Maggie Lee;

OR, GRAHAM THORNTON'S PUNISHMENT.

Much the elder Mrs. Thornton marvelled at her absence, and once when her carriage was rolling past the door of the little store she bade her coachman stop, while she herself went in to ask if her favorite were ill. Miss Olivia's early call at Greystone Hall had never been returned, and now she bowed coldly and treated her visitor with marked reserve, until she learned why she had come; then, indeed, her manner changed, but she could not tell her how, on the night when Graham Thornton had cruelly torn the veil from Maggie's heart, leaving it crushed and broken, she had found her long after midnight out in the tall, damp grass, where in the wild abandonment of grief she had thrown herself; nor how in a calmer moment she had told her sad story, exonerating him from wrong, and blaming only herself for not having learned sooner how much she loved one so far above her, so she simply answered, "Yes, she took a violent cold and has been sick for weeks. Her mother died of consumption, and I'm very much afraid Maggie will follow her."

"Poor girl, to die so young," sighed Mrs. Thornton, as she returned to her carriage and was driven back to Greystone Hall, where in a recess of the window Graham sat, his arm around his wife, and his fingers playing with the curls of her golden hair.

But the hand dropped nervously at his side when his mother startled him with the news that "Maggie Lee was dying.' Very wonderingly the large blue eyes of Helen followed him, as, feigning sudden faintness, he fled out into the open air, which, laden though it was with the perfume of the summer flowers, had yet no power to quiet the voice within which told him that if Maggie died, he alone was guilty of her death. "But whatever I can do to atone for my error shall be done." he thought at last, and until the chill November wind had blasted the last bud the choicest fruit and flowers which grew at Greystone Hall daily found entrance to the chamber of the sick girl, who would sometimes push them away, as if there still lingered among them the atmosphere they had breathed.

"They remind me so much of the past that I cannot endure them in my presence," she said one day when her aunt brought her a beautiful bouquet composed of her favorite flowers, and the hot tears rained over the white, wasted face, as she ordered them from the room.

Much she questioned both her aunt and Bennie of her rival, whose beauty was the theme of the whole village, and once, when told that she was passing, she hastened to the window, but her cheek grew whiter still, and her hands clasped each other involuntarily as she saw by the side of the fair Helen the form of Graham Thornton. They both were looking toward her window, and as Helen met the burning gaze she exclaimed, "Oh, Graham, it is terrible. It makes me faint," and shudderingly she drew nearer to her husband, who, to his dying hour, never forgot the wild, dark eyes which looked down so reproachfully upon him that memorable wintry day.

* * * * * * *

Three years have passed away since the time when first we met with Maggie Lee—three years which seemed so long to her then, and which have brought her so much pain. She has watched the snow and ice as they melted from off the hillside. She has seen the grass spring up by the open door—has heard the robin singing in the old oak tree—has felt the summer air upon her cheek. She has reached her eighteenth birthday, and ere another sun shall rise will indeed be free.

"Oh, I cannot see her die," cried poor little Ben, when he saw the pallor stealing over her face, and running out into the yard he threw himself upon the grass, sobbing bitterly, "My sister; oh, my sister!"

"Is she worse?" said the voice of Graham Thornton.

He was passing in the street and had heard the wailing cry. Ben knew that in some way Judge Thornton was connected with his grief, but he answered respectfully, "She is dying. Oh, Maggie, Maggie. What shall I do without her?"

"You shall live with me," answered Mr. Thornton.

'Twas a sudden impulse, and thinking the assurance that her brother should be thus provided for would be a comfort to the dying girl, he glided noiselessly into the sick-room. But she did not know him, and falling on his knees by her side he wept like a little child. "She was sleeping," they said, at last, and lifting up his head he looked upon her as she slept, while a fear, undefined and terrible, crept over him, she lay so still and motionless. At length, rising to his feet, he bent himself down so low that his lips touched hers, and then, without a word, he went out from her presence, grief-stricken and remorseful, for he knew that Maggie Lee was dead!

The next day at sunset they buried her in the valley where the mound could always be seen from the window of Graham Thornton's room, and, as with folded arms and aching heart he stood by, while they lowered the coffin to its resting-place, he felt glad that it was so. "It will make me a better man," he thought, "for when evil passions rise and I am tempted to do wrong, I have only to look across the fields towards the little grave which but for me would not have been made so soon, and I shall be strengthened to do what is right."

Slowly and sadly he walked away, going back to his home, where, in a luxuriously furnished chamber, on a couch whose silken hangings swept the floor, lay his wife, and near her his infant daughter, that day four weeks of age. As yet she had no name, and when the night had closed upon them, and it was dark within the room, Graham Thornton drew his chair to the side of his wife, and in low, subdued tones told her of the fair young girl that day buried from his sight. Helen was his wife, a gentle, faithful wife, and he could not tell her how much he had loved Maggie Lee, and that but for his foolish pride she would perhaps at that moment have been where Helen was, instead of sleeping in her early grave. No, he could not tell her this, but he told her Maggie had been very dear to him, and that he feared it was for the love of him that she had died. "I wronged her, Nellie, darling," he said, smoothing the golden tresses which lay upon the pillow. "I broke her heart, and now that she is gone I would honor her memory by calling our first-born daughter 'Maggie Lee.' 'Tis a beautiful name," he continued, "and you will not refuse my request."

There was much of pride in Helen Thornton's nature, and she did refuse, for days and even weeks; but when she saw the shadows deepened on the brow of her husband, who would stand for hours looking out through the open window toward the valley where slept the village dead, and when the mother, in pity for her son, joined also in the request, she yielded; and, as if the sacrifice were accepted and the atonement good, the first smile which ever dimpled the infant's cheek played on its mouth, as with its large, strange, bright eyes fixed upon its father's face, it was baptized "Maggie Lee."

* * * * * * *

Four years of sunshine and storm have fallen upon Maggie's grave, where now a costly marble stands, while the handsome iron fence and the well-kept ground within show that some hand of love is often busy there. In a distant city Ben is striving to overcome his old dislike for books, and seeking to make himself what he knows his sister would wish him to be. At home the little store has been neatly fitted up, and Miss Olivia sits all day long in her pleasant parlor, feeling sure that the faithful clerk behind the counter will discharge his duties well. Greystone Hall is beautiful as ever, with its handsome rooms, its extensive grounds, its winding walks, its bubbling fountains, and its wealth of flowers, but there is a shadow over all—a plague-spot which has eaten into the heart of Graham Thornton, and woven many a thread of silver among his raven locks. It has bent the stately form of his lady mother, and his once gay-hearted wife wanders with a strange unrest from room to room, watching over the uncertain footsteps of their only child, whose large, dark eyes, so much like those which, four long years ago, flashed down on Helen their scrutinizing gaze, are darkened forever, for little Maggie Lee is blind!

They are getting somewhat accustomed to it now—accustomed to calling her their "poor, blind bird," but the blow was crushing when first it came, and on the grave in the valley Graham Thornton more than once cried, "My punishment is greater than I can bear."

But He "who doeth all things well" has in a measure healed the wound, throwing so much of sunshine and of joy around her who never saw the glorious light of day, that with every morning's dawn and every evening's shade the fond parents bless their little blind girl, the angel of their home.

The End.

EXPLORATION BY MOTOR-CAR.

Visiting Strange Places of the Earth Made Easy.

It seems only the other day that eminent explorers like Livingstone and Stanley made long journeys afoot through the interior of the then rightly named "Dark Continent," taking years over a single journey, and practically devoting their lifetimes to the objects they had at heart.

And now comes the news that Lieutenant Graetz, of the German Army, is about to start to cross this self-same Africa—the "Dark Continent" now no longer—on a specially constructed motor-car. By its aid he will penetrate easily, he hopes, into waterless regions hitherto unvisited. The dread Kalahari Desert, for instance, will be traversed for the first time in its entirety from east to west, and the "dry districts" of Great Namaqualand are to be made to yield up their secrets.

Nor is this a solitary straw showing which way the wind blows. On the contrary, there are many such, and they all point in the same direction. Lieutenant Shackleton starts in a few weeks to try to motor to the South Pole; and there are at least three expeditions being organized to attack the North Pole in the same way, although these latter, it may be remarked in passing, will find the ice conditions in the Arctic far less favorable for motor traction than will Mr. Shackleton in the Antarctic.

Then there is the French motor-car exploring expedition in the Lake Chad region of the Soudan, which set out a few weeks back from Tripoli, and a German one, which is operating in the hitherto unvisited north-eastern corner of German South-West Africa, an arid and desolate region, where food and water are alike well-night unobtainable.

The terrible Desert of Gobi, the world's biggest waste, was crossed, too, the other day, by the Pekin to Paris racing motorists. But this, of course, could hardly be said to have been done in the interests of exploration. Nevertheless, it is exceremely probable that, when the full story of the trip comes to be told, new geographical facts will come to light concerning that little known corner of the globe.

A block-head isn't the only chap who celebrates his wooden wedding.

The Mania for State Employment Is Undermining Industry and Morals.

There are 650,000 paid and about 463,000 unpaid officials in France. About one person in twenty-six of the adult population holds a public office. There is a plague of offices and officeholding throughout the country.

The people have an officeholding craze. Public employment appeals to French vanity and the pension appeals to French thrift. A man who once gets his toes in a public office will never die of starvation. So the young people are deserting the productive occupations to look for small jobs under the Government. The boys want to be clerks or even ushers in place of taking up trades and the girls are deserting dressmaking and millinery to become teachers or telephone girls or typewriters in public offices.

State schools are turning out regiments of young people annually especially crammed to pass the civil service examinations. The Senators and Deputies are besieged by hordes of applicants flourishing their "brevets" or certificates of qualification. All sorts of wires, social and political, are pulled. The pressure is so great that new offices are constantly invented to make places, and supernumerary clerks and typewriters and so on are daily added to offices already overcrowded.

In some departments, it is said, the force is so large that some of the employees—the ones who have the strongest pull—only come in once a week to brush the dust off the hat and overcoat that they keep HANGING IN THE OFFICES.

If a chief by any accident comes in and asks for them the other clerks—the ones who do the work—suavely reply that "Mr. So and So is somewhere in the building; there are his hat and coat." Nine times out of ten this ends the incident; but if the chief shows a real desire to see the absentee a friend sends a messenger to find him.

In 1846 there were only 262,000 paid officials in the country and 461,000 unpaid ones. These figures grew in 1858 to 340,000 paid and 489,000 unpaid. In 1873 there were 341,000 paid and 459,000 unpaid, the reduction in the latter being due to the loss of Alsace-Lorraine and the abolition of the empire with its many honorary posts.

In 1896 the paid functionaries numbered 582,000 and the unpaid ones 462,000. The present figure of 650,000 paid employees shows an increase of nearly threefold in about sixty years, yet in that time the population of France has made hardly any progress.

The financial burden is enormous. The 262,000 employees in 1846 drew altogether about $68,000,000 from the public treasury. The 650,000 of to-day receive $194,000,000 in salaries and fees. Besides this sum more than $40,000,000 is paid out annually in civil pensions.

By far the greater part of the money is paid out to persons in the medium grades. Next comes the class of low priced employees — watchmen, office-boys, ushers and the like. One-third of all the public employees receive salaries less than $200 a year. One-half receive from that sum up to $1,000.

Even men occupying high judicial and administrative positions do not get big pay, with a few exceptions. Here are some of the figured into our money:

The President of the Republic,	$240,000
President of the Senate	20,000
President of the Chamber of Deputies	20,000
Cabinet Ministers	15,000
Under Secretaries of State	5,000
Prefect of Police of Paris	10,000
President of the Court of Cassation	6,000
President of the Court of Appeals	3,600

Ambassadors receive $8,000 a year salary, but allowances for expenses of the embassy are added, ranging from $34,000 a year at St. Petersburg to $4,000 a year at Bern. Ministers Plenipotentiary receive from $4,800 to $6,000 a year, with varying allotments for expenses. The pay of Governors of colonies ranges from $15,000 for the Governor of Indo-China to $4,000 for New Caledonia.

The chief clerks of the two chambers receive $3,600 a year, and the Senators and Deputies $3,000 each. Prefects of departments get on the average about $4,000; treasurers-general, $9,500; rectors of universities, $3,200, and the Grand Chancellor of the Legion of Honor, $8,000. There are altogether only 1,460 public officials whose compensation amounts to $3,000 a year or over.

It will be seen that the extravagance of the system is not in the units of pay. It is in the multiplication of unnecessary salaries. Some of the departments are especially overrun. In the Department of Commerce the bureaus are manned for the most part by a chief, a deputy chief, a chief clerk and a copying clerk; that is all. Yet in the State savings bank administration one chief, unaided, directs a force of 126 employees. Taking the central administration as a whole the average is one chief and one deputy for nine employees. In the Ministry of the Interior sixty-four superior employees manage 228 subalterns.

Strange stories are told of the results of thus overmanning the service. Many a public servant earns his pay and his pension holding down a chair

IN A BOULEVARD CAFE.

Lately it was discovered that there were three governors for the Islands of St. Pierre and Miguelon, whose pay absorbed half the revenue of the islands. The administrator of another colony, drawing from $1,400 to $1,600 in fees, it was found had never been in the colony.

The Ministry of the Colonies is, in fact, a hotbed of scandals. The present Minister, Senator Milles-Lacroix, had a reform spasm just after taking office. He disguised himself as a colonial and made visits to several bureaus, which were notoriously lax. In every one he was told that the director and the sub-director were out. In some cases he found no one but the office-boy—it is true they were bureaus with duties worse than vague. The Minister jacked up the whole staff.

Then he waited a week and repeated his visit. He found exactly the same condition prevailing. The official mind had figured it out that no time was so safe to commit an offence as just after a warning, because nobody would expect you to commit it then.

There is only one day in the year when every one is sure to show up. That is the day known in Parisian slang as the festival of St. Touche, a term which does not need translation.

In a few of the bureaus where a chief with old-fashioned ideas of discipline insists on a full daily attendance of his subordinates they have invented an exciting way of passing the time. They hold snail races. Each member of the staff brings a healthy, lusty, live snail in a little cardboard box. Alternately they supply a leaf of cabbage. The leaf is placed at one end of a varnished table and the snails, each properly marked for identification, about four feet off. It costs a couple of sous to enter your snail, and the man whose representative first reaches the cabbage leaf takes the purse. Besides, naturally, side bets are laid on the details of the race.

THE MIDDLE AGED MAN.

Recalling an Old Joke, He is Reminded of His Own Increasing Years.

"No little thing that has happened to me recently," said the middle aged man, "has brought to my mind so strikingly as this slight incident did the difference between the old times and the new, nor has any little thing so vividly reminded me of my increasing years.

"One of the standard jokes that had point in the times when I was a boy and that went the rounds in print then, besides being often brought into play in jocular conversation, related to one's having left his pocketbook at home on the piano. Here, say, is a man buying something in a store, and when he comes to pay for it he reaches in his pocket in which he also carries his purse. And it isn't there!

"And then, surprised at not finding it there, he pats all his other pockets in succession, and then reaches in each and every one of them in search of it, to discover that he hasn't got it about him anywhere. And then he looks up and says:

"'Well, by gracious! I haven't got any money. I must have left my pocketbook on the piano.'

"This joke in its day was considered a good one, easy and plain and yet not without some subtlety, a joke appealing to many, because originally it was put out not as a joke at all, but as a bluff, as something that was seriously propounded and perhaps seriously accepted.

"Its original utterer is supposed to have been a man who had put up a fair front, but who when the pinch came proved to have no money, and who then accounted for its absence in a way to imply that while he had no money with him he was nevertheless a man of resources, as this incidental remark, casually made, was intended to show. And perhaps it went. He had left his money on the piano. If he had a piano it was a reasonable inference that he was a man of at least some means, for in those days pianos were, comparatively speaking, rare, and so this man who had left his pocketbook home on the piano might be a man who could be trusted.

"So as to its origin and perhaps as to its occasional early use; but later it was regarded as a joke only, in which manner of acceptance it obtained its widest currency, with its humorous subtlety of meaning. In this latter use the man to whom it was up to to pay something and who found, as perhaps he knew and as others had shrewdly guessed, that he had no money said jokingly:

"'Well, I guess I must have left my money home on the piano.'

"But times have changed, and the old joke, with whatever significance, no longer goes.

"This morning when I went to pay for something in a store where I trade I found that I had actually left my pocketbook at home, and the old joke coming back to me I said to the young men who kept the store, smilingly.

"'I guess I must have left my pocketbook on the piano.'

"But the old joke awakened in them no response whatever. And why should it? They have a piano, I have a piano, everybody in these days has a piano, and so my remark as a joke had no special significance for them. It was simply a statement by me that I had left my money on the piano.

"So I was brought to realize that, except for those old enough to recall it, this once honorable and generally enjoyed joke had now lost its humor."

WIZARD TELLS OF 1908.

Old Moore, of London, Predicts Trouble With Battleships.

Old Moore, wizard and almanac maker, of London, England, has been dreaming of the year 1908, and if the familiar white-covered tale of his vision, just published, is less a nightmare than usual, it has acquired an unwonted Jules Verne flavor.

For instance, he says that in March, 1908, we must look out for trouble on battleships. "Their greatest enemy is in their holds; the effects of earth current, acting on the vast magnetic body of metal, will be automatic in their destruction."

Still dreaming of the navy, he foretells, for December, "a new idea of coast defence in floating circular ironclads impenetrable for any shots, owing to the want of a striking point. If necesary, they can reverse quickly on a dropped pivot anchor."

September will be marked by a laboratory discovery which "will cause double crops in many parts of the country," and October by the invention of reflecting ceilings, the effect of which "will be funny in the ball-room."

In December a "new and very beautiful flower will appear and make a great sensation."

Too often the wife's yearning capacity is larger than the husband's earning capacity.

About the Farm

PROBLEMS OF THE FARM.

As much money can be made by studying when, what and how to grow as by doing the growing. If you cannot grow an acre of potatoes for less than $60, and get not over 100 bushels, how can you compete with a man who can grow them for $32 per acre and gets from 500 to 600 bushels? Potatoes, as well as all other crops, will sell for little more than the average cost above the general average will lose money. Side hills and stony sections, where machines do not work well, covering the seeds with stones and the sprayer tips over, should be used as dairy sections, and the loamy, level fields which work as easily as a child's garden of sand should be saved for garden truck and potatoes.

The gradual depletion of the soil and the costly substitution of chemical fertilization is reducing profits until the prophecy is fulfilled: "To him that hath shall be given, but to him that hath not shall be taken away even that he hath."

A poor farm growing poorer is a losing proposition. The soil is rich enough in plant food for a hundred crops but it has been so misused and mismanaged that plants do not thrive in it. They are not starved but stunted by the condition of homes.

If you mix soil from a good field of black loam with water and make a cake, it will, when baked, crumble readily. Should you mix a cake from a ploughed field that has been cultivated for twenty years, it would make a brick when baked. This is the difference between natural soil and artificial; the one productive, the other seductive—taking your profits. The principal difference is caused by the decaying vegetable matter which keeps it in a favorable condition for the growth of plants.

PRACTICAL POULTRY POINTS.

Where only a small run is available, keep only one breed, and make it the best by keeping only a few of a good laying strain.

Do not keep more than twelve birds in a yard 30x15, and the house scraps will almost be sufficient for their maintenance.

Sweep up the manure each day, and there will be no need to fear disease. Unclean yards are not only an annoyance, but a menace.

A dozen good fowls will furnish more eggs than the average family requires, and will leave a surplus for pin money. Think what it costs to buy absolutely fresh-laid eggs all the year round!

When skimmilk is available give your birds plenty, as it is rich in flesh-formers. It also whitens and gives succulence to the meat.

July chicks often begin to droop when about a week old. Lice under the wings and legs and large sores on the head are almost always the cause. Rub in some fresh insect powder.

The shed floor on the ground is a good place to start July sitters. But make the shed rat-proof. Rats and skunks, too, are very active in midsummer.

There are dozens of ways to break up sitters, but the simplest is the best. Merely shut them into a small coop with slat bottom and sides; an old berry crate will answer. Give plenty of water and moderate feed. Let them all out three or four days later, but giving another term to those who go back to the nests. No need of a cockerel in the broody coop.

FARM NOTES.

Every farmer should have a good ten-foot pole. Pine or basswood, dressed down to 1¼ inches square, makes a good one. Cut it exactly ten feet long, then lay it off with a scratch-awl into lengths of one foot each. The marks may afterwards be blackened.

Farming is a better business than it ever was before in all the world's history. A man can do all the thinking on the farm that he is capable of. If he wants a chance to do something big, all he needs is to do it. And as for good solid comfort—the farm beats the world! And the farmers of this country are slowly rising to this fact.

It would almost appear, from the frequently expressed opinions of farmers themselves, that what is termed high cultivation is not economical, that it is bad, in fact; that it is more economical to use a smaller quantity of manure, and less concentrated food, and to till in a general way upon as economical a principle as possible. I do not believe that this plant is either rational or economical. The lower the prices of produce, the more important it is to increase the yield in order to maintain the value of the gross return, and in order to do this high farming is essential. High farming does not mean experiment farming, or the application of costly manures without a full knowledge of the results which they assist in effecting; but it means rational farming, clean land, thorough cultivation, and the provision of abundance of plant food.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Keep salt where the pigs can help themselves to it; also provide charcoal and sulphur. These are great correctives, and hogs seem to know when they need them.

If compelled to shut the hens up for any reason, do your best to make their surroundings as nearly like those outside as you can. This means give them shade, plenty of good food, a chance to work for their living, and a good supply of drink; sour milk, if you have it regularly.

The fertility of animals is frequently influenced by changes in their surroundings, and which in themselves could not be considered unfavorable to the healthy action of the system. It has been observed that the procreative powers are impaired, or even entirely wanting, in many wild species when placed in confinement. From this we might suppose that domesticated animals are less fertile than wild ones. But this is not true. We must bear in mind the distinction between confinement and domestication. The activity of the reproductive organs is dependent upon the function of nutrition which supplies the materials concerned in their operation. Thus disease of the nutritive organs, or sluggishness, caused by lack of proper exercise, as in case of confinement, or a scanty supply of food, would impair the reproductive function.

A COOLIE'S SORROWS.

The Hard Lot of a Poor Old Jap Caused By the War.

The wife of a Russian officer held as a prisoner at Matsuyama, tells in her journal something of the real life of the jinrikisha men of Japan. She had been at the hospital to visit her husband, and coming out in a driving rain, found her coolie waiting patiently.

His worn rubber coat showed one thin, rain-soaked, blue cotton garment beneath it; and the bare knees caught the lantern light as they swung back and forth with the regularity of pendulums. Still chirruping like a cheerful bird, and laughing, as if the rain-drops he wiped from the edge of the hood were precious things, lucky jewels he was gathering, he helped me out at my door.

I looked at him as the shoji slid open and sent the full lamplight on the ugly scrap of a man. He was old, since all the young jinrikisha coolies have gone to the war; yet he was cheerful and happy, contented with the hardest lot that I can think of for a human being.

"You have no trouble, I can see that," I said to him. "A full pipe and a rice bowl, and the dark, wet, cold night is the same as sunny noonday to you."

"Okasama, my only son went to the war. He died at Two-Hundred-and-Three-Metre Hill. I am old and my wife is feeble, and this kuruma feeds us all, all, my son's wife and his three children.

"Although the little box, cremation ashes and relics, came three weeks ago, I have not yet had the priests say the prayers at my house, and his friends go with us to the temple.

"I have known much sorrow, truly, Okasama." The old kurumaya bowed with the grace of a noble, proudly. It was a reproof that covered me with shame.

The next Sunday there was a funeral, the local band was in attendance, and the priests held service over the little wooden box that came from Port Arthur. The old man marched in stiff silk hakama, leading a sedate, splendidly striding boy of eight as chief mourner and guardian of the tablets. A concourse of friends trailed away through the town to a temple near Dogo, and the funeral party from the castle barracks sounded the bugles and rendered the final honors there.

THE "ANGEL'S PATHWAY."

(By A. Banker).

How beautiful, how replete with peace and calm is the lovely gloaming; the hour when our great luminary having sunk in a blaze of glory in the west, the fiery carmine and the delicate mauve and rich vermillion of the skies has given place to the many beautiful gradations of turquoise and amber, and subdued fire opal, waning to an ever darkening amethystine violet. And the glories of the firmament have been mirrored, too, in all their beauty on the rippling wavelets of the great ocean, gemming the throbbing expanse in sparkling beauty, until, with the fading away of all that glowing splendor, a more sombre, hueless tint reigns over all.

And landwards, too, all nature is reposing in a tranquil calm; except that a few belated songsters of the wood are still trilling forth their passionate love songs, the night-jar has commenced his whirring churr, and some shore birds, in the exuberance of their zest, are still chaunting their rhythmical and melodious, though somewhat monotonous, measures. And as the light of day gradually gives place to the shades of evening, the line of trees bordering the low cliff or ridge which bars the onward progress of the attacking waves, stands out in sharpest silhouette; every pendent bough and waving of the graceful silver birch; every fir, and symmetrical larch, and berry-clad mountain ash, sharply projected against the sky.

And now one by one the stars of Heaven shine forth, Hesperus, the evening star, brightest of them all; so bright that a ray of light from her borrowed fires is pencilled upon the waves. But soon the greater glory of the now risen queen of night reigns supreme, paling the less brilliant of the galaxy of scintillating orbs which gemmed the canopy of the skies, and forming on the gently heaving surface of the ocean a glittering "Angel's pathway," which like a splendent lustrous track of flashing molten silver extends across the ocean right out to the horizon.

Aye, truly this earth of ours is replete with beauty and lavish adornment. And surely it was meet that the orb selected by the Son of God as the one upon which to make atonement, not only for us but for every planet in every constellation in every universe throughout the vast abysm of infinitude—for surely this must be so—should be a masterpiece of His handiwork. But the Realm which is the inheritance of those who love and serve Him, and whose misdeeds are expunged from the Accuser's record through that expiation, must be a sphere of a grandeur and splendor so sublime and so majestic that it must be utterly beyond the power of the finite mind of mortal man even to conceive.

BEST PAID LADY'S MAID

THE CLOSEST ASSOCIATE OF QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

The Honorable Charlotte Knollys Has Spent Forty-four Years With the Queen.

"Elizabeth Knollys, lady's maid to Mrs. Albert E. Wettin." Such an entry would be quite correct if one descended from the estate of royalty to the commonplace. But it is writ on the records that the Honorable Charlotte Knollys (pronounced Knowles) is a bedchamber woman to her majesty, Queen Alexandra.

Because the mistress is royal the position becomes one of honor instead of servility. Yet one cannot get away from the fact that Miss Knollys is to all intents and purposes the Queen of England's maid, as well as her dearest friend and confidential companion, writes Charles Byng-Hall.

Quite recently Charlotte Knollys completed her 44th year in this position. Nightly for 44 years she has slept under the same roof as her mistress and daily in that lifetime has she tended her and her many wants so carefully and so faithfully that at the palaces she has long had the nickname of The Shadow.

No one need envy Miss Knollys her job. Yearly it grows more difficult. The Queen is an exacting woman. With age her infirmities are increasing. She has a temper. Most queens have. But the public do not know that the Queen's deafness has made her a trifle irritable, and that were it not for the tact of Charlotte Knollys, life at the various royal palaces would be, for the Queen's household, strenuous at times. Miss Knollys is

ALEXANDRA'S GOOD ANGEL.

She is the general buffer between the Queen and outside personages, not leaving out even jovial Edward VII. The loss of Miss Knollys would be, perhaps, one of the greatest Alexandra could suffer; for this woman who never for one day in 44 years has been away from her royal mistress, is the only woman who knows the secrets of the Queen's toilet.

And her reward? Who knows? Charlotte Knollys, on the accession of King Edward, received the prefix of Honorable and raised by royal warrant to the position of a baron's daughter. By virtue of her position at court she takes first place among all unmarried women entitled to the prefix of honorable. Her relative rank now in the British empire is No. 20,326 after the King. She has an armful of minor foreign orders and decorations bestowed by European queens. And as to salary she draws $3,500 a year from the government and $1,500 from the Queen's privy purse. What further emoluments or private gifts she may receive from her majesty or elsewhere she and the donors alone know.

Of course, Miss Knollys has board and lodging and servants and all such things free at Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle and Sandringham and wherever the Queen may go avisiting.

While she is the costliest lady's maid in all the wide world, I doubt if her emoluments, the splendor of her surroundings, the homage of great courtiers and greater society dames, the constant basking in the rays of royalty, compensate Charlotte Knollys for all her work and all her sacrifices of the last 44 years and—there are yet years to come.

The greatest sacrifice of this young-old woman was the sacrifice of love. At the repeated urgings of her royal mistress she gave up the man she loved and the man who loved her.

IT WAS HER ONLY ROMANCE.

And it has been a lifelong romance. The man was a minor courtier attached to the household of the King. The romance began on the croquet lawn of Marlborough House. Miss Knollys was then maid of honor.

While other members of the household looked on and smiled as the love story unfolded itself before their eyes, the future Queen had no suspicion until that day when her favorite knelt at her feet and asked her gracious permission to marry. Each maid is obliged to ask her royal mistress's permission to marry and on the marriage receives $5,000 from the crown.

Queen Elizabeth stormed and raved at Lady Anne of Rutland in similar circumstances and other queens here and there have followed suit. Alexandra did not, yet she urged the woman, who had become so valuable to her, not to marry for awhile. And when a year and then two passed the lover became impatient. Alexandra was once more appealed to. From that interview came Miss Knollys, pledged to serve her mistress alone, her dream of love ended, a martyr to duty. Years later the man married. Recently he died.

Charlotte Knollys is practically the same age as the Queen—63. Neither looks it—which, perhaps, proves that Miss Knollys is a past mistress in the arts of the toilet. She was christened Elizabeth Charlotte, but the Queen disliked the name Elizabeth and elected to call her Charlotte. It is not generally known that one of the names of the Queen herself is Charlotte.

In appearance Miss Knollys is somewhat taller, somewhat stouter, and, I regret to have to say, not so good looking as her royal mistress. Yet she has one of those round, genial countenances which attract and please. Miss Knollys possesses many accomplishments. She is a marvellous linguist and can converse fluently in nearly every European language. She is also a born musician, and an excellent teller of good stories.

SHE IS GREAT AT GOSSIP,

a wonderful talker and a brilliant wit. She is an epicure in everything from art to eating. And she is called by those who know her the most tactful woman in the world. There is little wonder that Alexandra keeps such a treasure with her always.

Some years ago Miss Knollys saved the Queen's life. There was a fire at Sandringham in the Queen's apartments. Miss Knollys rushed through the smoke and flame, before the general alarm had been given, and dragged the Queen from her bed to safety. For this she was at a special and public ceremony at Buckingham Palace presented by the King with a medal specially struck and inscribed.

Miss Knollys is the only woman not related to the Queen who calls her Alix. In turn the Queen calls Miss Knollys Chatty. In fact, all the royalties from King to the youngest princeling, call her that, and she is possibly the only woman not of royal rank who calls practically all the great royalties by their Christian or nickname. She has known most of them intimately since they were children.

By no means the most valuable, but certainly the most interesting, collection extant, of personal mementoes of sovereigns and other royal personages, is owned by Charlotte Knollys. Beginning with childish gifts she has received from her hosts of personal friends among the great ones of Europe regularly on her birthday and at Christmas for 44 years, presents from flowers and signed photographs to golden and jewelled treasures. This collection will make a museum of priceless heirlooms for the Knollys family.

Take it all in all, Miss Knollys's position at court is unique. A duchess is mistress of the robes, marchionesses and countesses are ladies of the bedchamber, countesses and baronesses are bedchamber women, and daughters of belted earls are maids of honor. And yet over all those Charlotte Knollys, although she does not take precedence, practically rules. She is not alone the personal attendant of the Queen, but also her closest

COMPANION AND FRIEND.

At state ceremonials she has to give way to those of higher title and is far in the background, but when one only is in attendance on her Majesty, that one is Miss Knollys.

She has her apartments quite close to those of the Queen everywhere the latter goes. To describe one suite of apartments is, excepting Sandringham, to describe them all.

At Buckingham Palace the Queen's bedchamber is an immense room. It is at least twenty feet high and has eight great windows on one side alone. There is not much furniture in it—at least the room is so big that it looks barely furnished. In the centre of one side is the great bed. Alexandra is a stickler for royal etiquette and pomp, and instead of the modern brass bedstead still has the old-fashioned carved mahogany affair of the kings and queens of past ages. The bed is very high—so high, in fact, that a cushioned step runs around it by which one gets in and out. It has a canopy and the royal arms in glittering gold on top. Silken curtains, if need be, cover it entirely. The other features of the room, which is done in a dull green, are also on a huge scale. They are a dressing-table in front of one of the windows and two wardrobes with great plate-glass doors and rows of drawers. Each wardrobe is fully ten feet high and a dozen feet in length.

On one side of the bedchamber is another room, the walls of which are lined with similar wardrobes. A door from this room leads into the King's suite of apartments. On the other side of the bedroom is an anteroom or small square corridor. The nearest door in this gives entrance to her Majesty's bathroom, a superb little apartment done in marble and onyx with silver fittings. The farther door leads into the Queen's own particular boudoir, done in rose pink and moss green,

THE WALLS COVERED WITH SILK.

Another door out of the bedroom leads into another anteroom, furnished with lounges and chairs ranged round the walls. It is a very large room and mirrors line one wall. It is the waiting-room for the ladies, maids of honor and others in attendance at the moment on the Queen.

The door from this room leads into a wide corridor known as the Queen's corridor. It is here that the suite of rooms allotted to Charlotte Knollys is situated. There are bedroom, sitting-room, bathroom and dressing or wardrobe-room. Each room is of good size and it is a suite that a princess would ordinarily occupy. In fact, right across the corridor is the suite, similar in every way, of Princess Victoria, the only unmarried daughter of the King. From Miss Knollys's bedchamber there is a little private passage directly into the Queen's apartments and also a single line private buzzer telephone.

I cannot tell you in detail Miss Knollys' duties. That would be drawing the veil too much. But nowadays the ladies-in-waiting and the maids of honor do most of the reading and playing and fetching and carrying for the Queen. Miss Knollys's work outside of her constant companionship is devoted entirely to her Majesty's toilet and the acting as the Queen's buffer.

As with the King no person, except those of gentle birth and entitled to bear arms, is allowed to perform any personal service for the Queen. If her Majesty dropped even a glove, a footman or maidservant might pick it up, but could not hand it back to her Majesty. It would have to be given first to one of the ladies or gentlemen-in-waiting and thence handed to the Queen.

The ladies of the bedchamber and the bedchamber women are dismissed and summoned at certain stages of the robing or disrobing of the Queen. It is Charlotte Knollys who is with her Majesty the last thing at night, the first in the morning. It is she alone who possesses the secrets of the youthful-looking beautiful Queen.

And yet there are thousands of people in England, yes, in London itself, who never heard of Charlotte Knollys.

NEW PARIS PAVING.

Trial is now being made in Paris of a new system of paving. Steel is laid on a bed of cement, after the fashion of wood-paved roads, the interstices, too, being filled with the cement. It is hoped in this way to avoid the dangerous holes which soon appear in wood paving owing to the unequal wearing of the blocks. The new pavement is expected to last for ten years.

OPINIONS OF JAP LADY

JAPANESE DRESS IS NOT SUITABLE FOR MODERN LIFE.

The Kimonos Are Only Suitable for the South Kensington Museum.

A Japanese woman writes of Japanese versus English style of dress in London Daily Mail as follows:—

It is horrifying to see that some English ladies to-day are attempting to copy the old Japanese fashions in dress. They are widening their sleeves in imitation of the Japanese kimono. European visitors return from Japan recommending the beauty of our ladies' garments. The beauty of the old Japanese dress, such as it is, may be good for the South Kensington Museum, but it is not suitable for a busy, modern world. I do not hesitate for a moment in stating my firm belief that the European style is far superior to the Japanese in every respect, both in beauty and utility. The long, overhanging sleeves of the Japanese costumes, the loose, untidy, and foldless skirt, and the weighty obi, with its heavy burden of folding silk, are clumsy and inconvenient. Let the English ladies put on Japanese kimonos as overcoats or light robes if they will, but no more.

DRESS OF MEN.

Now-a-days most Japanese men beyond the coolie class put on European clothes, and so I have not much to say on men's dress. European clothes are stronger, more convenient, and less expensive. They have many pockets while ours have none. They can be made in Japan at a cost of from twenty to fifty yen (£2 to £5), while the old dress of respectable quality costs us nearly 100 yen (£10). The old style of Japanese dress for the men consists of the kimono, an outer buttonless garment, tied with an obi, or girdle. Then there is the haori, or ceremonial skirt. For underclothes we have the juban, of fine silk, in gaudy colors. By a curious custom, especially in Tokio, people frequently spend more for the lining of the haori than for the stuff of which the haori itself is made. It is considered fashionable to spend money on what others cannot see. Thus men will have a juban of fine crepe silk under a coarse cotton kimono.

NEVER BRUSH THERE.

In England people constantly brush their clothes. In Japan we never do. We iron our garments, it is true, but never brush them. We have actually no clothes brushes. For this there are several reasons. First: In Japan there is not so much dust as here. Since I came to London I find my writing desk covered with dust and soot every evening, even when the windows have been closed all day. This also accounts for the fact that English people wash a number of times during the day, while the Japanese wash generally once. Second, the Japanese textile goods (either silk or cotton) do not absorb so much dust, and what dust gets on them can easily be shaken off. A few strokes with a Japanese towel or a shake or two of the kimono could clean it. Thirdly, the Japanese textile goods are not strong enough to be brushed.

HAORI AND HAKAMA GOING. ..

The use of European clothes is today widespread in my humble country, just as the English language is. You will find everywhere, even in very small towns, tailors and laundries. European dress is adopted as our ceremonial attire not only in official circles, but among commoners. The Japanese can go to any ceremony now in European garments, and so our own ceremonial dress of the haori and hakama is passing away.

THEIR OWN GRANDPARENTS.

Remarkable Results Which Marriage Brought About.

Complicated relationships are not infrequent, but it would probably be difficult to parallel two cases recently reported, one in Italy and one in Pennsylvania. A Neapolitan sailor thus tells his own story: "I married a widow. She had by her first husband a handsome girl named Silvietta, with whom my father fell in love, and who became his second wife. Thus my father became my own son-in-law and my stepdaughter became my mother, since she had married my father. Soon afterwards my wife gave birth to a son, who became my father's stepbrother and at the same time my uncle, since he was my stepmother's brother.

"But that was not all, for in due time my father's wife also gave birth to a boy, who was my brother and also my stepson, since he was a son of my daughter. My wife was also my grandmother, for she was the mother of my mother, and thus I was my wife's husband and at the same time her grandson. Finally, as the husband of a person's grand-mother is naturally that person's grandfather, I am forced to the conclusion that I am my own grandfather."

The case of the fifteen-year-old Pennsylvania girl, Ida Kriebel, is quite as remarkable. When she married sixty-year-old Jacob Doney she did not realize that she would become the wife of her own stepgrandfather, and consequently the grandmother of herself. Doney's first wife was the widow of John Wieden. She had three more children by Doney. One of her children married Samuel Kriebel, and a year later died. The widower married again. From this second union came Ida Kriebel. By this arrangement Doney became the stepgrandfather of his own child. The second Mrs. Doney also became stepgrandmother of twenty-five men and women, and stepgreat-grandmother of a lot of boys and girls of about her own age.

WHAT BIRMINGHAM DOES

ALMOST EVERYTHING IS MANUFACTURED THERE.

From Hairpins to Bicycles Runs the List—Buttons and Pen Nibs by Millions.

Birmingham, England, is an amazing city by the variety and amounts of its iron and steel industries, says London Answers.

At present Birmingham is making nearly 300,000 gross of steel pens a week. In round numbers this is 2,000 million steel nibs a year, or a pen and a third apiece for every living soul on the face of the globe. But for Birmingham we should, most of us, be reduced to cutting goose-quills with our second-best razors.

In this connection it is interesting to note that steel nibs are turned out wholesale at about twopence a gross, that Italy is the customer for the cheapest pens, while the best go to Russia. Two thousand hands are at work all day and every day running the machinery which pours out the essential implements of writing.

The knight of the pen owes another essential of his craft to Birmingham in the shape of metal ink stands. Hundreds of thousands of these, in value from a halfpenny up to £10, are made yearly in Birmingham workshops. Many other office or study essentials, such as safes and copying presses and reading lamps, are from the same source.

MANY BUTTONS.

Pearl buttons are another essential specialty of Birmingham. A few years ago the town had an absolute monopoly of this industry. In those days pearl shell was so plentiful that hundreds of tons of waste shell were dumped into old wells and buried. This is now being dug up again, and found to be worth thousands of pounds.

All sorts of small necessities of man's attire come from Birmingham. Not only his studs and links, but his brace buckles, his glove clasps, the ferule of his walking-stick, and the metal eyelets of his boots are almost certainly Birmingham made. His key ring, too, his pencil case, and probably the metal ribs of his umbrella are from the same place.

DEBT FOR HAIRPINS.

As for woman, she would be an even worse loser than her husband or brother were Birmingham to "shut up shop."

She would present a singularly dishevelled appearance for 90 per cent. of English hairpins come from Birmingham, and she would never dare go out in a gale of wind, for hairpins would be at famine prices were the Birmingham supplies stopped. Safety pins, another Birmingham product, would be sadly missed by the fair sex, and though the town no longer possesses a monopoly of the ordinary pin trade, yet she makes three out of five.

My lady would also lose her muff-chain and probably her necklet, a good deal of her jewellery, and—let us whisper it—the steel supports of her corset.

BICYCLE TUBING.

The bicyclist would be lost without Birmingham. Although Birmingham does not turn out the completed article, yet it makes the tubes from which the frame is built up, and 95 out of every 100 chains are made in Birmingham.

Speaking of tubes, these are a monopoly of the Midland city. Welded or solid drawn, for cycle building or drawing beer, 98 out of every 100 tubes are made in Birmingham's workshops. These are only a few of Birmingham's specialties. We have no room to more than mention metallic cartridges, laundresses' irons, metal lecterns, stained glass windows. From life's beginning to its end Birmingham is always with us. Fifty to one, the metal fittings on your coffin will be Birmingham made.

COMING OF THE KING COMET.

Since 12 B. C. It Has Appeared Every Seventy-five Years.

The comet, which is now visible, is only a comparatively insignificant specimen, after all.

But those of us who live until 1910 ought to be treated to a really remarkable spectacle of the kind, for in that year is due the King Comet of the Universe, the one whose advent was predicted, 150 years ago, by the famous astronomer, Edmund Halley, and which has ever since in consequence gone by the name of "Halley's Comet."

Every seventy-five years this magnificent traveller through space returns to us, and has been doing so, as is now known, since, at all events, 12 B. C. Its appearance with its intensely bright disc, "like a small sun," and its sabre-shaped tail measuring forty millions of miles or more in length and extending half-way across the heavens like a gigantic illuminated arch, astonished and awed the world in 1456, in 1531, in 1607, and again in 1682.

It was the periodicity of these dates that first led Halley to come to the conclusion that the comets recorded as having appeared in the years named were not, as had been supposed, different comets, but one and the same, and accordingly he predicted its return in 1757.

It was a bold prediction, and Halley was laughed at for his pains. But on Christmas Eve of that year the comet duly hove in sight, so to speak, and his fame was assured. Not only that, but the principle once established, it was found that most other comets returned regularly to the sun at fixed intervals, so that up to now some 400 orbits have been computed.

The last appearance of Halley's comet it may be mentioned, was in 1835.

Husband—"I wonder what sort of people our new neighbors are? I saw they moved in this morning." Wife—"Well, they are not very well provided with things, any way. They haven't got a lawn-mower, or a washing machine, or a hose for cleaning the windows, or a step-ladder, or——" Husband—"How on earth did you find out that?" Wife—"Oh, I asked them for a loan of these things."

ECCENTRIC MILLIONAIRE

HAS GIVEN AWAY $1,250,000 IN TWENTY YEARS.

Mr. Bayard Brown, an American, Lives on a Palatial Steam Yacht of 735 Tons.

Much has been written, at one time or another, concerning the curious fads and fancies of millionaires; for some of them have adopted strange ways of spending their time and money. The manner, however, in which Mr. Bayard Brown, an American millionaire, has passed the last twenty years of his life forms one of the most extraordinary stories on record.

In 1887 Mr. Brown terminated an extended yachting cruise by dropping anchor a few hundred yards off the small Essex seaport of Brightlingsea, England, where the River Colne is about half a mile wide. His yacht, the Lady Torfrida, was a few months later, sold to the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, and replaced by the Valfreyia, a palatial steam-yacht of 735 tons, with every modern equipment, which formerly belonged to Sir William Pearce, Bart. On this yacht, which has never moved from its first anchorage, Mr. Brown has lived since that time, converting it into a marine house-boat

SUMMER AND WINTER.

This in itself would not be so remarkable were it not for the fact that Mr. Brown has amused himself during these years by giving away large sums of money to applicants who besiege him day and night in rowing-boats. Altogether his gifts have amounted, so far, to $1,250,000, the extraordinary feature of his benefactions being that no notice is taken of written appeals. Those who want some of Mr. Brown's money must apply personally.

That is not to say that this eccentric millionaire will receive on his yacht anybody and everybody who think they have a claim to his charity, listen to their story and pay out according to as much as he believes. Applicants must wait on the water until Mr. Brown makes a sign that they may come on board.

Practically every day, summer and winter, some boats are ranged round the yacht; sometimes twenty or thirty are assembled at one time, containing sixty or seventy persons. Of these the majority are women, some of whom walk five or six miles to the shore, hire a boatman (paid partly by results), and trudge home again afterwards; and this they will do on several consecutive days, even in bad weather,

UNTIL THEY "GET PAID."

When the millionaire appears on deck he may cause it to be announced that he has nothing to give, and act accordingly—for a time, at least; or he may remain oblivious of the presence of the flotilla. Perhaps he will at once approach the side and raise his hat to the suitors, when a number of the more favored applicants then ascend the gangway in Indian file, receive their gifts from him personally, make their bows, and descend. This is the work of a few minutes. The gangway is then drawn up and Mr. Brown retires below, or paces the deck above a row of upturned, disappointed faces. Ere long, however, he is generally listening over the side to the stories and appeals of individuals, some of whom may be invited on board to talk over their cases, and a supplementary distribution often ensues.

At last a halt is called and the afternoon visitors depart, as a rule; but unsatisfied applicants sometimes cling on for hours, joined later by the contingent of "locals," who attend only at night, and who often have prolonged interviews with the owner on board till midnight

OR EVEN THE SMALL HOURS.

It will be apparent, says Mr. F. R. Temple, in the "Wide World Magazine," that the methods of Mr. Brown's benefactions are not exactly in consonance with those customarily adopted by practical philanthropists. Nor is he a great supporter of charities through the usual channels, although several local clergymen receive sums from him annually for the poor of their parishes.

In the district, however, a large number of persons have participated for years in Mr. Brown's benefactions. Nor are they simply the poor and destitute. They include laborers, boatmen, gardeners, artificers, and foremen in various trades; yachtsmen and sailors, ex-public servants (and the wives and other female relatives of these), with a liberal admixture of publicans and innkeepers, shopkeepers, and other traders, and a sprinkling of farmers, etc. Practically everybody, in fact, who has rendered Mr Brown a little service at any time has come in for a share of his millions.

CHARACTER BY HAT.

It is a strange fact, but a true one, that the kind of hat a man wears and the way he wears it form a very good criterion of his natural character. The man whose hat seems to have been made for him, and which he has set squarely and straight upon his head, is a methodical and comfortable man, with a rare endowment of common-sense. He is not given to flights of fancy. Men whose hats are always too large for them are of reflective habits. They are careless of external appearances, and are likely to fall into fits of fancy and pre-occupation. Men whose hats are always too small, are vain and finicking. The man who wears his hat drawn over his eyes may not be a "wrong' un," but he is undoubtedly a "schemer." He excels in strategy, and is rarely cheerful. Much more does the man who habitually wears his hat pushed off his forehead enjoy the confidence of his fellow-men. He is admired by those who do not agree with any of his views, for his straightforwardness. The man who places his hat on one side is jolly, independent, and self-assertive.

You can't get the best of some men—they haven't any.

When a man is succeeding there are always a number of human failures around to carp at his methods.

The devil was probably first referred to by some man who couldn't think of anything else to blame for his actions.

DANCE FOR RHEUMATICS.

Gnarled Limbs and Creaking Joints Cured by Lively Steps.

A well-known foreign physician asserts that dancing is a specific for rheumatism. In his sun gymnasium strange scenes are to be witnessed. Persons with gnarled limbs and crooked hands and creaking joints go there to dance. The sight is as pathetic as humorous, but withal interesting and instructive. Yet it is related by friends of the patients that the progress of the rheumatic pupils learning the art of dancing is wonderful. At first they must be coaxed or driven to the exercise, which they begin with an accompaniment of groans. Gradually, however, the sprightly music, the flood of sunshine and the comical antics of their fellow sufferers cause the nervous tension to relax. The spirit of emulation springs up in their breasts. The dancing that began in pain proceeds with pleasure. And after three months of dancing some of the patients have been pronounced permanently cured, while all the enthusiastic supporters of the system assert that they have been greatly relieved.

WHERE THEIR HEARTS ARE.

Caterpillar's Heart Extend the Whole Length of Body.

There is one curious fact which not everybody notices about the common, finger-long, green caterpillars of our larger moths. Their hearts, instead of being in front, are at the back of the body and extend along the entire length of the animal. One can see the heart distinctly through the thin skin and can watch its slow beat, which starts at the tail and moves forward to the head. Hearts of this sort reaching from head to tail are not at all uncommon in the simpler creatures. The earthworm has one, and so have most worms, caterpillars and other crawling things. Hearts in the middle of the back also are quite as frequent as those in what seems to us to be the natural place. Many animals, the lobster for example, and the crawfish and the crab, which have short hearts like those of the beasts and birds, nevertheless have them placed just under the shell in what, in ourselves, would be the small of the back.

A certain Colonel White, who kept two black servants, was very often absent from church. The two black men, however, attended with exemplary regularity. One day the vicar, who was a bit of a wag, met the colonel, and said: "I say, colonel, I miss you very often from your pew in church." "Oh, yes," said the colonel, airily; "but you'll find that my two niggers are always there." "Yes," said the vicar; "but you know two blacks do not make a White."

Salvation Army Newest Colony.

Toronto, Aug. 20.—Senator Cox is prepared to advance $50,000 to assist the Salvation Army in its scheme to establish a colony in New Ontario. The proposition has been under consideration for some time. The government is to furnish 230,000 acres of land at 25 cents an acre, payments to be spread over ten years. The army is to locate 144 settlers in every township, each settler having 160 acres.

Interviewed, Senator Cox stated nothing had been settled yet. If the land and climatic conditions are satisfactory, the scheme will be carried out. The senator is now considering a report to determine these points. If the land now under consideration is not satisfactory, other land will likely be selected.

At Calgary writs have been issued against D. J. McLachlau, contractor, on behalf of the family of John Bristowe and Angus McDonald, alleging the defendant to be responsible for the south ward school accident.

INDIANS USED GUNS.

Two Constables From Pembroke Had a Warm Time.—They Were Both Wounded.

Pembroke, August 20.—In attempting to affect the arrest of an Indian on the Golden Lake reserve, twenty miles west of here, two Pembroke constables were fired upon by a party of Indians quartered in one of the houses on the reserve, with the result that the constables had narrow escapes with their lives, both being slightly wounded by bullets. A special force of constables was despatched from here on the train today to affect the arrest of the hostile Indians. The constables are heavily armed and are determined to take the Indians at any cost

There are not more than 100 Indians on the Golden Lake reserve and they have always been considered industrious and peaceable. The quiet of the reserve was disturbed on Friday last when an Indian named Serazan long at the wine and fire water on Saturday, and this roused his savage nature to such a pitch that he made a violent assault on one of the Indian women, a Mrs. Seymour, lacerating her face and beating her badly.

Word was sent to Pembroke of the trouble and a complaint laid before Police Magistrate S. E. Mitchell.

Constables Young and Dixon were sent out to the scene of the assault to arrest the Indian. When the constables arrived at the house they found the door locked, but they could hear voices conversing. Constable Dixon called out to the inmates to open the door. They replied they would not but would shoot any person who would attempt to get in. While Young, who is a powerful man, was endeavoring to break open the door Dixon tried to gain an entrance through the window.

Almost immediately on Dixon at tempting to gain an entrance at the window, there was a fusilade of bullets, one of which tore through Dixon's coat, vest and underclothing, making a scar across his chest. Dixon fell to the ground and called to Young that he was shot.

When Young came to Dixon's assistance the firing started again, and one bullet pierced the constable's hat, slightly grazing his forehead.

As the house was occupied by a number of armed parties, and Constable Dixon was wounded, the constables decided to return to Pembroke for assistance on the evening train. A posse of police went out on the noon train to capture the culprit, when it is expected there will be considerable trouble and serious work experienced by the law officers.

Avonmore W. C T. U.

The regular monthly meeting the W. C T. U., was held in the basement of Presbyterian Church on Aug. 7th. There was a large attendance of members, and others were prevented by the violent storm. The educational portion of the programme took the form of a "Mother's Meeting." The Bible reading was given by Mrs. Ed. Bethune; subject, 'The Bible in the Home," and showed the importance of its constant, daily use as the only foundation of truth and righteousness in bringing up children. Parents must first have it in their own hearts and then teach it dilligently to their children. Miss E. E. Hough gave a reading. 'The Home as a Christian Institution"; Mrs. C. H. Nesbitt "A talk to Mothers"; Mrs. (Rev.) Maclean gave a very helpful and instructive paper on "The Mother's Influence," followed by some practical suggestions as to mother's difficulties with children in the home; Mrs. M. C. Kirke gave a reading, "A Little Lamb Astray," and spoke briefly of the mother's opportunity of meeting and helping the children's longing for Christ in their early years. Plans were made for a "Mother's Meeting" ere long in one of the homes, hoping to reach many others of the mothers who might be reached and helped in this way. A large quantity of literature has been sent to superintendent of Lumberman's Work. A well-filled comfort bag is also to be sent to missionary. Five dollars has been already contributed to the missionary's salary.

Woman Posed as Man.

An individual who apparently was a young Englishman, secured employment in an Ottawa dry goods store last winter, and proved a success behind the counter. Articles have been missed from the store, and suspicion falling on the young man, a personal search was instituted in the office of the manager. The operation revealed the fact that the clerk was not a man, but a woman. A number of missing articles were found in her room. She was dismissed from the service of the firm, but the manager decided that criminal proceedings should not be instituted.

Father Ferron, assistant parish priest at Tilbury, was presented by his parishioners with $150 in gold.

English Directors for the Farmers' Bank.

Toronto, August 20.—A cable message from Mr. R. W. Travers, general manager of the Farmers' Bank, who is at present in London, England, to Dr. W. Beattie Nesbitt, president of the bank, announces the election of directors on the board, thus forming the London committee of the bank of the following gentlemen:—

The Right Hon. Viscount Templetown, of Castle Upton, Antrim County, Ireland; Col. Sir Chas. B. Ewan-Smith, K.C B., C.S.L., of London, England, and Henry Higgins, Esq., also of London. Viscount Templetown becomes Hon. President of the Farmers' Bank in place of the late Col. I. R. McLennan.

Mr Travers states that all the arrangements are satisfactory. It is understood that he has placed a large block of the stock of the Farmers' Bank in London. This, he notes, indicates that British capital is coming this way, rather than going to the United States.

Caused a Sensation.

Peterboro, Ont., August 19.—A sensation was created in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church last night, when the pastor, Rev. J. G. Potter, in a strong denunciation of the inconsistences of church members, charged a member of another Presbyterian church in the city with having been seen drinking at the bar in a hotel on the same night that three Indians secured whiskey and created a riot on a steamer. He characterized it as an intolerable state of affairs and further stated that members of the church participated in Sunday excursions, and while out of the city acted in a manner unbecoming church members and in a way which they would be ashamed to at home. His sermon, with the direct statements that local church members were leading double lives, has aroused deep feeling among not only the persons to whom they were directed, but Presbyterians generally.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr Shoop's Headache Tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.

If it's painful periods with women, same cause.

If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.

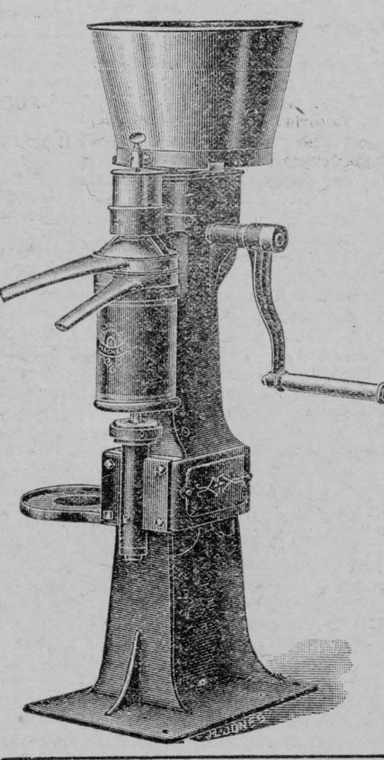
The Magnet Cream Separator.



The Petrie M'fg. Co., Ltd.

Hamilton, Ont.

Gentlemen,—I purchased a Magnet Cream Separator from your agent, C. M. Munro of Chesterville, I saw as soon as I examined it that it had many advantages over any other separator that I had seen. First, the square gear is more durable, second the bowl staid at both ends, third easy to turn and just the right height and easy to wash which I consider is a big saving of time and it skims perfectly clean.

I take pleasure in recommending the Magnet and would advise all dairymen to give it a trial.

I remain yours

CURED PAINFUL IRREGULARATIES.

Strong Testimony From a Lady Resident of Clarksuurg, Proving That Ferrozone Surpasses all Other Remedies.

The health of many women is constantly imperilled through failure of certain organs to work according to nature's requirements.

Where this condition occurs there is no safer remedy to employ than Ferrozone, which has a specific action in female troubles.

Not only does it act directly on the organs, ensuing regularity and freedom from pain, but by forming rich red blood fortifies the system against weaking drains

Ferro makes Strong women

Ferrozone possesses volume or merit totally absent in the ordinary medicine, and its superiority is proclaimed by thousands of women it has restored to vigorous health. From Mrs. F. G. Cadwell comes the following endorsement, written from her home in Clarksburg: "I went through a most trying experience with what is commonly known as 'Female trouble.' It isn't necessary to state my symptoms, but I suffered a gr at deal. My health was well nigh ruined and I got into such a condition that I couldn't even sleep I was dreadfully nervous, weak and pale. Different prescriptions were recommended and I tried them. But Ferrozone was the first to help. I improved steadily under Ferrozone, and normal conditions were finally established. I gained weight, my color and spirits improved, and my formal health was restored. Ferrozone cured me, and with a full heart I recommend this good medicine to all other women."

Beware of imitations—don't allow a druggist to palm off anything else for Ferrozone, which costs 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50

"Rubbish Shot Here."

Editor of Record,—

Allow me to call the attention of the people of Chesterville, to the very convenient receptacle provided by nature, at our very door, for the deposit of all kinds of refuse and rubbish. While the residents of other less favored localities are obliged to cart away and burn up, or bury their rubbish, all we have to do is to deposit it on the banks of the Nation river, or better still, dump it off the bridge. It is true, only a few of our enterprising and public-spirited citizens have as yet made use of the convenience, but the opportunity is open to all. It may be thought by some that the Council or Board of Health might object to this practice, through some antiquated notion of preserving the natural beauty of the village, or protecting the public health, but I think no one need fear interference from either of these bodies. According to the latest bulletin, they are both asleep.

Some villages are likened to ladies with Queen Anne fronts and Mary Ann backs; but we are straight goods—Mary Ann right through.

Poultry at MacDonald College.

In the Poultry Department, at Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., experiments are being conducted to improve the laying qualities of the hens. About 21,500 eggs were collected from 250 hens in the seven months ending June 30th, an average 86 eggs per hen, and the individual hens have varied from 2 eggs to about 145. About 1,400 chicken have been hatched from the eggs of the best layers.

The Poultry Department at Macdonald College appear to be very provocative of jocularity. Prof. Elford has been requested by one of the ladies of the institution to produce eggs with handles and flattened at one end. A young Englishman in the Poultry Department told that he had only one hen educated up to the point of marking her own eggs. He happened to stop at this very nest, and, taking out the marked egg, was able to produce evideuce of his veracity. A professor was one day showing around a couple from the University of Maine, and quoting the number of eggs laid by Macdonald hens. "We have one down in Maine that laid—I forgot how many—I think, over a thousand eggs in a year," said the lady. "Well," replied professor, "I do not know exactly what our best record is, but I am confident it is as good as yours."

Recently the Central Canada Exhibition Association Directors decided to issue a special Exhibition Ticket at a reduced rate. Parties who desire to club together and have one person write for them may do so and this person will have the privilege of securing all required for the parties interested. It's a microbe that floats in the air and gets into the throat and lungs, develops rapidly, excites inflamation &c. The cause is as simple as a thistle in the finger. That's why Catarrhozone acts so marvelously in Hay Fever Its fragrant vapour to you brings cure, but to the microbe death. A Hair Dressing

Nearly every one likes a fine hair dressing. Something to make the hair more manageable; to keep it from being too rough, or from splitting at the ends. Something, too, that will feed the hair at the same time, a regular hair-food. Well-fed hair will be strong, and will remain where it belongs—on the head, not on the comb!

BARBER KILLED IN ROW

Fatal End to Drunken Quarrel at Sault Ste. Marie.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: As the result of what is said to have been a drunken row that started in the Windsor Hotel at nine o'clock on Thursday night, Edward Hynes, a barber employed at the hotel, is dead, and Thomas Ryan, a blacksmith, who has lived in the "Soo" for years, and is respected by all, is in the cells, and will probably be compelled to answer to a charge of murder.

The row started in the barber shop in connection with the hotel. It appears that Ryan had had his hair cut in the shop some days ago, and while in the shop on Thursday night quizzed Hynes about it, saying that he was not satisfied. Words followed, and the spectators say that Ryan asked Hynes to go out into the yard and settle the matter. Hynes complied, and the two men left the shop, Hynes locking it.

Neil McDougall, proprietor of the hotel went to the front door of the place to call a policeman, and not seeing one in sight, returned to the rear of the house, presumably to put a stop to the fight. As he reached the yard, Ryan was mounting his steps to leave, and Hynes was lying upon the ground, apparently unconscious. McDougall secured assistance and Hynes was carried into the hotel, where it was found that he was dead. Dr. McCrae was hurriedly summoned, but life was extinct long before he arrived.

The police were notified and Ryan was found at his home on Albert Street. It is said he expressed surprise that Hynes was dead, having no idea that the fight had terminated fatally. Hynes was 38 years of age, and came to the "Soo" from the American side in June, formerly conducting the Grand Saloon in the American "Soo." He was single, and had always been regarded as quiet and inoffensive. Ryan is about 40 years of age, married, and has a family of three children.

KAID STILL A PRISONER.

Raisuli Sends a Threat to the British Minister.

A despatch from Tangier says: It has been learned that Kaid Sir Harry Maclean, the Englishman in the service of the Sultan of Morocco, who has been a prisoner of the bandit Raisuli since early in July, has not been set at liberty, as previously reported. The British Legation here on Wednesday received a communication from Raisuli threatening that unless his terms are accepted immediately he will remove Maclean to a place whither all the armies of Europe, if united, could not follow. It seems that Raisuli, upon hearing of the bombardment and occupation of Casablanca, succeeded in taking Maclean back from the Kmass tribesmen and removed him to a strategic position in the neighborhood of Ben Iarous. Maclean is well, but he has been deprived of his tent, and compelled to occupy an ordinary soldier's tent of small size. He is subsisting upon black bread.

SNAKE STARTLED EXPRESSMAN

It Escaped From Box in a Car at Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: Men at work about the Canadian Pacific depot are still talking of the peculiar consignment that came through Montreal on Wednesday on its way to Toronto. It should have been transferred at North Bay, but someone blundered, and so it came as far as Montreal. A couple of expressmen stepped into the car in which the consignment lay, and proceeded to clear it out. Suddenly one of them gave a yell, and, with his hair on end and his eyes popping out, jumped for the door. His companion shouted a question after him and turned to do the work alone, when he, too, stared intently for a brief and fleeting second into a corner of the car, after which he emitted a yell worse than the other one and tried to climb up the side of the car in his terror. The fact of the matter is, the men saw a snake. The snake had escaped from the box in the course of its trip to Toronto, where it is to be used for exhibition purposes.

The Cullinane diamond which will be presented to King Edward is the largest diamond ever found. It was dug up two years ago. It measures 4½ by 2¼ inches and weighs 3,032 carats. It has been insured for $2,500,000.

SALMON TO BE DEAR.

Catch at B. C. Canneries is Very Much Decreased.

A despatch from Vancouver, B. C., says: Only fifty thousand cases of sockeyes have been put up by Fraser River canneries, with the season within ten days of closing. Not more than five thousand more cases are expected. This is an off year. Last year the Fraser yielded eighty-five thousand cases. The whole Province this year to date has only two hundred and seventy-nine thousand cases, against four hundred and seventy thousand last year.

COLD IN MANITOBA.

But No Fears Entertained as Yet for the Crops.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The near approach of the harvest has been accompanied by a period of warm weather until Monday, when the temperature dropped somewhat, though not enough to cause any fears unless it continues to lower. Last week was warm and beneficial for the ripening grain. Cutting will become general throughout the province and the West within the next few days.

BANK TELLER'S MISTAKE.

He Paid Out Five Hundred Dollars Too Much.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The teller of the Bank of Montreal here paid out five hundred dollars too much one day last week, and as a result Sim Patrakos, a Greek, is under arrest, charged with having obtained the money. Patrakos presented a check for six hundred and fifty dollars, signed by M. J. Neville, local druggist. On discovery that the cash was five hundred short, Teller W. J. Rapsey claims that he positively remembered that he gave Patrakos ten one hundred dollar bills and thirty fives, thinking that he was giving him fifties instead of hundreds Patrakos denied that he had the extra money, and the bank placed him under arrest. On Saturday in court Patrakos pleaded not guilty, and was remanded for eight days.

TO TRANSPORT THE WHEAT.

C. P. R. Will Provide Fifteen Thousand Box Cars for the West.

A despatch from Montreal says: In order that the wheat crop may be properly handled, the Canadian Pacific has this year instituted inquiries with the object of ascertaining the number of cars required for the transportation of wheat. A report received from Winnipeg stated that the crop would probably require fifteen thousand box cars, with sufficient equipment of engines to handle them. These cars will be kept going steadily from western points to the great lakes, and will be enough to take care of the wheat as it is marketed. Local officials who are most conversant with the question of wheat transportation believe that there will be no car shortage this year.

WAS MOURNED AS DEAD.

St. Catharines Man Was Supposed to Have Been Drowned.

A despatch from St. Catharines says: After being mourned for as dead for the past eight years Harry Shelters returned to the city on Thursday. It was thought by his relatives that he went down with the ill-fated steamer Bannockburn when she sank in Lake Superior. He had shipped on the Bannockburn but missed the steamer at Fort William, thus escaping a watery grave. He has since wandered all around the West and down into the Southern States. No word was received from him by his relatives during his wanderings. His homecoming was not as happy as could be wished, for his mother died but recently and her son knew nothing of the sad occurrence.

GAGGED, BOUND AND BEATEN.

Man Found on Montreal Street in Pitiful Condition.

A despatch from Montreal says. Gagged, bound, and beaten almost into unconsciousness, David Cadieux was found early on Saturday morning on Parc Lafontaine by passers-by, who beheld his pitiful plight and heard his groans. When the two people who picked him up and removed the gag from his mouth unbound his limbs, and gave him time to explain the details of what had happened to him, he told a strange story—a story that speaks volumes for the daring and brutality of the "thugs" that haunt Montreal's streets, highways, byways, and public parks in the hours of the evening. While passing through the park on Friday night, he was attacked by thugs, who, after robbing, gagged and bound him. For several hours after the hold-up Cadieux lay struggling on the ground, in vain trying to rid himself of the gag that scarcely allowed him to breathe, and to free himself of the ropes that bit into the flesh of his arms and legs. At length the pedestrians, who happened nearby, attracted by the sound of the unfortunate man's groans, approached to where he lay and released him.

FELL INTO BOILING WATTR.

Italian Employed in London Factory Meets With Terrible Accident.

A despatch from London, Ont., says: Paul Wotell, an Italian employed in the enameling department of the McClary Manufacturing Co., fell into a vat of boiling water on Thursday morning and was so badly scalded that he may die. Three-fourths of the surface of his body was immersed, and the skin peeled off his breast, back and arms. He was removed to Victoria Hospital. Wotell is a single man and has only been in the city a short time.

With such information supplied, the department would be able to keep closer check on undesirable immigrants and deport them.

HAND CRUSHED AND BURNED.

Welland Girl Victim of Terrible Accident in a Laundry.

A despatch from Welland says: Phoebe Gothard, a fourteen-year-old girl, not long out from the Old Country, met with a frightful accident in the Uneda Laundry on Saturday morning. Her hand was caught in a mangle and ran through to the wrist before the machine was reversed. The under roller is kept intensely hot, and the whole palm of the hand was horribly burned. Besides this, all the bones were crushed, a ring on one finger being driven right through the bone. The girl was taken to the General Hospital, Niagara Falls, and the doctors fear that it may be necessary to amputate the hand; at any rate it will be permanently disabled.

From the United States the number was 56,518, as compared with 57,796 for the preceding year, a loss of 1,278, about 2 per cent.

AN ITALIAN MURDERED

Stabbing Affray at Collingwood Results Fatally.

A despatch from Collingwood says: An Italian and a knife are responsible for one man's death, the victim being Antonio Ferri, a member of a gang of Italians engaged on the sewerage work here. The alleged murderer is Libretto Ruzzi, one of the same gang. The trouble occurred on Monday afternoon, and arose over the payment of a share in the purchase of some liquor, Ruzzi, it is said, refusing to pay his share. As far as can be learned, these two men became engaged in a serious quarrel, when Ferri threw a glass at Ruzzi, who rushed at him with a jack-knife, stabbing him. Ferri was removed to the hospital, where upon examination Dr. McBroome found two very deep gashes and four smaller wounds, one of the former being over the heart and the others in the abdomen. Ruzzi immediately made off, and has not yet been captured. It is believed that he is hiding in the woods a few miles out of the town. Ferri lingered until early on Friday morning. Before his death he made his will, leaving some $600 in a local bank to a brother, Cammine Ferri, who lives at Sault Ste. Marie. He also made an ante-mortem statement before John Nettleton, Police Magistrate, in which he gave the cause of the quarrel, as already stated, and admitted that he was the first offender, throwing a drinking-glass at Ruzzi, who rushed at him, stabbing him six times with his knife.

BAD FIRE AT BLIND RIVER.

Three Million Feet of Lumber and Dock Destroyed.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: A destructive fire at Blind River, at an early hour on Thursday morning, did $150,000 damage to the plants of the Dominion Lumber Co., Moore and McDonald, Moulthrop Lumber Co., Hope Lumber Co., Morgan Lumber Co., White Pine Lumber Co. The fire started from an unknown cause at the extreme end of the tramway, on the water front, and before being noticed had gained considerable headway. The firemen at Blind River were unable to cope with the conflagration and the services of the "Soo" brigade were requested by wire. The docks held about 7,000,000 feet of lumber, nearly half of which was destroyed. The firemen were compelled to remove a portion of the tramway with dynamite, and throw the lumber into the river before the fire could be stopped.

A NAIL IN HIS BRAIN.

Three-inch Spike Driven Into William Albright's Skull.

A despatch from New York says: When the surgeons in the Williamsburg Hospital made an examination on Tuesday of William Albright, an iron worker, who fell from the new elevated railroad structure at the Brooklyn plaza of the Williamsburg Bridge Monday afternoon, they found under his hair the head of a nail flattened against his skull. Surgeons took out the nail, which was three inches long, and found it had driven a hole into Albright's brain. The physicians believe that the nail was upright on the pavement when the iron worker fell. The surgeons could not see that he had been injured, but they were puzzled that the iron worker did not regain consciousness. They say he cannot recover.

DIED AT HUNDRED AND THREE

Centenarian of Stromness Emigrated to Canada in 1847.

A despatch from Welland says: Patrick Corcoran, of Stromness, is dead, at the home of his nephew, Matt Corcoran. He was a hundred and three years of age on February 2nd last. In 1847 he emigrated to Canada and has since lived at Stromness. His youngest brother, Michael, resides at St. Catharines. He was a bachelor, a total abstainer, and never used tobacco in any form. Though a great reader, he never wore glasses. Death resulted from a stroke of paralysis, which he suffered two weeks ago.

SHOT TWO, THEN HIMSELF.

Italian Killed Sweetheart, Wounded Her Friend, Committed Suicide.

A despatch from Chicago says: Michael DeTrain, an Italian, on Wednesday night shot and instantly killed Alvina Vultmann, seriously wounded her cousin, Alvon Awald, and then killed himself. DeTrain and Miss Vultmann were said to have been engaged at one time, but the girl had recently refused to marry, because of his wild conduct. The man blamed the girl's cousin for his dismissal. Miss Awald received a severe scalp wound, but will recover. The bullet was deflected by a comb she wore in her hair.

GRASSHOPPERS EAT CROPS.

Destroying Oats and Barley in Vicinity of Sundridge.

A despatch from Toronto says: Grasshoppers are destroying oats and barley in the vicinity of Sundridge, Parry Sound, says Mr. Anderson Elliott, who has been judging standing crops for the Provincial Department of Agriculture. The insects eat the beards of barley and the leaves of oats, consequently, as the oats may not average more than two bushels an acre, and the barley 10, Mr. Elliott advised that the crops be cut at once, even though unripe.

BURNED BY VITRIOL.

Two Men at Hull Will Probably Lose Their Legs.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Zephyr Legault, Joseph Charron and a man named Duchesne, of Hull, were nearly burned to death on Friday afternoon by vitriol while working at Eddy's mills. The three men were emptying a bottle containing five gallons of vitriol, when one of them lost his grip on the bottle, which fell on the floor and broke, the contents falling on all three men. They were terribly burned, and two of them will probably have to have both legs amputated.

The harvest has commenced in Rosthern district, Sask., and the yield is reported good.

PULLED HIS ARM OFF.

Remarkable Exhibition of Strength and Nerve.

A despatch from Moncton, N. B., says: A shocking accident occurred at Beresford, near Bathurst, on Friday morning, by which William O'Brien was working in his sawmill when his right arm was caught by the belt. Quickly the arm was drawn around the pulley, and there seemed no possible way of O'Brien saving his life with the deadly machinery drawing him to certain death. O'Brien, who is a powerful man, resisted with all his strength, with the result that he saved his life at the expense of his right arm, which was literally torn frm its socket at the shoulder. The mill hands were horrified at the terrible sight. O'Brien, who exhibited such great nerve, was perfectly conscious, but suffered excruciating pain. The accident happened just before the arrival of the east-bound Campbellton express, and the injured man was placed aboard of this and hurried to Bathurst for medical attention.

BELFAST STRIKE SETTLED.

Protracted Negotiations Result in a Compromise.

A despatch from Belfast says: The negotiations between the arbitrators and the leaders of the strikers resulted on Thursday in a settlement of the labor troubles here. The agreement is in the nature of a compromise. The men returned to work on Friday at a slight increase of wages and with fixed hours, while employers are left entirely free to employ either unionists or non-unionists.

ONLY HALF A PACK.

Salmon Canneries Have Had a Bad Season—An Off Year.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Reports of the Fisheries Department show that the salmon pack this year will be an exceptionally poor one. The British Columbia Packers' Association estimate the pack at 225,000 cases of 48 pounds each as against 473,674 cases in 1903 the corresponding "off" year. The season on the Fraser River closes on August 25, and before that date the deficiency cannot possibly be made up.

DYNAMITE FACTORY EXPLODES.

Nine Killed and Twenty Injured at Doemitz.

A despatch from Berlin, Germany, says: A dynamite factory at Doemitz, Grand Duchy of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, exploded on Thursday. One life is known to have been lost, eight persons are missing, and are regarded as killed, twenty persons were dangerously injured and six were slightly hurt.

Her condition became so alarming that she was brought here and placed in an hospital. She is now reported to be much better, but is not yet out of danger, although she is expected to recover.

HORSEFLESH FOR FOOD.

Mr. Hart, a Chicago Buyer, Is Inquiring In Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: Mr. E. A. Hart of Chicago has called upon Dr. Laberge, Medical Health Officer, in regard to the slaughter of horses for human consumption. It was desired to purchase horses in Montreal and ship them to Chicago, where they could be turned into human food. The stranger was referred to special horse dealers in the city, but as the prices of horses are high in Montreal, it is not thought much business will be done here. Dr. Laberge was asked if he thought the trade in horse meat would be successful in Montreal. His reply was that the public would have to be educated to like the meat, which, it appears, is much appreciated in Paris and other cities.

POISON IN FOUR ONLY.

Tests of Almond Extracts—Not Enough to be Dangerous.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Owing to recent cases of apparent poisoning from the use of almond extracts supposed to contain prussic acid, an analysis was made in the Department of Inland Revenue of 65 samples collected throughout the Dominion. The tests showed 61 samples of essence of bitter almonds to be free from prussic acid. In four there was merely a measurable quantity, insufficient to be dangerous.

MAN STILL MUCH EATEN

THE FAVORITE FOOD OF THE SAVAGES OF THE CONGO.

Cannibal Tribes Are Superior, Mentally and Physically, to the Non-Eaters.

Man is still much eaten by his fellow man. It is estimated that millions of savages on the upper Congo are inveterate cannibals. Millions more perhaps have the same taste in New Guinea and certain groups of the South Sea Islands, notably the Solomons, the New Hebrides and New Ireland.

Why this should be so is a mystery that has perplexed the anthropologists. David Livingstone, the first white man to cross the Manyema country in Central Africa, was reluctant to believe that cannibalism was not in some way associated with superstitious rites. But when he saw the eagerness of the natives for what was evidently their favorite food he could no longer close his eyes to the simple fact—the Congo man preferred human flesh to any other kind of meat.

The extent of the practice is indicated in the evidence given before the various Congo inquiry commissions. One native witness after another came forward and laid on the table bundles of twigs or leaves, each one representing a human being that had been killed and eaten by the so-called sentries employed by the Belgian administration to supervise the bringing in of rubber.

It has even been asserted that those tribes which do not indulge in the practice are inferior, mentally and physically, to the cannibals. "And yet," said Livingstone, speaking of the Manyema, "they are a fine looking race. I would back them to be superior in shape and general physique to the entire Anthropological Society."

For many years travellers generally omitted from their books mention of cannibalism. Such stories would, they fancied, be considered exaggerated if not

POSITIVELY UNTRUE.

But of late the explorers of all nationalities have studied both people and practice with scientific zeal.

Sir Harry Johnston, Herbert Ward, Commandant Guy Burrows of the Congo administration, Dr. Parke, Capt. S. L. Hinde, also in King Leopold's service, and many others have spent years among the Congo tribes, and then give in a matter-of-fact way details of the habits of the savages which are almost incredible. In the Bangala country not only are the bodies of those slain in battle eaten, but the natives habitually kill men for food. And about this there is much curious system, such as inclines students of anthropology to suspect some hidden origin.

Thus the prisoner is not killed outright, but is placed chin deep in a pool of water with his head made fast to a log lest he drown. The victim's limbs, by the way, have been broken three days previously. On the third day the poor creature is taken out and killed. This procedure, the fierce Bangala say, makes the flesh more tender.

Capt. S. L. Hinde, returning home from Stanley Falls on the Congo, had personal experience of these people. On the down river trip to Boma six of the Bangala crew were put in irons, charged with having eaten two of their own companions. The accused were magnificent savages, over 6 feet high and superbly proportioned.

Two of the crew, it seemed, had fallen ill on the voyage up, and were allowed by the captain to take a few days rest. But when next rations were served they were missing. The master of the steamer was told they had died in the night and been buried ashore. And this seemed likely enough. But the captain of the ship had his doubts. He made a sudden raid on the quarters of his Bangala hands, and discovered smoke dried and cut up conveniently in the lockers of the six suspects, now going to trial at Leopoldville.

In truth, the Darwinian theory of the survival of the fittest is seen in Central Africa in all its pitiless application. Even women, unable to keep up with the march of the warriors, are killed and cut up for food instead of being left behind at the mercy of other tribes or wild beasts. Nor do the blacks of the Congo forest encumber themselves with the sick or lame, who are similarly disposed of.

The cannibals in all cases extract the teeth of their human prey for necklaces and bracelets. The hair is made into fishing lines and nets; the skin goes to cover war drums and the skulls become fashionable decorations in the homes of tribal chiefs, whose greatest glory is a long array of these trophies of the chase.

Commandant Guy Burrows, lately in the service of the Congo Administration, told the writer of a curious story of the Batake people, a body of whom he led in a punitive expedition against the Ma-Lode tribes.

"I saw a boy hit in the shoulder by a ball from an old muzzle loader," he said, "and yet, although seriously hurt, he looked entirely unconcerned; they are utter fatalists, these fellows. His comrades carried him on one side, away from the rest of the wounded, and when I saw this I remarked: 'Take that boy up or he'll get hit again.'

"At this half a dozen grave elders came to me expostulating. 'He is only a young lad,' they grumbled. 'You might just as well let us have him for killing when the fight is over.' I drove the monsters from me with my chicotte or hippo hide whip.

"The boy recovered and served me for years. But those Batake cannibals never forgave me. They deserted in dignified protest, disgusted with me for refusing them such a trifle after they had borne the heat and burden of the day. And I know they smarted long under a sense of gross injustice."

During the same campaign Commandant Burrows saw another side of this practice. Sitting at his tent door one evening after camp had been pitched he watched his man getting their supper ready. The day had been marked by forced marches and sharp fighting, in which both sides left many dead in the thick jungle.

Presently in the gathering dusk a huge savage passed him stealthily, with a big bundle on his shoulder wrapped in leaves of the wild banana palm. Challenged by Burrows, the man said he was only bearing food for his comrades—just banana food. But in fact he and several others had been constantly going to and fro from the scene of the fight, cutting up the bodies and bringing them down in small parcels so as not to attract the white man's attention as they passed his tent.

Yet in this very country are tribes that would not eat human flesh if they were starving; the curious little pygmies, for instance, of the Great Forest. Yet these are infinitely lower in the social scale than the cannibals—little better than apes, in fact.

Their huts would disgrace an intelligent animal. They have no arts, nor do they till the soil. These queer little nomads exist by hunting, trapping and fishing. They even pursue the elephant, shooting it in the foot with poisoned arrows and then tracking it until it becomes helpless, when they finish off the monster with their spears.

Capt. Ewart S. Grogan, the explorer, who walked the whole length of Africa from the Cape to Cairo, collected ample testimony of the pygmies' aversion to human flesh. He witnessed a big tribal fight in this country between the Bateke and the Bangala, and after all was over he came upon the victors feasting on the bodies of the slain, while the tiny ape men, weary as they were with their share of the fray, were scouring the country round for vegetable food.

Herbert Ward, F. R. G. S., is another traveller who has given much study to this question. And he, too, testifies that the savages of the Upper Congo simply prefer human meat to any other.

They asked him innocently if he also did not enjoy it, and each headman in bringing presents to the white traveller—skinny fowls, bananas, sugar cane, and so on—invariably included quantities of smoke dried meat, spitted on skewers and unmistakeably of human origin. "We do as our fathers have done," these savages told him with an indifferent shrug, when remonstrated with on the subject. "It is good to eat meat that talked," complacently said another tribe.

In the Ubangi country Mr. Ward beheld the men's necks adorned with strings of human teeth, dried fingers and collarbones; and all the houses were decorated with skulls on the outside. In the Ngombi region on the Lulungu River, a mighty tributary of the Congo, eight hundred miles from the Atlantic coast, Mr. Ward found a series of strongly fortified villages, where the Ubangi cannibals came to buy slaves, drawing upon the supplies for food as required.

Turning to the South Sea Islands, the Germans, Dutch and British are striving to put down cannibalism in their respective spheres in New Guinea. So far these efforts have met with little success. The practice is too deep seated to be eradicated in a generation or two. No New Guinea maiden will look with favor on a suitor whose hut is not plastered with human skulls as testimony to his prowess as hunter and general provider for the home.

In the Solomon Islands, New Britain and New Ireland, the natives are also cannibals from deliberate choice. In the Fiji Islands as late as 1850 lived cannibals as ruthless as any on earth. They fattened their victims in wooden cages until they were ready for the braining stones, which you may see in Ovalau to this day, together with notches on the trees recording the number of human beings sent to the ovens.

WISE PARENTS.

Guard Their Children's Health by Giving Them Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The health of the growing boy or girl should be carefully guarded. During the growing time there is a danger of the blood becoming poisoned and the health seriously impaired. The blood should be kept pure and the child will grow strong, healthy and active. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an ideal tonic for the young. They never fail to bring color to the pale cheeks and strength to the growing body. To a reporter of L'Avenir du Nord, Mr. Jos. Provost, of St. Canute, Que., tells how these pills saved his daughter Marie from a life of misery. He says: "A year ago my daughter, a girl of thirteen, was very weak. She was so ill that I feared she was going into consumption. Though I tried remedy after remedy she remained in this state for several months and I began to think she never would get better. I read of the good Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had been in a case of anaemia, so got some for her. Soon she began to improve; her appetite returned; she grew strong; color came into her cheeks and to-day she is as healthy as any young girl could be. I firmly believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved her life."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are equally as successful in bringing those of mature age back to health as they are in building up the young. They make pure, red blood—that is why they banish anaemia, rheumatism, St. Vitus dance, heart palpitation, indigestion and the secret ills of girlhood and womanhood. But you must get the genuine bearing the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around each box. All other so-called Pink Pills are imitations. If your medicine dealer does not keep the genuine pills they will be sent at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

COMPRESSED PHLOSOPHY.

The man who has nothing for which to strive can find no pleasure in this world.

Trouble is so perverse that it never comes to the man who is fully prepared for it.

Many a man has failed because his desire for fame did not equal his love of sleep.

It takes a really great man to come out bravely and admit that he was in the wrong.

Few men are courageous enough to follow their own conscience if the conscience of the world doesn't agree with it.

The danger of the delights of this world vanishing even after we have them, is what makes them so precious.

It's easy to dress a profitable business in the garb of respectability.

SHOULD THE DOCTOR TELL?

In Regard to Whether His Patient's Disease is Fatal?

"Ought the doctor to tell his patient frankly what is the matter with him, even though the disease be a fatal one?" This question, raised by the censure of a coroner's jury of a doctor whose patient, told that he had consumption, committed suicide, was discussed by a Harley street, London physician lately.

Speaking to a London Daily Mail representative, he divided patients into (1) those who want to know the truth, (2) those who already know, but hope to be told that things are not so bad, and will gladly swallow a lie; and (3) those who do not want to know anything.

"The majority of patients," he said, "leave the doctor no alternative. They demand a 'yes' or 'no.' Take heart disease. The patient says: 'Is my heart diseased?' He is paying for your opinion, and you reply: 'Your heart is not sound; it is weak. Don't run to catch trains, and do not do this and that!'

"The trouble is that heart disease to the public means one thing only—death. If it meant a variety or more or less grave affections of the heart we should not perhaps have those 'stand and deliver' questions. Another question is: 'How long shall I live?' No doctor who knows his business will set a limit by request on any patient's days. Many a doctor has been borne to the grave followed by hale and hearty men that he 'gave up' years before."

They are a Powerful Nervine.—Dyspepsia causes derangement of the nervous system, and nervous debility once engendered is difficult to deal with. There are many testimonials as to the efficacy of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills in treating this disorder, showing that they never fail to produce results. By giving proper tone to the digestive organs, they restore equilibrium to the nerve centres.

DOGS PICK MASTER'S SHEEP FROM THOUSANDS.

While on a walking tour in Scotland on the road to St. Catherine's, some Americans met two shepherds, who, after some conversation, offered to take us a short cut over the moors and show us the clever way in which their dogs worked. There were three flocks of sheep on the hills belonging do different owners. Sitting down on the hillside, the shepherds told their two dogs (in Gaelic) to separate the sheep and bring their own flocks up to where we were resting. There were a thousand sheep or more scattered over the moor. First rounding them all up in a bunch, the dogs collected their own sheep together, driving away the strangers by barking and chasing them, but not hurting them in the least. Within an hour they had the two flocks belonging to their masters compactly gathered, and brought them in two divisions, one on each side of us.

MAN FOUND DEAD.

Bryson. August 20.—Something of a sensation was created in this neighborhood by the discovery of the body of a man lying in the road at Shawville, about a mile and a half from here, at about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He had blood upon his face and was quite dead.

A farmer named Thomas McTiernan was driving home from Bryson when he met John Matheson, somewhat under the influence of liquor. He spoke to the man, but receiving no answer drove on. His path was shortly blocked by the dead body of Hugh Matheson, brother of the first named, which was lying across the road.

Mr. McTiernon lifted the body off the road, and acquainted the wife of the deceased, who lives but a couple of acres from the spot, with the tragedy. The body was at once removed, and the coroner duly notified.

The whole affair is at present a mystery. All that is known is that the two brothers were around drinking, and eventually set out to take each other home to Shawville. The death might, of course, have been accidental, and the blood have been from the nose. Until the doctors testify before the coroner nothing can be decided.

Robert John Kyle Dead.

Robert John Kyle, who has been ailing for the past year, died last Friday evening at his residence, North Winchester. The deceased was born at North Winchester in 1854, fifty-three years ago, and except for a few years spent in Eastman's Springs and the city of Ottawa, has resided here all his life. For some years he has been postmaster and has carried on business in the stand formerly occupied by his father, the late J. S. Kyle, but lately his attention has been chiefly paid to his farm. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church and one of its trustees, having accepted that position on the death of his father, over a year ago.

Mr. Kyle was well respected in the community, as was experienced by the large number who attended the funeral service, which was held on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 10th, 1907, in the Presbyterian Church Morewood. Rev. D. Stewart preached the funeral sermon, but the service at the house and grave was conducted by Court Russell I.O.F.. No. 49, of which deceased was a charter member. He was one of the oldest Foresters in Canada, and many visiting brethren from Winchester, Morewood and Russell, paid their last tribute of respect to their departed brother. The floral offerings were beautiful and costly.

He is survived by his mother, his wife, one son Joseph Emerson, three sisters and two brothers, all of whom were present at the old home on Sunday last.

The RECORD extends to the bereaved ones its sincerest sympathy.

The working expenses were 12¾ per cent of the revenue The work of the association was approved by the Grand Lodge.

Invitations to hold the next annual meeting were received from Hamilton. Ottawa, St. Thomas, Sault Ste. Marie, and Niagara Falls. St Thomas was given the privilege, although the Ottawa delegates made a strong plea.

The Late Rev. Dr. Crombie.

(Smith's Falls Record Aug. 20.)

In the death of Rev. Dr. Crombie yesterday afternoon there passed away a man who for nearly two score years had filled a large and influental place in the social and religious life of Smith's Falls. On the 4th of March 1869 he was inducted to the charge of what was then called the Union (Presbyterian) church, now St. Paul's, and for the 38 intervening years he had lived an actful useful life in this community and a singularly unselfish one. In 1887 he resigned the pastorate of St. Paul's church after 32 years' of service as a minister, and building for himself a pretty little home in the west end he settled down to spend the remainder of his days among a people by whom he was greatly beloved. This does not apply only to those to whom he had ministered but those of every church in the town and those of no church at all, if such there be, for his broad catholicity of spirit, his unwearying labors, his lofty ideals, his steadfast loyalty as a friend and his sweetness and purity of life gave him a great influence for good which as a man and minister of the gospel he was quick to use. As a result, he was widely known throughout the town, and the esteem and affection entertained for him by those of his own communion were fully shared by the people of the other churches, the pulpits of which he frequently was asked to fill. For many years he was Clerk of the Presbytery of Lanark and Renfrew and rendered signal service in this capacity, being familarly known as the law giver of the assembly. Only a little more than two year ago, or on the 23rd of May 1905 he celebrated his Jubilee—the 50th anniversary of his ordination to the ministry, and the occasion was a memorable one. Seated in the pulpit of St. Paul's church which he had occupied for 18 years, and surrounded by a large number of friend he received the congratulations of his fellow ministers, his former parishioners and of hosts of others who were proud to call him friend. At that time he resigned the office of Clerk of the Presbytery owing to advancing years, but he never lost interest in the great work to which his life had been dedicated. His attendance at the sick bed was often in demand and in the house of mourning his presence was a benediction. And now he has gone to his reward, having served so faithfully here can we doubt but that with ears and heart attuned in the quiet of his bed chamber yesterday he heard the "well done" of the Master and the call to a higher fuller service in the life beyond.

While he had been in failing health for some years he was really only critically ill since last Friday. He suffered from heart trouble and on Friday he had an acute seizure and gradually sank from that time until the end which came unexpectedly yesterday afternoon.

A Suggestion of Rare Value.

A diseased condition of the surfaces of the air passages causes bad breath, but more commonly emenates from indigestion or an impure condition of the blood. Thousands of cases prove that Dr. Hamilton's Pills through their specific action on the secretory and eliminative organs, not only cure bad breath, but so thoroughly purify the system that anything suggestive of blood or digestive troubles is impossible. Through Dr. Hamilton's Pills the skin grows rosy and clear, activity of the mind increases, and bounding health is established, sold everywhere in 25c boxes.

Two Months for Bigamy.

Whitby, Aug. 20.—This afternoon in the police Court, at the resumed hearing of the charge of bigamy against George Hicks, his first wife appeared and gave evidence, swearing that she had seen her husband within seven years. Hicks could not deny this. In defence he claimed that he honestly believed that he could legally marry again. Evidence that he had made no effort to conceal his second in the community where the fact of his first marriage was well known, was advanced as coroborative of his honorable intentions and belief. The Magistrate found him guilty of the charge of bigamy, but owing to the circumstances made the sentence light two months in jail at hard labor.

EXTRAORDINARY ONES OCCUR IN A GREAT CITY.

Mix-up of Motor-Car, Hansom and Cart —A Horse Caught in a Bed Spring.

Many curious accidents occur in the streets of London, England, and at least one witnessed by the present writer is worth narrating. It was near the junction of Waterloo Bridge and the Strand, and the principals involved were a large motor-car, a hansom, and a cart piled high with iron rails. The latter almost dragged on the ground at one end, while at the other they stuck at least twelve feet up in the air. The motor-car, in endeavoring to avoid the cart, ran into the cab, with the result that the cabman was shot high into the air and came down on the top of the steel rods. He fell "easy'," and after clinging to the rods he slid to the ground unhurt.

But some of the strangest accidents the writer has witnessed have been in the streets of New York. A few weeks ago, for instance, some firemen had the novel experience of chasing a fire that was on wheels, and behind a very much frightened pair of horses. It appeared that a man called Blanco had left his oil wagon at noon, and went into a building at Seventy-eighth Street and Second Avenue to deliver some goods. The oil was in tin cans, and while Blanco was upstairs

ONE OF THEM GOT IGNITED.

In a moment the can exploded, scattering the burning oil over the other cans and the street. Then the other cans began to explode and the horses started to run. An alarm was turned in, and while the firemen were coming up Second Avenue they saw the runaway horses and the blazing wagon going down Seventy-seventh Street toward First Avenue, and the pursuit started. The wagon was soon overtaken and the runaways released.

In April last traffic near the Brooklyn Bridge was blocked for twenty minutes by a queer accident in which a horse and a bed spring figured. A truck loaded with bed springs from a factory was crossing the bridge when one of the springs fell to the roadway. A horse attached to a truck close behind stepped on to the springs, and the spiral wires, breaking from the framework, coiled around the front legs of the animal. The horse plunged and floundered until he was hopelessly entangled. A long line of cars was held up, and motor-men and conductors aided the driver in his efforts to release the horse. All attempts, however, failed, and finally a repair wagon was summoned. The linemen had to cut away the springs before the horse could be released.

But perhaps the queerest sight was one to which a Broadway crowd was treated in the early part of April last. This was nothing less than a man in an automobile with

A HORSE IN HIS LAP.

A dismantled delivery wagon impeded the efforts of the horse to climb down from the auto, while behind the wagon was a north-bound Broadway car with dented dashboard. The car was approaching Twenty-second Street at a good speed when it bumped into the delivery wagon with a jolt which sent the driver and his assistant sprawling into the road. At the moment of impact the front of the auto belonging to a Mr. J. B. Davis was within a few feet of the horse's head. When the car bumped the wagon the horse was propelled into the auto.

Davis had no time to escape, and was caught by the horse. He shouted for help, and grasped hands which were stretched forth to drag him from the seat. But no amount of hauling would release him. Assured after a few moments that he was in no danger of injury from the hoofs of the horse, Davis made light of his predicament. It began to get monotonous, however, after five minutes had passed and the horse continued to repose in his lap. Finally, the car was backed away and a score of hands laid hold of the wagon, which was withdrawn as gently as possible, dragging the horse out of Davis's lap. Though the hood and guards of the auto were smashed, Davis was unscathed.—London Tit-Bits.

SERUM TO BAFFLE TYPHOID.

German Physicians Discover New Cure After Experiments.

Abdominal typhoid fever need no longer be feared if the new serum produced by Drs. Meyer and Bergell, of Berlin, Germany, in the laboratory of Prof. von Leyden fulfills all expectations. It is learned that the professor himself is virtually convinced of its efficacy. He explained that the typhoid serum discovered some time ago gave remarkable results in rendering human beings immune from typhoid.

It was foundw , however, when the serum was injected in the course of an attack of the disease the patient invariably succumbed. He and his collaborators thereupon set to work to find out the causes of the fatal effect. These were eventually traced to toxins in dead typhoid bacilli contained in the original serum.

Efforts were then directed toward obtaining a serum absolutely free from protoplasms. After two years of arduous experiments, horses being used as subjects for inoculation, a serum was produced in which the organic matter had been decomposed by means of muriatic acid and low temperatures.

Human patients were subjected to injections of this with the result in several instances of splendid effects. Some cures were effected even in severe cases, and one patient, although badly attacked, after two injections within seven days, was completely cured except for the ensuing weakness.

Prof. V n Leyden is anxious for the serum to undergo a crucial test of a serious epidemic of typhoid before pronouncing final judgment.

BABY'S HOLD ON LIFE.

Baby's Own Tablets cost 25 cents a box. A box bought now may save your baby's life. Summer complaints come often without warning, and thousands of little ones die from them every summer. If children's stomach and bowels are kept in order there is little danger of these troubles, and that is just what Baby's Own Tablets do. They are good for the new born baby or the well grown child—and they are absolutely safe. Give your child an occasional dose of Tablets and you will keep it well. If you have not got a box of Tablets in the house now, send for them at once, and you may feel that your little ones are safe. Mrs. Wm. Parrott, Myrtle, Ont., says: "My little boy suffered greatly from colic, and cried almost continuously. A few doses of the Tablets cured him, and now I give the Tablets occasionally to prevent the trouble returning." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

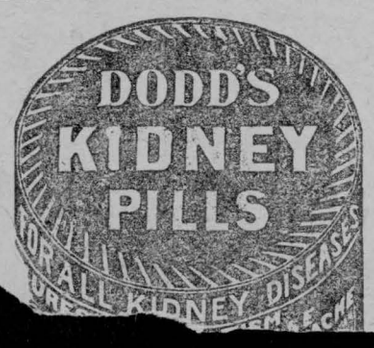
AN ANCIENT CUSTOM.

An old custom of great antiquity still prevails in the town of Oakham, in Rutlandshire, England. Every peer of the realm passing near the castle, which was built by Walkelin de Ferrers, is expected to deliver a shoe from the foot of one of his horses, or to pay a fine in default. The fine usually takes the form of an ornamental horseshoe, often surmounted by the coronet of the peer presenting it. The total number of shoes at present in possession of the local authorities is 300, and among the most valued are those presented by Queen Elizabeth, King George IV., Queen Victoria, and Queen Alexandra.



AN ANGLER'S ELYSIUM.

According to advertisements all summer resorts are alike. They are the best ever—but if fishing is better anywhere else than it is in "Georgian Bay" we do not know where it is. There is a greater variety of fish in this water than anywhere else, and they are always hungry. No one ever counted the fish in the Georgian Bay, but those that have been caught there have been counted and eaten, and if you read the Government reports on fisheries, you know that Georgian Bay supplies more fish than any other equal body of water in the world. The only place you can afford to fish is where the fish are numerous, big and delicious in flavor, and that place is Georgian Bay—so the fishermen say. Suppose you send for booklet, issued by Grand Trunk Railway System, free, telling about the home of the bass, pickerel, pike and the noble trout family. Address J. D. A Cure for Rheumatism.—The intrusion of uric acid into the blood vessels is a fruitful cause of rheumatic pains. This irregularity is owing to a deranged and unhealthy condition of the liver Anyone subject to this painful affection will find a remedy in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Their action upon the kidneys is pronounced and most beneficial, and by restoring healthy action, they correct impurities in the blood.

Nor do climatic changes affect it. It is as serviceable in the Arctic Circle as in the Torrid Zone, perhaps more useful in the higher latitudes, where man is more subject to colds from exposure to the elements.

"Young man," said the serious gentleman, "did you ever pause and think that each tick of the clock brings you another moment nearer to the end of your existence?" PEOPLE'S WAYS ON STAIRS.

The Thoughtless Man Who Monopolizes the Narrow Stairway.

"It disturbs me always," said a quick moving man, "when I'm climbing a pair of stairs just wide enough for two to find ahead of me a man walking up squarely in the middle, where nobody can pass him on either side, thus practically monopolizing the whole stairway. I am not disturbed primarily because his walking thus keeps me from going ahead past him, though that does disturb me some, but because of the evident thoughtlessness of others that his walking so reveals. I hate to see thoughtless people. This man sees ahead of him nobody coming down, the stairway there is clear, and that's as far as he thinks. The ostrich buries its head in the sand and thinks that thereby it wholly conceals itself—the man going up the middle of the stairs sees the way clear ahead and never thinks that somebody may be coming up behind.

"I dodge to one side, thinking that perhaps I can get past him there, but only to find him, quite by chance of course, swaying to that side and so blocking me there; and then I try the other side, there to be blocked in the same way and to become, I confess, by this time somewhat irritated. But there is nothing for me to do then but to keep my temper and follow the man in the middle until he steps clear of the stairs on the platform, where there is room to pass him.

"The fact is that the man mounting the stairs in this way in the middle may be worse than thoughtless, he may be doing this from innate piggishness; he may be one of those men who naturally pig everything in sight. But the very best that can be said for him is that he is a thoughtless man, a man who habitually thinks only of [illegible] for such a man I h[illegible]

OIL FROM RABBITS' SKINS.

A new industry has been started in Australia in connection with rabbits. Nearly half a gallon of oil possessing valuable lubricating qualities has been obtained by a rabbiter at Gilgandra, New South Wales, from 73 pounds of skins, without lessening the commercial value of the latter.

Cucumbers and melons are "forbidden fruit" to many persons so constituted that the least indulgence is followed by attacks of cholera, dysentery, griping, etc. These persons are not aware that they can indulge to their heart's content if they have on hand a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, a medicine that will give immediate relief, and is a sure cure for all summer complaints.

John was far the commonest of British Christian names in the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Thomas comes next.

Do not give up in despair, you who suffer from obstinate disfigurements of the skin. Anoint the sore spots with Weaver's Cerate and purify the blood with Weaver's Syrup. All druggists keep them.

Two young men were having a heated argument over a problem which needed a great deal of mental calculation. "I tell you," said one, "that you are entirely wrong." "But I am not," said the other. "Didn't I go to school, stupid?" almost roared his opponent. "Yes," was the calm reply; "and you came back stupid." That ended it.

Impurities in the Blood.—When the action of the kidneys becomes impaired, impurities in the blood are almost sure to follow, and general derangement of the system ensues. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will regulate the kidneys, so that they will maintain healthy action and prevent the complications which certainly come when there is derangement of these delicate organs. As a restorative these Pills are in the first rank.

YOUR HEALTHY COMPLEXION.

A daily bath in cold or tepid water is an indispensable aid in keeping the skin of the body in good condition. The complexion also very often suffers from insufficient washing in pure water.

It is impossible for those of us who live in large towns to keep the complexion quite as blooming and healthy as the inhabitants of country districts, but more care might frequently be taken to wash off the smuts that help to clog the pores of the skin.

Use hot rainwater, if it is possible to procure it, with two or three spoonfuls of oatmeal thrown in to soften the water. Next proceed to thoroughly massage the face with some good soap and a firm sponge, then rinse the skin in another basin of cold water, into which has been poured a few drops of eau-de-cologne or alcohol, finally rubbing into the face and neck a little lanolin or cold cream.

HOW DIVERS ARE TRAINED.

Schools in England—How Science Has Helped Them to Work in the Sea.

The Admiralty trains divers, and every British warship carries at least one representative of the craft and frequently more. There are training schools at Portsmouth, Devonport and Sheerness.

One of the difficulties with which divers have to contend is probably not realized by a landsman, namely, that the greater the depth the greater is the pressure of water on the man's body and the greater the labor and exhaustion of working. The naval authorities limit their men to a depth of 120 feet. The greatest depth to which a man has descended is said by Siebe to have been 204 feet, and the pressure at that depth was extraordinary, namely, 88½ pounds to the square inch. One wonders how any human being could stand it. Twelve fathoms, or about seventy feet, would be enough for most men. The ears and nose would probably begin to bleed and the pressure on the head would be very serious. A practised diver can, of course, descend much deeper without such unpleasant sensations.

His dress costs more than a hundred pounds; it is of tanned twill and rubber and made in one piece, with a big opening at the neck. The helmet is of copper and screws on to the shoulders so tightly that the water cannot penetrate the joint. Air is pumped down to him by a pipe made of canvas, and rubber and outlet valves, which only open outwardly, are placed at convenient places to permit the vitiated air to escape. These valves are extremely important, as by them the diver can regulate his supply of air.

In addition to this pipe the diver has a lifeline enabling him to communicate with his assistants above water. This was formerly done by a series of concerted tugs or jerks on the line, but the method is being superseded as a means of communication by the telephone, the wires being conveyed by the lifeline. He therefore touches the button and talks as if he were in the city.

Another great improvement is the use of the electric lamp, though in some West Indian waters a diver can see clearly for some distance. In other waters again the darkness is intense twenty or thirty feet down. The weight of the dress is extraordinary and necessary to enable the diver to maintain his stability. His helmet weighs considerably over a quarter of a hundred weight, and his boots, taken together, about as much, while if these be not sufficient he claps lead upon his shoulders.

Pupils are confined to the female sex, and the curriculum embraces all varieties of hand reading, ordinary, spiristic, and gypsy methods, also "scientific" chirology, and the reading of the future from coffee grounds, the flight of birds, yolks of eggs, and the forms which molten lead assumes when poured into water.

Official Home for Premiers.

Ottawa, Aug. 23.—The government has decided to constitute an official residence for the prime ministers of Canada, and has secured the well-known old Currier mansion on Sussex street, which was latterly owned by Senator Edwards.

The new official residence is a handsome stone structure situated amid extensive and beautifully wooded grounds on a high bluff overhanging Rideau river. It is near Rideau Hall, the residence of the governor-general, and its convenience to the vice-regal lodge weighed with the government when the choice was made.

It is undergoing a complete renovation, and it will be furnished most elaborately by the government. There are some valuable statuary and other rare decorations available. The present prime minister lives in a private house on Laurier avenue and the difficulty has always existed of providing suitable accommodation for the premiers of Canada.

Little Girl kidnapped.

Brockville, Ont., August 26.—A somewhat sensational kidnapping incident was enacted here today. Mrs. W. R Stewart, of New York, has been spending the summer in Brockville with her two little daughters. One of them, Florence aged 10 years, is in the habit of going to the post office for the mail. This morning she started out bareheaded, and, not returning within a reasonable time, search was made without effect. Later it was learned that she was seen in company with a man boarding a steamer for Ogdensburg. The child was crying and being forced along with the man against her will. From the description of the fellow it is believed that the man is Stewart, her father, who has been living in the West for many years. He and Mrs. Stewart are separated. The police have telegraphed to Rochester, N. Y., where it is thought he has gone, and Mrs. Stewart followed to continue the search.

Mrs. and Mis Ferrier, of Roing River left their baby boy asleep at home while they went to the train on Saturday and on returning the house was a mass of flames and the infant's remains were found in the ruins.

General de Neuger, a visitor to Canada from Paris, called at the Bank of Montreal in Niagara Falls with a letter of credit for a large amount. Shortly after leaving the bank he missed his wallet. The police are acting

The building permits issued by the city of Vancouver for the month of July aggregated $1,030,545, the largest figures for any Canadian city for that month. Only eleven cities on the North American continent exceeded these figures.

The postmaster has stopped the mail of the Public Service Company of Montreal, and the police are looking for the proprietor on a charge of fleecing immigrants. They advertised that for a dollar they would get positions for immigrants.

The appearance of several Regina, Sask., bakers at the police court in respect of summons for having neglected to wrap bread in paper is the sequel of some astonishing reports to the health department as to the unsavory and insanitary condition of the bake-houses.

The man recently found drowned near Cameron village has been identified as John Maw, an English immigrant from Yorkshire.

EIGHTY MEN DROWNED

End of New Quebec Bridge Collapsed.

Locomotive and Three Cars of Iron on Structure at Time of the Catastrophe.

A despatch from Quebec says: The immense new $10,000,000 steel bridge which was in course of construction across the St. Lawrence River at Levis two miles above the City of Quebec, collapsed late on Thursday afternoon, carrying down 95 workmen, mostly steel workers and riveters.

The collapse of the immense structure, with the great loss of life it entailed, has caused the greatest excitement here and at Levis, and it is difficult to get correct details. It is thought that the loss of life will exceed 70. Ten bodies have been recovered, 10 badly wounded men were picked up in the river, and there are 70 missing, all of whom are, no doubt, drowned. The bridge, which is being constructed by the Phoenixville Bridge Company of Philadelphia, was begun about seven years ago, and was expected to be finished in 1909. The estimated cost of the bridge was $10,000,000, most of which was subscribed by the Federal Government, Provincial Government and City of Quebec.

Only a few of the big staff of workmen who are engaged in various duties escaped. The collapse, thought to have been due to the overloading of the superstructure with materials, occurred at an hour when the workmen were all in their places, preliminary to finishing the work for the day.

When the fall of the giant structure came, the big structural work with which it was being built prevented many of the workmen from drowning in the St. Lawrence. Those who were not stunned by the great tumble seized the big steel girders which were carried to the river bottom, and were thus saved from drowning.

Only a few of the dead and fatally hurt were residents of Quebec. They were employed by the contracting firms which are building the structure, and most of them live in the United States, many of them being from Pennsylvania.

CANADIAN DEATH LIST SMALL.

There is no doubt that the Canadian loss of life is small, for the only workmen outside of the steel workers from Phoenixville, Pa., who were employed on the span were Canadian Indians. The big span which crumbled beneath the superstructure went without the slightest warning to the hundred or more who were on it at the time, and toppled over into the water, a hundred feet below, like the frailest kind of a structure.

It was not long after the bridge fell that it became dark, and then the work of rescue, which had barely been begun, had to be almost abandoned because there was no light. A big bonfire was built along the river side, but did not help much.

From the flickering glare of the bonfires, many bodies could be seen floating on the surface of the river, but the rescuing party had its hands full, and had to let many of the corpses sweep on down the stream.

Heart-rending scenes are to be witnessed in the immediate vicinity of the disaster. In two houses three dead bodies of three members of each family are laid out, with a fourth member of one with a broken hip.

According to the latest reports, the accident does not interfere with the navigation in the channel. Vessels have already passed through to ascertain the exact situation. The loss is estimated at $1,500,000.

WORLD'S GREATEST BRIDGE.

The visitor to Quebec as he crosses the St. Lawrence sees some five miles up the river the huge, spidery-looking structure of the cantilever bridge, which when completed, will be the largest structure of the kind in the world, a distinction now held by the cantilever bridge over the Forth in Scotland. The completed bridge will have 33,000 tons of steel, and with its approaches is estimated to cost $7,000,000.

The plans were commenced in 1897. The south shore piers were completed four years ago, and since that time 240 feet of steel superstructure was built connecting the shore pier to the anchor pier. It is this anchor pier that collapsed.

The anchor arm, 400 feet above the river, was completed in July last year, and one-fourth of the superstructural work on the bridge, or 740 feet, finished, and this cantilever extension from the south side was then begun. On the south side of the river fully 7,000 tons of steel had been erected, rising to a height of 360 feet in the lowest top parts, and 400 feet at the centre part or anchor pier.

The two centre pillars are 315 feet high, weigh 518 tons each, and are to hold each one-half of the cantilever anchor and one-half of the suspension span. Their ornamental caps are to be 460 feet in the air.

The flooring of the bridge over which the traffic will cross is 160 feet above the river level, so that ships with the highest masts moving up and down the St. Lawrence can pass underneath without difficulty.

It was expected that the bridge might be completed by the fall of 1909, but the delay in obtaining the steel required has kept back the contractors and now the collapse of the anchor pier at the south side, together with the work that had been done beyond it, will very seriously hinder the progress of the gigantic undertaking.

AN EXPLOSION KILLS FOUR

Accident in a Railway Camp North of Kenora.

A despatch from Kenora says: On Monday at noon a most serious dynamite explosion, in which four men were killed, took place at camp No. 5 of W. T. Parsons, contractor on the G. T. P. construction works, and whose camps are situated about eighteen miles north of Vermilion Bay station, on the C.P.R. Foreman D. Flynn was engaged with several others in loading holes with powder and dynamite preparatory to a blasting operation. All of the men engaged at the time with Flynn were killed outright, so that only the most meagre details can be obtained. It is thought that the hole was being loaded too soon after a former shooting, and that not sufficient time had been allowed for it to cool, and that the accumulated heat from the former explosion caused the premature discharge. The men killed by the explosion are: D Flynn, a Canadian, from Ottawa; A. Butone, an Austrian; A. Pietro, an Italian; Andre Nenekavan, an Indian, from Grassy Narrows.

Strange Adventure of Eleven-year-old Montreal Youth.

A despatch from Montreal says: An eleven-year-old boy named John Brown, son of Arthur Brown, a commercial traveler of Sussex street, had a remarkable experience on Tuesday. Being at Place Viger Station, he was accosted by a man respectably dressed, but looking like an Italian and speaking rather poor English, and asked if he would go a message for him. The boy at once replied in the affirmative, and the man took him on board the Quebec train and asked him to wait a minute for him, only returning when the train was about to start. He was carried to Quebec by the man and then left by him. He was sent back on Wednesday by the police authorities.

WOMAN KILLED BY [illegible]

Mrs. Anna Hucke, of Pittsburg, Ma[illegible] to Death at Show.

A despatch from Pittsburg, Pa., says: Mrs. Anna Hucke died at her home on VanBraan Street, this city, on Wednesday, from injuries inflicted on Tuesday afternoon by an escaped lion at Luna Park, a local resort.

The attack occurred when the park was crowded with women and children. Without warning the lion appeared from behind one of the buildings, and with a roar he sprang at Mrs. Hucke, who was nearest to him. She screamed, and attracted the attention of the crowds. Soon screams from the hundreds stampeding for the exits added to Mrs. Hucke's cries.

The noises drew the attention of W. A. Downing, chief of the park police, who came on a run to the rescue. He found the lion tearing away at the woman's clothing, and, having drawn his revolver, he emptied all of th[illegible] at the animal. WILL CARRY WESTERN GRAIN

The Grand Trunk Pacific Will Assist This Year.

A despatch from Montreal says: Mr. C. W. Winter, General Superintendent of the Grand Trunk Pacific, states that the system will be in a position to carry part of the western wheat crop this fall over one of the completed sections of the line. Hopes were entertained that the wheat might be moved all the way from Saskatoon to Winnipeg, but Mr. Winter declares that this will be impracticable, but wheat will be accepted for shipment west of Portage la Prairie as far as the track-laying is completed. C[illegible] accepted by the G. T. P. [illegible] ried to Portage la Prairie, and there transferred to the Canadian Pacific or Canadian Northern as the case may be, and thence transported to the Lake Superior ports. As no elevators have yet been built along the route of the new transcontinental system special platforms are being constructed at convenient points from which shipments will be made direct into the cars. While rapid progress has been made with the construction work, the line from Portage la Prairie to Winnipeg will not be completed this fall, nor will the section which is being built by the Government contractors between Winnipeg and Lake Superi[illegible] Junction.

Results of Experiments with Autumn Sown Crops.

The area used for sowing wheat and other autumn crops was somewhat greater throughout Ontario in the fall of 1906 than in that of 1905. At the Agricultural College this year Winter wheat and Winter Rye have produced large yields of grain which is above the average in quality, but the Winter Barley and the Hairy Vetches have given results somewhat lower than those of 1906.

Generally speaking, white wheats, as compared with red wheats, yield more grain per acre, possess stronger straw, weigh a little less per measured bushel are slightly softer in the grain, produce a more popular pastry flour, and furnish a somewhat weaker flour for bread production.

Of the white wheats, Dawson's Golden Chaff and other very similar varieties, such as, Abundance Abundance, American Banner' Beardless Rural New Yorker No. 6, American Wonder, Superlative, Forty fold, Prize Taker and Extra Early Windsor, and of of the red wheats, Imperial Amber, Paramount and Crimean Red have produced the highest yields of grain per acre in the College experiments. In the following characteristics the varieties mentioned below are very prominent; stiffness of straw—Dawson's Golden Chaff, Prosperity, Economy and Early Ontario; hardness of grain—Buda Pesth, No. 5 red, Crimean red, Banatka, Tasmania Red and Geneva; weight of grain—Horthwester, Auburn and Geneva; and milling vuality of grain—Tasmania Red, Rudy, Onigara, Crimson Red, Yaroslaf, Turkey Red, Early Genesee Giant, Banatka, Northwester, Geneva and Imperial Amber.

We are endeavoring to improve some of the best varieties of winter wheat by means of systematic selection and by cross-fertilization. Each of eight different selected strains of Dawson's Golden Chaff wheat gave a yield of over 70 bushels of grain per acre in 1907. Some of the most promising hybrids, which are constant in type this year, are those produced by crossing the Dawson's Golden Chaff with the Bulgarian and with the Turkey Red. The object in crossing is to originate new kinds which will combine the good qualities and eliminate the undesirable features of the parent varieties.

The results of many tests conducted at the College indicate the importance of sowing with a grain drill, large, plump sound, well matured seed wheat at the rate of about a bushel and a half per acre on well prepared clover sod, and earlier if possible than the 10th of September. Smutted wheat should be immersed for twenty minutes in a solution of one pint of formalin and forty-two gallons of water.

The recent tests at the College of other classes of autumn sown crops show the following varieties to be the heaviest average yielders of grain per acre: Mammoth White Winter Rye, 62 bushels, Tennessee Winter Barley, 53.4 bushels Hairy Vetches, 5.7 bushels and Black Winter Emmer.

In the co operative experiments, conducted throughout Ontario in 1907 under the direction of the Experimental Union, the average yields of grain per acre were as follows: Winter Wheat—Imperial Amber, 22.2 bushels; Abundance, 21.7 bushels; and Michigan Amber, 20.3 bushels, and of winter Rye-Mammoth, 26.4 and Common, 21.4 bushels.

As long as the supply lasts, material will be distributed free of charge in the order in which the applications are received from Ontario Farmers wishing to experiment and to report the results of any one of the following tests: 1, Hairy Tetches and winter Rye as fodder crops; 2, three varieties of Winter Wheat; 3, Five fertilizers with Fertilizers with Winter Wheat; 4, Autumn and Spring applications of Nitrate of Soda and Common Salt on Winter Wheat, and 5, two varieties of Winter Rye. The size of each is to be one rod wide by two rods long. Material for numbers 3 and 4 will be sent by express and that for the others by mail.

Good Reasons for it's Success.

The majority of catarrh remedies are uselsss. But one that does cure is "Catarrhozone." It clears the head of all mucous discharge. Putrid matter in the nostrils, phlegm, in the throat, and disease germs are completely swept away. The cause of the disease is destroyed, it's results are destroyed, and the system so thoroughly cleansed of catarrhal poison that cure is so permanent. All types of catarrh, throat and bronchial trouble, colds, and coughs are more certainly cured by Catarrhozone than anything else. Two sizes, 25c at all dealers.

The New Minister of Railways.

Toronto Globe:—To Mr. Graham has been assigned the Department of Railways and Canals in the pending reconstruction of the Dominion Cabinet. The public, as well as the political prophets, will be startled but not displeased by this announcement. A little reflection will show that, whatever the motive, his appointment is an act of wisdom on the part of Sir Wilfred Laurier, and there are no indications that is to be only temporary. Whatever changes of position may take place hereafter, Mr. Graham will be expected to remain indefinitely Minister of Railways and Canals.

The responsi[illegible]s thrust on a new minis[illegible] even a member of [illegible]liament, is very [illegible] is one of the [illegible]blic service to [illegible] that he has [illegible]it shows the [illegible]held by the "six intercolonial railways" rather than have the scheme of federal union fall. It did not follow, however, that the Intercolonial Railway should be used as a political machine, and perhaps it was with a special design to guard against its conversion to any such use that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has given the portfolio to a man from one of the more westerly provinces. The experience of having a Minister of Railways who is an entire stranger alike to the staff of the road and to the dwellers along its route is certainly well worth trying. There is no reason to fear that Mr. Graham wil not rise to the occasion.

During the past two years the management of the Intercolonial has been greatly improved, and an approach has been made toward the complete commercialization of the system. It will devolve on Mr. Graham to continue the improvement, and take the Government railways still more out of politics. This can best be done by putting the management in the hands of some official of tried capacity, proved integrity, and great force of character, with a view to holding him individually responsible for its success or failure. Administration by a Board of Commssioners for the members of it themselves might be party politicians. A responsible minister at the head of the Intercolonial might yet be the means of justifying the construction of that line for other than high reasons of state. This is Mr. Graham's opportunity, and he may rest assured that in assuming his portfolio he does so with a widespread and sincere desire on the part of the general public that he will make his administration a signal success.

Marks' Bros. Moving Pictures.

The opera house was not only crowded last night to see Marks Bros. Moving Pictures, but besides the aisles being filled also, about 200 were seated upon the stage. Before the performance started the box office was closed and hundreds were turned away. On the professor's former visit here a similar phenomenal turned out was seen on the last night, but this on the second night is an evidence of the increased interest shown in this attraction.

The pictures shown did not fall behind those of the previous evening, either in interest or in educational value. The favorite was "The Miner's Daughter", a pretty romance that appealed to the tender heart to a marked degree. The mine explosion prompted even the sturdy ones with an almost irresistable desire to run to the rescue of the unfortunate ones under the debris. Among many others, a variety that catered to all tastes, the humorous collection was not neglected, and the serious faces were soon converted into merry ones.

The illustrated songs by Mr. Stanley Fowler lost none of their charms and were greeted with rounds of applause. This young vocalist is making a pronounced hit in Galt.—Galt Daily Reporter.

WOMEN PAY MORE.

Why Insurance Companies Discriminate Against the Gentle Sex.

Medical examiners of insurance companies say that the reason a woman pays more privilege of insurance than a man is from the fact that women more readily fall victims to indigestion and stomach troubles and the fatal ailments that spring from these causes.

All persons, they say, who have a weakened digestive system and suffer from sick headache, dizzy spells, distress after eating, specks before the eyes, bloating, nervousness, sleeplessness, and the many other symptoms of indigestion, soon lower the tone of the whole system and are most susceptible to a fatal illness.

For curative power in all stomach troubles, nothing else is as safe yet effective, nothing else can be thoroughly relied upon to relieve all troubles from indigestion as Mi-o na. It is unlike any any remedy heretofore known and is really one of the valuable discoveries in modern medical science.

It is not the accute attacks that influence the insurance examiners alone, but the constant feelings of weakness, headaches, indigestion and stomach troubles—these things physicians say, kill more people than many more serious diseases.

We absolutely agree that your money will be refunded should you buy a 50c cent box of Mi-o na stomach tablets and not be satisfied with the results. Mi-o na is sold by druggists everywhere, or will be sent by mail on receipt of price, 50 cents. Booth's Miona Company, Buffalo, N. Y.
