LXXXVI, NO. 44. MORRISBURG, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 29th, 1948. $2.00 PER YEAR; SINGLE COPIES, 5c

Seriously Injured In Collision During Heavy Fog Tuesday

Edwin Johnston of Brinston is in Ottawa Civic Hospital in serious condition, and two other persons, Elzie Johnston and Horace Macgregor of Vernon, suffered minor injuries as th result of a collision of two automobiles near the Hess Cheese Factory, 3 miles north of Williamsburg, early Tuesday morning, during a very thick fog.

Mr. Macgregor was driving north on No. 31 highway, when his car was overtaken by the Johnston car, driven by Elzie Johnston, and also proceeding north. Apparently failing to see the Johnston car due to the fog, Mr. Johnston's car crashed into the rear of the other vehicle with such force that Edwin Johnston's head was thrust through the windshield, and he suffered severe gashes to both sides of his throat. Elzie Johnston suffered cracked ribs and bruises when he was thrown against the steering wheel, while Mr. Macgregor, his car thrown by the force of the impact, 150 feet into the East ditch, landed in the rear seat of his car and sustained only bruises. Damage was estimated by police at $1,000 for the two cars, both of which are insured. The accident was investigated by Constable Earl Wellesley of Morrisburg.

LOCAL PASTOR CONDUCTS SERVICE IN GERMAN TONGUE

On Sunday evening last at 8.30, a celebration of Holy Communion for people of the Lutheran faith in Brockville and vicinity was held in Trinity Church, Brockville by Rev. F. L. Howald, pastor of St. Paul's Church, Morrisburg. Special permission for the use of Trinity Church was given the Bishop of Ontario.

WARDEN F. H. BRODER HONOURED BY COLLEAGUES

Warden Fred H. Broder, reeve of Morrisburg, was guest of honour at a banquet tendered Wednesday at the King George Hotel, Cornwall by members of the United Counties Council.

He was the recipient of a handsome gold watch, chain and pocket knife, council's customary gift to the retiring warden each year.

J. A. McArthur, reeve of Lancaster village and in line for the warden's office next year as chairman of Finance Committee, acted as master of ceremonies during the dinner.

Paying tribute to Warden Broder, Mr. McArthur said he was the third warden to come from Dundas County and he declared no warden had been more efficient in carrying out his duties.

"It is unfortunate that a warden's term of office lasts only one year", said Mr. McArthur. "I feel we are losing the services of a valuable man one who has served both council and his own municipality well."

The presentation was made by Oscar Becksted, veteran reeve of Williamsburg township and a former warden. The address was read by J. H. Maginnis, deputy reeve of Osnabruck Township.

In his brief remarks Warden Broder had grateful thanks for the committee in charge of arrangements for the dinner, as well as for all members of council for the honor accorded him.

"I have enjoyed being warden", he said. "Your co-operation has made my year's work very easy. I would like you to remember we are the third largest elected body in Ontario and are more democratic than any other body in the province.

"There has been a vast difference in the past 10 years in council," he continued. "At first there was too much delay when sessions were held mostly in open council. The time has now been cut down by meeting in committee, but we must not consider any of the time spent in council is wasted.

"You will find we are broadened by our associations here and that is good for all concerned. Our people are looking for leadership from the council just as the government is seeking guidance."

He termed the past year one of "big ventures", mentioning specifically the reforestation program, repairs to the county buildings on a large scale and the purchase of new properties.

Others who spoke briefly in tribute to the retiring warden were A. A. MacDonald, reeve of Alexandria and J. E. U. Rouleau, reeve of Cornwall township.

Mr. McArthur acted as toastmaster during the dinner.

NEWLY MARRIED COUPLE HONOURED

The I. O. O. F. Hall, Williamsburg, was the scene of a large gathering of relatives and friends on Thursday evening, when they assembled to honor and to make a presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Allison (nee Elsie Empey) upon their recent marriage. The evening was spent in modern and old time dancing with music provided by Morell's Orchestra.

At midnight the guests of honor were called to the front of the hall where an address was read by Mrs. Don Morell in which the newly wed couple were wished every happiness as together they go down the pathway of life. At the same time, Paul Steinberg on behalf of their friends, presented the couple with a well-filled purse.

Mrs. Allison, in a few well chosen words, expressed deep appreciation and thanks for the pleasant evening arranged in their honor, for the good wishes and the gift. Mr. and Mrs. Allison left the platform to the strains of the "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows". Refreshments were served after which dancing was resumed for a time.

Prescott Hunters to be Charged With Illegal Hunting

Two hunters from Prescott and one from Spencerville ran into a double dose of bad luck last night (Thursday) when they encountered Fish and Game Overseer W. B. McConnell and Provincial Officer Earl Wellesley on an Edwardsburg Township road north of Cardinal. The men are Clarence W. King of Prescott, Milburn Cook of Prescott and Elzon Cook of Spencerville.

The officers stopped a car which they considered suspicious, and upon investigation they found that the three men had a shotgun and a quantity of rifled slugs and buckshot in their possession, as well as two powerful flashlights.

Elzon Cook also had a bottle of liquor. All three will be charged by Officer McConnell with illegal hunting of deer, while Elzozn Cook will be charged by Officer Wellesley with having liquor in a place other than his residence.

FUNERAL SERVICE HELD FOR ACCIDENT VICTIM

Final tribute was paid on Saturday last to the memory of Lloyd Hunter, 21-year old Williamsburg man who was instantly killed in a highway crash on Thursday. The funeral service, conducted by Rev. Gerald Fee, of Williamsburg United Church, was held there at 2.30 p.m. and the church was crowded to capacity, with chairs placed in the aisles and many standing outside the church. Mr. Fee in his sermon spoke words of comfort to the bereaved from the text found in Hebrews 13th Chap., Verse 14: "For here we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come".

The church choir led in the singing of the hymns "Abide With Me" and "The Lord's My Shepherd" and also rendered an anthem "God's Way is the Best Way" with Mrs. Arnold Hogaboam and Mr. Gerald Adams taking the duet part.

The numerous floral tributes received were all beautiful, all speaking their silent message of love and sympathy. Interment was in Williamsburg cemetery.

Gambles $25,000 to Sow 1,800 Idle Acres, Hopes for $100,000 Return—For years 1800 acres of land, part of the Defense Industries area at Ajax, Ont., have been growing nothing but grass and weeds. Now Norman C. Taylor of Oshawa, Ont., proposes to raise wheat, barley and oats, using western mass-production methods, and is investing a small fortune in the hopes of quadrupling his money in one season. Taylor, a believer in the one-way disc as opposed to the mold-board plow, already has two tractor crews working day and night readying his rented property for spring planting.

THE FARM FRONT

by John Russell

If you're NOT interested in apples, don't bother to read further. If you ARE interested in apple-growing, perhaps you know all this already, so don't say you haven't been warned. Anyway, Mr. Stewart C. Chandler is a well-known entomologist who has just made public some recommendations based on orchard records of 13 Illinois apple-growers over a three-year period.

He says that spraying plus sanitation is the secret of producing clean, high-quality fruit and most of the practises he recommends are aimed at reducing the number of codling-moth larvae. One thing that is of the highest importance is to store used baskets in a closed building after the apple harvest is in. They may harbor codling-moth larvae; and when they emerge in the spring in that building many of them can be destroyed, before finding their way back to the orchard, by a light hung over a pan of coal-oil or — a more modern device — a light with an electric grill, placed in the building.

Broken baskets, crates, discarded sacks, large-stemmed weeds and other debris, which might furnish homes for the larvae, should be collected and burned.

During the fall, winter or spring pruning should be done so as to open up the trees and reduce their height, thus allowing for more ample coverage when you spray. To destroy any insects that might be hibernating, pruned-out wood should be burned.

When pruning make the cuts smooth and don't leave any stubs. Scars left by rough pruning, and cavities that result from rooted stubs, make grand hide-outs for the codling-moth larvae. Small cavities in the trees should be plugged and larger ones screened to cut down the number of such hide-outs.

Loose and rough bark should be removed from trunks and branches of the trees. This can be done either by handscraping or by knocking off the bark with a spray gun (No. 8 disk) at around 500 pounds pressure. Clean bark and other debris out of the tree crotches. This barking-off may be done in fall or spring or even during the winter, but should be completed before the moths emerge. In most apple growing regions by full bloom is a safe date.

In spring a band of chemically treated corrugated paper, 2 to 4 inches wide, should be wrapped around the smooth trunk of each tree. (Bands treated with napthalene may be purchased from dealers.) The band acts as a trap for larvae which leave their wintering places in fallen fruit and head for a place on the tree where they can spin a cocoon and start a family. The bands should be in place by the time the first larvae are leaving the fallen apples, usually some time in June. They should be removed and burned before apple-blossom time. Such banding will decrease the number of larvae in summer broods by almost 50 per cent. Wormy and rotting apples should be collected and either fed to livestock or buried.

Sweet clover and other cover crops should be clipped before the stems get so big that they provide hiding places for larvae to spin cocoons. All apples showing signs of disease, rot or insect damage should be thinned out and destroyed.

In conclusion Mr. Chandler says that many apple-growers think that when DDT and other modern insecticides are used, there is no necessity for such orchard sanitation. Others believe that sanitation is necessary only in years of heavy codling-moth infestation. This is a mistake. Although such insecticides have given good control of the codling moth, they tend to increase the number of leaf-rollers and mites by destroying their natural enemies. Which should be enough about apples for the time being, except to say that I hope it will be of some value to many of you.

And just in case you're thinking of doing any repair work to roofs or anything else of the kind, it's well to remember this;—ladders that are kept around the place and only used now and then can be really dangerous, as the rungs or sidebars may have rotted. Careful examination before using may save you from an accident or something even worse.

Pearly Bread—One of London's "pearlys" brings his loaf of bread offering to the Costermongers Harvest Festival service at St. Mary Magdalene Church. The costermongers—fruit and vegetable hawkers—identify themselves with pearl buttons sewed on their clothes.

How Wars Start

"Pop," said a boy of ten, "how do wars get started?"

"Well, son," began Pop, "let us say that America quarreled with England—" "America is not quartelling with England," interrupted Mother. "Who said she was?" said Pop, visibly irritated. "I merely was giving the boy a hypothetical instance." "Ridiculous," snorted Mother. "You'll put all sorts of wrong ideas in his head." "Ridiculous nothing," countered Pop. "If he listens to you, he'll never have any ideas at all in his head." Just as the lamp-throwing stage approached, the son spoke up again: "Thanks, Mom. Thanks, Pop. I'll never have to ask how wars get started again."

New — And All Of Them Useful

Truck Cover. Designed to eliminate bother in getting tarpaulin over an open truck or trailer. One man is said to be able to perform the entire job in a matter of minutes. Tarpaulin is attached to metal bows mounted in two parallel racks. Turning crank pulls bows and tarpaulin from front towards rear.

Plastic Home Kit. Contains all basic items needed for making plastic gadgets in home workshops or kitchen. Finished pieces can be either clear or colored.

Lightweight Logging Sleigh. Made of aluminum and recently put into use in Northern Quebec this sleigh weighs just over 600 pounds, or 40% less than timber-constructed sleighs. Capable of loading 2½ cords of wood.

Curbs Moisture. A tray-like device which catches excess moisture and drains it off automatically ends the old nuisance of rotting floors caused by bathroom tank drippings. Made of steel or aluminum with baked white enamel finish.

Aid For Contour Farming. Mounted on the hood of a tractor, bulldozer or road roller this device is claimed to eliminate necessity of surveying and staking out contour lines in terrace making or contour farming. Driver keeps his eye on a magnifying lens, a scale, and two columns of liquid. One column is stationary, the other rises and falls as the machine moves upgrade or downgrade.

Pressure Fryer. Designed for the quick preparation of meats, poultry and fish this combines the features of a skillet and pressure cooker. Claimed to fry even the toughest chicken in approximately a quarter-hour. Fries ham and other meats without the usual smoke.

Touch Type Switch For Warming Pads. In addition to usual visual markings this switch has "dots" which permit user to feel which heat setting is in operation without turning on the light.

Greater Television Range. FM and television sets situated in "fringe" areas are said to have range increased by 15 to 25 miles through use of new type antenna.

Portable Electric Generator. Occupying only 2 cubic feet of space this generator can be stowed away in car trunk or bow of boat. Started by hooking up to auto battery it turns out 350w. 115v. alternating current that will operate standard light bulbs, radios and small motor-driven appliances. Weighs 77 pounds and mounts a 2-quart gasoline tank.

New Heat Control. This three-point controller for heating of homes and small buildings continuously measures outdoor, indoor and heating system temperatures. Electronic device translates the measurements into controlling action whenever temperature change takes place at any of the three control points. Maker claims that controller virtually "changes the size" of heating system, so that full capacity of heating plant is only used in severest weather.

No Effect

The first time Nussbaum and Shapiro went to Shanghai, a guide steered them into an opium den, and persuaded them to take a few puffs. "It had no effect on me whatever," boasted Nussbaum. "Me neither," echoed Shapiro. A few minutes later Nussbaum beat his breast soundly and declared, "My mind is made up. I'm buying control of General Motors." "Sorry," said Shapiro, "but I won't sell."

Television On the Move—Robert Wright tunes in his television receiver, newly-installed in his car, as he cruises around. He reported excellent reception, but city safety officers frowned on the experiment. They declared television in a moving car is dangerous.

Women Pilot Israeli Planes—Somewhere in Israel, this girl pilot, left, compares flight experiences with some of her male comrades. She is one of several female fliers now in service for the Israeli government.

With the Movie and Radio Folks

by Grace Sharp

It may be pure cutttishness; but every time some famous figure—such as a big-name athlete—takes part in a radio "commercial", I find myself secretly hoping that he will forget what's supposed to be said. When the announcer asks him what brand of soap, shaving cream or breakfast food he uses, I can't help wondering just what would happen if a rival brand was named.

As a matter of fact I have an idea that somebody -- maybe it was "Babe" Ruth, it would have been just like him as he couldn't even remember the names of men who had played on the same team with him for years—once did that very thing on some radio program. But I didn't happen to be listening and catch the "boner," worse luck.

Something—well, not of the same kind but along the same lines—seems to have come up in television. Sponsor of the televising of the recent World Series baseball games was the Gillette Safety Razor Company; and at Braves Field in Boston, every time a ball was hit toward left field there would come into view, on countless television sets, the advertising billboard of one of the sponsor's chief competitors, the Gem razor people. During the first game alone this happened no less than twenty times, which must have pleased Mr. Gem very much, although just what Mr. Gillette thought about it I haven't heard.

For those who liked "The Jolson Story"—and there were plenty of them, in fact I know one woman who saw it eight times—there's good news out of Hollywood. Larry Parks, who was having trouble over his contract, has settled matters and started rehearsals for the sequel, "Jolson Sings Again." Just as was the case in the other one, the voice you'll hear in the new film will be that of Jolson, not Parks. The rehearsals, which are conducted in front of large mirrors, are for the purpose of having Parks copy Al's style and mannerisms of singing, with Jolson as his coach.

Last week I said something about the Laurence Olivier screen version of "Hamlet" and wondered whether or not the public would "go" for such a gloomy and comparatively actionless opus. So far as New York is concerned, at least, I don't need to wonder any longer. While the Park Avenue Theatre, where it is showing, isn't playing to capacity at every performance, it's very close to it; and mail orders for reserved seats are being sold as far ahead as February. And they're saying it's planned to keep the show there for at least two years—which, in my humble opinion, will be a good trick, if they do it.

It appears that over in the States columnists such as Walter Winchell have been having themselves a fine time by printing the correct answers to the big-money questions on various quiz shows, the effect being that the jackpot is often won several weeks earlier than it normally would be.

This annoys those behind such programs no end, and Ralph Edwards of "Truth or Consequences" finally sent a wire to the columnists asking them to "lay off." He based his plea on the fact that their "Mr. and Mrs. Hush" contest which started on October 2nd is for a charity—the mental health drive or some such. "We would like to have the contest last long enough to give the Drive enough funds to do a real job. Could we count on your not divulging the identity of Mr. and Mrs Hush to your readers when you have solved it yourself," the wire concludes.

I'm glad to see that somebody agrees with the opinion I expressed about Fred Allen's guaranteeing to cover—up to $5,000—any losses you might incur by listening to his show rather than one of the give-away programs. "As a one-time gag the offer was capital stuff," writes Jack Gould in the New York Times, "but if used too long could defeat its own purpose by merely suggesting to Mr. Allen's audience that they are missing something pretty big by listening to him. Its practical application is also on the nebulous side, since "Stop the Music" puts in its phone calls in advance of tee program's start in order to avoid any delay.

So it looks as if you are one of those who listen to "Stop the Music" all out of breath in the expectation of being called and given a chance to win a fortune, you can set your anxieties at rest. If what Jack Gould says is correct, if you're going to be called you already know it before the show comes on the air.

Her Quandary

Yes, the house is getting dusty
And there's need to use a broom.
But of course it's rather silly!
Mountain ash are all in bloom . . .

And the hills are bright with color—
Gold and yellow, crimson, flame—
Vying with a dusty carpet . . .
Is it not a wicked shame?

There it is! The Housewife's Quandary—
Have a home all spick and span,
Or go forth and roam the forest
Like the woodland spirit, Pan?

WHAT GOES ON IN THE WORLD

by Norman Blair

Italy

Asked if he didn't want to go to Heaven when he died the cynical gent replied that it didn't matter much to him; he'd probably find plenty of friends in both places. The Italian Government has apparently been trying to adopt a similar attitude towards the Israeli and the Arabs, and was somewhat embarrassed when the secret was revealed.

When four Italian fighter planes were destroyed by a mysterious explosion on a Northern Italian airfield, a Government agency quickly jumped in with the explanation that it was the work of Communists. Later it was discovered that the blasting had been done by a special branch of the Israeli army Haganah, whose duty it is to see that weapons of war do not reach Arab countries. For these four planes, as well as an unspecified number of others, were part of a hush-hush deal by which Rome was to send arms to Egypt in return for Egyptian cotton greatly needed by Italian mills.

Such a deal is, of course, a flagrant violation of Italy's promise to the United Nations that it would abide by that organization's ban on aid to either side in Palestine. It is also a deal calculated to greatly annoy the Israeli Government, with which Rome had strong hopes of building up a highly profitable trade. Besides that, it is not likely to increase friendly feelings toward Italy among the very powerful pro-Jewish section of the United States public.

Actually, this doing business with Egypt is nothing more than what has been going on for many months with the other side. It is no secret that arms and men have been quietly flowing in a steady stream from or through Italy to Palestine for some time. As one observer puts it, "Having earned a reputation for generosity where the Jews were concerned, Rome apparently felt it wise to even the balance a mite by stepping in officially with aid to the Arabs, especially since this was good business."

Still, there must have been red faces in Rome—and not from the sun.

The United States

Of course these Popular Opinion polls and National Surveys can sometimes go astray, just like the rest of us. There was, for instance, the famous Literary Digest forecast of a Presidential election which proved to be so far off the target that the magazine had to fold shortly after.

But when fifty-one members of the National Press Club at Washington vote almost unanimously as to how the coming election will result, it should really mean something, as these top-ranking news hounds have been called, probably rightly, "the nation's leading political experts".

Anyway, on the question as to who will win the 1948 Presidential election the voting was;

Thomas E. Dewey — 50

Harry S. Truman — 1

The prediction thus made was regardless of personal choice as only 37 of the correspondents felt that Dewey's election would be in the best interests of the nation, 7 favoring Truman, one Thurmond, none Wallace, while 5 were undecided.

The different factors seen as most likely to influence the outcome were listed as follows;

General desire for a change after 16 years of Democratic rule.

A feeling that President Truman doesn't measure up to the job.

Break-up of the Democratic party which is bound to suffer some losses to Wallace and Thurmond.

High prices and inflation.

The critical world situation.

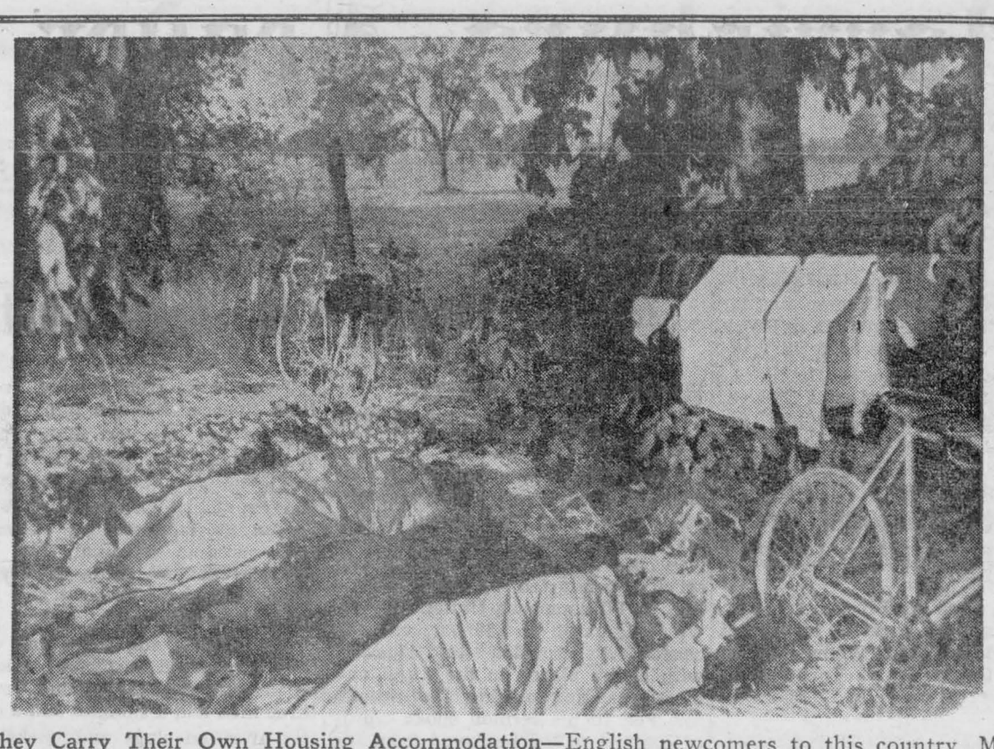

Too many communists and fellow-travellers in the Government.

So it looks very much as though the curtains were coming down for Mr. Truman, whose personal popularity with the electors is great, but who just doesn't seem to have what it takes to win. As an observer of one of his western rallies remarked, "From the reception he got it appeared as though the folks here were willing to give Harry Truman anything he wanted — except the Presidency of the United States.'"

Still, now I come to think of it, fifty-to-one shots occasionally come off, in elections as well as on the race track. But before any of you start trying to get a little wager up at such juicy odds, there's one thing I neglected to tell you about that opinion poll. The one vote cast for President Truman was that of a man who, because of his official position, is a lifetime member of the National Press Club.

His name is Harry S. Truman.

by A SIXBIT CRITIC

Now it is well known to one and all that the fair city of Toronto enjoys a world-wide reputation as a grand place to be on a Sunday — that is, if you happen to like your Sundays serene, peaceful and almost undisturbed by sight or sound of human activity. One of the oldest topical jokes in vaudeville—sure-fire to raise roars of laughter in places such as Hamilton and Montreal—was the one where the stooge would ask the comic if he knew the Ontario capital.

"Sure thing, I know Toronto very well," was the mirth-provoking reply. "Why, I spent a whole month there one Sunday."

But even those of you who may think you are well acquainted with the deep Sabbatical calm of the metropolis that is washed, theoretically, by the waters of the limpid Humber and the crystalline Don, might have got quite a shock had you strolled through its streets last Sunday morning.

A pall of extra-funereal gloom hung over the thoroughfares. The few citizens who had ventured out could be seen passing one another with lowered glances and averted faces. Even the pigeons that parade up the middle of Yonge Street—fondly yearning, we take it, for the return of the cavalry—seemed to be decidely on the limp and wear an air of extra dejection. A stranger might have thought that World War Three had broken out or even that word had been received of a miscount at Ottawa giving John Diefenbaker the Conservative leadership over our own George Drew.

Why all this grief and unhappiness? you ask. What tragedy had struck, what catastrophe had fallen on the once-proud denizens of Canada's second—first, if you don't count the French—city? Not one of them, but three—three in a row! You've already heard of them, no doubt, but who are we that we should try and spare your feelings at a time like this? "If you have tears to shed," as the ham in Julius Caesar put it, "prepare to shed them now."

In the first place Toronto's famed Argonaut football team—remember them?—had taken a trip to Ottawa to joust with the Rough Riders. It is true that the Argos hadn't been so hot up to then. Their earlier games had been nothing to write home about and even on Thanksgiving Day a draw was the best they could extract out of the lowly Hamilton Wildcats. But, shucks, everybody knew what those Argonauts are. Great kidders, those boys! Slow to get going but—when the chips are down—still the team that could show them all where to head in!

From Lansdown Park came the word, falling on the citizenry with all the shock and impact of that atomic bomb dropping on Hiro—whatever-itwas. Final Score: Rough Riders—41; Argonauts—6. Ah, woe is us!

Bad as it was, however, there were still occasional rays of sunshine piercing the clouds. Up at Varsity Stadium the Blue and White warriors were playing host to the lowly footballers from Queens. The Kingstonites hadn't won a game on that sacred sward since away back in 1939, and the early tidings had it that the Varsity boys were pushing the visitors around at will, completing forward passes with gay abandon and scoring four first downs to every one their rivals were able to gain. Final score: Queens —8; Varsity—6. As they tottered to the nearest First Aid Stations distraught burghers could be heard quoting Omar Khayyam—"Another and another cup to drown the memory of THAT impertinence." If it had been Western, now, or even McGill! But Queen's, of all created places!

Still, courage brethren! All might not yet be lost. Even although football in Toronto is a serious business enough, hockey — National League Hockey, that is — is nothing less than life itself. And wasn't Saturday night going to mark the opening of the new season? Wouldn't there be the presentation of the Prince of Wales Trophy and wouldn't General Crerar be there to hand over the Stanley Cup, won for the second straight time by the doughty warriors who battle under the banner of the Maple Leaf?

No wonder Maple Leaf Gardens was jammed to the roof with fans seeking and confidently expecting, some Balm in Gilead to smear over their wounds and bruises. No wonder that, from the Bay to Hogg's Hollow and from High Park to the distant Beaches, countless thousands of ears trustingly waited for the dulcet voice of Foster Hewitt to tell of the final victory of right, justice and clean living over the forces of iniquity. Final score: Boston Bruins—4; Toronto Maple Leafs—1. And even most of the drugstores closed by then, so that a man might have to walk miles before he could secure a lethal dose of cyanide!

Away back in the 70's or 80's, New York City had its "Black Friday", described by historians as being a very gloomy occasion indeed. But we greatly doubt if it could come even close to matching the "Black Saturday" which befell the sports-minded citizens of the Queen City in the month of October, A.D., 1948.

So small wonder if a stranger, chancing to walk through the streets the morning after, might have imagined he was in a city stricken by plague or other disaster. Whether fittingly or not, Toronto has sometimes been given—by people living elsewhere in the Dominion—the appellation "Hogtown". Take it from those who know, friends, that Sunday its citizens weren't eating nearly as high on the hog as usual.

Innocent Dupes Of Red Conspiracy

If a man or woman wishes to believe in Communism, he or she has a right to do so and to advocate it openly, and if the people stop there, they are within their rights; that, we understand, is tolerance. But a great many of our people wanted us to believe that merely disagreeing with Communism somehow was an indication of a deficient character; that everyone ought to be friendly with Communists and that to proceed against them for any cause whatever—even for the commission of sabotage or murder was somehow an exhibition of intolerance.

So to prove that they were "tolerant" and somehow intellectually a cut or two above the ordinary run of people, a great many persons began to associate with Communists and in some cases to make quite a fuss over them.

Those people who thought that Communists were just advanced liberals who were terribly misunderstood because they were so far ahead of their time and who thought that Premier Stalin was a great humanitarian were not, in the vast majorty of cases, knavish. They were just stupid, and such of them as were in positions of responsibility probably. did much more harm with their stupidity than the few who were actually traitors.

Morrisburg branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society was well represented at the annual Regional Meeting held in the Chateau Laurier on October 15th. Five delegates were elected: Mesdames Mullin, Vipond, Stubbs, Hummell and Clark while 5 others, Miss Dillen, Mesdames Casselman, Smith, Hummell and Merrill went as visitors, but were named by the presiding officer as delegates also. Mrs. MacKenzie, chairman of the peacetime program committee, spoke in the afternoon, followed by an interesting discussion which was full of information. This meeting was followed by a luncheon in the Quebec Suite, when Mr. Hanna, the president of the Ontario Division, gave an address. Special mention was made of the Morrisburg branch in its efforts to aid an injured child.

A shipment of knitted articles was made the last of September consisting of 27 pairs of men's socks for the British Columbia quota, and 7 medium sized pullover sweaters for British civilians. A quota of sheets, towels and nightgowns has been received and many more workers are needed.

If any interested person has not sent in his or her donation for the Mariatown fire sufferers, the Red Cross Rooms will be open every Wednesday afternoon.

It is encouraging to see so many turning out every Wednesday, but even more are needed.

The tremendous post-war growth of Ontario's industries has resulted in unprecedented demands for hydro-electric power. To keep these industries producing, every one of us must cut down our use of electricity. ....FALL FAIR TIME IN ONTARIO....

Ful-O-Pep Calf Champ

At the Markham Fair, one of the most interesting if not the best attended contests was the Blacksmith's shoe-making contest. Starting with two straight bars of iron the smithies, working in pairs, were allowed thirty-five minutes to fashion two horse shoes size seven-and-three-quarters. The teams shown above made their shoes without a word between the two men.

Fair Time Highlights

By the Ful-O-Pep Reporter

What is it that attracts people from the cities and from distant communities to some fall fairs and not to others?

This question has been asked by several fall fair executive bodies this year, when they totalled their attendance on the last night. Some of them found that in spite of the fact that they had put forth more effort and spent more money than in the previous year there was not the interest this year.

In any fall fair community there are people who will go to their own fair every year regardless of the quality of the fair itself. They go because it is their own fair and they are loyal to their own district. Nevertheless the fact remains that some fairs do draw large outside crowds, wnile others do not.

We were talking to one fall fair seccretary whose fair by the way was very successful), who said he thought he knew how to get the crcowds.

"Be natural," he said. "That is what outsiders want to see. They don't want to come all the way out here to see something they could pay to see at any other time of the year near their own homes. I am quite sure that they want to see us as we really are, in our natural state."

"Don't spend the committee's money on importing entertainers and imitating the C.N.E. A small midway for the local young folk and a certain amount of paid entertainment is essential, of course, but what the outsiders want to see is home-cooking, small boys and girls on their ponies, team tug-o-wars, and other typically rural events."

"Sure we all know that the modern farmer rides around in a car and does his farming by modern methods, but nevertheless there is a lot of fun in the old-fashioned events, and there is no doubt in my mind that they are what the outsiders expect to s.. when they come to a fall fair."

The truth of this idea sruck us when we were at the Markham Fair. There was a contest going on which most city people have never seen in their lives before—a blacksmiths' horseshoe forging contest—It was away off in one corner of the grounds and at first attracted no attention. (as far as we could hear it was not even announced—we saw it on the program).

A crowd of city people gathered around and watched for the whole 35 minutes! It was just as exciting as a hockey game to some of them. The smithies working in a two man team, hammering, bending, forging, dripping sweat on their anvils, kept the crowd interested until the last minute when they breathlessly measured their final product. The sight of the men bending over their finished shoes before their red, glowing forges made a profound impression on the city folk.

One well-dressed, middle-aged gentleman (presumably from Toronto) declared it to be the most impressive thing at the fair, and said that it had been worth the trip out to Markham just to see this one event.

Whether or not the blacksmiths came from the blacksmith departments of large industrial organizations or from the village forge matters not a particle. This is the sort of thing that brings people back again and again to certain fairs in the province..

Markham High Girls Open Fair

The Markham High School Girls' Band paraded before the grand stand in their brief, attractive uniforms in spite of the cold drizzling rain that fell on Saturday afternoon. The high-stepping drum majorette has just turned them about and they are going down the track for a second round of applause.

Old Fashioned, But Still Exciting

The last anxious minute, of the horseshoe-making contest finds two of the contestants, L. Ross, Lansing, and F. Reid, Oriole, leaning over the shoes they have fashioned, with sweat dripping from their brows. This is the final test. The two shoes are compared for shape and size, and then they are bound together and tagged for the judges.

How Can I?

By Anne Ashley

Q. Can window shades be washed successfully?

A. Yes, the majority of them can be washed satisfactorily by placing them flat on a table or the floor, with several newspapers beneath, and using tepid w ter and mild soap, applying with a small brush. Hang the shades in place to dry, but of course leave them drawn full length until absolutely dry.

Q. What is a good tonic for the hair, and one that will arrest grayness?

A. It is claimed that pure castor oil rubbed into the scalp is an excellent tonic, and will also arrest grayness.

Q. What can I use as a polish for linoleum?

A. Linseed oil rubbed into clean linoleum makes an excellent polish. The floor will not be slippery.

Q. How can I remove burnt spots from granite?

A. Cover the stain with a teaspoonful of soda and a little water, and heat to the boiling point. Wash at once, but never scrape it with a knife.

Q. How can I keep small rugs from wearing out so quickly?

A. Small rugs will always wear out quicker if they are not changed frequently. The wear will not always be in the same place if they are turned occasionally or interchanged with other small rugs.

Q. How can I soften an old ball of putty that has hardened?

A. Place it in boiling water and allow it to stand until the water cools.

THE SYLVESTER DIAMOND

By BLANCHE ROBERTS

CHAPTER I.

An attractive young woman, neatly clad in a dark suit, dived in among the 5 o'clock home-goers on the street and walked along briskly without a backward glance, head erect, eyes alert. She managed without much effort to stay in the crowd that clustered the sidewalk. A moment later there was a great commotion in front of the big department store she had just left. There were shouts, police whistles and running feet.

The noise behind her grew fainter until there was no sound of it—only the usual hubbub of a crowded Los Angeles street. At the next intersection she hailed a passing cab and got in.

"That was a narrow escape, Honey Monroe," she said to herself. "If they had seen your face or detected you in any way, you would be a marked woman by now, or maybe on your way to the jail."

"Joe is going to be wild with anger when he hears about the purse being snatched today." A soft chuckle escaped her throat as if she enjoyed the prospect of seeing him consumed with fury when he heard the news. "But it was the perfect opportunity for me. Just what I h: ! been hoping—waiting for these many weeks."

She left the cab in front of a large apartment hotel which overlooked the Pacific Ocean and walked quickly inside to the elevator.

"Hello, Miss Monroe," greeted the elevator boy with a ready smile as she stepped into the lift.

"Hello, Sonny," she said in her usual gay voice and handed him a new silver dime. "Here you are. Looks like this dime-saving business is getting to be a habit with me, too. I just can't spend them any more. They stick in my purse. How much does that make you now?"

"Twelve dollars and 50 cents," he beamed, pocketing the coin gingerly. "Gee, Miss Monroe, with you giving me a dime every time you get in the elevator I'll have the $50 in no time. I've just been saving them two months."

"You never did tell me what you were saving the dimes for, Sonny," she hinted, eyes glowing like gorgeous jewels beneath the perky little hat that set over her red-gold hair.

"I want to spend a week in one of the resort hotels and be somebody important for a while," he explained

"I see." She spoke thoughtfully and as the door slid open she stepped out. "I think you have the right idea, Sonny, and I'm all for it."

An overly plump colored maid opened the door to her ring.

"Any calls, Hilda?" Honey asked breathlessly as she entered.

"Mr. Danburne called about 4 this afternoon. He said he'd call again."

"Not important," she remarked lightly.

"How come?" inquired the maid with a knowing grin. "You-all can't fool me none. You two is jest like this," and she held two fingers together. "He comes to see you every night and phones every day." She rolled her eyes.

"Well, maybe it is just a little important," Honey amended, dropping to a chair and reaching for the cigarette box. She extracted one carelessly, but before she could light it Hilda handed her a cellophane box.

"These came."

"Orchids!" exclaimed Honey smiling, and lifted the card out. "Looks like my boy friend really is a mite fond of me, doesn't it?"

"It shore does. You gets flowers every day, too."

When Hilda had returned kitchen Honey tiptoed quic the china clock over the fi She turned back the minut 15 minutes.

From her bedroom a mom er she called:

"Hilda, see what time please."

"It's 5 o'clock, Miss Honey the maid after looking at t ing room clock.

"Five oclock?" called Ho very distinct tones so there could be no doubt about the time.

"Yes'm."

"Thanks."

Quickly she locked the door of the room and pulled out the confiscated handbag and held it tenderly for just a moment, eyes sparkling with anticipation. Then, holding her breath, she snapped the lock and it fell open, and, turning it upside down, she emptied the contents on the bed. As a dark blue velvet box came tumbling out she took a deep breath and grabbed for the small parcel with eager hands. Springing the catch, the lid popped open to reveal a blue-white diamond whose size and fire were breath-taking as the light fell on it. The gem twinkled up at her in all its bright glory.

"Oh!" she gasped softly, awed. "It's beautiful."

Without pausing for a second glance, she dropped it back in the purse and gathered up the rest of the contents. Then she tucked the bag between the mattress and the springs of her bed, smoothing the bedspread out to leave no tell-tale marks for a critical eye.

Moving swiftly after that, she took four more dimes and went out into the hall. When the elevator came up in response to her ring she held out the pieces of silver to the boy. His eyes fairly danced for a second, then clouded.

"Here are a few more dimes, Sonny, that I just found. They should help the trip along some, don't you think?"

"Gee, Miss Monroe," he said shaking his head regretfully. "I can't take all those."

"How about doing me a favor, Sonny? Be sure to tell Mr. Danburne the exact time I got in this afternoon if he asks."

"Sure, Miss Monroe. But I forgot to look at the clock."

"Hilda said it was five o'clock. Will you remember?"

"You bet I will. I'd do anything for you. Everybody in the hotel would."

With a feeling of deep contentment and security, Honey returned to her apartment just as the telephone rang.

"Hello? Miss Monroe speaking."

But as she realized the true significance of his words and why he was so upset, all anger left her and she forgave him.

She stood up. She knew he would be at the apartment in less than ten minutes. And ten minutes was a short time in which to accomplish a great deal.

She darted over to the mantel, made sure that Hilda was not watching, and ran the clock up fifteen minutes—the correct time to a dot. By that alibi might hang her fate.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Gwendoline P. Clarke

The day is rough and chilly, with a high wind battering at the doors and windows. But it is warm, cheery and comfortable where we are, sitting in front of the living-room fire, with big chunks of wood blazing and crackling in the fire basket. Partner is listening to a baseball game. I am just sitting . . and thinking . . and sometimes writing—and not listening at all. Maybe you think that is impossible—but it isn't for me, for the simple reason that I don't understand the first thing about baseball so the running commentary doesn't bother me at all. Now if it were hockey — that would be another matter.

Another thing I am doing is yawning—and I feel I am entitled to. You see I took the early morning train to the city and returned on what we call "the midnight". That is one train that is nearly always late and Friday night was no exception so that it was 2:30 a.m. before I reached home. And in the city it had rained the whole day long! I paddled damply around from one place to another and every time I felt like getting mad I said to myself—"Now, you stop grousing—just think how much good this rain will do the wheat—to say nothing of the hydro." So I listened to my conscience with at last an assumption of stoicism. But did I feet cheated when I got home and found there hadn't been one drop of rain here all day. Next time I'll get as mad as I like!

But rain or no rain, I did have a good day in the city and I suppose the only reason I am so tired is because I always try to cram too much into one day. Business in the morning . . . and then what do you think of this coincidence. I thought I had better let my sister know I was in town as we had a meeting planned for that evening. But the line was busy when I tried to phone her so I came out of the booth and was looking over some bargains in stockings—I was in a department store—when a voice behind me said—"Now what are you buying?" I looked up and there was my sister! No wonder they say truth is stranger than fiction. It doesn't seem possible that among the thousands of shoppers that were in the city that day the two of us should meet, without any previous planning, at the same time and place. Presently I went on with my shopping, and do you know, I found that suits and dresses are now comparatively reasonable in price. And oh, the dress goods—they were simply lovely. Generally speaking, I am not awfully interested in dress but there was something about the soft colorful materials that day that made me feel I would like a bottomless purse and a good dressmaker to make up anything I felt like taking home. But believe it or not, all I bought were shoes and stockings for myself and underwear for Partner! How's that for self-discipline?

After that I went to a show—"Luxury Liner." That kept me away from temptation—incidentally out of the rain. I enjoyed the show—Jane Powell is a great little actress.

In the evening my sister and I went to a meeting of the Canadian Author's Association. The speaker was W. O. Mitchell. Maybe you have read his book—"Who Has Seen the Wind?"—an intriguing title and a book to remember. And you probably know that Mr. Mitchell is now fiction editor of MacLean's Magazine. I know some readers of this column are interested in writing so you will like to know that Mr. Mitchell assured us that, while all MSS are read, those sent in by Canadians, especially independently—that is, not through an agent—are give special attention.

The question was asked—"Who writes the better love stories—men or women?" Mr. Mitchell pondered over that one! At last he said—"I'm not sure—but I do know we publish more stories by men because women have no shame when it comes to writing love stories." That was a little hard to take but I am afraid it is true. Haven't you read books and stories that have made you turn to the title page because, from the subject matter, you could hardly believe they were written by a woman? Mr. Mitchell said a good artist should use restraint—leave something to the imagination of the reader. I ask you, how much does the modern writer leave to reader imagination? Very little, I would say, sometimes nothing at all.
