Winchester Man Seriously Injured Late Last Night

George Skuce Was Walking Along Highway 31 South of Winchester When Struck By Car Driven By Orville Bell.

LITTLE HOPE FOR RECOVERY

Last night about 9.30 as Mr. and Mrs. George Skuce, of Winchester, were proceeding to their home after having spent the evening with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Durant, and as they were almost opposite the quarry gate a short distance south of Winchester station on Highway 31, the former was struck by an automobile allegedly driven by Orville Bell, of R.R. 4, Winchester, and seriously injured, sustaining a fractured squll and severe internal injuries.

As Mr. and Mrs. Skuce walked along arm-in-arm, it is said the latter was not aware of the approach of the car until her husband was struck and torn from her arm. It is also alleged that the driver of the car had not seen the couple on the highway and was unaware that the man had been struck, his vision having been obscured by the headlights of an approaching car.

Drs. McKendry and McLaughlin were called and Mr. Skuce was taken to his home where very little hope was held out for his recovery.

Constable Garnet McLean, of Chesterville, who was in Winchester on other business, was notified when Constable Helmer of Winchester could not immediately be located, and assisted in the investigation, notifying Traffic Officer Eugene Rose, of Morrisburg, who took chage. Awaiting the results of the injuries, no charge was laid against Bell and he was not detained.

In the recent destruction by fire of the Bailey Garage in Winchester, Skuce was a heavy loser when his blacksmith shop was also destroyed.

PRINCIPAL ENGAGED.

Mr. Warren Markle, of Newburgh, Ont., has been engaged as principal of Chesterville High school and will take up his duties at the beginning of the fall term. Miss Jean Houlehan and Mr. A. J. Laforet have been re-engaged as assistants.

Funeral Yesterday Afternoon John Parker, Maple Ridge

Died in Ottawa Civic Hospital Sunday In His 70th Year.—Was Well-Known Farmer.

John Parker, of Winchester township, died on Sunday at the Ottawa Civic hospital after a long illness. He was in his 70th year

Mr. Parker was the son of the late William Parker and his wife, the former Miss Lucy Houlehan. He spent his boyhood at the place of his birth and had farmed in Mountain and Winchester townships, and for the past eight years had lived at Maple Ridge. He was a lifelong Conservative, and took a keen interest in municipal affairs.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Emma Alford, of New York City, and Miss Hattie Parker, of Maple Ridge.

The funeral was held Wednesday at the home of his sister at Maple Ridge conducted by Rev. W. S. Atchison, of Winchester United church, with interment in the family plot at Maple Ridge cemetery.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY IMPROVING HALL GROUNDS

The Horticultural Society completed the planting of shrubs on the Community Hall ground at the week end. The work is by no means complete but will require several years to realize because of the cost of the nursery stock. A hedge of Japanese barberry follows on the inside of the curbing through its length, and clumps of this shrub have been placed at corners of the walks. A maple tree graces the front and rear grounds and along the river bank are a number of dwarf willows, while at the back of the site are several larger willows.

The lawns are growing well with the fine abundance of moisture this spring and the place presents a beautiful scene—one that will grow finer as the horticultural work progresses.

Williamsburg Store Manager Narrowly Escapes Drowning

A. J. Cole Rescued From Icy Water After Light Boat Upset.—Daughter Swam to Shore.

Arthur J. Cole, manager of the Gilhooly Shoe Store at Williamsburg, who resides about three miles east of Morrisburg, narrowly escaped drowning on Sunday afternoon when the boat he was in tipped over in the St. Lawrence near Edgehill. Mr. Cole, riding with his daughter Verne in a small outboard motorboat, had difficulty in getting the motor to start. Friends on shore called to him to come to shore and they would lend a hand.

Mr. Cole and his daughter started rowing the light craft toward shore. Within a short distance of land, one of the oars came out of the oarlock and fell into the water. Mr. Cole, who is a heavy man, reached for it, and the boat went over spilling both passengers.

Miss Cole managed to swim to shore through the icy water but her father was unable to make any progress. The people on shore were not swimmers and were powerless to help him. Their shouts, however, brought assistance and Mr. Cole was rescued after he had gone below the surface the second time.

Mrs. Clayton Entertains Trinity United W. M. S.

"Jesus and Youth" Is Topic of Study. —Report of Presbyterial Given By Mrs. W. N. Fulton.

The Women's Missionary Society of Trinity United church met at the home of Mrs. A. B. Clayton for the May meeting. The opening devotions were taken by Mrs. W. O. Dixon, the theme being "Jesus and Youth."

The Bible reading was given by Mrs. Geo. Hummel. After the reading of the minutes, some items of business were discussed. An autograph quilt is being made and the members are soliciting names to raise funds for the society.

Reports of the committees followed. Mrs. Saucier. supply secretary, reported a lack of underwear, stockings and warm clothing for boys of school age; also layettes. Donations are to be sent to Mrs. Saucier's home before the end of May as the bale will be packed the last week of this month.

Mrs. Myles Merkley contributed a solo "In The Garden." The topic of the study period was "Our Responsibility for Children and Youth," and took the form of a dialogue. Those taking part were "Mrs. Practical Leader," Mrs. W. N. Fulton; "Miss Sentimental Leader," Mrs. C. W. Casselman; "Mrs. Leader of Vision," Miss E. Johnson; "Miss Easy Way," Mrs. O. Colquhoun, and "Miss Willing Leader," Mrs. M. Durant.

This dialogue impressed on the members the responsibility of an auxiliary for the children and youth of the church.

A number was sung very sweetly by little Phyllis Clayton. Mrs. W. N. Fulton, delegate to the Dundas-Grenville Presbyterial held at South Mountain, read a report of the work being carried on by the W.M.S. and gave some of the highlights of the convention which were most interesting and helpful.

Drivers Must Gear Reactions To Higher Rate of Speed

R. B. Morley, Industrial Safety Head, Urges Motorists to Be Courteous and "Start a Little Earlier."

"Increased speed limits demand increased care and consideration," R. B. Morley, general manager of the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, points out in a bulletin just issued to members of the associations. "Beginning on May 24th, the recent amendments to the Highway Traffic Acts will permit speeds of 30 miles an hour in cities, towns and villages, and 50 miles in the open country.

"While it is hoped that traffic congestion will be relieved under the new ruling, it is important that all drivers on the highway give serious consideration to their responsbility in co-operating with the department of highways.

"Our mental and physical reactions must be stepped up," Mr. Morley emphasizes, "to keep in gear with the higher speed, and we feel that the members of our associations are prepared to do their share by drawing to the attention of all their employees, whether working on the highways or in the plant, that highway safety is everybody's business."

"Chance taking" cannot be justified. the statement continues, and the observance of two simple rules will greatly cut down our highway losses. Courtesy comes first and the second rule is to "start a little earlier so you will not take chances on the way."

"The higher the speed, the greater the impact when you hit something," says Mr. Morley. "A car falling from a ten-story building, 120 feet high, inflicts the same damage as a car travelling at 60 miles per hour."

Encouraging signs of the growing interest in safety and accident prevention work, Mr. Morley notes, was shown at the recent safety convention held in Toronto when there was an increased attendance of nearly 30 per cent over last year's registration figures. Industrial accidents reported to the Workmen's Compensation Board during April were 555 less than for April, 1936, the report shows.

Stressing the importance of preventive work in industry, both from the humanitarian and financial viewpoints by asking "What Price Safety?" the association bulletin cites several instances of accidents costing over $10,000 each in compensation, apart from the suffering and financial loss to the individual employee and his family.

A milk salesman slipped on an icy walk, a plant manager stepped into the side of a passing car, workmen attempted to lift too heavy a burden and injured themselves. "These and similar instances," Mr. Morley concludes, "are a heavy drain on both employee and employer, and our common sense tells us that accident prevention is worthy of fulltime study and consciousness."

Professor's Wife: "A truck ran over your best hat."

Absent-Minded Professor: "Was I wearing it?"

A tourist, on his way to Europe, was experiencing seasickness for the first time. Calling his wife to his bedside, he said in a weak voice: "Jennie, my will is left to you, dear. My various stocks you will find in my safe-deposit box." Then he said fervently: "And Jennie, bury me on the other side. I can't stand this trip again, alive or dead!"

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

GRAIN FEEDING.

In all grain feeding it must be kept in mind that the product being used is an expensive one and can under no circumstances be used in the feeding or finishing of low grade or indifferently bred animals. Not only must the animals be of approved types, but experience has clearly shown that certain kinds of farm animals greatly excel others in their abilities to utilize the feeds provided. Especially is this true in connection with the feeding of grains. Poultry would probably head the list in this regard, with the pig standing a close second in its ability to manufacture feed grains into meat economically. The dairy cow, because of her ability to give off from her body immense quantities of milk during a long lactation period, would rank third, followed by beef cattle and sheep.

CLEANING OUT COUCH.

The eradication of couch grass, otherwise known as quack, twitch or scutch grass, is one of the hardest problems with which the farmer has to deal. Few people realize the enormous quantity of couch grass roots which exist in infested soil. Tests conducted by the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa show weights of roots ranging from 1,531 to 6,997 pounds to the acre — as much as a heavy crop of hay. No wonder it is hard to clean out when it spreads by roots as well as seed. Thoroughly cleaning out the roots is the one effective way of getting rid of couch. In small areas this may be done by hand. In larger areas by shallow ploughing and working thoroughly with the cultivator to keep the roots turned up to the sun long enough "to kill." Only as large an earea as can be thoroughly cleaned up at one time should be undertaken, as half-way measures are only lost time and effort.

CROP CONDITIONS.

The following summary on weather and crop conditions at the beginning of May has been compiled by the Statistics Branch from reports of correspondents:

The weather during April was very unfavourable for spring cultivation and seeding. Cold wet weather prevented operations on the land and at the end of the month less seeding of oats and barley was completed than in any year since 1922. Only five per cent of the intended oat acreage had been planted and three per cent of the barley acreage. Warm dry weather was greatly needed for completion of the seeding of spring grains and for good germination.

Precipitation in Ontario during the five months, November to March, was practically equal to the average received during the past 55 years. It became quite excessive in Southwestern Ontario reaching flood proportions in the London area. The soil is well-supplied with moisture and provided satisfactory growing weather prevails from now on, the yield of spring grains this eason may be well up to the average.

Winter killing of fall wheat was about the same as in 1936, being less than normal. The acreage seeded last fall was 702,000 acres and winter-killing amounted to eight per cent, leaving 646,000 acres to be harvested this summer, as against 509,300 acres a year ago. This increase is due to the stimulus provided by rise in wheat prices. Fall rye suffered less injury with only an estimated five per cent killed. The cool moist weather has been favourable for the development of fall wheat and fall rye and their condition at the beginning of May was almost normal. With good yields fall wheat will prove one of the best cash crops in years. The visible supply of wheat in Canada is lowest on record since 1925.

Hay and clover fields entered the winter in rather poor condition after the prolonged drought of last year and winter killing was fairly extensive in all parts of the province. The acreage of hay crops will therefore be considerably reduced. Pastures and meadows have not made the same growth as fall wheat and rye and their condition on May 1st was only 86 per cent normal.

A LITTLE BOY PRAYS FOR HIS DOG.

Pictorial Review.

DEAR GOD,
They say my dog is dead;
He had the softest little head;
He was so good, he'd always do
Most anything I told him to.
Kind God,
Sometimes he'd chase a cat,
(He wasn't often bad like that),
And if I called him back, he came
The minute that I said his name.
Please, God,
If he feels scared up there,
Won't You please let him sleep somewhere
Near You? Oh, please take care of him,
I love him so! His name is Tim.

Mrs. Harry Bolton, Winchester, Mourned by Family of Eight

Died in Civic Hospital, Ottawa, Last Thursday, Aged 45 Years.—Baby Is 11 Months Old.

A sad death occurred in the Civic hospital, Ottawa, on Thursday last when Mrs. Harry Bolton, of Winchester passed away, leaving a family of eight children, the youngest a baby of 11 months. The late Mrs. Bolton contracted the 'flu in March, which was followed by pneumonia and pleurisy. She was then taken by her doctor to hospital. Not much hope of recovery was given at that time, but she made a splendid fight for life, and of late seemed to be gaining. Her husband spent Coronation Day with her, finding her improved and interested in the home affairs, but the next morning she suffered a hæmorrhage and before Mr. Bolton could reach her bedside she was dead.

She was in her 45th year, and had lived in Winchester for only two years but during that time had made many friends owing to her friendly and jovial disposition.

Although they were not members of the Wesleyan Methodist church, the funeral was held there last Sunday at 2 p.m., with the minister, Rev. D. W. Summers, in charge. Mr. Summers, who had visited her during her illness both at home and in hospital, spoke of the peace that had come into Mrs. Bolton's life through her acceptance of Christ as her Saviour, taking for a text "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face." The Wesleyan choir, with Miss Idena Jones at the piano, sang: "I Will Meet You in the Morning, Just Inside the Eastern Gate."

Interment was made in Maple Ridge cemetery, the bearers being Messrs. Geo. Barkley, Hugh Graham, Nelson Dixon, E. McPherson, W. J. Stewart and Robt. Workman.

Winchester Truck Driver Narrowly Escapes Crash

Truck Driven by Ross Hutchinson Broke Through Nation Bridge.—Held By Slim Girder.

Ross Hutchinson, of Winchester, narrowly escaped death or serious injury Thursday night when his truck, loaded with gravel, went through a bridge spanning the Nation river about two miles east of Cass Bridge. The truck and load, weighing about five tons, was prevented from going into the water by a slender girder which held the machine, enabling the driver to scramble to safety.

While Harry Strader and Stanley Raistrack were also riding in the cab, they alighted from the machine before starting out on the bridge.

Reeve W. J. McConnell, of Winchester township, the municipality in which the bridge is situated, said it had been inspected last week and was considered safe for traffic. Damage to the truck, which was later removed from its dangerous position, was slight, but the loss to the township will run into hundreds of dollars to have the structure repaired.

MORE TRAFFIC OFFICERS DISTRICT PROV. HIGHWAYS

More provincial police traffic officers will be located in the Ottawa district when the new speed law becomes effective ths month.

The locating of motorcycle officers at Winchester to cover the provincial highway between Ottawa and Morrisburg, and at Renfrew to take care of the highway between Arnprior and Renfew and Pembroke, are under consideration by police headquarters in Toronto.

"Father," asked the youngster looking up from his book, "is it true that a man is known by the company he keeps?"

"Yes, my boy," replied the father.

"Well, father,' 'said the child, "if a good man keeps company with a bad man, is the good man bad because he keeps company with the bad man, or is the bad man good because he keeps company with the good man?"

ONTARIO

WARNING TO MOTORISTS

At the last session of the Legislature the law respecting the speed of motor vehicles was amended. The effect of this amendment is to increase the maximum permissible speed at which motor vehicles may be operated. The amendment in question becomes effective on the 24th of May.

Motorists are warned that the new speed limits are the positive maximum speeds at which motor vehicles may be operated under the most ideal conditions. While the maximum speeds are to be 30 miles per hour in cities, towns and villages and 50 miles per hour outside, speeds much below these are necessary under many conditions. It is still an offence and considered reckless driving, for which severe penalties are provided, to operate at any speed without due regard for traffic, highway or light conditions.

Motorists are urged to exercise the greatest of care and courtesy and are warned that a wilful disregard for the safety of themselves or other users of the streets and highways will result in prosecution and withdrawal of the privilege of driving.

HOMING PIGEONS START UNIQUE RACE FROM CHURCHILL

Churchill, Man. — Fifteen homing pigeons fluttered south from this Hudson Bay port Tuesday headed for San Antonio, Texas, in an attempt to break the world's long-distance pigeon flight record of 2,061 miles.

Under auspices of the American Racing Pigeon Union, the birds were shipped from San Antonio, April 30 and arrived here May 9. They were released after unfavourable weather conditions delayed the start more than a week.

Flying down the backbone of the continent in one of the most unique bird derbies ever staged, the pigeons will cover at least 2,040 miles before reaching the Texas city.

DUKE SETS JUNE 3RD AS HIS WEDDING DATE

Monts, France.—The Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield announced that they will marry on June 3—the birthday of the late King George V. who bitterly opposed his son's association with the American-born divorcee.

The ceremony will be solemnized quietly in the sixteenth-century library of the Chateau de Cande here, without any blessing from the British Royal family.

None of the Royal family will attend—not even the Duke of Kent, who it was said, was to be the Duke's best man.

Father (at breakfast): "You need not go to school to-day, Molly. You can tell teacher you have two new baby brothers."

Molly (looking thoughtful): "I know, Dad. I'll tell her I've got one baby brother, and then next week I'll tell her I've got another one, so I shall be able to stay at home again."

A WARNING TO MOTORISTS UNDER REVISED SPEED LIMIT

"THE amendment to the Motor Vehicles Act permitting increased speeds of 30 and 50 miles per hour in municipalities and rural sections respectively will go into effect on May 24th," Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario Minster of Highways, has announced.

At the same time, he issued a strong warning to motorists that the new speed rates represented "the maximum permissible speed at which motor vehicles may be operated."

Mr. McQuesten pointed out emphatically that the new speed limits were designed to meet the most ideal motoring conditions, and that motorists would have to slacken their pace in situations which called for care, courtesy, and the safety of pedestrians and other drivers, if the chance of reckless driving was to be avoided.

These speed law changes, however, were entirely dependent on "ideal conditions," he stressed. They could not take into consideration the many and varied situations which constantly arise on the highway and call for extra caution and slow speed, nor did they cover any defective equipment, such as lights and brakes, on a driver's automobile.

"Ideal conditions" would not include whizzing past a country schoolnouse, where children might be on the highway, at 50 miles an hour, Mr. McQuesten cited as one example to illustrate his point, "and no driver would be able to justify a speed of 30 miles an hour through a town on a busy market day."

Summing up the conditions under which the new speed amendment would be operated, the minister urged car drivers to bear in mind constantly that the revised rates were "maximums for ideal conditions," and that every motorist on streets or highways would be called upon more than ever to exercise care, courtesy and commonsense every minute he was behind the wheel of his automobile.

ENAMEL.

Interesting Facts About Our Dominion of Canada.

ENAMEL is a transparent or opague glassy substance applied to metal or other surfaces in the form of a paste and then fired to fix it. The material—ground very fine, mixed with gum, water or oil of spike to render it adhesive and reduced to a pasty consistence—is brushed on to the object which, when duly decorated is placed in a furnace.

In the fine arts, enamel is principally used in connection with pottery and porcelain ware, jewellery, watches and articles for the dressing table Coloured enamels were used by the Egyptians, the Greeks and the Romans, but the art was brought to a high state of perfection under the Byzantine emperors. A special style was developed by the Orientals. Limoges enamel was carried to rare perfection in the 16th century.

There is a great deal of enamel work done in Canada, and we import large quantities, also, especially of iron enamelled ware. The imports, exclusive of fine art enamel, are about $45,000 in value, and the domestic production in the neighbourhood probably of $1,000,000.

I AM THE RAIN.

I AM the Rain.

It was said of me long ago that I fall upon the just and the unjust. And that is true.

Gathered up from the far places of the earth, I am scattered from the hands of the clouds upon the fields of all.

With the divine impartiality of Mother Nature I spread my gifts of life and healing upon men and their works.

I am sublimely indifferent to the petty frets of you and your neighbours for each other, of the varying skills with which you prepare and await me, of your sins or virtues.

I refresh you from the heat.

I nourish you with the water of life seeking out every tissue in your body.

I fall upon your ground and sink out of sight, while you forget me.

But in the myriad caves of the soil I search out the rootlets of your seeds. I store them with wealth. I enrich them by my life.

And then in your fields and granaries and on your dining table you find me again—and know me not.

For, like the richest gifts of the world and as a symbol of your religion, I become lost in that which I create.

I am the Rain.

HEALTH

INDIGESTION.

EVERYBODY, at some time or other, has suffered from indigestion. It is, perhaps, the most common of all complaints, yet it is not a disease in itself. Rather is it a loose term with no definite meaning, for it is used to indicate digestive discomforts which may arise from a score or more of different causes.

The patient is conscious of pain, of bloating, of discomfort, of "heart burn" or acid eructations, of belching, of nausea, or of constipation. In one patient, a combination of several of these symptoms may be due to a gastric ulcer; the same symptoms in another may be due to a diseased gall bladder, or to a type of appendicitis, or to a general sagging of the abdominal organs, or to anxiety and worry. The experienced physician can usually find the cause, although in obscure cases sometimes only after careful X-Ray and other examinations and tests.

With gratuitous advice thrust upon one from every angle, including the urgent entreaties of well-meaning but uninformed friends, the sufferer is apt to try many useless remedies and, in the long run, spend considerably more money than were good advice obtained early and perhaps find the opportunity for a speedy cure irretrievably lost.

Sometimes the symptoms do yield ready to simple remedies. Over-acidity and certain kinds of pain may yield to baking soda, for instance, but the real underlying cause may go on undetected. In fact, acidity in the stomach is needed for digestion and its complete neutralization by alkalis only causes further indigestion.

Because of the danger of ulcers, of cancerous growth, gall-bladder disease, appendicitis and other serious conditions, early, accurate diagnosis cannot be stressed too strongly. At the same time, one should not become a nervous wreck from worrying over these less common conditions, for a great many cases of indigestion—the large majority—are due to simple causes and easily corrected.

Over-eating, rapid eating, bolting of food, over-seasoning, over-smoking, unnoticed air-swallowing while eating, washing food down with liquids—all cause indigestion. Constipation may be the main factor. Sometimes roughage in food does more harm than good to those with sensitive "spactic" intestinal tracts. Each person must determine what should be avoided and should not let politeness override his judgment.

Above all, do not fear the truth—it is much more likely to allay rather than confirm your fears.

SCOTT'S' 'DISCOVERY" MANNED BY SEA SCOUTS

One of the vessels which attracted special attention in the Coronation river pageant on the Thames was Captain Scott's famous Polar ship "Discovery I." This ship, now the prized possession of the Boy Scouts, was manned by Sea Scouts. It was used during the Coronation as a hostel for Scout visitors.

FIELD SECRETARY DROPS IN.

The S.M. was pleasantly surprised by a visit from Mr. Edgar T. Jones on Monday who was on his way to Williamsburg where there are prospects of a new group. Mr. Jones reported the Cardinal troop coming on splendidly, and also that a new troop may take form at Beachburg under the leadership of Mr. Ralph Jervis, of Morewood. The Field Secretary didn't have time to remain for a meeting, but hopes to be around on an official visit early this fall.

DANCE PROFITS ASSURE CAMP.

The big dance staged by the troop on Coronation night was a walloping success and the profits assure plenty of funds for camp, as well as a new tent and possibly some cooking equipment. The troop expects to get away right after school examinations have been completed, and Pendleton is expected to be the site again this year.

24-YEAR-OLD INTERNATIONAL SCOUT FRIENDSHIP.

An unusual good turn performed 24 years ago resulted in a still continuing friendship between the Boy Scouts of Hastings and St. Leonards, England, and the Scouts of Portugal. In 1912 the Portuguese steamship Oceana was wrecked off Eastbourne, and the bodies of two seamen were washed ashore at St. Leonards. Members of the 2nd Hastings Scout Group arranged for their burial at the Borough Cemetery. The Portuguese Government on learning of this invited the entire Hastings Scout Group to pay a visit to Lisbon, where they were entertained with great cordiality. Continuing the friendship, the Hastings and St. Leonards Scouts will entertain a number of Portuguese Scouts on their way to attend the World Scout Jamboree to be held in Holland this summer.

1 teaspoon sugar
Few grains cayenne
1 cup salad oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice or vinegar
1 egg yolk or 1 whole egg

Mix dry ingredients. Add egg; beat thoroughly with a Dover beater. Add a few drops of oil; beat thoroughly; add a few drops of lemon juice or vinegar. Continue in this way, beating thoroughly between each addition until all the vinegar or lemon juice has been added, after which the oil may be added in larger quantities.

Fish and meat salads seem to be more popular than other varieties. These more hearty salads may be served as the main course at luncheons, supper or at evening parties. Accompanied by a hot beverage and rolls they make a complete and entirely satsfactory meal.

Among Classmates

"THE MEETING will please come to order."

The freshman class fell at once into expectant silence. Laura Starr, the tiny, fair-haired president, disposed of the preliminary business with precision and speed. Then she said:

"The sergeant-at-arms will please place guards at the door, and on the fire escape, and in the room over this." Changing from her official to her conversational tone, she explained: "If you put your ear to the steam pipe up there, you can hear every sound in this room."

Laura waited until taps on the window, the door, and the pipe upstairs indicated that it was safe to proceed. Then she continued in a lower tone:

"The chairman of the committee on the discovery of the name of the sophomore play will present her report."

Every girl turned to look expectantly at tall, broad-shouldered Mary Cook, who had risen to her feet in the rear of the room. Her black eyes twinkled in her plain, boyish face.

"Oh, we've got the most wonderful plan!" she began. "You know, the sophomores are rehearsing their play every night this week in the concert hall. But there isn't a door, or a window, or a pipe, or anything that you could listen at that they don't guard three deep every night. And before rehearsal they search the hall with a magnifying glass. You couldn't hide a mouse in there. Nevertheless, the secretary of this class will be able to post the name of the sophomore play and the cast on the bulletin board before breakfast to-morrow morning."

The room rustled with excitement.

"I guess it won't be so much of a surprise as usual when the sophomores hand out their programmes next Monday night," Mary Cook continued. "Won't they feel cheap to be the first class in five years that could not keep the name of their play dark!"

"What's your plan?" excited voices cried.

"Well, all we need is a girl who's got some nerve and is small enough. You know the new organ in the concert hall. The keyboard is right beside the stage. Did you ever notice what looks like an enormous oak box behind the scenes on that side of the stage? Well, that's the case the organ pipes are in. One of the panels of that case has a section that's only screwed on When they want to do anything to the pipes, they take that section off. Now, if some girl that's small enough is game, I'll go with her when everyone else is at dinner, and we'll take off that section. Then she can crawl inside the organ and I'll screw the panel back on. And she'll hear every word that's said on that stage to-night."

There was a confusion of voices.

"She'd smother."

"Who's little enough?"

Four girls were on their feet at once.

"I've looked at that case lots of times," said Frances Marcy, when the president had recognized her, "and I'm afraid no one could get inside. And if she could, she'd smother in there."

She sat down, and Nancy Lowry, the secretary of the class, had the floor.

"I think it's a splendid plan," she said. "And I once looked inside an organ case like that, and there was room, only, of course, she'd have to be small,"

The president resigned her chair to the vice president, and spoke from the floor.

"Of course, that's a wonderful plan for hearing the play; but I don't think we ought to monkey with the organ. It's brand new and they say it's a fine one, even if it is small. We can't run the risk of doing it any harm; and I don't believe anyone could get that panel off and climb inside without breaking something. If we can't find out the name of that play without smashing college property, I think we will have to go without."

Laura resumed the chair and the argument proceeded. One or two of the girls supported the president's view, but the majority of the class were strongly in favour of the plan that the committee suggested. At last a motion to accept the plan was put to vote and carried.

All that now remained to do was to select the person who was small enough to get inside the organ. It was agreed that the names of all the girls who were of the right size should be written on slips of paper, and the president should then draw one slip. The girl whose name was drawn should carry out the plan. Investigation showed that there were only four girls who were small enough: Laura Starr, the president, who was the smallest girl in the class; Mary Cook's roommate, Nancy Lowry; Margaret Grey, the sergeant-at-arms, now absent on duty; and Kitty Trumbull.

The secretary put the four slips of paper into a book, with their ends protruding, and then held out the book to the pesident. Laura drew a slip and looked at it. Her brows contracted suddenly. Then, with a little toss of her head, she lifted her eyes to the class and pronounced quite coolly her own name.

As the president walked toward her own room after the meeting, Frances Marcy caught up with her.

"But, Laura! You said that you thought no one ought to get inside the organ, and now you're going to do it yourself."

"I know it," said Laura. "But if the class is going to have some one do it anyway, you don't think I'd say I wouldn't be the one. Now, do you?" Then, with a sparkle in her eyes, she looked up at Frances. "And, of course, it'll be no end of a lark, if we don't break the organ."

AT eleven o'clock that night silence had fallen on the dormitory; except for a feeble gas flame in each corridor, the lights were out. The rehearsal of the sophomore play was over and the tired actors and their sleepy guards were all in bed.

A tall girl in a bathrobe stepped out of one of the bedroom doors and noiselessly descended the stairs. At the bottom she found that the door of the concert hall was ajar. Slipping into the hall, she felt her way down the aisle to the front of the room. She found the steps to the stage, mounted them, and groped her way behind the curtain. Stretching out her right hand, she felt the wood of the organ case. She listened. There was no sound from within. A sudden terror seized her. Had something terrible happened to Laura?

"Laura!" she whispered frantically. "Are you all right?"

"Surely!" Laura's serene voice came through the panels. "And I heard every word they said."

Gasping with relief and joy, Mary at once set to work. From the pocket of her bathrobe she took out a small flashlight. Pressing the button, she ran the tiny light up and down the panels until she found a screwhead. Keeping a finger on the screw, she put the spot light back into her pocket, and took out instead a little screwdriver. One after another, she removed the screws. From time to time she heard a weary stirring within and the question:

"How many have you got out now?

Once a more abrupt movement within the case was followed by a sharp crack and a little sound very much like a sob from Laura.

"What's the matter?" Mary whispered.

O Mary! I've broken something in the organ. My heel caught. How awful!"

Mary went to work harder than ever. At last she took out the last screw, and lifted the loosened panel. A soft little hand reached out of the darkness and touched her face. Then Mary slipped her strong arms around Laura, lifted her through the narrow opening, and set her down beside her.

"O Mary! My right foot's sound asleep! It was terribly spooky in there after the rehearsal was over and everyone went away.

"Huh!" Mary suddenly stiffened and stood alert. "There's Peter!"

Drawing back the edge of the curtain, she looked across the hall Through the glass at the top of the door that opened on the campus a man's face, lighted by a lantern that he held high, was looking into the room. It was the night watchman on his rounds.

"He must have seen the flash of your light!" Laura whispered. "He's coming in!"

Without stopping to put the panel back over the yawning hole in the organ case, they crept under the curtain and ran down the aisle. Before the lock had yielded to the watchman's key, they were through the door into the hall and flying upstairs

In another moment they were behind the close door of Laura's room. Running to the window, they leaned out. Directly below them was the outside door of the concert hall. Almost at once they heard it open and saw the night watchman hurry away.

"He's left his lantern," Laura whispered. "That means he's coming back We can't go down to put on the panel. Oh, I wonder if he went behind the curtain!"

"Probably," said Mary. "But he didn't see us, anyway."

A slight scratching at Laura's door interrupted them. Mary opened the door cautiously and admitted Nancy Lowry and Margaret Grey in kimonos and pigtails.

"Laura! Did you find out?" The newcomers were agog with excitement.

"Of course. And I know who's going to take every part, too," said Laura.

With suppressed sounds of joy the two girls fell upon her and embraced her violently. Then they rolled on the bed and kicked their slippers into the air. They stuffed their sleeves into their mouths to keep from shouting aloud. Finally Laura caught at a wriggling braid and pulled its ecstatic owner into a sitting posture.

"Come, Nancy," she said. "You've got to write the notice. You're secretary."

Nancy bounded to her feet and capered across the room to Laura's desk.

"Just watch me!" she murmured.

With the aid of Mary's flashlight, Nancy found a large sheet of paper and pen and ink. And by the same tiny light she wrote her notice and gloated over what she wrote.

"The freshman class takes pleasure in announcing that the members of the sophomore class will present 'The Amazons,' a comedy by Sir Arthur Wing Binero, on Monday evening, February the third, at eight o'clock. The cast is as follows."

Laura whispered in Nancy's ear the names of the actors, and Nancy wrote them down. When the notice was finished, Margaret Grey scrambled off the bed.

"Come on, Nancy," she said. 'You sleep with me to-night. We'll set the alarm for half past five and post that notice before anyone else is up. And then we'll guard the bulletin board until breakfast time."

"Well, then, Laura, I'll sleep with you," said Mary. "And you fellows wake us early. I'd rather sit up all night than miss seeing the first soph that gets her eye on that notice."

Fifteen minutes later, just as Mary was dropping off to sleep, a sleepy murmur reached her from Laura's bed:

"Mary! What do you think it was that broke?"

THE next day at noon, Laura and Nancy were swinging down the corridor arm in arm on their way to luncheon. As they came in sight of the bulletin board, which hung just outside the diningroom door, the girls nudged each other in joyful recollection. It was just there they had stood that morning to watch the sophomores' complete discomfiture. The famous notice had now been taken down to be placed among the treasures of the freshman class. But another hung in its place.

Laura's heart lost a beat and she caught Nancy's arm closer as they read:

"The dean wishes to speak to the students in the concert hall immediately after luncheon."

"That's us, I guess," said Nancy crisply.

Half an hour later, the dean took her place at the reading desk, in the concert hall, and glanced from row to row of expectant girls' faces.

'For the past two years," she began, "the faculty have watched with displeasure the manifestations of an increasing spirit of lawlessness in the freshman-sophomore conflicts. This year that spirit has shown itself in a still more objectionable form. Last night a member of the freshman class passed the line where legitimate amusement ends and vanadlism begins. The damage inflicted by that act of vandalism is, as it happens, but slight; yet the willingness on the part of a student to run the risk of damaging college property is serious. The faculty have determined to bring the seriousness of that offense home to the mind of the offender.

"There are two courses open to that student. She can await the action of the faculty, who will spare no effort in their search for the offender, or she can save heself and others the discomfort, humiliation, and possible injustice of such a search by presenting herself before the faculty in my office immediately after this meeting."

As soon as the dean had left the room, the students surged out into the aisles and through the door.

As the freshman ranks—always the last to leave the room—passed into the hall, a little figure detached itself from the crowd and hurried away toward the dean's office. At once the whole class turned and straggled after her. Some tried to persuade her not to go, and some even tried to hold her back; but Laura hurried on without a word. At the dean's door she paused, and her friends hung around her with distressed faces. She raised her hand to knock. Then suddenly she turned with twinkling eyes.

"You needn't look as if it were a funeral," she said. "I'm not dead yet.

She knocked and went into the room. Before the door closed behind her, her classmates caught an appalling glimpse of a double row of faces of the faculty.

Inside, the girl's gray eyes swept the circle of faces.

"You have a message from the class, Miss Starr?" the dean asked pleasantly.

"No, Miss Moore. I just wanted to say that I'm the one that got into the organ last night."

"Is it possible?" The dean looked at Laura with perplexity. "You are the president of the class, are you not?"

The blood flew to Laura's face.

"It did not occur to you that you might injure the organ?" asked the dean.

"Yes, Miss Moore, it did." Laura answered timidly but quite distinctly.

The dean's expression grew sterner. "And you were willing to take that risk?"

"I—I had to." She looked round the room as if apologizing for an answer that must seem both meaningless and irritating.

"I don't understand. Can you explain yourself?"

"I—I— There isn't any explanation that makes any difference. I just did it. I'm very sorry that I broke the organ."

In another moment Laura was dismissed. As she left the room an envelope was handed to her. She flew along the corridor and up the stairs. Shutting her door behind her, she leaned her back against it, and with a beating heart opened the sealed envelope

As she read, all the colour faded from her cheeks.

"I'm suspended! I'm disgraced at home!"

Meanwhile in the dean's office there had been some debate.

"There's something about this that we don't understand," said a gray-haired woman with keen eyes. "Laura Starr is not the lawless kind. And what could she have meant by 'she had to'?"

At that instant a timid knock sounded at the door. The secretary opened the door and two shrinking freshmen sidled in and flattened themselves against the wall. The faculty were somewhat astonished at this intrusion, but the dean smiled at the girls.

They both rushed into speech at once, and then, abashed at the confusion of their own voices, as suddenly broke off.

"Will you begin, Miss Lowry?" the dean suggested.

Nancy collected herself and began to speak with gasps and breaks, but with a whole-hearted earnestness.

"It's about getting into the organ," she said. "You see, it was the whole class that did it, not just Laura Starr. I mean, it was the whole class that voted to have some one do it; but some of the girls spoke against it. Laura spoke against it more strongly than anyone else. But we voted to, just the same. And then we drew lots to see who should get into the organ, and it was Laura. So, of course, she had to do it."

"Yes, she had to, you see," said Frances Marcy. "If the class was going to have some one do it, anyway, of course she couldn't say she would not be the one."

"And so, Miss Moore, the class sent us to say," Nancy went on eagerly, "that we ought all to take the blame, not just Laura."

At that moment Margaret Grey was knocking at Laura's door upstairs. She entered to find Laura sitting tense and stricken on the edge of her little white bed. Her mouth and chin were set in firm, straight lines, but there was a look of misery in her eyes. She pointed to the sheet of paper spread out on the desk.

"I'm suspended," she said. "I'm—I'm—disgraced—at—home."

Margaret took the rigid little figure into her arms and tried to persuade her that there was still hope. The committee of the class were with the faculty at that moment, she told her; the faculty would surely reconsider.

"The girls are dear to try," Laura said hopelessly. "But of course they can't make any real difference. Because, after all I did do it, you know."

Fifteen minutes later Margaret went to the door in answer to a knock and came back to Laura with a note in her hand.

"To the President of the Freshman Class,'" she read aloud from the envelope. "O Laura! It's from the faculty! They've changed their minds."

Laura took the envelope and tore it open with trembling fingers. The two girls read together:

"In consideration of certain circumstances of Miss Starr's act that have been brought to the attention of the faculty by a committee of the freshman class, the faculty have concluded that the blame for that act should rest upon the whole class. They have, therefore, reconsidered their action of this morning and have. instead, decided to impose a penalty that shall fall equally on all the members of the class. By this action, the class is deprived of its privilege of having a class banquet."

The two girls stared at each other.

"The class banquet!" Laura gasped. "The class can't have a banquet! And all on my account!"

For the first time since she left the dean's office, Laura broke down and sobbed. She flung herself on the bed and would not be consoled. Then suddenly she stopped crying and sat up.

"Go tell Nancy to post a notice right away of a class meeting at"—she glanced at the clock—"at four o'clock. And then hustle around and see that the whole class is there."

Margaret hurried away.

Soon after four o'clock a meeting of the freshman class was in progress. The vice president was presiding and the president was speaking.

"You were trumps to go and take the blame," she said. "But it isn't right for them to punish everyone, when I was the only one that did anything. And anyway, you can't give up the class banquet. Why, that is more fun than anything else in the whole year! It would be better for them to suspend me twice over than to take away the banquet."

Several girls were on their feet, demanding to be heard, and at this point Laura's neighbour, feeling that sometimes the law of force is justified, laid hands on Laura and pulled her violently down. The vice president did not hesitate to seize the opportunity, and gave the floor to Nancy Lowry.

"As for the fun," she said, with a chuckle, "I rather think a banquet would be tame after the really entertaining time that, thanks to our president, we had in the bulletin-board corridor before breakfast this morning."

A storm of laughter and applause interrupted her. Then she went on: "And as for the penalty, I rather think we deserve it, fair and square. And I move, Madam Chairman, that we pay the penalty without complaining."

The motion was put through with a rush. The little president, with pink cheeks and serene gray eyes, once more took the chair, and the meeting adjourned.

She: "Henry, dear, is there anything greater than love?"

Henry: "Nothing, dear; in all the wide, wide world — where's my supper?"

An old Irishwoman wanted to cross the road at Hyde Park corner, but was scared of the traffic.

A policeman came to the rescue. "It's all right," he assured her. "When you see the red light, that red's for England, so don't go. But when you see the green, that's for Ireland. You can cross then, and not a thing will touch you."

She crossed on the green light, then waited till it was green again and came back to thank the officer. "It was very kind of you to explain it so nicely," she said, "and, glory be, you don't give much time for the Orangemen to get across."

BALANCE WHEEL OF OLD WATCH TRAVELS ENORMOUS DISTANCE

By The Official Rumour-Runner-Downer

THE other day the dailies carried a story that told of the immense distance the total mileage of a fleet of trucks amounted to, but, considering the size of a truck, this was a mere jaunt compared with the efforts of the tiny balance wheel of a watch.

An old-time key-wind watch was brought into Percy Gilroy's for some repairs and while he was working on it yesterday afternoon and telling us the above story and commenting on how slightly the movement of this watch was worn, we decided to do a little figuring.

The watch was estimated to be 65 years old; the circumference of the balance wheel, which makes five turns a second, was 2½ inches. There are 3600 seconds in an hour and 86,400 in a day. There being 365¼ days in a year, and 65 years to go, we scribbled over nearly all the scrap paper in the office to estimate that if this balance wheel had been going forward all these six decades and a half, it would have covered 404,710.4 miles, or just about completing 16 laps around the world. Then suppose you figure out how the watch actually travelled on the person of its owner and add that!

The watch was an 18-size, seven-jewel movement, and the wear on the bearings was about invisible. Barring accidents, it should be good for another 400,000 miles or so.

Solemn Rites Celebrated At St. Mary's on Pentecost

Young Children Made First Communion.—Forty Hours' Devotion Concluded Tuesday Evening.

On Pentecost Sunday, May 16th, a number of children, varying in age from six to seven years, received their first Holy Communion at the eight o'clock mass in St. Mary's church. It was a most impressive scene and carried back in memory many of those present to that eventful occasion when they themselves received their Eucharistic God for the first time. The little girls were dressed in white, with long veils. The boys wore blue suits with white ribbons on their arm.

During the mass appropriate music and hymns were sung by the choir under the direction of Rev. Sister M. Pius, organist.

After the solemn High Mass, the beautiful devotions of the Forty Hours' Devotion opened with a procession of the Blessed Sacrament, duing which the choir rendered the Pange, Lingua, Panis Angelicus, and the Litany of the Saints. The devotions continued until Tuesday evening when the solemn exercises closed with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Appropriate sermons were delivered by the Rev. E. M. Leacy, P.P., Deseronto; Rev. P. J. Coyle, P.P., Morrisburg, and Rev. M. E. James, P.P., of Cardinal. Other priests assisting Rev. Father Keaney were Very. Rev. Dean Hanley, P.P., Brockville; Rev. C. J. Mea, P.P., Prescott; Rev. J. H. Bougie, P.P., Crysler; Rev. J. Shannon, P.P., Spencerville; Rev. E. Briceland, Prescott, and Rev. Francis Lefebvre, Crysler.

AT THE COMMUNITY THEATRE.

Errol Flynn, the young Irish actor who soared to fame in a series of costume dramas, is playing his first "civilian" leading role in "Green Light," showing Friday and Saturday at the Community Theatre.

Flynn dons ordinary modern attire for the first time on the screen in his role of a young surgeon who assumes the blame for a tragic mistake made by a fellow-surgeon, and goes into seclusion to develop a serum against the dreaded spotted fever.

A large and distinguished cast, headed by Anita Louise, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Henry O'Neill and Margaret Lindsay, supports the star in this film version of Lloyd C. Douglas' noted novel.
