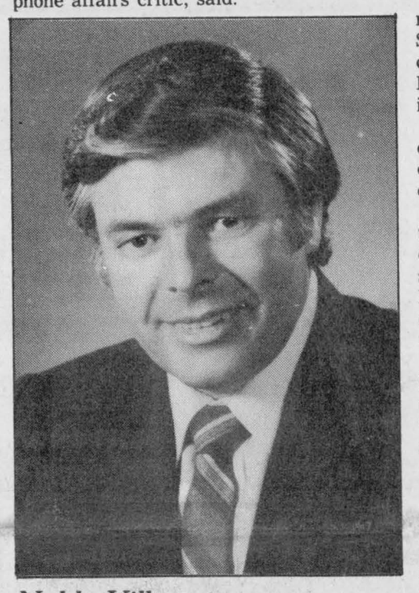
Ontario premier rejects MPP's call for Bill 8 review

TORONTO (Staff) - Ontario Premier David Peterson has rejected SD&G MPP Noble Villeneuve's call for a legislative committee review of how the government plans to implement the contentious French Language Services Act.

The premier's response came nine weeks after Villeneuve sent a letter requesting public hearings before a committee "in light of the confusion and concerns that have been expressed in recent months."

In the provincial legislature Dec. 10, Villeneuve quizzed the premier. "The government has done a woefully poor job of communicating the implementation of this particular act," Villeneuve the Tory francophone affairs critic, said.



Noble Villeneuve

"Would he (Peterson) not seriously consider bringing the implementation of Bill 8 to a standing committee of this Legislature?"

Peterson said the government didn't consider a committee "the appropriate approach at the moment."

Thanking Villeneuve for his "constructive suggestion", Peterson assured him the government will "constantly consider" his proposal if it believes a committee would be "helpful".

Villeneuve, wasn't satisfied with the premier's response.

In a press release, he said the Liberal government has formed committees with public participation on other issues.

"I am sure a Select Committee to implement Bill 8 would be very important to the citizens of this province in order to express their concerns relating to services in non designated areas adjacent to bilingual areas."

Villeneuve supported the bill targeting areas of the province for the delivery of government services in French when it was introduced in the legislature in November in 1986.

In his riding, Winchester Township and the counties of Stormont and Glengarry are designated for French language services. Provincially funded services and government offices located outside the designated area but which serve them also come under the legislation.

It's the impact of the legislation on these areas that worries Villeneuve. "In my own riding, for example, concerns have been raised over staffing at Upper Canada Village, the St. Lawrence Parks Commission, liquor stores, nursing homes, Ontario Hydro, hospitals and also for services, such as Meals-on-Wheels," his Oct. 7 letter to the premier stated.

Villeneuve began appealing for the review of the bill's regulations prior to the Sept. 10 provincial election, which saw local concerns over the act spread throughout Eastern Ontario and become a campaign issue.

Villeneuve said the support the three counties gave an independent candidate campaigning against Bill 8 indicate the depth of concern.

"Neither I, nor my Liberal opponent, nor the Government could say anything to demonstrate to the almost 5,000 voters who supported the APEC (Alliance for the Preservation of English in Canada) candidate, that their fears about Bill 8 were unwarranted."

He said a legislative committee could invite municipal representatives to explain why they declared their municipalities unilingual English, even though the act exempts municipalities in designated areas from having to deliver services in French.

"All in all, public hearings before a Legislative Committee are the only way to resolve the issue. While I am aware that the Government has embarked on a public relations campaign to 'sell' the Act, I am certain that this will be seen in many areas as strictly a damage control effort by a defensive government," Villeneuve said in his letter.

No one was injured when a car crashed through the east store front window of Benoit's Furniture and Appliances in Crysler. Store owner Roland Benoit said the sound of breaking glass seemed to last for more than a minute.

Car crashes through Crysler business

CRYSLER (Staff) - Benoit Furniture and Appliances in Crysler became a temporary car showroom Wednesday when a car crashed through its east storefront window.

The driver of the car, Solange Glaude, 49, of RR1 Berwick was not injured in the crash, which left shattered glass sprinkled among overturned tables and chairs piled around the car.

No one was in the showroom at the time of the accident.

Police said Glaude, who was travelling north of Bridge Street, was struck at the intersection of Bridge and Charles Street by a car driven by 70-year-old Laurent Bourdeau of Crysler and ricocheted into the store.

Bourdeau has been charged with failing to yield.

"I heard whatsounded like broken glass except the breaking sound seemed to go on for minute," said Roland Benoit, owner of the store. "I went downstairs, looked one way and saw nothing, looked the other way and saw a car in the store.

"I couldn't believe it."

Benoit's wife, Helen, who three minutes earlier had been showing a kitchen set in front of the window the car came through, was visibly shaken.

"I'm still shaking," she said as fireman and tow truck operators pulled the car back out. "The sound was like what I imagine a house full of glass would sound like if it was all broken."

Although the crash left Roland Benoit scrambling for replacements for Christmas orders, he said the accident could have been worse.

"Furniture you can replace," he said. "The important thing is nobody got hurt."

Foul play ruled out in death

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - The body of a Chesterville man was found in his car parked by the village arena Tuesday morning.

Police do not suspect foul play in the death of Lawrence Droppo. Coroner Dr. Gabriel Slowey pronounced the 34-year-old Chesterville resident dead after arriving at the scene with police at about 9:30 a.m.

Police say the cause of death was due to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Police were called to the scene by arena staff, who found the car parked just east of the building.

Police welcome drop in holiday spirits

LONG SAULT (Staff) - It appears area motorists are taking to heart the message that holiday drinking and driving don't mix.

Statistics from across the district reveal that while the number of random spotchecks conducted by OPP detachments are almost double last year's total, charges laid against impaired drivers have increased only slightly.

"What we're noticing this year is fewer impaired drivers and a much higher ratio of 12-hour suspensions," said Staff Sgt. Grant McKenzie from the OPP district headquarters at Long Sault.

"It's showing that people are drinking in moderation and driving."

From Dec. 20 to 26, detachments from across the district checked almost 5,000 vehicles, charging 17 for driving while impaired and issuing 30 12-hour driving suspensions.

In the same period last year, police checked 2,329 vehicles, laying 11 impaired charges and issuing 13 12-hour suspensions.

(The licence suspensions are issued to drivers whose breath sample registers between .05 and .08 -- 50 to 80 milligrams of alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood.)

Motorists convicted of driving while impaired face minimum fines of $300 for a first offence and the loss of a driver's licence for a year. A second conviction nets a mandatory two-week stay in jail as well as a licence suspension of two years.

Locally, the Winchester and Long Sault detachments laid only a single impaired driving charge each during Christmas week. Winchester police stopped 32 vehicles while the Long Sault detachment checked 125.

Morrisburg police conducted 396 spotchecks, issuing three 12-hour suspensions but laying no charges of impaired driving.

During the same period in 1987, the three detachments checked 184 vehicles, charging six with impaired driving and issuing only two 12-hour suspensions.

The eight-week RIDE campaign -- Reduce Impaired Driving Everywhere -- kicked off across the province in mid-November. By the time the crackdown ends, as many as 400,000 Ontario drivers will have been pulled over for a spotcheck.

Winchester police will conduct spotchecks again this weekend in Winchester and Mountain townships.

Newsbriefs

Rotary guests

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - The Chesterville Rotary Club is planning its own schedule of events to mark the village's celebrations -- and its own 50th anniversary -- in the new year.

Beginning with its Jan. 4 meeting, guests born in Chesterville and the surrounding area who have made outstanding contributions to the community or who have excelled in their profession will be invited to speak. The first invited guest will be Fred Cass, former speaker of the provincial legislature.

The public is welcome to attend the meetings, held each Monday excldluing holidays at 7:15 p.m. at the Nelson Laprade Centre.

Rotary organizers note club members, in alphabetical order, will be responsible for each meeting's program from Jan. 4 to June 27. From July 11 until the end of the year, guest speakers will be from outside Chesterville and club members responsible for the meeting will be selected in reverse alphabetical order.

User friendly

WINCHESTER (Staff) - Farm couples now have help to ease their way into computerized record keeping.

A computerized farm management course will be offered Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Jan. 28 to March 17, sponsored by the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food, the Alternative School of the SD&G County Board of Education and the SD&G Industrial Training Council.

Designed for couples, the course is also open to individuals and participants must have a computer at home or some experience using a computer. Topics to be covered include computer and financial terminology; preparation of a balance sheet, income statement, cash flow projections and their analysis, and a review of the softwear available.

The first 24 applications will be accepted and a materials fee of $20 per person of $30 per couple will be charged.

Also available beginning Tuesday nights from Jan. 26 is an eight-week course to teach the use of the home computer.

Designed to maximize hands-on experience, topics to be covered include understanding your machine, disk operating system commands, using BASIC and an introduction to spreadsheets, databases and wordprocessing.

Fees are $25 per person for registration and $20 for materials, whether for an individual, couple or family.

Both courses will be offered at the Winchester branch of the Alternative School above the OPP detachment. Partial secondary school credits will be offered to successful participants.

WINCHESTER (Staff) - Dundas is seeking volunteers to lead 4-H farm safety clubs in 1988. A workshop for all leaders will be held Jan. 18 at Kemptville College of Agricultural Technology. Anyone interested in becoming a leader for a club in his or her area is asked to contact the Winchester OMAF office by Jan. 11.

Municipal leaders reflect on '87, plan for new year

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - Water, roads and waste remain the mainstay of municipal politics. And the new year promises to bring developments on all issues in Chesterville and the townships of Winchester, Finch and Osnabruck.

The end of December was a time for the reeves of the four municipalities to reflect on the accomplishments of 1987 and look ahead to 1988.

Chesterville

Good luck flowed for Chesterville in 1987, when a source of water adequate to meet the village's projected needs for the next two decades was discovered near Maple Ridge.

Chesterville Reeve Carl Ward describes the locating of a new well site almost four kilometres west of the village as perhaps "the greatest and most significant accomplishment" of the year.

"I would think that this spring should see some action on the lines being in place and some actual construction on the well site."

The $1.7 million project, of which the province would pay about 80 per cent, will end a five-year search for water that has put development plans on hold.

Well construction will be one more reason to celebrate in 1988, when the village will hold festivities will co-incide with the 50th anniversary of the Rotary Club in Chesterville, centennial celebrations in Winchester and a reunion marking the 25th anniversary of North Dundas District High School. The local celebrations culminate the week of July 1-10.

Ward also pointed to the reconstruction of Victoria and part of College streets and the construction of a road through the village's industrial park as more tangible accomplishments in 1987.

Ward said the success of the park, in terms of the sale of lots and construction, as well as the many new businesses that opened in Chesterville's business section speak well for the village.

He hopes next year will see further reconstruction work on Mill and Church streets. Also planned for 1988 is the upgrading of the north shore of the South Nation near the boat ramp, as part of the provincial PRIDE program's beautification plan.

"I just hope that 1988 continues to be good for the village, as 1987 has been," the reeve concluded.

One village project that lost steam early in the year was a proposal to construct a community centre, estimated at a cost of $825,000.

"I would think that that project is temporarily on hold," Ward said.

A public meeting called in March to raise support for the project drew only five people.

"It has to be a perceived need and a need that the community says, this is what we have to have," Ward said.

"Until, I think, you have that kind of community support, because of the costs involved, I think everybody has to go into that type of project...with their eyes wide open."

And with the water project underway, he doubted village ratepayers would want to spend that much money at this time. "I guess that when you rank those things in priority, where is it? Third? Fourth? Fifth?"

He didn't know how to address the question, but suggested it could take the form of a referendum on the ballot during November's municipal elections.

A ten-year veteran of municipal council, Ward hasn't yet decided what his own political future will be. "Ten years is a goodly length of service," he said.

Seeking re-election, he said, "is something I'm going to have to consider quite seriously."

Winchester Township

Gerald Holmes, now entering his last year as Winchester Township reeve, believes 1987 went "pretty well."

But Holmes himself won't seek re election in 1988. He has no other plans at this point, he said.

"I'd say we accomplished our goals and things went pretty well according to what we projected would happen," Holmes said about the council's past 12 months.

"We've had our problems which are common to any council," he said. But councillors generally keep everything running smoothly and at a "low profile".

The township did "a little extra construction" which caused an overexpenditure in the road budget. But in the process, it got 2.5 miles of road ready for paving, hopefully next year, he said.

Council is in its third year of its five-year road paving plan and has followed the plan "pretty closely" so far, he said.

There'll be one new addition to the personnel department in 1988. The township hired itself a new drainage superintendent to replace Percy Armstrong, who will retire in January.

Grant Copeland of Winchester will be taking over the drainage duties as well as a number of other jobs for the township, Holmes said.

And a new official plan may also be in the works for next year. Official plans are supposed to be updated every five years, he said, but he doesn't think Winchester Township's has ever been updated.

Government grants would be available to pay for the project, he added.

Finch Township

The Crysler water and sewer project remains at the top of Finch Township's agenda -- as it has since 1981. And despite progress in 1987, construction probably won't start for at least another two years.

"We have a well and that's all," Reeve Ralph MacKenzie commented earlier this week.

Negotiations for the purchase of land for a sewage lagoon to treat the system's wastes are now in the hands of the Ontario Ministry of Government Services. MacKenzie expects word of the talks' progress "in the near future".

But he's confident the $6.6 million project, of which the province would pay 85 per cent, will proceed. "There doesn't seem to be any opposition to it, or very little anyway."

Reflecting on the past 12 months, the 12-year veteran of township politics was pleased. "Things went very smoothly," he said, and noted the reaching of a two-year contract with municipal employees.

The weather also co-operated with the township's road work schedule, permitting it to continue with its plan of hard surfacing a mile of township road annually. A long-standing project, the replacement of St. Luke's bridge, was also accomplished.

MacKenzie is optimistic bridges will continue to be a top priority when the province considers transfer payments to municipalities in 1988. He hopes one of three narrow bridges in the township will be widened, to permit snowplowing and the passage of farm equipment.

Another project -- the naming of all roads in the township and the identification of each property -- was completed. The mapping will ease the task of firefighters and ambulance drivers when called to an emergency. And so far, MacKenzie said the emergency workers "are really enthused with it."

The township has finally found two residents who will sit on a public liaison committee for a joint waste management study involving the township, Finch Village, Roxborough Township and other municipalities in Stormont and Glengarry.

MacKenzie said the project's steering committee has hired consultants to prepare a preliminary report of the status of waste disposal in the region, expected to be completed by mid-1989.

Municipal involvement for MacKenzie, a former United Counties Warden, in the new year will include sitting on the Children's Aid Society committee and chairing the county library board, a task he enjoys.

But the Finch Jersey breeder, who has served as reeve for eight years, will not seek re-election to that office during November municipal elections.

He hasn't ruled out running for council altogether: "It depends on what's in the making for council."

Osnabruck Township

It's been a year of ups and downs for Osnabruck Township Reeve Stewart Hart.

But it's also been a "satisfying" 12 months he said, in fact so satisfying that he'll be running for reeve again in next year's municipal elections.

One issue that dogged council throughout the year was the proposed communal water system for the village of Newington.

Council found itself mired in controversy over the proposal on a number of occasions over the past year, but it looks like the issue will finally be put to rest in 1988.

"Everything seemed to come to a head at the last," and it now looks like the system will be in operation by the summer, Hart said. "There should be water in 1988."

Council will go through the same process with Lunenburg either next year or in 1989, Hart said. A Ministry of Environment study released in late March found more than half the village wells had unsafe drinking water, some with bacteria levels 700 times above normal.

But the "big disappointment" for council this year was its failure to reach an agreement with the St. Lawrence Parks Commission for a strip of land along the St. Lawrence River south of Ingleside.

Council has set up a tentative meeting with the Parks Commission for Jan. 28, and an agreement for 1988 looks fairly promising, Hart said. Council has been trying for two years to reach an agreement for the land, which it wants to use for township recreation.

Another disappointment for township council was the choice of a Williamsburg site over a favored Ingleside site for a proposed United Counties home for the aged.

Ingleside had been chosen as the favored location for the $5 million home by a consulting firm which evaluated possible sites in the United Counties.

A study has now been completed for the Williamsburg site. The future of Ingleside depends on whether it is given a favorable review, Hart said.

Osnabruck council purchased the Ingleside site earlier this year in hopes that the home would be built in the village. But if the Williamsburg site remains county council's choice, their site can be resold, Hart said.

But the year hasn't been filled with disappointments.

The drainage for the industrial park north of Ingleside is "pretty well all completed", Hart said.

And the township is also one step closer to getting a joint recreation facility agreement with the school board for a proposed gymnasium and banquet room at Rothwell-Osnabruck School, he added.

Township officials met with the school board last month and an agreement looks promising, he said.

Council is also considering building a ball diamond but hasn't decided if it wants to be a joint project with the board.

Road paving will also be on council's agenda next year, Hart said.

Finch WI shares festive spirit with shut-ins

FINCH (Special) - The Finch branch of Women's Institute met in the hall for a Christmas dinner. President Mrs. Adrian Dingemans welcomed the members of Cornwall Centre WI as guests.

A short business meeting was held with Mrs. Ian MacMillan as secretary. Roll call was a poem on Christmas faith.

Motto was: faith in tomorrow makes today beautiful.

Mrs. Donald Casselman read "What I Learned in Kindergarten." Mrs. Joe Dingemans read "If Jesus came to your House." She gave the members and guests a copy of the verse.

A quiz on vegetables was won by Mrs. George MacLean. Door prizes were won by Leitha Casselman, Ricki TePlate, Heather Brownlee, Donalda McLennan and Marguerite MacLean.

A poem, Christmas is a priceless gift was given by Lois Dillabough. Edith Foley played selections of Christmas music on the piano and gave a reading on an Irish Christmas.

Maria Dingemans read "A Winter Christmas." Boxes were packed for several shut-ins of the community. The members donated a large box of canned food and other items to be sent on to the Naomi House in Winchester.

This was done instead of the usual Christmas exchange of gifts. All agreed it was a good idea. We all feel better if a bit of help can come to others at this festive season.

Christmas carols were enjoyed by all present with Leitha Casselman at the piano.

SNRCA wraps up forty years of progress

But authority officials bracing for more crucial changes in the future

Greg Kielec
Record Staff

BERWICK — In 1947, a body was formed by the provincial government to look after the area's resources of land and water.

Since its birth just on the heels of World War 2, the South Nation River Conservation Authority has come a long way in improving its watershed which sprawls over a 3,900 square kilometer area.

But as it wraps up its 40th anniversary celebrations, the authority is not considering its past, but its future.

Its work -- which goes beyond flood and erosion control to encompass soil conservation, water quality control and the preservation of wetlands and natural habitat areas -- isn't cheap.

In 1986, SNRCA spent almost $800,000 on work within the watershed, with more than $720,000 of that coming from the province.

But Ontario's 38 conservation authorities say even more money is needed if they are to continue the work they've been doing.

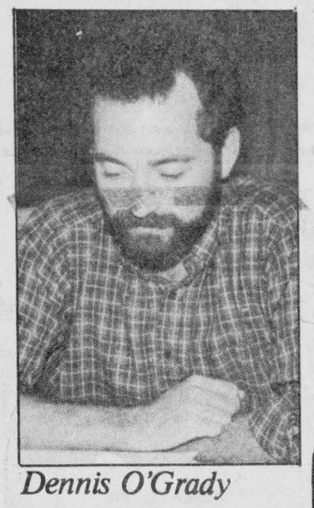
"We can do it, we have the ability to do it. But we don't always have the money to do it," says SNRCA manager Dennis O'Grady.

Since the late '70s the authority has tackled several major capital projects in the area.

In 1984 it completed the Chesterville channelization of the South Nation River, a massive five-year project costing $7.5 million.

That same year also saw the construction of the Crysler Flood Control Dyke completed. The dyke was built to prevent the severe flooding which in 1982, caused $60,000 damage in the village.

Another major project completed in 1979, was the construction of the Eric T. Casselman dam in Chesterville.



Dennis O'Grady

But a provincial white paper on Ontario conservation authorities, due to be released next year, could have a major impact on the roles of authorities over the next 40 years.

"I don't think we'll see a radical change," O'Grady said.

But members of Ontario's conservation authorities must look seriously at the white paper's proposals if they want increased provincial funding.

"I think we need to look at some changes as to how we operate to get some additional grant money from the province," he said.

Some of the suggestions which will be tabled in the report likely won't please the province's authorities, especially a recommendation said to be included in the paper, that boards directing their work be reduced.

The authorities have rejected suggestions in the past, that the size of their boards be trimmed down.

"There are things like that which will have negative repercussions to how the authorities will operate," O'Grady said.

SNRCA has 35 members representing its watershed which runs from Elizabethtown, near Prescott, east to the Quebec border and from the St. Lawrence River to as far north as Plantagenet.

A total of 28 municipalities are included in the watershed, with each one usually having at least one representative on the board of directors.

But while less representation may not please municipalities, it's something authorities must consider, O'Grady said.

"I see it as a negotiating process. The province is saying, "Look, you know we might really like you guys to do certain things, all of which you may not enjoy."

"But...I think that if we do some of those things, we're going to get more money to do the things for our municpalities that we can't do now."

And if money isn't available for projects, "all the representation in the world is not going to help them out."

But authority chairman Gaston Patenaude maintains that the watershed will need to be well represented as it plays an even larger role in the area in the future.

Most conservation authorities have already said no to reducing their number of members and are hoping such a recommendation isn't included in the government white paper, said Patenaude, reeve of Russell Township.

But he conceded that some changes may be necessary for the authority to get additional funding.

"I think you can't stop the clock because it's ticking pretty fast," he explained.

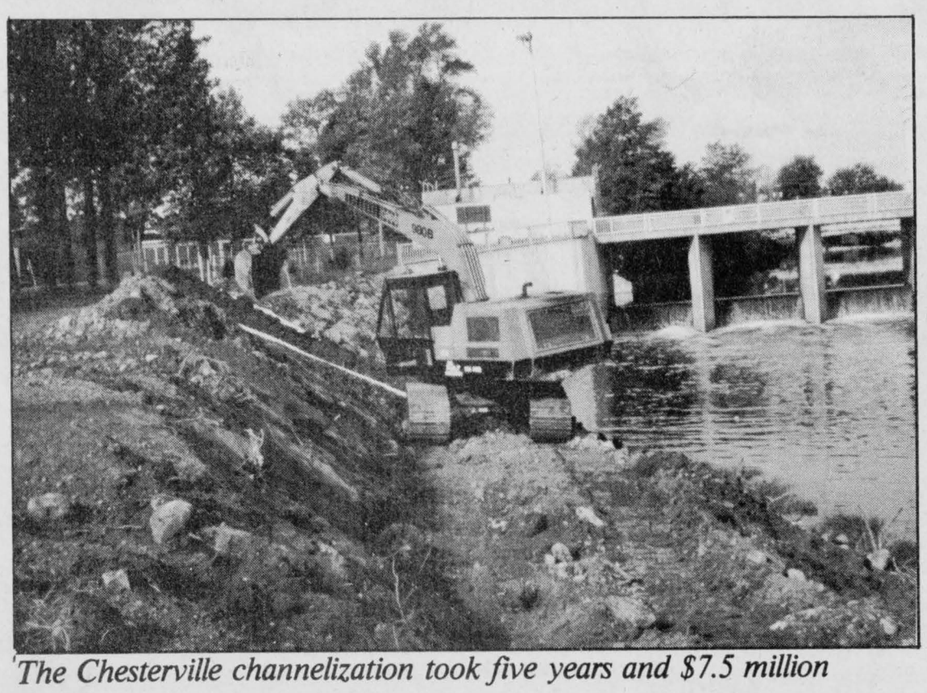
He hopes there will be major changes in store for SNRCA in the future, but only if they're changes for the better.

High on his priority list would be the return to a cost-sharing agreement, dissolved in 1982, which saw the provincial and federal governments share the bill for major conservation projects.

Without the agreement, the burder of such projects is largely shouldered by the provincial government and the local people, he said.

The authority has addressed some of the smaller needs in its watershed over recent years, but lack of funding has pushed projects worth millions of dollars to the back shelf.

Studies are being done for five or six projects now, should government funding suddenly become available, Patenaude said.



The Chesterville channelization took five years and $7.5 million

But in order to complete projects, such as the Lemieux landslide protection project in the northeast end of the watershed, input is needed from all levels of government and from the different provincial ministries concerned, he maintained.

The landslide protection and landowner assistance program was initiated by the authority in 1981 and ended in 1986. The $250,000 program assisted 27 landowners over its five-year existence.

But winning money for such programs is getting tougher for the government, says Lorne Strader, past SNRCA chairman.

Conservation authorities have to do "their homework" now to get funds and there's no room for "slip ups", says Strader, a 61-year-old RR1 Brinston resident.

He blames an inequitable grant system, which divides government funds among the authorities for the reduced funding of less populated authorities, such as the South Nation body.

The SNRCA watershed doesn't have the population of big urban centres such as Toronto, and therefore it gets less money -- even though it may cover a larger area.

But Strader envisions "drastic changes" for conservation authorities in the future as the government trys to cut administrative costs.

"I think that (the white paper) is going to have quite a large impact," he said.

The province will probably amalgamate SNRCA with the neighboring Raisin River Conservation Authority to save administrative costs, he said.

He also predicted the number of authority members will be reduced to maybe one or two per county. The SNRCA watershed encompasses five counties, as well as the regional municipality of Ottawa-Carleton.

But while cutting administrative costs will help make money available to other areas of the authorities, it's not a complete solution, Strader said.

The funding system must also be adjusted so money is spread more evenly among the authorities. "We have to claw and scratch for every dollar we get down east," he maintained.

And if the authority can't get the money it needs for its projects, then it's obvious that changes will have to be made, O'Grady said.

Changes must be made to the way grants are administered "to make it a fairer system", he said. "They tend to be a bit inequitable now."

Each authority is offered the same grant rate, regardless of the municipalities' ability to pay their share of the levy, he said.

But SNRCA members must decide what's best for their authority and Ontario conservation authorities as a whole, he maintained.

And the public must also decide what role it wants conservation authorities to play in their areas, he said. "The public is very much a part of the conservation authority."

People living in the watershed must let the authority know about their concerns, and what they want done about them, he said. "It depends on what the people want here too."

The authority must decide which problems in the watershed it wants to address, O'Grady said. "It's a matter of us sitting down at the board level and deciding what we think are the priorities for this area."

It'll be an "internal negotiating process" as well as a negotiating process with the province, he maintained.

"But it's ultimately the board's decision on where it wants to go."

Given the chance, though, the authority can do what needs to be done in the watershed, O'Grady said.

The authority has the expertise to do its job, it just needs the money, Strader concluded.

Sara Lee Pynenburg was the area's newest celebrity in 1987, born 30 hours and seven minutes into the new year. Proud parents were Cindy and Michael Pynenburg of Moose Creek.

A Ministry of Natural Resources official was denying the ministry was involved in a beaver transplant scheme in Osgoode Township. The matter was brought up by Winchester Township when it learned that an Osgoode Township official believed he had seen someone from the ministry dumping live beavers off at the Winchester bog.

Quoting his lawyer, the president of a group opposing Ault Island development described an Ontario Municipal Board decision to allow an 83-lot subdivision on the island as an "insult". John Lawrence maintained throughout a meeting to discuss the development that he would rather "err on the safe side" than proceed with the development and have thousands of dollars worth of pollution problems in the future. Lawrence was joined in his stand by MPP Noble Villeneuve.

A burned lead at the Chesterville transformer station was responsible for a power outage that left 6,500 houses in darkness. Eleven distribution stations were affected, including the townships of Finch, Cambridge, Russell, most of Winchester, Williamsburg, Osnabruck and Cumberland.

For the second time in two years, a tractor preparing the ice for skating on a stretch of the South Nation River took a dip. The village tractor broke through the ice near the Nestle outlet. The driver was not injured.

MPP Noble Villeneuve warned that cost cutting measures by Canada Post could reduce the number of post offices in Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry from 35 to four. This is neither "warranted nor wanted" Villeneuve wrote to Canada Post president Donald L. Lander.

A Roxborough Township businessman, Andre Lafleche, proposed a 10,000-acre site in Roxborough and Cambridge townships as the location for a $55 million waste-disposal-greenhouse complex to serve SD&G and Prescott-Russell. Lafleche, who said he had been working on the idea of an agro-industrial complex since 1973, won cautious municipal support in his bid to convince the province to fund a feasibility study.

A disappointed school trustee Susan Adams warned the school board hadn't heard "the last of it" after it voted nine to four against a ban on smoking in high schools. "I was disappointed but I can't say I was greatly surprised," said Adams, who put forward the motion on the ban.

Local farm women were the stars of a TVOntario series on farm women, But Can She Bake a Cherry Pie. Dawn Runnals, a Winchester Township farmer featured in the series, said she hoped the television exposure would leave viewers with "a greater awareness of farm women, farm families, the whole atmosphere of farming."

A lone man in his early 20s used a shotgun to rob Marjorie's Groceteria in Elma of $70. No one was hurt.

Winter enthusiasts had their pick of three winter carnivals, in Chesterville, Morewood and Winchester, and the weather cooperated with mild temperatures.

"All silver linings have a cloud," said Jim Windsor, general manager of The South Nation River Conservation Authority after announcing that 30 municipalites in the river's watershed might have their levies increased by as much as 39 per cent to match increased provincial grants. The grants required the authority to match them dollar for dollar.

Naomi's Family Resource Centre, a counselling centre and shelter for battered women, was officially opened in Winchester after two years of planning.

A 36-year-old Cornwall man charged with first degree murder in the slaying of his estranged wife and three-year-old son in December as they left a farmhouse just north of Ingleside was judged fit to stand trial. Robert Gauthier was arrested in the parking lot of his Laflin Street address Dec. 14 carrying his wounded son in his arms. The boy later died in hospital.

Chesterville cashcropper Stan VandenBosch became one of only two farmers ever honored by the American Forage and Grassland Council. VandenBosch was recognized for his crop rotation and forages.

Even Stormont-Dundas MP Norm Warner was admitting the federal budget was boring but added that it made the Conservative government "look good".

The old provincial courthouse in Winchester was given an alternative use as the Alternative School, offering in-class courses and job training to obtain or upgrade high school credits.

A tentative agreement was reached between the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry County Board of Education and its secondary teachers. The two major issues holding up an agreement had been competent staffing and workload.

Former federal agriculture minister Eugene Whelan, The Man in the Green Stetson, kept a capacity crowd in South Mountain entertained with a fervent pitch to protect Canada's marketing boards. There are some people who think farmers should still be subject to "the marketing conditions they had in the days before Christ," said Whelan.

Rosaire Leger, director of education with the SD&G Board of Education, told an unhappy audience of parents that they would have no choice in the decision to move North Dundas District High School to a semestered system. Critics of the plan said the new system would cater itself to good students and would make it tougher for teachers to hold the attention of general level students

Roth replied that the council's secrecy was "no way to do business."

A Winchester shooting club was approved after a sound recorder found that Township Reeve Gerald Holmes' voice had a higher decibel reading than the sound of a gunshot when it reached the house closest to the club site. MOE study finds half of Lunenburg's well water unfit to drink

An army of 400 volunteers took to the streets of Stormont and Dundas to raise $56,000 for cancer research.

Chesterville council announced it was going to give residents the chance to pat their firemen on the back with a banquet to honor the village's longtime firemen. "We thank them when they come out to a fire but we don't thank them any other time," said councillor Roger Cole. "We tend to take them for granted."

A Ministry of Environment survey found over half of the wells in the village of Lunenburg had unsafe drinking water. The ministry recommended that Osnabruck Township provide Lunenburg's 115 residents with better water, adequate sewage disposal and proper surface water drainage. The survey found that some wells contained bacteria levels 700 times above normal.

In an attempt to keep ahead of the game, Osnabruck Township purchased a piece of land recommended as the site for a proposed SD&G home for the aged. Incumbent MPP Noble Villeneuve was acclaimed as the party's candidate for the upcoming provincial election.

"I think for the geese next year, they better not land," Chesterville farmer Gerry Brugmans said after watching geese eat thousands of dollars of alfalfa sprouts from his land. Brugmans had been told by the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources that it's illegal to shoot geese in the spring.

Police were calling for information from the public after dairy farmer Wallace Keith Johnston was found slain in his Monkland home. Johnston, 48, who was found by his elderly father, was killed by a shot through a window while he was sitting in his dining room. Police had no motive for the murder.

Stormont-Dundas MP Norm Warner said he was not concerned with a public opinion poll that showed his party lingering in third place behind the Liberals and New Democrats. "A lot of these things I don't lose sleep over," said Warner.

The SD&G County Board of Education and its 350 teachers agreed on a new contract giving the teachers 4.8 and 4.4 per cent increases over two years. The contract raised a teacher's minimum and maximum salary levels to $16,750 and $48,215.

Calling official bilingualism "divisive, destructive and discriminatory", the national president of the Alliance for the Preservation of English in Canada urged local residents to fight legislation to offer provincial services in designated areas. Ron Leitch's comments were greeted by applause from the crowd of 150 in Morrisburg. "It is divisive because it pits one person against another, it pits one race against another, it pits one linguistic group against another," said Leitch.

"I've never had any regrets, I'd do it all again," said Harold Merkley, one of five Chesterville firemen honored by the village as it turned a longtime service award presentation into a community thank you to the fire department. Department chief Ross Casselman called the village's show of support "really rewarding".

After more than five years on the job, Kathy Simpson, rural organizations specialist for SD&G said good-bye to take up a new post in Newmarket. "It's the friendliness I'll miss most," said Simpson.

Rosenquist to try to win new riding for Liberals

June

A "very upset" Osnabruck Township council threatened to "go to war" over a United Counties council decision to locate a $5 million home for the aged in Williamsburg Township. County councillors had chosen the Williamsburg site over a favored Ingleside site in a close 28-22 vote.

Winchester Township refused to join Matilda Township in its controversial and highly publicized stand on bilingualism by voting to take no action on a resolution from Matilda council asking the township to declare itself unilingual. "It's things like this that start problems," said Winchester Township Reeve Gerald Holmes.

A day after a serach by foot and by air as launched, the body of of an elderly Winchester man who had wandered from his home was found. The body of Fenton W. Hyndman, 85, was found less than a kilometre from his Victoria Street home in Winchester. His disappearance set off an Ontario Provincial Police search team that included a helicopter and dogs.

A jubilant Gerry Rosenquist was predicting election success from Liberals in SD&G after winning the riding's Liberal nomination on the first ballot over two candidates. The 50-year-old Morrisburg obstetrician had led the party in an unsuccessful campaign against Tory MPP Osie Villeneuve in 1981.

Public school board trustee Bill Fleming was denying rumors that Finch and Berwick public school students could be shipped to Tagwi Secondary School if their schools closed, saying neither school was on the list to be closed. All the same, parents were planning meeting to air the issue.

Stormont-Dundas MP Norm Warner was appointed to represent Canada on a NATO economic committee meeting in Geneva. Said Warner, who was joining American and European members to discuss transAtlantic trade problems: "I was fairly anxious to be involved with this. I can make sure agriculture is not overlooked."

Local municipalities were told that the lifespan of their dumps ranged from less than a year to 11 years and would require a longterm solution. The message, delivered at a public meeting to discuss a consultant's report on the problem, was the result of the first phase of a planning study on waste management commissioned by 13 area municipalities.

A nine-year-old Crysler area boy was killed after falling from a tractor. Police said Pascal Perras of RR4 Crysler died instantly when he fell from the cab of the tractor in which he was a passenger. An inquest into the accident, which occurred when the tractor struck a bump and knocked the door open, was called for December.

Continuing its fight for a proposed $5 million United Counties home for the aged, Osnabruck Township accused county councillors of using seniors as "mere pawns in a game of political manoeuvres." Township politicians capped the fight in June with a news conference to voice their anger with a counties' decision to locate the home just west of Morrisburg in Williamsburg Township, instead of Ingleside.

"It's quaint and it's quiet," country singing star Gordie Tapp said, describing Finch as he prepared to go on stage there as part of a charity performance staged by the Finch and District Lions Club. Money raised went to community projects.

Chesterville council decided to take no action on Matilda Township's request to endorse its support for a referendum on official bilingualism in Ontario.

J.A. "Johnnie" Sorrell, Chesterville's contribution to the National Hockey League, died at the age of 83 in Indiana. Sorrell, who was a member of the Chesterville hockey team that won the Ottawa Valley Hockey League Cup in 1924 and 1926, turned pro with Montreal in the late 1920s, played with the Montreal Maroons, and had his best years with Detroit, amassing 96 points in 347 regular games.

Chesterville parents trying to get extended French courses for their children received support from parents in Morewood, Finch, Elma and Berwick in a fight dating back to 1983. Under renewed pressure, the SD&G school board agreed to review the request for 60-minute French class. Similar courses at Chesterville Public and Nationview in South Mountain were discontinued when Maple Ridge Senior Public School began offering late French immersion.

Owners were reining cats and dogs as hundreds of pet owners took advantage of the Eastern Ontario Health Unit's rabies immunization day. The clinics, which offered bargain-priced shots, were held to combat the spread of rabies in the area.

The Lions roared into Chesterville with a new service club boasting 20 members.

The unidentified remains of a body were pulled from the charred rubble of a Morewood home destroyed by fire. The body was later identified as that of John King, 59, of Morewood. An autopsy found that King had been shot once in the head before his home was set on fire and police were soon linking his death with two other unsolved area murders, 60-year-old Harold Davidson of Williamsburg, who was shot in his home on Nov. 25, 1983, and Wallace Johnston, 48, who was killed by a gunshot as he was sitting in the dining room of his Monkland home. Following a memorial service, King's cousin, Evelyn MacNabb of Morewood, described him as a "very quiet, honest person."

Osnabruck Township Reeve Stewart Hart was all smiles when he learned that the province had turned down a proposal to locate a $5 million home for the aged in Williamsburg Township because the site was too isolated. A consultant's report had earlier recommended Ingleside as the best site for the home.

Cleaning up

"Once you start cleaning up, it seems a little better," Crylser area dairy farmer Marcel Masse said after clearing away the wreckage of a machine shed levelled by a violent storm that swept through the farm east of Crysler. Environment Canada said the storm, which destroyed two machine sheds, bent TV antennas and levelled trees, may have been a small tornado.

SD&G MPP Noble Villeneuve backtracked on his supportive stand on Bill 8 amid growing concern among his constituents that the bill to guarantee delivery of services in French where the number of French-speaking poeple warrant would threaten the jobs of Anglophones. "What's needed is common sense, just plain common sense," said Villeneuve.

Attendance was up 20 per cent to 6,000 as the 127th annual Avonmore Fair opened its gates under mostly sunny skies. A bubbly Angela Logtens, 17, of Berwick, was chosen as Stormont's 1987-88 dairy princess during the fair.

Candidates in SD&G were gearing up for an intensive five-week campaign as the province called a Sept. 10 election. Incumbent Tory MPP Noble Villeneuve, seeking his third term, and Liberal challenger Gerry Rosenquist, making his second bid to represent the riding at Queen's Park, wasted little time in establishing themselves as the front runners. Arthur Carkner, a union representative with the Public Service Alliance of Canada, promised that "policy can have a heart" while former Morrisburg justice of the peace Gordon MacGregor decided to take his hard-line stand against bilingualism in Ontario to the people.

Stormont-Dundas MP Norm Warner said he would take on the major oil companies of the price of unleaded gas didn't drop. Warner said he expected quick results from a campaign of public pressure and concern for the environment. "I expect to see a reaction next week," he said.

Two towers were hastily erected to replace a 300-foot microwave tower sabotaged near Cedar Glen golf course. The tower was destroyed when five of its supporting guy wires were cut with a torch. Nearly 11,000 voice curcuits were lost when the tower crashed and Bell Canada estimated the damage at $4 million. Security guards were later placed at Bell Canada tower sites.

With no ribbon cutting ceremony and no speech, Gordon McGregor opened his provincial election campaign against bilingualism in Ontario. "I'm going to make it an issue," he said. "It is an issue of importance."

The sun smiled on the Chesterville Fair for the first time in three years and the gates responded warmly with a 60 per cent increase in crowds. More than 5,100 people streamed through the gates during the fair's three-day run. Last year, discouraged by rain and frigid temperatures, only 3,200 toured the annual exhibiton. "Last year was really down and hard on the directors," said fairboard president Gord Johnson. "With the results of this year, we're going to have some new initiatives and new ideas come forward."

A freak hail storm dumped a foot of marble-sized ice pellets on the lawn of Dunbar's Ren Elliott. "I've been here my whole life and I've never seen anything like it," he said, adding that he immediately put some of the hail in the freezer to keep as proof. "I know people would think I was just telling a story. To tell you the truth, if I didn't see it, I don't know if I would believe it myself."

Chesterville learned that its lucky number had come up and that Wintario would broadcast from the village in September, 1988, as part of the village's 150th anniversary.

Senior citizens in Osnabruck Township showed little enthusiasm for a rent-geared-to-income housing project in the township. Of the 115 questionnaires returend, representing about 20 per cent of the township's senior population, many were either blank or incomplete.

Spurred by fears its land will be stripped of productive soil, Roxborough Township approved measures to restrict the removal of topsoil. With he move, Roxborough joined a handful of municipalities including Winchester, Osgoode and Cornwall with laws aimed at preserving topsoil. "It gives the municipality a chance to keep an eye on things," said Reeve John McIntyre, a dairy farmer.

Five years of coaxing finally paid off for the Moose Creek Fire Department with the opening of a $156,000 station to replace the detachment's cramped quarters.

The controversial French Languages Services Act and free trade dominated the concerns of voters at an all candidates debate hosted by local farm federations. A crowd estimated at just under 400 packed a South Mountain hall for the debate and independent candidate Gord McGregor credited the contentious language law Bill 8 for interest in the campaign. "We all share one common Liberal Gerry Rosenquist had qualified Carkner endorsed it "treating the French) like outsiders in this province isn't fair," he said.

Good weather and the return of the demolition derby proved to be a winning combintation for the annual Stormont County Fair with an estimated crowd of 4,500 showing up at the fairgrounds. The demolition derby, concerns, had its return marred when one of the bleachers collapsed, during the derby, injuring one man.

A Finch fire fighter was taken to hospital suffering from smoke inhalation while battling a house blaze in Finch. Fraser Ouderkirk was treated at Winchester District Memorial Hospital and later released.

Jack Riddell, campaigning for Liberal candidate Gerry Rosenquist in Finch, warned that free trade with the United States would destroy the family farm. But he added Ontario couldn't just walk away from a chance to make a deal with the Americans. "You don't resolve your problems by walking away from them," he said. If you find your tractor doesn't start you don't walk away from the damn tractor."

Tory MPP Noble Villeneuve survived the red tide that decimated the Conservatives in Ontario but only barely. Villeneuve won his 38 per cent of the riding's voters, far less than the sweeping 60 per cent he won in the 1985 election. Gerry Rosenquist, a Morrisburg physician making his second bid for a seat at Queen's Park, captured 10,164 votes and 36 per cent of the popular vote and at one point was declared the winner by election analysts. A visibly tired Villeneuve said the party in SD&G had survived a "double whammy": Liberal Premier David Peterson's province-wide surge of popularity, and the candidacy of an independent Gord McGregor opposing the controversial French Language Services Act. McGregor picked up 4,784 votes, more than double New Democrat Arthur Carkner's count.

Rural murders

The detective heading an investigation into a series of rural murders in Eastern Ontario told a crowded news conference that police had a suspect but not enough evidence to prosecute. OPP Detective Inspector Jim McCormick said the suspect, a male in his 40s who fit the description of a serial killer, could be responsible for as many as six deaths dating back to 1975. McCormick's disclosure set off a week of intensive news coverage that saw Chesterville besieged by reporters who believed the suspect might be living in the village. The scrutiny ended when a Chesterville man appeared on television saying he was the victim of a police vendetta. A lawyer for the man went further, calling treatment of his client "improper, cowardly and unfair." Ontario Attorney General Ian Scott demanded a full on the OPP investigation into the killings. While civil liberties groups attacked the police for their unorthodox handling of the case -- announcing they had a suspect but not giving a name -- Chesterville residents blasted reporters for their actions. "I am concerned when the due process of justice is turned over and put in the hands of the media," said Chesterville reeve Carl Ward, who described the week as a "circus".

With one resident murdered and a major industry vandalized, Winchester Township passed a resolution asking for better police protection. "We think they're not visible enough because of a shortage of staff," Reeve Gerald Holmes said of the Winchester detachment that patrols the township.

St. Lawrence Parks Commission official Pat Wilson denied commission employees were being forced to take French courses in order to continue working there. The charge had been levelled by Osnabruck Township councillor Carson Elliott, who feared employees in the provincial and federal civil service would be forced to become bilingual in order to keep their jobs.

Rain dampened the clothing but not the enthusiasm of joggers and bicyclists who raised nearly $5,000 in the 7th Annual Terry Fox Run.

Police were not connecting the gunshot wounding off a 56-year-old woman in her Manotick-area home with the serial killer they believed could be responsible for ans many as six deaths. Jaape (Jo) Ladan received a superficial wound to her cheek when she was struck by a bullet fired from a passing car. Long Sault Cpl. Al Crocker also ruled out a "copy cat" imitating the serial killer.

Local historians agreed not to stand in the way of upcoming 150th anniversary celebrations in Chesterville despite "obvious historical inaccuracies". Historian Clarence Cross said the only event that might actually connect with 1838 is the opening of a pub. The village was incorporated in 1890.

The head investigator in the 1984 Helmut Buxbaum murder case was appointed to the serial murder case in the Stormont-Dundas area. A media relations officer with the OPP said the appointment of Supt. Ron Piers was simply to get the investigation completed and not a reaction to public pressure.

United Counties road workers marched in Finch, carrying placards denouncing unfair management practices after being locked out when contract negotiations with counties' council stalled. The week-long lockout of United Counties road employees ended with a three-year agreement.

Chesterville's 21-member fire department was recognized as SD&G's premier department in dedication to fire prevention for the second consecutive year.

An estimated $3,000 was raised for minor sports and an elevator for the village's senior citizens when 1,200 people showed up for Finch's first trade show in a decade.

A $1.7 million project was unveiled in Chesterville which could end the village's five-year serach for water by 1989. The well project, located almost four kilometres west of Chesterville, could supply up to 300 gallons a minute, almost triple present needs.

Prompted by a businessman's fear that vandalism is getting out of control, Chesterville council passed a resolution asking for increased OPP surveillance of the village. "This is getting to the point where you've got a big dollar loss," councillor Mike McMahon said of vandalism that included broken windows, bottles thrown at cars and spray painting.

While the Conservatives chose Sarnia MPP Andy Brandt as their interim leader, Noble Villeneuve announced that he would not seek the Ontario PC leadership. "It was not one of my aspirations," he said. "I've had enough running in the last four years to last any politician 10 years."

An inquest was called into the death of a South Mountain area man who was killed when he fell through a plastic liner into a silo while unloading corn. Dr. Gabriel Slowey, coroner for SD&G, said he called the inquest because of the "unusual nature of the death" of Wayne Smith, a 34-year-old father of two.

What was dismissed in June as a rumor suddenly seemed more substantial in October as the SD&G County Board of Education considered moving Finch and Berwick students from grades 7 and 8 to Tagwi Secondary School. If the proposal is approved by the board, the students could be going to Tagwi by September, 1988.

The Chesterville and District Heritage Centre celebrated its official opening by taking a front row seat to history, in this case a chair used by a premier, a prohibitionist and a farm leader during 65 years in the legislature. Fred Cass, a former speaker in the Ontario legislature who also sat in the chair, made the presentation to the museum.

A senior OPP official denied that police were downscaling their investigation into the Ottawa Valley serial murders after a published story said the OPP had reduced the staff on the case from 60 to 20 men. OPP Cpl. Al Crocker also said that a post mortem done on an Oxford Mills man, a 71-year-old recluse who had been found dead in the rubble of his home after a November 1983 fire, "did not disclose any evidence of a bullet or gunshot wound." Archie Collison's body had been exhumed by police when their investigation of the serial murders indicated that he might have been a victim.

In an attempt to offer a safer alternative to trick or treating Chesterville held a community party for children on Halloween that attracted almost 130 children.

The OPP seized a videotaped interview of a Chesterville man who claimed he is a suspect in the Ottawa Valley serial killings but a police spokesman said there was still nothing to announce on the case.

SD&G MPP Noble Villeneuve was appointed agriculture and food and francophone affairs critic in interim Tory leader Andy Brandt's shadow cabinet.

A 44-year-old Orleans woman who became Canada's first artificial heart recipient told the story of her recovery to a spellbound audience that packed the Chesterville Legion hall.

Noella LeClair, who received the Jarvik heart in mid-1986 while waiting for a donor heart, helped the Dundas chapter of the Ontario Heart and Stroke Foundation raise more than $1,600 at the benefit dance.

Police launched an eight-week crackdown on impaired driving they hope will have a sobering effect during the holiday season. Last year local detachments pulled over more than 2,300 drivers.

A Chesterville man, James Henry Wise, 44, appeared in provincial court in Morrisburg charged with wilful destruction in the toppling of a $4 million microwave tower near Williamsburg in August. At a second court appearance Wise pleaded not guilty to the charge.

A five-man jury called for tougher regulations on products used by farmers and mandatory inquests into farm fatalities at an inquest examining the silo death of Wayne Smith, 34, of South Mountain. Smith died when he fell through a 36-foot tear in the seam of a plastic silo liner Sept. 27. The farmhand died when he was asphyxiated by toxic carbon dioxide inside the liner.

Following up on a promise made during his summer election campaign, SD&G MPP Noble Villeneuve once again was addressing the "fairly dicey" issue of official bilingualism in Ontario. Villeneuve said he sent a letter to Liberal Premier David Peterson calling for a review of controversial Bill 8. "There's a lot of concerns that I can't answer," said Villeneuve, who voted for the bill when it was passed a year before.

The chief superintendent for the Ontario Provincial Police assured Winchester Township and area residents that their OPP detachment will remain in Winchester. Concerns about the status of the detachment had increased steadily since last December when MPP Noble Villeneuve learned that the detachment was under review and could be closed.

Winchester Township approved a zoning change allowing construction of a mini-plaza near Winchester despite protests from nearby residents.

A complaint about police protection provided by the Winchester OPP detachment was judged unfounded. "We did an investigation and came to the conclusion that we have a good level of police service in the district," reported Inspector Fred Longchamps of the OPP's district headquarters in Long Sault.

The review, which concluded the detachment actually bettered the average provincial crime-solving rate, was spurred by complaints from Morewood Industries, victim of a $325,000 arson in April and Winchester Township council, which called for upgraded police protection.

Williamsburg Township upped the stakes in the battle to win the $5 million United Counties home for the aged, offering to pay half the cost of a feasibility study for the locating of the home on township property. Williamsburg had already offered the lot and water and sewer services for the site at no charge.

"If we wait long enough, maybe he (Williamsburg Reeve John Whitteker) will build the home too," joked Osnabruck Township Reeve Stewart Hart, who had been lobbying to bring the home to Ingleside.

Marcel Legault, a Moose Creek dairy farmer, was named Stormont's farmer of the year by the county's soil and crop improvement association. Beef producer Peter Mesman, an active member of the agricultural organizations throughout the county, was the winner of the award of merit.

In Dundas, Brinston milk producer Bill Zandbergen was named the county's farmer of 1987. Howard Giles, a farm management specialist with the Winchester OMAF office, was the recipient of the award of merit.

Proposed transfer

SD&G County Board of Education trustees postponed until the new year a decision on the future of Grade 7 and 8 students attending Berwick, Roxmore and Maxville after Maxville parents joined the opposition to a proposed transfer to Tagwi.

The issue become more complex when the separate school board announced it will study the need for a second English-language high school outside the city of Cornwall. Tagwi was rumored as the possible choice for a shared facility.

But Gilles Metivier, the separate school board's director of education, refused to identify any school until a study of the need for a second high school was complete.

"It could very well be North Dundas or Glengarry. Who knows?"

An inquest jury, reviewing the June 15 death of nine-year-old Pascal Perras of Crysler, called for tougher enforcement of provincial laws to keep unlicensed farm equipment operators under the age of 16 off public roads.

Osnabruck Township's efforts to acquire a 125-acre parcel of land owned by the St. Lawrence Parks Commission were stalled once again -- after council had spent $6,000 to clean up the waterfront property. Council said the commission had rejected any form of recreation on the land, contrary to council's plans for bike paths and a boat launch at the site.

A Finch man suffered minor burns when he rushed into his burning home to rescue his 18-month-old daughter, who was asleep upstairs. "He really should be commended," Finch Fire Chief Don McKercher said of Gary Sabourin.

Thousands of people crowded the shoulders of Highway 2 to cheer the Olympic Torch as it passed through the area on an 18,000-kilometre journey to Calgary, site of the winter games.

"You can't feel the cold, the emotion is so high," said Lou Corbeil, whose wife helped complete an estimated 1,000 applications and win niece Nicole van Wylick of Chesterville a spot on the relay team. Corbeil was permitted to carry the torch with his niece.

"To see the torch, to touch it, it's better than Christmas."

Three Chesterville Scouts -- Ivan Bowman, Dean Hillis and David Graham -- prepared to join 14,000 youths from around the world at the 16th international gathering of Scouts in Australia.

Record Editorial / Opinion

Spirits past and present

The regular passage of days and dates on the calendar doesn't change in the period between Christmas and New Year's. It just seems to disappear amid re-arranged work schedules and a hectic round of social gatherings.

But while the Christmas tradition of celebrating the season's best with friends and family continues, it appears socializing habits are slowly changing.

Police have stepped up their annual campaign against drinking and driving during the holiday season.

Across the district, almost 5,000 vehicles were stopped between Dec. 20 and 26 in random spotchecks to catch the impaired or near-impaired driver.

And while police checked almost twice as many drivers as they did during the same period last year, charges of driving while impaired actually increased by only 50 per cent -- from 11 to 17.

Undoubtedly, the media blitz surrounding the kickoff of the annual crackdown plays a large role in the encouraging statistics. The police themselves do as much as they can to keep drunk drivers off the roads by publicizing in advance when they plan to conduct the checks.

The public has also begun to feel the impact of tough laws -- both federal and provincial -- against drunk drivers. In Ontario, a motorist convicted of driving while impaired faces a licence suspension of one year on the first offence, alone.

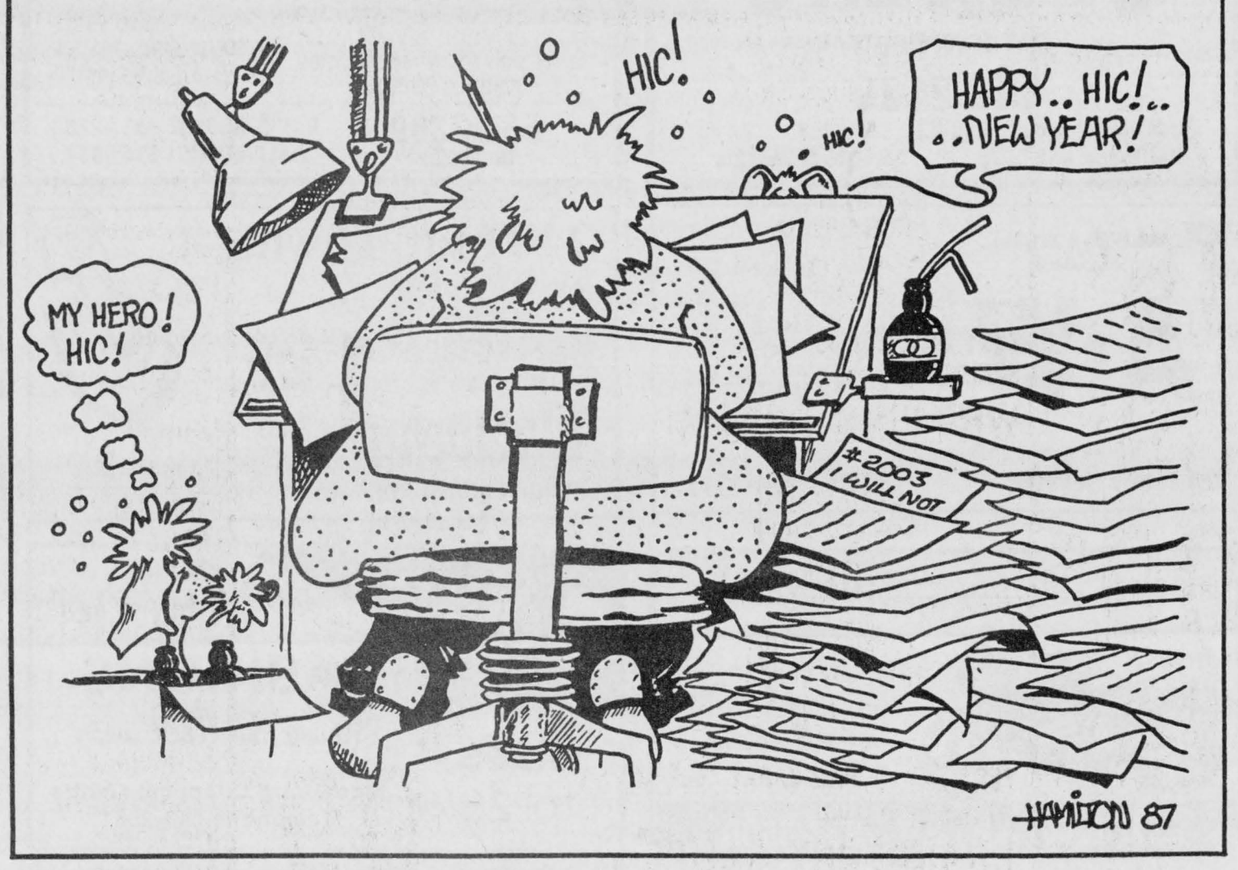
The fear of being caught may be doing more to keep drunk drivers off the road during the Christmas season than the alarming statistics of the number of deaths and injuries caused by drinking and driving.

But the risk of being caught won't make a dent in the years to come, when the fear of increased fines, licence suspensions and jail terms wears off.

Public attitudes towards drinking and driving must change and there are signs a subtle shift is occurring. Groups of concerned people, ranging from mothers to teenagers, are banding together to condemn the "one for the road" mentality. Liquor companies are taking to the airwaves to urge moderation. Restaurants and taverns are supporting the designated driver program, in which one member of a party is supplied with free soft drinks to be able to drive the others home safely.

The spirits of Christmas past, while they haven't vanished, appear to be making fewer appearances. Let's hope the ghosts of Christmas future continue to make sobering rounds during the rest of the new year.

Diane Johnston



Chesterville's Past

07 From the Record Thurs., Dec. 26, 1907

The Cornwall hockey team defeated a picked Ottawa team at Cornwall Christmas night, by a score of 3 goals to 1 in an exhibition game. About 1,500 people were present and while the quality of the hockey was not gilt edged, the game was interesting from start to finish. In the first half, the home team scored three goals, but in the second period the Ottawa boys made good and landed the only goal scored.

Last evening, being Christmas night, is the one evening in the year set apart by the Methodist Church Sunday School of this place for the holding of their annual entertainment, and the result was no exception to the rule, relative to a bumper crowd and a good time. People were there from all sections of the country, and so full was the hall that quite a number were unable to gain admittance. A good program was prepared and the children as well as the grown up people seemed to enjoy the entertainment. Mr. P. Allison, the secretary of the school, deserves credit for the arrangements he makes for this yearly event.

Only 15 cents to see Old Mother Hubbard in the Kinderspiel.

Midnight Mass was celebrated in St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church here on Christmas Day, commencing at 12 o'clock by Rev. Father Fleming.

27 From the Record Thurs., Dec. 29, 1927

The failure of Hydro power on paper day for the third week in a short time again accounted for The Record appearing a day late. This latest interruption has prompted the sincere New Year wish that Hydro be more successful in the coming year.

Chesterville hockey team celebrated their entrance into the Rideau Group League last night when they won from Perth by two goals to one, before a large crowd of enthusiastic spectators who were anxious to get a line on the team for the season. The ice was a little soft to start with.

For the Record

Diane Johnston

When I was a young girl, one gift that I could count on being under the Christmas tree was a diary. The tiny lock and gold key conjured up images of Get Smart, my favourite TV show.

(For some reason, my mother couldn't understand the appeal of bumbling spy Maxwell Smart, who talked into his shoe and couldn't master the operation of The Cone of Silence when he sought a private audience with The Chief.)

With a diary, I could be Agent 99, recording my role in the international game of espionage -- or at least keeping track of which classmates happened to be "friends" or "enemies".

For an eight-year-old, that score changes daily.

In my finest handwriting, I would make the entries faithfully at the end of each day for the first week of January. Then I would skip a day or two, relying on memory to get caught up at the end of the week.

By the end of the month, there were blank pages amid the entries that grew shorter and messier.

February was almost a complete blank and in March I would turn over a new leaf -- and write nothing at all.

But guilt would set in by April and each spring I resolved to begin the daily recordings of what time I got up, what I ate and who I'd seen at school -- the underworld of the elementary school set.

That phase lasted about two weeks, then the dairy slid to the back of the dresser and eventally behind it, to become a study in dust collection.

By high school, I'd learned of the great diary-keepers of the modern world. But by then, no one who was anyone among the newly adolescent actually bothered to keep a diary.

So it's with a sense of deja vu I now approach the Christmas tree, because among the gifts are the adult equivalents of a child's diary.

The pristine pages of the 1988 calendars, with their neat columns for the listing of emergency telephone numbers and the birthdays of friends and families, beckon.

The appointment agendas, bound in royal blue and emblazoned with "1988" in gold lettering, almost demand that I take up my ballpoint pen and attempt fine script. There's a yearly planner, a monthly planner, a weekly planner and even a daily planner, for those whose time is so valuable their waking hours must be apportioned in 60-minute blocks.

Pharmacies distribute pretty purse-size booklets for taking note of the sizes, favorite colors, birthstones, and zodiac signs of all who fall on your "dates to remember" list.

There are whole pocket books devoted to organization. Telephone numbers and addresses, grocery lists, a cheque book holder, plastic envelopes in which to encase pieces of identification -- all included in one handy carry-all.

They're great gifts.

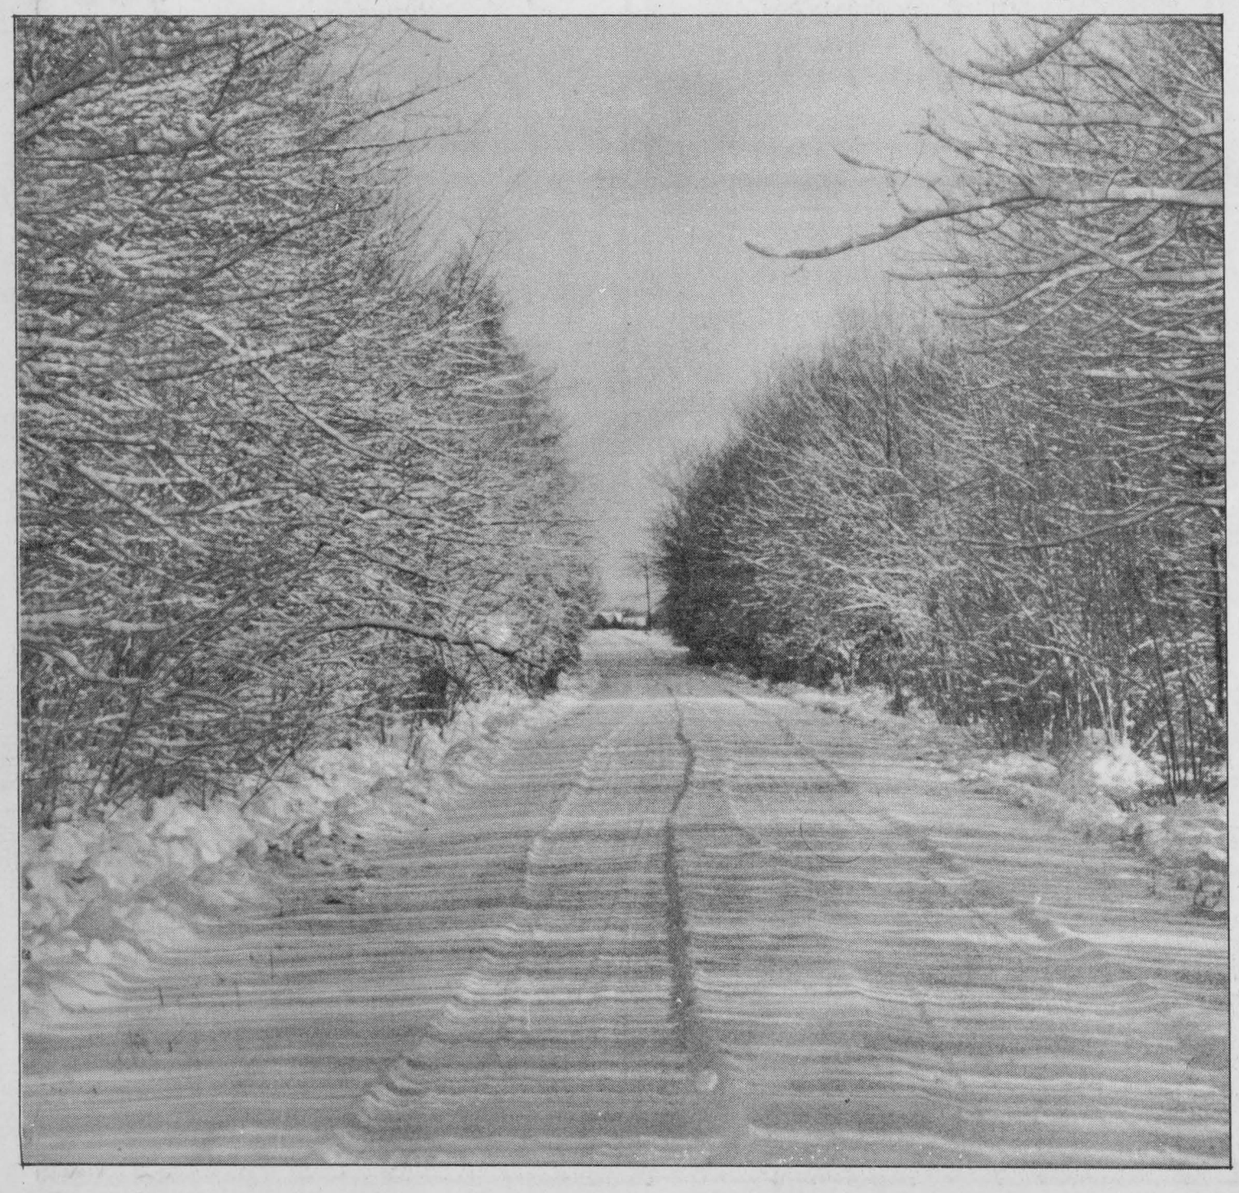
They promise an end to grocery lists scribbled on the flaps of used envelopes; half-filled steno pads that are never where I thought I had left them; phone numbers duly recorded on the backs of old business cards and then discarded.

The events that mark 12 months of my existence are routinely recorded on a calendar of recipes prepared by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

But before I open my most current set of organizers, I'll pause to remember the five or six years' worth of diaries I have stashed away in the basement.

Had I not ruined the whole book by writing on a few pages (I rationalize), I could have used the volume for something really important, like, oh, a novel.

And if I were to use the organizers, I'd have no need to even glance at the Milk Calendar...and somehow I'd miss seeing the year pass from Chicken and Broccoli Cannelloni to Carrot Cake with Cream Cheese Frosting.



The Farmer's Wife

by Wyn Thompson

On a moonlit night in December, as the world turns toward another year, I sit quietly and begin to make a new set of resolutions.

I hear the familiar sounds in the house, the breaking of a burned log in the open fire, the click of Lady's toenails as she comes in looking for a tasty tidbit from the refrigerator.

The Farmer reads a bit, the talk is idle, rewarding. What the new year may bring, we cannot know, but I hope its blessings may fall on each and everyone as softly as a spring mist. Be that as it may, tomorrow will be another adventure in living.

So soon, it will be time to put up the new calendars, and as the old ones come down I always wonder where the past year went.

The new year often comes in accompanied by steeply falling temperatures and spluttering snowstorms. Parties abound, but we have a strong feeling of wanting to see the old year out beside our own fire, so we have, for the most part, avoided the customary parties.

We sometimes read, and listen to music or a television program and we talk about the year to come. Whether we celebrate it at a party or by a hearth, it is not to be wasted. It is to be enjoyed.

New Year's day at Hill house is a family occasion. Number two son and his wife and their two delightful children come and fill the home with fun and laughter. Number one son and his family are off skiing.

After a noon buffet, we start up the snowmobiles and have a run over the bush trails. Lady rides in front of the Farmer and, of course, we must be back for the evening chores.

We begin the new year with plenty of wood cut and piled close at hand. The Farmer readies himself to go in the afternoon to the bush to cut wood for another year. He likes to get away each winter's day for a few hours in the bush.

The fires burn brightly these days. January in Eastern Ontario requires stamina. After a storm, and when we are plowed out, the urge to go to town for supplies is strong. Just in case it storms again.

To be out, just doing ordinary errands, is a pleasure after being housebound. I now leave Lady at home for her age is showing and she minds the cold desperately. She takes it hard, but greets me warmly at the door when I return.

Eastern climate

But we Eastern Ontarions take weather as it comes. Not so long ago a visitor remarked that Eastern Ontarions "freeze in January and boil in July". She continued to say that we must be mad to live in such a climate.

I tell her that we have a couple of months that are very nice and reliable, and that every month has its own beauty. When it is bitter cold, I enjoy the bush trails and the fire on the hearth when I return; the song of the birds at the feeder; the singing of the tea kettle; the squeak of a neighbour's skis. And nothing can compare with a January sunset gilding a world of white.

But then, the climate of home - no matter where it may be - is always best.

About five in the afternoon the day's activity is over, and Lady is ready for a doze by the fire. Night comes so early that supper is always by electric light.

I really prefer the long summer days, for I love light. I would have been a cranky caveman's wife, for I'd been constantly nagging for "just a tiny opening in the cave wall".

However, even if January days are dark, the sky usually opens her door as the sun goes down and an apricot wash spreads over the hills and valleys. But winter sunsets do not linger, and soon the cold moon rises.

I build up the fire and start supper. When I look out the east window, I see the icicles hanging from the milk house nearby. If I have not been out skiing, I take a walk in the moonlight, but I seldom walk far for the January night air has a killing blade on a clear night.

And so a new year gets underway, and as I said, what the new year will bring, we cannot know. There has been much good in the old year I have folded away, although some sadness too. But there are always, in any year, many wonderful memories, and I cherish every one of them.

Life is not a pageant of loveliness but, rather, it is made up of many small and lovely things, much like a patchwork quilt. No two people have the same, but we all have our own, whether it be attending a play with a beloved friend or seeing our spouse at the back door with a bouquet of spring flowers.

Or watching the squirrels scamper from branch to branch, while woodpeckers hammer away. Or listening to the chickadees at the feeder and wondering how so much sound can come from so minute beings.

Or listening to the noisy bluejays for they are the loudest of the birds, with those peculiarly harsh voices, and when they flash in to the feeder, the gentle snowbirds disappear. They do dominate the winter world and I would be lost without them.

As the clock moves assuredly from yesterday to today, I look out the bow window and soak in the intensity of a winter moonlight. The world, my world, is still and lovely and I am thankful.

Across the way, in the dark bush, a branch falls, and regularly a plane goes by bound for Ottawa International Airport. I envy the pilot, in that cold, sparkling sky, and hope the passengers arrive home safely.

As I turn from the window I say, "Happy New Year to all of us, all over this spinning earth. And may it be a good year for each and every one of you."

Kelly gave Green a 3-1 lead with 2:07 to play in the first and the score remained the same as neither team produced any more.

It was a scoreless first period and the 86s played sporadically, said McRae. "The guys didn't seem hungry for the win."

McRae said he wasn't sure why the team didn't play well against the Beavers adding the 86s had only one big game against the Clarence team (an 8-1 win Dec. 6).

Along with Jean, Alain Talbot, Gregg McEachern and Sylvain Marcil scored for the Beavers. Mike Van Delst, Steve Tait, Tim Ouderkirk and Dale Murray scored North Stormont's goals.

The Beavers scored first while on the powerplay. Talbot put Clarence up 1-0 less than five minutes into the second period. Van Delst tied it up midway through the period but the Beavers took a 2-1 lead at the intermission after McEachern scored with 5:33 to play in the period.

Ouderkirk, Murray and Tait scored consecutively as North Stormont took a 4-2 lead with 8:49 to play in the game.

Marcil put the Beavers within one with 2:08 to play and Jean tied the game up with 27 seconds left on the clock as the teams came away with one point each.

Gordon loses shutout win but N. Dundas takes B side

WINCHESTER (Staff) - Seumas Gordon was seconds away from a shutout as the North Dundas Demons won the B side of the atom A tournament here Monday.

The Demons led 4-0 after two periods before Cumberland Blues' Nicholas Blanchard scored from Steve Chaput and Michel Bertrand with 33 seconds remaining on the clock.

Gordon lost the shutout but won the B side of the tourney with a 4-1 score over the Blues.

Jason Desormeaux, Clinton Holmes, Wally Cinnamon and Barry Bell scored the Demons' goals in the win.

The Demons made it to the B final after a 5-3 win over the Embrun Panthers in the semi-final. North Dundas lost their first game of the tournament, a 2-1 decision to the Metcalfe Mustangs.

Barry's Bay Bears won the A championship with a 5-4 overtime win over the Mustangs.

Chris Gienow scored midway through the overtime period to give the Bears the win. It was Gienow's third goal of the game. J.B. Rumlesky and Richard Kauffeldt scored the Bears' other goals.

Steve James, Kevin Collins, Ryan Cruckshank and David Schow scored for Metcalfe.

Metcalfe led 2-0 before Gienow scored his first with 42 seconds to play in the first period. The Mustangs then went ahead 3-1 when Cruickshank scored with 32 seconds to play in the period.

Barry's Bay scored two unanswered goals in the second to tie the game at three.

Schow put Metcalfe in front with 533 to play but Gienow scored 111 later to tie the game.

Gienow scored 251 into the overtime to give the Bears the win.

Barry's Bay made it to the final after a 4-2 win in a shoot out with the Renfrew Timberwolves in the semifinal. The Bears had seven goals in the first period as they won 9-3 over the Ottawa West Golden Knights in their first match of the tournament.

Eight teams attended the one-day tournament including the Carleton Place Kings.

Navan wins jr. B tourney in shootout with Renfrew

OSGOODE (Staff) - The Navan Grads defeated Renfrew 7-5 in a shootout to win the Eastern Ontario Junior B Hockey League's annual Boxing Day tournament.

The tournament, which was moved to Osgoode's new arena this year, drew a crowd estimated at 1,200 that depleted the arena's canteen three times.

"We didn't expect that big a crowd," said Metcalfe Jets' General Manager Bill Wammes. "People were impressed with the arena."

If the Jets, host of the tournament, were doing well off the ice, they couldn't say the same for their performance on the ice. The defending league champions were plagued by penalties and lost 3-1 to the Prescott Falcons in the opening round.

The Falcons held the Jets off the scoreboard until the third period in the game.

In the championship game, the Grads scored twice in a shootout to beat the Renfrew Timberwolves 7-5 in a game that couldn't be decided by a five minute overtime.

This year's tournament drew eight teams, including the Morrisburg Lions and the Alexandria Glens from the St. Lawrence Division. Both division entries lost in the opening round, the Lions dropping 6-2 to Navan and the Glens losing 5-1 to Renfrew.

Other opening round scores included a 4-3 win by the Shawville Pontiacs over Cardinal-Spencerville.

In the semi-final rounds, Navan edged Shawville 3-2 and Renfrew defeated Prescott 5-2.

Tom Wardle of the Navan Grads was chosen as the tournament's most valuable player.

The top scorer was Don Stone of Renfrew.

Darren Proulx of the Grads was chosen as the top goalie.

Extra players added to all-star

ST. ISIDORE (Staff) - The additional players have been named to the line up of both the South and North Divisions for the EOJCHL All-Star games.

Along with the regular three from each team in their division, the North has added Pierre Payant and Martin Hughes of the Casselman-Cambridge Stars and Kevin Hughes of the Rockland Nats.

The three extra players for the South Division are Greg Mesich and Mike and Bob Van Delst, all of the North Stormont 86s.

Coaching the North team will be Stars' coach Robert Desnoyers and Bob Fairfield, coach of the Nats. (St. Isidore Eagles' coach Francois Leroux turned down the invitation.) Steve McRae, coach of the 86s, and Dan Piche, coach of the Embrun 72s, will coach the South Division.

This is the first year of the all-star game and players will be wearing their own team uniforms with the South Division the visiting team.

First Vice-President Jules Lavictoire said custom-made uniforms, bearing either South or North, were not available this year due to lack of funds but if the all-star game is held next year, uniforms will be purchased.

The game is set to begin at 8 p.m. tonight (Wednesday) with the lineups named just previous to the drop of the puck.

Hawks score on powerplay for victory

KEMPTVILLE (Staff) - The Winchester Hawks scored three power-play goals as they went on to win 5-4 over the Kemptville 73s Dec. 27.

Chris Wiley, Mario Halle and Scott Barnes each scored once while the team was on the powerplay to help the team win over the 73s.

Scott Gibson and Denis Verville scored the Hawks' other goals while Ron Sloan had two and Rob Percival and Brent Corneil each had one for Kemptville.

The 73s got on the board first 12:54 into the game with Corneil's goal but the score was tied two minutes later when Wiley scored while on the man advantage.

Sloan scored his first goal four minutes into the second as Kemptville regained the lead but nearing the midway mark of the period, Gibson scored as the game was once again tied.

Percival put Kemptville in front 8:29 into the third but Winchester took over the lead with powerplay goals by Halle and Barnes.

Verville put the Hawks ahead 5-3 with two minutes to play but the 73s got the final goal. With 13 seconds remaining in the game, Sloan scored his second as Winchester won 5-4.

Demons tie

PRESCOTT (Staff) - The North Dundas Demons gave up a late powerplay goal as the South Grenville Generals came back to tie the game in pee wee A minor hockey Dec. 22.

The Demons led 2-1 before J. Hare scored on the powerplay with 4:07 to play in the game as the teams tied 2-2.
