Samworth—McElheran

A pretty wedding ceremony took place on Wednesday evening May 16th, in Chalmers church, Ottawa, when Miss Jennie McElheran, only daughter of Mrs. I. Garrow of Chesterville, and Mr. Walter O. Samworth, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Samworth of Granby, Que. were united in marriage. Rev. J. W. Woodside performed the ceremony.

The church was attractively decorated for the occasion and appropriate music was provided by Mr J. A. Smith.

The bride who was given in marriage by her brother, Duncan M. McElheran, looked charming in a gown of white crepe meotor trimmed flowers and train line with shell pink georgette. Her veil was caught with a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of ophelia roses and wore the gift of the groom, a rope of pearls.

The bride was attended by Miss Isabel Peterkin, who wore a pretty frock of acquamarine blue taffeta, and leghorn hat with trimmings of the same tone with black velvet streamers. She wore an ivory-rose pendent a gift from the groom and carried a bouquet of roses and sweet peas.

Mr. Gilman G. Bullis was best man. The ushers were Mr. W.A. Fraser and Mr. Nelson Samworth.

During the signing of the register a solo "All Joy Be Thine", was rendered by Miss A. A. Radford.

The gown worn by the bride's mother was of black canton crepe with a bouquet of American beauty roses, with hat to match.

The out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. I. Garrow, Mrs. A. Forbes, Mr. Duncan and Mr. Cecil McElheran of Chesterville, Miss Mildred and Mr. Nelson Samworth of Granby, Que., and Miss Melba Cameron of Carlsbad Springs.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride 412 McLeod st. after which Mr. and Mrs. Samworth left on a motor trip through the Eastern States. On their return they will reside in Ottawa.

The bride's gift to the groom was a leather club bag. Miss Radford received a novelty ring of white gold and onyx and Mr. Bullis a gold pencil.

The bride and groom received many beautiful gifts including a cabinet of silver from Just Motors, Limited, Arm Chair from Money Order Branch Post Office Dept. and a number of substantial checks.

J. A. Campbell Liberal Candidate

Thursday afternoon last the Liberal Convention for the purpose of selecting a candidate to represent the party in Dundas in the forthcoming election attracted a crowd of about one hundred and fifty to Hamilton's Hall.

The names of W.B. Lawson, K. C., and W. Hamilton of Chesterville; G.H. Davey of Iroquois and J.A. Campbell of Winchester, were placed in nomination. The name of J.H. Meikle of Morrisburg, was also tendered but being a moment after the close of nomination was disallowed.

Up to three o'clock none of the prominent members of the party advertised to give addresses had put in an appearance, until the arrival of H. H. Dewart, K. C. formerly leader of the Liberals in Legislature, arrived by motor from Ottawa.

Those nominated were alloted ten minute periods to state their claims for consideration. Messrs. Lawson and Davey withdrew, leaving J. Campbell and Hamilton from which to make a choice. A difficulty arose as to the method in which this should be done. Finally it was agreed that all paid up members of the Liberal Association would be allowed to vote, and an opportunity was given those who desired to pay up and have the privilege of voting, which resulted in a total vote of 74 being polled, 42 of which were for Campbell and 32 for Hamilton.

Mr. Dewart went briefly over the Drury administration pointing out the financial condition of the Province which he stated had gone from worse to worse, year by year. The debt of the Province had been increased more in three years under the Drury regime than in fifteen years by preceeding administrations.

He also paid his compliments to Hydro radials and the English river timber deals.

Conservative Defer Selection of Candidate

The meeting of the Liberal—Conservatives of Dundas which was held at Winchester Springs on Monday of this week to select a candidate to contest the County at the coming Provincial election in the interest of their party, reminded many of the old-time political gatherings when party strife ran high.

Winchester Springs has been the scene of many enthusiastic political meetings, but it is doubtful if ever before, that historic meeting place, has witnessed such a large and enthusiastic gathering. Promptly at 1.30 o'clock the President, Dr. George Collison, of Brinston, called the meeting to order and announced that, since the hall was so crowded and so many unable to get into the hall, all business, except the business of selecting a candidate, would be deferred to a later date and he immediately called for nominations.

The following were nominated:—Dr. Collison, Aaron Sweet, William Timmins, Ralph Keyes, O. D. Casselman, Irwin Hilliard, Thos. Irving, M.J. Casselman, Alex. McGruer, John McCormick, James F. Ault, Col. Lorne Mulloy, Joseph Robinson, Mrs. Bonter.

The President announced that two minutes would be given each nominee to declare his or her intention of remaining as a candidate at the delegated convention which must be held if more than one remained in the field.

In speeches which the President firmly kept within the prescribed time limit all withdrew except the following:—Col. Mulloy, of Iroquois, Aaron Sweet of Winchester and Joseph Robinson, Reeve of Mountain, who were each given ten minutes to urge their claims to be the Conservative standard bearer for Dundas.

During the course of the meeting, after all had resigned except the above named gentlemen, the demand was made that O.D. Casselman be declared the unanimous choice of the convention. In an instant occurred such a spontaneous demonstration as rarely is seen at a public meeting, the President having difficulty in quieting the cheering and applause. Mr. Casselman was assured that the whole party would be behind him and urged to accept the unanimous nomination. Mr. Casselman in a short speech expressed his appreciation of this honour done him but explained that while his services had always been given to his party he could not at this time accept the nomination.

A meeting of the delegates has been called for the 25th to select one of the three above named gentlemen.

What a Great Man is Jack Miner Everyone Should Hear Him

Mr. F. W. Kerr, of the Manitoba College, Winnipeg, writing to the press says:—

Dear Friend:—When Jack Miner comes you ought to hear him. He is the most unique character I have ever met and one of the most deeply religious. He has never been taught oratory or anything else and yet he has all the gifts of the born orator. His addresses are a subtle inter-play of wit and pathos, suffused with a sense of the elemental simplicities of life. He looks like a lumber jack but his touch on the wounded foot of a Canada goose is as light as a mother's. His heart seems changed with a great saving love for every creature God has made.

I think Jack Miner would be a great Evangelist. He wields the same magnetic power over vast audience that Alexander did with song. He went to give an address before the professors in Toronto university and they kept him talking for three solid hours.

I think we ought to tell our friends and congregations about this wonderful man so they will not find out what they have missed after he has gone.

Yours very sincerely
F. W. Kerr, Manitoba College.

Women Will Vote at Election

The coming Ontario election will be fought under some new conditions which will be of interest to nearly everyone who has a vote. In 1920 the Legislature spent weeks framing amendments to the existing election law, while last year many revisions were made to act respecting voters' lists. The main idea of both these enactments was to make it easy and convenient for every person over 21 years of age, a British subject and not disqualified, to register a vote. In 1888 Ontario was given manhood suffrage, and the act of 1920 gave women the ballot.

The present law allows the vote to every man or woman who has attained the age of 21 at the time of the voting, provided such person is a British subject. Each qualified voter must have been a resident in Canada for at least a year prior to polling, and for a period of three months in the electoral district, or, in the case of a city divided into two or more constituencies, a re-ident in the city for three months. In unorganized districts the voter must have been living in Ontario for a year, and at the time of polling be domiciled in the electoral district. Provision is made whereby persons who have moved from one electoral division to another may obtain a certificate from the revising officer which will enable them to poll their votes in the new riding.

Child Drank Oil, Died of Results

Kerosene oil proved fatal to the two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kellop of Croils Island, opposite Aultsville, last Thursday night, dying four hours after drinking the oil. The kerosene was kept in a bottle which the child procured in some unknown manner. Everything possible was done for the child, emetics being administered promply, but to no avail.

Preacher-Jockey Rides With Bible in Pocket

Al Cormack, the well known Woodstock Jockey who has returned recently from riding in France, says that one of the most successful jockeys in France this year is a parson named Jack Jennings. On Sunday's the parson preaches in the church, of which he is the regular clergyman, and on week days he sports the silks, and with considerable success. "Al" says the preacher-jockey always rides with a bible in his pocket, and some of the other "Jocks" regarded this practise as the reason for much of his success.

Carried Rifle and $1,000

Pembroke Standard—Allan Willett, an irresponsible, who claims Torbolton township as his home, was found wandering about town last week and was detained by the police. When searched at the police office he was found to have $1,000 in bills in his possession, which he obtained through the sale of a farm. When questioned he stated that he had come up the Ottawa River in a boat as far as the Roche Fondu rapids and came overland from that point to Beachburg, and thence to Pembroke. He purchased a rifle in a local store and was carrying it when arrested. He was held here until his brother who was notified of his arrest, came from Ottawa and was permitted to take him away.

Rod and Gun for June.

The brotherhood of anglers ought to be particularly pleased with the June issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, because it is the Fishing Number, and because it features that splendid sport generously. In fact, the June issue, which is now on sale, is so chock-ful of attractive material that it is certain to be an absolute treat for fisherman all over Canada. "Fishing on the Great Slave Lake" is a rattling good story and illustrated profusely, "Spearing a Devil-Fish" is a yarn that is different, while there are many others equally good. But non fishermen are not forgotten in this number, and there are oth r features. There is a big, generous Guns and Ammunition department, W. C. Motley's new "Outdoor Talk" department, and a large collection of miscellaneous material that rounds out a top-notch magazine.

Rod and Gun in Canada is published monthly at Woodstock, Ontario, by W. J. Taylor, Limited.

Refused Admission to U.S. and Stranded at Prescott

Seventy-two young men, including tudents from Kingston and vicinity were stranded at Prescott. They left Kingston Monday of last week for Massena, having been informed by a man who visited Kingston last week, representing himself as an employment agent, that big wages were offered by the aluminum plants. Upon reaching Prescott they crossed on the ferry to Ogdensburg, but were never permitted to leave the boat, and were sent back by the United States immigration officials. They wrote to relatives and friends at Kingston for money.

Early Spraying of the Orchard Important

How many times to spray the apple orchard is a matter of concern to most orchardists. From the results of experiments carried on by the Division of Horticulture of the Dominion Experimental Farms, as outlined in a recently issued bulletin on "Modern Orchard Practices", it appears absolutely necessary to make at least five sprayings to control apple scab effectively in bad seasons. In the opinion of the author, Mr. M.B. Davis, who is chief assistant horticulturist, the importance of early sprays as an insurance against the loss of crop has been neglected and overlooked to much in the past. It is the early sprays, he says, which save the crop. The wise man sprays from the early spring to make his crop set.

Apple scab is a disease that spreads or reproduces itself by spores so miute that they cannot be discerned with the naked eye. When the weather becomes sufficiently mild to start the trees, these spores are liberated from the old leaves and infest the young leaves, reproducing new spores in a very few days. By the time the blossoms are ready to burst there may be many millions of these spores ready to infect them. At this stage the pistil, which will ultimately ripen into an apple, is very tender and if attacked by a germinating spore, which sends out roots to penetrate the skin, will be killed and the chances of a crop ruined. Ravages of scab are often attributed to imperfect pollination or frost when in reality black spot or scab is the cause of the loss. Cool, moist weather, such as we have in spring, is the most favourable for the development of scab, which spreads but little during the summer. Thus the important sprays are the early ones. Spraying is a preventative, and cannot repair damage already done. It prevents the development of the germinating spore. The bulletin here referred to, goes very thoroughly into the details of the cultivation, spraying and management of the apple orchard.

A lady went into a photographer's to have her picture taken—naturally. While the photographer was adjusting the camera, the lady wrapt a clothesline around her skirts.

"You'll have to take that off, madam," said the photographer, "I can't take your picture that way."

"You can't fool me that way, young man," she said. "I know you see me upside down in that camera."

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. McCORMICK-DEERING CORN PLANTER

In order to get the best results, corn should be planted with a Two-row Planter—Not a Grain Drill. When the Grain Drill is used it is difficult to get all the rows the same distance apart, which mrkes clsan cultivation impossible. The McCormick-Deering Corn Planter will plant in rows from 28 inches apart to 44 inches apart, with adjustments every two inches. The mechanism of the Planter is very simple and can be changed from using wire to a straight Corn Drill in a moment's time. This machine also plants Peas, Beans, Sunflowers, and many other seeds.

Bandits in China Attacking Foreigners

So far as China is concerned, banditry is probably the second oldest profession, and those who are astonished at its recent manifestation in Shantung are not aware of Chinese conditions. What is novel about the present demonstrations is the fact that they were directed against foreigners. Hitherto it has been rare for a Chinese bandit to interfere with a foreigner. He has been regarded as too dangerous to molest because of the alacrity with which strong foreign Governments hasten to defend their nationals and perhaps in the process get a stronger foothold in China. To the Chinese the foreigners are still the "devils" that they were in the days of the Tai Ping rebellion, but they are feared and respected. Even the recent outbreak was not unexpected by foreign residents in Shantung. It was indeed predicted after the Japanese had left the peninsula. The Japanese held the Shantung bandits in check or obliged them to confine their depredations to their own countrymen. When they left it is estimated that there were 24,000 active bandits in Shantung with whom the Chinese authorities were utterly unable to cope.

The bandits of China are as a rule the creature of weather conditions. When rains fall moderately so that crops are good there are few bandits, except the professional criminals who remain banditts all the year round. These, however, are the mere nucleus of the bandit army. When there is a crop failure, tens of thousands of Chinese farmers turn bandit for the time being and prey upon the neignboring towns and villages. It is their avocation between crop seasons, and they willingly return to tilling the soil if the next year promises a good harvest. This double occupation is of great service to them when the Government, fearing that banditry in a certain district in verging upon rebellion, sends troops to suppress them. When the troops arrive the bandits have vanished. They are bending their backs over their few poor acres, their weapons hidden and all signs obliterated of their lawless calling. They are also aided by the willingness of the soldiers sent to hunt them to share in their loot, and perhaps to desert and become bandits themselves. It is said that thousands of the Shantung bandits were at one time soldiers.

Late Planting For Garden Vegetables

(Experimental Farms Note).

A great many of our vegetables requiring a comparatively short season for development are raised and used only once during the season in the average kitchen garden. Experience has shown that a succession of these crops is both possible and practical, and, although the early vegetables may be in a measure replaced by the later maturing sorts, they are, nevertheless, appreciated if available during the entire season. Spinach is as acceptable during August and September as in June; crisp fresh lettuce will make just as good a salad in autumn as in the early summer; green peas are a favourite dish at any time of the year; and late garden beets and carrots always seem to come in at the right time.

By correct arrangement and choice of the right varieties, such vegetables may be made to follow each other, thus making the garden more productive and eliminating the vacant spaces. Late cabbage may be transplanted into the vacant spaces left by early peas; spinach will follow raddish or lettuce, and peas will successfully follow any of the earliest vegetables.

On the Dominion Experimental Station at Lennoxville it has been found that the most satisfactory varieties for late planting, and the latest dates at which they may be successfully planted, are as follow:—

Spinach, Victoria, August 5th.
Radish, French Breakfast, " 5th.
Lettuce, Grand Rapids, July 15th.
Garden Beet, Detroit dark red, " 15th.
Garden Carrot, Chantenay, " 5th.
Pea, Thos. Laxton, " 5th.
Cabbage, Copenhagen Market, June 20th.
Cauliflower, Early Snowball, " 20th.

In all late sowings the seed requires a deeper covering than if sown in the spring. During the summer months the surface of the soil is often quite hot and usually too dry to permit of germination. Seed planted shallow will therefore, germinate poorly, and any seedlings that may get started will usually die during the first dry spell as a result of the young roots not being able to reach moisture. Accordingly, the depth at which the seed should be placed is governed by the depth at which moist soil may be found. This will usually be from one to two inches.

For further information on this subject write to your nearest Experimental Farm or Station

Whittaker the Optician will be in Chesterville on June 12th Finch 14th.

To Ban Catnip; Movement on Foot

(Toronto "Evening Telegram.")

A cataclysm has struck Catville. Consternation is rife. A rumor is on foot, not to say on four feet, that a number of the womenfolk have organized the World Cats Temperance Union and are out for total prohibition of catntp in every shape and form.

A. Thomas Cat, president of the Night Watchmen's Union, who rubbed up against me on Main Street, informed your correspondent that the rumor was only too true, and he considered it a vile violation of purrsonal liberty.

"We want no pussyfooting in Catville," he growled. "I can't see why these women don't attend to their kittens and leave well enough alone. Up to now everything has been the cat's pyjamas."

Your correspondent eager to get the view of the man in the street, or rather the cat in the lane, interviewed quite a few cats on the subject A few of them professed to know nothing about it, merely saying that it was news to them, while some who were aware of the prohibition movement refused to express an opinion at such an early stage, contenting themselves with remaining on the fence in the meantime. The majority of Tom cats, however, expressed themselves as highly incensed, and even went as far to say that it was nothing short of a catastrophe. The women, however, mostly favored the abolition of catnip, as they thought it would keep the Toms home at night.

Your correspondent managed to interview Miss Tabby Cat, the leader of the prohibition movement, while she was having lunch in a down town garbage can. She became rather ruffled when we explained the nature of our errand.

"I have nothing to say except this," she said: "catnip has ruined more lives than all the dogs, boots and water pitchers put together. It is the cause of catalepsy, catarrh and cataract of the eye. We women are going to see that it is nipped."

Just One Hitch.

A woman entered the police court, dragging after her a very untidy boy about twelve years old. As soon as she got the attention of the magistrate she exclaimed: "Oh, your worship, this boy will have to be sent to a reformatory school." "Is he a bad boy?" inquired the magistrate. "He is," replied the woman with emphasis. "I can do nothing with him." "Doesn't he go to school?" "Well, I can't tell that; but he calls me names; refuses to do as I tell him, and has several times broken my windows." "And you want him sent to a reformatory?" "Yes, sir." "Is he your only son?" "Oh, no, sir. He's the son of one of my neighbors, and I've been waiting two whole weeks to catch him." The boy didn't go to the reformatory.

Talked To Doctors During Operation

Thomas Thompson of Guelph is wondering why people make so much fuss about operations. When his stomach broke through the abdominal wall as a result of a fall he was rushed to the general hospital there Friday. During the whole operation for traumatic hernia he chatted with the doctors and nurses about his home town of Edinburgh, and when it was over walked back to the ward. When the surgeon looked in on him a quarter of an hour later he was digesting his mid-day meal, and smoking a cigarette. As the member of the Canadian contingent, Thompson's lungs were impaired by German gas. In such cases there is always a certain risk in administering ether. So local, or block, anaesthesia was resorted to instead. After the novacaine was injected, the patient knew everything that was going on, except on the other side of the screen, which was erected across his chest to hide the surgeon's work from his view.

As a general rule the patient is wheeled back to his cot, but Thompson declared he had had enough of stretchers in France. The hardy Scotsman insisted on walking. And he is none the worse for the walk.

The Life of Seeds

The recent assertion made by Colonel Wm. Bovce Thompson of New York that he had brought back seeds of plants and grains from the Valley of the Kings, 3,400 years old, and which are being tested at Yonkers to ascertain if they have life, bears an interesting relation to an article in the current "Empire Review," written by T.C. Bridges.

Mr. Bridges' article points out that there are few questions concerning which botanists disagree so thoroughly as that of the life of seeds. There are some seeds such as parsnips that, as every gardner knows, will not preserve their vitality for more than twelve months, but there are others, such as beans and peas, which may be kept for years and still germinate when planted.

Most farmers declare that, as a general rule, seed more than five years old is quite useless, yet long ago Mr. James Sherrin testified that he had grown good plants from maize seed which had actually been in his possession for no fewer than 38 years.

In the Life of John (Rob Roy) Macgregor, which was published in 1894, the author describes the opening of a sarcophagus brought from Egypt, and pronounced to be at least 2,600 years old In the sarcophagus were found six grains of oats, John Macgregor planted two of these seeds, one of which germinated and produced a stalk four feet high, and bearing twelve grains of oats.

Another testimony to the long life of seeds found under similar circumstances to the last mentioned, is given by Mr. Penrose Williams, a fellow of the Edinburgh Royal College of Surgeons. Investigating a prehistoric site in Cornwall in the year 1901, he came upon a store of grass seed identified as "Triticum perenne." This, although it had been dormant for a period estimated at three thousand years, was successfully sown and cultivated.

Perhaps the most startling case of the kind occurred in Greece some 50 years ago, when a company was started to work the old silver mines at Laurium. At the mouth of these mines, which are extremely ancient, lay masses of scoriae, which owing to the inefficient methods of the ancient workers, still contained large quantities of silver. When this rubble had been removed the whole ground became covered with a sort of yellow poppy of the genus "glaucium". This poppy, which was originally described by Pliny and Dioscorides, had disappeared from the face of the earth for fifteen or twenty centuries, yet underneath all that mass of rubble the seeds had remained dormant during nearly the whole period of the Christian era.

Even where land that has been "drowned" for a long time is drained new species of plants will sometimes appear. A case in point was seen at Abbeyville. Here land that had been under water for more than two centuries was drained, whereupon a wood of young elders sprang up spontaneously. Yet this tree had been hitherto unknown in the district.

A forester in New Jersey proposes to set out forty acres of otherwise undesirable land to Christmas trees. He will plant about five thousand trees to the acre, at an estimated cost of $40, and believes that in six or seven years every tree that is harvested will be worth thirty cents. The estimated increase from $40 to $1500 may be too great, but there is no doubt that in a thickly settled region Christmas and nursery trees can be made a profitable crop.

Influenza Takes Toll

From the surrounding counties near Peterboro comes the report that there is a sudden increase in mortality figures for young pigs this year. Dr. Thomas Johnston, veterinary surgeon, of Peterboro, gives as a reason the extreme cold of a long, hard winter, and a type of influenza among animals which he declares, was prevalent all over the world this year. "It was worse among dogs, for instance this winter, all over the world, than ever known of before."

In Cat Language?

Little Alice was cuddled up in a big chair near the fireplace, reading aloud to her kitten, which was on her lap. Mother, coming into the room, smiled as she watched the two. "What on earth are you doing, Alice?" she asked.

"Reading fairy stories to kitty," the little girl replied soberly.

"Who ever heard of such a thing!" her mother exclaimed. "Why, don't you know your kitty can't understand fairy tales?"

"Of course I do," Alice admitted. "But I stop every little while and explain them to her."

One reason why farm products are not so high-priced as other things is that the demand for most farm products is not cumulative. People cannot put off eating till another year and then come to the table with a double appetite.

Communication

Editor of Record:—

Dear Sir:- In your last issue, an anonymous writer signing himself "A Beallite," criticises "those responsible" for interfering with the proposed visit of Prof. Beall to our Schools. Will you permit us as representatives of the High and Public Schools of Chesterville, to give a plain, unvanished and, we trust, unbiased version of the matter. It is not necessary for any heat or abuse in discussing it.

There may be, and there is, an honest difference of opinion as to the wisdom or benefit of this series of talks or lectures by Prof. Beall. Proof of this lies in the fact, that after 22 years work, so small a proportion of the schools of the Province in comparison with the mass have availed themselves of his services. He has visited 31,000 pupils out of over 500,000. There is the further fact that the Education Department has not deemed it expedient to add to the staff of worker's in that line.

The postponement of the proposed meeting here was not grounded on any opposition to Prof. Beall's work on the part of the Trustees themselves. As guardians of the schools, and appointed by the people, they considered it a part of their trust to consult the feelings and wishes of the people and from the information they got, they came to the conclusion that the people here were not ready for it at present. Further, the school examinations were coming on, and they thought it would not be wise to distract the attention of the pupils from their proper and urgent school work, just now. If Prof. Beall is a reasonable man, he should not take offence at our attitude. If there is any blame, it must rest upon the ones who took upon themselves to invite Mr. Beall. We do not for a moment suppose he was self-invited.

Having been in trusted with the care of the schools for a number of years, we submit we are likely to be acquainted with the conditions, and requirements of the schools as even Mr. "A Beallite" can possibly be.

Yours sincerely
Isaac Garrow, Chairman H. S. B.
Miles Brown, Chairman P. S. B.

(The above has been read by the undersigned and as Principal of the High School I consider the present time altogether inopportune for a series of talks by Prof. Beall. As far as I am concerned this is solely on account of the proximity of final examinations. I have received no written request from Mr. Beall for permission to give these lectures and he has received no invitation from anyone in connection with the H. S. Board or staff to visit the High School.

THURSDAY, M Y 24TH, 1923.

Sherman Said it

(The Veteran)

The Canadian soldier on active service received $400 per year in money, a grubstake of bully beef, hardtack and a few other of the simple necessities of existence, and alternated between a hole in the mud and a hard plank as living quarters.

A prominent lawyer, engaged by the Canadian government on Grand Trunk arbitration proceedings, received $400 per day in cash, and a living allowance of $20 per day which enabled him to live in luxury and dine in state.

When the Canadian soldier was mustered out of the service he was paid a gratuity ranging from $70 to $600, according to the length and place of service and dependents.

Before the lawyer set a finger to his task he was paid $10,000 by the Canadian Government as a retainer fee.

The unmarried Canadian soldier who served four years overseas was paid a total of $2,100, including war service gratuity.

The prominent lawyer who was engaged for 238 days, or one-sixth of the time spent by the soldier in answering the call of duty, received a total af $95,880.

The Canadian soldier was subject to strict discipline, of necessity he lived a a hard life, he sacrificed home life, was separated from his loved ones, daily faced death, and in the end was discharged, in many cases physically impaired, and confronted with the task of re-establishing himself in civilian life.

The lawyer was under no restrictions, was not debarred from the pleasures of life, and in the end returned to his already extensive legal practice with the enhanced prestige which his job for the government at $400 a day probably brought him.

Three other lawyers received $150 a day while engaged away from their home centres on the same task. Still others received lesser amounts down to $50 per day.

The average ex-soldier will offer no comment concerning the men who received these handsome fees, but he wil do some desperately hard thinking when he recalls the cheeseparing which cut his pension by ten per cent. or denied treatment to his chum who went away in 1914 in the pink of condition and returned in 1919 half wrecked physically but of whom there is no record on his official documents of "hospitalization or treatment on service."

"We can never estimate in monetary terms the value of your services to the nation," the politician exclaimed with fervor when the soldier returned home. But when it came to estimating the value of the services of legal counsel the politician suffered from no such limitation.

The count in the "yes" column opposite Sherman's famous declaration is increased by one to 2,762,498.

Cochrane Relief Fund

During the past week the Ontario Red Cross has been completing its relief organization in Cochrane. The Emergency Hospital continues to function under the management of Mrs Young, the efficient matron, and her staff of nurses and orderlies: all expenses of salaries and maintenance being borne by the Red Cross.

Miss May Morley, Public Health Nurse, is in charge of all Red Cross supplies which she issues to the hospital or to the visiting nurses for patients in their homes.

Miss Jean Walker is assisting Miss Morley, more particularly in the work among the afflicted families, ascertaining their individual needs in co-operation with the municipal authorities.

The chief need for many weeks to come will be a supply of proper food, not only for patients and convalescents in their homes but also for the families where the parents are sick or only just recovering from the fever. Accordingly, the Red Cross has sent up Miss Ruth Dean, B.A., and trained dietitian to take charge of this work and to make plans for a business-like system of food supply.

Although the epidemic is abating there will be work to do for the convalescents for many weeks, and Dr. George, District Officer of Health, writes "There is still a great deal of work and still great necessity for precautions, and the outlook is that Cochrane will have sporadic cases of typhoid throughout the whole summer". Dr. George also says "In the fight against the epidemic, the Red Cross shouldered a big part of the burden"

Meanwhile, the Province is beginning to respond to the appeal for help; although, at the date of writing, there has not been time for any general response from municipalities. We are informed, however, that the City Council of Toronto has passed a resolution authorizing a grant to be made by the Board of Control at its next meeting, and other municipalities are considering similar action.

The Red Cross Local Branch of North Bay has voted $1200, and the Ottawa Branch $2000 to the fund. The President of another Branch has sent his personal cheque for $100 and arranged with a local newspaper to open a fund.

The Red Cross is deeply indebted to the weekly press of the Province for its magnificant contribution of free advertising, the results of which are becoming daily more evident, and the whole press daily and weekly, has united in giving friendly editorials and a generous allotment of space in the "news" columns the value of which to the Red Cross cannot be computed.

Great Cities Not Worth While

Are great cities worth their cost? This was the question put before meeting of the New York Railroad Club by Daniel L. Turner, chief engineer of the Transit Commission. Mr. Turner, in answering his own question, made it plain that great cities are not worth their cost Cities are insatiable, he said, in their consumption of wealth, and his figures are such as to make one pause and consider the general situation. For instance, he said that the U. S. railway terminals made necessary by the hiving of people have cost the country ten billions of dollars, which is about half the total cost of the railway systems. Another statement was to the effect that every worker in the United States was carrying an investment of $1,200 in transportation to enable him to work and live.

It is well that such matters should be brought to the attention of the public, for this hiving of individuals in huge cities is unquestionably wrong from every point of view. First of all as a city grows in size it becomes a more expensive place in which to live. The one problem of transporting the working portion of a large city's population to and from their business is of itself almost past solution. In a city the size of Montreal or Toronto the average worker is spending an hour per day in getting to his work in the morning and getting home again in the evening. Measured by the year this means that one spends thirteen days of twenty-four hours each on street cars yearly, to say nothing of the cash that it costs to make the uncomfortable journey.

If the journey is made in a motor car one is still worse off. If the car is parked on the street it becomes a public nuisance, and if "stabled" it is an added, and unnecessary expense. Every improvement added to a large city, adds a tax all out of proportion to the service rendered. In other words a thousand of population added to a city is not an asset; these people are really a liability as they add to the taxation of those who were there before them, by demanding and obtaining improvements for which the entire city has to pay.

Eventually a city that is adding fast to its population outgrows its water system, its transportation system, its highways, its sidewalks, its parks and so on through the list. Then they are all reconstructed not that they are worn out, but are outgrown, and up goes the taxes again to make good the cost. All this must be added to the cost of doing business as well as to the cost of living. As a matter of fact we are going around in a vicious circle we find the costs advanced, with no material benefit to the individual.

When a city doubles its population it pretty well doubles its taxes. This has been so with New York and with Toronto, and would have been so with Montreal if that city had even pretended to keep up to date from a civic administration point of view.—Toronto Saturday Night.

Here and There

Each acre of corn grown in Ohio costs on an average 46.26 hours of labor.

Canada is now second on the list as an exporting land, the per capita being $100.63 per annum.

A new station is being built by the Canadian Pacific Railway at Fredericton at a cost of $50,000.

Half a million Canadians look to the forests each day for their meals and lodging, and more than 100,000 Canadian workmen are engaged in converting forest products into one form or another.

The large party of Hebrideans who were brought to Canada on the Canadian Pacific Steamships "Metagama" and "Marloch" have gone to Red Deer, Alta., where they will form an agricultural colony.

Seven hundred farmers and farm laborers arrived in Canada recently on the Canadian Pacific steamer "Montcalm." These colonists are proceeding to Ontario and western points where they will take up farm work.

The project of a ship canal across Scotland from the Clyde to the Firth of Forth was brought to the fore again at a recent meeting of the Mid-Scotland Ship Canal Association, and there is a possibility of something being started in this connection in the near future.

A single pair of potato bugs would, without check, increase to 60,000,000 in one season; the hop aphis, developing thirteen generations in a single year would, if unchecked to the end of the twelfth generation, have multiplied to ten sextillions.

Canadian air pilots flew 294,449 miles carrying 9,153 passengers and 77,850 pounds of freight in 1922, according to a report of the Canadian Air Board. Saskatchewan pilots led in the Dominion, carrying 3,622 passengers. Manitoba pilots carried 1,622 people, and British Columbia pilots 1,122.

A company has been formed in London to exploit sunken treasure in Navarino Bay, off the west coast of Greece. The promoters state that there is a matter of $45,000,000 in bullion and other forms still at the bottom of the Bay, where it was sunk with the united fleets of Egypt and Turkey by the united British, French and Russian fleets in 1827.

Last summer 4,000 forest fires cleared away at least ten times as many trees as were cut down for lumber, pulp and paper, and all other industrial purposes. A very large percentage of the fires were caused by careless campers and sportsmen who "thought it would die out" or cast away a lighted match or cigarette end.

Improvement of camping facilities at Banff for automobile tourists is now being made. The Mount Rundle camp site is being improved and enlarged, and will be equipped with all modern appliances. It is expected that as a result of the opening of the Banff-Windermere road this year, the tourist traffic through Banff will be the heaviest ever recorded.

At the annual meeting of the Canadian Pacific Railway, President E. W. Beatty pointed out that prospects for the immigration into Canada of the class of colonist urgently needed to develop the country's natural resources were much brighter than they had been in the past two or three years, and an increased traffic from Great Britain and Northern Europe was indicated by the largely increased western movement on the company's ships during the past four months of this year.

BONDS

Are Mortgages on Fixed Assets

When a township issues debentures (or bonds) it gives a mortgage on the whole township for security to the buyers of the bonds for the loan of their money for a definite number of years at a satisfactory rate of interest.

If the amount required is large it is divided into small mortgages, (that is, bonds or debentures) of $500 or $1,000 each, with the same security behind each, so that investors with small sums may take advantage it.

Bonds or debentures are rated the safest kind of an investment.

Protecting Plants From Light Frosts

Coverings of rather heavy cloth laid directly over garden truck or other low-growing plants are effective in protecting against moderate frosts. The heat from the ground and the plants is thus conserved, and the losses of heat by radiation from the plant to the sky are cut off; moreover the air movement is so slight near the ground that there is little tendency for the cold outside air to be forced under or through the covering.

The temperature of the surface of the cloth exposed to the sky is lowered by radiation and may fall to a low point, but as both the cloth itself and the air underneath it are very poor conductors of heat, the temperature of the covered plants falls much more slowly. The heat that has penetrated a few inches into the ground during the day is slowly conducted to the surface during the night and aids in keeping the temperature under the cover above the freezing point.

It is evident, therefore, that coverings of this kind should be placed early in the evening when a frost is expected, before much of the heat accumulated in the soil during the day has been lost. Tin cans or other metal coverings should not be used to protect plants from frost. Metals are good conductors of heat and are also good radiators unless very highly polished. Therefore the temeprature is likely to fall nearly as low under a covering of this kind as in the outside air.

The Stake for Husband Kiling

Along about the second day after a judge has pronounced sentence in some sensational case in the British Court of justice people begin to speculate just what would have happened to the prisoner had he or she lived a hundred years ago. Enterprising editors detail reporters to dig up parallel cases, and as British justice of the eighteenth century was a primitive affair these make enlightening reading.

In one recent week sentence was pronounced in three murder cases, each one ending with the judge donning his black cap, and in each case a woman was in the dock. In the case which has aroused the most comment Mrs. Thompson, who was found guilty of helping to murder her husband, would have been burned at the stake had she lived a hundred and forty years ago.

In those days the murder of a husband by a wife, of an employer by a servant or a bishop by a clergyman was called petty treason; that is, the murder of a superior to whom the offender owed special fidelity or from whom he received special benefits. If a man killed his wife that was not petty treason, it was merely murder. High treason of course, was and is an offense against the King, or even at one time against his coinage, makers of "bad" money being accused under this head.

In the 1700's men convicted of high or petty treason were hanged, drawn and quartered, while women convicted of either offense were burned at the stake. This difference in sentence was thought to be a great privilege to women. The law said "As the decency due to the sex forbids the exposure and public mangling of their bodies, the sentence is to be drawn to the gallows and there to be burned alive." In later years the cruelty of this punishment was mitigated by strangling the criminal before the flames reached her A stake about ten feet high was planted in the ground and the culprit suspended from an iron ring so that the faggots were kindled under her feet.

Parish registers in various parts of the country contain records of cases of burning of wives as late as 1782, that is 140 years ago. The parish register of a Somerset village contains this entry under "Marriages": "5 March, 1753, John Bruford, of West Monckton, to Susannah Davis, of Huntstile. An unfortunate marriage. She poisoned him and was burned for so doing at Wells the ensuing autumn."

An Essex register contains the following: "2 August, 1753, Thomas Ockendon of this parish was buried at Canewdon after he has been barbarously murdered by his own wife the Tuesday before. She was burned at Chelmsford for the said murder."

It was not until 1790 that the punishment of burning for either petty or high treason was abolished and hanging substituted. Forty years later the offense of petty treason was merged in that of wilful murder, and from 1830 to this day there has been no legal difference between the murder of a wife by a husband and that of a husband by a wife.

Making The Deaf Hear

When you are talking to partially deaf people do not shout. When you do it simply makes a roar in their ears, and they cannot distinguish the words.

If you wish them to hear you, you must speak in an ordinary tone of voice, but slowly and distinctly. Particularly enunciate distinctly the end of your words and sentences and do not let them trail off into a mumble. We ought to know that the trouble with a deaf person is, not that he cannot hear the sounds we make, but that he cannot distinguish them.

We often discover that a person supposed to be afflicted with deafness hears things sometimes that we do not want him to hear, and we say he is not so deaf after all. We have been speaking in a low voice, and yet he has overheard us

The explanation of this is, not that he pretends to be more deaf than he is, but that occasionally we speak more distinctly than ordinarily, and it is these distinct utterances that he catches.

FROM HARD TIMES TO CANADA

Canadian Pacific liner "Metagama."

Do the pipers lament? Migrants aboard the tender of the Canadian Pacific liner "Metagama."

WHEN the Canadian Pacific steamships "Marloch" and "Metagama" last docked at St. John, Canada gained to the extent of over six hundred able-bodied and industrious farmers, farm workers and women from the Hebrides. Forced by the loss of their fishing trade through the war and German competition, and by general hard times to leave their thatched homes, these people have come to a land of promise and have been welcomed as the most valuable immigrants in years. Under the leadership of Rev. Alexander J. Gillies and Rev. John MacMillan, they have gone to the Red Deer district of Alberta and to various parts of Ontario, where they will engage in agriculture.

Most of them are from the island of South Uist, Benbecular and Barra. Here their families worked small farms of from ten to twenty acres and kept a stock of from two to eight cattle and ten sheep on common pasturage. In the spring they gathered seaweed for fertilizer, planted oats, barley, rye and potatoes, and when this was done took to the sea, some to engage in fishing, which brought but small monetary return, and others to join the merchant marine. In the fall those who were near returned home, harvested the small crop and thatched their houses. But there was not work for all. It was of no use to fish when there was no market and one man could do the work of the farm which produced but little. The wolf was at every door, almost, and the emigration officer received more applications for information and later assistance than he could comfortably handle.

These people having arrived and received welcome have already buckled down to work. Their losses at home have contributed to Canada's gain. A large party have gone to Red Deer where they will build their own church and school, and in addition to English they will retain their own native Gaelic tongue. The remainder of the immigrants have been split up as hired men in various parts of Ontario. Over four hundred were passengers on the "Marloch," the rest on the "Metagama."

Farm Drainage

(Experimental Farms Note)

The drainage of farm lands should receive increased attention. Many farms and even whole districts are not as fertile and productive as they would be if drained. A drainage system is essential in this humid, temperate zone of heavy rainfalls. Fortunately throughout the greater part of Eastern Canada there is adequate natural drainage. The land is rolling or hilly. The surface formation is more or less porous and water, even after the heaviest rains of summer, disappears within 24 hours from the surface of the soil.

There are many farms that have fairly good natural drainage, but not sufficient to remove the water quickly after heavy rains and spring freshets. These can usually be greatly improved by a system of surface drains including the plowing of fields in lands so that each dead furrow may be a drain with definite outlet.

Heavy soils and lands that lie so that the natural drainage cannot easily be determined usually require underdrainage. A soil is frequently cold and wet on account of an impervious subsoil. Other soils are of very little agricultural value because of seepage. The tile draining of such as these is a valuable permanent improvement to the farm. It will enable the farmer to seed his crop earlier and to grow healthier and much larger crops. It will be better than insurance against drought and spring frosts. It will increase profits and save valuable fertilizing ingredients from being washed from the surface of the soil.

For any drainage work a sketch or map is essential. On it should be placed the data obtained from a survey of the surface of the farm, contours marked and drains located; then it serves as a permanent record and will save time and labour in future drainage work. A number of permanent land-marks should be located and measurements marked on the map from these to the underdrains.

In laying out systems of tile it is important to keep the slope or fall as uniform as possible. It should not be less than 2 inches per 100 feet, and where changed suddenly a silt basin should be built. Three-inch tile is the smallest profitable size, and as the volume of gathered water increases so the tile should be increased until the main drain for a twenty-acre field having a fall of 5 inches per hundred feet should be laid with six inch tile. The distance between tile drains is governed largely by the depth at which they are laid. Much tile has been laid from 2½ to 3 feet below the surface. The present tendency is to lay tile shallower. At these depths for field crops it is usually sufficient to place drains 100 feet apart. Then, should it be found necessary, others can be laid between, making them 50 feet apart.

The efficiency of all drains depends largely upon a satisfactory outlet. It must be large enough for the purpose and be low enough to drain the tile dry when they are flowing.

"You are very wealthy," he remarked.

"Yes," she replied, frankly. "I'm worth a half million dollars."

"And I am poor," he continued.

"Yes," she asserted.

"Will you marry me?" he asked,

"No," with emphasis.

"I thought you wouldn't," he said.

"Then why did you ask me?"

"Oh, just to see how a man feels when he loses a half million."
