We Develop the Farmer's Business

Banking at any time is co-operation between the bank and the customer for the development of the customer's business.

The better the bank understands its customer's business the more readily and efficiently can it assist him.

Eighty-nine years of dealing with farmers in Canada has given The Bank of Nova Scotia a complete knowledge of farmers' banking needs.

Call and talk the matter over with the nearest branch manager.

Three to One for Prohibition

The official counting of the vote in Dundas in the recent referendum took place in Chesterville yesterday showing a total vote of 8925 polled, being 6736 for prohibition and 2189 against it, giving a majority of 4547 in favor of the "drys".

Eighteen Carloads of Booze

Sunday morning shortly after midnight a train consisting of eighteen express cars passed through this point loaded with booze, getting away from the new Quebec liquor law which went into force on May 1st. The shipment was unloaded at Smiths Falls where it is kept guarded by a special squad of Express Co's constables.

Shaver—Robertson

An interesting event took place at the Methodist parsonage, Dundela, on Wednesday April 13th when the Rev. Mr. Cook united in the holy bonds of matrimony Mr. Alfred Shaver of Rowena, and Mrs. James Robertson formerly of Grantley. After the ceremony the happy couple drove to the groom's home at Rowena, where they were given a warm reception by their immediate friends and relatives. Both the bride and groom are popular in the community and have the best wishes of a host of well wishers for a happy wedded career.

Masterson—O'Neill

St. Mary's Church, Chesterville, was the scene of a happy event on Wednesday, April 27th, when Miss Margaret Beatrice, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon O'Neil, and Mr. James Bernard Masterson were united in holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. Father Staley.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very pretty in her travelling suit of navy serge opening over an embroidered blouse of tafetta, with navy hat and veil to match. She wore a corsage bouquet of white carnations and fern. The bridesmaid, Miss Eva O'Neill, sister of the bride, carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. William J. Masterson. During the Mass the choir furnished the music.

After the ceremony the happy couple left on the 8.43 a.m. train on a trip to Montreal. On their return Friday evening, a reception was held at the home of the bride. Both bride and groom have many friends in town and vicinity and all join in wishing them a long life of happiness and prosperity. The bride was the recipient of many valuable presents including a number of cheques.

Howard Hummel Passes Away

The funeral took place on Sunday of Howard D. Hummel son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hummel at the family home when a very large number were present. The deceased was a young man of only twenty-five years and had been married but two years. On March 17th he underwent a very serious operation in St. Luke's hospital, Ottawa, from which for a time he appeared to be recovering and was at his home here until two weeks ago when it became necessary for him to again enter the hospital for another trouble, from which unfortunately, he could not he releived, passing away early Friday morning.

There are left to mourn, a loving wife, mother and father, and four brothers, the latter being, Walter and Melvin at home, Willis of Mantario, Alta., and Allan of Windsor.

The service at the home was conducted by Rev. W. T. Brown, the pall-bearers being Malcolm Sanders, Arnold Kyle, Hulbert Cross, Sheldon Ball, Thos. Lapierre and Angus Smith.

A very beautiful wreath from the family and a spray from Mr. G. W. Bogart were placed on the casket.

Evidently the high cost of fuel during the past year has had its influence with farmers regarding the home wood supply. A trip through the country this spring reveals great piles of wood at many farm homes where in recent years such were not visible.

Lands Available for Settlers.

An increased demand by the public for information regarding land settlement is reported by the Department of the Interior at Ottawa. This increased interest is attributed partly to the fact that Crown lands in Western Canada within fifteen miles of a railway, which heretofore have been reserved for returned men, became available for civilian entry on the 1st of May.

Besides Crown lands that may be available, it is estimated that there are about 200,000 quarter-sections of privately owned lands lying idle in the Prairie provinces, most of them within reach of railways. The same condition applies, though in a lesser degree, to the older provinces of Canada. This condition is not, however, due to lack of value in the land itself—on the contary and particularly in the Prairie provinces, much of this idle land is rich virgin soil—when one considers Canada's vast land area and its comparatively small population it is at once apparent that a large portion of the area in private ownership must be unoccupied and available for purchase at reasonable prices.

In addition to its activities in connection with the settlement of vacant Crown lands in the Western provinces the Department of the Interior, in co-operation with Provincial officials, has compiled and published very full particulars regarding unoccupied, privately owned, farm, lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Nova Scotia New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. This information which has been published by districts issued free of charge and includes such details as the price at which land may be purchased, the terms of sale, acreage suitable for cultivation, nature of soil, and value of buildings. With snch information in his possession the intending purchaser may negotiate with owners of land in any district in which he is particularly interested.

In their endeavour to find a suitable location prospective homesteaders or purchasers will find of marked value the dual service which the Department of the Interior through its Natural Resources Intelligence Branch is now in a position to render.

Cut Chore-Time in Half

Do you realize that an average farm uses one ton of water a day? How long are you going to handle this tremendous bulk by old-fashioned, wasteful methods?

Modern farmers let the wind pump and distribute their water. They cut chore-time in half. They have running water in the house, the barn and stables, and pasture.

Not with old-fashioned windmills. But with big, sturdy, efficient double-geared Toronto Windmills, constructed throughout of galvanized steel, strong and rust-proof.

A Toronto Pump and a Toronto Water-System, combined with a Toronto Windmill, gives you a real city water service.

Toronto Pumps and Water Systems can also be supplied with a gasoline engine or electric motor.

Our Windmill, Pumps and Water System booklets show you how to cut out waste time and energy on your farm—how to make more money. Write for them. They are sent free.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

After Years of Suffering with Dyspepsia, this Fruit Medicine Gave Relief

MLLE ANTOINETTE BOUCHER

917 Dorion St., Montreal.

"I am writing to tell you that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives' for this remedy relieved me when I had abandoned all hope of ever recovering my health.

I suffered terribly with Dyspepsia. I had it for years and all the medicines I took did not do me any good.

I read something about 'Fruit-a-tives' being good for all Stomach Troubles and Disorders of Digestion so I tried them. After finishing a few boxes, I was entirely relieved of the Dyspepsia and my general health was restored.

I thank the great fruit medicine, 'Fruit-a-tives', for this wonderful relief."

What the Influenza Taught Us.

"Where did the influenza come from?" was the question recently asked of a company of missionaries about to sail to the field, by Dr Carrel one of the world's leaders in medical research.

"Why the Spanish influenza came from Spain," replied one.

"Russia" guessed another.

"The influenza," said Dr Carrel, "as far as can de discovered, first appeared in an obscure corner of the world which had never been swept out in eastern Turkistan The spread of the epidemic clear over the earth, taking toll of millions of lives, demonstrates that it is not safe to leave a single plague spot without medical and sanitary aid."

The influenza epidemic is an unanswerable argument for medical missions. It has proved as never before that all men are members one of another. We may disregard a spot like Turkestan so far away and obscure, but the plague which s allowed to develope there reaches out and breaks through our insolation, and can slay us. No part of the world can be safe until all is safe.—Zion's Herald.

Bread Making Made Easy

Most women think that bread-making is too hard work. That is only because they make it so. Whatever their recipe may be they should not laboriously knead the air out of the dough with vigorous punchings and pokings, because it is better to fold air into the dough which is a very simple process, occupying but a few minutes.

The quality of the bread depends largely upon the quality of the flour. Canadian spring wheat flour has long been a favorite because it excels in the proper kind of gluten. Soft wheat contains gluten which is not elastic and rubbery and while such flours may absorb water, the gluten cells do not retain the moisture, most of which is driven out by baking

Do not waste your time kneading your bread. Fold it over. Mix your spouge into dough, folding in dry flour and air until you get the loaf of the right consistency. Treat it gently. The same dough will make beautiful rolls.

One Thing He Couldn't Do

A Candidate for Parliament from a certain Western Ontario city was never shy about telling the voters why they should send him to Toronto. "I am a practical farmer," he said, boastfully, at one meeting. "I can plow, reap, milk cows, shoe a horse—in fact, I should like you to tell me one thing about a farm which I can not do." Then, in the impressive silence, a voice asked from the back of the hall: "Can you lay an egg?"

Costly Bull is Dead

A. C. Hardy, proprietor of Avondale Stock Farm, has been notified of the death at the Carnation Farms in Seattle, Washington, of his famous Holstein bull, which he sold at an auction in Milwaukee, Wis., for the record sum of $106,000. The animal was purchased four years ago by a representative of the Carnation Farms at the age of six months and the price paid for the calf has never been equalled on the North American continent. The bull in some manner injured its knee and the treatment applied on the sore was licked off by the thoroughbred, causing it to be poisoned.

Mr. Chesley Plantz

Mr. Chesely Plantz, son of the late Simon Plantz, well and favorably known throughout this vicinity, died in Cornwall after a short illness, on Sunday April 24th.

The late Mr. Plantz was born in Williamsburg township in 1847 and spent the most of his life in Morrisburg. The remains were conveyed to Marsh's undertaking parlors, and the funeral took place on Monday, Rev. Mr. Miller conducting the service. Interment was made in Hanes cemetery, Mariatown.

Three sons and four brothers are left to mourn, namely, Walter and George of Morrisburg, and William of Chesterville. The brothers are Messrs. Matt. and William, Cornwall Geo. of Massena, and Frank, Iowa.

The pall-bearers were his three sons and Mr. W. G. Beckstead.—Morrisburg Leader.

Strange Mishap at Carleton Place

About five o'clock last Saturday evening, says the Carleton Place Herald, the hydro power was suddenly cut off and the lights vanished at the same time. The cause was unusual, but fortunately not tragic. Mr. John McFarlane, the engineer at the water-works station, was about to start the electric pump, and as the connecting pins on the starter sometimes stick Mr. McFarlane often touches them with his finger before starting to see that hey are free. On this occasion the power was on and when he touched the pin he became the conductor himself and the 220 volts passed into him, throwing him back against the wall, the fuses and switch burning out with the flash and causing a break in the circuit that put the town in darkness for half an hour. How Mr. McFarlane was not more seriously hurt is a miracle. He was wearing rubbers and it is thought that these made an insulation that saved his life.

Urged to Protect Their Own Premises

Midland Free Press: The provincial authorities are making an organized effort to induce people to clean up their premises as a precaution against fire. Their notices are of solicitous nature and will not likely attain their object as readily as if more peremptory methods were used. People as a rule approve of others adopting suggestions, being seized with the idea that those suggestions do not apply to themselves, but the majority will not adopt them until compelled to do so. Why it should be necessary to urge people to protect their own properties from destruction, and possibly their own lives is one of the unsolved mysteries, but thus it is,

Hog Raiser Likes to See Actual Sale of His Stock

Pork day is one of the big annual events of Kings County, California. It comes in October usually. In this contest the farm bureau centre is the unit, and every farm bureau centre in the contest advances one carload of hogs to be exhibited and rated by an expert judge. Every farm bureau centre must have at least six consigners to the load, thus preventing any big concern from exhibiting a carload. In the contest last Fall six farm bureau centres as well as a boys' pig club took part in the contest. Ten carloads were auctioned in addition to seven cars that had been in the contest.

The county agent leader says in his annual report to the United States Department of Agriculture: "There seems to be no more convincing argument to a hog producer than to see the actual sales of his animals take place and to know the difference in price paid for a superior quality animal."

Farm bureau sales of this kind were started in California in 1916. They are now becoming common in all pork-producing counties of the State. There were 175 such sales in 1920, with sales aggregating $1,400,000.

"My dear," said Mr. Bibbles, over the telephone. "I won't be home until late to-night, so don't sit up for me. John Jagsby and I have an important matter to discuss."

"Very well," said Mrs. Bibbles, in a tone of resignatian, "but when you begin to get full of the matter I do hope you won't let Mr. Jagsby persuade you to have just one more discussion."

Motorists Attention

One of the motorist's chief difficulties since the headlight regulations were introduced, is how to know if he is fulfiling Government requirements. Frequently cars equipped with lenses that have Government approval have been stopped by police officials, the latter claiming that the glare of light overstepped the law. Such incidents have been a constant source of irritation to both police and motorists. Each so far as his knowledge went was doing what the law demanded.

The whole trouble had been that neither motorists nor police have understood that even a lense given Government approval can break the rules unless the headlight is properly adjusted the lens correctly focused. Yet testing your light to see if it conforms to Government regulations is one of the simplest things possible. An authority gives the following directions which apply to practically all motors except those with headlights set unusually far from the ground:

On a stick mark the distance from the ground to the middle of your light. Now walk fifteen feet away. Again rest the end of the stick on the ground and the main beam of light should pass through the mark indicating the centre of the headlight. If there is more than an inch or so variation either way, your headlight needs adjusting. If it strikes higher than the mark on the stick, your light fails to keep within the 42 inches from the ground, the limit the law allows. If it strikes below the mark, then you are getting less light than you are allowed, and driving at a disadvantage. Which ever way the fault lies, go at once to a service station or garage and have it remedied.

In several municipalities—notably Chatham and London—the Board of Commerce, brought to realization of the course of the misunderstanding between motorists and police, have opened demonstration booths, where the police may direct motorists whose lamps are not properly adjusted and where the correction will be made without entailing any expense.

Are Klingtite Belts-- Too Good for the Farm ?

Some say they are !

But no good farmer will admit that he is satisfied with inferior belts. Farm power-work needs just as fine a belt as does the city factory.

That is why Goodyear Klingtite Belts are taking such a strong hold.

Klingtite Belts may cost more to buy. But they certainly cost less to use. They last longer. And they do their work better.

If better belts interest you, see us about Klingtite Belts.

Fixing Wages

The wage dispute between the managers and the employees of the railways has brought to public and general attention one of the chief difficulties in the way of putting business upon a peace instead of war basis.

No one needs to be told that during the war wages climbed to high levels, partly because there was a real shortage of men and partly because the Government needed great quantities of almost everything at a moment's notice. In the case of the railways the government took over the management and stimulated the activity of the workmen not only by estalishing a high rate of payment but by a number of rulings that made the system of computing wages much more costly than it used to be. The cost of operatiug the roads increased more than three hundred per cent, and when they were returned to their owners it was with the proviso that the government arrangement with the labor unions in respect to wages must not be tampered with except by permission of regularly authorized government commissions.

Now, war wages, like war profits, were not paid by legitimate business, but by taxation, either when the government was the purchaser or the employer, or indirectly when government competition in the market for labor and material raised prices. That was conspicuously true of the railways. The government ran them with the help of the tax money with a lavishness that no private company could afford. When the owners took them back there was nothing to do except push up the rates, since the taxes were no longer available to make up the deficit. Accordingly, the rates were raised, and, as might have been perdicted, business fell off at once. The hope that revenues would increase was not realized. If the railways keep on paying the present wages they will have to stop paying some of their other bills. That will mean bankruptcy, with all the shock to business everywhere that bankruptcy implies.

We are often told that "labor is not a commodity." If by labor we mean the actual men and woman who work, that is true. But the strength of the laborer or the dexterity of the artisan or the training of the bookkeeper is a commodity—like the persuasiveness of the salesman, the learning of the college professor or the gift for organization of the successful manager. Each of those men has for sale the quality in which he excels—and lives by selling it. The individual or group of individuals that sets and tries to maintain a price for his or its services above what the persons would naturally use those services can or will pay will find it at first hard and then impossible to sell those services. That means unemployment and the destruction of the equilibrium in industry. The merchant knows that he cannot fix prices regardless of his customers' willingness to buy. If he did not know it before, the last six months have taught him so. We do not see how with all their power the labor unions can permanently fix wages at a certain level without taking into consideration the ability of the public to pay them. There is only one way in which that sort of thing can be done: to take every kind of business into the hands of the state and to collect in taxes money enough to pay wages that cannot be earned in the usual way. That is Bolshevism, and no society can long endure under that burden.—Youth's Companion.

Advertising Value Changed

Acton Free Press: In years that have gone, and not so very long ago, advertising matter could be seen all through the country, on sign boards, telegraph poles, etc., but the day has gone, because a farmer in his auto drives too fast to read the posters. Not many years ago farmers came to town in buggies or wagons to get their mail, do shopping and other business. What a change has taken place, for today almost every farmer has a mail box at his gate, a telephone in the house, and his car to drive around in. The way to get the farmers these times is by advertising in local newspapers.

Gruesome Famine-Straits

Something of famine conditions in one district in China may be gathered from the account of a visit made by Chang Fu Lin, one of the native evangelists. In the earlier period of the famine he was out for two weeks making a special tour for the purpose of investigating conditions. He called on the county magistrate and obtained official statisti s. He made careful notes of what he saw himself, and with regard to the information which he secured from others he reports only what he can vouch for as being actual fact. This is the story which he brought back and which is translated and given in a recent issue of the Honan Messenger:

The number of villages in Nei Huang County is estimated at four hundred and ten, and the population, without counting little children, is placed at two hundred thousand. Since the famine began four thousand and thirty persons have died, and the great majority of these deaths have been due in one way or another to famine conditions. Over thirty thousand people have fled, and it is estimated that thirty or forty per cent. of these refugees have already died. In Nei Huang county at the present time there are thirteen thousand little children who have no clothes to wear, and the weather is getting colder every day.

Nei Huang has ordinarily over thirty thousand animals, such as cows, mules and donkeys. Now there are less than a thousand. They have been killed and eaten, or driven to other parts and sold. Even the chickens and dogs are disappearing. There is not one in ten of what there formerly were.

One hundred and thirty villages were visited. The statistics of one of them, Chao Tsum, are given as a fair example of the whole district. This village had a population of five thousand three hundred; over four hundred and fifty have fled; sixty-two have died; forty three little children are without clothes; and there are twenty-five beggars. In another village near by, three persons have hanged themselves because they had nothing to eat, four have jumped into wells and drowned, while in one family of sixteen seven have already died of starvation.

Eleven times in seven days parents were seen selling their children. The corpse of an old man of seventy-two was seen; he had been without food for several days, and then tried to eat ashes and chocked himself to death. In one village there was an old man who tried to run to meet them when he saw them coming, but he was so weak with hunger that he stumbled and fell and died right there on the road.

A young couple who had no means of support were leaving their native district; after being three days on the road without anything to eat the young man sold his wife for fifty coppers so that he might get some food. This would keep him alive for another five or six days.

Another young man left his wife and two children at home while he went to buy some food. He never came back. The wife faced starvation for many days and then hanged herself. The two little ones died.

A hunband and wife with three little children decided to leave because they had nothing more to eat. They first sold the eldest girl for five dollars to make provision for their expenses by the way. The husband went on ahead carrying the two little ones in baskets slung at the ends of the pole that he usually carried the water with. The wife lagged behind. She became so despondent that at last she took off her girdle and hanged herself with it on a tree along the road. A traveller coming up from behind saw what had happened and hurried forward to tell the husband. When the husband heard this he set down the baskets with the two children and the little bundle with the money in it and went back to see. His wife was dead by this time, so he left her hanging there and went on. When he got back to where the children were he looked for the bundle with the five dollars in it. It was gone. This was the last straw. He felt he could hold out no longer. So he took his carrying pole and knocked the two little children on the head. Then he went back and taking off his own girdle he hanged himself on the same tree beside his wife.

These are true stories. The worst is yet to come. Would you like to help?

You are not too late if you make your contribution now. It will just reach Honan in time.

Two Clydesdales Drew 35 Ton Load of Logs

What is said to be the largest load of logs ever drawn by two horses was recently hauled by Fred and Harry, two clydes each weighing over 1,800 pounds, for the Shives Lumber Company of Campbellton Fred and Harry drew the load, which weighs as nearly as could be estimated, thirty-five tons, for a quarter of a mile on a logging road from Two Brooks Camp, on the Upsilquitch River, Restigouche County, to a landing on the river bank

Calf Weighed 182 Pounds at Birth

A cow owned by Mr. Grant Robertson of the Eastons Corners neighborhood recently gave birth to a calf weighing 182 pounds. Nobody around there had ever heard of a calf so heavy at time of birth. Unfortunately it did not live. The dam is a pure-bred Holstein.

"I see a visitor to New York was arrested the other day because he had $350 in his pocket," said Church.

"And it wasn't his own money?" asked Gotham.

"Oh, yes; it was proved in court that it was his own money," replied Church.

"Why on earth did they arrest him, then?"

"He was trying to get out of town with it."

Unsolved Mysteries of the Sea

Steam has robbed the sea of much of its romance, and wireless telegraphy has annihilated the stretches of ocean. But the ocean's mysteriousnesses, maybe, the dread wonders that none has witnessed and told, yet which appear to occur, still remain. One of the latest ships of unsolved mystery is a trading schooner. She was picked up by a U.S. steamer in the mid-Pacific, drifting before the trade wind. She was sound and seaworthy, and apparently had not encountered any bad weather, but not a living soul was on board her, and neither of her boats were missing. All was in order, including the captain's papers and cashbox, and the trade-room and liquor cases were undisturbed. In her deck-house, where a lamp had burned itself out, lay an Austrian Journal many months old, and it had a spot or two of dried blood on it; and there, too, a parrot lay dead in its cage. What had become of the crew is one of the unsolved mysteries of the sea.

There are a number of like instances on record, and, doubtless, many more that have escaped attention. Such a mystery is not confined to any particular one of the Seven Seas. The oceans of the world have similar instances. In the Barents Sea, south of Spitbergan, a whaler out of Peterhead, Scotland, sighted an odd-looking derelict, with running gear and standing rigging broken and flying loose, canvas in tatters, and hull battered and weatherworn. Her boats were gone. When she was boarded it was seen she was built in the early years of last century, and had been icebound for years; ice and snow encumbered her decks and hatchways. In the main cabin lay there on the floor the body of a young and beautiful woman, well preserved by the frosts. Sitting near her, and not far from the ashes of the 'longdead fire' was the corpse of a young man, still holding in its hands the flint and steel, which it appeared, to be yet striking. In a cabin off the cuddy was another body, enbalmed by the Atlantic. The man was sitting in a chair, leaning back in a most natural position, with all the freshness of life in his attitude and expression. No clues were obtainable in explanation of the mystery.

There is another that took place in West Indian waters and it rivals the weirdest supernatural occurrence on land. A Dutch liner for Curacoa fell in with a tramp steamer, which plainly was not under control and without a crew. On the Hollanders having boarded her, the only living thing encountered was a great retriever, and it seemed at first to be mad with terror, but in time calmed down, whining, on hearing human voices and seeing friendly faces. Steam was yet in the boilers though shut off from the engines; in the galley were the breakfasts for the forecastle, and the officers' messrooms; in the charthouse a penholder lay stuck between the pages of the logbook, the ink on its nib not yet quite dry. There were no signs of great disorder, of storm, or fight; but two lifeboats and the skiff were missing. What had become of her entire crew? Why was the dog so frightened?

Another instance in recent years is that of "J. Hopkins," out of Savannah, U. S. A., for St. Thomas. One morning a settler living on the east side of Anegada, the British Virgin Island gronp, saw that a sailing vessel had taken the ground on Horse-Shoe Reef, and gave the alarm. On the Anegadans having put out to her, it was found she was the "J. Hopkins" and had no crew. All sail was set; the fire in the caboose was burning; in the skipper's cabin a pipe lay on the table and a half-emptied tumblerful of rum and water. Above and below deck everything was in order and in its proper place, save that one of the two boats were gone. Where was her crew?

What had happened has never been explained. It is possible, though, that on the calm setting in the boat had been lowered with all hands aboard to tow the ship, that somehow the small craft had parted company, and, caught in the grip of one of the many currents running strong in that locality, had taken the men to a terrible death of thirst and madness.

In 1911-12 the captain of the French sailing-ship, "Emilie Galline, "reported a strange mystery ship. When rounding the Horn his vessel encountered a field of icebergs, and while groping her way into open water she passed a gigantic berg to starboard which carried in a cleft on its pinnacled summit 120 feet in the air, a large three-masted sailing ship, partly dismasted but otherwise intact. No human beings were on the berg, and her boats did not appear to have been launched. What sudden tragedy and mystery of the sea were involved in this vessel's story?

Equally mysterious is a case that was reported from the South China Sea A steamer of the Messageries Maritimes fell in with a large Chinese junk with all her mat sails set, and making her course at her own sweet will. From the way in which she was yawing about, suspicions were aroused on board the Frenchman, and a boat put off to her. Not a person was found on board her, dead or alive, though it was very plain by the personal effects, clothing, etc., she had been crowded.

It was at first supposed that this was the work of pirates, but that this suggestion was wrong lay proved by the fact that her cargo, a rather valuable one of silks and other commodities, had not been broken into, nor had large sums of money been touched. There were no signs of bloodshed or of any instant flight. All was just as if the crew and passengers were lying invisible. Only on the foredeck, near the hatchway, lay a large knife with a jade handle, on which was carved the hideous face of some demon. As the weather was threatening no attempt was made to tow the derelict. Her cargo was transferred and she was set on fire.

The classic instance is, of course, that of the "Maria Celeste." A well-manned and well-found brig with, all told, twenty of a crew, including the captain's wife and little daughter, she set sail from Boston for the Mediterannean. Six weeks later she was picked up, all sails set, off Gibraltar with not a soul in her, and no boats missing. The cabin's breakfast was still on the table. Like the others, the mystery of her is not to be solved.

Demand and Supply of Farm Products

Henry C. Wallace, Secretary for Agriculture in the United States, while admitting that in several of the heaviest producing states there are not as many people on the farms to-day as there were 30 or 40 years ago, claims that this relative decline in the producing population has not been a very serious matter up to the present time. "Certainly it has not been serious from the farmers' standpoint," he declared in his statement on the agricultural situation, issued last month. He pointed out that great advances have been made in methods of production and that the development of labor saving machinery had allowed of an increase of production per man, with the result that, despite increase in total population and decrease in farm population food production per thousand of the total population had steadily increased. This increase had come both from the use of labor-saving machinery and from bringing under cultivation new areas of fertile land. He stated, however, that consumption has now almost overtaken production under normal world conditions.

Reasons for Keeping Standard-bred Poultry

Here are five reasons given by specialists for keeping standard-bred poultry:

Standard-bred poultry is more uniform in size, type and color.

Standard-bred poultry is more attractive in appearance and appeals more strongly to purchasers of stock and eggs.

Standard-bred poultry offers a greater combination of practical and useful qualities suitable to the needs of the farmer and poultry keeper.

The products of standard-bred fowls are more uniform in quality, are in greater demand, and bring better prices.

Standard-bred poultry means greater success and better profits.

"Orchard Cultivation"

(Experimental Farms Note.)

It is a well known fact that growth in the orchard tree is made during the months of June and July after which the growth fill out and ripens. It is also known that early cultivation stimulates growth. The loosening up of the earth aids in the warming of the soil and makes it possible for soil organisms which liberate plant food to become active earlier; air will penetrate better and these organisms will become active to a greater depth than if cultivation is not given. Hence the importance of early spring cultivation to furnish suitable soil conditions for the tree and the organisms upon which the tree is dependent for the liberation of plant food.

Uncultivated areas may be made suitable for the tree by supplying nitrogen in an available form early through the use of Nitrate of Soda and by using a mulch to conserve moisture, but on the whole the practice most suitable for general orchard areas is early cultivation followed by frequent cultivation at intervals of a week or ten days to the middle of June or July 1st after which orchard cultivation should cease.

The first cultivation may be shallow plowing, four to five inches deep, after which surface cultivation with the disc and smoothing harrow to maintain a surface mulch of fine earth is all that is required. Deep cultivation is not desirable, as the feeding roots naturally grow in the surface soil, and deep cultivation may injure them. Shallow cultivation prevents the formation of a surface crust; thus checking excessive evaporation of moisture and retaining it for continuous growth of fruit, and insuring a proper moisture supply for the tree later in the season. As soon as the ground is dry enough after rain it is wise to start the harrow, producing thereby a dust mulch.

After the middle of June a cover crop should be seeded to occupy the ground during the fall; take up excess plant food, and develop humus for the following spring. The common vetch seeded at the rate of 1¼ bushels per acre is the best cover crop. This plant can extract nitrogen from the air and in rease the store of nitrogen as a result. This crop makes vigorous growth on most soils but will do better if the soil is limed. It is a crop fairly easily turned under and it is satisfactory at picking time, as it flattens down after making considerable growth. This cover crop may be plowed under in the fall or not until the following spring, but the usual practise is to fall plow and work with the disc harrow in the spring, which is considered the best method.

The area close to the base of the tree looks better if kept well cultivated, but the cultivation of this area is not necessary and very often much injury is done to the main roots from plowing too deeply close around the tree. It usually is better to leave this space untouched and keep the grass cut to give a neat appearance.

Truth Will Triumph

A Merchant had advertised for a boy. Late in the afternoon a red-headed, freckle-faced, blue-eyed, honest-looking boy applied for the job.

"Do you like to work?" asked the Merchant.

"No, sir!" replied the Boy.

"Then yon can have the job," replied the Merchant. "You are the first boy who's been here to-day who didn't lie about t and say yes."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constant failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore require constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the system. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Cure fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

"Farmer Haskins" at Finch

The Finch Dramatic Club under the auspices of the Women's Institute will present the enjoyable rural comedy drama "Farmer Haskins" in four big acts, in Massey Hall, on the evenings of Thursday, May 12th and Friday May 13th. The cast of characters is a capable one and all can look forward to the treat of the season. Admission 35 cents.

Mother's Day

The second Sunday in May is Mother's Day. One day in the year to devote to "Mother's" happiness, is a privilege and blessing.

Write or go home, or send a gift, message or telegram. Just do the things you may wish you had done when it is too late, for remember "Mother" is not getting any younger.

Maybe you can take her on a trip, or for an outing, or revive some of those other pleasures she had to drop to give comfort and service to her home folk.

Churches will praise her type of motherhood in songs and prayers; white carnations will gleam from the breasts of men and women; papers and poets will laud her goodness and sacrifices, but none of these tributes will gladden her heart, and cheer days to come like affectionate gratitude from you.

Don't forget the love letter home—you are not too poor or busy for that simple remembrance. "Mother" will keep and read it after Mother's Day flowers have faded, and the other tributes are forgotten.

Nothing but good can come from a day that gets us closer to our homes, and the hearts of "the best mothers that ever lived".

"The Confession"

The Enterprise Amusement Co. on Saturday night will present in the Music Hall what is said to be one of the greatest pictures ever screened. While the claim is made for almost every film put out there is more to the claim for "The Confession" than most shows have. The principal role is taken by that great movie actor Henry B. Walthall who starred in the masterpiece known as the "Birth of a Nation", and is said to have excelled even that performance when making "The Confession". The following letter makes it unnecessary for any further mention of the merits of "The Confession".

Hal Reid, The Windsor.
Montreal.

Dear Mr. Reid:

It was with great interest and pleasure that I assisted at the private screening of your photo play entitled The Confession. It is such plays as this that christianizes the stage and the screen. T'is a pity that more of them are not written. Would that every man, woman and child could witness "The Confession".

May your photo-play bring with it all the good intended.

Very Sincerely Yours,
(Rev.) John L. O'Rourke,
Priest, Chancellor. The Archbishop's Palace, Montreal, Canada.

TOYS HILL

Gardening and spring work is the order of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Steele spent Thursday in Avonmore.

We are glad to see Lloyd Casselman able to be out again.

The play which was put on at the Orange Hall, Friday evening by the young people was a decided success.

The attendance was good, the order perfect throughout the four acts. The young people are to be congratulated for such a good concert and anyone in the surrounding district would not make a mistake to invite these young people to put on this play any time.

Dr. McLaughlin, Winchester, was called to the hill Sunday evening.

Mrs. Farmer, Winchester, visited her sister Mrs. Rob. Kirkwood, Jr. over the week end.
