Scalded to Death.

A little child of Mr. and Mrs. W. Rowsome, residing near Athens, met death in a painful manner Friday morning. A pail containing scalding water for the use of a veterinary surgeon, who had been called to attend a sick cow, was left on a step. The little child, who was playing close by approached the pail and pulling it towards her, the contents spilled over her body. She died a few hours later.

Sensation at Winchester.

Quite a sensation has been created in Winchester the past week. The cause of which is the going away of Willie Ross, son of Mr. Alex. Ross. The young man was employed as teller in the Union Bank of that place, and on the 24th of May went away and did not return and up to the present his whereabouts are unknown. He, with the manager, had the combination of the vault, and of course entrance could not be obtained without his return. After every preparation had been made to drill the lock, by accident, the combination was found by his parents in a vest at his home. At first it was surmised that something was wrong but from reports received it said that such is not the case. The parents feel their position very keenly and are sparing no time or trouble in finding the whereabouts of their boy.

A Good Man Gone.

On Sunday morning, May 20th, Mr. Joseph S. Kyle. of North Winchester, Ont., one of the early settlers of Dundas county, entered into rest, at the ripe old age of 82 years. He was born April 4th, 1824, and in 1839 came from Kilrea, County Antrim, Ireland, to that part of Winchester township in which he has ever since resided. He was married January 6th, 1846, to Miss Rose Law of Kemptville, Ont., and the venerable couple were spared to each other to celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary on January 6th of the present year, which unique event was participated in by their children and three generations.

Mr. Kyle was a Presbyterian and had been for over 30 years an elder of the Morewood Presbyterian Church. On Tuesday morning the remains were taken to the cemetery of the church for interment, followed by a large number of mourning relatives and devoted friends. The service was conducted in the church by the pastor Rev. D. Stewart, assisted by Rev. Mr. Beamish, pastor of the Methodist church, and in it reference was made to the great interest which the deceased has always taken in the welfare of the congregation, he being spoken of as one of the pillars of the church.

He leaves to mourn his loss the aged partner of his joys and sorrows, his sisters, Mrs. Jas. Fraser, and Mrs. A. Smirle of Morewood, Ont.,; and the following children: Mrs. A. Morgan of Los Angeles, Calif.,; R. J. Kyle of North Winchester, Ont.,; D. L. Kyle, Mrs. G. Tomlinson, Mrs. M. A. Sully and William A. Kyle, M. D, of Ottawa, Ont.

Almost a Centenarian.

Mrs. Sutton, a venerable resident of Jasper passed away on Saturday the 19th, inst. at the ripe old age of 96 years. Up to a short time before her death she had enjoyed good health. The deceased had lived with her daughter, Miss Sutton, in the village for the past four years. Mrs. Robert Nevens of that place is her only other surviving child. The body was taken to Merrickville for interment and a service was held in St. Anne's church there by Rev. Carson. The deceased is the grandmother of Mrs. W. A. Olmstead of this place.

CABUL TRAGEDY 1841-42

THE THRILLING NARRATIVE OF A SURVIVOR.

Story of the Slaughter of a Small Army of British Soldiers in Afghanistan.

A beaten British army is terrible, and, thank God, rare enough. This fugitive rabble was not only beaten—it was disgraced. Incompetency amongst officers, indiscipline amongst men, was its record.. A record to be atoned for by the direct suffering for all, the supreme sacrifice for many, and individual acts of such high courage and patient endurance as may take front rank for all time in the annals of our race. It is sorry reading:—

"The scene of slaughter was dreadful. All baggage was abandoned. The enemy not only poured in a murderous fire from every rock and cave in the heights on each side, but descended into the Pass and slew men, women and children. The whole road for a distance of five miles is covered with dead and dying. Our loss this day was computed at about 3,000, or one-sixth of our people. The 37th N. I. lost more than half of its men, and other corps in proportion. Even those who remained could scarcely move or hold a musket, from their feet and hands being frostbitten; and to add to our misery snow began to fall on our arrival at Khurd Cabul. . . . . .

"Every man among us thought that ere many hours he was doomed to die, either by cold or hunger, or butchered by our enemies—for if attacked, although we might for a short time hold out, nothing could eventually save us.

"Hundreds of poor wretches, men and women, who had not been fortunate enough to seize any animal to carry them, or having done so had been dispossessed of them by others stronger than themselves, were left to lie or to be butchered by the enemy. The sight was fearful."

But set against that such an incident as the stand made by a handful of officers to give the infantry a chance:—

"On arriving within two miles of Jagdalak, where the descent into the valley commences, we observed the hills on each side of the road were occupied by the enemy, who with their long jezails fired upon us the whole way, and again the road was covered with dead and dying. We were so thick a mass that every shot told on some part or other of our column. On the advance arriving in the valley, and being hard pressed, we took up a position on the first height we came to, and near some ruined walls. As scarcely any Europeans of the advance now remained, and the enemy were increasing, the General called several officers, about twenty of us, to form line and show a front. We had scarcely done so when my friend, Captain Grant, who was next to me, received a ball through his cheek, which broke his jaw. I lifted him off his horse, and seated him on the ground. Nothing could exceed the bravery displayed by Brig. Shelton, who commanded the rearguard. He was like a bulldog assaulted on all sides by a lot of curs trying to get a snap at his head, tail, and sides. Shelton's small band was attacked by horse and foot and although the latter were fifty to one, not a man dared to come close. The few of us with General Elphinstone, who had formed line to show front to the enemy when we were awaiting, were so delighted, not only at the courage displayed by Shelton, but at his manoeuvres to keep off the enemy, that we cheered him in as he descended into the valley, notwithstanding we at the time were acting as targets for the marksmen of the enemy on the hills."

And in that last appalling struggle in the shambles of Gandamak—

"Our troops at length got to the top of the pass, where a barrier of trees and bushes had been forced across the road. The Ghilzis were lying in wait for the result among the hills. This was soon apparent. The greatest confusion ensued—again were the horrid yells of the enemy heard and again were more victims added to those who head already fallen. "Onward" was still the word. About a mile further a second barrier was encountered, and the results were similar to those of the former, the enemy still pursuing in increased numbers close upon the rear. When near Surkab some officers, seeing all chance of escape was over, pushed on by themselves for Jelalabad, every one of whom, with the exception of Dr. Brydon, was killed. Three (among whom was Captain Hopkins, of the Shah's 6th, and one whose friendship I had enjoyed for years past) had reached within sight of Jelalabad, when attacked and murdered."

When day broke on Jan. 13, some 20 officers, 45 European soldiers, and a few Sepoys had reached Gandamak:—

"Here was a fresh body of the enemy . . . . . every hut in the country had poured forth its inhabitants to murder and plunder. Our men had not above one or two rounds of ammunition left. They still, though so small a band, determined to the enemy while life remained; their numbers were as 1 to 100, and most of them were already wounded.

"A messenger from the chief of the district arrived and inquired for the senior officer. This was Major Griffiths, 37th N. I., who acompanied the messenger in the hope of persuading him to exert his influence to save the lives of the small band of Europeans that still remained. Before, however, the Major had reached the chief the enemy had called upon the Europeans to surrender and give up their arms. An attempt was then made by a few to disarm them by force; this was resisted, blows were exchanged, and a contest between the two parties was thus brought on. A rush was made by the infuriated and savage mob. Further resistance was of no avail, and in the space of five minutes every man, with the exception of Captain Soutar, of the 44th Queen's who had wrapped around him his regimental colors, and five soldiers taken prisoners, were massacred.

"Thus perished, after dreadful sufferings, the remnants of an army that had left Cabul seven days previously, composed of 4,500 fighting men and 13,000 camp followers."—From "The Cabul Tragedy," in Blackwoods's Magazine.

HAD MESSAGE OF DEATH.

A Curate's Remarkable Prophecy of Death Made in Welsh Church.

A remarkable incident is reported from Maesteg, South Wales. The Rev. Meredith Morris, curate in charge of Garth church, in the midst of his discourse on a recent Sunday night, said that he was charged to deliver a solemn message. He had in the past adversely criticised those who had said that they had seen visions. He would not do so again.

There were, he said, many absentees from the Easter communion, including seven young men who had promised to come, but never meant to do so, and he subsequently saw them engaged in gambling under a tree. The message he had to deliver was from God. He had seen a vision, and in it were these seven young men, one of whom would be called to reckoning by his Maker, and that very shortly.

Remarkable to state, on Monday afternoon one of the young men to whom the curate had referred was killed in a local colliery.

HIS VISION.

Interviewed by a pressman, the Rev. Meredith Morris said—"Yes, I have had a remarkable experience. The state of several of our young men filled me with grief and the deepest concern. I spent my time from Sunday until Thursday—I mean Thursday of last week—in urgent prayer for them. The greatest part of Wednesday night was so spent. I was still praying and Thursday afternoon had come. I recall that I seemed to go off in a faint, and then a vision came clearly before me. I saw seven young men. I distinctly recognized four of them, and in the vision I saw one of the young men killed and killed at a colliery.

"I was burdened with the message of warning. Until I delivered it from the pulpit. I did not know which of the young men it would be, and, strange as it might seem, it brought me a certain sense of relief when the news of the fatal accident cleared up that part of the mystery. The warning message which came into my sermon on Sunday night was, of course, unpremeditated."

PASTE FOR ROYALTY.

Cleverly Executed Counterfeits of Crown Jewels.

The visitor to the Tower of London who is permitted to inspect the crown jewels seldom knows that a large proportion of the blazing gems are merely paste, and that although the Tower might be considered a safe enough place most of the famous stones are in reality stored in the vaults of the King's bankers, their places being taken by cleverly executed counterfeits in paste. The Koh-i-noor is never on exhibition, and some of the other stones are represented by proxy, though the famous ruby worn in his helmet by Henry when he invaded France and which now blazes in the centre of the Maltese cross in the crown made for Queen Victoria is shown.

It was the early custom to provide an ornate but inexpensive crown for the Queen Consort, and though these circlets blaze with jewels none of them are real. When Victoria was to be crowned Queen Regent it was realized that it would never do to offer her paste and a new crown was provided, for which stones were taken from the earlier masculine crowns.

With the exception of the Queen's crown and some few stones in other badges of royalty the entire display is of paste and yet shows the original stones, even the imperial crown never having boasted real jewels.

Oddly enough, most of these paste jewels attract more appreciative comment than the few crowns set with geuine stones, and the sightseer goes on his way rejoicing or envious, according to his temperament, although any fashionable jeweller's store will display ten times the number of real precious stones.

Intrinsically the entire display is not worth more than a quarter of a million.

NO HIGHER COURT.

A small town in Colorado, 13,200 feet above sea-level, boasts a justice of the peace. Recently a suit was tried before him that stirred the community to its centre, from the fact that one of the parties imported a lawyer from a distant city.

The case dragged itself out to an unprecedented length, and the populace had never dreamed that law was so full of objections and exceptions, notions, protests, expostulations, and the like, as that lawyer proved it to be.

But there was one thing he could not prolong, and that was the prompt, crisp, decisive "Judgment for the plaintiff," as soon as the trial was fairly over.

"Well, sir," said the lawyer, in tones of superiority, "we shall have to take this case to a higher court."

"You can't do that, mister," replied the magistrate.

"And why not, pray?"

"There ain't any higher court. This court is 13,200 feet above the level of the sea, and it's several hundred feet the highest court in the country."

HAS THE EQUATOR BEEN SHIFTED?

While Ontario has had a winter season, according to the calendar, but without any winter thrown in, the people of Mexico have been suffering intensely from most unusual cold. In the city of Mexico lightly-clad people have actually perished on the streets, and on the plains a number of shepherds have died from exposure in a temperature that to them was extremely low. With the cold there has been an outbreak of typhus, which ran the death-rate in the City of Mexico from 48 up to 60 per 1,000.

Weak coffee often furnishes strong grounds for domestic dissatisfaction.

HOTELS THAT ARE FREE

THEY ARE SCATTERED ALL OVER THE GLOBE.

Established by Various Governments and Supplied With a Stock of Provisions.

When the proposed motor-car dash to the South Pole is actually attempted, the adventurers cannot do better than start from Hut Point, at the foot of Mount Erebus, where is a substantially-built house, furnished with every modern appliance for withstanding the cold weather, and stored with a good stock of provisions, wines and spirits, and medical comforts. This unique caravanserai was left standing—of course, for the benefit of future explorers—by Captain Scott's party, who passed therein the winter of 1902-3.

Another "Antarctic hotel" that is open to occupation by all comers is situated at the foot of Cape Adare, on Robertson Island. It was occupied by the Southern Cross exploring party in 1899, and when left by them was in excellent condition, well-stocked with a finely-selected store of provisions of all kinds. Almost certainly these two refuges are still intact, for they were specially constructed to withstand the climate, and there are no prowling land mammals—as in the North Polar regions—to interfere with the provisions.

It is not, however, only in these ice-packed and inaccessible seas that free hotels of this kind are to be found. They are scattered many of them being kept up by the various governments which claim jurisdiction over the places wherein they are situated.

Thus, France has erected on Kerguelen Land—a large, uninhabited island in the Indian Ocean—a substantial building of hewn stone, replete with every convenience. Here are stores of tinned soups, vegetables, meat, etc., and also nets for catching fish, harpoons for killing the seals and whales which abound thereabouts, axes for felling timber, and even a small library of nautical books and current works of fiction. All this, of course, is designed for the succor of any destitute castaways who may chance to be shipwrecked on Kerguelen's inhospitable shores, and must on no account be touched by chance visitors.

The British Admiralty maintains similar refuges at Amsterdam Island and St. Paul's, two isolated points of volcanic rock jutting out from the bosom of an ocean that is well-nigh devoid of traffic or shipping of any kind. The provision depot at the first-named spot is situated within a dry, roomy cave, wherein have been erected cots for sleeping. There are also to be found in that refuge pots for cooking, preserved beef, biscuits, a quantity of warm clothing, bales of blankets, and—soldered inside a metal box, painted red—

FOUR PACKETS OF MATCHES.

At St. Paul's the refuge-house has been erected within the crater of an extinct volcano and in close proximity to a natural hot bath, while the provisions, clothing, etc., are contained in a number of water-tight casks.

So far back as the year 1880 there was established on Possession Island, in the Indian Ocean, one of the largest refuge depots in existence, and it has been visited and replenished at intervals ever since by British cruisers detailed for the duty. It consists of five roomy huts fitted with tables, benches, and bunks, while in a separate air-tight store-room are 5,000 pounds of preserved provisions and fifty complete suits of clothes.

At Heard Island, south of Kerguelen Land, popularly reputed by sealers—the only people who visit it—to be the most desolate spot on earth, is a stone hut built by a pious whaling captain as a thanksgiving for having escaped with his life from an ice-slide. It contains a store of provisions and a quantity of religious literature. At Hog Island, one of the Crozet Group, the British Government has built quite an ornate little "hotel" for possible castaways, and has stocked it with, amongst other luxuries, sardines in oil tinned salmon, preserved potatoes, and ginger in jars. There are also a keg of rum, a small barrel of brandy, hatchets for chopping wood, spears for killing fish, blankets, and

WARM UNDERCLOTHING.

Some of these out-of-the-way spots strike one as being specially suited to the requirements of amateur Robinson Crusoes. For instance, there is Rose Island, amply provisioned, though quite uninhabited, and provided, moreover (in addition to the usual refuge-hut), with a lifeboat, in which the lonely exile from his kind could easily make New Zealand when tired of the charms of solitude.

Snares Island, too, and Antipodes Island would furnish comfortable retreats for anyone wishing to be quite alone for a not too lengthy period. At each there are a comfortable little house of galvanized iron, provisions in plenty, a supply of fishing tackle, and a small library. Moreover, both the islands are visited twice a year by a Government ship specially detailed to look out for and succor castaways, so that none need fear being compelled to emulate Alexander Selkirk for more than a comparatively brief period.

It would be well, however, for anybody having ambitions in this direction to avoid Pagan Island, in the Ladrone Group. Here, it is true, are a refuge-hut (of asbestos) and goodly stores of provisions; but on the island, which is only a few miles in circumference, are no fewer than three active volcanoes in an almost constant state of eruption.—London Tit-Bits.

BEGINNING OF DRUNKS.

A scientist says that when people were cave-dwellers their diet consisted entirely of rootss and fruits, and that it is not unnatural to supose that the food was often stored away. In course of time the fruit fermented, the sugar in it was turned into pure alcohol, and the cave-dwellers drank it and got to like it. This was the beginning of the use of alcohol.

DAY'S WORK OF THE KING

FORTUNATE IF HE CAN GET THROUGH IN TWELVE HOURS.

Answer Given to Church Army Members Causes Writer to Follow Routine.

King Edward, in the course of an audience granted last week to the leaders of the Church Army movement in England, who are endeavoring to deal with the difficult problem created by the appalling condition of laboring men, incidentally mentioned that he was obliged to work hard himself, and that his ordinary working day was not one of eight hours, but twelve hours, and that he considered himself fortunate when he accomplished all he had to do in that time, writes Marquise de Fontenoy.

This pronouncement, cabled to this country and published in the American newspapers, has excited a considerable amount of amazement among those here who have been accustomed to look upon the British monarch as essentially a man of pleasure; indeed, as one of the greatest sybarites in Europe, and the question has arisen in connection therewith as to what the labors of the British monarch really were.

DOCUMENTS TO SIGN.

It may therefore be as well to explain that the King has hundreds of documents to sign on every day of the year, Sundays included. It must be borne in mind that as a general principle no adminsitrative act by the Government and no act of Parliament is valid in the eyes of the law until it receives the sign manual of the sovereign. Everything done by the Government of the day in behalf of the State and in the name of the nation is a sovereign act, no matter how trivial it may be, and a sovereign act cannot be complete and therefore valid until it has received the sovereign's signature.

Fifteen years ago it was estimated by competent authorities that the number of documents receiving the signature of Queen Victoria averaged at least 60,000 per annum. That would give about 200 for each week day throughout the entire twelve months. Since that time documents requiring the sign manual of the British sovereign have enormously increased, and it is probable that to-day the papers which King Edward is obliged to sign average between 400 and 500 a day.

NONE BUT THE KING.

The commission of every officer of the army and navy and the diplomatic corps, from admirals of the fleet, field marshalls, and ambassadors, down to the most youthful subaltern or beardless atache, requires the signature of the King, whose approval is likewise necessary to the draft of every important dispatch sent out by the Department of Foreign Affairs. All the more important appointments, administrative as well as judicial, must have the sovereign's written consent. No one can relieve the sovereign of this particular portion of his work.

INTERVIEWS ALSO.

The giving of these signatures, arduous as is the work entailed when a monarch is conscientious, constitutes but a part of the day's business. The German and Austrian rulers require their Cabinet Ministers to make at least twice a week verbal reports of all important matters concerning their departments, in addition to their written communications. Queen Victoria insisted on this only in the case of the Foreign Office, but King Edward demands that he should be kept informed about all matters of moment, and he is constantly calling upon this Minister or that Government official to furnish him with special reports. Not a day passes without several Government functionaries being received in audience, and the interview is usually followed by some action on the part of the sovereign or of the dignitary in question.

DESPATCHES FROM ABROAD.

Throughout the entire day, and often far into the night, there is a constant succession of messages arriving for the sovereign. In London, as also in Berlin and Vienna, the Minister of Foreign Affairs is under orders to transmit to the monarch immediately on its arrival a copy of every despatch that arrives from abroad, either by telegraph or by mail, and the reading and discussion of these despatches alone constitute a tax upon royal time and energy.

COOKS' "PERKS."

Magistrate Says Custom is Nothing Less Than Stealing.

The question of a cook's perquisites was raised in the Marylebone Police Court, London, recently, when Annie Slocombe and Frank Pallett were charged with stealing and receiving a chicken, a piece of bacon, and a piece of bread.

Slocombe was the cook at a hotel in Lancaster-gate, Hyde Park, and Pallett is an assistant in the service of Messrs. Evans & Palmer, green-grocers. On Tuesday night Pallett was stopped by a detective when leaving the hotel, and was found to be carrying a parcel containing the chicken and other things. He declared that the parsel had been given to him by the cook for his master.

It was said that Mr. Evans was courting the cook, and in the witness box he stated that he had often sent things over for her to cook. The chicken, however, did not belong to him.

Mr. Freke Palmer urged on behalf of Slocombe that it had really become a habit and custom among cooks to help themselves somewhat largely to their employers' goods, and she sent these articles over as a present to her young man. They were left over from dinner, and she regarded them as her perquisites.

The magistrate said such a habit and custom was nothing less than stealing, and sent the woman to prison for a month. Pellatt was discharged.

UNINTELLIGIBLE.

ATLATTIG IN THREE DAYS

THE SECRET OF ELECTRICITY OF THE FUTURE.

Thomas Edison Makes Some Forecasts — How Coal Energy is Wasted.

"We are groping on the verge of another great epoch in the world's history. It would not surprise me any morning to wake up and learn that one of the 300,000 scientific men who are investigating all over the earth has seized the secret of electricity by direct process, and begun another practical revolution of human affairs."

In these words, Mr. Thomas Edison, the world-famed inventor, begins a remarkable forecast of the future of electricity.

"The first great change in the production of electricity will abolish the carrying of coal for that purpose. Instead of digging gross material out of the earth, loading it on cars, and carrying it say, 500 miles, there to put it under a boiler, burn it, and so get power, we shall set up plants at the mouths of the mines, generate the power there, and transmit it wherever it is needed by copper wires.

COAL MINES ON WHEELS.

"It is preposterous to keep on putting the coal on wheels. It is too clumsy. It is too costly. There is no necessity for it. We can ship a 10,000 horse-power over a wire quicker and more economically than we can send the equivalent in coal over a railroad track.

"Everything points to the fact that in the near future electrcity will be produced for general consumption in great power houses at the mouths of coal pits.

"Electricity will soon have completely taken the place of horses. It will solve the traffic problem in critics. My new electric storage battery itself will make electricity cheaper than horses. You see the new factory going up out there? Well, in the spring we will be ready to furnish the new batteries. Not only will they mean half the space of horse traffic, but they will go twice as fast. They can be stored on upper floors by means of elevators. The saving of stable space in New York City will cover at least £40,000,000 worth of property.

WASTE OF COAL.

"Another thing in the future: Wireless telegraph will enable us to reach any ship in any sea. That is a certainty

"Not only will electric power be developed at and distributed from the coal mines in the future, but all the water power in the world will be used for the production of electricity. That movement has begun and is advancing rapidly. In California they are transmitting electric power 275 miles by wire, and running street cars and lighting the cities by it. That is the sort of spirit that will wake the world up one of these days.

"From a practical standpoint, the most tremendous thing in the problem of electricity is the fact that we only get about 15 per cent. of the energy of the coal we burn. Eighty-five per cent goes up the chimney. If we could find a way to get the energy out of the coal by some direct process without wasting 85 per cent. of it, it would so multiply and so cheapen electric power as to inaugurate a new epoch in the history of the world. It is practically impossible to exaggerate the consequences of a discovery that would produce electricity direct from coal, or in any way to avoid the waste consequent upon the use of boilers and engines.

AIRSHIP PROBLEM.

"I have done it myself experimentally, and so have others, but not in the way to make it commercially valuable. I have burned carbon and Chilian saltpetre together in an electrolite and have thus produced electricity direct. [illegible] that was merely a scientific succe[illegible] would co[illegible] in that [illegible] purposes. [illegible] is made, the ste[illegible] be driven out of use. It [illegible] be possible to have reliable airs[illegible] that will safely carry passengers. I expect to see airships flying before my death. I do not think that they will fly very high, but they will be able to go a little higher than the trees and buildings.

"Such a discovery will make it possible to drive ships across the sea by electricity at the rate of 50 miles an hour—three days across the Atlantic from shore to shore.

"The direct process will give the world electricity at such a low cost that electric light can be used by everybody, and railways can be operated at a fraction of their present expense. The city of New York could be lit as brilliantly in the night-time as in the day-time, without any additional cost."

DIED FOR VENUS.

Sculptor's Strange Adoration for Cold Marble Statue.

In a dingy sculptor's studio in Chicago stood a beautiful statute of a nude Venus, modelled in marble, which so ravished the heart of the sculptor's apprentice that he became enamored of the cold beauty. Unfortunately for him the statuette did not prove another Galatea, willing to be woed and able to return his caresses. She remained quite frigid on her pedestal.

For hours at a time, the youth, Ponipo Fulponi would sit admiring the work of his employer. He explained that his interest was born of his love of the sculpture. Later he was heard to call the statute "Mathilda." He would talk to it when alone as if it were a thing of life. Fellow workmen, noting his love of the statue, twitted him about it, and he told the story of a Mathilda whom he had left in Italy.

One day, when all were leaving the establishment, Fulponi said he would join them in a moment at a corner restaurant. When he did not appear in half an hour another sculptor went back to look for him. He found Fulponi lying dead at the feet of the statue, with a revolver in his hand and the warm blood flowing from a wound in the temple.

SPIDERS THAT CATCH BIRDS.

Larks are Frequently Caught in Their Webs.

Far up in the mountains of Ceylon, there is a spider that spins a web like bright yellowish silk, the central net of which is five feet in dameter, while the supporting lines, or guys, as they are called, measure sometimes ten or twelve felt. The spider seldom bites or stings, but should anyone try to catch him, bite he will, and, though not venomous, his jaws are as powerful as a bird's beak.

The bodies of these spiders are very handsomely decorated, being bright gold or scarlet underneath, while the upper part is covered with the most delicate slate-colored fur.

So strong are the webs that birds the size of larks are frequently caught therein, and even the small but powerful scaly lizard falls a victim. A writer says that he has often sat and watched the yellow monster—measuring, when waiting for his prey, with his legs stretched out, fully six inches—across the middle of the [illegible] the rapid manner [illegible] his stout thre[illegible] captive.

A man who is fond of working out statistics and astronomical calculations, figures that the cotton factories of Lancashire, England, at present spin about 155,000,000 miles of thread a day, so that in sex seconds they make enough to go around the earth. In one month they spin enough to reach frem here to the moon. The product of eighteen days would reach from the sun to Neptune. Counting 310 working days in the year, it would take them, at this rate, 500 years to reach the nearest star.

DEATH SEEMED NEAR.

Three Doctors Baffled But Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Came to the Rescue.

Just a few months ago the home of Mr. James Beers, of Emerson, N. B., was filled with sorrow. It seemed that death would claim the life of their bright little girl. To-day this gloom is changed to joy. The little one is no longer ill, but is now bright, active and happy. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills brought this change after three doctors had failed. Concerning this illness and cure Mrs. Beers says:— "At the age of six my little girl became very ill. At different times for the next year and a half three doctors treated her without benefit. She was terribly run down and her blood was nothing but water. Then dropsy set in. She would swell so that her clothes were much too small for her. Her legs and feet were nearly twice their natural size. To make her torture worse rheumatism set in. Her state was pitiable. Sometimes we thought she could not live much longer and for three months she could not walk a step. To touch her was to cause her the greatest agony. The doctors were baffled — they could do nothing for her and as a last resort we began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She took the pills several weeks when we saw there was a slight improvement. The improvement gradually became more marked and by the time she had taken twenty-one boxes her cure was complete. It is now nine months since she took the pills, and she is now as well as she ever was and goes to school every day. I cannot speak too highly in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for I feel they saved my little girl's life."

Watery blood is the cause of over half the sickness which prevails to-day. To have health, strength and happiness you must have rich, red blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make this rich, red blood, that is why they cure anaemia, indigestion, loss of appetite, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous troubles, heart palpitation and all the ailments peculiar to growing girls and women. Sold by dealers in medicine or by mail at 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LIONS ATTACK A VILLAGE.

Eleven Natives Eaten by Herd of Hungry Animals in Africa.

Word from Blantyre, British Central Africa, states that a herd of hungry lions attacked the town of Chorumo, British Central Africa, and not only killed eleven natives, but put the rest of the population to flight and demolished many of the huts. Between fifteen and twenty lions made the raid at dusk. They first attacked two natives on the outskirts of the town. One of the natives escaped, and while the body of his companion was being torn to pieces he ran to the government building.

The watchman on duty refused to believe his story, and while the frightened native was protesting the lions suddenly dashed into the main street. Three watchmen were struck down before they could reach their rifles, and the native who had previously escaped was likewise killed. A fourth watchman, who fled to an inner room, was pursued by two of the brutes, and torn to pieces. A child was seized in front of one of the huts, and when the frantic mother attempted to rescue it she was likewise attacked and eaten. Three other natives were killed and eaten.

The lions killed a large number of goats and other live stock, and afterwards roamed through the town, prowling round some of the huts, in which the inmates had barricaded themselves.

A large number of natives, who managed to escape from the town, got into their canoes and paddled to the middle of the River Shire, where they spent the night. They could distinctly hear the [illegible] besieged.

Chorumo is situated near the Elephant Marsh game reserve, where fifty elephants lived last year.

SAD FATE OF WEDDING CAKE.

Eaten by Horde of Rats in the Dublin Post-office.

"A horde of rats as big as rabbits" haunts the Dublin General Post-Office, according to a statement of an official reported in the Irish Independent, which tells an amusing story of a wedding cake dispatched from Dublin for Canada.

The wedding-cake was packed in a box and duly posted at the Dublin post-office. In the night the rats attacked the parcel and ate not only the cake but the box itself. Nothing was left but the string and part of the address label, and with these slender clues the sender of the wedding cake was traced.

A fresh wedding-cake is now going out to Canada at the expense of the Postmaster-General.

THE USE OF THE LEECH

THEIR MEDICINAL VIRTUE WAS ONCE HIGHLY ESTEEMED.

Some Druggists State That Application of Leeches Is Not to Be Recommended.

Leeches are mostly bought by people who have had a blow or fall, causing a blue spot to appear where the blood has congested. They apply leeches to take out the blood from these spots.

The best leeches are known as the Mediterranean leech and come from San Guiguela, Spain. They are about three inches long, with a soft smooth body tapering to each extremity, and are marked with from ninety to one hundred fine annulations; their backs are olive green with six rusty red longitudinal stripes. The ends are terminated by suckers.

DANGER IN THEIR USE.

A peculiar medical law provides that a druggist must not apply a leech. He may sell them to persons, but only a doctor is allowed to apply it. One well-known druggist told The Star that he once applied a leech to an abrasion on a man's forehead, because a doctor could not be got as the hour was late. "After the leech had gorged itself and rolled off the mark left by the leech bled so profusely that it took me over four hours to stop it; and then the man's face was ten times worse with the marks left by the acids I had to use."

The favorite method employed to induce a leech to fasten itself to the part whence the blood is to be drawn is to drop its tail first into a narrow bottle, and then invert the bottle over the spot where the leech is supposed to go to work. If it does not attach itself readily a little sweet oil rubbed on the spot will sometimes be effective. The leech nearly always falls off after it has gorged itself.

Some druggists put salt on a leech after it has been applied to a person, and this makes them sick, and they emit all the blood. This practice is very dangerous, as the leech may have been applied to a person who was suffering from some infectious disease, and no matter how long after it is applied the second time there is always a danger of blood poisoning.

They are very excitable, and may be seen stretching their bodies along the glass side of the bottle or bowl in which they are kept. At times you may see them writhing excitedly through the water, after the tiny animalculae that constitute their diet. They are only fairly good swimmers, but have extraordinary vigor.

Leeches possess wonderful power in extending and contracting their bodies. One moment they are stretched out to three inches, the next they are curled up in a tiny ball.

THEY LEAVE A SCAR.

Some druggists state that the application of leeches is not to be recommended; the cure is almost as bad as the disease. The leech has three small, sharp, semi-circular teeth that radiate from a centre. They cut deep, and always leave a scar of the same shape as themselves. On the common leech the mouth where the cutting teeth are found is at the anterior sucking disc. Just back of this, and on the upper side, are ten small black spots that serve for eyes. The usual quantity of blood drawn by an average leech averages from one drachm to half an ounce. It is digested very slowly, and after being gorged in this manner, the leech lies for several days before it regains its normal size and appearance.

Leeches are mostly imported from Hamburg, and are also collected largely in Spain, France, Italy and Hungary.

How to Cleanse the System.— Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

NICKEL COINS FOR NATIVES.

Tourists and others staying in Belgium have probably noticed certain nickel coins with a hole drilled neatly through the centre. At first the stranger naturally thinks that the hole has been pierced by some industrious individual to pass the time or "to bring luck," and he is dubious about accepting such a coin; but he soon finds that his notion is incorrect. In the first place, the hole is made in a workmanlike manner; it appears to have been cast with the coin, and not to have been drilled afterwards. The hole has rather spoilt the appearance of the effigy of King Leopold, but no one is indignant, and the coins pass freely—for the tourist finds that there are many about. Further, these nickel coins appear to be somewhat larger than the majority of coins of the same value. These coins are for the Congo natives, to be worn as ornaments, if so required. But they are actual coins, and intended to be used as such; they are made with a hole in order to accommodate the natives, who have no clothes worth troubling about, and consequently no pockets. They thread the coins on a string and wear them round their necks like a row of beads.

BULL FIGHTING IN SPAIN.

Spain is still a great country for bull fights. The season starts on the first Sunday after Lent and continues—with a short interruption at the height of summer—till the month of October. Seville and Madrid are the great centres of Tauromachia. In Spain no bull leaves the ring alive, neither do any of the horses. The expense of supplying even the poor hacks which are chosen is enormous, and in some poverty-stricken townships horses are omitted from the performance when the corrida becomes a good deal more palatable to the stranger, though less so to the native. O'Shea states that 2,700 bulls are killed annually and 3,500 horses.

One miner is killed for every million tons of coal produced.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

is better than other Soaps but is best when used in the Sunlight way. Follow directions.

SUNLIGHT WAY OF WASHING

FIRST.—Dip the article to be washed in a tub of lukewarm water, draw it out on a washboard and rub the soap lightly over it. Be particular not to miss soaping all over. THEN roll it in a tight roll, lay in the tub under the water, and go on the same way until all the pieces have the soap rubbed on, and are rolled up.

Then go away for thirty minutes to one hour and let the "Sunlight" Soap do its work.

NEXT.—After soaking the full time rub the clothes lightly out one wash board, and the dirt will drop out; turn the garment inside out to get at the seams, but don't use any more soap; don't scald or boil a single piece, and don't wash through two suds. If the water gets too dirty, pour a little out and add fresh. If a streak is hard to wash, rub some more soap on it, and throw the piece back into the suds for a few minutes.

LASTLY COMES THE RINSING, which is to be done in lukewarm water, taking special care to get all the dirty suds away, then wring out and hang up to dry.

For Woolens and Flannels proceed as follows:—Shake the articles free from dust. Cut a tablet of SUNLIGHT SOAP into shavings, pour into a gallon of boiling water and whisk into a lather. When just lukewarm, work articles in the lather without rubbing. Squeeze out dirty water without twisting and rinse thoroughly in two relays of lukewarm water. Squeeze out water without twisting and hang in the open air.

The most delicate colors may be safely washed in the "Sunlight" way.

SAVE THIS. IT IS VALUABLE. PREMIUM COUPON FOR SUNLIGHT SOAP PREMIUMS

$5,000 REWARD will be paid to any person who proves that Sunlight Soap contains any injurious chemicals or any form of adulteration.

Your Money Refunded by the dealer from whom you buy Sunlight Soap if you find any cause for complaint.

Not a Nauseating Pill.—The excipient of a pill is the substance which enfolds the ingredients and makes up the pill mass. That of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is so compounded as to preserve their moisture, and they can be carried into any latitude without impairing their strength. Many pills, in order to keep them from adhering, are rolled in powders, which prove nauseating to the taste. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are so prepared that they are agreeable to the most delicate.

KNIGHTS OF WINDSOR.

The Military Knights of Windsor are an exceedingly ancient institution. They date from 1349. The pensions vary from $125 to $650 a year, and are supplemented by free quarters, in which nine months' residence out of the twelve is compulsory. Their duties are nominal—attendance in St. George's Chapel on saints' days, and at royal weddings and funerals, and supplying a guard of honor when foreign royalties visit Windsor Castle.

NEW CURE FOR HAY FEVER.

The latest treatment for the prevention of Hay Fever prescribes systematic and continued exercise taken in timely advance of the season for the appearance of the complaint. Specialists in the disease do not understand its nature. It is not now thought to be a form of catarrh and local applications have been largely abandoned. The theory that it is rheumatism of the mucus membrane is not accepted. A more favored idea attributes the inception of Hay Fever to sluggishness of the liver and bicycle riding is recommended to keep this organ in an active and healthy condition. After Hay Fever has arrived, the sufferer will find neither comfort or relief in bicycling, but systematic and easy wheeling during the preceding months is warranted to greatly modify the severity of an approaching attack, or to entirely prevent it.

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. BILLIARD BALLS.

Real ivory billiard balls that are cracked or useless are bought up and cut into dice or other small articles, for there is a constantly growing demand and diminishing supply of the best ivory. Ivory is sensitive to weather. Exposure to cold soon cracks it and renders billiard balls untrue. They are easily knocked out of shape, too, if not well seasoned or not well made. The centre of the tusk should go through the centre of the ball to preserve best a true spherical form. The best ivory comes from Zanzibar, the African elephant being more highly prized than the Asiatic on that account. Little ivory now comes from India, where the animal is so highly prized as a beast of burden that only the tusks of elephants that have died a natural death are obtainable. The tusks of the walrus and sea-horse form but a small part of the world's product, so that the African jungles are scoured to keep up the demand. London is the world's ivory auction mart.

Bright Future for Mr. Allison.

Mr. H. J. Allison, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R Allison of this place, has again advanced another step in the commercial world. For a few years he was employed in a general store in this place and in May 1902 he joined the New York Life Assurance Company, as Mr. G. F. Johnston's private secretary at Montreal. In Sept. 1903 he started out soliciting insurance; Jan. 1st, 1906 he gained membership in N. Y. L. I. C.; Oct. 1904, gained membership in $100,000 club in Washington, at the same time securing the presidency of the club, having the highest record among 200 men; in July, 1905, gained membership in $200,000 club and also a winner of the "Buchner" contest, with a record of 92 applications for $135,000 in 36 working days; in Jan., 1906, appointed instructor of the Montreal branch.

Mr. Allison has now severed his connection with that company to accept a position as assistant manager of a Bond and Mortgage House in Winnipeg.

Before leaving Montreal a number of his associates gathered and presented him with an Alligator Travelling Bag and the following address was read:—

Montreal, 28th May, 1906.

Mr. H. J. Allison,—

Your friends of the Montreal branch of "Nylic" cannot allow the occasion of your leaving Montreal for Winnipeg to pass without a direct expression of their regard.

Your high character and zeal have won for you the esteem and confidence of all those with whom you have came into direct contact. But not these only, for this same confidence is shared by those far distant to such a degree that you are to-night in the position of leaving a responsible charge to take up one even more so.

That one so young should have reached your present position is a striking example of your ability.

That you may long continne in the way you have commenced is the hope of all.

With best wishes for your health, happiness and prosperity in the new field we present you with this travelling bag, hoping it will bring to your mind many happy associations.

Signed by twenty-three of his associates.

Spent a Joly Day at Crysler.

Of all the picnics held by Ottawans on the 24th, that at Crysler, under the auspices of Queen's Own lodge, No. 233, Sons of England, was one of the most enjoyable. Nearly four hundred people attended and the picnic proved a great success,

It was run over the Ottawa and New York Railway and a special train left the central at nine o'clock. It made fast time to Crysler, where the picknickers found everything in readiness for them. The picnic grounds situated in a beautiful grove just a few hundred yards from the station was soon thronged and not a drop of rain fell all day at Crysler, despite that other towns in the same district received severe showers. Refreshments were served on the grounds and in the afternoon an exeellent programme of sports were run off.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

Classes in Live Stock Judging to be Held at Monckland Station and Cornwall Centre.

The favor with which the instruction in Live Stock Judging given lastsummer and during the winter, under the auspices of the Farmers' Institutes, was received, has warranted the Departmentin repeating them this season. For the Stormont Institute the classes will be held at Monckland on Friday, June 8 and for Cornwall at Cornwall Centre on Saturday, June 9. Instructions will be given by W. F. Kidd of Simcoe, who was in this section a few years ago as an Institute speaker, and gave very general satisfaction by his practical address on a wide range of agricultural topics, especially the care and management of horses Mr. Kidd will give instructions in the judging of light and heavy horses, dairy cattle and swine, illustrating the same with a practical demonstration of the various points of excellence and demerit in live animals. To very many farmers well posted in their business in other respects, the judging of animals is almost a sealed book, but the seals may be broken by any man of ordinary intelligence, who will attend these gatherings. Last year a prominent feature of the meetings was the number of young men in attendance and it is to be hoped that even more may be present this year.

Two meetings will be held—at 9.30 a. m. and 1.30 p.m. The officers for the ensuing year will be elected and other business of importance transacted at the close of the morning meeting.

Brockville Case.

Sir William Mulock, chief justice of the exchequer division of the high court, held a special sitting in Ottawa and disposed of an interesting Brockville case

In 1897, Frank L. Grey, under mortgage, sold a Brockville property owned by Edward Smith, to Joseph Steele. Smith occupied an office in the building and was allowed to continue in possession for several years. Then he was asked to get out but he refused and took his son, Frank Smith in with him. An action was commenced by Steele to secure possession and for rent from the time that the order to vacate was given. Smith alleged that the sale was not a legal one, and that Steele had conspired with the bank to get possession of the property. He counter-claimed for all rents collected and for $10,000 damages for conspiracy. Chief Justice Mullock ruled that the judical sale was legal and gave judgment ordering Edward Smith to give over possession of property, to pay $200 rent, $60 costs on the counter-claim, $100 costs of the action and $60 costs of the day at Brockville and extra cost for the change of venue to Ottawa. Frank Smith was made a party to the action but no costs were given against him.

Mail steamers will sail from Liverpool Quebec and Montreal hereafter on Friday instead of Thursday.

ALL THIN, PALE WOMEN.

Can Learn the cause of Their Nervous Used-Up Condition.

With women, ill-health is usually traceable to nerve exhaustion, Feeling run-down and tired most of the time is nature warning that more nerve force is needed.

You must build up, nourish the body, vitalize the nerves, get more flesh and blood,

It's the abundant nutriment and building material in Ferrozone that enables it to cure so many sick women. It increases the appetite, adds weight and strength, restores lost color and developes a surplus of energy and nerve force that defies sickness of any kind. There is living proof in Mrs. David Fergusson, Jr., of Prescott, Ont. Read her statement.

'A year ago my health failed. I grew thin and exceedingly pale. At times I was prostrated with nervousness and sick headache. All day I was tired. At night it was difficult to obtain restful sleep. My appetite was variable and indigestion bothered me considerably. I became morose and suffered from heart palpatation. You could scarcely believe the benefit I derived in one week from Nerviline. Color came back to my cheeks, My vitality and appetite increased renewed nerve force and better spirits came also Ferrozone did me a world of good and made me well.

Remember this: No alcoholic stimulant can nourish and build up like Ferrozone. Fifty cents per box or six boxes for $2.50 At all dealers or N, C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont., and Hartford, Conn., U. S A.

MOUNTAIN.

As a mark of their appreciation of his efforts among them, the members of the Methodist churches at Mountain and South Mountain, gathered recently at the home of their pastor, Rev. T. E. Burke, B. D., South Mountain, and presented him with a costly fur lined coat and address. Mrs. Burke was presented with an address also, and a purse of money to buy furs. The official board unanimously agreed to increase the pastor's salary from $850 to $1,000, and an invitation was extended to him to remain for the third year.

Rev. Mr. Burke became incumbent at these appointments two years ago. At that time their was a parsonage debt of $1000 and a heavy debt on the church at Mountain. The first obligation has been wiped out altogether, and the second one reduced to $100. The funds of all organizations of the church have been largely increased, the missionary fund alone being over $400 this year. The whole circuit is in a prosperous condition, and that it is so is largely due to the energy and untiring effort of the pastor. Special services have been held at the appointments, resulting in spiritual uplifting to the community.

How to Get Consumption.

Ninety per cent of the "Lungers" contract consumption by allowing power of resistance to fall so low that a favorable condition for the development of a bacilli is provided. In a healthy system consumption can't take root. But where there's weakness and debility there you find tuberculosis. For developing strength and building up the weak, nothing equals Ferrozone. It makes the blood nutritious and the nerves enduring. The way it converts food into nutriment, the appetite it gives is surprising. Just what the man verging on consumption needs,—that's Ferrozone. If tired and weak don't put off. Fifty cents buys a box of fifty tablets—at all dealers,

If you are not troubled with rheumatism be thankful and take good care of yourself. If you are a victim of its torturing pains do not be discouraged. You are not doomed to go on suffering forever, because there is a sure and speedy cure for you in Tuck's Rheumatic Bone Oil. Perhaps you have tried a lot of patent medicines and now have no confidence in any. Do not condemn this until you have tried it. We have such confidence in it that if you try it and it does not cure you we will give you back your money. It is a powerful penetrating oil that acts directly on the bone—the seat of the disease—and has brought deliverance to so many that we have no hesitation in saying it will deliver you. Here is one case:—

Have You Rheumatism? ? ? ?

Dear Sirs—I am free from rheumatism to-day because I used Tuck's Bone Oil. I had rheumatism in my hands and feet and thought at one time that my life was going to be ruined by it. I consulted a doctor and tried various remedies, but while some of them that I took internally made me feel better for a time none of them took the pain away. After I had suffered for six months or more, doctoring all the time, I was advised to try Tuck's Rheumatic Bone Oil. I did and I can never be thankful enough to the man who told me to get it. I had not used a bottle until I was better and before the second one was done my joints were loosened up, the pain was gone and I was well. Tuck's Bone Oil did it. That was six years ago and I have not been bothered since.

H. S. Brown, Merrickville.

For rheumatism, lame back, neuralgia, sprains, coughs, colds, quinsy or bronchitis, in short for any and all kinds of inflammation there is nothing to equal Tuck's Bone Oil. A bottle should be on the shelf in every home. For sale by F. J. Baldrey at 50c. a bottle or sent prepaid by the Tuck Bone Oil Co., Limited, Smith's Falls, Ontario.

They Hit Spot.

The Seat of Women's Troubles.

When you get all run-down, feel tired and out of sorts, it is pretty hard to tell just what part of your peculiar organism is going wrong, isn't it? That is why you can take so much medicine and still have it do you so little good.

It doesn't hit the right spot, that is, it doesn't reach the organ or organs that are going wrong.

But supposing you could get a remedy that contains ingredients for every organ of your system, and especially those peculiar to your sex, you wouldn't need, then, to know just what is the matter with you, or just what organ is causing the trouble, would you?

Certainly not, because no matter which organ or organs it might be, they would be reached by some one of the many ingredients of the medicine, and would be restored to a normal condition. And then you would be well again.

And do you know there IS one just such remedy? It is

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women.

Dr. Hugo's remedy contains something for every organ of the female system; something for the stomach to help indigestion—for the bowels to cure constipation—for the nervous system to tone up the nerves—for the liver and kidneys to make them active in carrying off impurities—something for the uterine system to stop all drains, allay inflammation and make women regular.

If there is anything wrong with you—if you don't feel as well as you used to—these tablets will give you the old time life and vigor.

Don't wait till something serious develops. Take them now.

THE CRIMINAL'S CONFESSION

OR, SYBIL BERNER'S VINDICATION

CHAPTER III.

Lyon Berners, chilled to the heart with the coldness of the night, half famished for want of food, and wearied with his late violent exertions, and wishing to recruit his strength for the next day's hard work, kindled a fire and made some coffee, and forced himself to eat and drink a little, before he drew his mattress to the door of the vault and stretched himself down as near as he could possibly get to the place where he believed the dead body of his beloved wife lay.

Poor little Nelly, abandoning her efforts either from exhaustion or in despair, crept up and tried to squeeze herself between her master and the door of the vault that she, too, thought held her mistress. Lyon made room for her to curl herself up by his side, and caressed her soft fur, while he waited and watched.

It was now utterly dark in the chapel but for the dull red glow of the fire, which was dying out. An hour passed by, and the last spark expired, and the chapel was left in total darkness.

The agonies of that night who shall tell? They were extreme—they seemed interminable.

At length the slow morning dawned. Lyon rose with the sun, and walked about the chapel in the restlessness f mental anguish. The little dog followed at his heels, whining. Presently Lyon took up the crowbar and tried again to force the iron door. He might as well have tried to move a mountain. He threw away the crowbar in desperation, and then he stooped and peered through the iron bars; all dark! all still in those dismal depths! He turned away and rekindled the fire, and prepared a little breakfast for himself and his dumb companion. He must cherish his strength for the work that was before him.

After having eaten a morsel, and given his dog food, he signaled to her to lie down at the door of the vault and watch, while he went out toward the thicket to look for Joe, who might now soon be expected.

He went through the churchyard, and on to the entrance of the thicket path; he even pursued that path until it led him out upon the river road. He looked down the road for miles, but saw no sign of Joe!

Then, not wishing longer to leave the spot where the body of his wife was supposed to lie unburied, he went back through thicket and graveyard to the chapel, where at the door of the vault the faithful little Skye terrier still watched.

He entered and threw himself down beside her, there to wait for the return of his messenger.

But, ah! this was destined to be a day of weary, weary waiting! The morning advanced toward noon, and still Joe did not appear. Lyon arose and walked restlessly about the chapel, stopping sometimes to peer down into the vault, where nothing could be seen, or to call down where nothing could be heard, or he took up the crowbar again, and renewed his frantic efforts to force the iron door that nothing could move.

Noon passed; afternoon advanced.

"Something has happened to Joe," said the desperate man to himself, as once more he started out in the forlorn hope of meeting his messenger.

Again the weary way was traversed; again he went through the churchyard and thicket, and came out upon the long river road, and strained his gaze far along its length, but without seeing signs of the negro's approach.

"Yes; some accident has befallen Joe. All goes wrong, all is fatal, all is doomed!" He groaned in despair as he turned and retraced his steps toward the old "Haunted Chapel." As he drew near the building, he was startled by the furious barking of his little dog.

"Poor little Nelly has worked herself into hysterics again at the door of that vault," he said to himself, as he quickened his pace and entered the building.

He found it in the possession of the constables, with the sheriff at their head. Mr. Benthwick, with an expression on his face oddly made up of triumph and compassion, advanced to meet him, saying:

"We are not at fault now, Mr. Berners. We returned to-day to resume our search through these mountains, and late this afternoon, as we were returning from our unsuccessful pursuit of the burglars, we were met here in the churchyard by these men."

And here the sheriff pointed to Purley and Munson, who were standing at a short distance.

"They told us," proceeded Mr. Benthwick, "that Mrs. Berners, with your assistance, had escaped from their custody."

"Right over my dead body, which I should say, my sleeping body," put in Purley.

"And that she was certainly concealed in this chapel, as they had received unquestionable information to that effect," added Mr. Benthwick.

"Well, sir, if you find her here, you will succeed in the search far better than I have done," replied Lyon Berners, grimly.

"We have found you here, and under very suspicious circumstances; so we will take leave to make a more thorough search than we did yesterday," replied the sheriff.

"Have you tried the vault?" inquired Purley.

"No; but we will try it now. She may be concealed within it, after all," said Mr. Benthwick. And, seeing the crowbar, he took it up and went to work upon that immovable door; but finding it so fast, he threw down the tool, saying:

"It is of no use to work at that door in that way, and it is of no use either to look through the bars, for you can see nothing but black darkness. But, Purley, I will tell you what to do. Do you go out and cut the most resinous knot that you can find on the nearest pine tree, and bring it to me."

Purley started off in a hurry, and soon returned with a pine knot fairly soaked with turpentine.

"Now, then," said Mr. Benthwick, as he took the torch from the hand of his messenger "I think this will throw some light into the darkness below!"

And he applied it first to the fire in the aisle, and then he carried it, flaming high, to the door of the vault, and, putting it through the iron bars, let it drop into the vault.

It was lighted up in an instant, and the sheriff and Purley bent down to look through the grating to see what the interior illumination might show them.

And Lyon Berners, whose anxiety was of course more intense than that of any one present, elbowed his way through the crowd to get nearer the door of the vault.

But before he could effect his purpose, a sound of thunder burst upon the air; the solid floor upheaved; the walls of the old Haunted Chapel fell in a heap of smoking ruins; and all the valley and mountain tops were lighted up with the flames of destruction.

CHAPTER IV.

The thunder of the explosion, when the old Haunted Chapel was blown up, was heard for many miles around.

It burst upon the unsheltered wayfarers like the crack of doom.

It stunned the plantation negroes negroes gathered around their cabin fires!

It startled the planters' families at their elegant tea-tables!

Travellers paused panic-stricken on the road!

Home-dwellers, high and low, rushed with one accord to doors and windows to see what the dreadful matter might be!

Was it an earthquake?

Had some unsuspected volcano suddenly burst forth in the mountain? Indeed, it seemed so!

Volumes of black smoke ascended from a certain point of rocks, filling all the evening air with the suffocating smell of sulphur.

There was a pause of astonishment among the people for about one minute only; and then commenced a general stampede of all the able-bodied men and boys from a circle of several miles in circumference to the centre of attraction; while the women and girls waited at home in dread suspense!

But the very first on the scene of the catastrophe was a lamed negro.

Poor Joe! Just as his master had surmised, he had met with an accident. He had, indeed, reached Black Hall in safety, near the dawn of that day; but being quite exhausted with twenty-four hours of watching, working, and fasting, he succumbed to drowsiness, fatigue, and famine. In short, he ate and drank and slept.

He did not mean, poor faithful creature, to do more than just recruit sufficient strength to take him back, with the tools, to his master.

But when one, under such circumstances, surrenders to sleep, he loses all control over himself for an indefinite period of time. Joe slept fast and long, and never waked until he was rudely kicked up by a fellow-servant, who demanded to know how he came to be sleeping on the hay in the barn, and if he meant to sleep forever.

Joe started up, at first confused and delirious, but afterward, when he came to his senses and found that it was past noon, he was utterly wretched and inconsolable. He did not even re[sent] rudeness of his comrade, in kic[king] up; but, on the contrary, [thank]ed him for his kindness [in giv]ing him.

And then he went and gat[hered] tools together, and saddled h[is mule] and, without waiting for bite o[f food] told his mate that he had work[ed] a distance, and mounted and [rode] toward the ferry, which he had [to cross] to reach the river road on t[he other] side, because with the weight o[f the] tools he carried, he could not get over the ford.

All this contributed so to d[elay his] journey, that the sun set whil[e he was] still upon the river road, and "t[he shades] of night were falling fast" [when he] reached the entrance of the thi[cket] leading to the Haunted Chape[l].

He had not ridden more tha[n a hun]dred yards up this path, h[e heard] thunder of the explosion burst[ing on his] appalled ears. And at the san[e moment] his affrighted horse, with [a mighty] bound, threw him to the earth[, and] forward and fled.

Amazed, stunned, bewildere[d] was, Joe did not entirely lose h[is senses.] When recovered a little from th[e shock,] he felt himself all over to see what bones were broken; and found to his great relief that all were sound..

Then he got upon his feet, and looked about him; but a dense, heavy, black vapor was settling down upon the thicket, hiding all things from his view, while the stifling fumes of brimstone took his breath away.

"I'm ——!" Joe in his consternation swore a very profane oath, which it is not necessary here to repeat, "ef I don't b'liebe as de debbil had blowed de old Haunted Chapel! And oh! my Hebbenly Marster! ef so, what have become o' Miss Sybil and Marse Lyon, and Nelly?" he cried, in a sudden pang of terror and sorrow, as he tried to hurry toward the scene of the tragedy. He set off in a run, but was brought up short by a sharp, severe pain in his right ankle.

"It's sprained! Bress de Lord, ef it ain't sprained!" he cried, drawing up and carressing the injured limb.

"It ain't no use. I can't put it to the ground no more!" he groaned.

Then, standing on his left foot and holding the other in his hand, he looked around and saw the pick lying among the scattered tools, that had fallen from his hold when the horse threw him. He cautiously bent down and took up the pick, and reversed it, and using it as a crutch, he hobbled on through the thicket toward the ruins of the old chapel. But his progress was so slow and painful that it took him nearly an hour to reach the place.

When at length he emerged from the thicket and entered the old churchyard, a scene of devastation met his view that appalled his soul.

"Oh, my lord!" he said, stopping and leaning upon his pick-crutch, as he gazed around, "what an awful sight! Joe, you are like—somebody among the ruins of something," he added, as a vague classic similitude about Scipio and Carthage flitted through his half-dazed brain.

It was indeed a scene of horror deep enough to dismay the stoutest heart! Nor was that horror less overwhelming for the obscurity that enveloped it. The Haunted Chapel was gone! and in its place was a heap of blackened, burning, and smoking ruins, with here and there the arm or leg of some crushed and mutilated victim protruding from the mass. And in strange contrast to this appalling scene, was a poor little Skye terrier, preserved from destruction, Heaven only knows how, that ran snuffing and whining piteously around and around the wreck.

"Come, Nelly! pretty Nelly! good Nelly!" called Joe.

The Skye terrier left off circling around the smouldering ruins, and bounded toward her dusky friend, and leaped upon him with a yelp of welcome and a whine of sorrow.

"Oh, Nelly! Nelly! what has happened?" cried Joe.

The little dog howled dismally in answer.

"Yes, I know what you would say. I understand. The devil has blown up the Haunted Chapel," said Joe.

She lifted up her nose and her voice in a woebegone howl of assent.

"Just so; but oh! Nelly! Nelly Brown! where is the marster and the mistess?"

She answered by a cry of agony, and ran back to the ruins, and recommenced her pawing and whining.

"Ah, yes, just so; buried under all that there," groaned Joe.

But Nelly ran back to him, barking emphatically, and then forward to the ruins, and then, seeing that he still stood there, back to him again, with the most eloquent barks, that seemed to assure him that her master and mistress were under the mass, and at length to ask him what was the use of his being a man, if he could not dig them out.

Never did man and dog understand each other better. Joe replied to Nelly as if she had spoken in the best approved English.

"I know it, honey! I know they are; they are there!" he sobbed, "but you see I'm crippled, and can't do nothing."

But the little Skye terrier could not comprehend such incompetency in a human creature, and so she very irrationally and irritatingly continued her appeals and her reproaches, until Joe hobbled up to the heap of smoking ruins to take a nearer view.

The first thing that met his sight was the sole of a man's boot, belonging to a leg protruding from the mass.

"If it should be hizzen! Oh! good gracious! if it should be marster's! But, no," he continued, on a closer examination of the limb. "No! there is a spur on the heel. It isn't hizzen. No! thank goodness, it is Master Sheriff Benthwick's, and sarve him right, too."

While Joe was exulting, either wickedly over the destruction of the sheriff, or piously over the possible preservation of his master, there was a sound of crackling footsteps through the thicket, and the forerunners of the approaching crowd appeared upon the scene.

Among them was Captain Pendleton, who, recognizing the figure of Joe, even in the obscure light, strode toward him, eagerly demanding:

"What is all this? How did it happen? Do you know?"

"Oh, Marse Capping Pendulum, sir, I'se so glad you'se come!" cried Joe, on the verge of tears.

"But how did this happen?" impa[tiently]

[redacted]

Captain Pendleton, energetically.

Several of the bystanders started at once for the nearest farmhouses to procure the needful tools.

Captain Pendleton turned to Joe.

"Tell me now," he said; "how came Mr. and Mrs. Berners in this place?"

Joe related all that he knew of their escape from the sheriff's officers, their accidental meeting with him, their arrival at the Haunted Chapel, the mysterious disappearance of Sybil, the visit of the constables and militiamen in search of the burglars; the means that his master and himself took to discover traces of Sybil through the instinct of her little dog; the reasons they had, through the behavior of the little Skye terrier, to believe that the lady had been taken down into the vault and robbed and murdered, his own departure in search of tools to take up the flagstones over the vault, and finally his return to the scene of action to find the Haunted Chapel one mass of ruins.

"When I left marster he was sitting at the door of the vault, where we thought the dead body of my poor murdered young mistess was hid; and when I comed back I found this here!" sobbed Joe, pointing to the wreck.

"Good heaven! my man, this is a frightful story that you tell me! Sit yourself down on the ground, and give me that pick which you are using for a crutch! I must go to work here," exclaimed Captain Pendleton, taking the pick from the negro and begining to dig vigorously at the mass of fallen stone and mortar.

The men and boys who had gone after implements now came hurrying back, with picks, spades, hoes, rakes, etc., over their shoulders.

They immediately fell to work with a zeal and energy inspired by curiosity and terror; and while the boys held the lighted pine knots high above their heads, the men dug away at the mass with all their might and main.

It was a wild scene, that deep glen; the heap of smoking ruins in the midst, the affrighted crowd of workers around it, the flaming torches held on high, the spectral gravestones gleaming here and there; the whole encircled by dark, towering mountains, and canopied by a murky, midnight sky!

In almost dead silence the fearful work went on.

The first body exhumed was that of the unfortunate Sheriff Benthwick, quite dead. It was borne tenderly off to some distance, and laid down on a bed of dried leaves beneath the shelter of an oak tree.

Then four other bodies were dug out from the mass, among them that of the bailiff Purley. And these were carried and laid beside that of the sheriff.

And now, though the workmen dug away at the ruins as vigorously as ever, they found nothing but broken timbers, stone and mortar. No sign of Lyon or Sybil Berners was to be seen. A wild hope sprang up in the heart of Joe—a hope that in some miraculous manner his young master and mistress had escaped this terrible destruction—a hope that the little Skye terrier would by no means encourage, for she continued to run around the ruins, and in and out among the legs of the workmen, to the serious danger of her own life and limbs, and to bark and whine and paw, and assert in every emphatic manner a little brute could use, that her master and mistress were really under there and nowhere else.

"You'll drive me to despair, you little devil of a dog! You'd make 'em there, whether they're there or not, and I tell you they an't there!" cried Joe, in desperation.

But Nelly held to her own opinion, and clamorously maintained it.

She was soon justified. The workmen, in course of their digging, removed quite a hill of plaster, stone and broken timbers, and came upon a leaning fragment of the back wall, inclined at an angle of about forty-five degrees, and supported in its place by a portion of the altar and the iron door of the vault, which had stood the shock of the explosion.

Under this leaning wall, and completely protected by it, lay two men, scorched, bruised, stunned, insensible, but still living.

They were Lyon Berners and Robert Munson. Amid the surprise and satisfaction of the crowd, they were carefully lifted out and laid upon the ground, while every simple means at hand were used for their restoration, while the little Skye terrier ran round and round with yelps of joy and triumph, which seemed to say:

"I told you so! and next time you'll believe me!"

"Friends," said Captain Pendleton, addressing some of the men who were still working away at the ruins, "there is no use in your digging longer! You may see from the very position of that wall and the aspect of everything else here that there can be no more bodies among the ruins. You can do nothing to bring the dead to life; but you can do much to save the living from death. Hurry, some of you, to the nearest house and bring a couple of shutters, and narrow mattress also, if possible! These men must be taken to my house, which is nearest, to receive medical attention."

As the captain spoke, a dozen workmen threw down their tools and started on the errand.

Old Joe hobbled up to the spot, where Captain Pendleton sat supporting the head of Mr. Berners on his knee, while little Nellie jumped around, now in a hysterical state between joy and fear; for she saw at last that though her master was rescued, he was not yet safe.

On seeing Joe come up, she jumped upon him with an eager bark, which seemed to say:

"You see I was right! Here he is, sure enough!"

"Yes, Nelly, that's all very well as far as it goes. But where's the young mistess. Nelly; [illegible] Miss [illegible]?" [illegible]ed Joe.

The little dog looked up in his face with a bark of intelligence and distress, and then broke away and ran in among the ruins.

"There still is she!" exclaimed Joe, and he hobbled after the little Skye terrier to the place where the leaning fragment of the wall was supported by the iron door of the vault.

"They must dig into that vault. I'll never be contented until they dig into that vault; and I'll speak to Capping Pendulum about it," said Joe, and he hobbled back to the spot where that gentleman still sat supporting the head of his wounded friend.

"Sir, Marse Capping," said Joe, respectfully taking off his hat, "you heerd what I tell you 'bout marster and me having of good reasons to s'pose as my young mistess was robbed and murdered and hid into that vault?"

"Yes," gravely assented the captain.

"Well, sir, Marse Capping, Nelly do stick to it as she is down ther. And, sir, I shall neber feel satisfied into my own mind till the men dig away all the rubbish and lay open the secrets of that there prisin house."

"Joe, it shall be done, if only for the satisfaction of your faithful heart," said the captain.

"MY IRISH MOLLY, O."

An incident occurred in London recently which would have shocked the military officer of a century ago. A battalion of Irish Guards, led by two mounted officers, was marching along Oxford Street to the merry accompaniment of a fife and drum band. Suddenly with a flourish of drumsticks, the music ceased, and for a little time the soldiers tramped along with a solemn and steady tread. A boy came up a side street whistling the song of the moment, "My Irish Molly, O." A soldier in a fit of abstraction joined in. The refrain was immediately taken up by the others, and it flew to the front and rear ranks, until presently the whole battalion marched to its own whistling accompaniment.

STRANGE PLEDGES.

London pawnbrokers are frequently asked to take strange things in pawn. The other day a Holborn pawnbroker lent £20 on a fine horse, which one of his daughters rode until it was redeemed. The same pawnbroker once took in pledge a medical chest of poisons that was strong enough to kill 10,000 men. It was, however, a valuable deposit, as some of the poisons were very rare. A Kensington pawnbroker about three weeks ago lent a sum of money on a number of autographs of dead celebrities.

A man's actions after marriage are nothing like the samples submitted during courtship.

DOUMA ANGRY AT THE CZAR

Amnesty and Land Scheme Are Definitely Rejected.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: The crisis in Russia's destinies has grown more acute, the outlook is dark, and no man can foretell the final issue.

The Government in its declaration to the Douma on Saturday granted universal suffrage, but refused complete amnesty and expropriation of the lands, the two demands on which the people through the Douma insist in the same spirit that the American colonies resisted taxation without representation in 1776.

The Douma responded at once with a demand for the dismissal of the Ministry and the appointment of one representative of the country. Thus the issue is drawn.

The Crown's address through Premier Goremykin is specific enough; nevertheless the impression is widespread that the Government has no fixed policy, and many believe that the Czar will yield much more under greater pressure.

There is not the slightest doubt that this pressure will be forthcoming, but the perilous question arises, Will the later concessions suffice to save the throne? In other words, can a revolution be averted?

THE DAY'S DEVELOPMENTS.

When the Douma met on Saturday morning the Ministers were present for the first time. Premier Goremykin read the Ministerial programme, which is the reply to the Douma's address to the Czar.

The statement declared that the Government was fully prepared to lend its entire support to an elaboration of the main points suggested by the Douma, provided they did not go beyond the limits of legislative initiative assigned to the Douma. The Council of Ministers, the Premier said, must exercise epecial caution in regard to questions raised by the Douma on immediately satisfying the needs of the rural population and placing the peasants on an equal footing with other classes; of satisfying the requirements of the work people; of framing a measure for obligatory elementary education; of making the wealthier classes liable for the payment of taxes and of reorganizing the provincial administration and introducing a system of self-government with special consideration for the peculiar conditions in the frontier provinces.

TO COUNTERACT ABOVE.

The council, the Premier said, attaches no less importance to the suggested law of liberty of the subject, of conscience and of the press and the freedom of meeting and association, but it considers it necessary when preparing such laws to provide the administration with such effective means as will enable the Government to prevent and counteract any abuse of the liberties conceded.

With reference to the solution of the agrarian question with the help of Crown appanages and monastery and Church lands, and by the forcible expropriation of private lands and property, which includes the private property of the peasants, the council, the Premier declared, holds it to be its duty to declare such a mode of settlement absolutely inadmissible.

ONLY PARTIAL AMNESTY.

In regard to amnesty, Premier Goremykin declared that the pardoning of persons convicted of whatever form of crime they may have committed was the prerogative of the monarch. The council considered that it would not be beneficial to grant amnesty to persons implicated in murders and acts of violence. The Cabinet had taken steps to procure the release of those by whom the public safety was not threatened.

Dealing with the Cabinet's intentions in the legislative field, Premier Goremykin declared that the welfare of Russia was unattainable so long as the prosperity of agriculture was not assured.

The reforms announced by the Emperor, the Prime Minister declared, cannot be thought of so long as the power of law is not firmly established. The council will place in the forefront of its labors the question of the creation of local courts of justice on lines which will simplify the change of procedure in trials from the present system.

BOMBS AT SEBASTOPOL.

A despatch from Sebastopol says: Several bombs were thrown here on Sunday while a review of troops was being held after the Te Deum in celebration of the anniversary of the Emperor's coronation. Three persons were killed and several wounded. Among the wounded are the commander of the fortress, General Neptueff, who received slight hurts, and the chief of police, who was gravely injured. Other high dignitaries escaped. Vice-Admiral Chouknin, commanding the Black Sea fleet, who is a special subject for terrorist revenge, was not present. Two of the bomb-throwers were arrested.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: Despatches received here concerning the bomb outrage during the review of the troops after the celebration of the anniversary of the Emperor's coronation at Sebastopol on Sunday say that eleven persons were killed, including five children, and that over one hundred persons were wounded. The despatches also say that four arrests were made.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

NOTES AND PROCEEDINGS OF THE OTTAWA HOUSE.

FACTS FROM THE BUDGET.

Mr. Fielding was enabled to announce a surplus on Consolidated Fund (or ordinary income and expenditure) of $12,500,000 for the year ending June.

This surplus and the addition to the Sinking Fund will almost meet the heavy capital expenditure of the year. The net increase of the national debt for the twelve months will be about $800,000.

Since 1896 there has been a net surplus of $64,300,165 in Consolidated Fund accounts. This great sum has been spent in enlarging canals, aiding railway construction, erecting public buildings where required, and generally in preparing the way for the making of a greater Canada.

The net debt of Canada is $7,726,732 more than it was nine years ago. It is less per head of the people than it was then, for there has been a very great increase of population. Mr. Fielding believes there are now over six million people in the Dominion. They are still coming fast, the number of immigrants having been 117,585 for the past ten months, as compared with 93,309 for the same period a year ago.

Finally, the Minister of Finance announces that there is no reason to anticipate disturbance of revenue from the tariff changes to be made at the November session of Parliament.

REPORT ON THE FALLEN TOWER

The report of the commission that investigated the reasons for the collapse of the tower in the Western block is ready for presentation to the House. It is said that the report reflects on the materials employed and to some extent upon the design and lack of proper inspection. This concerns one of the most experienced officials of the department, Mr. Taylor, who has accordingly been placed under suspension. Contractor Goodwin has been notified to proceed with the work of reconstruction.

ENUMERATORS' REMUNERATION

In taking the census in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the enumerators will be allowed four cents for every living person recorded, for every farm of five acres and upwards twelve cents, for time employed in receiving instructions $3 a day, with actual cost of living and transportation during such time.

LIVE STOCK IMPORTATION.

The following new customs regulations have been adopted:— A settler may bring into Canada, free of duty, live stock for the farm on the following basis: If he has actually owned such live stock abroad for at least six months before his removal to Canada, and has brought them into Canada within one year after his first arrival, viz., if horses, only 10; if cattle, only 10; if sheep, only 100; if swine, only 100. If horses, cattle, sheep and swine are brought in together, or part of each, the same proportions as above are to be observed. Duty is to be paid on live stock in excess of the number above provided for.

LOAN TO QUEBEC HARBOR BOARD.

In committee on Mr. Brodeur's resolution to advance $150,000 to the Quebec Harbor Commissioners to complete the new deep-water frontage of the Louise embankment, the Minister of Marine said the sum would be loaned to the commissioners on the same conditions as the loan of 1899, the rate of interest being 4 per cent. The money was needed to reconstruct the embankment, part of which fell down last year.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND'S COMPLAINT.

In Committee of Supply the estimates of the Marine Department were taken up, and Mr. Martin (Queen's, P.E.I.), Mr. Lefurgey (Prince), and Mr. Maclean (Queen's, P.E.I.) objected to the proposition to place the Montcalm on the Prince Edward Island route in winter because the vessel was not, they contended, good enough for the service.

Mr. Brodeur replied that the Montcalm is reported to be the most powerful boat in America to-day, and would, if any vessel could, keep the route open.

THOUSANDS KILLED BY FLOOD.

Chinese Walled City Destroyed by Fire Survivors Fear Famine.

A Victoria, B.C., despatch says: The steeamer Teucer, just arrived from Japan and China, brought further advices regarding the disastrous floods of the Hai-Nang-Hao, in China. All the valleys along the river were inundated, homes swept away by hundreds, and thousands of men and animals drowned. At Hsiangtu fire broke out and the greater part of the walled city was destroyed. This news was telegraphed by the Japanese Consul at Hsiangtu, who says that, although an immense loss of life occurred among the Chinese, none of his nationality was lost. It is feared that the destruction of the rice crop in the flooded areas may cause an extensive famine.

DEBT MUST INCREASE.

If Canada's Railway Development be Carried Out.

A London despatch says: The Glasgow Herald editorially comments favorably on Canada's financial position as shown by the budget, and says the debt must increase if the railway development be carried out.

PULLMAN TURNED OVER.

Accident on the Intercolonial near Amqui, Quebec.

A despatch from Montreal says: The rear Pullman car of the I.C.R. Maritime express, due on Sunday, jumped the track and overturned near Amqui, Que., about four hundred miles from Montreal, at 5 o'clock on Sunday morning, and though it carried twelve sleeping passengers, none of them were reported seriously injured. The escape was rather remarkable, and may be attributed in part to the low embankment and to the immediate action of the emergency brake, which operated automatically, owing to the break in the coupling. The car lay on its side, and so severe was the jolt that all the lower windows were smashed and the framework badly wrenched. The front Pullman was forced from the track, but did not turn over. It is supposed the accident was due to spreading rails, even though the engine and three colonist cars had passed over safely. When the passengers in the overturned Pullman regained composure and managed to get out, they observed that if the car had left the track a few yards farther ahead they would have been hurled over a fifty-foot embankment to a stream of water.

SLIDING INTO THE RIVER.

Ogilvie Elevator at Fort William in Danger.

A Fort William despatch says: The Ogilvie Company's grain elevator at this place, which was erected some two years ago, started to slide into the river about nine o'clock on Friday night, caused by the displacement of the pile foundation. The Canadian Pacific Railroad and the other elevator companies promptly rendered all possible assistance, and men were at work all day Saturday making arrangements for the removal of the grain, of which there is about 350,000 bushels, a portion of which belongs to outside parties. At the moment it looks as though 75 to 80 per cent. of the grain might be saved, as the bins are intact, and the total loss on grain and elevator will not amount to more than $250,000.

The elevator was designed and constructed by the McDonald Engineering Co., of Chicago. It was of fireproof steel and concrete on a pile foundation, which was driven to the rocks and was tested and loaded to its full capacity the past two seasons, and up to the time of the sudden collapse, it showned no signs of weakness.

ANYTHING FOR A FIGHT.

Zulus in South Africa Spoiling to Get at Each Other.

A London despatch says: The situation in Natal is unchanged. Little news comes through, but early in the week it seemed as if several leading chiefs would lay down their arms. Of the five chiefs who met on Tuesday only one announced his loyalty to the Government and ordered his men to disarm. Two others have since been organizing raids in Zululand. The rebellion continues to draw support from the natives who want to fight each other as well as those who want to fight the whites. This adds to the difficulty of suppressing it.

WANTS 2,000 MORE MEN.

The Pietermaritzburg correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph says that Col. Mackenzie has notified the Government that he requires 2,000 more men in order to cope with the rebellious natives. It is the opinion of those at the front that the natives will refuse to stand and fight. The prospect of long guerilla warfare is certain.

FIVE KILLED AT BALL GAME.

Bolt of Lightning Struck Among Spectators in Alabama.

A Mobile, Ala., despatch says: During a ball game in an open field, three miles from this city on Sunday afternoon, a thunderstorm came up accompanied by vivid lightning, which struck in the midst of a crowd of spectators, instantly killing five persons and injuring about 25 others more or less seriously. They were shocked and knocked down by the stroke, but the majority quickly recovered and were able to leave the scene. The field was strewn with bits of shoes and clothing from those who were killed or seriously injured, and the bodies of the dead presented a terrible spectacle. A silver dollar from the pockets of one of the victims was melted on both sides.

EARTH'S DISTURBANCES.

Shocks Felt at Houghton and Hancock, Michigan.

A despatch from Houghton, Mich., says: The most severe earth disturbances ever experienced in this region occurred at the Atlantic Mine on Saturday. There were more than 50 shocks. Buildings rocked violently, and in several places there are cracks in the earth from two to six inches in width. The shocks were distinct in Houghton and Hancock. No damage was done. Great alarm prevails, and miners and their families are preparing to leave for other points in the copper country.

TOP OF HEAD TAKEN OFF.

William King Killed in His Sawmill at Arkell, Ont.

A despatch from Guelph says: Saturday evening at the Arkell sawmill, while the owner, Wm. King, was operating a saw, a board caught on the saw and was thrown back, striking Mr. King on the left temple, crushing the skull and practically tearing the top of the head off. The board flew fully 100 feet after striking the unfortunate man. Two doctors were summoned from Guelph, but could do nothing, and he died in two hours. The deceased, who was 41 years old, leaves a wife and one child.

The victims were Maria Ulmer and the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. Niebergall. The former was assisting in fighting the fire on a farm, where she was employed as a domestic, when her clothes were ignited, inflicting injuries to which she succumbed shortly afterwards. Niebergall's little girl was playing around the stack, which had been on fire, but the flames were believed to have been extinguished. The wind blew the embers on the child's clothes, and she was burned to death. The prairie fire which resulted in both fatalities was caused by a man throwing a cigar-stub in the grass.

CRUSHED BETWEEN CARS.

A Man Killed on the Guelph-Goderich Line.

A despatch from Guelph says: A fatal accident occurred on the Guelph and Goderich Line late on Friday afternoon at the Grand River Bridge. A donkey engine with some dump cars was standing on the line, and underneath the engine was a young man named Joseph Pigott, son of Contractor Pigott, while Edward Neil, of West Montrose, was standing between two cars. Coming down a grade switch line was a similar train. The latter was not stopped quickly enough to prevent it running into the one standing on the main line. In the collision Neil received such severe injuries that he died shortly after reaching the General Hospital at Guelph. Pigott escaped with painful, but not serious, injuries. He is in the hospital.

FAITHFUL DOG SAVED CHILD.

Girl Had Wandered Three Days in New Brunswick.

A St. John, N. B., despatch says: Little ten-year-old Mamie Gallivan, who has been missing from her home at Drury Cove since Monday last, returned on Thursday, with an astounding story of hardship. For the past three days and nights she has been wandering in the woods, with no food except some berries and water from brooks. Search was unavailing until Thursday, when her dog found her, and guided her to a clearing, where she collapsed. He stayed with her, and finally, by barking, attracted the attention of the child's brother, who was among the searchers. The girl is in a very exhausted and emaciated condition, and threatened with pneumonia.

THE EMPIRE Cream Separator
A WINNER.

Now that I have taken the agency of the Empire Cream Separator I wish to advise my numerous friends that I sell one of the best Cream Separators ever put on the market, not only by its appearance but by its close skimming.

The following is a proof that what I say is right:—

D'Israel, Que., Nov. 3, 1905.

The following is the result of a test made in my presence while acting as judge for all concerned:

Butter Fat left in Skim Milk.
EMPIRE - - - .06 per cent.
Delaval - - - .15 per cent.

(Signed) P. R. PLENTE, Judge,
Cheese-maker at D'Israeli.

It will readily be seen by the above letter that signed by Mr. Plante, that the Delaval machine left 2½ times asmuch butter fat in the skim milk as did the EMPIRE and that therefore the Delaval wastes 2½ times as much butter fat as the EMPIRE.

The result of the test is plain to any reasonable observer. Mr. Plante is a well and favorably known resident of D'Israeli and farmers in that territory place every confidence in the result of the test made by him. Other points of difference between the two machines such as simplicity, ease of operation, durability and ease in cleaning were all in favor of the EMPIRE. It might also be stated that the bowl of each machine was washed in the skim milk and a composite test made so that there was no possible chance for any further loss than that indicated in the above letter.

I have taken the agency for the Carleton Place Man Killed by Train.

Ottawa, May 29—Mr. John Low of Carleton Place, was struck while on a hand-car between Britannia station and the overhead crossing, by No. 96 train, coming from the west. The accident occurred at about 7 a. m. and he died without regaining consciousness at noon. He and a fellow-workman of the bridge and building department of the C. P. R. were unloading a few bags of cement from a hand car at this point. They did not see the train approaching until it was very close and stuck to their places, trying to get the hand car off before the train reached them. Mr. Low had his back to the approaching engine, busily working, and leff his place too late. The engine, which had slackeded speed, struck the unfortuate man, crushing him against the car, and rendering him unconscious.

He was picked up in his condition and carried to the train and brought to Ottawa. An ambulance awaited his arrival, and he was taken to St. Luke's hospital. He never regained consciousness, and died at 12.30 a. m.

He was 68 years of age and married. and a resident of Carleton Place. His son came down on the train with the wounded man.

Sir James Watson's Opinion.

He says that the commonest of all disorders, and one from which few escape is Catarrh. Sir James firmly believes in local treatment, which is best supplied by "Catarrhozone". No case of catarrh can exist where Catarrhozone is used; it is a miracle worker, relieves almost instantly and cures after all other remedies fail. Other treatments can't reach the diseased parts like Catarrhozone because it goes to the source of the trouble along with the air that you breathe. Catarrhozone is free from cocaine, it leaves no bad after-effects, it is simply nature's own cure. Accept no subsitute to Catarrhozone which alone can cure catarrh.

A Convict's Death.

Kingston, May 26—John McGee, a prisoner who attempted to escape from the penitentiary on Thursday night, died early this morning from internal injuries received by falling down the chimney into which he had climbed. McGee stated that he got out of his cell early in the evening and lay at the bottom of the chimney for nine hours, suffering excruciating agony.

Inspector Dawson is here to day to investigate further into penitentiary matters. The result will likely be the appointment of more guards so as to bring the number up to the old strength.

REMARKABLE TEST.

Hyomei Has Been Known for Years, and is Guaranteed to Cure Catarrh.

We have given Hyomei a most thorough and remarkable test.

The remedy has made so many cures that we have urged its use in the most chronic cases of catarrh.

Breathed for a few minutes four times a day, through an inhaler that comes with every outfit, it soothes the irritated mucous membrane of the nose, throat and lungs, kills the catarrhal germs, and restores complete health. Its healing, antiseptic fragrance penetrates to the most remote air passages, as no medicine taken into the stomach can possibly do. Immediate relief almost always follows the use of Hyomei, and great benefit is seen after a few days' treatment.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs only $1, and consists of an inhaler that can be carried in the pocket or purse, and will last a lifetime, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. If this is not sufficient for a complete cure, additional bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50 cents.

Compare this small expense with the fees charged by specialists.

If you cannot obtain Hyomei of your dealer, it will be forwarded by mail postage paid, on receipt of price. Write today for consultation blank that will entitle you to the services of our medical department without charge. The R. T. Booth Company, Hyomei Building, Ithaca, N. Y.

A VILLAGE TRAGEDY.

Ontario Man Shot His Wife and Her Father, Then Suicided.

Kingston, Ont., May 26.—Early this morning a terrible tragedy was enacted near Railton, a village about 3 miles from Sydenham, and fourteen miles north of Kingston. As a result, one man is dead and two other persons are seriously and probably fatally injured. John Joyce is the dead man, and his death is the work of his own hands, he having committed suicide by cutting his throat, after having shot he thought, killed, his wife and her father, Cornelius Wood.

Joyce, the dead man, was an English immigrant, having come to Canada about a year ago. Since that time he has been employed as a farm hand near Railton. Last November Joyce was married to a daughter of Cornelius Wood, and they went to live with the old man. They lived in a rough log cabin on a wild uncultivated piece of land, owned by J. O'Brien, a short distance out of Railton. The people were very poor and lived in miserable circumstances. They are also said to have been of a low calibre mentally and morally.

The matrimonial life of Joyce and his wife have been by no means happy, and to this fact is ascribed the trouble. Joyce came to the city a week ago and stated he was looking for his wife, who had run away with a man named Eli Smiih. Apparently the woman had returned to her husband, and the trouble had resulted. Cornelius Wood, the father-in-law, who is said to have been seriously wounded. has a somewhat bad reputation, and recently served a term in goal for an incident assult committed upon his daughter.

The trouble occurred shortly after 8 o'clock this morning. Joyce and his wife quarelled, and the former, securing a shot-gun, fired on the woman before she could escape from the house.

Her father attempted to idterfere, and he also was shot down by the enraged husband.

When the news of the shooting spread the neighborhood, people started to the scene of the tragedy, but they were driven back by Joyce, who, with loaded gun still in his hand threatened to shoot the first person who came within range.

A warrant for his arrest was sworn in at Syndenham, but before it could be executed, the murderer cut his threat.

St. Lawrence Power.

Brockville, May 26—Cecil B. Smith, engineer of Hydro-Electrical power commission of Ontario, paid Brockville a visit to day on the invitation of Mayor Stewart and discussed the possibilities of cheap power being transmitted to this place. Mr. Smith gave as his opinion that the most feasible spot from which to obtain power was Waddington, N.Y., a distance of 30 miles away on the American side of the St. Lawrence river, where a generating plant is about to be installed. Transmission could be easily arranged to supply to Canadian frontier towns from Iroquois west to Kingston. An effort will be made to induce these places to take the preliminary steps, then the government will act accordingly in lending material aid towards the building and equipping the line. Mr. Smith went from here to Kingston to start the ball rolling there.

Appointed Provincial Superintendent of Education.

Toronto, May 25—Dr. John Seath, inspector of high schools, has been appointed superintendent of education Mr. James E. Wetherell, principal of Strathroy college, succeeds him. These appointments were made by the Ontario cabinet to-day.

Belleville police commissioners have decided to reorganize the force.
