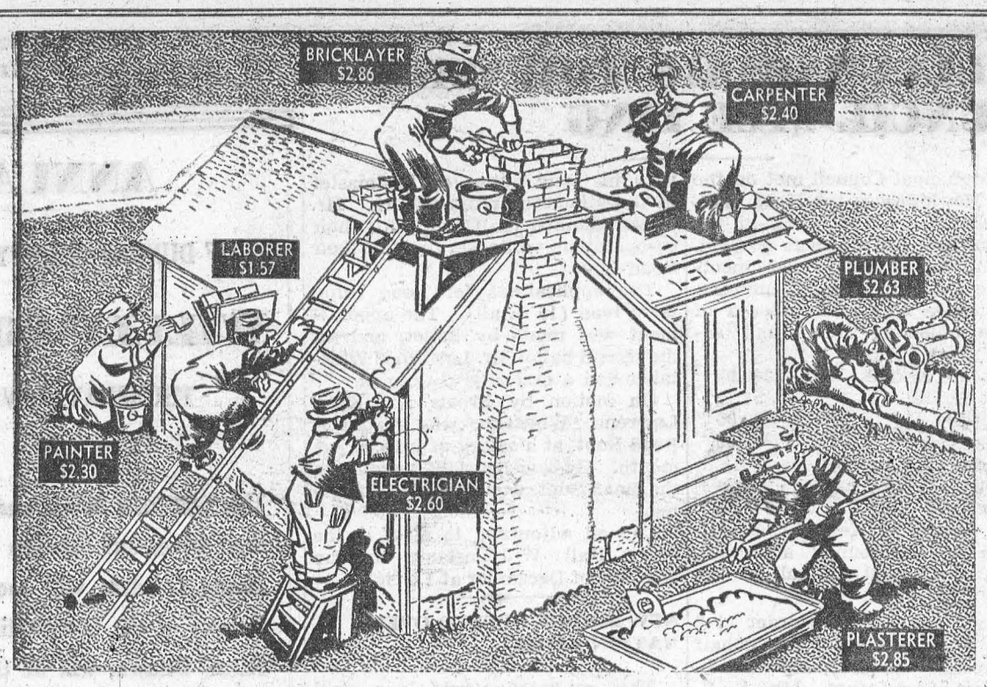
1. Construct tight bins to make fumigation easier.
2. Clean up your old bins thoroughly before refilling them with new grain.
3. Clean up trash or old grain from outside your bins.
4. Store bran, shorts, or other milled feed, and old feed bags, away from your stored grains, because they often contain insect pests brought in from the mill.
5. Spray the floors and inside walls with DDT, TDE, methoxychlor, chlordane, or the pyrethrin-butoxide mixture before refilling your empty storage bins. Apply with an ordinary garden-type sprayer.
6. Store your grain as dry as possible.
7. Have it as free from broken kernels and dirt as possible.
8. Fumigate all grain as soon after harvest as possible.
9. Inspect all stored grain at least once each month—and fumigate it again if evidence of insect damage shows up.



Building's Costly Over There, Same As Here—If you've got enough dough to get over the hurdle of the new credit restrictions, you'd still better recheck your cost estimate. Recent wage increases won by nearly 30 per cent of union construction workers in 85 major cities in the United States have pushed up the average hourly scale of all union construction workers to $2.32 an hour.

SPORTS &
by A SIXBIT CRITIC

We see by the papers that in at least one Ontario town the ladies have taken avidly to the ancient sport of shooting pool—and not doing so in the seclusion of private residences, club rooms, Y.W.C.A.'s or the like either, but right out in public pool rooms, or "billiard academies" as some of the higher-class joints used to try and call themselves in the olden days.

* * *

(The only difference we ever personally noticed between a pool room and a billiard academy was that the latter had a minimum fee of five cents per cue, whereas some of the former charged a rate of two-and-a-half; but that is entirely by the way.)

Anyway, with the entry of the fair sex into the game, there disappears just about the last haven of safe refuge for the mere male; and whether or not this will prove to be a good thing for humanity, time alone will tell. Many of you will recall the time when a man could go to a bowling alley, prize fight, burlesque show, wrestling match, pool room or even a tavern without exposing himself to any of that refining and ennobling feminine influence you read so much about. But now it seems as if those days are gone forever; and maybe it is just as well, although we wouldn't wish to lay very heavy odds that it is.

All of which will serve to introduce a little news of the latest developments in the game on the other side of the briny, where they take their pool and billiards seriously. And it would appear that, over in England, all the snooker fans are waiting breathlessly to see if, during the coming season, some expert will come out with a maximum of 147. This, we might explain for those who did not have the benefits of a mis-spent youth, is equivalent to rolling 300 in ten-pins, or 450 in five-pins. In other words, if you score 147 in snooker, you've hit the jackpot, and cannot go any further.

So far, nobody's done it — although there are said to be half a dozen experts, scattered throughout the world, capable of the feat, some afternoon or evening when everything happens to be breaking right.

Most likely prospect is said to be Joe Davis, an English pro. For 20 years Davis was undefeated champion of the world at snooker, or Snooker's pool to give it the full and proper name. Then, last February — as reported in this column, a young French-Canadian from Winnipeg, George Chenier by name, threw snookerdom into a tizzy by not only beating Davis, but by setting a new record.

Although the old game of pocket billiards—or 15-ball pool—is still highly popular in Canada, there are indications that snooker is gradually replacing it in public favor. And with the advent of the ladies—mentioned earlier—it seems probable that there will be more and more snooker played. Unlike billiards it is not a test of mathematical exactitude in the application of dynamics, as one writer puts it, but an adventurous game in which anything is likely to happen. And that feature, alone, should make it suit the women to a "T."

* * *

It requires less concentration. Fluke shots, which are a source of disgust to the earnest billiards man, are part and parcel of snooker and lend enchantment and gaiety to the game. One can become fairly good quite soon and go on improving all the time. That is, until you get into the professional class, where the 147 break is the only limit.

As for the 147 break—perfection—here's all that you have to do in order to achieve it.

* * *

To do it each of the 15 red balls (each scoring one point) must be put down alternately with the black (scoring 7). When this has been accomplished and the black set up for the last time the other coloured balls must be taken in correct order—yellow (2), green (3), brown (4), blue (5), pink (6), and then black. If this is done without a single mistake, the 147 break is made. It means, of course, that the player must start off before the opponent has potted any of the balls. There are 22 balls, including the cue ball, and this is another respect where snooker differs from the 16 in pocket billiards.

Sounds quite simple, doesn't it, O.K. Just grab yourself a cue—and a table—and go and do it. But better find yourself an all-male pool hall for the attempt, if such a thing can be found. Otherwise, just as you're making that final shot, a mouse is liable to run across the floor, and in the flurry of feminine excitement bound to follow, your record will be all shot to aitch and gone.

Electric Fishing

To rid a lake of pike which prey on trout, the British have been experimenting with electricity. Ultra-violet lamps are put in the lake at night. There is a faint glow, because more than invisible ultra-violet rays are emitted. Fish investigate. Under the ultra-violet rays their scales glow. More fish are attracted by this secondary glow. When a current is switched on copper plates about twenty feet apart on either side of the lamp all the fish are stunned, so that fishermen can lift the pike with nets. When the current is turned off, the other fish, including the trout, recover and swim away.

IN MEMORIAM

BAKER—In fond and loving memory of a dear son and brother, Walter, who passed away November 23rd, 1949.
There's an open gate at the end of the road,
Through which each must go alone,
And there is a light we cannot see
Our Father claims His own.
Beyond the gate our loved one
Finds happiness and rest,
And there is comfort in the thought
That a loving God knows best.
—Mother, Dad, Brothers & Sisters.

HALL—In loving memory of a dear husband, Alfred Hall, who passed away November 22, 1947.
So kind and sincere and kind in heart
What a beautiful memory he left behind.
—Deeply missed by his Wife and Family.

H. E. SCHULTZ

Herman E. Schultz, 65, masonry contractor here for 40 years, died before medical aid could be summoned after he fell down a flight of stairs at the home of Rudy Litwiller where he boarded. The accident occurred about 3 a.m. Sunday morning when Mr. Schultz for some unknown reason was going down the steps.

Jerome Litwiller, one of Mr. Litwiller's sons, upon hearing the noise, got up to investigate and found Mr. Schultz lying at the bottom of the steps unconscious.

Mr. Schuultz was six feet four inches in height and apparently fell head first down the stairway.

He was a member of the New Hamburg Citizens' Band for many years.

He was married to Pauline Margaret Koerber who predeceased him in 1936. Surviving are one son, John C. Schultz, principal of the Morrisburg High School; one brother, Charles, Winnipeg, and two sisters, Mrs. Ella Meagher and Mrs. Clara Moshier, both of Portland, Ore.
