Clever Girl Crook Now in Jail, Belongs to Brockville.

Brockviile, Ont., November 18—Word has been received here of the arrest this week in Cleveland of Mrs Maude Wilder, daughter of John Ranger of Syracuse, N. Y., formerly of this town. She is considered one of the cleverest women crooks in the States and has been sought by the police of all the leading cities for two years. Her plan was to go to the cashier of a large departmental store on the pretext that she was an agent of an accounting office sent to audit the books and count the cash. Invariably the latter would be turned over to her and her disappearance would follow. Last week she secured $600 from the Wanamaker store in Philadelphia.

Mr. Frank Waugh was found dead in the canal at Brantford.

Several men were injured in the fall of a scaffold at Harriston.

Obituary.

The death of a highly respected resident of the township of Finch, Mrs John Boldic, occurred on the 7th inst., at her home in the 7th con. The deceased is survived by her husband and one son and one daughter; also four brothers and two sisters—James Quinn, Newington; Gordon, Rosetown, Sask.; William and Arthur, Euderby, B. C.; Mrs John Kennedy, Kenora, and Mrs C. Dillabough, Winnipeg. The funeral took place on Thursday from the family residence to St. John's Church, Crysler, the service being conducted by Rev. S. D. Holmes. The pall-bearers were Messrs Hugh McMillan, Geo. K. Johnston, J. R. Cockburn, J. D. McInnis, Simeon Ouderkirk and Hy. Armstrong. Among the relatives present from a distance were Mr. James Quinn, Mr. and Mrs Levi Bancroft, Newington; Mr. James D. and Mrs Rombough, Mrs Hugh Cameron, Mrs Mattice F. Evans, Mr. J. McQuaig, Finch. The bereaved family have the sympathy of many friends.

Death at Cornwall of Don. MacCormack

Donald McCormick died rather suddenly Thursday morning at Cornwall. He took a cold which developed into bronchitis and thence to pneumonia caused his death which came very suddenly at eleven o'clock. The deceased was a Glengarrian and a son of the late John McCormick of Lancaster. He was born in Lochiel on March 1, 1842. He resided in Cornwall for over twenty years, during the last dozen years or so being superintendent of roads and side walks. Previous to coming to Cornwall in 1891, he was for over a decade employed as grain buyer for Geo. McBean, Macpherson and Alexander and J. F. McGregor. Deceased is survived by his wife, a daughter of the late Captain McGillis, Meadow Bay, front of Charlottenburg, two sons and one daughter, J. A. MacCormick, of The Freeholder; Jos. N. MacCormick, of the Cornwall Electric Street Railway Company's staff, and Miss Emma MacCormick.

Don't be slow at offering a word of praise to those deserving. Tell the pastor he preached well when he does; encourage the school teacher when he or she is doing their best for the education of your son and daughter; speak approvingly of people who lead in what is for the general good of the community and cheer for the noble and the true. This old world could be delightfully brightened up if everybody undertook to scatter smiles and sunshine. Cut out the ill natured fault finding, the selfishness and the "knocking" and try the better method of getting your shoulder to the wheel. Praise the good; oppose everything that is wrong in its tendency; cultivate the helpful and hopeful and thereby aid in an optimism that will have for its object the conquering of the world.

Look Out for It.

In many localities a very peculiar silver coin has beeh in circulation for some weeks. It resembles a Canadian twenty-five cent piece very closely but the edge is not milled but smooth with the exception of a somewhat sharp ridge not found on the genuine. The attention of the finance department has been called in this coin, and an investigation will in all probability take place.

C. P. R. Brakeman Killed.

William Prescott, a C. P. R. brakeman of Smith's Falls, was fatally injured Friday night. He was making a coupling at Winchester when in some way he was knocked down and the wheels of a freight car passed over his arm cutting it off at the shoulder. He was hurried to St. Francis' hospital there where the arm was amputated. He was also badly injured about the head and succumbed to injuries about an hour after being taken there, death being caused by loss of blood and shock. Deceased was 23 years of age. He was to have been married shortly to a young lady of that place.

J. C. Milligan of Cornwall, Chosen.

At the adjourned convention of the Conservatives of Stormont held at Finch Saturday afternoon, J. C. Milligan, barrister, of Cornwall, received the unanimous nomination as standard-bearer of the party in the coming provincial election. The nomination was moved by R. A. Shearer and seconded by Hugh McMillan, the two gentleman who were also nominated at the previous meeting. There was a large gathering from all parts of the county and great enthusiasm was aroused by the action of Messrs Shearer and McMillan.

Arnprior's Sensation.

The sensational libel suit brought by Stafford R. Rudd, the wealthy Arnprior builder, against Thomas Patterson, a prominent resident of the same town for $10,000 damages for slander was terminated very suddenly, a few minutes after the assizes opened on Wednesday, by the defendant withdrawing all the slanderous remarks he had made about the plaintiff and paying all the costs of the case. A similar action was brought against Dr. W. A. Cameron of the same town and in this case. Mr. Rudd had two Toronto detectives in Arnprior for some time getting evidence against the accused and in court he swore that they had cost him $965. The damages he was awarded will just meet that expense, providing he does not lose on the appeal. The parties are all among the best known citizens of the town and the actions caused a big sensation there.

Aged Woman was Killed by a Fall.

Miss Harriett McMillan, an aged spinster, living alone in a house at Prescott, was Thursday found lying on the floor of her room in an unconscious condition with a bruise on her forehead and a coal oil lamp still burning on a table near. She died a few hours later. It is supposed that on entering the bedroom she was seized with a stroke and in falling struck her head on the side of the bed.

Hunters Found Skeleton.

The third concession of Lochiel, east of Alexandria, in fact the whole of that part of Glengarry county, is deeply stirred by the finding of a skeleton of a female in a lonesome swamp on the southern end of lot 22, by the two young sons of Dennis Jeauron, the tenant. The boys were hunting the other day when they found the skull and most of the bones of a human body Nearby they also discovered remnants of clothing, a lady's plain gold ring and a small chatelaine bag containing combs and other toilet articles, besides some money (silver) and a man's Elgin watch with goldfilled fob. The discovery was reported to the authorities and Coroner McMillan opened an inquest on Saturday. After what evidence was available the inquest was adjourned without developing much new information. From the decaying condition of the bones and clothing as well as the style of the hat found it is evident that they have lain in the swamp for nearly a half dozen years. There are many mild stories in circulation but so far there seems to be no positive identification of the remains

Fire at North Gower.

North Gower was visited by a serious fire on Friday. The fire was noticed in S. T. Craig's furniture store, and is believed to have been caused through a defective chimney. The fire rapidly gained headway and worked through the partition to J. A. Craig's drug store. A bucket brigade was formed, and with the aid of the hand engine of the town it was confined to the one building. But for their efforts the greater portion of the village would have suffered. The loss in Craig's furniture store will amount $5,000, and the damage to J. A. Craig's drug store totals $1,000.

The John Layton Company are demanding $10,000 from Controller Wanklyn of Montreal for his alleged remarks concerning a lot of preserved eggs seized at Montreal some time ago.

The Biggest Maskinonge.

J. R. Duquette, proprietor of the Algonquin House, Stanley Island, and the King George Hotel, received a message on Monday from Dr. Fred Whiting, 19 West 47th street, New York city, that he had won first prize for the biggest maskinonge caught in America in 1911. Dr. Whiting's fish was caught at Stanley Island, and weighed 39 pounds, and was 60 inches in length. Several lunge almost as large were also landed at Stanley this year, and in recent years they have gone as high as 44 pounds.

Mr. Duquette, in writing his congratulations, intimated that the ex-president of the United States was not the only man who can bring home big game.

McMahon Gets Seven Years.

Chester McMahon, alias McMann alias Darragh, alias Wright, etc., who early last week pleaded guilty to the theft of a valuable horse and rig from Geo. Markell of Wales, which he disposed of to Mr. Lawrence Jordan here, and also pleaded guilty before Hill Campbell, J. P. on Saturday of forging an order passed on J. Rodger McLauchlan, of Lancaster for $18.65 was yesterday sentenced by J. R. O'Reilly, Senior Counties Judge to seven years in Kingston penitentiary on each count, the sentences to run concurrently. McMahon who is said to hail from Paisley, Ont., will also have to face in 1918, another charge of horse stealing as he has been identified here by a farmer named Smith from Packenham as the party who, by false pretenses secured from the use of a $600 team to go after his father to close a deal for the purchase of a farm. The team was sold at Renfrew for $225.

FRENCHMEN IN AFRICA

THEY CONTROL NEARLY A THIRD OF DARK CONTINENT.

The Republic Is a Splendid Colonizing Nation and Is Doing Wonders In Developing Its Immense Holdings and In Improving the People—Railroads Run All Over the Northern Territory.

Nearly everything in Africa to-day is dominated by three great overlords—England, France and Germany. Great Britain and France together control about two-thirds of the continent, the British third being by far the most important. Germany owns only a small part of the remaining third, but its steamship and trading interests entitle it to a voice in all African councils, writes Edgar Allen Forbes in the Review of Reviews.

France excels as a colonial power. No other nation has so many fine harbors in Africa. You expect these along the Mediterranean, of couse, but not along the western coast, which is pounded by a tremendous surf from Tangier to the Cape. The writer caught his first glimpse of Casablanca just after the French army of occupation had landed—and there was the beginning of a huge breakwater that would cost millions. He went into the harbor of Dakar (French West Africa) on a heavy cargo boat—and there were docks that would be a credit to New York City. The big boat ran alongside the pier under its own steam and unloaded its freight on a capacious wharf that was provided with a branch railroad to connect with the main line. This is the French way—to provide excellent landing facilities and safe anchorages. They do not surpass the British in providing for steamship service between colony and homeland, but the Briton builds not harbors after this fashion.

Take railroads. The writer found trains to carry him all over French North Africa, with two branch lines that actually run down into the Sahara Desert—and a telegraph line that goes all the way across that burning inland sea of sand. At Dakar he found a railroad running up to the mouth of the Senegal river, where the steamer makes connection and carries freight and passengers to the head of navigation on the Senegal. There another railroad picks them up and carries them across to navigable water on the Upper Niger and turns them over to steamers that run to Timbuctu. And at Casablanca, in the land of no railroads, the first thing that he clambered over when he stepped from the surf boat was an embankment with steel rails on top—the beginning of a French military railroad. Massive bridges, macadamized highways, telephones, fine public buildings, electric railways—you meet them nearly everywhere you travel in France's African empire.

In educational policy the French are as advanced as in the material. In Tunis, for example, which is one of the younger French colonies, he found so many schools that he could not even classify them—schools for French, for Italians, for Jews, for Arabs; schools for Arabs to learn French and others for French to learn Arabic; agricultural schools, theological schools, normal schools to train native teachers. And what France has done for the Arab she is doing on a different scale for the black-skinned proteges of the west coast and of the vast interior.

A policy of conciliation marks the French official in all parts of this African empire. During all the time that the writer was in Africa he never saw a French in uniform act or speak arrogantly toward a native. The Arab and the French negro seemed to be on equal footing with the white man so far as public institutions and conveniences were concerned. The religion of the Mohammedan received a hard blow when the Frenchman came, of course, but he quickly learned that the invader would not tread roughly upon his prejudices. The privacy of his mosques was safeguarded; the tombs of his holy men were whitewashed, instead of being desecrated; his priests, by whatever name called, were utilized as local magistrates and allowed to administer justice in the old way, except in the case of grave misdemeanors. The Arab soon discovered that he could even put on the white man's uniform without racial or religious dishonor—and nearly all of French Africa is to-day guarded by brown and black-skinned men with French officers. The very fact that France entrusts her empire to the arms of the conquered races is very strong evidence that she has learned how to administer government in a land of strange prejudices.

The Frenchman expects to make his colonies pay, but he does not expect to make them pay in the beginning. Instead of raising moneys for vast railroad and harbor projects by squeezing the colonies the money is raised in France and the projects quickly executed. He has confidence in the future and therefore builds immeasurably faster than a nation that takes no chances on what to-morrow may bring forth.

The Greatest Waterfall.

The largest of earth's waterfalls is the Victoria Falls of the Zambesi River, in Rhodesia, Africa. They are 386 feet high and more than a mile wide. Niagara's height is 160 feet. The water power of the Zambesi Falls is estimated to be fully 35,000,000 horsepower, which is five times greater than that of Niagara. Some idea of the greatness of the Zambesi cataract may be got from the fact that the aggregate water power of all Europe cannot greatly exceed 35,000,000 horsepower.

HER SKIN SEEMED ON FIRE

Every Other Treatment Failed But "Fruit-a-tives" Cures

GRANDE LIGNE, QUE., Jan. 2nd, 1910.

"My wife was greatly distressed for three years with chronic Eczema on the hands, and the disease was so severe that it almost prevented her from using her hands. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, but none of them did any good. He also advised her to wear rubber gloves and she wore out three pairs without getting any benefit. As a last resort, I persuaded her to try "Fruit-a-tives", and the effect was marvellous. Not only did "Fruit-a-tives" entirely cure the Eczema. but the Asthma, which she suffered from, was also completely cured.

We both attribute our present good health to "Fruit-a-tives". N. JOUBERT.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Eczema or Salt Rheum because "Fruit-a-tives" purifies the blood, corrects the Indigestion and Constipation, and tones up the Nervous System.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices and valuable tonics, and is the greatest of all blood-purifying remedies.

50c. a box—6 for $2.50—or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Taken at His Word.

"I note that you do not appeal as often as formerly to the plain sense of the common people."

"No," answered Senator Sorghum; "I'm afraid I overworked that figure of speech. I encouraged my constituents to such an extent that they are disposed to rely on their plain sense instead of my advice."

A Simple Trick.

The man who cut one hole in his door for the cat and another for the kitten would find it difficult to pass a nickel through a hole the size of a dime cut in a stout piece of paper. This explains how easily it can be done. Fold the paper across the centre of the hole, place the nickel in the fold and bend the lower corners of the paper upward. This elongates the opening, and the coin falls through.

Two Flowers.

The dahlia was named after Andrew Dahl, a Danish botanist, who was a pupil of Linnaeus. The flower is a native of Mexico, but was first cultivated in Europe by Dahl. It was taken to England about 1804. The word daisy is a corruption of "day's eye," as the pretty flower used to be called. The old English form was "daye-sye."

Lesser of Two Evils.

"Why doesn't your wife sing to the baby when it cries?"

"Sh! We've found out that the neighbors would rather listen to the baby."

Unconventionalities.

"You mustn't mind my not asking you to stay to dinner, Mrs. Happendin. There's just about enough roast beef for our own family."

"Yes, that's a beautiful diamond, Jack, dear—if it is a diamond. Let me see the jeweler's bill for it, please."

"Hawkins, you oughtn't to let the barber cut your hair so short. It shows the shape of your head."

"You needn't have brought the book back at all, Mrs. Luxmore; as soon as you borrowed it I sent out and bought another copy."

"Migglesworth, old chap, talk to me awhile, won't you? I'm troubled with insomnia."

"Dear sir: In returning these sketches to you we suggest that you quit trying to break into the magazines. See if you can't get a job in a sawmill."

Too Much for Him.

Spanish grandees delight in numerous names, even appropriating those that belong to their wives' families. One of these distinguished dons, wandering too far into the country, went astray on a lonely road late at night. He knocked at the door of a small inn, the landlord of which from an upper window shouted:

"Who is there?"

"Don Diego de Mendoza Silva Ribero Guzman Pimetal Osario Ponce de Leon Gumaza Accrora Tellez y Giron," replied the grandee.

"In that case," interrupted the innkeeper, closing the window, "go; there is not room here for half of you."

A Short Story.

A tall girl named Short who lived nowhere in particular for long loved a certain big Mr. Little. While Little, little thinking of Short, loved a little lass who lived in an equally healthy place, her name was Long. Well, to make a long story short, Little proposed to Long, and this made Short long to get even with Little's shortcoming. So Short, meeting Long, threatened to marry Little before Long. This naturally caused Little to marry Long before long.

Now the question is, Did tall Short love big Little less because Little loved Long?

I leave it to you.

A BALLOON THAT FAILED.

It Was to Have Startled Paris In 1834, But It Refused.

A dirigible balloon, L'Aigle, was to have made a journey from the Champ de Mars on Aug. 17, 1834. The poetic wording of the prospectus is in itself a curiosity, and the aerostat also was not wanting in interest. It was forty meters long—that is, 130 feet—and fifteen in width—that is, forty-eight feet nine inches. It had the form of a monster sea fish and was inflated with hydrogen.

Within was a second envelope, which, with the aid of pumps, compressed or rarefied the air for ascending or descending, as the case might be. At the extremities were two great "roues a ailettes" for steering purposes.

There was no motor, and the navigators had to work the machinery with their hands. The car of wicker was described as a marvel of comfort, with seats for ten persons. The dirigible was to have made its ascent with the two aeronauts, MM. Lenon and Edam, who were to have been accompanied by their wives.

The prospectus of the 1834 dirigible informed the public that the inventor had constructed two years ago at Montmartre a monster machine which he raised one night far away from curious eyes to study its capabilities, but the result was not equal to his expectations. To-day, after great improvements, the apparatus was ready for victory.

This would be achieved in the presence of a great concourse of spectators, and the inventor and his wife, with several people, would make the ascent. Given favorable wind, two hours would be sufficient for the journey to London, which is ninety-eight leagues from Paris. The itinerary was indicated with great precision.

But in spite of the magnificent promises and after the expenditure of great trouble and energy the apparatus was got to the Champ de Mars, but beyond that it would not move. The crowd was enraged and smashed the machine.—Paris Letter.

A Portrait That Fascinates.

To be one of the forty immortals is the ambition of the great men of France, says the Florence correspondent of The Hamburger Fremdenblatt, and so it is the ambition of great painters—and it has been for over 500 years—to have their self-painted portraits in the gallery set aside for that purpose in Florence. The list of those who have contributed their likenesses would include hundreds whose names properly belong under the head of "great," from the wonderful girl-like head of Raphael to Josef Israels, the latest in the collection, which has a place of honor in a room all by itself. The artist has depicted himself as a very old man, with sunken cheeks, matted white beard, eyes obscured by heavy lenses and wearing a shapeless hat of uncertain color. There is nothing beautiful about it, but it fascinates the observer, who marvels at the product of old, old age.

Greatest of Infant Prodigies.

Perhaps the most marvelous infant prodigy on record was Christian Heinecker, born at Lubeck, Feb. 6, 1721. At the age of ten months he could speak and repeat every word which was said to him, when twelve months old he knew by heart the principal events narrated in the Pentateuch, in his second year he knew most of the Bible by heart, and before he was three he learned to speak Latin and French. In his fourth year he employed himself in the study of religion and the history of the church, and his fame as a scholar spread so that the King of Denmark sent for him and was amazed at his learning. But before he was five years of age he fell sick and died.—London Chronicle.

Retold Stories.

The girl was telling the man an anecdote, and a queer look passed over his face. The girl stopped, embarrassed. "I am afraid I have told you this story before," she stammered.

"Yes, you have," the man admitte dfrankly, "but don't worry. It isn't half so bad as what happened to me yesterday. A man told me a story that I had originally told him. Worse yet, he got all mixed on it, lost the point entirely and then expected me to laugh at it."

"And you couldn't?"

"Oh, yes, I could, but not the way he thought."

Prepared For the Worst.

"Out in the cyclone district," confides a man who is just back from an automobile vacation trip, "I saw a farmer building a stone wall around his place. Believe me, that was some wall. It was four feet high and six feet wide. I asked him about it, and he said, 'I'm buildin' this here wall to stick.' 'It won't do you any good,' says I. 'A cyclone will tumble it over.' 'Let it,' says the farmer. The wall will be two foot higher if it does fall over!'"

Candied Apples.

Put a cupful of brown sugar with a little water on to boil, and when it threads dip sound tart apples in the candy and cover thickly. Put a stick in the apple to hold by. You will have something to please the little ones, and it won't harm them either.

Gentlemen,—Your agent, Mr. F. W. Merkley, of Chesterville, sold me one of your Kemp Spreaders, 70 bushels capacity, on conditions that it worked satisfactorily. I feel, therefore, that it is my duty to let you know how I found the Spreader to work. I may say we took out 140 loads of manure, some coarse and some fine, and after using it to put out those 140 loads I will freely say that your Spreader is a marvellous piece of machinery. We used one team weighing about 2400 lbs., no more, and they did it easily. I consider the Spreader one of the most up-to-date machines on the market, and I would most cheerfully recommend the Kemp Spreader to anyone who wants a first-class article in every respect, and I furthermore give this testimonial unsolicited, and anyone wanting any further information can call and I will freely give them my opinion on it.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) GEORGE CARLYLE, Con. 8, Lot 35, Dunbar, Ont.

Williamsburg Council.

Pursuant to adjournment the council met in Barkley's Hall, Bouck's Hill, on Saturday, Nov. 4. Members all present. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. The reeve and the clerk were authorized to sign the contract of Samuel W. Allison and S. O. Kendrick re Merkley-Kendrick drain and attach the corporate seal thereon. The clerk was instructed to notify James Gow to repair the sluice on the gravel road in the 5th concession, opposite lot 14. The engineer in charge of the Barkley-Fetterly drain was recommended to make a change in said drain on the east side of lot 12 in the 7th concession, by following the original survey line, providing said change be legal. S. I. Casselman was authorized to remove a stone on the west townline and level a sluice on the given road, 5th concession, lot 37. The council agreed to furnish the gravel for a road job on the east townline providing Osnabruck council will accept it to meet a grant of $25 made by said Osnabruck council. The superintendent of the north-east ward was instructed to sell the job of building a sluice on the headline between the 6th and 7th concessions, and one on the nine-mile road crossing the Barkley-Fetterly drain. A resolution ordering M. A. Froats to pay the sum of $1.50 for hired team to move the grader from his place to Bouck's Hill was passed. Automobile Burned.

Ottawa, Nov. 17—Fifty thousand dollars' worth of automobiles were burned this afternoon, when the garage of Park & McVeity on Sparks street caught fire by the explosion of a gasoline torch held by a mechanic. Fifty automobiles were stored on the premises, but half of them were saved. The fire started at 3 o'clock and lasted until 5. Three hundred gallons of gasoline were stored in the tanks below, but they proved the worth of a fire proof construction. The value of the building burned was $15,000.

A deputation from McGill University asked Premier Gouin of Quebec for an annual grant of $100,000.

AVONMORE.

Mrs Uriah Shaver passed away suddenly at her home here on Tuesday, 7th inst. The deceased had been about her work as usual on Monday, but was seized with a pain in the head in the evening and died the following morning. Mrs Shaver was a daughter of the late James Martin. sr., and one daughter, Mr. Clarence Shaver and Mrs M. McLennan of Avonmore. The funeral took place on the 9th inst. to the Presbyterian Church and cemetery South of the village. The service was conducted by Rev. S. D. McPhee, assisted by Rev. Mr. Quinn, of the Methodist Church. The pall-bearers were Messrs George and Silas Shaver, Wm. S. N. Hough, James Martin, M. McLennan and Wm. Brownell. Among the relatives present were Messrs W. A. Gallinger and Ernest W. Martin, of Cornwall, cousin and nephew, respectively of the deceased. The bereaved relatives have the sympathy of the community.

Mixed Marriages.

Toronto Nov. 18—The fulminations of the pulpit and the press against mixed marriages and the religious bitterness that has been fomented since the issuance of the Ne Temere degree, do not seem to have appreciably diminished the number of such alliances according to the vital statistics which have been complied by the registrar general's department and were announced yesterday.

On the contrary the ubiquitions cupid has recked little of denominal barriers and mixed marriages were contracted in an astonishing extent.

Out of the total of 7,351 Roman Catholics no less than 1,509 married out of their denomination. There were 665 Catholic bridegrooms who married non-Catholic brides and 884 professed Catholic girls who became the brides of non-Catholic bridegrooms. Of these marriages the larger number were between Catholics and Anglicans, then came Presbyterians, Baptists and Lutherans in order, but rather strangely no marriages between a Roman Catholic and a member of of the Salvation Army is recorded while two Roman Catholic men married Jewesses and five Roman Catholic ladies threw in their fate with as many Jews. In addition to this two Jews married Anglicans, two Presbyterians, six Methodists, two Baptist, one of a Congregationalist and four persons who are described as being of no denomination. Of the seven Jewesses who married out of their faith, five married Anglicans and two Roman Catholics.

A Simple Trick.

The man who cut one hole in his door for the cat and another for the kitten would find it difficult to pass a nickel through a hole the size of a dime cut in a stout piece of paper. This explains how easily it can be done. Fold the paper across the centre of the hole, place the nickel in the fold and bend the lower corners of the paper upward. This elongates the opening, and the coin falls through.

Two Flowers.

The dahlia was named after Andrew Dahl, a Danish botanist, who was a pupil of Linnaeus. The flower is a native of Mexico, but was first cultivated in Europe by Dahl. It was taken to England about 1804. The word daisy is a corruption of "day's eye," as the pretty flower used to be called. The old English form was "daye-sye."

Lesser of Two Evils.

"Why doesn't your wife sing to the baby when it cries?"

"Sh! We've found out that the neighbors would rather listen to the baby."

Unconventionalities.

"You mustn't mind my not asking you to stay to dinner, Mrs. Happendin. There's just about enough roast beef for our own family."

"Yes, that's a beautiful diamond, Jack, dear—if it is a diamond. Let me see the jeweler's bill for it, please."

"Hawkins, you oughtn't to let the barber cut your hair so short. It shows the shape of your head."

"You needn't have brought the book back at all, Mrs. Luxmore; as soon as you borrowed it I sent out and bought another copy."

"Migglesworth, old chap, talk to me awhile, won't you? I'm troubled with insomnia."

"Dear sir: In returning these sketches to you we suggest that you quit trying to break into the magazines. See if you can't get a job in a sawmill."

Too [illegible] for Him.

Spanish grandees delight in numerous names, even appropriating those that belong to their wives' families. One of these distinguished dons, wandering too far into the country, went astray on a lonely road late at night. He knocked at the door of a small inn, the landlord of which from an upper window shouted:

"Who is there?"

"Don Diego de Mendoza Silva Ribero Guzman Pimetal Osario Ponce de Leon Gumaza Accrora Tellez y Giron," replied the grandee.

"In that case," interrupted the innkeeper, closing the window, "go; there is not room here for half of you."

A Short Story.

A tall girl named Short who lived nowhere in particular for long loved a certain big Mr. Little. While Little, little thinking of Short, loved a little lass who lived in an equally healthy place, her name was Long. Well, to make a long story short, Little proposed to Long, and this made Short long to get even with Little's shortcoming. So Short, meeting Long, threatened to marry Little before Long. This naturally caused Little to marry Long before long.

Now the question is, Did tall Short love big Little less because Little loved Long?

I leave it to you.

WHO IS RIGHT?

Contradictery Statements Concerning Route to Long Life.

In these days of positive assertion and flat contradiction on the part of those who patiently search the remotest corners of our being for latent signs that they may tell us what we must do to be saved for a long and comparatively painless life, so many conflicting theories have been advanced that men are at a loss as to the safest course to pursue. For instance, we have been told that tobacco, alcohol, meat and our "wear and tear" system of rapid living were all "life-shorteners as well as pain-producers." Now comes a learned man who, in effect, says Bosh! Of course, anyone could say that, but Dr. Marc Armand Ruffer, the Egyptian representative of the International Bureau of Hygiene, Paris, and president of the Sanitary Council of Egypt, backs up his statement with some pretty good proof.

Dr. Ruffer has been holding autopsies on very ancient mummies, dissecting the well preserved remains of Egyptian rulers, princes and day laborers who lived, toiled and died thousands of years ago and examining their arteries to see if he could find any traces of the wasting diseases and bodily decay which other scientists have always supposed were of quite modern origin due to the wear and tear of the strenuous conditions under which we of to-day live.

Most interesting, especially to those who believe in the use of tobacco and wines in moderation, Dr. Ruffer has found that the nerves and general physical condition of modern man living under modern conditions are not a bit worse than were those of the ancient Egyptian, who didn't know anything about tobacco and consequently didn't indulge. According to the report of Dr. Ruffer, prepared for the Journal of Pathology and Bacteriology, he has learned enough from his examination of Egyptian mummies to dispose of many conflicting theories regarding arteriosclerosis and allied arterial degenerations. These wasting diseases, which have been regarded as of modern origin, has been held up as pathological "horrible examples" by anti-tobacconists, total abstainers, diet faddists of various kinds, contemners of athletics and of the wear and tear of modern life.

Dr. Ruffer is satisfied beyond any doubt that "the old Egyptians suffered as much as we do now from arterial lesions identical with those found at present. Moreover, when we consider that few of the arteries were quite healthy, it would appear that such lesions were as frequent 3,000 years ago as they are to-day."

As to causation, Dr. Ruffer considers that tobacco can certainly be eliminated, as this drug was not used in ancient Egypt. While alcoholic beverages played a part of Egyptian social life, Dr. Ruffer holds that it is clear that the Egyptians, as a race, are not, and never have been, habitual drunkards. Moreover, Dr. Ruffer has found the disease just as common in over 800 post-mortems of Mussulmans who had certainly never touched alcohol in their lives. This fact has led him to call in question the importance of alcohol as a cause of arterial disease.

Meat is something of a luxury in Egypt, and Dr. Ruffer's experience in Egypt and the east has not strengthened the opinion that meat eating is a cause of arterial disease. Finally, he holds that strenuous muscular exercise can be excluded as a cause, for there is no evidence that ancient Egyptians were greatly addicted to athletic sports, though they liked watching professional acrobats and dancers.

Icebergs.

The great breeding place of icebergs is western Greenland. The mountainous belt of Greenland is everywhere penetrated by deep arms of the sea, which reach to the inland ice and are terminated by perpendicular walls of huge glaciers. All of these glaciers are making their way to the ocean, and as their ends are forced out into the water they are broken off and set adrift as bergs. The sizes of the pieces thus broken off vary, but a berg 200 to 250 feet in height and whose length may be from 300 to 500 yards is considered to be of ordinary size in the Arctic. The volume is, of course, lessened as the berg gets farther south.

A Girl's Way.

"Why do you keep asking me to be your wife? You surely wouldn't want me to marry you if I don't love you."

"No, I don't want you to marry me if you don't love me, but I can't help thinking the practice I'm getting in asking you may some time come in handy. Now I'm going to give you another chance to turn me down."

"Oh, well, if you're determined to have me I suppose I may as well say yes."

Great Scheme.

Jorkins—There's Perkins—you know Perkins?—entered into an agreement with his wife soon after their marriage, twenty years ago, that whenever either lost their temper or stormed the other was to keep silence.

Bob—And the scheme worked?

Jorkins—Admirably. Perkins has kept silence for twenty years.

Chili Sauce.

Twelve ripe tomatoes, four small onions, three small peppers, three tablespoonfuls of salt, six tablespoonfuls of sugar, three cupfuls of vinegar. Chop all very fine and cook away nearly one-half.

THE FALL FIGURE.

Drooping, Long-Necked and Slender Shouldered, It's Truly Feminine.

Some people have said that there would not be any notable change in the fall styles, but the simple-minded on-looker gets the impression that there will be an alteration quite fundamental and revolutionizing. Woman's figure is to change. It isn't going to be any simple little alteration, such as sliding from the waist line up or down a few inches from its historical position. It is a more disturbing upheaval than that. Her shoulders, which have been square for upward of ten years, are now to slope! The Mona Lisa, or the beer bottle figure—whichever concrete image you prefer to call the present shape to the mind—will be the one in vogue. Woman is now to be tall from the shoulders up. After practicing all of her life to stand square, she is now engaged in assiduous practice to let herself droop. Those women who flaunted their natural box shoulders that have needed any padding are retiring to the background of the world of fashion. The shoulders will droop, the neck will be long, and the hat will be high.

The figure will be soft and rounded, but it will not comprise hips. All of the figure will be from the waist up. There will be a certain tip or dip or slant—wait till you see it, and then you will understand that the word has not yet been born to name it—in the carriage of the Mona Lisas who will shortly flower in abundance on the streets of our cities. There will be a careless ease about her when later in the day she wanders over velvet carpets in her dinner dress, her little pointed train sometimes appearing to the right, the centre, and, sometimes, to the left of her feet.

She who will tread our streets and prepare our dinners and rear our children will not for the present be a tailor-made type. She will be soft and cocie and ingratiating. For how can the woman who droops, who wears headgear ascending into a pointed crown, who affects the sweet, retiring look, keep from modifying her thoughts to harmonize with her bearing?

Not a great change in the fall styles! Forsooth! Has suffrage received such a menace since it first became popular? The aggressive woman will not enlist sympathy when she mounts a platform to defend her inalienable rights, dressed to look like her great-great-grandmother, with a piquant expression on her face and her sloping shoulders drooped.

Careful Child.

"Is your little boy sick with anything?" asked the lad of the lady who had just moved in next door and who had asked him to come over and play with her little boy.

"No, indeed," she smiled. "Why?"

"'Cause I've had my tonsils taken out an' my adenoids removed an' my appendix cut out, an' I been vaccinated an' serumized for typhoid an' spinal meningitis, an' I've had antitoxin injected, an' I do hope I won't have to have anything done to me this year, so I can have a little bit o' fun for awhile."

Cause For Suspicion.

"George, I believe your love for me is growing cold."

"What has put such a foolish idea as that into your pretty head?"

"I notice that when I have one of my pouty spells and refuse to kiss you good-bye in the morning you don't seem to act any more as if the light had gone out of your life or even as if you didn't expect to find me here on your return."

He Got the Pin.

A fat man stooped to pick up a pin and lost his balance. An indulgent motorman, unwilling to run over the prostrate form, brought his car to a sudden stop at a place where the power rail was cut, and a bystander figured that for five minutes there was a blockade of 100 trolley cars, fifty automobiles and taxicabs and several thousand people. The man got the pin.

Brief Pleasure.

"It is a treat to see the way a pretty girl tucks a violin under her chin."

"Yes, but too often the treat ends when she begins to play."

It Looked Good to Him.

The teacher was demonstrating the powerful corrosive effects of intoxicating beverages upon a stomach's lining. The class looked on with horror when she poured some 95 per cent. alcohol on an egg, thereby causing it to shrivel and coagulate. The demonstrator was pleased to observe the interest displayed by the janitor, who had come in for the wastebaskets. It was well known that he had need of such a warning.

"Ma'm," he asked timidly, "wud you mind telling me where you buy yer licker?"

The Needful.

In a certain Canadian city, there is a handsome building, in course of erection, which is evidently intended for educational use. This summer a visitor remarked on the structure and asked what was its purpose.

"Household Science Department" was the reply—"cooking as a fine art."

"It's going to take a lot of money," was the comment.

"Cooking usually calls for dough," came the reply.

Mr. Kyle's Sale of Holsteins.

A very representative crowd attended Mr. Sam Kyle's sale of registered Holsteins held at North Winchester on Nov. 14th. If the roads had been good, it is safe to say that it would have been a record sale for attendance, for notwithstanding the cold, disagreeable weather and the bad condition of the roads, people interested in buying Holsteins were present from the counties of Carleton, Wright, Glengarry, Prescott, Stormont, Russel, Dundas and Leeds.

Considering that the cattle lacked fitting and had no official records of milk production, the prices realized were very satisfactory, going to the following buyers at the prices mentioned.

Thurza Concordin DeKol No. 4327, calved December 31st, 1902, sold to Thos. McConnell, Cannamore, for $105.

A two-year-old heavy draft colt was sold to D. Campbell, Russell, for $275, J. W. Arbuthnot, of Northfield Station, paid $296 for a brood mare, and Geo. Dunbar, of North Valley, Ont., got the yearling colt for $130. H. Merkley got an old horse for $82.

The sheep, including some lambs, brought $8.50 each. The purchaser was Mr. A. Ouderkirk. The bees brought from $2.00 to $2.50 a hive, the hens 40 cents each, and the potatoes 80 cents a bushel.

Mr. Kyle's sale was advertised in The Record. It pays to use the Record in announcing auction sales. Mr. Jas. Currie wielded the hammer at Mr. Kyle's sale.

P. Cain, of Connaught, paid $90 for a bull not catalogued.

From present appearances it would seem likely that the incoming council of Chesterville would have to face an action for damages by the water courses being filled up with ground while grading some of the streets in town. It is a well known fact that this procedure is strictly against the law.

The Liberals of Stormont County in convention at Finch on Wednesday, unanimously nonimated F. Mulhern, mayor of Cornwall, as their standard bearer in the approaching election. Several gentlemen were nominated, but all withdrew their names.

As Christmas falls on the last Monday of the year, municipal elections will take place on the previous Friday, December 22nd. The municipal elections, however, will be on New Year's Day, Monday, January 1st. So far there is very little talk as to the probable composition of next year's council.

While preparing to visit her son, John Brown of Berwick, Mrs W. J. Brown of Chard, Prescott County died suddenly of heart failure on Friday evening, Oct. 27. Deceased was in her usual good health and did not complain in any way and had been about her usual household duties up to the time of her death. Her maiden name was Margaret J. Ryan and she was born and brought up at Pendleton She was well known at L'Original as she was the first matron of the House of Refuge, where Mr. Brown was superintendent for three years and where she had made a host of friends. After spending a few months in Los Angeles, Cal., Mr. and Mrs Brown returned to their home there. She was in her 62nd year and leaves her sorrowing husband, three sons and three daughters. The sons are John W. Brown, merchant of Berwick; Reuben G. Brown, Chard, and Vincent D. Brown at home; the daughters are Mrs Eli Therrien of Chard, Mrs W. G. McCauiey of Ettyville and Mrs W. Sullivan of Ottawa.

At their last meeting the Iroquois Village Council decided to submit a By-law for the repeal of the Local Option By-law to the ratepayers at the Municipal election on Jan. 1. A couple of weeks ago a petition was presented to the Council, which was intended to ask for a vote on the repeal, but the form was not regular as it asked for the granting of licenses instead of the repeal of the Local Option By-law. The Councils have the discretionary power to submit By-laws for or against Local Option, without a petition and the Iroquois Council, realizing the intention of the signers of the irregular petition, resolved to let the people decide. Consequently both parties are satisfied as the temperance people are perfectly organized and go into the fight cheerfully. The motion to submit the By-law was moved by N. D. Snetsinger, seconded bp Mr. Munroe, and carried, Mr. Render voting with the mover and seconder. The Reeve asked for a show of hands, when he and Mr. Brouse voted "nay."

Bill to Amend Marriage Act.

Ottawa, Nov. 20—Three bills were introduced in the House today by Mr. Lancaster (Lincoln). The first was his proposed amendment to the Marriage Act, asserting the validity of every marriage solemnized in Canada by a person duly authorized to perform such ceremonies, no matter what his religion or the religions of the contracting parties. Mr. Lancaster said that a doubt had been cast upon the validity of certain marriages by the decision of a court in one of the provinces. Such doubts should not, he felt, be allowed to exist in Canada. A second bill proposes an amendment to the Dominion Election Act, providing that no elector shall be allowed to vote in more than one constituency. It has been possible for persons in Quebec to vote in all ridings in which they have the necessary property qualification. Mr. Lancaster also introduced a bill dealing with the protection of level railway crossings. He said that municipalities were now paying taxes to the Federal Government, yet they were compelled to share with that Government the expense of protecting dangerous crossings. He considered this requirement an injustice to the municipalities and his bill proposed to remove it.

Killed by Husband who Escapes Police.

Montreal Nov. 21—Returning from work at the Canada Paint Company's factory this evening to her home 258 Chateauguay st., where her two children, one eighteen months and the other three months old, were awaiting her, Mrs John Cummings, aged 19, was shot and instantly killed by her husband tnis evening. The murder was committed about fifty yards from the house in which the woman was living.

Mrs Cummings was accompanied by Ed. L. Packer, a young man boarding in the same house, when the shots were fired. Her husband according to the youth's story, must have stepped out from behind a gateway, for the first shot struck the woman in back. She turned and her husband said; "Its me Bella, this is for you," firing again and fatally wounding her.

John Cummings, the murderer disappeared immediately, after the shooting. There were few people about. Up to a late hour to-night he had not been found.

Another lively debate took place in Parliament on the address.

Child Beater Faces Trial.

Brockville, Ont. Nov. 18—When the case of Miss Nora McCrea, the Merrickville school teacher, charged with a vicious assault upon Helen McCoubrie a pupil of Soper's school, was disposed in the police court and defendant admitted to bail, it was thought that the next round would be fought at the general sessions of the peace.

Her solicitor, however, has decided to take chances on a trial before the county judge without the intervention of a jury, and made application accordingly before Judge McDonald, who fixed the hearing for Friday, Dec. 1, The same bail as accepted in the police court was renewed for the appearances of the defendant.

Just what the outcome of the case will be is a matter of conjecture in view of the father of the child having accepted $500 in consideration of damages and his willingness to drop criminal proceedings. The charge is laid by the agent of the Children's Aid Society and the Crown does not recognize any momentary reimbursement taken by McCoubrie, but will press the prosecution to the end, leaving it in the discretion of the court as to what disposition should be made of the affair.

It is understood that McCoubrie has taken legal advice with regard to the settlement made between himself and Miss McCrea, and maintain that he has been informed that he can hold the money, even is Miss McCrea is adjudged guilty or otherwise, seeing that he did not initiate her prosecution.

On the other hand, Miss McCrea will seek to recover the cash, no matter which way the case goes, and relatives have assured aid in the stand taken by her. Agent Traill, of the Children's Aid, who had charge of the assaulted child before she was adopted by McCoubrie is anxious that the money should be placed to her credit, if the court decides that McCoubrie is legally entitled to it, and it is said he will make a strong proposition to have his views carried into effect.

When he last heard from the child she was progressing favorably though still under the care of the family physician near Frankville. She is expected to be sufficiently well to attend the trial of Miss McCrea on Dec. 1. In the meantime, matters are at a standstill.

Mr. Solman Dawson, an aged resident of Guelph, is dead.

Two high-graders were arrested at Cabalt with a quantity of ore in their possession.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency, or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months, residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn the homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot take a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.

For the Children

The Sad Fate of a Fighting Crow.

The hero of this sad tale is or was Jim Crow. He was captured in the woods from the nest in which he was born. At first he would not eat, but when bread soaked in water was forced into his mouth he got a fine appetite. In a short time he became very tame and kept his master busy digging worms in the garden to satisfy his hunger. If his wants were not immediately attended to he would scream loudly. Then as he grew strong he began to annoy the hens in the yard, stealing their food and sometimes pecking the chickens. One day he made a grievous mistake, however. He attacked a gamecock which was strutting about the yard, and the fun began. Poor Jim was no match for the gamecock, and when he was finally secured he was a sorry sight. That was enough for Jim, and thereafter he steered clear of the poultry yard.

A Fine Toy Ship.

Did you ever know a boy who wasn't proud to own a toy boat? The emperor of Germany owns a miniature boat that would delight the heart of every boy. It is an heirloom in the imperial German family, having been given by William IV. of England to Frederick William III., great-grandfather of the present emperor. The boat is a full rigged, three masted warship, fifty-five feet in length, drawing but four feet of water and having a capacity of thirty tons. Emperor William's favorite amusement when a boy was to sail in this boat. His brother, Prince Henry, always went with him. This man-of-war can sail the water the same as the largest ship, but the crew must of necessity be limited in number. The name of this great toy is the Royal Louise, after the Prussian Queen Louise.

It was built on the Thames in 1832 and was towed down the river and across the North sea by a steamer to Hamburg. From this place it was floated by a flat barge up the Elbe into the havel at Potsdam, where it still remains.

Table Manners.

Don't—
Put your elbows on the table.
Trifle with your knife and fork.
Clink the glasses together.
Tuck the napkin in your collar.
Fold the napkin when dining out.
Convey food to your mouth with your knife.
Mash food with fork.
Hold knife and fork in the air while plate is being replenished.
Place soiled knife or fork on the table linen.
Allow spoon to stand in cup while drinking from it.
Blow on soup to reduce its temperature.
Drink from the end of a spoon.
Masticate the food noisily.
Converse with your mouth full.
Hold food in the air while conversing.
Bite mouthfuls of bread from a slice.
Precede older members to the table.
Use a toothpick at the table.

Streets of New York City.

New York city streets have a mileage of nearly 3,740, which is exactly the distance between New York and London. There are 1,905 miles of paved streets, which if placed in a connected line would reach from New York to Amarillo, Texas. The sheet and block asphalt paved streets aggregate 805 miles, equal to the distance between New York and Detroit. There are 643 miles of macadam streets.

The Dandelion.

Little Dandelion
When she came to town
Seemed a bit of sunshine
In her yellow gown.
Playthings, too, she carried,
Funny little toys
For the happy schoolgirls
And the country boys.
Watch chains, oh, so splendid!
Little barefoot Dan
Wearing his in triumph,
Felt himself a man.
Curls for Prue and Polly
Tucked in bonnets small
Made them grown up ladies
Going out to call.
So she scattered treasures
Up the road and down,
Through the sunny pastures,
Through the dusty town.
When her task was ended
On a summer's day
While the breeze was blowing
Up she flew away.
On her soft wings riding,
Far she sailed and high,
And the children, watching,
Waved a fond goodby.

INSECT SENSE OF SMELL.

Ants Are Said to Recognize Their Different Species By Odor.

Students of the behavior of ants are well aware of the fact that they will not tolerate strange ants in their nests. If a foreign, even though of the same species and indistinguishable to human eyes from the lawful inhabitants of the nest, strays in from another nest she is apt to emerge hastily, pursued and attacked by the ants which belong there. How do they know that she is a foreigner? It does not seem likely that among the thousands of ants belonging to the nest another ant of exactly the same species should be recognized as a stranger by her appearance. The English naturalist Lord Avebury in his book on "Ants, Bees and Wasps" records some experiments to test the possibility that ants may recognize their nest mates through some movement of the feelers or antennae, with which they sometimes seem to greet each other when they meet.

He stupefied with alcohol ants from different nests and placed them near one of the nests. The ants from that nest came out and carried their helpless nest mates home, but threw the bodies of their enemies away. Evidently friend and foe were distinguished by something other than their behavior.

A German physiologist, Bethe, solved the problem in the following way: He suspected that ants from a foreign nest might have an odor that excited the warlike instincts of ants in the home nest. Accordingly he took a number of ants from one nest, killed them and crushed their bodies so that the body fluids were pressed out. Taking some live ants from a second nest, he first dipped them in water and alcohol and then into the body fluids of the other ants. He then returned them to their own nest. Their nest mates fell upon them as if they were driven out and in some instances killed.

On the other hand, Bethe found that the foreign nest, the odor of which they now presumably bore, would receive peaceably the ants which had undergone the transforming treatment.

Other observers have confirmed these results of Bethe's for many species of ants. The truth, then, seems to be that any ant odor differing from their own puts the ants into a warlike attitude.

It is true that this explanation requires one to suppose that a different odor belongs to every ant nest, and this seems hard to believe, yet nothing else appears to account for the facts.

There are many other remarkable things about the sense of small insects, and it must be remembered that the sense of smell in human beings is far inferior to that of some animals—for example, the dog. Man cannot judge the capacities of other animals in the matter of smell by his own poor performances.

A Costly Grudge.

The most expensive act of damage ever committed by a railway worker was that of an Italian navvy employed on the construction of a tunnel through one of the mountains in the Black Forest. Having a grudge against his foreman, he succeeded one night in altering the position of the stakes which marked the course of the work. The excavators were working upon the tunnel in two sections, one from the north and one from the south. Owing to the shifting of the stakes the sections instead of being directed to the same point were found to be twenty-six feet apart when they reached the middle of the mountain. The northern half of the tunnel had therefore to be entirely reconstructed at a cost of $875,000.—London Chronicle.

The Matrimonial Game.

"Politics is like marriage, and you know what the pretty widow said about marriage at the seashore." The speaker smiled and continued:

"A somewhat passe summer girl, at the end of a season that had left her further off than ever from the matimonial harbor, looked sadly seaward and said:

" 'Well, marriage is a lottery.'

"But a fair young widow whose engagement to a millionaire of fifty-two summers had just been announced—this fair young widow with a toss of the head retorted:

" 'Don't you believe it. It's a game of skill.' "

What He Was Practicing.

When a leading citizen of a small town returned thither after a prolonged sojourn abroad he made a tour of the place to find out how all his old friends were "getting along."

At one establishment he found a youth, the son of an old friend of his, whose father was stilling paying his office rent.

"Practicing law now, Jim?" asked the returned one genially.

"No, sir," replied the youth frankly; "I appear to be, but I am really practicing economy."
