TERRIFIC EXPLOSION IN OTTAWA

Terrific explosions of sewer gas caused serious damage in Ottawa East, Sandy Hill and New Edinburgh at noon Wednesday. Houses wrecked, people seriously injured, manhole tops blown sky high and telephones out of commission were some of the consequences of the explosions.

The seat of the most serious trouble was Range Road and Somerset street east, where a building is in danger of collapse and where mains along the streets were blown out.

People in the vicinity were put in a state of terror, and immediately after a series of loud reports, they rushed frantically about, getting out of the danger zone.

St. Martins Anglican Church, in New Edinburgh, a small stone structure, was completely wrecked inside pews, organ, pulpit, lights and every thing else being piled up inside a mass of wreckage. The organ alone worth nearly $1,000, and a new front recently presented to the church, was destroyed.

New Edinburgh, particularly on Creighton st., felt the worst force of the explosion. Fumes were pouring from two manholes at the corner of Creighton st. and St. Patrick st. bridge, a few minutes after a reporter visited the locality. Another manhole was blown into the air with a loud explosion at the corner of Creighton and Dalhousie streets.

Farther down Creighton, in the vicinity of St. Martins Church, the earth had been heaved up on boulevards by the force of the explosions. Windows were shattered in many houses along the street.

H. S. PRINCIPAL DIES

Horatio Loucks, aged 58, principal of Morewood High School, died suddenly at his home in Morewood at 11.30 p.m. Sunday. He attended church Sunday evening and took his place in the choir. When returning home he took a weak spell and Dr. Gormely of Crysler was sent for, but Mr. Loucks expired about five minutes after the doctor's arrival.

Mr. Loucks had been principal of Morewood Continuation School for 29 years, with the exception of one year spent as first principal of the new Nepean High School at Westboro. He secured his B.A. degree extramurally through Queens University.

Mr. Loucks was born in Williamsburg township 58 years ago. He received his early education at Williamsburg and later attended Morrisburg Collegiate, from which he graduated with a first class certificate. From there he went to the Faculty of Education at Hamilton, where he received his teacher's certificate. After receiving this certificate, he taught one year at Bethune Bush, two years at Farrans Point and one year at Aultsville, before coming to Morewood.

For the past 29 years, Mr. Loucks has taught in Morewood, holding with great distinction the pricipalship of the Public school, but being anxious that Morewood should have better educational facilities, he started a continuation school of which he was also principal, and eventually was the means of having the present High school established, which stands as a memorial to his untiring effforts in the cause of education. Always anxious that his pupils should have the best, he took extra-mural work from Queens University, Kingston, and received his Bachelor of Arts degree.

The funeral, which was largely attened by people from all walks of life, was held on Wednesday May 29th, from the United Church, Morewood, at 2 p.m. A touching feature was the marching of the pupils of the High School to the church, where they formed a bodyguard from the street to the church.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, formerly Miss Ethel Stubbs of Aultsville, also three sons, Hugh H. principal of Woodvale Public school; Dean H., principal of Bear Brook Public school; Merrill at home, and five daughters, Norma E., teaching at Westboro; Nona, who has been nursing at Metcalfe; Alta V. Blanche I. and Dora T. at home. Besides his own family, he leaves his aged mother, Mrs. Alta V. Loucks in the old home at Williamsburg, also four brothers and one sister.

Amongst the mourners were Mr. Joseph Stubbs, Mr. and Mrs. C.C. Stubbs and daughter Doris, Morrisburg; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shaver of Aultsville; Miss Lottie Stubbs and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Pitt, Woodlands Mr. Alvin Crawford, Ottawa; Revs. Dr. G. Watt-Smith, Vars; W.G. Tabb, rector of Bear Brook and T. P. Shaver, Maynard.

June 9. Lesson X—The Story of the Rechabites—Jeremiah 35: 5-11. Golden Text—We will drink no wine.—Jeremiah 35: 6.

ANALYSIS.

I. THE TESTING OF THE RECHABITES,
II. THEIR EXAMPLE URGED AS A LESSON TO THE MEN OF JUDAH, vs. 15-19.

INTRODUCTION—It will be remembered that Jehoiakim was the second son of Josiah to come to the throne of Judah, succeeding his unfortunate brother, Jehoahaz (or Shal'um), who had been taken captive to Egypt, ch. 22: 10-12; 2 Kings 23: 31-34. Of Jehoiakim nothing good is recorded "He did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord." Jeremiah denounces his crimes in strong language in ch. 22: 13-19. He had paid a high price for his elevation to the throne by the Egyptian King Pharaoh-nechoh, which he exacted from the people by taxation, 2 Kings 23: 35; 2 Chron. 36: 3, 4. While very little is told us of his reign in the books of history we learn from frequent declarations of Jeremiah, whose prophetic ministry continued through its whole extent, that the old practices of idolatry which had been banished by Josiah were restored, with all their abominations, that Baal and Ashtoreth were worshipped even in the temple precincts, that infant sacrifices were offered to Moloch in the valley of Hinnom, and incense was burned on the house-tops to the star gods. The people, Jeremiah says, "are turned back to the iniquities of their forefathers." So widespread is this evil in the days of Jehoiakim that he says again, "For according to the number of thy cities were thy gods, O Judah; and according to the number of the streets of Jerusalem have ye set up altars . . . to burn incense to Baal," ch. 11: 10-13. There was need for plain words to be spoken against this monstrous evil, and here, in the Lesson of today, Jeremiah contrasts the fidelity of the Rechabites to their ancestral tradition with the apostasy of the men of Judah from the pure service of the God of their fathers.

I. THE TESTING OF THE RECHABITES,

The Rechabites were dwellers in tents like the wilderness Arabs. They seem to have been a branch of the Kenites (1 Chron. 2: 55) with whom Moses had lived centuries before in the land of Midian (see Judges 1:16), and who had come to live with the people of Judah, Num. 10: 29-32. They were worshippers of Jehovah, and were evidently warmly and loyally attached to the religion and to the customs of their fathers. Ordinarily they lived a nomad life, not cultivating the land, but pasturing their flocks and herds in open, unoccupied parts of the country. At this time, when a Chaldean army was invading the land, they had come into Jerusalem for safety, and had apparently been permitted to pitch their tents in some open space within the city walls, v. 11.

Jeremiah is commanded to give them wine to drink (v. 2). No doubt he is quite sure when he does this that the Rechabites will not break the law of their tribe. But he applies the test in order, by their example, to convince the men of Judah of their own infidelity. He brings them into the house of the Lord, "into one of the rooms erected round the temple courts," and sets before them bowls of wine. Their reply is what he had expected, "We will drink no wine," vs. 3-6.

Jonadab, the son of Rechab, is mentioned in 2 Kings 10: 15-28 as one of those who supported Jehu in his revolt against the kings of the house of Ahab, and who seems to have approved the bloody deeds with which Jehu sought, not only to destroy all the king's house, but also all the worshippers of Baal. He shared Jehu's "zeal for the Lord," which, according to the ideas and practices of that time, sought to overcome a false religion by deeds of bloody violence. See Hosea's condemnation of these deeds a hundred years later, Hosea 1: 4.

Jonadab's commands were no doubt in continuance of the ancient custom of his people. They required not only abstinence from wine, but also that the people should not build houses, nor cultivate the land. They regarded, perhaps, the confined life of the cities and towns and the hard labor of the fields as a departure from the simplicity, purity, and comparative health of the open air tent life of their ancestors. (See vs. 6-10.)

II. THEIR EXAMPLE URGED AS A LESSON TO THE MEN OF JUDAH, vs. 15-19.

The prophet compares this steadfast loyalty of the Rechabites with the indifference of the men of Jerusalem and Judah to the words of the Lord spoken to them by their prophets. The prophets of Israel and Judah had spoken both against the worships of false gods and against evildoing of every kind, vs. 14, 15. Compare Jeremiah's own denunciation of idolatry in chs. 2, 3 and 10, and of other forms of evildoing in chs. 7, 9, 22, etc.

It is because of this indifference and disobedience, the prophet declares, that God is about to bring upon Judah the great calamities which he has foretold, v. 17. And because of their obedience God will bestow such blessing upon the Rechabites that that tribe shall never want a man to stand before him. How this promise was fulfilled to them in their subsequent history we do not know. One hundred and fifty and more years later a member of this tribe, Malchiah, the son of Rechab, helped Nehemiah rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, Neh. 3: 14. The first historian of the Christian church, Hegesippus (quoted by Eusebius), writing in the second century A.D., mentions "priests and sons of Rechab" as living in New Testament times.

The true sons of Rechab, or Rechabites, however, are those in every age who are willing for conscience sake to stand apart from customs of their time, and to abstain from indulgences of any kind which they believe to be harmful, who preserve with high resolve and pure motive, clean and healthy traditions of a past of which they are not ashamed.

The Well-to-do Farmer

Quebec Soleil (Lib.). It is false to say that agriculture doesn't pay, when we compare it with other occupations and professions. We believe on the contrary that the cultivator has had a good year, when ,after having brought up and educated his children, he has something left at the end. Very few salaried people can say as much. We will not go so far as to say that farming really makes anybody rich, at least in the East of Canada; but we can state that, in normal times, it gives a man comfort and security. Thousands of our farmers who sometimes complain of their lot are much more comfortably situated, though they may not know it, than four-fifths of the rest of the world.

The Grain Surplus

Le Devoir (Ind.): During the War an abundance of wheat was blessed by everybody. In these days some people consider that it has its inconveniences, from the point of view of the price. Man is never content: either it rains too much or it doesn't rain enough; either the harvest is poor or it is too good, which does not prevent, in many countries,—as in Britain, in the mining districts,—thousands of peopde suffering from hunger, despite the huge crops of the last twelve months.

Farm Notes

Lily Pools

Lily pools range from a simple tub let into the ground, to cement and stone tanks. Small lakes and streams in and through the garden are usually outside the range of the amateur gardener. It is possible, however, in many gardens, to have a small pool, particularly where running water is obtainable.

Of course, if there is a particularly moist spot in the garden, the location of such a pool is not difficult to select. But failing this, an artificial pool can easily be made at comparatively small cost. If there is a clayey sub-soil, nothing further than the excavation of the pool and puddling the bottom and sides with clay need be done. If clay is not present, the bottom and sides must be cemented. In either case, it will be well to dig deeply enough to allow of 12 to 18 inches of good holding loam being distributed over its bed, and then leave room for a depth of 2½ feet of water in its centre, gradually decreasing its depth to 9 inches or less at the sides. A broad border should surround the pool for the culture of plants which love moisture but which are not truly aquatic. A few large, irregular stones partly embedded in this border will form an excellent rockery whereon moisture-loving Alpine plants may be grown if desired. Small tubs may be inserted in the pool containing lily roots, so that they may easily be removed for winter storage. A few goldfish in the pool will add charm and prevent the pool from becoming a breeding ground for the mosquito. Of course, some provision must be made for the supplying of fresh water to the pool and also overflow pipes to carry off the surplus water. Miniature pools may be formed by sinking halves of large barrels in the ground, and if a few nails are driven in near their tops and lumps of coke, stones or clinkers covered with cement are attached there, pretty little decorative pools may be formed. (Rev. G. W. Tebbs, before the Ontario Horticultural Association.)

The Illustration Stations

Answering a question about the operation of the illustration stations supervised by the Experimental Farms Branch, asked by a member of Parliament in the House of Commons, the Hon. Dr. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, explained that the Government does not operate the 186 illustration stations distributed over Canada, but the Department does give the operators some assistance. He said, "The illustration area of man's farm includes only that part of it fronting on a well-travelled road and varies in area from eight or ten to forty acres. For the privilege of saying what crops shall be grown, what rotation shall be followed and how and when cultural operations shall be performed, the Department pays the owner or operator a small amount ($5 per acre) each year. The purpose of these stations is to demonstrate the varieties of the different crops, the cultural methods and the rotations that have been found to give the best results on an experimental farm or station where conditions are judged to be similar to those which maintain on the illustration station under consideration.

"The crops harvested off these illustration stations are, of course, the property of the men operating them."

The Storing of Eggs

This is the season of heavy egg production when stocks not required to meet the daily demands are going into cold storage to be brought out for use when production is low. The storing of eggs is greatly improved in recent years—so much so, indeed, that stored eggs are no longer looked upon with suspicion and doubt. Eggs that go into storage have to be submitted to the candling process which determines definitely their quality. Only those that are in prime condition are ever put away in storage quarters. The modern cold storage for eggs is a highly sanitary place not only in its ceanliness but also by reason of the manner in which it is maintained. The temperature is held at all times close to the frost line and of such consistency with respect to moisture as to reduce evaporation to the smallest degree. Not only are the eggs graded when put in, but the regulations governing eggs, covered by the Live Stock and Live Stock Products Act, administered by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, require that they should again be graded when they are brought from the storage chamber to go into commerce.

The usual egg cold storage in Canada is what is known as dry cold storage into which eggs are placed in their natural state. In Western Canada many of the eggs are put through an additional process before being placed in the storage quarters. The fresh eggs are immersed for an instant in hot oil which not only sterilizes but seals up the shell, preventing evaporation from within and contamination from without. After treatment in this way the eggs are put through a sandblast machine, which removes the excess oil and restores the bloom of a fresh egg. They are then cold stored in the usual way. With the marketing of only graded eggs, whether fresh from the farms or out of storage, the losses from bad eggs has been almost eliminated in egg merchandising.

A Disease of the Hyacinth

The hyacinth bulb is subject to a disease that, when once admitted, does much damage to the plantation. It is especially important in commercial fields for its exceedingly destructive effect upon the plants. Under favourable conditions it spreads from bulb to bulb until the whole plantation is destroyed. The disease known as Yellow Disease is described in a new pamphlet numbered 104 of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, written by Mr. F. L. Drayton, plant pathologist, who made a study of this and other diseases of bulbs in Holland a year or so ago.

The disease appears first as a yellowing of the tips of the leaves which afterwards dry up. It spreads to the bulb, which soon begins to decay at the base, destroying its usefulness either for planting in the garden or forcing in the house. Certain varieties are less subject than others to attack. Among the most resistant are said to be Gertrude, Grand Maitre, King of the Blues, King of the Yellows and Yellowhammer. The disease is recognized as a serious one in Holland, where Mr. Drayton observed the means that are used to secure control. Specially-trained men are employed by the growers to inspect the fields during the growing season. Bulbs showing disease are each covered with a pot without a hole in the bottom and the plants near by are sprayed with a fungicidal solution such as a five per cent. strength of formaldehyde. The bulbs under the pots are allowed to remain until the crop is harvested when the diseased ones are destroyed by burning. Other practices for control are described in the pamphlet which shows by illustration the appearance of a diseased bulb cut crosswise and lengthwise. (Issued by the Director of Publicity, Dom. Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa, Ont.)

Canadian Air Mail Plane Establishes World's Record

Canada, in proportion to her size, is making greater practical use of aircraft than any other country and the "work" records of Canadian airplanes are regarded as even more important contributions to the advancement of aviation than the endurance and other stunt achievements of other countries.

Canada's latest and most impressive practical record in air is in speedy delivery of air mail and Capt. D. S. Bondurant, pilot for Canadian Airways, as a result of a record flight between Toronto and Montreal, now holds the world's air mail speed record.

Capt. Bondurant, flying a Fairchild "71", powered by a Pratt & Whitney Wasp engine, on March 21st, covered the 340 miles from Toronto to Montreal in just one hour and forty-four minutes, and this has now been established as the world's fastest air mail flight.

Remarkable as this time is, Capt. Bondurant would have bettered it, but for fog encountered a little over 100 miles from Montreal. Up to this point he had flown 215 miles in just 60 minutes, maintaining a speed of over 3½ miles a minute.

Throughout the record-breaking flight Capt. Bondurant reported perfect performance from his plane which was fueled with Imperial Aeroplane Spirits and lubricated with Marvelube Motor Oil.

Undesirable Immigrants

Winnipeg Liberte (Ind.): (Central European immigration in the West is creating an undesirable element in the urban centres.) We are faced with a definite task—to keep a watch on these dangerous groups and to transform them into desirable elements. Now that we have been subjected to this type of immigration, we must absorb it, and not let ourselves be absorbed by it; it is incumbent on us to communicate our sense of order to it, instead of allowing ourselves to be dragged along in their disorder; we must make them understand that when they changed their hemisphere they also changed their atmosphere. Too many colonists make the mistake, when they come to Canada, of trying to bring their countries with them, instead of accepting ours.

The Return of the Exiles

Le Monde Ouvrier (Ind.): Why all the weeping and wailing over the lot of our brothers who live under the sunshine of the Stars and Stripes, and who live better than any of us here do, in the land of our ancestors? . . . If we sometimes hear of the unfortunate conditions in which they live—and in some places they certainly know how to exploit them systematically—that is no reason why we should cry out on the housetops that our people find life untenable with our neighbors, that they live in misery and would be happy and content to find themselves once again on their own land in the village where they were born. We admit that sometimes some of them do not succeed as they should, and that homesickness—which is their greatest foe—becomes a powerful factor in their desire to return home, but to conclude from this that Canadians would do much better to return home in a body, is far from the fact, especially when we compare the conditions which have prevailed for some years in this "prosperous" Canada of ours.

"Pa, what is a rare volume?" asked Clarence.

"It's a book that comes back after you have loaned it," replied Pa.

An insane person is just like a sane one—only more so.—Dr. Edna Heibreder.

BOOK NEWS
by Arthur Kent

"White Narcissus," by Raymond Knister. (MacMillan's, Toronto. $2)

This is one of the most significant Canadian novels yet written. It contains many of the elements of greatness; in places it rises to poetic heights. But it is an unsatisfactory book.

In "White Narcissus" Knister found a vehicle that might at once have placed him in the ranks of the world's important writers and secured him recognitio nas such. Unfortunately, he will probably have to wait for this distinction.

The book is essentially tragic. Its figures are sombre and heavily drawn. The circumstances with which it deals are inevitably calamatous. Chapter by chapter the story goes forward towards but one logical conclusion. Knister pointed this out in every sentence he penned. Swiftly, as the story unfolds, the dramatic interest grows to the point of tensity. The last chapter is a complete let-down of everything that precedes.

It is a hard thing to understand why Knister tacked onto his story a happy, conventional, mechanical conclusion. It is nearly inconceivable that the man who wrote as he writes and conceived the background and characters of "White Narcissus" could make such a mistake.

The book proves, however, that Knister is a writer of unusual calibre. It promises that he will write books that will live longer than their author. Anyone interested in the progress of Canadian letters, such as they are, should read "White Narcissus."

"Hieronymus Fracastorius and His Poetical and Prose Works on Syphilis," by the Honourable William Renwick Riddell, LL.D., D.C.L., F.R.H.S., etc., President Canadian Social Hygiene Council. Published by the MacMillan's in Canada. Price, $3.00.)

This, the most recent literary work of the distinguished and versatile Mr. Justice Riddell is appropriately dedicated to "Dr. Gordon Bates and the Staff of the Canadian Social Hygient Council."

"I, as a somewhat diligent student of mediaeval Philosophy, had read the poems of Fracastorius," the author stated in his preface, "and had admired his mastery of Latin and his skill in moulding the uncouth terminology of early medicine and philozophy into smoothly-flowing hexameters; but I had not seen any advantage in paying attention to the content rather than the form. Reading his poetry, I thought it well to read his prose as well, and, rather to my astonishment, I found a mine of entertainment in his prose works also. The shrewd guesses and practicality of Fracastorius must strike every reader; while no student of the history of medicine can afford to leave him unread."

"If You Know What I Mean," by Joseph Easton MacDougall. (MacMillan's, Toronto. $2.00.)

MacDougall, as the editor of "Goblin," is no stranger to the Canadian public but the MacDougall who presents the verses in this volume is far more refreshing than we believed any Canadian writter to be. Books of verse, it is understand, are not usually profitable commercially, but this one deserves, and will probablyhave, a wide sale.

There is no pretense about either the book or writer. The work is described on the cover as "nonsense verse." It is that, of course, but more. Some of the rhymes are decidedly clever. All but one or two are witty and mirth-provoking. A number are exceptionally penetrating and contain comments of a pungent flavor on the lighter side of human endeavor.

Smiles

Will you smile and make others happy, or be crabbed and make everybody miserable? You can live among flowers and singing birds if you will. The amount of happiness which you can produce is incalculable, if you will only show a siling face, and speak pleasant words.

Activity may lead to evil, but inactivity cannot be led to good.

Is your daughter enjoying life?

IT is just in her "teen age" that a girl should be getting the most fun out of life!—Yet so often it happens that girls of sixteen-to-twenty have outgrown their strength—are quickly tired, pale, nervous, generally run-down and unhappy!

These are sure signs of anaemia, a condition that results from thin, worn-out, under-nourished blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have corrected this in thousands of girls. Here is the actual experience of Mrs. Ben Nicholas of Erleau, Ont.

"My daughter was in a run-down state. She was easily tired and did not wish to associate with others. As this was unnatural, I began giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they soon made a strong healthy girl of her. Now she is as happy a girl as one would wish to see."

Start your daughter on this proven treatment now by buying Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at your druggist's or any dealer in medicine or by mail, 50 cents, postpaid, from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. 8-35

WHAT THIS COUNTRY NEEDS

—More chicken houses and fewer road houses.
—More cool heads and warm hearts.
—More babies and fewer poodles.
—Less lawmakers, less law breakers.
—Fewer people who want their country to do something for them.

There is one verse in the Bible the school boy knows to be true. "Much study is a weariness to the flesh."

FIRE WHEN READY

Chief Petty Officer: "The enemy are as thick as peas. What shall we do?"

Officer of the Deck: "Shell them, you idiot; shell them!"

Of course it is agreed that only a few more years and airplanes for everybody will be as common as motor cars are now, and we often wonder if there will be as much uncertainty about the ownership of parachutes as there is about umbrellas now.

A flapper refers to her skirt as her "charm string."

Housewife—Don't bring me any more of that horrid milk. It's positively blue!

Milkman—It ain't my fault, lady. It's these long, dull evenings as makes the cows depressed.

Only your doctor is interested in how you feel; others who ask do so from custom.

If you're determined to be good-natured you must expect to be imposed upon.

New times call for new methods. What once got by may not now get buyers.

Visitor: "And how old are you, Bobbie?"

Bobbie: "I'm just at the awakward age."

Visitor: "Really? And what do you call the awkward age?"

Bobbie (bitterly): "I'm too old to cry and too young to swear."

The farmer's demand, in brief: "Manufacturers rob the consumers; we want a law that will enable us to do it too."

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?

"Waiter, Why is it that there is a trouser button in my soup?"

"I do not know, sir. We employ only female help."

Most men find it the hardest thing in the world to come up to an enemy and say "Let's let bygones be bygones." But when he does it shows a big heart and a fine spirit.

A little girl, attending an Episcopal Church for the first time, was amazed to see all kneel suddenly. She asked her mother what they were going to do. Her mother replied, "hush, they're going to say their prayers."

"What, with their clothes on?"

Another good way to save money is to make more than you have time to spend.

We could tell you some more jokes, but what's the use? You would only laugh at them.

A man inherits his religious beliefs; his religious prejudices are acquired.

We may not know it, but we're being checked up all the time—the neighbors are busy when we least suspect it.

Most everybody thinks there is a social law made just to embarass them.

The difference between a fool and an idiot is the fool can help it but won't.

Rhodes Memorial Opened at Oxford

Designed in Honor of the Founder of University Fund

Oxford, Eng.—The Rhodes House, designed as a memorial to Cecil John Rhodes, founder of the Rhodes scholarships, was opened recently by Sir Otto Beit, a trustee of the Rhodes fund, in the presence of 300 invited guests and Oxford University authorities.

At the same time Sir Otto formally presented the library to the university as a branch of Rhodelian Library.

Viscount Grey, chancellor of the university, accepted the gift in a brief speech.

Te building is an imposing structure on South Parks Road, close to Keble College, the University Museum and the School of Forestry. It will not only furnish living quarters for F. A. Wylie, Oxford secretary to the Rhodes trust, but will also serve as a centre for the activities centring around the trust and the Rhodes scholarships, which celebrate their twenty-fifth anniversary this summer.

In the small dome in the roof are symbols representing the dominions which compose the British empire. Upon the walls will be carved the names of Rhodes scholars who have deserved well of their country, whether that country be a Dominion of the British empire, Germany or the United States. Rhodes, the Empire builder, desired above all that those who benefitted by his scholarships should devote themselves to public service.

At the entrance of the building, the names and countries of all Rhodes scholars who lost their lives in the World War have been carved.

Science and Health

"The old cry used to be: 'The greatest happiness of the greatest number', to-day the cry has been changed to the greatest health of the greatest number; take care of the health and the happiness will take care of itself," writes Professor D. Fraser Harris in the Clarion.

"The young people should not be brought up to believe that science does not concern itself with the practical details of our personal daily lives. She teaches us a great deal about ourselves, our food, our clothes, our sleep and so forth. The science of personal hygiene is intensely practical, it tells us, for instance, why we must use hot water and soap to wash our skins, why even hot water alone is not enough.

"A scientific training is one of the most powerful character-builders there is. For science is not antagonistic to the cultivation of artistic taste or to the highest conceptions of ethics. The notion that 'science' and 'materialism' are synonymous is quite out of date.

"Science teaches us reverence and humility—reverence for the beauty in the Universe and humility in presence of its mystery. For although we know so much about the Universe there is plenty of mystery in it—the mystery, for instance, of the origin and maintenance of life ,and the beauty of numberless living mechanisms so perfectly adapted for their purposes or functions.

"Science—reverent science—fosters a love of beauty. Keats said that Newton, by explaining the colors of the rainbow, had destroyed its beauty. But Keats was very young when he said that. For the adequately instructed mind, the man of science had added to the sensuous beauty of the rainbow the intellectual beauty of a matheratical demonstration. The scent of the lily would be no less delightful to me if some day I should come to know the chemical formula for the substance of the perfume.

"Science teaches us that, as in Peter's vision, there is 'nothing common or unclean'. Science teaches us that the disease-bringing microbes and the stinking, slimy fungus, the parasitic worms and the 'devil-fish' must be studied with as much impartiality and detachment as the lily, the rose, the bird of paradise or the human body."

Hands

Under the still, sequestering snow
The finger-roots begin to grow,
And in the darkness there is mirth.
They will be reaching, soon,
Those green hands out of earth.

And we who seem so fixed and deep,
As though no change had now begun,
Shall we not reach with quickened hands
To claim our yellow share of sun?

Let us have faith that right makes might ,and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Abraham Lincoln.

Children and the Movies

Le Monde Ouvrier (Ind.): The law prohibiting children under sixteen to attend the movies, whether they are accompanied or not, is a ridiculous law, as it is broken thousands of times every day in the year, for want of being able to apply it. How are you going to expect a ticket-seller at the door of a picture-house, especially when there is a crowd, to notice whether a young girl is under sixteen or not? If he stops her he holds up the entrance of others and hurts his employer's business and even then—will the young lady have her birth certificate in her pocket? What is he to do? Let her in or stop her? Whatever he does, his livelihood—generally a very poor one at that—will be at stake. What would you do?

BABY'S OWN TABLETS WIN GREAT PRAISE

Many Mothers Always Keep Them in the House.

Thousands of mothers state that they know of no other medicine for little ones to equal Baby's Own Tablets—that they always keep the Tablets in the home as a preventive of childhood ailments, or if sickness does suddenly grip their little ones they feel safe with such a remedy at hand.

Concerning the use of the Tablets Mrs. Danot Ploudre, Tingwick, Que., writes:—"I have nothing but praise for Baby's Own Tablets. They are the only medicine I have ever given my two little ones, and I am glad to state that the Tablets have always kept them in perfect health. I feel so safe with the Tablets that I always keep a box in the house."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and thus banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fever and make the cutting of teeth painless. The Tablets are absolutely safe, being guaranteed free from all injurious drugs. They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25s a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Government Ships

La Patrie (Cons.): (Sir Henry Thornton, being asked what would happen if the Canadian Government Merchant Marine belonged to a private company, said: "It would immediately be put into liquidation.") Hon. H. H. Stevens has made the suggestion that some of the C. G. M. M. ships should be allotted the task of trying out the navigation conditions of Hudson Strait. If they succeed in bringing out some cargoes from Churchill, it will encourage other ships to go on this presumably dangerous route; if they perish, the destruction of the cargo will be a lott, but that of the ship will in reality be a gain. However, Mr. Dunning has no desire for such an experiment. He wants to give the Hudson Bay route a real chance of proving its utility. He is even entertaining the notion of having special ships built for the route, which makes us quail at the prospect of still more unprofitable expenditure, in keeping with this whole enterprise of the Hudson Bay route.

Rolling Stones Gather No Moss

Quebec Evenement (Cons.): If any of our French-Canadian brothers are thinking at the present time of going to seek their living in the United States, we would like to give them a word of counsel: this is no time to emigrate, not only because too many of our compatriots in New England are suffering from hardship and lack of work, but also because the Province of Quebec can count on a continual improvement in conditions which are already satisfactory. There are four times as much happiness and good fortune waiting for our people who go on cultivating their lands with perseverance as there would be for those who are going to embark elsewhere on the adventure of being happy.

The Mexican Revolution

Ottawa Droit (Ind.): President Portes Gil, in a public address, has said that he does not believe that the Catholic Church, as an institution, is responsible for the recent military revolution. He denounced certain Catholics, who, according to his statement, have committed reprehensible actions in certain States. But he praised the conduct of other Catholics who kept apart from the revolution. This is a praiseworthy appreciation. Portes Gil admits that the Catholic Church did not provoke the present revolution. If some of its members took part in it, even for religious motives, that would be no reason to throw the responsibility on the official authority of the Catholic Church. The position of the official authority in the present conflict has been one of absolute neutrality.

Leaven

A noted geologist is quoted as saying that "had a man been living during the changes that produced the coal he would not have suspected their progress," so slow was the mighty process. Neither do we suspect the progress of many a social movement in the world about us which in the centuries to come will be seen to have been of the utmost importance. The leaven of the kingdom works slowly and silently, but it works.

The civilized world today is run on the basis of a belief in promises.—Dwight W. Morrow.

HOW BABY SPECIALISTS TREAT CONSTIPATION

Constipation in babies and children is the cause of colic, bloating, skin disorders, etc. It weakens them, just as it does grown folks; makes them cross, feverish and fretful. But don't use grown folks' medicine with them, baby specialists advise. Ninety per cent. of them recommend just one preparation for constipation, colds and other ills of babies and children. They say Fletcher's Castoria. Millions of mothers have proved its merit during thirty years of use. Castoria is purely-vegetable, harmless and pleasant-tasting. Genuine Castoria always bears the Fletcher signature. Avoid imitations.

EDITORS COMING ON MONDAY JUNE 10

(Gananoque Reporter, May 23)

At a meeting of the Publicity Committee, held at the Town Hall last night, Mayor Wilson's suggestion of an International Editors' Day for Monday June 10th, was enthusiastically endorsed. It was conceded that this was not only a unique but a worth-while idea. St. Lawrence River development, tourist traffic and other subjects are matters of great importance, occupying attention on both sides of the boundary. Invitations will sent to editors in Northern New York, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, north-west as far as Peterboro and east as far as Cornwall. Already a number of prominent newspaper men from the cities mentioned have agreed to come here and address their fellows. Invitations will be mailed in a short time to all editors in the district mentioned. Arrangements for their entertainment are nearly completed. These include a complimentary sight-seeing 50-mile ramble among the Thousand Islands, a banquet at Blinkbonnie summer hotel, golf for those who want it and other features that will gladden even the hard heart of a newspaper man.

It was pointed out that Gananoque is easy of access. American editors can motor to Clayton, N.Y., and will be transported, free of cost through nine miles of beautiful island scenery to this town on the fine boats of the Yacht Edith Line. At the close of their visit they will be taken back to Clayton. Our Canadian brother editors will find the roads leading to Gananoque ideal for motor travel. We are situated on Provincial Highway No. 2, just midway between Toronto and Montreal—the only town with gateways wide open as a sign of welcome. The town is also reached by Canadian National Railways. The entertainment committee is preparing a programme that will make even a blase newspaper man sit up and take notice. They will know better what Gananoque hospitality means after they have been here for a few hours. They will also hear something interesting about the Old Home Week Celebration on August 3rd to 10th.

The Reporter joins with the Publicity Committee in the earnest wish that every editor in Northern New York and Eastern Ontario will lay aside the scissors and the paste-pot for this one glad day and be our guests. It is an opportunity, not only to see beautiful Gananoque and the matchless Thousand Islands clothed in their early garments of green, but to get acquainted with each other, promote international amity and get the viewpoint of others on questions affecting the welfare and happiness of peoples on both sides of the international boundary. Put a blue mark around the date on the calendar, Monday June 10th, and make a note on the scratch pad: "Nothing but death or jail will keep me away from Gananoque on June 10th".

THE LURE OF THE WEST

For centuries, down to the very dawn of history, the lure of the West has sounded its call. The history of this continent has but repeated old-world records of the steady drift of peoples westward in the path of the setting sun.

Today we are settled as people, but the urge is transmitted to individuals who in Canada find the Pacific Coast and its scenic marvels a never-failing lure.

Canadian National affords the ideal route, revealing the Canadian Rockies at their glorious best and, through steamship connections, placing the whole of the Coast, to mystic Alaska, at the convenience of the traveller.

It offers as well a pleasant stopover at Jasper Park Lodge, in the heart of the Canadian Rockies, and at Minaki in the delightful "Lake of the Woods" region, just east of Winnipeg where Minaki Lodge affords exceptional hospitality.

Full details from any Canadian National Agent.

How sweet the memory still,
But death has left a vacant chair
This world can never fill.

The World's Largest Sound System

The artist's conception of the world's largest and most complete sound system, installed in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto.
1. Royal York Hotel.
2. Amplifier, mixer and control panels and radio receiving sets, with bedroom scene in the background showing Headset and Radio Table.
3. The great nineteen foot sound projector horn used in the Banquet Hall.

The Royal York, the new Canadian Pacific Hotel in Toronto and the largest modern descendant of the Village Inn beneath the Union Jack, is being equipped with the most extensive centralized radio and public address system installation ever attempted in any part of the world. The equipment was designed and manufactured in the Radio and Telephone Laboratories of the Northern Electric Company, in Montreal and is now being installed in the hotel.

When the Royal York is declared officially opened on June 12th, this year in each of its twelve hundred bed rooms will be a radio outlet on the wall to which headphones may be attached, so that guests may enjoy one or two programs originating from anyone of five different sources. The Vice-Regal Suite will be equipped with specially designed loudspeakers having the most pleasing tone quality and an artistic appearance in keeping with the decoration of the suite.

In the main dining room, ball room, banquet hall, convention hall, roof garden, and the private dining rooms will be located groups of both microphones and horns; permitting either the picking up of programs from these locations and the "broadcasting" of them to all parts of the house, or the distribution of a program to any one of these points from any other locality or via radio from outside.

Two highly sensitive and ultra selective radio receiving sets will be located in the control room on the fourth floor. There also will be found imposing "mixer" and control panels and five steel [illegible] capable of boosting up the strength of the [illegible] one million [illegible] watts. [illegible] all points [illegible] any [illegible] sole [illegible] restaurant entertainment [illegible] rooms.

A five horse power motor generator set is used to convert the 25 cycles current supply into the 60 cycle power source necessary to operate these various systems. These function through some twelve hundred and fifty outlets conected together by a network of nearly ten miles of high quality rubber insulated and cotton covered, tinned, copper wire, supplying musical entertainment to every corner of this modern hotel.

THE IMPORTANT THING

The examination of your eyes is the most important act performed for you by your Optometrist. Testing your eyes requires skill. Time is the capital of the Optometrist. He cannot do the most important work free of charge.

Glasses are not ordinary merchandise. Their value as an aid depends wholly on the knowledge and skill of the one who examines and tests your eyes.

The fact that glasses cannot be bought over the counter like merchandise should help the public to decide that illustrations and prices in advertising are in the nature of bait. It is the curve of the glass and not the price which will give you perfect vision.

A free examination is a bait. In judging such advertising, the public should remember that such advertising is unethical in the first place, and therefore little reliance should be placed on it.

So alarming was the consequence of this that Bennet could not at once realize it was simply a consequence. He jumped up in a fright, imagining that his grandfather suddenly had suffered from a cramp or other physical seizure.

"Why, grandfather, you want some whiskey? I'll get you—"

Lucas controlled himself and stood up. "Indigestion," he mumbled. "Caviar here tonight. Go on; what else happened?"

When Bennet informed him that nothing else transpired at the seance, he thought for a while that his grandson was concealing something; but at last he satisfied himself that he knew all; and he went to his room.

For Lucas never did anything at all at Galilee except meet James Quinlan there and there direct J. Q. to the deed that was to be done.

It was marvelous how, throughout the forty-six years which had passed since that meeting, Lucas had carried consciousness of his own guilt always associated with the place of meeting, "Galilee." He had not known that Quinlan had done so too. He had supposed that Quinlan had lived out his life with a different association. And yet this was natural enough.

"Natural enough!" Lucas muttered to himself. "Galilee!"

But J. Q. was dead; Kincheloe had put his body in the lake. Who, then, knew about Galilee and could associate it with a flaming torch? No one else in all the world but Lucas himself! Yet Ethel and that Loutrelle and Bennet had found out.

If they drew "Galilee" and the torch from him, what else could they draw? If they obtained it from the dead, how much more would the dead tell?

That was a staggerer for Lucas who had acted upon the simple and effective formula that dead men tell no tales. "Galilee and a flaming torch!" Lucas winced and swung back to his window. So old J. Q., though dead, had told? How could Lucas shut up a ghost?

An idea, half former, seized him; and he stood stark. It progressed in his mind; and he laughed. In a reaction, it revolted himself; he discarded it; but it came back to him, more convincingly, more complete, and it promised him triumph.

It was after nine the next morning before Ethel awoke; and then it was so delightful to lie in bed, dreaming over the hours of the evening, that she made no stir, and it was ten when a maid knocked at her door. She answered joyously. "Some one for me?"

"Yes, Miss Carew. Mr. Lucas Cullen, your grandfather."

Ethel hastened down and found her grandfather, with his overcoat on and holding his hat in his gloved hand, standing in the centre of the drawing room and gazing critically about.

"You little fool!" he accused her commiseratingly. "Can't you feel even when your own flesh and blood tries to protect you?"

"From what, grandfather?"

"Had it ever occurred to you that the reason your father never came to my house was that he couldn't?"

"No," Ethel said.

"Think over it a minute."

"Why?"

"Why wouldn't I have him there? He couldn't tell you, I wouldn't. I thought I'd never have to: but you've forced me. This fellow you call Loutrelle.

"You believe that your father—so Bennet's been telling me—got in touch with this fellow called Loutrelle after your father died? That started your interest in him?"

"Yes."

"Why do you suppose your father did that? Why did he pick him, I mean?"

"Why—why, grandfather; he was going to meet me. Father knew that, some way—"

"Tomfoolery! Look here, your father was killed, and after he was dead—so you think—he tried to talk to this Loutrelle. So let's just take your own information; your father's spirit, the first think after he was dead, goes about looking for a fellow named Barney Loutrelle. Now spirits—all I've heard of—usually go first for those closest to 'em, don't they?"

Ethel hastened down and found her grandfather.

"Why, usually, grandfather."

"Well, what makes you think this is an exception?"

Ethel shrank back, comprehending less his words than the ugliness of his inflection.

"What do you mean?" she demanded.

"Well, who more natural for a father to seek than his son?"

"My father!" Ethel said. "You're talking about my father?"

"Before he was your father. I knew him. He was about St. Florentin quite a little in the old days—quite a little! You may remember I would not have him marry my daughter. So they ran off. I knew—there was a girl to go to Resurrection Rock."

Ethel flung herself at him and with her little fists clenched tight she pummeled him on the chest. "You lie—you lie—you lie! My father! You lie—you lie—"

He caught her fists and held her brutally before him. He saw that he had not at all convinced her; but he had not expected to simply by this statement of the false before combining it with what was true. He was too old and shrewd in experience to fail to know how a truth told may carry with it a lie.

"Who was his father then?" he demanded of his granddaughter, half shaking her. "Do you know? Then tell me! I don't know, of course; paternity's not like maternity; but his mother— Do you know who she was? Agnes here!" Suddenly he dropped Ethel and gestured horridly with both hands. "Your father and your father's friend—Agnes!"

"Oh! Oh! God!" Ethel cried.

Her grandfather said not another word; he stood for only a moment more, looking at her; then, satisfied, he pulled on his hat and stalked to the door.

In the whirl of her emotions, she was endeavoring to fasten thought upon Barney only as cousin Agnes's son; but against her will, and revolting her, thoughts of her father would come in.

Oh, last night he had taken her as a lover, Agnes's son and—her father's. She was here in Agnes's house—Agnes who might have been—might have been—

She heard some one coming and, starting up, she saw cousin Agnes's housekeeper. Mrs. Wain, usually so calm, so completely in control of herself, advanced under a nervous tension which visibly shook her slight body. Her words confessed she had been listening.

"What was he saying to you of Mrs. Oliver Cullen?" she besought, her hands trembling on Ethel's shoulder. "What was he telling to you? Oh, you must tell me; he said Mrs. Cullen—"

"Nothing about her now!" Ethel cried. "I mean, he was talking about her long ago. But—but," suddenly she collapsed in the housekeeper's arms. "I'm going away; home to Wyoming, Mrs. Wain. You must help me off. And if Mr. Loutrelle calls for me or telephones, I can not speak to him! I can't see him! Perhaps—perhaps I can write. I must never meet him again!"

CHAPTER XVI.

Early that afternoon, Lucas's dependable operative reported that he had followed Ethel Carew to the Union Station where she purchased a ticket and boarded a train for Sheridan, Wyoming. She had been unattended and plainly under the stress of strong emotion.

What Ethel had told Barney was brief and simple in its final statement.

"Dear Barney:

"I have found that I must leave at once for my home. Some time later, I shall know how to explain what must seem madness to you. Now I can not.

"Where you are and how you are and what you are doing remain with me the most important things in my life; so you must let me know all about yourself. My address will be Sheridan, Wyoming.

"ETHEL."

It was several days later that Mrs. Wain, the housekeeper, phoned a request for him to call.

"I speak to you, sir," Mrs. Wain said breathlessly, after she had sunk into the seat, "upon my own responsibility, sir, entirely. So I must ask you, before I say another word, to give me your word as a gentleman, that you will make no use of what I shall tell—unless I allow you."

Barney felt his pulses pounding again. "What is it?" he demanded.

"You will meet me, sir—when you're sure you're not followed?"

"Where?"

"At the corner of Tenth and Wabash."

Barney went immediately downtown. He had to wait on the corner only a few minutes before Mrs. Wain drove up in a taxi and invited him in.

"St. Luke's Hospital," she said to the driver; and when the door was closed, she vouchsafed to Barney, "She's had another operation; it was performed the day before yesterday. She rallied at first but sank later."

Still the housekeeper gave no intimation of who "she" was; and Barney was aware that direct inquiry would be vain.

Barney did not know her; when the nurse, who had been beside the bed, moved away, and Mrs. Wain held back and Barney advanced alone, he was not conscious of ever having seen the woman who lay on her side with her profile plain against the pillow. Yet a fluttering of awe—of more than awe—came over him as he halted silently beside the bed.

Her face, ash she lay turned toward him, was beautiful, though illness and intense suffering she had surely endured. Her skin was clear and lovely even in its deathly pallor; her hair—black and abundant— had clung to its lustre as had her dark brows and the lashes which lay on her cheek. Even now the indomitable soul of her—that essence of her spirit which persisted though consciousness long wa gone—was keeping up the fight, Barney felt And he wanted her to win; oh, how he wanted her to win.

It seemed to him he had never wished so for another's life; and why? Because, for the first time, he was beside some one who belonged to him by blood? Because she was his—mother?

Lloyd George's Record

J. L. Garvin in the London Observer (Ind.): To overdo the disparagement of Mr. Lloyd George does not look well. It will not gain a single vote and may lose votes. After all, though his genius is full of the faults of his qualities, he come out as a historic man of action in the sternest crisis the world ever saw; and he has carried in his time very great legislation. He will be remembered always not only for inspiration and organization in the War, but as the founder of Social Insurance in this country. He lost himself lamentably after the Armistice; he has found his form again because he has recovered his concentration. We say this, although we do not accept either his timetable or his financial estimates; and are bound to insist that his program exaggerates as to roads, utterly underestimates as to railways, and ignores the Empire.

Faults

When the most insignificant person tells us we are wrong, we ought to listen. Let us believe it possible we may be wrong when any supposes we are, and enter renewed examination of the matter with a grateful spirit.

Tasty Recipes

Dutch Pudding

Boil one teacupful of well-washed rice in one pint and a half of milk until quite thick, then add one cupful of powdered sugar, half a pound of currants, two ounces of butter, the grated rind of a lemon, or, if preferred, a little candied peel. When cold, add two well-beaten eggs, and bake in a bake in a moderate oven for half an hour.

Chocolate Custards (without Eggs)

Put a pint of milk on to boil. Mix two teaspoonfuls of cornflour with quarter of a pint of milk. Pour this into the boiling milk and boil for five minutes. Take two teaspoonfuls of Cadbury's cocoa, add a tablespoonful of sugar, pour half a cup of boiling water on the cocoa, stirring all the time and, when well dissolved, pour into the mixture. Boil for two minutes, then pour into custard glasses and serve cold. A little whipped cream on the top is a great improvement.

Fried Smelts.

Wash the smelts, make a slight opening at the gills with a very sharp knife or scissors, draw them between the thumb and finger from tail to head, press the intestines out at the gill opening, keeping the dish whole. Wash and dry and dust with salt and black peper. Beat up an egg, add a tablespoon of water and beat again. Dip the fish in the egg and cover thoroughly with seasoned bread crumbs. Fry quickly in deep, hot fat. Drain on brown paper; dish on a napkin and serve with Tartar sauce.

To Bake a Ham.

As a ham for baking should be well soaked, it should remain in water for at least twelve hours. Wipe it dry, trim away any bad places, and cover it with a common crust, taking care that this is of sufficient thickness all over to keep the gravy in. Place it in a moderately-heated oven and bake for nearly four hours. Take off the crust and skin and cover with raspings, the same as for broiled ham, and garnish the knuckle with a paper frill. This method of cooking a ham is far superior to boiling, as it cuts fuller of gravy and has finer flavour, besides keeping a much longer time. Cook a medium-sized ham four hours.

Girdle Scones.

Put a half-cup of flour into a basin with a pinch of salt and a pinch of sugar, also half a teaspoonful of baking soda and a half teaspoonful of cream of tartar, with the lumps pressed out. Crumble into these ingredients a teaspoonful of lard and make the whole into a soft dough with a little buttermilk. If sweet milk is used allow one teaspoonful of cream of tartar in place of half a teaspoonful. Turn out the dough, knead a little, and roll into a round, thinner than for oven scones. Cut neatly into large scones or small ones as desired and bake on a heated girdle, turning once. Steam in a fresh towel when ready.

Woman's Inferiority Mere Tradition

Mrs. Pethrick-Lawrence, in her presidential address to the twenty-second annual conference of the Women's Freedom League at the Caxton Hall, Westminster, said:

"There are women leaders who are deeply imbued sub-consciously with the tradition of women's inferiority. Moved by pity for women's helplessness, they are pleading for special legislation regulating women's conditions and hours of labour. They draft proposed legislation in which they class children, young persons and women together, regardless of the fact that by so doing they inevitably lower the industrial status and the wage standard of women.

"In the social and moral sphere, much remains to be done to establish the equal moral standard. In particular, the practice of branding women with a bad name and depriving them of the protection afforded by the law of the land to every other section of the community must be abandoned, and the law changed which placed the honour and reputation and liberty of a woman at the hazard of the uncorroborated evidence of a single police officer.

"Our hope is in the young," she concluded, "in those who have never known the crushing obsession of the idea of inferiority, or the limiting restriction upon their mental moral and personal freedom. They are coming into their inheritance. They are making a better world. We commend to them our motto: 'Dare to be Free.'"

The human brain is a wonderful organ. It starts working the minute we get up in the morning and does not stop until we get to the office.

Extraordinary afflictions are not always the punishment of extraordinary sins, but sometimes the trial of extraordinary graces. Sanctified afflicitions are spiritual promotions.—Matthew Henry.

Sweet Sixteen

Sing hey for the joy of sweet sixteen,
'Tis then there's never a "might-have-been,"
Though careless years be youthful wage
Regret oft pens the book of age—
When man is cold he longs for heat,
When hot, to cool he would retreat;
Unquiet here, he would be there,
When there, his fancy flies elsewhere;
Whenever tied, he would be free,
If single then he'd married be—
For life is change and change is life,
Content eludes the envying strife;
So here's for the joy of sweet sixteen,
'Tis then there's never a "might-have-been."

Why go to Peru?

When crude oil is so plentifully available here in North America, why does Imperial Oil Limited go 4000 miles to Peru for the crude from which Marvelube is made?

It is because Peruvian crude has lubrication properties which make it particularly desirable as a base for a superior motor oil.

That is why Marvelube is giving aircraft operators longer periods between engine overhauls and a greater margin of safety.

Marvelube meets the needs of the modern high-speed motor, in the air or on the road, because its carbon-free and heat-resisting superiorities are created by Nature herself.

Let Marvelube give you the benefits of better lubrication. There is a grade of Marvelube refined to meet exactly the specifications of your car, truck or tractor. See the Marvelube Chart at Imperial Oil dealers and service stations.

Asks Abolition of Ontario Speed Law

Provincial Motor League Solicitor Wants Change in Act

Oshawa, Ont.—The entire abolition of the speed limit on Ontario highways and the deletion of the majority of the clauses in the Highway Traffic Act are advocated by E. A. Richardson, solicitor for the Ontario Motor League.

"Half of the Highway Traffic Act might well be cut out," said Mr. Richardson, in an address recently. "A provision that a motorist must drive reasonably and not negligently would cover most of the clauses. For instance, cutting in is negligence, and recklesness, and the necessity for a special clause for this offence would be done away with."

"The more legislation that is put on the books the worse driving will be experienced on the highways," said the speaker. "Added legislation simply creates more difficulty for the motorists in understanding the acts and provides a gold mine for lawyers."

"The directors of the League feel that there should be no speed limit whatever on Ontario highways," he said, adding that there was no reason why a motorist under certain conditions, depending on the density and speed of other traffic, could not go 40 or 50 miles per hour safety. There was no limit in England, and any charges that were preferred there were under a reckless driving clause, stating that the motorists had driven too fast taking into consideration the traffic conditions.

"A speed limit often made motorists feel that they could run up to this no matter what traffic conditions prevailed, and many serious accidents were caused by this fact.

"The motorist himself should be made to judge the reasonableness of his speed without any provisions of a law, for there are places where ten or fifteen miles per hour is reckless driving, although the law might allow him twenty or thirty-five miles," the speaker declared.

Rumrunners Play Hoax On Patrol

Decoy Boat Speeds Down River as Small Boats Deliver Cargo

Windsor.—With United States dry guards all practically new and untouchable on the other side, and with the prohibition navy augmented by more patrol boats, rumrunners, if they would land their cargoes in safety, must needs try new dodges.

One of these was tried out in the very shadow of the Ambassador bridge recently. A high-powered boat show out from the Canadian shore, piled high it seemed, with cases of drink. As it crossed the international boundary one of the craft of the ever-vigilant United States guards gave chase. Down the river both boats sped. And then something happened. Out from the Canadian shore moved two small boats with outboard motors. They were well laden—this time with the real stuff it would seem, for they crossed the river quickly and in safety. The guardian boat was a mile or so down the river after a load of empty boxes.

Tariff Changes Affect Canada

Increased Rates for Live Cattle and Potatoes Proposed

Washington.—The House Ways and Means Committee, after hearing a series of Congressional appeals following the first introduction of the tariff bill, made proposals for major alterations in the original draft of the bill, two of which will affect Canada especially. These proposals were for increased rates for live cattle and potatoes, two items which have already occasioned acute controversy.

The proposed new rates for live cattle would be two cents per pound where the weight is under 800 pounds and two and one-half cents above that weight. These rates would be much less than those that have been demanded by farm bloc spokesmen.

For potatoes, it was proposed that the rate be increased to one of 75 cents per bushel, instead of the present rate of 225 cents.

Anglo-American Co-Operation

Toronto Star (Ind.): What sufficient reason can be given for Britain declining to join the United States in proclaiming the freedom of the seas? Britain's weakness is the vulnerability of her food supply which would be guadanteed forever by an agreement with the United States on this point. Another war like the last one, even though equally victorious, would contribute more to the permanency of peace, so essential to the good of Britain, as a reproachment between the two great divisions of the Anglo-Saxon race.

London Crowd Almost Riotous In Welcoming Prince

Police Cordon Broken and Women Injured in Wild Rush — Civilians Join With Constables in Restoring Order at Gates of Buckingham Palace

London.—Enthusiasm aroused by the Prince of Wales at a review of the metropolitan police force, which celebrated its centennial, reached an almost riotous stage Saturday.

One hundred thousand persons gathered in Hyde park to witness the impressive review. As the Prince entered the parade field loud cheering disturbed his mount, a beautiful chestnut mare.

The vast throng held their breath in apprehension as the animal reared and cavorted, but the heir to the throne quickly brought the horse under control and rode it sedately down the long blue lines of "bobbies."

After the Prince had reviewed 18,000 marching police in front of Buckingham palace later, a section of the crowd rushed forward to see the Prince depart. A police cordon was immediately broken and in the wild rush several persons, including a woman with a baby, were knocked down and injured.

Civilians joined policemen on duty to renew the cordon at the palace gates. The crowd finally responded to the good-humored appeal of the police "Be sports on our day off," and order was restored.

Inter-Empire Trade Is Key to Prosperity

Shopping Week Planned to Stimulate Buying British Goods

BENEFITS INDIVIDUAL

To bring home forcibly to every Canadian the realization that the promotion of empire trade has an intimate bearing upon his personal life and prosperity is the object of empire shopping week which takes place all over Canada from May 25 to June 1.

While the campaign has for its immediate aim the direct stimulation of empire commerce by focussing public attention on the products of British peoples throughout the world, its most important purpose is to foster the conviction that such commerce contributes materially to the permanent prosperity of Canada. Educationally the "week" is designed to produce in Canadians an attitude which will influence their buying 52 weeks in the year.

While it is true that British sentiment and empire loyalty is sufficient to instal the idea behind empire shopping week in the hearts of Canadians, this sympathy, it is said, is not always bolstered by a knowledge of the realities of the matter, nor does it always find expression in daily transactions.

To supply the knowledge that the value of empire shopping is much more than sentimental, and to tell why, are important parts of the work which the organizers have undertaken.

Tennessee Flood Menace Is Grave

Repetition of 1927 Disaster Feared by State's Governor

Memphis, Tenn.—Sections of the levee at Mounds Landing, Miss., were crumbling into the swollen Mississippi River, Friday, while 500 men attempted to hold back the water.

The river still was rising slowly, with a stage of 51.5 feet at Greenville. National guardsmen were ready to mobilize quickly if needed and Red Cross officials had laid plans for relief work. Gov. Theo. G. Bilbo, of Mississippi, wired Major-General Richmond P. Davis an appeal for aid.

"A break in the Mounds Landing is probable within a day or two,'" he said, "and if this occurs there will be a repitition of the 1927 overflow."

Tents and blankets were requested by the Governor for families already driven from their homes by backwaters in Issaquena and Sharkey Counties, 75 per cent. of which are under water.

A crest of 53 feet was expected at the weakened point. Engineers said the situation was serious, but not yet alarming. The crown of the embankment for 200 yards had fallen away, it was said, but enough workmen were believed available to prevent a total collapse of the wall.

It was near the close of the eighteenth century that firecrackers were first used to celebrate United States Independence Day—July 4.

Manners must adorn knowledge and smooth its way through the world. Like a great rough diamond, it may do very well in a closet by way of a curiosity, and also for its intrinsic value; but it will never be worn, nor shine ,if it is not polished.—Lord Chesterfield.

Ontario Holiday Death Toll Is Nine

Dead Includes Three Children —Seventeen Are Injured

Toronto.—Six dead and at least 17 injured was the toll taken by Victoria Day celebrations throughout Ontario. Of the dead three were children, two of them being killed by motor cars. Fireworks, often a potent factor in Victoria Day lists of killed and injured, caused no deaths and injured but three. Due, no doubt, to the coolness of the weather, there were no drownings reported.

The most serious accident happened at Windsor where a Canadian National railway train struck a motor car at the Maidstone level crossing killing Mrs. C. Reid, Brantford, and her two daughters. The husband was badly injured.

Edward Cross, 20, Toronto, was killed when his motorcycle struck a trolley car at Long Branch. His companion, Fred Bart, was injured.

WEEK-END ACCIDENTS.

With highway traffic at its heaviest this year, three persons met death on Ontario roads last week-end.

Near Dryden, in the northwest of the province, August Spreng and his 3-year-old grandson were killed at a level crossing.

Mrs. J. Hunter, 229 Kingston Road, Toronto, was killed, and Mrs. W. J. Webster, Lakefield, was seriously injured when a car overturned near Peterboro. Other highway mishaps were of a minor order.

An early influx of United States tourists set traffic records at border points, while roads in the interior of the province were correspondingly crowded.

Stresses Canada's Need of Settlers

Sir George McLaren Brown Declares Selection Best For All

London.—Sir George McLaren Brown, in a letter to the "Morning Post," commenting on a previous letter that there was no need of additional population in Canada, says "With an area of 3,500,000 square miles it is not to be expected that it can be held and developed as it should be by a population of nine to ten millions. In my opinion, as a British Canadaian, Canada should become the very stronghold of the British people on the Western hemisphere and obviously it is to the interest of the Motherland to do everything possible to ensure this. The Canadian Government and great private interests have indicated, and are continually indicating, the desire for the British settler in Canada. Over settlers it is right that the Government exercise the power of selection advisedly, as it is as much in the interests of the new settler as in the interests of the country. In a word, if you plant the garden and draw plants from the older garden you are not going to take weeds."

Harvesters for Settlers

Liverpool Journal of Commerce: It is to be feared that the reputation earned by the comparative failure last year will make matters very difficult for a year at least. When they adjust themselves and the settlers can feel confident that things have been properly arranged in advance, and that they will not be victimized in any way, there is not the least reason why the transport of Canadian harvesters should not be as important in its way as the seasonal transport of Spanish and Italian agriculturists to South America.

Zeppelin Reaches Its Home Hangar

Arrives Back at Friedrichshafen After Hazardous Trip

Friedrichshafen—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin, completing its trip from Toulon, arrived over its base here at 4.35 a.m. Friday.

A small crowd which had gathered at the field in the early morning sighted the dirigible ten minutes before its arrival, as it was emerging from the mists over Lake Constance.

The unexpected headway the ship had made during the night and early morning caused Zeppelin Company officials to call out the ground crew earlier than had been expected, and only a few spectators were on hand to watch the craft return home.

Mixed Cargoes

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, en route to Friedrichshafen—(By Mrs. Mary Pierce, only woman passenger aboard the Graf Zeppelin)—We started skyward from the Cuers aerodrome amid the enthusiastic shouts of the thousands of persons below us.

We have plenty of mascots aboard this time, with two gorillas and one small monkey and four canary birds.

Our first meal, with delicious hot-dogs, brought cheers from all the passengers.

International Courtesies

Paris.—Dr. Hugo Eckener sent a wireless message to Air Minister Laurent Eynac Thursday night as the dirigible Graf Zeppelin flew over Hyeres, expressing his thanks for the hospitality of the French in assisting the dirigible to land at Toulon last week.

"At the moment the dirigible leaves the Cuers base," said the message, "I must again thank you for the warm hospitality and efficient aid of the French civil and military authories,"

The French Government replied, expressing wishes for a safe flight.

Girl Babies Are Hardier Than Boys

Fewer Female Deaths, the Bureau of Statistics Shows

Ottawa.—Girl babies are hardier than boys. This is established by the mortality figures which are compiled at the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. In November, the last month for which complete figures are available, deaths among boys under one year of age numbered 89.5 per 1,000, against 72.7 for girls.

A general improvement in infant mortality is noted in comparative figures for the last three years. Teh number of 81.4 per 1,000 is distinctly better than November, 1927, with 87.1 and November, 1926 with 91.9. In November, 1925, however, the index had been as lo was 69.0.

Living births in the nine provinces totalled 17,577, as compared with 17,773 in the preceding November. Twin births were 213, in 191 cases of which both were born alive. There was one case of triplets, in which all three lived at birth.

Maternity mortality in November was 4.4 per 1,000 living births. This was decidedly better than the index of 6.2 in 1927, 5.6 in 1926, and 6.1 in 1925.

Marriages in the month under review were .6666. This amounted to 8.4 per 1,000 of population, and was an advance as against 8.2 in 1927 and 7.9 in 1926.

Strike out at your troubles and your fist will go right through them.

Sir Esme Willing to Forego Liquor

Only Too Glad to Co-operate With Other Diplomats

New York.—Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador to the United States, recently said he was willing to surrender the privilege of diplomatic liquor "if the United States intimates a desire to cancel the privilege."

The British Ambassador told newspaper men at the New York hotel where he was the guest of honor of the first anniversary dinner of the British Commonwealth Club that he would be only too glad to co-operate with other members of the diplomatic corps in carrying out such a desire on the part of the United States Government.

PERSONAL OPINION

Washington.—The British Embassy took official cognizance of articles published by a number of newspapers this morning to the effect that the British Ambassador had expressed willingness to have the United States withdrawal from the diplomatic corps its time honored privilege of importing liquor into this country.

A statement issued by the Embassy on behalf of the Ambassador declared that views on diplomatic liquor privileges set forth in a letter written to James T. Carter, Lynchburg, Va., lumberman, were expression of his personal opinion, and "not a statement on behalf of the diplomatic corps."

Air Mail Line To Link Calgary And Winnipeg

900-Mile Route to Have Side Connections With Regina, Saskatoon and Edmonton

Site Bought for Airport

Winnipeg, Canada.—An air mail line to be established by the Canadian Government between Winnipeg and Calgary, Alberta, will be 900 miles in length and will have side connections with Regina and Saskatoon, in Saskatchewan, and Edmonton and the farther Peace River country in Alberta.

The Western Canada Airways, Ltd., owned by James Richardson, grain exporter, will carry the mail on the main line at a contract price of 75 cents a flying mile, and probably will receive the contract for the auxiliary service in addition, although another air transport company also is negotiating for this privilege.

Western Canada Airways has secured land for an airport beside the Red River near Winnipeg and will operate from it fifty planes to all parts of Canada.

The postoffice department is trying to arrange for an air mail service between Montreal and Toronto and the Western part of the United States. If it is successful letters from the Canadian cities will be sent to the Pacific Coast via Windsor, Ontario, Chicago, Minneapolis and Fargo, then to the North Pacific Coast states, and also to British Columbia, Alaska and Yukonby way of the Western Canada Airways line via Winnipeg.

The Canadian Government is ordering from Chicago manufacturers beam lights of the latest type to equip the line for night flying, and will establish service stations along the route.

Big Part Played By Personalities

In Absence of Leading Issues Leading Figures Take Their Place

London.—The personalities of the candidates are playing a greater part in the last days of the general election than ever before in this country's political history, partly because the women voters are in a majority.

It has been remarked during the present campaign, which will terminate with the election of a new Parliament on May 30, that women are failing to show great interest in the candidates, and to speed up proceedings the parties, especially the Liberals, have adopted a number of American methods of attracting votes.

The three parties' policies are completely lacking in wide divergencies, and as a result the widely contrasting faces of the party leaders have taken a prominent place in the campaign. While political speakers are making their final whirlwind tours, they move against a brilliant background of posters from which the faces of David Lloyd George, the Liberal leader; Premier Stanley Baldwin, the Conservative champion; and Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Labor Party, peer out upon the voters.

In view of the absence of sharp election issues, it is typical of the Conservative Party that the drive to maintain power should be made under some such slogan as is boldly written beneath poster pictures of Baldwin—"Safety First!"

Another Baldwin poster shows the Prime Minister in oilskins, gripping the wheel of a sailing ship, below which is written: "He will steer you to safety."

It was Lloyd George, however, who probably was responsible for the introduction of new methods into the campaign. The Liberal leader's campaign is certainly doing everything possible to capitalize on the former Premier's personality.

Another Attempt To Salvage Gold

Brest, France.—An Italian expedition, headed by Lieut. Cumiberti, arrived here to make another attempt to salvage the gold bars, valued at $300,000, which went down with the English steamer "Egypt," off the coast here seven years ago.

Two previous attempts have been made to salvage the gold, first by a Swedish expedition and then by a French. Both managed to locate the sunken steamer, but were unable to penetrate to the hold where the treasure was stored.

Empire Free Trade

Vancouver Western Tribune (Ind. Cons.). Free trade within the British Commonwealth of Nations affords the surest ,safest and sanest solution of Britain's difficulties. The sooner this idea sinks home, the sooner will prosperity be regained. Empire free trade means greater consumption of Empire-made goods, which, in turn, means more employment for British people. That, surely, is the formula for prosperity.

The intensity of conviction in most people is directly proportional to their narrowness of vision.—Dr. David S. Muzzey.

Ernest Messier will hang at Montreal Jail on the morning of Friday August 30, for the murder of Rose Anna Paquette, 29, his former sweet heart, on September 29, 1928. Mr. Justice Wilson, bedecked in black hat and gloves, pronounced the death penalty upon the stalwart, ruddy-faced truck driver at 5:10 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, after jurymen had one by one declared him guilty of the crime. Miss Paquette was murdered in front of 2089 St. Hubert Street, her rooming house, at 8 o'clock on the evening of Saturday Sept. 29, last year, exactly eight months previous to Messier's sentence this week. Police arrested him for the crime less than five minutes after it took place, while he stood over the prostrate form with a smoking revolver in his hand.

Florence White, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John White, Richmond Township, residing near Napanee, was killed instantly, being crushed to death by a car driven by her father in the barnyard of their home. It was decided an inquest was unnecessary. The family was going for a ride in the car, and the father went to the garage to back out the machine. The child was playing about the yard, and when she saw the father backing the car out, ran behind it to get in. The father did not see the child, who was run over by one of the rear wheels.
