The Morrisburg Leader

LXXXV, NO. 41. MORRISBURG, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 10th, 1947. $2.00 PER YEAR; SINGLE COPIES 5c

CAPT. LUKE MALLAN DIED ON THURSDAY

The death occurred at his home on Lock St., Morrisburg on Thursday morning of a widely known and well loved resident of Morrisburg, in the person of Captain Luke Mallan.

"The Captain" was known familiarly all along the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence, by steamship company officials, captains, crewmen and lock men. He was highly regarded as a river pilot, and only recently following the disastrous fire on the S.S. Milverton, salvage boat operators came to his bedside to seek his advice. A bluff, hearty man, Captain Mallan enjoyed his declining years, recalling incidents of the past, when navigation on the river was not so safe nor so comfortable as it now is. He had a very wide circle of friends throughout Canada and the United States, who will learn with very real sorrow of his death.

The late Luke Mallan was born at Cardinal on February 24th, 1874, a son of the late John Mallan and his wife, Margaret Kaine. He was educated at Cardinal and in 1890, at the age of 16, he went to work for Mr. George Benson of the Cardinal Starch Works, on the Benson yacht. For several years he sailed the Great Lakes, securing his Captain's ticket in 1894 and following this period he came to Morrisburg to work on the building of the present locks and canal. During his career as a pilot, Captain Mallan also hauled all the rock used in the building of the Cardinal locks and canal from the quarry at Mille Roches. In later years he was with the salvage section of the Donnely Wrecking and Salvage Co., of Kingston, and after returning from that company, was a river pilot for the last twelve years before his illness.

CAPTAIN LUKE MALLAN
well known lake and river pilot, who passed away on Thursday morning. Funeral will be held at Morrisburg on Saturday.

Captain Mallan was ill for about a year prior to his death, on Thursday, when he passed peacefully away, fortified by the last rites of the Catholic Church.

In 1901 at Prescott, Ont., he was united in marriage to the former Miss Mary Jane Gogo, who survives together with one sister, Mrs. William Lambert of Hamilton and one brother, Mr. Wm. Mallan of Watertown, N. Y.; also one adopted daughter, Mrs. T. W. Bouchard, Morrisburg.

The funeral service will be held from his late residence, Lock St., Morrisburg, to St. Mary's Catholic Church, on Saturday morning at 10 a.m., when the funeral mass will be sung by Rev. Father Feeney. Interment will be in the amily plot at Sacred Heart Cemetery, Cardinal.

McMillan-Foulds

Knox Presbyterian Church, Morrisburg, beautifully decorated with seasonal flowers, was the setting for the marriage of Shirley K, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon A. Foulds, to Mr. William Bruce McMillan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy McMillan of Waddington, N. Y. Rev. H. P. Maitland officiated. Miss Roberta Devaul was soloist and during the signing of the register sang "I'll Walk Beside You", while Mr. Carl Beckstead presided at the organ throughout the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a street length dress of pastel blue wool, a large black picture hat and black accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses.

Miss Andrewina Foulds, her sister's only attendant, wore a street length dress of turquoise wool, with black accessories and a corsage of red roses. Mr. Robert Thompson of Waddington was groomsman and ushers were Mr. Gordon Foulds, Ottawa, and Mr. Leslie Foulds, Cornwall.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Percy McMillan and Mr. Robert McMillan of Waddington; Mr. Leslie Foulds of Cornwall.

Following a reception at the home of the bride's parents, the happy couple left by motor for Ottawa and points beyond, the bride travelling in a medium blue gabardine suite with black accessories and a corsage of red roses. On their return, they will reside at Waddington, N.Y.

IROQUOIS TELEPHONE OPERATORS GIVEN CREDIT

The citizens of Iroquois and the surrounding district feel that public recognition should be made of the valiant and efficient services rendered by the staff of the Iroquois branch of the Bell Telephone Co., Ltd., on September 24th, when the steamers Milverton and Translake collided one mile east of Iroquois. The staff is comprised of the following: Mrs. D. M. Merkley, who has been chief operator of the office for 19 years; her sisters, Miss Helen Marcellus and Miss Gertrude Marcellus, both of whom have been on the staff as operators for 19 years; Mrs. Ella E. Haley, who has operated for 9 years; Mrs. Margaret E. Riddell and Miss Margaret A. Kaine, both experienced operators. Mrs. Riddell (Margie) was on duty at the time of the tragic accident and quickly sounded the alarm, which in a few short moments was sent far and wide

The staff was immediately on the job and worked unceasingly and expertly at sending and receiving messages. Mrs. Merkley operated the entire day, with only half an hour respite.

Margie Riddell is a natural born operator, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, both of whom had long service with the Bell Telephone Co. It is a well known fact that our girls are at all times courteous, efficient and reliable and it behooves all, as citizens to extend them their appreciation.—Iroquois Post.

SHORT STORY

No Need For Words

By LILA LENNON

It had been a silly quarrel, really, Peg reflected. The quarrel had started from such an insignificant thing as her new hair-do.

Now, here she was sitting alone, the slam of the front door still ringing in her ears.

Bob had gone out alone, and on a Thursday night, too. That was what really hurt most, because Thursday nights were such special nights. The stores were all open and after the dishes were done, Bob and Peg always went window shopping. There never was a lot of money to spend. Sometimes they did buy one or two little things, and it was always such fun!

Peg thought for a moment about how Bob used to tuck her hand under his arm and say, "Some day, honey, I'll give you all the things you want." And she had always said:

"But I have what I really want . . you, And, what we share has no price, it can't be measured in terms of dollars and cents!"

It was true, Peg reflected. You can't put a price on the magic of contentment and love and understanding.

Understanding! It was something of a shock to discover that Bob could be so critical . . . and so stubborn. And, he hadn't understood, at all.

Bob had been tired . . . but even so, all she had done was to say, "You haven't even noticed my new hair-do!"

He said grumpily, "I don't know why you spent all afternoon getting that done, you look like you're getting ready to take bath!"

Tears smarted Peg's eyes. Her words rushed out. "You'd look better with a hair-cut yourself!"

"I know it," Bob admitted, "but I hurried home so we could go shopping."

There seemed to be a broom handle stiffening in Peg's back. "I don't think I care to go shopping tonight," she answered slowly.

When the dishes were done, Bob turned to her, "Are you ready?"

Peg answered stubbornly, "I'm not going."

Bob had been equally as stubborn, though. "I won't beg you to come, Peg. I'll go alone." And he had gone, just like that.

Darkness crept over the room, but Peg didn't turn on a light. She dropped her head on her arms and remembered other Thursday nights. Bob, helping her to choose a slip, saying critically, "That looks too big for you, you're so little." Bob, being amused . . . "Those little pink things with the bows are sure cute!"

But, tonight, he was alone . . . he had wanted it that way . . . what was he thinking? Did he feel the same loneliness?

Silly? No, Peg reflected, maybe it wasn't silly; after all. Maybe it was really very important. Maybe the little things were, after all, important to heal understand. Maybe . . . it was up to her, too, to be as Bob wanted her to be.

Quickly, her hair came tumbling down. When Bob came home she would say the things that were in her heart; he'd understand.

The sound of the door opening quietly, reached her. "Peg?" Bob called.

"Here," she said softly.

He walked over to the lounge. "Why are you sitting in the dark? I was worried, I thought . . . want a light?"

"No," she answered quietly.

Bob cleared his throat. "Here . . . I brought you a little present." He thrust the small package into her hands. "Wait a minute, I'll turn on the light."

The light shone down on her head as Peg undid the folds of tissue. It made little colored beams dance up from the two tiny jeweled combs.

She turned to Bob, and all the things she wanted to say rushed to her lips, but Bob was staring at her hair tumbling to her shoulders. Then he took her in his arms and held her tight. There was no need for words.

The Turks regard green as a sacred color and for that reason its use is confined chiefly to prayer rugs.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

By Gwendoline P. Clarke

Back to standard time and no one in this house seems to know how to take advantage of it—no one, that is, except myself. For two weeks I had been looking forward to that extra hour on Sunday morning. But did I get it? Not exactly as I had planned anyway. But as I said to myself afterwards—

If you can sleep when all the world is waking,
If you can dream when other folk are working,
If you can doze when roosters start a-crowing,
If you can rest when sun begins a-shining,
If you can stand the noise and light and chatter—
And take it all—and not disturb your slumber—
Sleep on, my dear—let naught your dreams encumber.

Yes, that's how it was on Sunday—everybody wanting to get up but me. Oh well, this standard time just takes getting used to, I thought. Tomorrow will be normal. Normal . . . that's where I laugh. Bob is on a job that stays on fast time, so on Monday he was up at 4.45 standard time and got his own breakfast. Then at 5.30 Partner was all set to get up. "For goodness sake go to sleep", I scolded, "the alarm hasn't gone off yet—it isn't six o'clock."

"But it's daylight,"

"It's moonlight," I answered.

For a while all was quiet, then about ten to six I heard John come down stairs. "The dickens," I exclaimed, "I might as well be up!" So up I got and I have been running around in circles ever since. Bob, working on fast time, was to be in to dinner at eleven o'clock standard time. The rest of us naturally would have our meal at noon. Bob's dinner was on the table and the tea made when he came in, looked at the table and said—"I don't need my dinner yet—we have knocked off on account of rain!" Is it any wonder mothers turn grey?

Ask any housewife and she will tell you nothing throws her off schedule so easily as irregular meals. But should one be five minutes late—then, if looks would kill, there are times when one wouldn't be alive to dish up the dinner.

Let me see—there was something funny I wanted to tell you—what was it? Oh yes . . . "Mike" was in to buy chickens; Tippy was barking furiously at his heels and Mike wasn't liking it a bit. I tried to reassure him. "Don't worry about the dog, Mike—he wont hurt you."

"Im not worrying 'bout the dog," answered Mike, "Im worrying about ME!"

Last Saturday was the day of our local fair. It was beautiful weather—bright sunshine and the air just comfortably warm. There was a capacity crowd at the Fair and the exhibits were good except for the fruits and vegetables which were almost conspicuous by their absence. There is this much to be said for local fairs as compared with the Exhibition—nearly everyone knows something about the exhibitors. Johnny shows his best bacon hog and Mary her Jersey calf and you go along and look the stuff over to see how John and Mary's exhibits compare with the others. On the way you run into friends you haven't seen for ages and you discuss the Institute exhibit in the hall. That is something in which nearly everyone is interested because almost every second person is an Institutor or connected with one.

There was a Girls' Pipe Band which was an added attraction to the Fair. There was also plenty of farm machinery with a tractor geared to run in a small circle — sort of perpetual motion, as it were. Quite a smart idea, I thought.

And to conclude—our wheat is up and looking well. That, also, is what our neighbour's horses think. After leaving us in peace all summer they now visit us almost daily —and generally via the wheat field.

Austerity Lesson

When Mrs. Ellen Parker of Philadelphia returns to the United States, after visiting her sister, Mrs. Hannah James of Edlington, Doncaster, she will take with her one week's rations for one person to exhibit in her grocery shop, to impress upon her customers the austerity in Britain.

"UM-M-M! WHAT A FLAVOR-LIFT"

As Easy As Pie

To make a perfect pie is the aim and object of every bride and of a great many other women also. The hesitation of an inexperienced cook often means a heavy hand, and over mixing, resulting in tough pastry.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture say that making good pastry is really quite easy if certain points are kept in mind. However if there is any doubt they suggest hot water pastry. It never fails.

With fat at a premium and luscious fruits plentiful, deep fruit pies with a top crust or open face pies are the answer to the problem.

Hot Water Pastry

¾ cup lard or mild-flavoured fat
½ cup boiling water
1½ teaspoons salt
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour OR 3 1-3 cups pastry flour.

Cream the fat and stir in the boiling water a little at a time; cool slightly. Add salt and flour, mixing with a quick, cutting motion; do not stir. Chill before rolling. Makes enough pastry for 3 nine-inch pie shells; or 3 dozen two-inch tart shells.

Deep Dish Plum Pie

1 quart fruit (canned without sugar)
⅛ teaspoon salt
1-3 cup sugar
¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon almond extract
1 tablespoon fat
Pastry

Drain fruit; heat juice to boiling. Mix salt, sugar and flour. Stir slowly into boiling juice. Place drained fruit in a deep baking dish. Pour thickened syrup over fruit. Dot with fat. Roll out plain pastry to ⅛" thickness. Make several slits in the centre. Fit pastry over the fruit; press down well over the edges of the baking dish. Cut and flute the edges. Bake 30 minutes in a hot oven, 425 degrees F. Six servings.

Apple Meringue Pie

Pastry
2 large apples, sliced
2 egg yolks
1-3 cup sugar
1 cup milk
2 egg whites
2 tablespoons sugar

Line a 9" pie plate with the paste. Peel, core and slice apples and place in the pie shell. Beat egg yolks, add sugar and milk. Pour this mixture over apples. Bake in hot oven, 425 degrees F., for 10 minutes, then reduce temperature to 325 degrees F., and bake 30 minutes longer. Top with meringue made from the 2 egg whites and the 2 tablespoons of sugar. Return to moderate oven, 325 degrees F., to brown meringue.

Hybrid Onion

Peeling onions will not be the tearful job it is now, once a new hybrid onion strain originated by Dr. Glen N. Davis comes into more general cultivation, says Science Service. Dr. Davis has eliminated a large part of the pungent, volatile compound that affects housewives' eyes. It is impossible to eliminate all of it, for then there would be no flavor left in the onion, he says. The new near-tearless onion has a mild, sweet flavor and is especially good for eating raw.

TEEN-TOWN TOPICS

By BARRY MURKAR

Football is the main topic of controversy in the school halls these days. Every high school and collegiate in the province is in there pitching for the home team. But along with watching the game, the spectators enjoy the pleasant privilege of watching those cute little cheer leaders in the short skirts and blaring sweaters. Cheerleaders for most of the school teams have already been chosen. Among the names we see: For Danforth Tech: June Joy, Gwen Thornber, Joan Dowes, Elia Ainsekorpi; Brampton: Jean Arscott, Mary Elliott and Dorothy Lilly along with three new ones, Helen Beckford, Jane Austin and Beth Townsend; York Memorial: Jean Stelle, Gloria Nesbit, Viola Prince. Dorothy Hourston, Audrey Hourston, Anne Agnelli and Eileen Palmer.

What We Want

Since our letters went out asking for correspondents for Teen-Town Topics, we have had several letters inquiring just what is wanted in the way of news. We want news of your teen-club, its members and the activities of the club in general. If you have a story on any certain member of the club, send that along, too. Anything that you think will make for interesting reading for teeners is just what we want for this column. Let's have some of that stuff, please, and please print all names.

Our Teeners Report

Colborne, Ont. — Beverlie Wilson: Our Keen Club has not opened for the new season yet. Last year we had close to a hundred members. All members have a membership card and must show it before they are admitted. Members may bring friends, but no outsiders are allowed. Last year we held dances every Friday night. We held several dances in the Town Hall to raise funds for a tennis court in our new Memorial Park. Last year we were very much taken up with our Choral Club under the direction of Mr. Dine and hope to continue with same this year. This year we are going to form a bowling club. A meeting about this will be called in a few days. We are especially proud of two of our Keen Klub members who passed fifth form last year. The first—Anne Hart who won a four hundred dollar scholarship. However she started in training for a nurse before she knew about the scholarship. The second — Margaret Rutherford who has just begun a year at Normal. Margaret won the school ring for being the most lady-like girl in the school. She has won additional acclaim of late for her popularity and work at the Junior Farmers' summer camp.

Runnymede Collegiate—Velma Davis: Our teen clubs in this locality are separate from the collegiate. We have plenty of activity in both during the winter and will try to report the news as it occurs, once things get under way. We have not had our elections for the new year yet, but will be starting soon.

Racial Discrimination

Bill Torgis of Canadian High News wasn't fooling when he made the statement that many people would be shocked about the case in Toronto recently where a Jewish boy was insulted and rebuked in a public place. Holding his temper at the time, the boy went on eating while three other young bums called him very nasty names. Finally they came over and made grabs at the food he was eating. Following this, they threw wet toast at him which soiled his clothes. He quietly told them to stop; that he wanted no trouble. The trio left the restaurant but not before telling the Jewish boy they would get him outside. One of the waiters contacted a policeman. While the officer was talking to the trio outside and four more, who had joined them, the Jewish boy went his way.

It's a fine state of affairs when a Jewish lad can't sit down to eat without some filthy-mouthed Canadian yelling at him, and telling him to go back to Palestine. I'm a Canadian right through, but this is one thing that makes me feel sorry that I am even linked with the likes of some that we have hanging around. Yes, Bill Torgis, we were shocked at this story. We also agree with you that something should be done NOW to change this ill-founded feeling of superiority on the part of a small minority of Canada's younger generation.

Here is a chance for you readers. What would you suggest in a case like this, Send us your view point on the matter and we'll pool the letters for a feature article in the very near future.

Sports – And One Thing or Another

By FRANK MANN HARRIS

("A Sixbit Critic")

With the football season about half over, the two points that have principally impressed us are these. First, that the forward pass is a weapon much resembling our Great uncle's muzzle loading shotgun, which had such a potent kick that it was far more likely to injure the shooter than the game. And second, that in these days of widespread education and expert coaching, it is amazing how many quarterbacks still suffer from the delusion that games are won down in the shadow of their own goalposts.

We haven't the statistics at hand —nor are we going to dig among the figures for them—on how many victories have already been gained as a direct result of the interception of one or more enemy forward passes. But we wouldn't mind risking a small wager that it is considerably more than the number won as a result of forward passes clicking. As an example, take the game a week or so ago when the Toronto Argonauts handily upset the favored Ottawa Rough Riders. On our way home we met a chap who asked us how the battle had gone. "Well," we said, preparing to give him a blow-by-blow description, "for one thing, Argos intercepted seven Ottawa forwards." "That's enough," he said, stopping us in mid-career, "how much did they win by?"

As for our second point, the best illustration that comes immediately to mind is something that happened down in Montreal. With less than five minutes to play, the Hamilton Tigers needed a touchdown to tie things up. Yet down around their own 20-yard line their quarterback called for two line plunges before kicking—thus wasting precious time which should have been employed in booting the ball as far as possible, and then praying hard that the catcher fumble. For, in spite of all modern improvements, that ancient combination of a punt and a prayer is still the most deadly weapon in Canadian football. Nowadays they seem to have forgotten how to punt, and aren't so hot in the praying department either.

MEMO TO BUSINESS MEN. When it was recently proposed to tax football on a professional basis, it is rumored that one of the most powerful arguments against such action was the football folks being able to convince the Ottawa authorities that they weren't making any money. This might be a plan worth trying out on the tax people, next time your business happens to finish in the red. Still, somehow we wouldn't advise building your hopes too high on getting away with it!

Memories of a past we had thought safely buried were stirred by a report from Germany that Max Schmeling, of all people, is fighting again and, what is more, winning bouts. For a lot of water has gone over a number of dams and, among other things, a guy named Hitler—remember him?—has come and gone since the days when the same Mr. Schmeling was the best-known German in the world.

Two of his bouts which we happened to witness are memorable, less for the actual fighting than for the way they ended. The first, against Sharkey in New York, wound up in just about the most hectic mixup we have ever had the pleasure of seeing. Schmeling was awarded the duke because of an allegedly foul blow delivered just 5 seconds before the finish of the 4th round. But the award wasn't made till some four minutes later; and in the meantime that ring was swarming with managers, seconds, fighters and officials in a manner beautiful to behold—from a safe distance—with a battle-royal threatening to break out at any second, although—much to our personal disappointment — it didn't quite come to that. For it has always been our ambition to see some boxing managers do a little real fighting, instead of standing safely in the corner hollering, "Mix it with him, kid, he can't hurt us."

The other Schmeling bout we recall was with 'Young' Stribling in Cleveland. And it comes back to us not so much on account of the German scoring a technical knockout in the 15th, but because the promoters, with some 37 thousand people paying something like 350 thousand dollars to see the fracas, somehow or other contrived to lose fifty grand or more for their efforts. Now, 18 years after his American debut, Schmeling is in the news again; and first thing we know, will be in process of being smoked up as a logical opponent for Joe Louis.

A city hotelman we know, driving in the country, stopped at a roadside stand and priced some of the vegetables displayed. "I'd think," he said, "that right here where the stuff is grown and with you not having to make delivery or anything like that, you'd make your prices a bit lower." The farmer, who had recognized his prospective customer, made reply. "Back at Exhibition time I dropped into your place and had a glass of beer that was made right there in Toronto," he said. "And if I remember rightly, the price was the full ten cents!"

Canadian Workers Given Free Tuition At Frontier College

Canada has a remarkably successful college about which all too many Canadians know little or nothing. It is called Frontier College and its classrooms are in the lumbering, pulpwood, railway and mining camps scattered all over the country. The pupils are the workers in these camps, mostly new Canadians who have only a smattering of English. The teacher-laborers are young volunteers who are going through our universities. During the work hours at the camps they do the same kind of labor as their pupils. There will be 70 of them this year, divided among the outposts of the different provinces. No tuition fees are charged and there is a wide variety of subjects, the only ones banned being those of a controversial nature such as politics.

Valley OF REVENGE

BY JACKSON·COLE

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER VIII: Juanita's horse is lamed in flight and Michael kills it to free it from pain. He is then obliged to take the girl with him.

CHAPTER VIX

Before he had entered Paisano Valley El Caballero Rojo had made preparations for the place to which he would return as a sort of headquarters. This he always did when arriving in any hitherto unexplored section of the country. Always it was necessary for him to find a hideout which it would be difficult for others to find, and to which it would be equally as difficult to trail him. He had found such a place in the rough country that lay on that part of the line dividing Paisano Valley from the badlands, shortly before he had entered the valley itself.

It was not a great distance away, but in a land as different from the lush beauty of Paisano Valley as day from night.

Valdez had spent one whole day before entering the valley in finding just the spot which would serve his purpose as a hideout. He had found it when he had discovered a cave, not far from one of the few streams that were within miles of Paisano Valley. He had taken possession immediately, and there he had left all that he ever carried with him for making a temporary home.

Michael Valdez was glad that Juanita was seeing the land over which they rode, while it was veiled in moonlight. Moonlight changed everything—but El Caballero Rojo had seen this land into which Juanita was so confidently heading with him in bright light of the day. He had seen it beneath the searing heat of the brassy mid-day sun.

Valdez was silent, only putting in a word now and then, but as El Cielo picked his way daintily between the catclaw and cactus, Juanita talked. She had many things to say, but this night she made no mention of her tragedy. Instead, regaled him with stories of Paisano Valley—of its history—and told him time-dimmed legends of the Indians who once had their homes there, and of the Spanish dons who had come after them.

And as they rode on across the badlands desert, beneath the stars and the deep indigo of the sky, cut by a golden moon, an emotion that was completely strange to El Cal baero Rojo gripped him. He suddenly felt an unaccustomed lump in his throat, and just as suddenly the blood was racing through his veins as he listened to Juanita's clear, low, contented laughter, and felt her slight, willowy body in the tattered peon's clothes close to him.

As innocently as a child Juanita was letting herself relax, for she felt so safe now—safe, with El Caballero Rojo to whom she had so naively sworn allegiance. So she leaned back against his shoulder, with his arms around her, in order to hold El Cielo's reins.

With an uncomfortable feeling he could not understand, Michael Valdez set her upright, as if to settle himself more comfortably in his saddle. He felt her quiver a little, as though she feared that in some way she could not understand she had displeased him. Then she sat before him straight and stiff. It was only a passage for a fleeting moment, but if either of them could have realized its significance, they would have understood.

Suddenly Michael Valdez said:

"Juanita, it may be that I have not made myself clear to you. Tonight there has been nothing for it except to let you come with me, but what I told you before is true. El Caballero Rojo rides alone. For another to ride with him might make it impossible for him to do all those things that he is committed to do. You see that, don't you?"

For a moment Juanita did not speak, and when she did all the recent joy seemed to ahve gone out of her soft voice. There was a choke in it when she said:

"But Juanita only wants to help you, senor."

He laughed a little at that, shortly. "Help me?" he repeated. "By riding like this when I go on such matters as those which took me to Luna Roja tonight. Why, you haven't even got a horse." He groaned a little, remembering that catastrophe. "Madre de Dios! What will we do about that, anyhow?"

"Oh," said Juanita, and brightened a little, "this will be easy. Back where — where my — home was, there is a horse in the corral back of the two cottonwoods. The horse of my padre. Perhaps one day you will ride—only a few hours, senor —and bring him to me. no?"

Michael Valdez breathed a sigh of relief. One puzzle was solved, at any rate. Would he get the horse for Juanita? He would—and with no delay whatsoever, even if it meant making a return journey to Paisano Valley before it was safe to do so. This Juanita problem was one that would brook no delay.

"And when I have the horse," Juanita was saying, more brightly, "then I can ride with you, Caballero Rojo—I can help you." She must have felt his tense silence, for she said quickly, anxiously, "You do not want me? But is there no help I can give you at all?"

It was on the tip of Valdez' tongue to assure her, firmly, that there was no slightest chance that she could do anything more than be in his way, when a better idea flashed into his mind. It was one that he believed would settle this bewildering matter once and for all.

"Yes, Juanita, there is something that you can do for me," he told her. But he made no further explanation until they had ridden on a way.

He was busy picking out landmarks, knowing that they were nearing the hideout, and anxious not to lose the way, now that they were near it. With an exclamation of satisfaction he turned off the sandy ground over which they had been traveling, and for a short distance further they climbed, up the side of a rugged hill that towered against the moonlight.

El Cielo picked his dainty way upward, and where there was a sort of bench formation, Valdez again turned off. There he dismounted and led his horse with Juanita clinging to El Cielo's mane, into a cave from which he shoved back a tangled growth of mesquite.

Juanita's eyes lighted with interest as he struck a match and set it to a candle placed on a jutting shelflike rock. She saw food that he had carried in an extra saddlebag, canned stuff, bacon, and jerky, as well as flour, coffee, and a few sundries, and crude camping equipment which he had stacked in one of the corners. Valdez had even taken the time to make for himself a cot of pine boughs which stood against the cave wall.

"Nice," Juanita said. "Very nice. You have make yourself most comfortable in these badlands they say are no good for living." Then something seemed to be on her mind, and she turned to ask Michael Valdez: "But Senor Caballero, you say little while ago that there is something you have for Juanita to do for you. You tell me what it is?"

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

Deceit Weaves Tragic Pattern

IF I WERE ASKED to give one * rule for young girls to follow, it * would be—Be Honest. In some * characters, honesty is instinctive; * the girl would no more think of * deceiving her family than she * would steal a pin that did not be- * long to her. In others, the habit of being dishonest starts young, with trivial acts which seem not to matter, with little lies that are not found out. Soon the practice becomes a part of her thinking and her one desire is to * see how much she can get away with.

* It is not honest to tell your * mother you were kept after school * when you went to a movie instead. * It is not honest to say you're with * your girl friend, when you know * you met a boy. It is not honest to * deviate in the slightest from the * whole truth. Your word must be * your bond, your promise inviolate. * The business of the world is con- * ducted on this premise. Isn't it * good enough for you?

● TROUBLE AHEAD!

Two young girls write me that they "could be popular if they could go out," but they live with an "old maid aunt who thinks it's disgraceful to be seen with a boy." So they slip out without her knowing and naively add, "This is causing us to get a bad reputation, though we never do anything wrong."

Another 16-year-old deplores her mother's attitude. "She doesn't trust me at all, though it's only six times I've sneaked out with a boy. He's nice enough, but she won't let me have dates with anybody, and I'm not going to stand for it!"

What do you girls think these boys say about you? Oh, I know at first you think you're smart, you're intrigued with the very clandestine nature of your meetings. You are culprits together and you get a kick out of it. But what really is happening to you? The word gets around, other boys know you're easy and before you realize what's happening the nice girls shun you and you have no friends except corner hangers-on who whistle as you pass.

Then it's too late. The damage is done. And take my word for it, it can take years to rehabilitate yourself.

It does not pay to deceive—anybody! If you are tempted to get away with it, Anne Hirst will explain why it's all wrong. Address her at Box A, room 421, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto.

Your Handwriting and You

By Alex S. Arnott

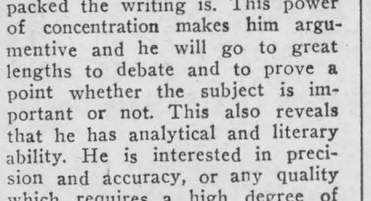

One Person Thrifty, The Other Generous

Dear Mr. Arnott: I have enclosed two examples of handwriting of young men with whom I am acquainted. Would you please analyse their writing and tell me how their characters compare?

Answer: Notice how broad and generous the first example of writing is compared to the second one. This indicates the writer's character to be similar in nature, broad minded in his views and very generous with material possessions. This writer is very extravagant and nothing but the best will do to satisfy his needs. He considers petty things as a nuisance and will avoid detail work or anything that is trifling and requires concentration and attention to detail. However, he has the ability to organize the work of others and to get things done in an executive capacity. There is no doubt that he is, by nature, very easy going and is not likely to take matters too seriously.

Now compare the second example of writing for size and you have an entirely different person. Great powers of concentration are shown here. Notice how small and closely packed the writing is. This power of concentration makes him argumentive and he will go to great lengths to debate and to prove a point whether the subject is important or not. This also reveals that he has analytical and literary ability. He is interested in precision and accuracy, or any quality which requires a high degree of patience and skill .The conciseness of the writing indicates the writer to be thrifty, not approving of waste of any kind.

In the analysis of these handwritings, it is evident that these two young men are opposites in character and have entirely different points of view on personality and personal interests.

Anyone wishing a more complete analysis please send self-addressed stamped envelope to Box B, room 421, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto. There is no charge for this service.

Sunday School Lesson

Christ the Minister

Hebrews 4:14-16; 7:26-27; 9:24-28; 10:11-14.

GOLDEN TEXT: — He is able also to save them to the uttermost that came unto God by him.—Hebrews 7:25.

The topic of this lesson for young people and adults is "The Sufficient Christ"; and that phrase accurately characterizes both the letter and spirit of the Epistle to the Hebrews.

The writer of the Epistle has a deep sense of the spiritual heritage of Israel. "God," he writes, "at sundry times and in divers manners spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets"; and in the 11th chapter he records the story of the men and women of faith in a way that only a lover of Israel and of Israel's religion could have done.

But his faith and outlook as an earnest Israelite is dominated by the supreme conviction that God, who spoke formerly through the prophets, has spoken "in these last days" through His Son, Jesus Christ, "the brightness of His glory", and "express image of His person."

With all the greatness of the past religion of Israel, it is the writer's contention that there was a promise unfulfilled. Saints and prophets "obtained a good report through faith, but received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect" (Hebrews 11:39-40).

But what of priestliness and sacrifice in the Jewish religion? The writer's answer is that Jesus is a superior high priest, inasmuch as He has offered Himself a sacrifice, once for all. An insistent question, I think, concerns how much of religious faith and practice of today is in the realm of unfulfilled promise, awaiting the supreme experience of Christ as "the Minister of better things."

"Look! Light as a Feather- That's Calumet's Double Action"

IT'S TRUE! Women everywhere are discovering that Calumet's double action assures greater baking success. Muffins, fine-textured as cake . . . fluffy, melt-in-your-mouth biscuits . . . feather-light cakes — Calumet's double action protects their lightness, all the way.

First — in the mixing bowl, myriads of tiny, even-sized bubbles are formed when liquid is added. Then — in the oven, new even-sized bubbles continue to raise the mixture, holding it high, light and even. Try Calumet! Follow directions on the tin for any recipe.

So tender, so flavorful, these

SPICY RAISIN MUFFINS

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 2 teaspoons Calumet Baking Powder
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¾ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¾ cup chopped raisins
- 1 egg, well beaten
- ⅞ cup milk
- 4 tablespoons melted butter or other shortening

● Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, sugar, salt, cinnamon; sift again. Add raisins. Combine egg, milk, shortening. Add to flour. Beat only enough to dampen flour. Bake in greased muffin pans in hot oven (425°F.) about 25 minutes. Makes 12 melting, delicious muffins —serve them hot.

Twice Your Money Back

If you are not satisfied that Calumet is the finest baking powder you ever used, send tin containing unused portion, along with your name and address and a note of the price you paid — to General Foods, Limited, Cobourg, Ont. You will receive back twice what you paid for Calumet.

Shown in the photo is Mr. J. M. Govenlock, president of the Fair at Seaforth. Mr. Govenlock is the oldest fair president in Western Ontario, and is extremely active in community affairs. He was a member of parliament from 1919 to 1923 and is a past warden of Huron County.

Britain's Long-Term Agricultural Policy

The net output of British agriculture increased by about 35 per cent during the war. Intensive mechanization made British agriculture among the most highly mechanized in the world, with 190,000 tractors compared with the pre-war count of 60,000. Output per man-year rose by 10-15 per cent. The problem now is to adjust the industry to post-war needs, while retaining the wartime gains in efficiency and developing them still further.

The Government's policy, both to save foreign exchange and for good farming, is to switch production, as rapidly as the cereals position permits, from the production of crops for direct human consumption to the production of live stock and live-stock products, especially pigs and poultry. The import of $1,000 worth of feedingstuffs will save nearly $2,000 worth of imports of livestock products.

Though the world cereal shortage has delayed this policy, it still remains the long-term solution, and as additional feedingstuffs become available, they will be used to increase pig and poultry breeding stock.

Sixteen-Cent Butter

(Stratford, Fifty Years Ago)

In spite of rain today, the market was busy. Butter sold at 16-18 cents a pound; eggs at 13 cents a dozen. Honey was 10 cents a pound. Spring chickens were 35 to 50 cents a pair. Tomatoes were priced at 50 cents a bushel.

"I could sail into a scowful of those malty-rich, sweet-as-a-nut Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes!

"And boy! How I'd pack in the nourishment! All those carbohydrates for energy; proteins for muscle; phosphorus for teeth and bones; iron for the blood; and other food essentials.

"They'd have to cut an acre of wheat and malted barley to get enough of those golden grains for a couple of mouthfuls of Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES AVAILABLE AT B OF M

The new safety deposit boxes, recently received at the Bank of Montreal office here, are in great demand, Charles Wood, local manager tells us. However, a few are still vacant and ready for immediate use. Certainly this is of interest to those residents who, because of the wartime scarcity of these boxes, had to keep their valuables at home.

No matter how good a hiding place you think you have in your home, your valuables are never really safe there. Fire and burglary are ever-present dangers. Securuities, insurance premium receipts, deeds and other important document, investments representing the savings of a lifetime, can be destroyed by fire in a matter of seconds, or stolen and gone forever, as many a Canadian family can testify.

Commenting on the advantages of this type of protection, Mr. Wood said, "There is no need for residents to run the risk of losing the results of years of careful planning and saving. By renting a B of M safety deposit box, they can be sure papers and other valuables are well protected. And the cost is but a cent or two a day."

Mr. Wood added that he would be glad to have all those interested drop in at any time to discuss their safekeeping needs.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP
is a lot of little things

A TIME FOR THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving is a brief pause in our busy lives which provides an opportunity to take stock of our good fortune! Family—friends—good health—home—freedom . . . these are among the many blessings for which we should be grateful. We can be thankful, too, that as Canadians, we share more privileges and greater opportunities than the people of any other country in the world. To think of these things, to realize their importance in our individual lives, to appreciate them—these are essentials of "Good Citizenship".

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.
