RUN OVER AT PERTH.

Young Brakeman Found Dead Under the Wheels With Leg and Arm Crushed.

Smith's Falls, July 25.—Mr. J. W. Areand, a young brakeman on the Perth local died in the Smith's Falls hospital Thursday morning, shortly after midnight, from injuries received at Perth Wednesday night. He made the run from Montreal, and on reaching Perth about 9 o'clock was putting his trainaway in the yard Nobody knows just what happened, because nobody witnessed the accident, but he slipped in some way and went under the wheels. He was discovered at once and physicians were sent for. His left leg and left arm were so badly mangled that it was seen at a glance that they would have to be amputated, and Drs. Hanna and Dwyre brought him to Smith's Falls in a special and had him conveyed to the hospital there. He was terribly injured, and during the operation the attempt to save his life he passed away. The shock and loss of blood was more than he could stand. He was a bright, young man, only 23 years of age.

Farmer's Cows Were Poisoned.

On going into his pasture near Brockville, Grant Kilborn, farmer, found three of his cows lying dead in the pasture. An examination showed that the animals had been done to death by foul means. Two of the animals had been poisoned through strychnine being placed about where they were grazing, and it would appear that enough of the poison had not been left to kill the third animal, so a large knife was used on its throat cut and left it to bleed to death.

Broke Liquor License Law.

Late John Fox, Morrisburg.

Joseph Fox was in Morrisburg last week attending the funeral of his brother John Fox, who passed away at the residence of Mrs. J. B. Fox, on Tuesday, July 16, at the ripe old age of 78 years. He was in poor health since last February, but was not taken to bed until three weeks ago, and never suffered any pain, but simply wore away. The deceased was born in north of Ireland and emigrated to New York when about 18 years of age being aboard the ship that bore the ill fated cholera emigrants, and was one of the few who did not take it, in the year 1847. After living about two years in New York and Philadelphia, he came direct to Williamsburg Township, settling near the boundary line between Matilda and Williamsburg with his father who had come out from the Old Country some years previously. He was employed on the construction of the Grand Trunk Railway, and afterwards worked with his father on the latter's farm, where he continued to reside until about four years ago, when he removed to Morrisburg and resided with his daughter-in-law. In 1861 deceased was married to Miss Hannah Madden of Matilda Township, who predeceased him 12 years ago. To this union there were born four children, only one of whom survives, James Fox, Morrisburg. Besides the son he leaves but two brothers to mourn his loss they being James Fox of Cornwall, and one daughter in-law, Mrs. J. B. Fox, of Morrisburg. The deceased was a devout Roman Catholic, and in politics a staunch Reformer. The funeral took place on Thursday morning from the residence of Mrs J. B. Fox, High Street, to the Roman Catholic Church and cemetery, Morrisburg.—Freeholder.

McPherson Produce Company in Liquidation.

One of the most important recent commercial events in Montreal was the going into liquidation on Tuesday of the D. A. McPherson Produce Company Limited, exporters of butter and cheese, the demand being based on a note for $42,500, transferred to the petitioner by the Sovereign Bank of Canada. The firm was organized about two years ago, its chief members being T. Ryan and Barclay McPherson. The founder of the firm, D. A. McPherson, began business in Montreal some 20 years ago. Two years ago he fell from the deck of a Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Company steamer and was drowned. His death caused the company's affairs to be reorganized. The immediate cause of the present trouble was the purchase of a large quantity of cheese which had to be sold afterwards at a loss on the English market. The firm was particularly well known in the Eastern townships, doing a large business with the farmers in that section. They also had a large connection in the Lake St. John district.

Cameron vs. Kinkaid.

The case of Cameron vs. Kinkaid of Russell, in which the plaintiff claimed that the defendant pointed a gun at him on Saturday evening, June 22nd, was tried on Saturday last. A large amount of evidence was heard, but none of it proved the charge conclusively. The Justices of the Peace, Messrs. D. MacDonald and A. Pacquette took the matter into consideration till Wednesday morning. The magistrates then threw the case out and assessed each party his own costs.

Barns Burned.

During a storm Monday evening the barns of Ken Graham, a farmer living two miles west of South Mountain were struck by lightning and totally destroyed by fire. Two barns, a machinery shed,, together with buggy, wagon, a team of horses and fifteen loads of hay were all consumed. Loss $1,500 with $500 insurance.

Cement Water Tank.

From time to time inquiries are made as to the construction of cement water tanks for use on the farm. Mr. David Carrothers, Middlesex Co., Ont., has had one in use for several years that has given the best of satisfaction. The materials used were Portland cement one part to four of good sharp gravel. It stands inside the basement stable, next the north wall, and is 14 feet long, 3 feet 6 inches wide, and 2 feet deep inside. The tank wall next the wall of basement is 3 inches thick, the other three walls being 6 inches thick, and the bottom 5 inches. The latter is made up solidly from the ground, sufficiently high so that the bottom of tank is on a level with the water troughs from which the cattle drink. The tank contains ample water for all the cattle and horses, and is supplied with galvanized iron piping from well and windwill pump some rods distant outside. It has never leaked.

Diamonds;

OR, CORA BLANCHARD'S MISTAKE.

"The boys musn't look at the girls, and the girls must look on their books," was said at least a dozen times by the village schoolmaster on that stormy morning when Cora Blanchard and I—she in her brother's boots, and I in my father's socks—waded through drift after drift of snow to the old brown schoolhouse at the foot of the long, steep hill.

We were the only girls who had dared to brave that wintry storm, and we felt amply repaid for our trouble when we saw how much attention we received from the ten tall boys who had come—some for fun, some because they saw Cora Blanchard go by, and one, Walter Beaumont, because he did not wish to lose the lesson of the day. Our teacher, Mr. Grannis, was fitting him for college, and every moment was precious to the white-browed, intellectual student, who was quite a lion among us girls, partly because he was older and partly because he never noticed us as much as did the other boys. On this occasion, however, he was quite attentive to Cora, at least, pulling off her boots, removing her hood and brushing the large snowflakes from her soft wavy hair, while her dark brown eyes smiled gratefully upon him as he gave her his warm seat by the stove.

That morning Cora wrote to me slyly on her slate: "I don't care if mother does say Walter Beaumont is poor as poverty, I like him best of anybody in the world, don't you?"

I thought of the big red apple in my pocket, and of the boy who had so carefully shaken the snow from off my father's socks, and answered, "No," thinking, the while, that I should say yes, if Walter had ever treated me as he did my playmate and friend, Cora Blanchard. She was a beautiful young girl, a favorite with all, and possessing, as it seemed, but one glaring fault—a proneness to estimate people for their wealth rather than their worth. This in a measure was the result of her home-training, for her family, though far from being rich, were very aristocratic, and strove to keep their children as much as possible from associating with the "vulgar herd," as they styled the laboring class of the community. In her secret heart Cora had long cherished a preference for Walter, though never, until the morning of which I write, had it been so openly avowed. And Walter, too, while knowing how far above him she was in point of position, had dared to dream of a time when a bright-haired woman, with a face much like that of the girlish Cora, would gladden his home, wherever it might be.

That noon as we sat around the glowing stove we played as children will, and it came my turn to "answer truly whom I intended to marry." Without a thought of the big apple, the snowy socks, or of anyone in particular, I replied unhesitatingly: "The one I love best," and the question passed on to Cora, who was sitting by the side of Walter Beaumont. He had not joined in our sport, but now his eye left his book and rested upon Cora with an expression half fearful, half expectant. She, too, glanced at him, and as if the spirit of prophecy were upon her she said: "I shall not marry the one I love best, but the one who has the most money and can give me the handsomest diamonds. Sister Fanny has a magnificent set, and she looks so beautiful when she wears them."

Instantly there fell a shadow on Walter Beaumont's face, and his eye returned again to the Latin lettered page. But his thoughts were not of what were written there; he was thinking of the humble cottage on the borders of the wood, of the rag-carpet on the oaken floor, of the plain, old-fashioned furniture, and of the gentle loving woman who called him "her boy," and that spot her home. There were no diamonds there—no money—and Cora, if for these she married, would never be his wife. Early and late he toiled and studied, wearing his threadbare coat and coarse brown pants—for an education such as he must have admitted of no useless expenditure, and the costly gems which Cora craved were not his to give. In the pure unselfish love springing up for her within his heart there were diamonds of imperishable value, and these, together with the name he would make for himself, he would offer her, but nothing more, and for many weeks there was a shadow on his brow, though he was kind and considerate to her as of old.

As the spring and summer glided by, however, there came a change, and when in the autumn he left our village for New Haven there was a happy, joyous look upon his face, while a tress of Cora's silken hair was lying next his heart. Every week he wrote to her, and Cora answered, always showing to me what she had written, but never a word of his. "There was too much love," she said, "too much good advice in his letters for me to see," and thus the time passed on, until Walter, who had entered the junior class, was graduated with honor, and was about to commence a theological course, for he had made the ministry his choice. He was twenty-one now, and Cora was sixteen. Wondrously beautiful she was to look upon, with her fair young face, her soft brown eyes and wavy hair. And Walter Beaumont loved her devotedly, believing, too, that she in turn loved him, for one summer afternoon, in the green old woods which skirted the little village, she had sat by his side, and with the sunbeams glancing down upon her through the overhanging boughs, she had told him so, and promised some day to be his wife. Still, she would not [illegible] of a positive engagement—both [illegible] be free to change their mind if they wished, she said, and with this Walter was satisfied.

"I have no diamonds to give you, darling," he said, drawing her close to him; and Cora, knowing to what he referred, answered that "his love was dearer to her than all the world besides." Alas! that woman should be so fickle!

The same train which carried Walter away brought Mrs. Blanchard a letter from her daughter, a dashing, fashionable woman who lived in the city, and who wished to bring her sister Cora "out" the coming winter. "She is old enough now," she wrote, "to be looking for a husband, and of course she'll never do anything in that by-place."

This proposition, which accorded exactly with Mrs. Blanchard's wishes, was joyfully acceded to by Cora, who, while anticipating the pleasure which awaited her, had yet no thought of proving false to Walter; and in the letter which she wrote informing him of her plan, she assured him of her unchanging fidelity, little dreaming that the promise thus made would so soon be broken! Petted, caressed, flattered, and admired, as she was in the circle of her sister's friends, how could she help growing worldly and vain, or avoid contrasting the plain, unassuming Walter with the polished and gayly-dressed butterflies who thronged Mrs. Burton's drawing-room? When the summer came again she did not return to us as we expected, but we heard of her at fashionable watering places, the admired of all admirers; while one, it was said, a man of high position and untold wealth, bid fair to win the beauteous belle. Meantime her letters to Walter grew short and far between, ceasing at length altogether; and one day during the second winter of her residence in the city I received from her a package containing his miniature, the books he had given her, and the letters he had written. These she wished me to give him when next I saw him, bidding me tell him to think no more of one who was not worthy of him.

"To be plain, Lottie," she wrote, "I'm engaged, and though Mr. Douglass is not a bit like Walter, he has a great deal of money, drives splendid horses, and I reckon we shall get on well enough. I wish, though, he was not quite so old. You'll be shocked to hear that he is almost fifty, though he looks about forty! I know I don't like him as well as I did Walter, but after seeing as much of the world as I have I could not settle down into the wife of a poor minister. I am not good enough, and you must tell him so. I hope he won't feel bad—poor Walter. I've kept the lock of his hair. I couldn't part with that; but of course Mr. Douglass will never see it. His hair is gray! Good-bye."

This was what she wrote, and when I heard from her again she was Cora Douglass, and her feet were treading the shores of the Old World, whither she had gone on a bridal tour.

In the solitude of his chamber the young student learned the sad news from a paragraph in a city paper, and bowing his head upon the table he strove to articulate, "It is well," but the flesh was weak, warring with the spirit, and the heart which Cora Blanchard had cruelly trampled down clung to her still with a death-like fondness, and, following her even across the waste of waters, cried out: "How can I give her up!" But when he remembered, as he ere long did, that 'twas a sin to love her now, he buried his face in his hands and, calling on God to help him in his hour of need, wept such tears as never again would fall for Cora Blanchard.

The roses in our garden were faded and the leaves of autumn were piled upon the ground ere he came to his home again, and I had an opportunity of presenting him with the package which many months before had been committed to my care. His face was very pale and his voice trembled as, in a low tone, he asked: "Where is she?"

"In Italy," I answered, adding that "her husband was said to be very wealthy."

Bowing mechanically, he walked away, and a year and a half went by ere I saw him again. Then he came among us as our minister. The old, white-haired pastor, who for so long had told us of the Good Shepherd and the better land, was sleeping at last in the quiet graveyard, and the people had chosen young Walter Beaumont to fill his place. He was a splendid-looking man—tall, erect, and finely formed, with a most winning manner, and a face which betokened intellect of the highest order. We were proud of him, all of us—proud of our clergyman, who, on the third Sabbath in June, was to be ordained in the old brick church before whose altar he had years ago been baptized, a smiling infant.

On the Thursday afternoon preceding the ordination a large travelling carriage covered with dust and laden with trunks passed slowly through our village, attracting much attention. Seated within it was a portly, gray-haired man, resting his chin upon a gold-headed cane, and looking curiously out at the people in the street, who stared as curiously at him. Directly opposite him, and languidly reclining upon the soft cushions, was a white, proud-faced lady, who evidently felt no interest in what was passing around her, for her eyes were cast down and her thought seemed busy elsewhere. I was sitting at my chamber window, gazing out upon them, and just as they drew near the gate the lady raised her eyes—the soft, brown eyes which once had won the love of Walter Beaumont, and in which there was now an unmistakable look of anguish, as if the long eyelashes, drooping so wearily upon the colorless cheek, were constantly forcing back the hidden tears. And this was Cora Douglass, come back to us again from her travels in a foreign land! She knew me in a moment, and in her face there was much of her olden look as, bending forward, she smiled a greeting and waved toward me her white, jewelled hand, on which the diamonds flashed brightly in the sunlight.

ENTERTAINING ROYALTY

STILL SOMETIMES A TICKLISH THING IN ENGLAND.

King Edward at an Unceremonious Week-end—The Shah a Troublesome Guest.

To entertain royalty is the dream of some people, the bugbear of others. In olden times the entertaining of royalty taxed to their utmost the resources of the richest noblemen, who seemed like monarchs themselves in their power and prodigality. Queen Elizabeth's progresses ruined her hosts, though they vied with each other in offering her the gorgeous masques, the fantastic pageants and the splendid feastings in which her soul delighted. But in this democratic age, writes Lady Violet Greville in the London Chronicle, royalty shows itself less exacting, and entertaining is conducted on far simpler lines.

The late Queen Victoria paid brief visits to the castles of the great peers, and has left on record in her diary the unaffected pleasure she derived from her stay in Highland homes like Taymouth and Blair Atholl, where the simple feudal life and the splendid scenery of mountain and loch appealed to her unsophisticated taste. These sojourns, indeed, decided her to purchase the Balmoral estates, where the happiest hours of her active life were spent.

English royalty loves to dispense as much as possible with unnecessary etiquette and to join in field sports and country pastimes. Even the foreigners who land on our hospitable shores enter keenly into our games—our polo, our cricket and our hunting. I vividly remember the intense delight evinced by the Comte de Paris on the occasion of his landing on the banks of a wild Highland river. His pride and joy were those of a schoolboy and the fish, carefully wrapped in heather, was promptly despatched as a welcome gift to the Comtesse de Paris.

Notwithstanding this laudable desire for simplicity, the entertaining of royalty still remains a ticklish thing. Kings and princes are often as exacting and capricious as spoilt beauties—the Shah when tired frequently refused to budge or to fulfill the engagements he had contracted—and if things do not go quite smoothly they are apt to visit the annoyance on the unoffending host. It is said that Louis XVIII., after he was restored to the throne by the allied forces, mortally offended Czar Alexander by allowing his family to annex all the state rooms in the chateau where he was entertaining, and compelling the Czar to content himself with more humble apartments.

The King also suffered himself to be served first at dinner, an unpardonable breach of etiquette. The Czar, in high dudgeon, ordered his carriage and left next day, feeling himself from that day onward more drawn toward the Bonapartists, who had shown him courtesy and regard. It is on such lapses from etiquette and good breeding that hosts are apt to make shipwreck.

When English royalty visits a country house it is usual to submit beforehand a list of the visitors that are to be received, which the great personage approves, deletes or adds to as he prefers.

On the occasion of a King's visit his apartments are redecorated and refurnished in the style he is supposed to prefer, the daily menu is passed by him, and his principal attendant points out the dishes preferred and the hour at which he wishes his meals served. Usually the monarch breakfasts

IN HIS OWN APARTMENTS.

Queen Victoria made her midday meal the principal one of the day, and her dinner, taken late, served the purpose of supper. No mutton was ever eaten at her table, but chicken always figured there.

The present King's gastronomic influence has been exerted in favor of smaller and lighter dinners, and he prefers French cookery, though he also likes such thoroughly English dishes as beans and bacon. The late Duke of Cambridge showed great partiality for ham, which, cold or hot, always appeared at dinner.

Cooks of royal houses are much appreciated, and according to the old custom rewarded and even decorated. The present King has given the Victorian Order to two ducal cooks who have afforded him satisfaction. Notwithstanding the extra trouble caused in the household the servants are delighted and flattered by the advent of the King, for they are handsomely remunerated, while the host and hostess themselves generally receive some charming present—a pin or brooch or cigarette case with the royal initials in diamonds—as a souvenir.

The King is exceedingly careful to select gifts appropriate to the friend on whom he confers them, and chooses and bestows them himself, knowing the importance of tact and the personal touch in all such matters.

Two kinds of royal visits take place, state visits, when everything is ceremonious and a certain amount of etiquette is exacted, and the informal week end visits to friends in which the King delights. On these occasions he brings only a small retinue with him, two motors and five chauffeurs, including a mecanicien, and he treats everything with the charming gaiety and bonhomie which have done so much to increase our popularity abroad.

It is generally expected that every one should be ready and assembled before the King appears for dinner, and at formal receptions ladies must always wear gloves,

EVEN IN THE HOUSE.

There is usually some sport or event for which the King visits his host, such as races, shooting or the opening of a public building, but when he is quietly staying with intimate friends golf, bridge or a motor drive amply suffice for his amusement.

The King is very proud of his beautiful gardens at Frogmore, where more than a hundred gardeners are employed, and of the grapes and peaches, which take prizes at the principal flower shows; but even these magnificent gardens with their long vistas of glass houses do not suffice for the royal needs, and many thousands of pounds are expended annually in fruits and vegetables. Hostesses must provide fruit of the very best and most delectable quality, "primeurs" of all kinds, and the finest asparagus, green peas, or whatever delicacy is in season.

The arrangements of the royal apartments, the color of the hangings, the choice of flowers, books and bric-a-brac, demand forethought and knowledge on the part of the hostess. Queen Alexandra likes pale and pretty colors, and she expects fresh sheets, edged with lace, laid on her bed each night. Queen Victoria disliked highly scented flowers, a prejudice shared by all the ladies of that period, who considered them unwholesome. The late Duke of Albany, on the contrary, loved them in great variety, and preferred his table strewn with books and the walls covered with good prints. Pets, dogs, and parrakeets are frequently carried about by royalty. The King himself never stirs without his favorite dog, Cæsar, and the Queen likes her Japanese dogs and her singing birds around her, and even takes them on her foreign trips.

Foreign royalties rise uncomfortably early, to our idea, and others go to bed very late, but as a rule they retire at a reasonable hour. Entertaining Orientals is a more difficult affair. The Shah's suite carried on culinary operations in their bedrooms, threw the chicken bones on the floor and left a terrible mess of litter behind them.

CARPETS WERE RUINED

and curtains destroyed. Russian visitors in the last century refused to sleep in beds, and lay on the floor. Prince Fushimi, who spoke no English, liked European fashions and preferred to dine late. His suite were remarkably pleasant, stately and courteous in their manners.

Often, however, it is the dependents and servants who give the most trouble, their rooms do not please them or the food is not to their liking, or they are quick to resent imaginary slights or forgetfulness. Queen Victoria's Indian attendants expected the finest of hothouse fruits to be provided for them. Catholic kings and their servants require all kinds of delicate maigre dishes to be served on fast days and Fridays, while Hindus eat nothing a Christian has touched.

Thus many little stumbling blocks must be avoided by the prudent hostess. Many anxious cares and worries—fears lest the dinner should not be punctual, hot and well cooked and the arrangements go without a hitch—assail her. Royalty sometimes expresses a wish to change the plans or go on some expedition which has not been suggested before, and it is then that the ingenuity of the hostess is put to the proof. With lightning-like celerity she must decide, issue orders and see that they are obeyed. In fact the woman who is a good entertainer of royalty is a born diplomat and fit to take the place of Prime Minister. It is every one's ambition to reach the dizzy height, but for one who succeeds many fail ignominously and retire forever abashed and disappointed from the contest.

SERVANTS WHO SMOKE.

A New Problem That Confronts the English Housekeeper.

"Parlor maid wanted in small family. Abstainer and non-smoker," was the somewhat startling advertisement which appeared recently in a London daily.

Now-a-days it is quite necessary, writes a correspondent of the London Tribune, for a mistress to inquire whether a maid is addicted to the cigarette craze, for the smoking habit has invaded the servants' hall, and kitchen maids, cooks and upper house maids now openly adopt the cigarette consuming custom of their smart set sisters.

The writer saw a well turned out nurse the other day in Hyde Park wheeling an expensive looking mail cart containing an elaborately dressed baby. The nurse was coquettishly smoking a cigarette and attracting considerable attention from the astonished passersby.

At several registry offices inquiries show that the smoking habits of the domestic servant are a recognized fact. In some families it is quite customary for parlor maid, housemaid and cook to enjoy their cigarettes in company below stairs.

That the working girl should take to smoking in imitation of the lady is by no means surprising. So many women of the highest social class now-a-days smoke in restaurants after meals, and at all hours in hotel lounges, that the filtering down of a taste for the weed to a more humble stratum of society was only to be expected.

"Like mistress, like maid" applies to cigarettes as much as to clothes and hats, and the lady of the house who consumes her ten to fifteen cigarettes a day can hardly, with logic and consistency, take her housemaid to task for indulging in the imitation which is said to be the sincerest form of flattery. The fact that it is a forbidden pleasure makes it the more alluring.

The maidservant takes a sample from her mistress's silver cigarette case, tries, tastes, and finds it good. Her mistress declares that she smokes because she is tired, and needs a soothing restorer. The maid is tired, too, and thinks what is good sauce for upstairs will probably prove equally pleasant for consumption in the basement.

For this reason ladies in search of servants should make a point of inquiring whether the new housemaid or the nurse just engaged is a non-smoker.

FIRE INSURANCE RIDDLES

AN ENGLISH HOUSEHOLDER'S PREDICAMENT.

Writer in London Daily Mail Tells How Companies Treat the Insured.

Every year enormous amounts are paid by the British public as premiums for the insurance of their houses and goods against the risks of fire. But there is not a single householder in this country who can tell me how much he would be able to get out of the company which insures him if his house was completely burnt out and his goods were totally destroyed, says A. M. Barrington in London Daily Mail.

And the reason of this lies in the absurd fact that, although I, as a householder, pay a fixed annual premium on a fixed insurable amount to protect me from the risks of fire, the company will not pay me that fixed insurable amount, even though all my goods are lost. Although the company cheerfully scoops in the premiums on £1,000 or £5,000—premiums, mind you, in strict proportion to the insurable amount—it is under no obligation to pay that amount, and in practice it never does.

WHAT COMES OFF.

It is only when the fire has come and destroyed all his goods that the householder finds this out. Then, when he claims the £1,000 or whatever the sum may be on which he has paid his premiums, he is met, for the first time, by a demand for proof as to what goods were burnt and whether they were worth that sum.

He is required to produce an inventory comprising every article, to give evidence of their value to show accounts and receipts concerning the articles he has bought, to prove that they are all his and not belonging to his servants or his friends, and then, when he has done all this, he is told that he has not allowed for depreciation, and that 20 or 30 or even more per cent. must come off his claim on that head alone.

A HEAVY LOSER.

The result is that, while fire insurance as at present arranged acts well enough on partial and inconsiderable losses, when a total, or practically a total, loss occurs, the unfortunate householder is a heavy loser. In addition to the mental trouble, such as complete destruction of his home brings on him, he is compelled within a very short time to render all these innumerable particulars, and eventually, to escape the anxieties and expense of a lawsuit, to accept practically what the insurance company determines to give him.

And this is why I say that the time has come for a drastic reform of the fire insurance system—for it is the system and not any individual company or group of companies against which I now protest; and that the public should receive, without question, the full amount on which they have annually paid a proportionate premium, directly they have satisfied the company that the fire has taken place under bona fide circumstances and that the loss has been as complete as they claim it to be.

UNSATISFACTORY SYSTEM.

That is say, on a total loss we want a "valued policy"—a policy which values our goods (after inspection by the company) at a fixed sum, and gives us a right to that sum on the proof of the loss.

At present one loses heavily under the most unsatisfactory system in vogue, and as there is nothing like a concrete case to illustrate the working of a system, I will give my own unfortunate experience of my heavy loss by fire, although I had thought I was fully insured against its risks.

CASE IN POINT.

Some fifteen years ago I insured my furniture for the sum of £1,200, and ever since then I had paid the annual premium proportionate to that amount. Six months since a fire broke out in the middle of the night, and practically all my furniture and effects were destroyed before the local fire brigade had got the fire under what they called "control." Thereupon I sent in my claim for £1,200, with such general details as I could compile within the fortnight allowed to me by the terms of the policy.

Then the trouble began. I was required by the company to set out each article that I had lost, to place against it its value at the time of the fire, and to produce accounts and vouchers in connection with these articles. It was impossible for me to do any of these things properly.

RACKED THEIR BRAINS.

My wife and I racked our brains to the pitch of torment to compile a list which probably left out a hundred articles—most of them small, I do not doubt. The value of those we remembered we could in some instances gauge, but in many instances we could not. We could only draw "bows at a venture," and we had to be very careful not to be too venturesome, for we had before us a warning in large type that in the case of a claim being so exaggerated as to be considered fraudulent, all benefit under the policy would be forfeited.

Finally, as to accounts and vouchers, we had practically none. A stray invoice or two, some twenty or thirty receipts not showing clearly the particular article to which they applied—were all that we had possessed, and these had disappeared in the fire which had overwhelmed our home.

DEDUCTIONS MADE.

The upshot of the whole matter was that the company assumed there was £1,000 worth of goods in the house, declined to pay for engravings and prints (some of which were worth £5 and £10 apiece) because they had not been expressly mentioned in the policy; for the same reason would not pay for two pianos; disclaimed responsibility for several valuable family portraits in oils, on the ground that they were not absolutely mine, but were held in trust; held that the damage in my study, where I kept guns, fishing-rods, some sporting trophies, and a number of books and pictures, was caused not by the fire, but by the explosion of a case of cartridges I kept in that room, and therefore was not covered by the policy; deducted 20 per cent. for general depreciation, while allowing nothing for the appreciation of some old Georgian silver plate; and finalls offered me £750, or the alternative of an expensive and unsatisfactory arbitration (the terms of the policy denying me the right to place my case before a judge and jury).

"VALUED POLICY."

That, in brief, is the story of my fire insurance, and it must be the experience of many persons after an overwhelming fire. Some companies are undoubtedly more generous than others; but I maintain that the system is wrong, and that what we pay for we should be entitled to get; that the policy should be a "valued policy"—in other words, if £1,000 worth of goods is paid for and is lost, £1,000, and no other sum, should be payable to the loser.

MARCONI AT THE KEY.

Making Thunder and Lightning at His Paris Workshop.

The asphalted floor is covered with a carpet of rubber. The walls and ceilings are in hardwood. Strange instruments lie in each corner of the room. On a platform raised a yard above the floor, says a writer in La Revue, is a table with a transmitting key upon it and a large wooden lever also used in transmitting. Marconi is on the platform, his hand grasping the lever.

"Now," he says, "be careful. When I signal to the electrician 50,000 volts will enter the room. Stand behind me and touch nothing. Do not approach those oils, because the current will not wait for you to touch them; it will leap out upon you."

The signal given, a lever is pulled and a dull noise is heard. The needle of the voltameter begins to move on the dial and to attain all sorts of high figures.

"Now," says Marconi, "I will communicate with the nearest station," and he presses the key of the transmitter.

There is a blinding blue flash, and at each pressure on the key sparks nearly two feet in length start from between the two silvery balls of the induction reel. One of these balls is in communication with the earth and the other with a rod. Each spark represents an impulsion which is communicated from the battery to the rod and from this rod the electrician sets in motion the vibrations of the ether called Hertzian waves.

These waves expand in space in every direction at a speed of 300,000 kilometres a second; that is to say, seven times the circumference of the earth. They are independent of wind and temperature and glide above the surface of the earth and sea, striking on their way the wireless stations that lie far beyond the horizon.

At each blinding flash that accompanies the movement of the key a noise like the report of a rifle is heard. It is an awe-inspiring spectacle, the inventor calmly standing there pressing the key amid the lightning and the thunder. The operator is obliged to stuff his ears with wool. It appears, however, that recently Marconi has found means of doing away with the noise almost completely.

ALANG OF NEW GUINEA.

Grass that Makes Fierce Warfare on All Other Kinds of Vegetation.

Dr. Poch, the Austrian anthropologist, who has spent a long time in New Guinea, studying its natives and its geography, tells of a remarkable variety of grass that makes fierce warfare upon other kinds of vegetation, so that practically nothing else grows where it gets a foothold.

The natives call it alang. It has a tall, thick and tough stalk, but its greatest peculiarity is its roots, which spread out through every particle of earth they reach and give it a matted texture something like felt. There is really no room left for the roots of any other kind of vegetation.

Fields of alang cannot exist in forests because the plant does not thrive in the shade. Neither can any kind of tree make headway in a patch of alang.

The two kinds of vegetation are antagonistic. One will not grow where the other exists. Large patches of alang are found surrounded by timber and remain there like islands, for no trees will grow in them. Between the alang and the forest is a sort of neutral zone, for the shade of the high trees prevents the development of the grass.

The New Guinea natives help to extend the area covered by this grass. Each year they make a new clearing in the forest for their little plantations. As soon as these are abandoned the alang takes firm lodgment there. It has won just so much territory from the forest and it yields to no comers.

The oldest English inn is said to be the Fighting Cocks, St. Albans, Hertfordshire; but the honor more probably rests with the Seven Stars, Withy Grove, Manchester, which was built somewhere about 1500.

THESE DOGS IN CLOVER

IN CARE OF HOSPITALS, SURGEONS AND THE GOVERNMENT.

Are Now Fitted With Artificial Legs, Glass Eyes, and a Set of False Teeth.

So far no dog has been found who will submit to wearing spectacles. To please their masters and for their own comfort large numbers of dogs have cheerfully worn wooden, vulcanite and leather legs, false eyes of celluloid or glass and artificial teeth, too, but all dogdom draws the line at spectacles.

Something like thirty crippled dogs in England are now skipping about merrily on artificial legs and realistic looking paws, says the Ladies' Realm. They learn to walk with absolute ease on their surgical limbs, some of which cost as much as several guineas.

One prosperous petted French poodle possesses a gorgeous artificial leg of leather with side supports of handsomely chased gold. Solid silver trimmings combined with leather are by no means uncommon expensive accessories which make extra precautions against the dog stealer a necessity.

The dogs of the poor content themselves with a cheap though efficient wooden leg at about 50 cents. A dog with a wooden or metal trimmed leather leg speedily discovers that this is a most effective weapon of defence in dealing with other and fighting dogs. And with a little practice the false limb, especially when fitted with a movable flexible joint and paw, serves as well for locomotion as the real article and forms an efficient holder for a delectable bone.

A Pharisaical pride and uppishness enters into the heart of a dog wearing a glass eye, a set of false teeth or a vulcanite paw.

HE IS NOT AS OTHER DOGS ARE.

Therefore he carries his nose in the air and sniffs superciliously at former canine companions.

Even a cow with a wooden leg has been known to give herself insufferable airs in the pastures. When the accident occurred which necessitated an artificial limb her owner was offered £2 for her. As soon as the leg was fitted her market price rose to £15.

The proverbial nine lives of cats preserve them from some of the accidents to which more venturesome canine flesh is heir; still, puss frequently comes under the skilful ministrations of the veterinary surgeon. Frisky, a handsome seven-year-old tabby which broke its foreleg, was in splints for three weeks at the animal hospital but was as frisky as ever when she came out.

An elderly Schipperke had a fine set of false teeth put in by his owner, a dentist. The dog, hitherto of blameless record, celebrated his acquisition by stealing a chop the very first day. It had been so long since he had been able to enjoy a bone that he could not resist.

The same dentist made several sets of teeth for an old collie. The dog swallowed the first set, smashed the second over a toothsome bone and became an expert in removing them with his paw. Finally a permanent plate on the American bridge plan, which effectually prevented him from taking them out and losing them, was put in with bars of

TWENTY-FOUR CARAT GOLD.

The consulting room of a famous veterinary surgeon during consulting hours is full of interest. Patients of every kind arrive, from a pigeon with a broken wing to a sick rabbit.

A three-months-old puppy comes with a broken leg. He is speedily put up in a plaster of paris splint, which, after the custom of his kind, he tries to eat.

Bandages, splints and every type of surgical appliance are as grist to the dog mill, but cunningly made collars prevent this playful epicureanism. Prof. Hobday, a notable veterinary surgeon, has invented an electrical motor pump for administering anaesthetic vapor to obviate pain during operation.

The fitting of a glass eye in a dog or cat is now quite a commonplace in veterinary practice. Peggy, a beautiful Jap spaniel, was fitted out with a perfect match for her single eye, but the first day she sported it she lost it. That is to say, being out with her mistress, she unperceivedly extracted the new eye and not being able to carry it in her paw dropped it by the way.

But it was bought back for a shilling from a street boy who found it.

Peggy did not always wear her glass eye, but it was invariably put in for afternoon tea.

At the dogs' sanitarium, Beddington Lane, Mitcham, some 300 dogs may be seen under treatment in the wards. The hospital covers about three acres of land; the air is bracing, and scented from the famous Mitcham lavender fields.

The bright wards are built bungalow fashion on one floor. Each dog has a self-contained flat or cage, consisting of a large bedroom with straw and litter couch, and a nice sitting room or exercising yard. And even, warm temperature is maintained by hot water pipes out of reach of doggie's paws and investigating nose.

The sickbeds of all are surrounded with every comfort and tender care. Experienced kennel men watch over the invalids throughout the day and night. Their temperatures are taken and recorded, their diet carefully prescribed and cooked in

A DAINTY LITTLE KITCHEN.

A qualified resident surgeon in charge lives in a delightful old fashioned farmhouse in the grounds, while the specialists and consultants pay periodic visits for inspection and operation. The surgery is fitted up with the most elaborate appliances such as electroscopes for the examination of canine throats. The pills, potions and liniments are varied and attractive.

The distemper hospital is absolutely cut off from any possible contact with the other departments. A separate staff is told off both for the distemper sections and the isolation wards, where cases of infectious troubles are treated.

A special ward is provided for healthy pet dogs whose owners are abroad, and a separate section also for imported dogs in quarantine. Dogs from every part of the world find a happy home here while in durance vile—or the six months quarantine prescribed by the Board of Agriculture for dogs coming from foreign parts.

There are two forms of quarantine, indoor and outdoor. The regime depends on the climate from which the dog has come.

Each dog from quarantine has—by order of the Board of Agriculture—to take his walks and runs abroad in solitary state in the exercising grounds lest he may communicate rabies or infection of some sort to his canine companions. It is said that almost $3,000,000 is invested in dogs in Great Britain.

GAVE COPPER FOR GOLD.

Henry Douglas Anderson, a clerk in the Manchester branch of the Bank of England, has been sentenced to three years' penal servitude for robbing the bank of the sum of £1,080. Anderson's theft was a remarkable one. The opportunity for the theft arose through the operation of a system by which, at the close of business each day, the gold of the bank was made up into bags of a thousand pounds each, which were checked, and then placed in the treasury. They remained there till they were weighed by the senior unattached clerk of the day. Never more than one clerk was engaged in this particular work in any one day. The weighing was done in a room specially allotted for the purpose, in which no one but the clerk was allowed to go. It fell to the duty of Anderson to do the weighing. After he had done it for some days it was discovered that some of the bags that had been sent to another bank contained a large number of half-pennies mixed with the sovereigns. The weight was accurate in each case, however. The substitution of copper for gold in this way represented a loss to the bank of £1,080. When the discovery was made prisoner had disappeared. There was some difficulty in tracing the fugitive, but through correspondence it was found he was in Canada. He was arrested at Winnipeg and brought back for trial.

Anderson's explanation of his crime was almost as remarkable as the crime itself. He was not in want. He had been over twenty years in the bank's service, and drew a salary of £335 per annum. He was not a gambler and did not live beyond his means. He had committed the crime out of revenge. In July, 1906, before the committal of the offence, he had some disagreement with the manager of the bank because among his gold a new penny was found. Anderson was compelled to make the amount good. The matter was reported to the head manager in London, and this Anderson took very much to heart, and brooded over it, because the manager had said to him, "You'll be putting halfpennies in the gold next." On July 26 Anderson bought five pounds' worth of new halfpennies, and, therefore, to that extent the offence was premeditated. He had been actuated by a mad impulse, and committed the crime in a fit of anger.

SWAIN SUES OLD WOMAN.

Septugenarian in Court for Breach of Promise.

Frau Poeckh, who is 70 years of age, was sued in the High Court at Vienna, recently for $10,000 damages for breach of promise.

Herr Johann Eggenberger, a retired shopman, of Baden, who brought the action, said Frau Poeckh had lived at his house, and some time ago insinuated to his daughter that it was a pity he did not marry again.

He thereupon proposed to the old woman, who has considerable wealth, and she consented on condition that he give up his business. The engagement was ratified by a handshake and a kiss.

Herr Eggenberger disposed of his shop, when Frau Poeckh changed her mind and advised him to get a wife from some almshouse, as she could never think of marrying anyone who had been a shopman.

Frau Poeckh denied that she ever became engaged, and added that she would rather hang herself than remarry.

DOG TRAINS BECOMING RARE.

Are Now Seldom Seen in Lower Canadian Towns.

The appearance of a dog train of furs on Edmonton's main thoroughfare recently was a picturesque sight, reminiscent of the frontier days, and one only to be seen at rare intervals now.

The four burly huskies in the train showed signs of fatigue after their long journey of 300 miles from Pelican Rapids on the Athabasca, accomplished in the last five days with intervals of rest.

The driver and owner, a square-jawed, capable-looking Indian named Alexandre Dezzerlais, preferred to bring his furs and dogs directly to Edmonton, instead of leaving his dogs at Athabasca Landing, as the average trapper does.

Dezzerlais, who is accompanied by an Indian named Josef, has left his cargo of furs at Ullman's store in charge of W. H. Jaeger, and they will be sold there to the highest bidder.

His furs include seven coyote skins, six cross fox, eighteen red fox, two otter, seventeen lynx, ten minx, seven marten, three weasel, one large black bear and five moose skins.

Some idea of the value of Dezzerlais' cargo may be had from the fact that marten skins are worth from $10 to $25 each, mink and lynx, $8 to $9; otter, $15 to $25; cross fox and coyotes $3 to $5; red fox, $5 to $7.

With the moose skins and bear skin Dezzerla's' furs will total about $500. A great part of this he will exchange for supplies, and will then wend his way homeward with his dogs to the silent places of the north.—Edmonton Bulletin.

STABBED IN THE STREET

GERMAN MURDERER CRUELLY GASHES THREE BABIES.

Awful Warning in a Note — Says He Has Slain Children in Other Places.

A series of cold-blooded crimes, singularly resembling the "Jack the Ripper" murders, but for the fact that instead of women the victims were little girls, occurred with remarkable celerity the other day almost in the centre of Berlin, Germany, and aroused the most intense excitement and indignation.

Within a short space of time the assassin successively enticed three girl babies, the oldest only five years old, into doorways of homes and stabbed them several times in the abdomen with a sharp instrument. As a result one of the children is dead, another is dying and the third is dangerously wounded.

The first knowledge that the crimes had been committed came when an occupant of the house at the corner of Ryke and Beiforter Streets found the body of Margaritha Prawitz, aged four, lying in the doorway, bathed in blood, and the lower part of her body horribly gashed. This was immediately reported to the police, who were about to investigate the case, when reports came that Hertha Lenst, aged three, and Elly Knispel, five years of age, had been found similarly outraged, but were still alive, in Prenzlauer Allee, and Hensersdorfer Street, respectively. The news soon spread throughout the vicinity, which magnified the number of the victims, and the inhabitants of the neighborhood became intensely excited. Mothers sought their children in the street, and made them return indoors for fear that they might meet a similar fate. Crowds gathered about the police station, shouting vengeance against the murderer.

The officials acted quickly in an endeavor to find the murderer and have published a reward of $1,000 for his capture.

A TERRIBE WARNING.

Shortly after the murders were committed a slip of paper, with a death's head sketched on it, was found on a public seat near the scene. On it was scribbled in a rambling hand:—

"Away, away, in five minutes there will be a corpse. There is a child murderer in the neighborhood. Deliver this note to the police. I have killed children in Belforter, Prenzlauer and Hensordorfer Streets."

The note was attached to the seat by means of a sharp, single scissor blade, and it is assumed that the crimes were committed with the other half of the instrument.

All the available police and detectives were ordered to scour the neighborhood. Some parents reported that their children had seen a haggard man about 27 years of age, well dressed, and wearing a cap, offering candy and fruit to little girls, whom he asked to accompany him.

A man was arrested shortly afterwards who tallied somewhat with this indefinite description. Later he was confronted by two wounded children, but they were too weak to respond to the questions put to them.

The man was then taken in a cab guarded by police to the police station. The crowd outside the station, believing him to be the murderer, attempted to drag him from the vehicle and lynch him, and he was saved only by the police drawing their swords and holding the crowd at bay. The people then attempted to stone the station and the prisoner was removed to the central station for security.

Experts who have examined the note found on the seat have come to the conclusion that it was written by a madman. They will obtain samples of writing from the prisoner and compare these with the note.

THE SCOURGE OF UGANDA.

Determined Effort to Stamp Out Sleeping Sickness.

The British Government has decided that the scheme put forward by the Commissioner of Uganda for the suppression of sleeping sickness in that protectorate is to be adopted, and the Treasury has authorized the expenditure of the funds required for this work. According to Mr. Hesketh Bell's plan, the natives are to be removed from the fly-infested district on the shores of Lake Victoria to healthy locations inland. The sick are to be placed in segregation camps, where they will undergo the so-called Atoxyl treatment. It is estimated that 20,000 persons will have to be dealt with in this manner. It is further intended that all landing stages along the shore of the Victoria Nyanza shall be freed from the presence of the tsetse fly by means of a complete clearance of all vegetation. Fords, ferries, and water-holes will be similarly dealth with, and it is hoped that by constant and consistent efforts in this direction sleeping sickness will gradually be stamped out in Uganda. It is a matter for satisfaction that the chiefs fully appreciate the steps that are being taken, and are working loyally with the Government in helping to stamp out what has already proved such a terrible scourge in Uganda.

EXPECTED.

Returning to town from a fishing trip early one morning this week, a Toronto man found the following newspaper clipping carefully pasted on the glass of his front door:—

"Behold the Fisherman. He riseth up early in the morning and disturbeth the whole household. Mighty are his preparations. He goeth forth full of hope.

"When the day is far spent he returneth, smelling of strong drink, and the truth is not in him."

MEAN.

"He has a mighty mean way of saving money."

"Indeed! What is it?"

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Interesting Facts About Some Well-known People.

Lord Strathcona is eighty-seven years old. Some time ago he admitted that for sixty years he, as a rule, had only had two meals a day—breakfast and dinner. "Of course," he said, "if there is anyone whom I particularly wish to meet I am prepared to take lunch with him. I do not know that this custom has made me more vigorous than other men. I see no harm in smoking a little, and no harm in drinking a little; but I believe in temperance—yes, temperance in all things, whether food, drink, or tobacco."

Stafford House is one of the most notable mansions in London. The picture-gallery contains priceless works by Murillo, Raphael, Titan, and others, while the reception rooms are filled with objects of art from all parts of the world. It was the late Duke of Sutherland who collected most of these treasures; and it is related that on one occasion, when Queen Victoria was leaving Stafford House after a magnificent reception, she said, in bidding the duke good-bye: "I leave your palace to return to my house."

It is reported that Signor Sarasate, the famous violinist, is engaged to be married to an American lady, said to be the daughter of a millionaire. The Signor is sixty-three years old, and the responsibility for that long term of bachelordom is usually laid at the door of his master, Auber. When the latter handed Sarasate the first prize of the Paris Conservatoire, he wound up his little speech of presentation with the words: "And, above all, never marry!" The Signor's perfection in the art of fiddling is the result of constant practice. When once asked the secret of his success, he tersely replied: "Six hours a day since I was twelve."

It is stated that Lady Henry Somerset has now retired from platform work, and proposes to devote her time to developing the work of her colony for inebriate women. It is now twenty-three years since Lady Henry first took up temperance work, in which, being a very able speaker, she has wielded much influence. At one time she took an interest in a league for the suppression of foot-binding in China, and was amused to be told by a Chinese lady: "We squeezy foot, you squeezy waist! Same object—both getee husband." Lady Henry married in 1873 Lord Henry Somerset, the song writer.

Lord Curzon, ex-Viceroy of India, who is shortly to enter Parliament again, has told an amusing story of his interview with the Korean Prime Minister during his Eastern travels. Hearing that Mr. Curzon (then not a peer) had been a Minister of the Crown, the Korean said: "I suppose you found that by far the most agreeable feature of office was your salary? But, no doubt, the perquisites were larger still." Then the Korean Minister added: "I presume you are a near relation of the Queen of England?" "No, I am not," replied Mr. Curzon. But, observing a look of disgust that passed over his countenance, the Englishman was fain to add: "'I am, however, as yet an unmarried man.' And with that unscrupulous suggestion," Lord Curzon concludes, "I completely regained the old gentleman's favor!"

The King has granted a very uncommon honor to his doctors, Sir Frederick Treves and Sir Francis Laking, in recognition of their "great skill and unremitting attention." His Majesty has permitted them to add to their respective arms one of the lions from the Royal arms. Sir Frederick, of course, was the operating surgeon when the King was struck down just before his coronation, while he added to his laurels by going out to the scene of the Boer War. He attended hundreds of the British wounded, and came back with a host of good stories, both amusing and pathetic. One poor soldier had had his eye shot and his upper jaw blown off; but instead of inquiring if there was any hope for him, he simply scribbled on a bit of paper: "Did we win?"

FISHERMAN'S LUCK.

"Perhaps my most amusing fishing experience in Italy was during a week in Naples, says the author of "The Salt of My Life," and gives the story in these words: Toward sunset one afternoon I was strolling toward my hotel along the parade, when I came across a ragged sportsman angling with a very long bamboo from the pavement. He looked a merry wight, and I seated myself on the parapet beside him. We were soon deep in as comfortable a conversation as is attainable between broken Tuscan and pure Neapolitan. We discussed rods, and I asked him to let me feel the weight of his, which must have been thirty feet long. With native courtesy he handed it to me as if it were mine, and no sooner was in my hands than down went the top, and I was in a good fish, which circled in vain on the unyielding line, and I soon raised a black sea-beam of probably three pounds. Of a certainty none of his other fish weighed more than as many ounces. He was too amazed to do more than stammer his thanks, and as I turned away I fancy that he crossed himself, regarding the black bream as the fruit of black magic.

TELEPHOTOGRAPHY.

Great expectations are entertained concerning the future development of the "telephoto" invented by Professor Korn of Munich. This instrument, with the aid of selenium, a substance possessing the peculiar property of varying its electric resistance in proportion to the amount of light falling upon it, transmits a photographic image over ordinary telegraph-wires. One of the most successful experiments of Professor Korn during last winter was the transmission of a photograph of the King of England over a circuit connecting Munich and Nuremberg. The photographs appear crossed with fine lines but these hardly interfere with the distinctness of the picture. The photograph of King Edward was transmitted in 11½ minutes, but Professor Korn hopes to render the process virtually instantaneous.

It wouldn't be so bad if people who say they have nothing to say would only let it go at that.

KAID MACLEAN WAS POOR

REMARKABLE CAREER LED HIM TO POWER.

Began From the Bottom, But is Now Very Wealthy—Will Retire Soon to England.

When that daring and intrepid Moorish bandit Raisuli captured Kaid Sir Harry Maclean all Europe stood aghast. For up to that time the person of Kaid Maclean had been considered absolutely inviolate. Maclean's career at the court of Fez beats them all, because of the man's adaptability. Thirty-odd years ago Lieutenant Maclean was an officer of the Gibraltar garrison — a poor young fellow at that, who found it more than difficult to keep up the entertaining and fox hunting of his brother officers.

WENT TO TANGIER.

How the young soldier got it into his head a brilliant career lay before him on the other side of the straits would be hard to explain. At all events he left the British army, went over to Tangier, and sent letters thence to the late Sultan Moulai Hassan. Here was a wise old despot, who with his grand vizier, the renowned and much lamented Ba Ahmed, held rebellious chieftains and tribes in check with an iron hand.

Still, he was growing old and suffered from an internal disease—two facts carefully noted by turbulent clans like the Rahamna and Zemoori. Therefore when Moulai Hassan received a letter from young Maclean offering his services as drill instructor to the imperial troops the old Sultan thought the experiment well worth trying. Accordingly he sent quite an imposing retinue up to Tangier to escort Maclean to the capital.

BUILT UP ARMY.

Here the adventurer found an Augean stable indeed. The flower of Moorish chivalry at that time consisted of picturesque horsemen mounted on prancing stallions, and armed only with old flintlocks seven feet long, with stocks inlaid with ivory and mother of pearl, and barrels that were a terror to the man who fired off the piece.

Quietly Lieutenant Maclean set to work advising the Sultan and getting estimates from Krupp of Essen, Armstrong of Newcastle-on-Tyne, Cockerill of Liege, and other great manufacturers of arms and ammunition. Moulai Hassan sent forth his tax gatherers and bade them rake in millions of dollars for the remodeling of his army, and although this occasioned a little bloodshed, the money was secured and the orders placed.

TAUGHT WAR TACTICS.

There were even tens of thousands of uniforms of a sort ordered from Europe; and, single handed, Maclean began to educate the more intelligent native officers in the strategy and tactics of modern warfare. And here he found pretty apt pupils. The Moors are a magnificent race, considered mentally as well as physically—born fighters every one of them. And seeing that the Christian was backed up by Sidna, the Great Lord, they had, perforce, to obey.

But by this time Spain, France and Italy, as Mediterranean powers, got wind of the scheme and declared that they too should have officers representing them in the court and camp of the Moorish Sultan. Artillery officers were sent from Marseilles and Algiers as well as from Rome and the Seville garrison. But all these were distinctly subservient to Maclean, who with marvellous tact and canniness has kept his hold for half a lifetime.

WAS DECORATED IN ENGLAND.

By this time the British Government began to see that Maclean was a man to be reckoned with, so an intimation was sent down from Tangier to Fez by Sir Arthur Nicholson, the British Minister, delicately hinting that Downing street would like to confer some decoration on the power behind the Moorish throne. Accordingly Maclean repaired to London and was given a K. C. M. G.

Not long afterward domestic troubles began to make themselves manifest and culminated in the divorce of Lady Maclean, whose life in her beautiful villa outside the walls of Tangier was said to be gay, but hardly discreet. Her daughters, by the way, are nearly always with their father at court whether in Fez, the northern, or Maraksh, the southern capital of the empire. The ladies speak and write classical Arabic with a fluency that Burton himself might have envied, and whenever they go on the street they are veiled to the eyes like any other Moslem women of high social rank.

WILL RETIRE SOON.

Maclean owns magnificent palaces in both cities, though he has not occupied the one in Maraksh for some years. This is because the Sultan has not dared to leave Fez lest the pretender, who is said to be backed with French gold, should overrun the whole of the rich northern provinces. Moreover, Fez is the true capital of Morocco, and was a great seat of learning a thousand years ago, when the Moorish Sultans were lording it in the courts of the Alhambra.

There is no doubt, however, that Sir Harry Maclean will shortly retire from the fascinating country to which he has given his life's work. He has bought a splendid estate in Norfolk, not far from King Edward's own place at Sandringham, and he doubtless feels he is entitled to end his days in a less strenuous arena than that of Fez.

IMMUNITY.

"Do you refuse to answer on the ground that you might incriminate yourself?"

"I'll leave that to the court. If I told 'the truth' I'd get a year. The 'whole truth' would mean at least ten years, and 'nothing but the truth' would be life, sure."

So they rated him as immune and called a witness who knew nothing of the case.

KING OBSERVES DETAIL.

Error in Straps and Buttons Did Not Escape Edward's Eye.

A story is being told which illustrates King Edward's marvellous memory for minutiae of detail. A certain yeomanry officer came up for presentation at the last levee, and in honor of the occasion ordered a brand new uniform. The army tailor who made the uniform slipped into some slight error with regard to straps and buttons.

The officer himself did not notice it, and it also escaped the eye of his colonel, who presented him, but as he passed the throne the king observed it, and sent an official after him to tell him what was wrong and that it must be altered. Another story illustrating the king's good memory for details is that, on the morning after Queen Victoria's death, when the new king went to Portsmouth, he noticed that the royal standard was flying half-mast high. This was, of course, intended as a mark of respect to the deceased sovereign. But in the presence of the reigning sovereign the royal standard must always fly mast high, and the king pointed out the error at once.

KING OF BEVERAGES.

Water is the king of beverages; it is the beverage to which all turn when they would cure themselves of the injudicious habit of consuming other beverages. But water that is not pure may be more harmful than the most harmful of other drinks. Water is the basis of all other beverages. All beverages of man's manufacture are water that has been adulterated by admixtures and chemical treatment. Pure water is the one beverage which has stood the test of science and come down to us unscathed through continuous use for countless ages. It is nature's chiefest blessing to man. Other beverages undergo many changes with time. Each age brings them forth in new styles, new methods of manufacture, new processes of chemical treatment, ageing and keeping. Foods change with each successive generation. We eat different kinds of foods from time to time, each generation prepares them differently; there are different methods of compounding them, different methods of cooking them. Pure water is the same yesterday, to-day and forever.

When a man blows a trumpet to call attention to the moral screen at his front door you can be pretty sure of finding the back door wide open all the time.

CORNER-STONE WELL LAID.

Impressive Ceremony Took Place at 11 o'Clock To-day, in Connection with the New Methodist Church at Chesterville.

The Methodist people of Chesterville were honored to-day with ideal weather and a very large assemblage in connection with the ceremony of the laying of the corner-stone of the new Methodist Church in this place. Early in the forenoon people began to arrive and kept coming from all directions, till at noon it was estimated that about 3,000 people were present to witness the event.

For some time the congregation have anticipated the building of a new place of worship in Chesterville, but hesitated to do so until the present. The estimated cost of the structure is $25,000, and there is not a question of doubt when it is completed that the Methodist people of Chesterville will have one of the most modern and finest churches in this district to worship in.

At the appointed hour, or nearly so, the invited ministers, together with Hon. Geo. P. Graham and others, took seats prepared for them, and close to the scene of the ceremony the Rev. Dr. Carman, General Superintendent of the Methodist Church of Canada, occupying the highest seat. The choir of the church, assisted by others, were also on the platform.

Rev. A. E. Runnells, S.T.L., Pastor.

A few opening remarks were made by the Rev. A. E. Runnells, S.T.L., the pastor of the church, when hymn number 672 was announced by Rev. W. J. Beamish, at the close of which Rev. J. E. Mavety led in prayer. Psalm CXXXII was responsively read, lead by Rev. Jno. Webster; then the scripture lesson was read by Rev. W. F. Crawford, Presbyterian minister of this place. The Rev. Geo. Edwards, chairman of Matilda District, then gave a very lengthy address, after which Mr. R. D. Fulton, one of the old stalwarts of the congregation, announced in a very pleasing manner the contents of the box, which are the following:—

The Bible.
The Christian Guardian.
The Chesterville RECORD.
The Winchester Press.
The Morrisburg Leader.
The Morrisburg Herald.
The Ottawa Citizen.
The Toronto News.
The Toronto Globe.
The Montreal Star.
The Epworth Era.
A list of all the officials in every department of the church.
A programme of the laying of the corner stone.
The posters and tickets.
The Lord's Day Advocate.
A list of the members of the church.
A list of all subscriptions to the new church.

At the completion of this part of the program, Mr. Wm. Huxtable, reeve of the municipality of Chesterville, in a few well chosen remarks, presented the trowel to Rev. A. Carman, D. D., who did well and truely lay the corner-stone to the entire satisfaction of the gathering, and he did not show his pneuriousness either, for he placed a sum of money on it and invited all those who felt so disposed, to put others on it to hold it down. To this invitation many responded very liberally.

Rev. F. Tripp then led in prayer, and Rev. W. A. Hamilton of Finch, announced hymn 669, after which Rev. Johnston Seller pronounced the benediction, thus completing this part of the ceremony.

During this time the ladies of the congregation were making every preparations to satisfy the appetites of those present. Large tents were erected on the grounds adjacent the church, and which the Methodist congregation are very grateful to Mr. W. H. Casselman for, as after a crowd of that size traversed it all day, it will not be of much benefit for the remainder of the season. This should be considered as handsome gift from Mr. Casselman.

Before the ceremony of the corner stone laying was over, the ladies had everything in readiness and it was only a few minutes until all the seats in the large eating tent was filled, and hundreds waiting to take their places.

With a crowd of this size it is no easy matter to satisfy everyone, but we believe that all had plenty and some to spare.

Before the dinner was completed the large tent provided for the speakers was filled to overflowing and during the afternoon addresses were delivered to which the crowd listened very attentively.

Rev. Geo. Edwards filled the position of chairman, and after a few remarks called on Dr. Carman, who it is needless to say, spoke to their entire satisfaction. Others who gave addresses were the Hon. Geo. P. Graham, leader of the opposition in the Ontarion Legislature, who was well received. Andrew Broder, M. P., was in his usual form and gave an excellent address. Mr. Broder is so well known in Dundas County that it is only necessary to state that he was present to know that the people would have a treat in listening to him. Mr. I. Hilliard of Morrisburg, followed in a short address. Also Rev. J. E. Mavety of Montreal spoke very nicely to the assemblage.

During the addresses solos were given by different artists, which made everything pass off very pleasantly.

Besides the above mentioned speakers many ministers of the district were present on the platform.

The officers of the church who have taken an active interest in the work are: Trustees, Rev. A. E. Runnells, chairman; Thos. Forward, Cornelius Cross, Isaac Fulton. R. D. Fulton, John W. Smith, Ingram Smith, Thomas Hamilton, Wesley Hamilton, Jacob Merkley, J. W. Johnston, Parnham Allison, Fred Wood, James Edgerton, Walter Bogart, Ozias Durant and John H. Alford.

Building committee—Rev. A. E. Runnells, chairman; Dr. Miles Brown, secretary. Cornelius Cross, R. D. Fulton, Thos Forward, Thomas Hamilton, Jacob Merkley, Parnham Allison, Fred Wood and Giles Bogart.

Finance Committee—Rev. A. E. Runnells, chairman; Wesley Hamilton, secretary-treasurer; Miles Brown, M.D., Giles Bogart, W. Fulton.

Clerks of the works—Jacob Merkley, Cornelius Cross.

The Concert.

In the evening a grand concert was held in the large tent on the grounds and it is estimated that over a thousand people were present.

Rev. J. E. Mavety acted as chairman and filled the position in excellent style, filling in any vacancies very nicely.

Among outside talent that assisted were Miss Kate Irving, Winchester. who sang very sweetly and was heartily encored. Miss Della Earle of that place played her accompaniments in nice form. Dr. Carman gave a capital address. Mrs. Kerr and Miss McAmmond of Morrisburg, sang very nicely, as also did Mr. Critchfield of Pittsburg, N. Y. The McMillan Family also enlivened the proceedings with their selections. Master Fred Beach of Winchester, gave a violin solo, and Rev. W. F. Crawford favored the audience with a song. Miss Helen Smith and Miss Alice Bogart recited to good effect, and the Chesterville trio, consisting of Messrs. A. M. Fetterly, W. G. Bolster and F. Wood, sang several selections in their usual good style. Mrs. Shiels sang a solo very sweetly which captivated the audience.

Although the concert was a decided success, everybody can not get credit for it. Credit must be given where due, and in this instance the congregation are greatly indebted to Messrs. Fetterly Bolster and Wood for its successful issue. The receipts amounted to about $150.

At the close of the day the Rev. Mr. Runnells was called on for a few remarks. On rising he stated that he had been humbled by the goodness of God and the loyality of his people for making the day all that could be desired. He could not speak too highly of the kindness of the people at large. Mr. Runnells wishes, through the RECORD, to express his gratitude to the people of Chesterville, of all denominations, for contributing to the success of the day.

To all those who took part or assisted in any way in making this event a success, a vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Jacob Merkley and seconded by Mr. Giles Bogart, and heartily endorsed.

Notes.

The proceeds of the day, although not totalled, are expected to be considerably more than $1000.

The ladies of the congregation deserve a great deal of credit for their untiring energies. Although a number never attended a corner-stone laying, still they stood at their post and sacrificed the event of to-day.

I tell you the Morewood band boys are a band of gentlemen, and they enlivened the day's proceedings to its fullest extent with their sweet strains of music under the leadership of Mr. John Fulton of this place. With their visit here to-day they will be well and favorably known all over this section of country.

During the laying of the corner-stone, Mr. N. M. Trickey of Winchester took a couple of peeps at it. Purchase one and see if you are in it.

Letters of regret, in not being able to be present, were received from Premier Whitney and Geo. F. Johnstone.

The Methodist and Presbyterian congregations of Chesterville will have a a very blessed day on Sunday next. They will unite to worship in the large tent used to-day for the speaking auditorium. The Rev. Mr. Runnells was fortunate to secure Rev. Dr. Carman for Sunday. He will preach at 10.30 a. m. and 7.30 p. m. in the tent.

Ups and Downs of the Bicycle Industry.

A bulletin issued by the U. S. Census Bureau gives some interesting statistics in regard to the ups and downs in the history of the bicycle. In 1890 there were 27 bicycle factories in the United States, the output of which was valued at $2,568, 326. In 1900 there were 312 factories, with an output of $3,915,908, ond during the intervening years 5,000,000 bicycles were disposed of in the United States alone. In 1900 nearly 20.000 people were employed in the factories, and $10,000,000 were paid out in wages. Then suddenly bycles went out of fashion and in the next ove years there was a falling off of 85 per cent. In 1905 the output value of the industry had fallen fo $5,153,240 and only 253,000 bicycles were manufactured, as compared with 1,2000,000 in 1900. This year the demand has been somewhat higher, but has been somewhat higher, but has been far from amounting to anything like a craze. The automobile boom now holds the market instead, and to such an extent that, it is said, the price of all rubber articles is materially advancing, owing to the demand for rubber for auto tires. This will be an added grievance to those unhappy mortals who can't afford to own a chug chug machine.

Teriffic Heat Wave.

McGregor, Tex., July 30.—A terrible wave of heat, said to be the greatest ever recorded in Texas, occurred here yesterday, continuing about an hour and twenty minutes. The thermometer registered 179 degrees in the sun and 117 in the shade. An area of three miles long and two miles wide was affected. The The heat was accompanied by a peculiar haze which moved over the area affected. Scores of persons were overcome. Horses, cattle, hogs and poultry dropped dead, one man losing thirty-five head of stock. The phenomenon has not been explained.

$40,000 Fire At Lakefied.

Peterborough, Ont., July 28.—Fire broke out in the piling grounds of the Cavendish Lumber Comyany, at Lakefield yesterday afternoon an fanned by a strong north wind, for a time threatened the destruction of the village. Help was sought from Peterboro', and an engine and ten men went by special train to the scene. After a stubborn fight of five hours the flames were confined to the lumber piles and the mill saved.

A million and a half feet of lumber was burned the loss being about $40,000, covered by insurance. The mill will resume cutting operations to-morrow.

Wanted in Lindsay.

Lindsay, July 29.—In connection with the fur-smuggling case recently referred to from here, there appears to be authority for the statement that the man wanted by the police has been located in Orillia. Interest in the matter was revived on hearing that on Friday afternoon a man apparently demented was taken in charge by the Orillia police. He gave his name as Pete McDonald, but papers in his possession led the officers to suspect that his real name is Simon Marshall. It is said that Marshall is suffering from pneumonia. At all events, it is certain that when he recovers he will be asked for by the police here.

Messrs. A. M. Fetterly, W. R. Fulton Knott and others returned home from a prospecting trip to the Quebec district on Saturday last, being well pleased with their outing. They claim to have staked something in the ore line specially good.

Mr. F. J. McCallum, station agent at Midland, is dead.

Five Prisoners Got Away.

Kenora, July 28.—Five prisoners, who were about to be transferred to the Kingston Penitentiary, escaped from the jail here. The prisoners utilized the skirting, which had been torn away, for probing the joints of the wall, succeeding in making a hole therein large enough to escape by. They then scaled by some means, a 12-foot fence and so got away. Telegraphic communication was at once made to all centres where the railway is to be closely watched.

Their names, descriptions and sentences are: Richard Lefevre, 5 feet 10, aged 33 years, 27 months for forgery and breaking jail; J. Gogenson, 5 feet 3, aged 28, 15 months for forgery; Daniel Kelly, 6 feet 1, aged 30, 1 year for highway robbery; James McDermid, 5 feet 7, aged 65, 20 months for burglary; Joseph Gilbert, 5 feet 4, aged 24, 19 months for arson.

A sawmill belonging to Joseph Irwin at Maxwell was burned.

Louis Kuntzman, a Montreal milkman, was fined $20 for using unclean vessels.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds: it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves — re-establish them as needed, with

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

CENTRAL CANADA FAIR.

Directors Aim to Make This Year's Exhibition the Best—Grand Attractions Arranged for—Buildings Being Altered and the Grounds Improved.

The directors of the Central Canada Exhibition held at Ottawa, for which the dates are Sept. 13-21 inclusive, are rapidly completing arrangements for this great fair. Every year sees many important changes and innovations and this year is no exception. In 1907 the Directors made a number of new departures, some good and others found not to be in the interests of the Exhibition. The experience gained augurs well for the success of this year's show and from the preliminary announcements it is safe to say that taken all in all the Exhibition will excel any previous fair.

The official announcements to date show that every high-class special attractions to be put on every afternoon in addition to many new features and improvements in connection with the show proper. Probably one of the most interesting announcements made is Knabenshue will be present to give exhibitions daily with his airship. This is one of the marvels of the century and doubtless visitors will appreciate the efforts of the Directors to furnish an interesting and novel attraction at great expense. Knabenshue will make flights every afternoon during the show. This is probably the greatest attraction ever given the people of Canada.

Among the other daily attractions this year will be two trotting races and one running event every afternoon in front of the grand stand. The purses for these races aggregate $4,500.

The evening entertainment, as last year, will be a special show in the large new auditorium on the grounds. A high class attraction and calculated to please one and all will be presented.

Of interest to the farmer is the fact, as shown by the handsome prize list now being distributed, that in addition to $15,000 in premiums, 37 gold medals are offered as special sweepstake prizes. It will also please this class of the community especially to learn that this year there will be a seating accomodations for spectators in the judging ring, so that patrons can scrutinize the work of the judges in comfort.

As last year, there will also be demonstrations in up-to-date farming by experts of the Ontario Government.

The Directors also announce that since the printing of the prize list the French-Canadian cattle breeders' Association is offering special prizes for displays of French-Canadian cattle, and that the association is duly appreciative of the kind offer.

With the exception of live stock, which will be permitted to be taken out at 4 o'clock on Friday, the 20th inst., every exhibit will remain on the grounds until Monday the 23rd inst. This move is in the interest of patrons who cannot reach the Fair until Saturday, the 21st, which will be second to none of the Exhibition.

As usual, a number of improvements are being made in the various buildings, all calculated to make the different displays more attractive. It is said that the Mannfacturer's Building will this year see the most attractive set of displays ever made there, while there will be such changes in the disposition of other buildings as to give a clear view of the handsome Aberdeen Pavillion from the main entrance to the grounds. A new entrance to the grounds is also being made, so that visitors to the night show who have no desire to see the exhibition proper in the evening can proceed at once to the auditorium without having to pay for admission to the grounds. This change was mace apparent last year and the Directors, ever desirous of granting any raasonable request of the patrons of the show, readily decided on the move.

It may not be be amiss to add that the Association, recognizing the popularity of the afternoon performances in front of the grand stand, will seek to make this year's programme one that will attract old and young to the stands in greater numbers than ever yet witnessed the splendid attractions yearly provided.

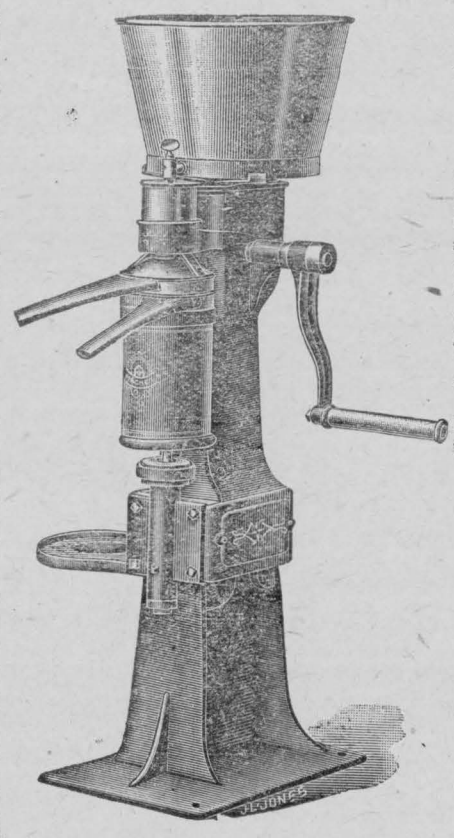
The Magnet Cream Separator.



The Petrie M'fg. Co., Ltd.

Hamilton, Ont.

Gentlemen,—I purchased a Magnet Cream Separator from your agent, C. M. Munro of Chesterville, I saw as soon as I examined it that it had many advantages over any other separator that I had seen. First, the square gear is more durable, second the bowl staid at both ends, third easy to turn and just the right height and easy to wash which I consider is a big saving of time and it skims perfectly clean.

I take pleasure in recommending the Magnet and would advise all dairymen to give it a trial.

I remain yours

"BLUE DEVILS."

Get Rid of Indigestion and Things Will Look Bright and Joyous.

Even in the present era of prosperity and good times everything appears black to those people who are suffering wretchedly from some form of indigestion. Where digestion is quick, complete and easy there is a joyous and hopeful outlook, but indigestion causes depression.

The want of a safe, effective cure for sick headache, indigestion and stomach troubles, was always felt until the prescription known as Mi-o na stomach tablets was put up in popular form and proved its invariuble success in the many forms of indigestion.

After a few days' use of Mi o-na stomach tablets the headache, dizzy feeling, drowsiness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, nervousness, sleeplessness, distress after eating—all these symptoms of a weak stomach—will disappear and perfect digestion and a good skin will show that the vital machinery is once more running smoothly.

Mi o-na is to be taken before each meal and it will stimulate the secretive and digestive juices and strengthen the whole of the digestive system so that the unpleasant full feeling will be absent and indigestion prevented.

We absolutely agree that your money will be refunded should you buy a 50c box of Mi o-na stomach tablets and not be satisfied with the results. Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere, or will be sent by mail on receipt of price. 50 cents. Booth's Miona Company, Buffalo, N.Y.

ADULTERATED TEAS.

Japanese Exporters Do Not Like New Customs Regulations.

Ottawa, July 29.—Canada's new customs regulations making more stringent provisions against the importation of adulterated teas are not regarded favorably in Japan. Reporting on the subject to the trade and commerce department, Alex. McLean, commercial agent in Yokohama, says:

"It happens that the bulk of the teas exported from this country to Canada are described as low grade, and it is mainly the low grade of cheap teas that are affected by the regulations in question.

"As they are regarded here, the regulations subject the exportation of tea to Canada to the delay involved in examination and testing, and possibly to chemical analysis, before the product can pass the customs and then to the delay is added the cost of return transportation in the case of such quantities as may be rejected.

"It is represented that the trade cannot be carried on under these conditions.

"At the present time shipment is actively going on, and the putting into force now of regulations, however salutary, and not anticipated when the season's trade was being negotiated, may prove very embrassing to exporter and importer alike."

MOTHERS MUST HAVE ABUNDANT SRENGTH.

No Mother Can Rear a Healthy Child Unless She is Strong Herself.

A woman's anxieties multiply ten fold about the time the new baby is expected.

Ferrozone should be used because it makes the blood nutritious and rich. By instilling new strength into every part of the body, it uplifts your spirits at once.

Childbirth is certainly made easier by Ferrozone. The following statement expresses the earnest gratitude of Mrs. M. E. Duckworth, of Durham. It is a woman's story,—of her own case—told that other women may profit by her experience:

"Before baby was born I was in a weak miserable, nervous state. I had no reserve strength. I tried to build up, but nothing helped me. I looked upon the coming day with dread, knowing I was unequal to the occasion.

"Ferrozone braced me up at once. It gave me strength and spirits, brought back my nerve and cheerfulness. From my experience with Ferrozone I recommend it to all expectant mothers."

There is more concentrated nourishment in Ferrozone than you can get from anything else. Simply take one tablet at meals and you'll feel benefited in a thousand ways.

Ferrozone makes healthy, virile, vigorous women; try it. 50c. per box of fifty tablets, or six for $2.50, at all dealers.

You May be Sick To-Night.

Without a moment's warning pain springs upon us. At the outset it is instantly cured by Nerviline. Surprising what fifteen drops of this marvelous remedy will do. It's external action is no less certain than its wonderful effect when taken internally. Of course Nerviline is powerful or it couldn't be so penetrating. But not irritating or caustic. There are other pain remedies, but when you use Nerviline you see the difference. That difference is this,—others relieve, but Nerviline does cure sprains, strains, swellings, earache, toothache, neurelgia, lumbago, in fact all muscular pains. Large bottles 25c at all dealers.

NINE DROWNED IN HUMBER BAY

Gasoline Launch Belonging to Toronto Junction Upset in a Storm.

A despatch from Toronto says: Nine lives were lost in Lake Ontario early on Friday morning when the gasoline launch Dalvine, with a party of Toronto Junction young men on board, capsized in a sudden squall which swept over Humber Bay. Of ten young fellows who enjoyed an evening's fun at Hanlan's Point, but one sole survivor is left to tell the tale of a terrible night's struggle against the wind and waves which overwhelmed them in the darkness. At dawn the battered launch was found washed up on the beach. Not far away lay the body of one of the unfortunate victims, and a short distance out in the lake a coat belonging to another was found floating. George Shields, 45 Van Horne Street, the only one of the party to survive, owes his life to the fact that he clung to the ill-fated craft through the wind and rain, how long he does not know, until it carried him near enough to the shore to be able to stagger through the shallow water to safety on the beach. With the finding of the launch and one of the bodies, several dragging parties set to work. Another body was recovered at 10 minutes to 2 in the afternoon, and although the work was kept up during the whole day, it was 6 o'clock before a third victim was brought to shore.

AN 18-FOOT LAUNCH WITH TEN OCCUPANTS.

The Dalvine was an 18-foot launch, and belonged to Leonard Daly, who, with his brother, Frank Daly, took the party out. From their mooring in the Humber River they set out to Hanlan's Point shortly after 9 o'clock. There were on board the Daly brothers, Walter Dundin, John Irvine, Joseph Irwin, Frank Kyle, Reginald Miller, Gordon Larocque, Dawson Niehrgang and George Shields, the survivor. Although the little craft was not intended to carry as many as ten, they crowded in, and the journey to the point was made over smooth water without a mishap. The party remained until 12 o'clock, and as they were about to start for home it began to rain, and as it was only a light sprinkle, they waited to see if it would stop. At 12.30 the clouds lifted and they started out. All went well for nearly three-quarters of the journey. As they sped along in the darkness they enlivened their homeward way with merry songs and laughter.

Past Sunnyside they sailed, oblivious of any impending danger. Suddenly the dark clouds gathered again, and flashes of lightning, followed by sharp peals of thunder, warned them of the approach of a storm. Almost before they had time to make things secure the rain broke upon them, and the seas dashed over the heavily crowded launch. The engine stopped, and before the occupants could find out what was the matter with it the boat swung around into the trough of the seas. The waves swept over them with increasing fury, and their singing changed to cries for help as they were swept into the icy waters. What happened after that no one will ever know. Shields says he heard someone cry, "Hang to the boat," but it was pitch dark, and he could see nothing. The storm redoubled its force, and the frail shell became the plaything of the breakers.

As late as 10 minutes to 2 o'clock the singing was heard by Police Constable Lewis, of the Parkdale Station, who was patrolling his beat along the Lake Shore Road. He could also hear the quick beat of the engine between the lulls in the wind and the noise of the thunder. Suddenly the singing changed to cries for help. The constable peered into the darkness, but could see or hear nothing more. He waited about for some time, and went on to the man at the Toronto Bolt Works, where he made a report.

CAPSIZED BOAT FOUND BY POLICE ON THE SHORE.

Police Constable Robinson, who took Lewis' place at 4 o'clock, was instructed to watch along the shore. As he patrolled the beach, about 5.30 o'clock he came upon the capsized launch near a clump of willows, about 50 yards from where the Grenadier Pond skirts the opposite side of the road. Close beside it was the body of Walter Dundin. Robinson notified the station, and the remains were removed to the City Morgue in a patrol wagon. In making a further search, the constable noticed a coat floating some distance out in the lake, and when it was recovered it proved to be that of Joseph Irwin, the young son of Councilor Irwin, of Toronto Junction.

When the news of the discovery of the launch spread, several search parties set out in rowboats and launches, and they worked all morning without result. At 6.10 the searchers were rewarded by the discovery of a third body, that of John Irwin, the owner of the floating coat. He was a son of Councilor Irwin of Toronto Junction. He was the third son of the family, was 20 years old, and worked as a bricklayer. As six bodies still lie at the bottom of the bay, the search was kept up until dark, but no more were found.

SURVIVOR SHIELD'S STORY.

George Shields says that there were ten on board the launch when it left Sunnyside at about 9.30 for Hanlan's Point. All remained there until a half hour after midnight, when the homeward journey was commenced. Rain had fallen, but the sky had cleared. When, however, the launch had arrived within 300 or 400 yards of the shore at Sunnyside, opposite the west gate of High Park, a storm arose, first a high wind and then a crash of thunder, followed by a downpour of rain. Suddenly the engine stopped. The boat turned broadside to the waves and without warning capsized, throwing its occupants into the water.

OTHERS LOST THEIR HOLD.

"We were thrown about 15 feet from the boat," said Mr. Shields. "Niehrgang and Miller could not swim. John Irvine shouted, 'Stick to the boat,' and Frank Daly, Kyle, Dundin, Irwin and myself swam back together to the launch. John Irvine swam alongside. I don't know when I lost sight of him.

"Irvine and Torocque, the two strongest swimmers of the party, swam for the shore. Others lost their hold on the upturned boat and disappeared. Finally only Dundin and the survivor remained clinging to the submerged launch. Shields believed that the launch would drift to land, and this it did just before daybreak. He stumbled through the shallow water to the beach, where he sank to the ground exhausted and benumbed with cold. After lying for a period of time, which he estimates at half an hour, Shields arose and made his way home through High Park, arriving about five o'clock.

He is naturally somewhat confused as to the hours at which the various incidents which he mentioned occurred. For instance, he thought that the boat must have capsized at 3.30 a.m., and that he was from two to two and a half hours in the water; yet he arrived home at about five o'clock.

ALL THE BODIES RECOVERED.

All the bodies of the nine victims of Friday morning's launch disaster off Humber Bay have now been recovered, the last two having been taken from the waters on Sunday afternoon. In the pulpits of several Toronto Junction churches on Sunday touching references were made to the tragedy.

TOP OF HEAD WAS BLOWN OFF.

Farmer Near Thessalon the Victim of a Tragedy.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: William Dixon, a farmer of Patton Township, near Thessalon, was shot and instantly killed Saturday night. John McFarland has been arrested by the officials there. Dixon and McFarland had been living together on a farm in Patton Township for some time, both being single men. It is alleged that ten minutes before the shooting occurred they were seen to enter the house together. The report of the gun was heard by neighbors, and when they went to investigate, Dixon was found dead with the top of his head blown off with a rifle ball. McFarland was arrested at once, but denied that he was guilty of the offence. It is alleged that the men had been drinking. It is said the men always lived together in a friendly manner.

WM. HAYWOOD ACQUITTED

Boise Jury Declares Him Innocent of Steunenberg's Murder.

A despatch from Boise, Idaho, says: After being out nearly 21 hours the jury in the case of W. D. Haywood, secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, on trial for complicity in the murder of ex-Governor Steunenberg, of Idaho, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

The last hour was spent in merely [illegible] for the lawyers to get to the [illegible] was 7 o'clock on Sunday [illegible] they finally agreed [illegible]

[illegible]SE.

[illegible]erk of [illegible]d that [illegible]cquitted [illegible]Governor Steunenburg, he was, it is needless to say, a highly pleased man.

The surprise was stunning, even to Haywood himself. Of all the people in the court-room when the jury came in it is probable that few expected an acquittal. It is certain that neither Haywood nor his lawyers looked for it.

Most of the jurors say they could not convict under the Court's instructions. To the prosecution the surprise was not less complete than to the defence. They had been hoping for a disagreement with not more than two or three men holding out for Haywood, and when the lawyers and reporters were called in in the early morning with the news that the jury was ready to report, it seemed certain that some sort of a conviction had been agreed upon.

RAN TRAIN THROUGH FIRE.

Train Loaded With Chinese Runs Upon Burning Bridge.

A despatch from Fort William, Ont., says: That another terrible wreck did not occur on the C. P. R. on Saturday morning is due to the bravery of two of the company's employes, who risked their lives to save a trainload of Chinamen, who were going through to New York on a special train. Engineer McAdam, who was on the engine drawing the Chinese special, was approaching the Rideout River at great speed, when, glancing ahead, he noticed that the big bridge was a mass of flames. He threw on the emergency brake and called to the fireman to jump, which both men succeeded in doing without injury. When the engineer gathered himself together he noticed that the train had run right into the middle of the burning bridge and that already some of the coaches were on fire. He immediately climbed aboard and ran forward to the engine, through the cars. The engine was in the centre of the flames, but the engineer pulled open the throttle and ran part of the train across the bridge. When safely across it was discovered that six coaches were still on the bridge, the coupling having broken loose when the brakes went on. Another train was also due in a few minutes, and there was grave danger of it running into the rear of the coaches. Brakesman Wilson rose to the occasion and swam across the river, climbed up on the bank, hurried down the track, and flagged the approaching train. The engine was soon uncoupled and three of the cars were pulled away to safety. Three others were totally consumed by the flames, but the occupants all escaped. Ten sections of the bridge were also destroyed and all traffic was tied up for over seventeen hours.

TWENTY VICTIMS.

Many Persons Perish in New York Tenement Fire.

A despatch from New York says: Shocking loss of human life and destruction of property worth more than $1,000,000 were caused by fire in New York and its immediate vicinity in the 24 hours ending at 8 o'clock Monday morning. Twenty persons are dead and 15 suffered from serious injury as a result of the burning of a six-storey double tenement in Christie Street and heavy financial loss resulted from the destruction of the Long Beach Hotel at Long Beach on Monday, and the Steeplechase Park and other property at Coney Island on Sunday. In addition, the steamship Hamilton, of the old Dominion Line, came into port on Sunday with part of her hold ablaze. The Hamilton was at her dock before any of the passengers knew there was a fire on board. The flames were extinguished after about $15,000 damage had been done.

BITTEN BY A TARANTULA.

St. Catharines Boy at the Point of Death.

A despatch from St. Catharines says: A young Syrian lad who worked in an Italian fruit store was bitten by a tarantula on Saturday afternoon and lies in an unconscious state at his home with a number of doctors working on him. The boy was helping to unload bananas when the deadly creature which had made the trip from the south hidden in a bunch of bananas darted out and fastened itself on his bare arm. The bite of a tarantula is usually instantly fatal, and the doctors are puzzled a little over the case.

65 PER CENT. CHILDREN.

Proportion of the Week's Death Rate Registered at Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: High infantile death rate continues. Sixty-five per cent. of the deaths registered at the City Hall last week were of children under 5 years of age; over forty-eight per cent. were of children under a year old. There were 200 deaths, and of these 130 were of children whose ages varied from 1 to 5 years.

OTTAWA IS GROWING.

Directory Estimates Total Population at 80,734.

A despatch from Ottawa says: A substantial increase in population marks the close of the year in Ottawa, according to the Might Directory figures. Lowering the multiple from 3 to 2¾, the same as taken in Toronto, the total is estimated at 80,734. The company has in its latest book 29,358 individual names, an increase of 1,568 over last year.

GRANT FOR LORD CROMER.

Proposal Before British Commons to Vote Him Quarter Million.

A despatch from London says: In the House of Commons on Wednesday Premier Campbell-Bannerman presented a Royal message proposing a special grant of $250,000 to Lord Cromer, who recently resigned the post of British Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, in recognition of his services to that country. Wm. K. Redmond, Nationalist, announced the intention of opposing the voting of this sum.

EXPECTS THREE-FOURTH CROP.

Farmers of Manitoba Have Nothing to Grieve Over.

A despatch from Ottawa says; Dr. Wm. Saunders, Director of Experimental Farms, has returned from his tour of inspection of Manitoba and the West. Dr. Saunders does not share the pessimistic opinions recently published as to the crop shortage. He says the area in which partial failure is expected owing to drought is a restricted one, and on the whole, after a careful review of the situation, he believes that there will be a three-fourths crop. With wheat at its present price this will mean a larger cash return to the farmer than he received for the crop of last year. Even should some of the late sown grain become frosted it will fetch a price almost as high as was obtained for good wheat last season.

CONEY ISLAND SWEPT BY FIRE.

Seven Blocks in the Amusement Zone Burned.

A despatch from New York says: Coney Island, the playground of New York's millions, was visited by a disastrous fire early Sunday and seven blocks in the amusement zone were completely destroyed. Tilyous' Steeplechase Park, and nearly twenty small hotels were wiped out and for a time the flames threatened Luna Park and Dreamland, and scores of smaller places, which fringe the water's edge for a mile. A lucky shift of the wind to seaward aided the firemen, and probably saved the whole picturesque area, but not until a million dollars' damage had been done.

54,710 DAYS LOST BY STRIKERS

Forty-one Labor Disputes During the Month of June

A despatch from Ottawa says: The total number of trade disputes reported to have been in existence in Canada during June, was 41, a decrease of eight, compared with the previous month, but an increase of 11 compared with June, 1906. About 262 establishments and 5,728 employes were affected by these disputes, whose beginning during the month involved about 78 establishments and 3,724 employes.

The loss of time to employes through trade disputes during June was approximately 54,710 working days, compared with a loss of 88,325 days in May, and 38,215 days in June, 1906.

Of the 41 disputes in existence during the month, 23 were terminated, either by definite settlements being reached, or by industrial conditions ceasing to be affected. Thirteen disputes were terminated by negotiations between the parties concerned, two were settled by conciliation, one through the friendly mediation of the Department of Labor, and one through the Bureau of Conciliation of Quebec, and eight disputes were terminated without negotiations.

In seven disputes that were terminated the employers were successful, ten ended in favor of the employes, compromises were effected in three cases, and in two the strikers were partially successful.

BIG LOSS IN LUMBER.

The New-Edinburgh Section of Ottawa Fire-Swept.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The New Edinburgh portion of the city, which is adjacent to Government House and lying to the east of the Rideau River was visited by a disastrous fire on Thursday morning. The total loss is put at $300,000. Of this amount about $250,000 will have to be borne by the W. C. Edwards Company, of which firm Senator Edwards is the head.

The W. C. Edwards sash and door factory, the planing mill, the Library and Bureau of Canada factory, in which the W. C. Edwards Company is largely interested, several piles of valuable lumber, Blackburn & Russell's mica warehouses, Foley's Hotel, No. 6 Fire Station, C. J. Neates' grocery store, and the main building of the Edwards Company are all burned to the ground. Several other buildings, including the fine residence of the Blackburns, were scorched. The W. C. Edwards & Company's main lumber mill lies on the west side of ahe Rideau River, which at this point is connected with a bridge over which the street cars run along Sussex street to and from Rockliffe and Escapede. The lumber piles destroyed were principally hardwood. Altogether about two million feet of lumber was burned.

WONDERFUL COAL BED.

Six Miles Long, 1,300 Feet Wide, Thirty Feet in Thickness.

A despatch from Hazelton, Pa., says: The Lehigh Valley Coal Company has opened what is believed to be the largest stripping in the world. It is located at Lattimer, and the coal is in a solid bed of 1,300 feet wide, 30 feet in thickness and extends from Lattimer to Drifton, at least six miles. It is estimated that were the company to take out 500 tons daily it would require 250 years to exhaust the supply.

BRITISH WARSHIP LAUNCHED.

Another Dreadnought Takes the Water at Portsmouth.

A despatch from Portsmouth says: The battleship Bellerophon, another Dreadnought, was launched here on Saturday afternoon by Princess Henry of Battenberg. The new warship has a tonnage of 18,600, which is 700 more than the Dreadnought, and she will embody a number of improvements gained as a result of the Dreadnought trials.

J. Lorne McDougall, Canada's ex-Auditor-General, is in very poor health.

LOCOMOTIVE BLEW UP.

Two Trainmen Killed Near Simcoe Station.

A despatch from Simcoe, Ont., says: Wabash freight train, eastbound, engine 1894, in charge of Conductor Dack and Engineer Bennett Patterson, which left Simcoe at 6.40 on Friday evening, was wrecked about a mile and a half east of Simcoe. The wreck was caused by the engine blowing up. Engineer Patterson was blown out of his cab to a considerable distance and was instantly killed. Fireman Calvert was also blown a distance away and very seriously injured. Brakeman Lewis Norton, who was riding in the engine cab, was fatally injured. The three men were placed in the conductor's van and as soon as the rear portion of the train could be moved were brought to Simcoe station, where the body of Engineer Patterson was removed to an undertaking room. All the train crew were composed of St. Thomas men. The remains of the engine and two cars of provisions were consumed by fire. The crew of the freight train were unable to give any reason for the accident.

POLICE WERE NEGLIGENT.

Mrs. Beach's Action Against the City of Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: An action for $3,000 is to be taken against the city by Mrs. Beach, whose son Richard died a few weeks ago in one of the cells at police headquarters. The man was supposed by the police to have been drunk, but it afterwards turned out that he had been attacked by three men and received a fracture of the skull. He was bleeding slightly when taken to the station, but no medical aid was summoned. The plaintiff's contention is that her son, who was 36 years of age, was her sole support, and that the police having neglected to call a doctor after having arrested him, were guilty of gross negligence. The Coroner's jury in their verdict stated that the police had shown negligence in their treatment of the victim, while he was confined in the police station, but that there were circumstances of an extenuating character.

STEAMER BURNED; SEVEN PERISH.

Excursion Boat Takes Fire on Lake Cayuga.

A despatch from Ithaca, N.Y., says: Seven persons are known to be dead and many more injured as the result of the burning of the steamboat Frontenac, of the Cayuga Lake Transportation Company, on the north end of Lake Cayuga on Saturday afternoon. The identified dead are: Mrs. Homer Genung and her son Carl, of Freeville, N.Y., and Miss Julia McCreary, of Cohoes, a student of the Cornell Summer School; Estella Clinton, of Ithaca, and a Miss Sullivan, of Syracuse; the eight-year-old son of Howard Abel, of Ulysers, probably perished; Miss Bennett, of Utica, is thought to have been drowned in the lake. The steamboat was completely destroyed, burning to the water's edge, and now lies a wreck near the shore at Union Springs.

Prof. Hutt has been investigating a pest that attacks the orchards in Durham county. Several trees have been killed.

Constable Somers of the Winnipeg police force is charged with having robbed a house on his beat on Sunday night.

FORTY MEN IN A SEWER

All Would Have Been Drowned But For Foreman's Coolness.

A despatch from New York says: Forty laborers ran, swam and fought for their lives when the new sewer in West 46th street was flooded on Tuesday night, and but for the coolness and determination of Foreman Ben Connors all must have perished. The men were working in the tube, which is eight feet in diameter, a block in length and forty feet below the surface. Suddenly a break occurred in the old sewer above them, and the escaping water poured into the open end of the tube. The only exit was at the opposite end, where an air shaft led to the surface.

A moment after a stream first trickled into the tube, the flood came, and when the men turned to run the water was at their knees and rapidly rising. Half way to the shaft the water was at their waists, and, fighting, the men wedged themselves into a helpless mass until none could make progress, and all were in imminent peril of drowning. Then Connors, who led the way to the shaft, took a hand, and swinging an ugly club, threatened to brain every man of them if they did not obey him. Then he ordered them to form four abreast and march. Some marched but more swam, as by that time the water had reached the necks of the taller, while those of lesser height had been swept from their feet. CATARRH OF STOMACH RELIEVED BY PE-RU-NA

MDE. JOSEPH BEAUDOIN.

Mde. Joseph Beaudoin, 59 Rue St. Olivier, Quebec, P. Q., Can., writes.

"Peruna is wonderful for indigestion. I eat whatever I want and no longer feel any oppression.

"Having had dyspepsia for a long time and having tried various other remedies, I decided to try Peruna and with the fourth bottle of it I was perfectly cured.

"For this reason I recommend it to all those who are suffering with that terrible malady, dyspepsia.

"I hope that all who are afflicted in this way will take Peruna as I did."

The experience of Mde. Beaudoin ought to be sufficient proof to any one of the value of Peruna in cases of catarrhal dyspepsia. If you suffer from stomach catarrh in any of its various forms, give Peruna a fair trial, avoiding in the meantime all such indiscretions in diet as would tend to retard a cure, and you will soon be rewarded by a normal appetite and healthy digestion.

SO FATIGUING.

"So young Richley Kadd isn't to marry Goldie Stiles after all?"

"No, he got scared."

"Well, well, and I heard they had even gone so far as to rehearse for the wedding."

"Yes, that was the trouble. They had rehearsed five times, and Richley said the preparations for matrimony were such hard work he was afraid he couldn't stand the real thing at all."

FULL UP.

When the ladies in charge were clearing up the left-overs after a Sunday-school picnic several slices of cake were found which they did not wish to carry home. One said to a small lad who was already asthmatic from gorging, "Here, boy, won't you have another piece of cake?"

"Well," he replied, taking it rather listlessly, "I guess I can still chaw, but I can't swaller."

ANXIOUS MOMENTS.

Thousands of Little Ones Die During the Summer Months.

Every mother of small children knows how fatal are the summer months. Dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera infantum and stomach troubles are alarmingly frequent at this time and too often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours' illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of Baby's Own Tablets prevents stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes unawares the Tablets will bring the little one through safely. Mrs. Geo. Robb, Aubrey, Que., says:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for stomach and bowel troubles with the best results. I feel quite safe when I have the Tablets in the house." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c. a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A bushel of sunflower seed produces a gallon of excellent oil, and the seeds are also very useful for making poultry lay in winter.

Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator has the largest sale of any similar preparation sold in Canada. It always gives satisfaction by restoring health to the little folks.

WAR WITH HOLD UP MEN

STORY OF PINKERTON, THE GREAT DETECTIVE.

Interesting Reminiscences of Old-time Robberies — "Black Bart" and His Methods.

More than two-thirds of the famous train robbers who have figured in the criminal history of the United States since the civil war have either been killed outright, lynched, or "died with their boots on."

Of the remaining third, many died of wounds, or were captured, imprisoned, or driven into exile in lands beyond sea.

So declared William A. Pinkerton, of Chicago, in an address to the annual convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police at Jamestown, Va.

"BLACK BART," LONE BANDIT.

Not the least interesting part of Mr. Pinkerton's reminiscences was his description of "Black Bart," the famous "lone bandit" of California. He says:—

"From 1877 to 1883 stages in the mountains of California were held up by a lone highwayman, always wearing a jute meal bag on the lower part of his legs, an old linen duster, his head and face covered with a mask through which gleamed bright black eyes, with a conical circus clown hat. He was always polite to the passengers, and especially to the ladies, never robbing them, but always requesting the stage driver to throw out the box and mail bags. Then the lone robber, at the point of a rifle, would order the stage driver to pass on. Altogether this lone highwayman committed twenty-three robberies.

WAS A MINING MAN.

"'Black Bart' was also known as Charles E. Benton and Charles E. Bowles. He had lived at an unpretentious boarding house in San Francisco, where he informed the landlady and his acquaintances that he was a mining man, which accounted for his occasional absence. He was originally from Decatur, Ill., near which place he worked on farms. He enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Sixtieth Illinois regiment, serving three years in the civil war and was known in his regiment as 'Wrestling Charlie.'

"After his capture he pleaded guilty to one of the robberies, but strenuously denied that he was the former stage robber, and declared to the court that it was only an urgent necessity that drove him to commit this crime, as a result of which, on November 17, 1883, he was sentenced to six years in prison at San Quentin, Cal. Since his release he has been seen more or less in honest occupations on the Pacific coast.

"During 'Black Bart's' career as a robber he never took the life of or injured a human being. He was a remarkably good story teller."

One of the most daring train robberies recounted by Mr. Pinkerton was the following:

"Sept. 30, 1891, Oliver Curtis Perry boarded a New York Central railroad train near Utica, while the train was in motion, cut his way into an American Express Company car, and, covering the messenger with a revolver, stole $5,000 and some jewelry therefrom, cut the air brakes, which reduced the speed of the train,

AND MADE HIS ESCAPE."

"Feb. 1, 1892, Perry again boarded an express train near Syracuse, N. Y., concealing himself on the roof of the express car until the train was in motion, when, with a hook and rope, fastened to the roof of the car while the train was moving at fifty miles an hour, he lowered himself to a window and, covering the messenger with a revolver, ordered him to throw up his hands. The messenger attempted to pull the bell cord, but Perry shot him in the hand, the messenger returning the fire with several shots. Just as the last shot was fired by Perry the train pulled into Lyons. He attempted to escape by driving the fireman and engineer from a locomotive which stood on a siding, which he boarded, and started to escape in it at full speed, but was followed by railroad employes in another locomotive, who subsequently overtook him and after considerable shooting caused his arrest."

A SEASIDE TRAGEDY.

Miss Dollie Gillam, aged twenty-four, of Worcester street, Stourbridge; Mr. J. W. Gillam, twenty-three, bank clerk, her brother; and Mr. Ernest Taylor, twenty-seven, corn merchant, of Highclere Norton, Stourbridge, her sweetheart, were the victims of a distressing tragedy at Blackpool, England, recently.

Miss Gillam, the two young men, and a young German girl named Bringfriede Schaffer, who was staying with them, left the house where they were staying with their parents shortly before ten o'clock and walked along the parade at North Shore, admiring the rough sea, and when opposite Derby road, Miss Gillam, who was an enthusiastic amateur photographer and had her camera with her, expressed a desire to take a snapshot of the waves as they broke against the hulking.

For this purpose she went on to the steps leading down to the sands, and was followed by her companions. Just as Miss Gillam poised her camera, however, a bigger wave than usual curled up the steps and swept her into the sea. Her companions were horrified, but without hesitation the two young men pluckily dashed into the water after her. Mr. Gillam, after a struggle, managed to get hold of his sister, but Mr. Taylor, who could not swim, never actually reached her.

A crowd rapidly collected, and a lifebuoy was thrown into the sea, but it did not reach the struggling trio, and was soon washed back. Professor Faraday, a local swimming instructor, expressed his willingness to go to their assistance, but he was dissuaded, for it seemed impossible for any swimmer to live in such a sea, while a boat, if one had been available, would soon have been dashed to pieces against the hulking.

The crowd watched the struggles of the hapless trio in breathless excitement for several minutes. Mr. Gillam and his sister, both of whom could swim, kept together, but eventually they were compelled to separate, and Miss Gillam was seen to sink. Both young men were dashed against the hulking with terrific force, and then they, too, disappeared. When the three bodies were recovered some hours later the face of one of the young men was so battered that his features were almost unrecognizable.

At the inquest a verdict of accidental drowning was returned.

AUSTRALIAN SHEEP FARM

THE WOOL INDUSTRY IS IN GOOD CONDITION.

Lady Sarah Wilson Talks of Possibilities for Settlers From the Old Country.

Lady Sarah Wilson writes in the London Daily Mail, of Australia, as follows :—

"There is an appearance of solid prosperity in both the great towns, Melbourne and Sydney. The shops are excellent, the streets present an extremely busy appearance, smart motor cars go buzzing about, and the ladies and children who throng the pavements are all very well dressed. But it is not of town life but of bush or country life that I want to write, so I shall ask my readers to follow me a couple of hundred miles from the capital to a station in one of the many fertile parts of Victoria; then, four or five hundred miles further on, to a similar property on the vast plains of New South Wales.

SHEEP AND THEIR VALUE.

"In Victoria the nightmare of 'drought' is not so greatly dreaded as in other localities. Of course, there are good and bad seasons, but as a rule the rainfall is generally to be counted on with average regularity. Here are to be found small farms with fine crops of grain and potatoes, the soil rich enough to grow anything, interspersed among the larger sheep stations. In the station we were at in Victoria the pasture is so good that it carries as many as two sheep to an acre, whereas in New South Wales about one sheep to an acre is the most that can be reckoned. Each sheep is supposed to produce ten pounds of wool a year, and at the almost record price at which wool is now selling the fleece of each animal should be worth at least ten shillings yearly. In addition, lambs are worth ten shillings a head.

"All sheep are now shorn by machinery, and a record shearer can shear up to one hundred and seventy a day—one hundred being about the average.

GOVERNMENT IRRIGATION.

"One large landowner near where we were staying has gone in extensively for irrigation, and has made 150 miles of canals on his property, by dint of which he can grow lucerne, which carries up to twenty sheep to an acre, and improved other land to enable it to carry two sheep to an acre. This landowner paid thirty shillings an acre for his property eight years ago, and now would not sell it for £3 10s. an acre. In consequence of this example, the Government have even now commenced a system of irrigation on a large scale in this part of New South Wales, which, in the almost immediate future, will render a large district now only fit for sheep suitable for closer settlement, which means the cultivation of fruit, grain and vegetables—a great inducement for new settlers.

YOUNG MEN OF ENERGY.

"A successful squatter said to me the other day: 'All that Australia wants is settlers—young men from the 'Old Country,' with small capital and great energy, who would thoroughly enjoy this bush life, and who, under good advice from friends largely settled here, should do well.'

ALWAYS ROOM FOR MORE.

"It is a mistake to think that Australia has had its day. Wool has never been in greater demand than it is now, and it is conceded that no wool is as good as the wool from the Commonwealth. The Japanese market is beginning to be opened to the Australian wool producers, for with European manners comes the necessity for European clothing; and it is possible that China, looming large with its myriads of inhabitants, may follow suit."

The Crick in the Back.—"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin," says the poet. But what about the touch of rheumatism and lumbago, which is so common now? There is no poetry in that touch, for it renders life miserable. Yet how delighted is the sense of relief when an application of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil drives pain away. There is nothing equals it.

The world now produces 6,800,000 tons of beet sugar yearly, and the total produce of cane sugar in the West Indies has fallen to 228,000 tons. A hundred years ago the West Indies supplied sugar to half the world.

IN THE RUSH LUNCHROOM.

"Boss," shouted the big cook from the kitchen, "we have a lot of scraps out here that ain't working."

"Lot of scraps, eh?" replied the proprietor of the Shovedown Lunchroom. "Well, mix them all together, add a little fiery tobasco sauce and then put a sign outside, 'Central American Pudding to-day.'"

LABOR NOTE.

Wayside William (the tramp) — "Weary, did ye notice by th' papers that thousan's of men was goin' back to work?"

"How so?"

"It reduces competition."

The visitor found little Bessie crying as though her heart would break. "What is the trouble, little girl?" asked the visitor, sympathetically. "Boo-hoo-" sobbed Bessie. "B-Bobby wants to be a surgeon when he gets big." "And does that worry you, my dear?" "Y-yes; he has cut all the sawdust out of my dolly to see if she has appendicitis."

The number of deaths occurring among young children during the summer months is simply appalling. In the city of Montreal last week, 175 children under the age of five years died, and nearly all the deaths were due to stomach and bowel troubles. With ordinary care most of these little lives might have been saved. Watch the food given the little ones. Do not feed meats; see that the milk given is pure, and give an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets, a medicine which surpasses all others in preventing and curing stomach and bowel troubles.

"No," said the old shoemaker, sternly; "I will not do it. Never have I sold anything by false representations, and I will not begin now." For a moment he was silent, and the shopman who stood before him could see that the better nature of his employer was fighting strongly for the right. "No," said the old man again, "I will not do it. It is an inferior grade of shoe, and I will never pass it off as anything better. So just mark it, 'A shoe fit for a queen,' and put it in the window. A queen, you know, does not have to do much walking."

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhœa, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

PROVIDED ALREADY.

Beggar—"Kind sir, give me ten cents for my three children."

Kind Sir—"That isn't dear, certainly, but I don't think I'll take them. I have four already at home."

It is only necessary to read the testimonials to be convinced that Holloway's Corn Cure is unequalled for the removal of corns, warts, etc. It is a complete extinguisher.

Doman: "Can you tell what ails my wife?" Doctor: "She does not take enough out-door exercise." "She says she does not feel equal to it." "True. She needs toning up." "What have you prescribed?" "A new bonnet."

A Cure for Fever and Ague.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are compounded for use in any climate, and they will be found to preserve their powers in any latitude. In fever and ague they act upon the secretions and neutralize the poison which has found its way into the blood. Children who are Pale and peevish want something that will make good rich blood; there is nothing to equal "Ferrovim" for this purpose. Mothers, be sure to get a bottle.

"I certainly do," replied the proprietor.

"Well, will you please look at this plate of soup and see which one of your waiters brought it in, and tell him not to put his fingers in my soup again?"

It was found in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are the result of much expert study, and are scientifically prepared as a laxative and an alterative in one.

The Land Department of the Union Trust Company, Limited, has been appointed exclusive agent in Ontario, Manitoba, and the Maritime Provinces for the sale of the Canadian Pacific Irrigation Colonization Company's irrigated lands in the West.

ARE YOU SATISFIED WHERE YOU ARE?

If not, and you think of changing your location, you will make a mistake if you do not investigate the opportunity for money-making offered in farming on irrigated land.

SOME PEOPLE who have not gone into the merits and advantages of irrigation, imagine that the farmer on an irrigated farm deserves sympathy. He doesn't. His irrigated land, in a country where conditions for plant growth are otherwise ideal, ensures him good crops EVERY YEAR. Owing to climatic conditions he never suffers the drawback of a wet season, and irrigation prevents the possibility of a dry season. Modern irrigation transforms farming from an uncertainty into a certainty.

The average price of irrigated land in the United States is about three times the price of non-irrigated lands. In Southern Alberta the difference is at present very slight, but as settlement proceeds these irrigation lands will increase very rapidly in value.

A careful study of its advantages will convince any practical agriculturist that farming by means of irrigation is the most attractive proposition ever put upon the Canadian market.

Record for Longboat.

Ottawa, July 29.—Tom Longboat, the Indian long-distance runner, beat tne Canadian five-mile record this afternoon by one minute and one second. He was paced by Hilton Green, Tom Coley and Lou Marsh, all of Toronto. The old figures were 26 minutes 56 seconds, which Longboat reduced to 25 minutes, 55 seconds. The new figures may not stand however, owing to the fact that pacemakers were used.

In the Marathon road race from Bell's Corners to Ottawa, a distance of 15 miles, C. H. Russell of Brockville was first; J. J. Mackenzie, Ottawa, second; and W. Kerr, Montreal, third. Unfortunately, Shipman, Butler and Woods of Montreal, lost their way. It was a 15-mile race—ten miles on the road and five on the Lansdowne Park track. The official auto broke down, and in some way the runners who were three-quarters of a mile ahead, viz.: Shipman, Woods and Butler, went on the wrong road at the Dominion Experimental Farm.

The mile race was run in 4.44 by Tom Coley, with Hilton Green second and Harold Nutting of Ottawa third.

Conspiracy in Berlin Jail.

Galt, Ont., July 28.—That Malcolm Macdonald, the self-confessed perpetrator of the burglaries on East Main Street residences on the 23rd May, is a desperate character, is indicated by a circumstance that has just come to light. Yesterday morning Chief Gorman received a telephone message from Governor Cook of Berlin Jail, stating that a plot had been discovered, hatched by this convict, to brain the governor and turnkey and set the prisoners at large.

This plot was disclosed by one of the prisoners, and immediate steps were taken to nip it in the bud. Macdonald was removed to a corridor by himself, where he will be kept under close surveillance until his removal to the Central Prison.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION.

Significant Meeting at Guelph.

On Friday, July 19th, the six teachers recently appointed by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, met in conference with the six principals of the Collegiate Institutes which are to have agriculture on their course of studies. The meeting was presided over by Dr. Seath, Superintendent of Education and there were present the prime movers of the plan, viz: Pres. G. C. Creelman of the Ontario Agricultural College and C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture.

The meeting was significant because it determined the regulations and course of studies to be adopted in the new departure in agricultural education. It will be remembered that in an issue of a few weeks ago we made public a plan to introduce agriculture into six Collegiate Institutes of Ontario, one of which is Morrisburg. The six teachers from these several places have been at Guelph during the month of July working early and late to systematize their work, and the climax was reached on the above mentioned date they handed out regulations satisfactory to both the Departments of Agriculture and of Education concerning ther relations to the Collegiate staff, the pupils and the farmers. A course of studies was also submitted which was entirely satisfactory to all concerned

The regulations and course of studies will be printed in pamphlet form and sent to anyone on application, but we deem it wise to publish some of the most important features.

The course is open to all students whether they have passed the entrance examination or not, provided that in the opinion of the principal of the school they are competent to take up the work. There are no fees to any students attending Morrisburg Collegiate.

The regular two years' course is intended to be complete in itself, but pupils who do well in this course and deserve further training in agriculture will be admitted to second year standing at the Agricultural College.

The course of studies includes the literature, grammar, arithmetic, history, geography and science of the regular high school course, the student in agriculture will also be required to study field husbandry, animal husbandry, dairying, poultry, horticulture, agricultural botany, entomology, agricultural physics—including surveying and drainage, agricultural chemistry and forestry.

The course is meant for the boy or man on the farm, to make farm life more congenial and to call out the latent powers of our boys who stay at home.

There will be courses at various places throughout the counties to which anyone interested in farming is eligible. These courses may include such subjects as stock and grain judging, milk testing, poultry, and any of the many questions that come up in connection with garden and orchard.

Address all inquiries to W. A. Munro, Specialist in Agriculture, Morrisburg.

The only natural and common sense method known for the cure of catarrhal troubles is Hy-o-mei. It is breathed through an ingenious pocket inhaler, so that its medicated air reaches the most remote air-cells of the nose, throat and lungs, killing all catarrhal germs, soothing the irritated mucous membranes, and restoring a healthy condition.

If you suffer from catarrhal troubles, such as offensive breath, raising of mucous, frequent sneezing, husky voice, discharge from the throat, loss of strength, spasmodic coughing, or a feeling of tightness across the upper part of the chest, you should begin to use Hy-o mei at once. It will destroy all disease germs in the nose, throat and lungs, and provide the blood with additional ozone.

We do not want anyone's money unless Hyomei gives relief and cure, and we absolutely agree that money will be refunded unless the remedy gives satisfaction.

All druggists should be able to supply you with Hyomei or we will send it by mail on receipt of price $1.00, and every package is sold with the distinct understanding that it costs nothing unless it cures. Booth's Hyomei Company Buffalo, N.Y.
