LOCAL AND GENERAL

It looks like fine weather for the Winchester Fair to-morrow.

If you want to see some real expert work in the air, see Capt. Maynard and his aeroplane at the Winchester Fair Friday afternoon.

In Quebec motorists are compelled to come to a "dead stop" at railway crossing. In Ontario too many are "dead" when they come to a stop at a railroad crossing.

Grand Dance, Froat's Hall, Williamsburg, Monday, September 23rd. Smirle's 5 piece Orchestra.

Six persons were killed in an aeroplane crash at St. Catherines, Ont., on Sunday last. Between fool air craft pilots and fool motor car drivers a lot of good Canadians are being hurried into eternity.

The new 1930 car markers for Ontario will have letters as well as numbers and all numbers will be under 10 000. The cost to the department is 12.9 cents per pair, but this has no significance in the ultimate cost of a pair to the car owner.

Hon. Mr. Henry, Minister of Highways, says that a law will be passed whereby careless or reckless motor car drivers will have their permits cancelled as well as being fined. This may prove a preventative measure, but the victims of the reckless drivers would like to deal more severely with them.

Miss Clara Irving will resume her Music Class for the Fall and Winter terms, beginning Tuesday, Sept. 10.

An old farmer made a trip to the city and decided to startle the wife by appearing in brand new raiment. To save wear on the new suit he placed it in the back of the wagon. A few miles from home he took off his old clothes and tossed them off a bridge into the river. He was surprised to see that the new clothes had dropped out of the wagon. "Giddap, Maude," yelled the old man, pulling down his shirt tail as he realized his plight. "We'll surprize her anyhow!"

The United States Department of Agriculture announces: It is now possible for milk to make the entire journey from cow to consumer without contact with the air until it is opened for use. Grandpa wouldn't have believed it, and if he had he would have said it was silly. In his day cows were milked in an open bucket by hand, while flies, dust and millions of bacteria swarmed over the pail. It was grandpa's idea that thunder made milk sour and as far as he was concerned or even interested the bacterial count per cubic centimeter was a lot of applesauce. A modern generation thinks differently and barnyard milking has given place to dairy science.

Let everyone patronize the Money Shower for the Band on Thursday evening, September 26th, eight to eleven p. m. in the Town Hall. Let the Town and Country people show their appreciation of the splendid music furnished by the Band this summer. Give the Band a Boost.

Penny Bank Savings

While the quarterly statement of the Penny Bank just issued showed that the public school children of Winchester School have increased their savings as compared with last year, the figures being for 1928, $560.68 and for 1929 $700.72, the percentage per pupil is only 11 cents which is rather low for Winchester. With a little urging and advising there is no doubt as to the result being more satisfactory. The Winchester Public School should show at least an average of 25 cts.

Many Applications, Few Granted

The Cornwall Freeholder says there are over 1000 applications before the Old Age Pension Board, but up to the present only about 45 have been approved. Many are wrongly made out. Members of the Old Age Pensions Board include Reeve Wesley Hamilton, Chesterville; Reeve Henry Williams, Cornwall; Reeve George Pollock, Finch township; Reeve J. R. McLachlan, Lancaster, and Reeve J. A. McCrimmon, Dunvegan.

Infantile Paralysis

Health authorities are warning parents to call in their doctor at once if they notice in any of their children the following signs of sickness, as they may indicate early stages of infantile paralysis. It is imperative there should be early treatment if permanent paralysis is to be averted.

Headache, poor appetite, dull eyes, thirsty, sore throat, stiff neck. These are some of the early symptoms.

A child with these symptoms should be in bed. A doctor should be sent for. The only time to prevent paralysis is before any weakness appears in arms or legs.

Usually the child is not very well for a little time before paralysis is indicated. The average ailing period is about four or five days. It may, however, be only 12 hours, or as long as two weeks.

If parents hear of contagious disease in their district they should not be allowed to attend picnics or parties or to play with a number of other children. They should not run the streets, or be allowed to attend movies.

Children should be made to wash their hands before meals.

Milk should be boiled for three minutes before it is given to children.

Pencils or other articles should not be put in their mouths by children. Saliva is carried by this means from mouth to mouth, and thus infection may be spread.

Blood serum has been found to be the most effective cure

If a child is sick consult a doctor at once. No chances should be taken with this disease. Permanent paralysis has resulted even from delay in treatment. If the patient is treated soon enough this can be prevented.

The United Church

Rev. J A. Waddell gave an interesting talk to the children Sunday morning, on Milton, the poet, who, he said, did his best and was never satisfied with anything less. In like manner he advised the young people to give to the world their best and then the best will come back to them.

For his text he chose words of our Master, uttered near the close of his earthly life: John 16:33. It was a time of great stress but his heart of love shone out as never before. In times of discouragement Jesus gives us this heartening message of hope and courage. Our mission is to be distributors of good cheer.

The many friends of a former pastor, Rev. John Webster, were delighted to once more listen to him at the evening service when he brought a message full of power and sincerity, despite his years which sit lightly upon him. He preaches almost incessantly, although superannuated. He spoke from the latter part of verse 10, Psalm 94, naming the educational institutions where the young people receive their life training—the home, the community, business life, nature, and the Church. He said the home very important. The child comes into it with wonderful possibilities.

Mr Webster threw out a challenge to anyone present that he had more real joy and satisfaction in the service of God than they could find in anything else. He said: "The community has to be purified." "You are making the community" When people ask him: "Is it right to do this?" His reply is: "If you can get on your knees and ask God's blessing upon it, and feel that it will make a better man or woman of you, then go ahead and do it?" To those who say they do not see anything wrong in certain sins, his advice always is: "Come up higher, and get a clearer vision, then you will be able to see how terrible sin is. He closed this wonderful message by reciting the words of the hymn—"My Jesus I love Thee."

A very pleasing solo was sung by Mr. Wiseman of Napanee.

Rally Day for the Sunday School will be observed at 11 a. m. on Sunday Sept. 29th.

Waddell Mrs. Karl Helmer, Mrs. D G Hutt, Mrs. Duncan McElheran of Chesterville; Mrs. S. Hyndman, Mrs. Fred Helmer, Mrs Sherman Ball and Mr. Rupert Helmer. Preceding the christening, tea was served. Rev. Mr. Waddell performed the ceremony.

"Dr. McKeown wishes to thank his many friends of Winchester and vicinity for their support during the past twenty years, and bespeaks for his successor, Dr. W. A. Sherwood, the same hearty support."

The Bishop's Annual Conference with Clergy and Lay Workers of the Rural Deanery of Stormont was held at St. James Parish Hall, Morrisburg, on Tuesday of last week. The Bishop of Ottawa was present and with him were the following clergy: Archdeacon Carson, Morrisburg; Canon Netten, Cornwall; Rev. J. L Homer, Rural Dean, Iroquois; Rev. E. W. B. Richards, Wales; Rev. A. D. Floyde, Cornwall; Rev G. O. Davies, Winchester; Rev. R. W. Ferrier, Newington; Rev. G. W. Thom, Aultsville; Rev. C. P. Smyth, Prescott; Rev. R. Booth, Cardinal. There was also a fairly good attendance of the laity from the various parishes of the Deanery. Papers were read by the Rev. G O. Davies on some aspects of doctrine and by the Rev. C P. Smyth on certain phases of religious education. The discussion which followed was joined in by all the clergy present. The day ended as it had begun with service in St. James Church. The visitors were entertained handsomely by the ladies of the parish.

McLean—Cinnamon

The marriage was quietly solemnized on Saturday, Sept. 14th, at Winchester Parsonage, of Annie Margaret, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cinnamon, Harmony, to Alexander McLean, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John McLean, Ormond. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. A. Waddell, with Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Stewart, Ormond, acting as witnesses. The bride was charming in a beige French Crepe Romaine dress with shoes and gloves to match. Mr. and Mrs. McLean left immediately by train for Montreal and other points, the bride wearing a navy blue crepe-back satin dress, navy fur trimmed coat and black and gold sequin hat. On their return they will take up residence at Ormond, Ont.

Special Preacher at South Mountain

Rev. James G. Potter, M. A., D. D., for over sixteen years minister of MacVicar Memorial Church, Montreal, will preach at the 49th Anniversary Services of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, South Mountain, 11 a. m. and 7.30 p. m. on Sunday, September 22nd.

Dr. Potter graduated in Arts from Queen's University and received his M. A. degree at McGill. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him at the convocation of the Presbyterian College, Montreal last Spring. He has held charges in Peterborough and Toronto prior to his going to Montreal, where he is at present conducting a very successful ministry.

Dr. Potter's father will be remembered by many for his great missionary work among the sailors at Halifax and those of the inland waterways.

In connection with the Anniversary Services, a chicken supper will be served on Monday night in the Oddfellows hall, followed by a concert.

The Women's Institute

Because of the absence of the President the chair was taken by Mrs. M. Moffatt. Many famous Canadians were named in answer to roll call and some interesting item told about them.

The Treasurer reported $34.17 in Bank but the printing of the programmes had not been paid for. It was decided to divide the membership into three committees, the convenors to be the President and two vice-presidents. A contest will be conducted from now until next May when marks will be given for attendance, answer to roll call, and new members. The losing committee will entertain the rest at the May meeting. It was decided to have a money shower for the Citizen's Band on Thursday, Sept. 26th. A delegate was appointed to attend the Eastern Ontario Convention in Ottawa in October.

Mrs. J. L. Dixon gave a brief but interesting report of the District Convention held here early in July. Mrs. Earle spoke on Canadian Literature and Mrs. R. L. Suffell, Miss Grace Irving, Mrs. Dukelow and Mrs. O. Wallace read short selections from the poems of Bliss Carman, Robert W. Service and Pauline Johnson. Bad Accident

A very serious and painful accident happened at the M F. Beach Co'ys shop on Tuesday last to Mr. Matthew Reid, a machinest, and he is at present in a very bad state. It appears he was facing off a steel pully on a turning lathe, when the pully broke and a piece struck Mr. Reid on the side of the face, and injured his hands. He was hurried to Dr. McKendry's surgery and it was found that his cheek bone was broken and in fact the whole side of his face laid bare, right up to above his eye. His index finger was also so badly injured that he will lose it. His lacerated face and hands were carefully dressed, and it will be some time before it is knonw what the real result of the accident will mean. Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. Reidi in his misfortune.

MALACHI FORETELLS A NEW DAY

Malachi 3:1-12

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

The closing book of the Old Testament reveals the general physical and spiritual condition of the Chosen Nation about 100 years after the Temple was rebuilt and altar worship established again in Jerusalem. There had been considerable material prosperity. But mechanical religion had resulted in mere formality in their approach unto Jehovah. As in earler times of depression their God sent them another voice to call them back to Him. The meaning of Malachi is "My Messenger," and such was this last prophet to have his record in the Old Covenant. Read through this book of four chapters.

First, wrong doing in the priesthood is condemned. Then the people are told of their general and specific sins. Safety is assured only as righteousness is followed. People must deal justly with all their neighbors and be lovingly obedient unto the laws of the Most High. A better day was always before His people. From of old there had been the promise of the coming of the Messiah. Now the approach is heralded, though the exact time is both unstated and even distant. Special preparation was always made when any monarch was about to pass through the land, and it was even more fitting to get ready for the Anointed One.

In prophetic utterance the work of John the Baptist, the immediate forerunner is declared, but all the people are exhorted to be ready for "the Lord will suddenly come to his temple." Cleansing as by fire would naturally be in the mind of the Hebrew and the simile of burning away the dress until the refiner's image could be discerned in the vessel was used. The misery of today would give place to the joy of tomorrow in that new day. In fact, it was God's love that saved them in the midst of their continuing sins.

Specifically, they were reminded that they were even robbing God when they pretended to turn over the customary tithe and yet retained part of it for their own use. This indicated a divided heart in which God was not fully enthroned. Not to be mechanical but rather to indicate by action that the heart was right they were urged to "bring ye the whole tithe into the storehouse." Such stewardship was needed then, even as now. Every religionist, no matter what his profession should give both proportionately and systematically. A tithe for some is only the minimum. In addition to that amount the Jew gave many free will and thank offerings. A glorious promise goes with such a call to conscientious stewardship. Our God has blessings untold that He is eager and ready to give to His obedient children. He will spiritually and materially "open you the windows of heaven."

What Happened Before

Remember Steddon comes West to avoid revealing the result of an unfortunate love affair to her father.

The Rev. Dr. Steddon, a clergyman of kind heart but narrow mind who attributes much of the evil of the world to the "movies" and constantly inveighs against them. Mem, her lover Elwood Farnaby having died in an accident, at the advice of Dr. Bretherick, gives her bad cough as an excuse to get to Arizona and from there writes home that she has met and married "Mr. Woodville," a wholly imaginary person. Later she writes again to say that her "husband" has died in the desert. She takes a job as a domestic to avoid being a burden on her parents. A fall prevents her becoming a mother. In Arizona she had met

Tom Holby, a leading man in a motion picture company, and through him gets the opportunity to play a part in a desert drama. With the company is

Robina Teele, a Star, fond of Holby and Leva Lemaire, an extra woman. After her accident, Mem becomes friendly with

Mrs. Dack, a poor woman of Palm Springs, Arizona, and takes an interest in her bright little son, Terry Dack, who has a great gift of mimicry. Inspired by a letter from Leva, Mem plans to go to Los Angeles to take a job in a film laboratory.

She gets a job in a film laboratory, but loses it. She meets a Mrs. Sturgs from her home town, who talks of the evils of the movies and says the stars are forced to sell their souls. Mem then learns her mother is coming to visit her. Mem is worried about her finances.

Now Go On With the Story

Well, she would sell what God had made of her for what man might make of her!

At the studio she had met the casting director, Arthur Tirrey. It was he who said to this one or that one, "Here is a part; play it, and the company will give you so much a week."

He was the St. Peter of the movie heaven, empowered to admit or to deny. He was the man for her to seek. He had seemed a decent enough man, and he had looked at Mem without insolence. But you can never tell!

Mem studied herself a long while in the mirror, since her eyes and her smile must be her chief wardrobe, her siren equipment. She practiced such expressions as she supposed to represent invitation. They were silly and they made her rather ill.

She reached Tirrey's office and found him idly swapping stories with his assistant. He spoke to her courteously, motioned her into his office, closed the door, and took his own place behind his desk.

The telephone rang. He called into it: "Sorry, Miss Waite; that part has been filled. The company couldn't make your salary. I begged you to take the cut, but you wouldn't. Times are hard and you'd better listen to reason. Sorry. Good-by!"

This was a discouraging background for Mem's siren scenario. But she determined to carry out her theory and, in all self-loathing, adjusted herself in her big chair to what she imagined was a Cleopatran sinuosity. She thought of her best lines; secretly twitched up her skirts and thrust her ankles well into view.

She turned upon Mr. Tirrey her most languishing eyes, and tried to pour enticement into them as into bowls of fire.

She pursed her lips and set them full. She widened her breast with deep sighs.

Tirrey seemed to recognize that she was deploying herself. He grew a little uneasy. But he was as polite to Mem as if she had been Robina Teele.

"What can I do for you?

"I want a chance to act."

"What experience have you had?" he asked.

Mem was suddenly confronted with the fact that all actors must offer themselves for sale—not the pretty women only, but the old men, too, and the character women.

Actors are much abused for talking of themselves. Few of them do when business is not involved, but when it is they must discuss the goods they are trying to sell. Shoe merchants talk shoes; railroad presidents, railroads; politicians, politics; clergymen, salvation. Each salesman must recommend his own stock and talk it up.

So Mem had to grope for experience and dress her window with it. And she had had so little she lied a little, as one does who tries to sell anything:

"I was with the company that Tom Holby and Robina Teele played in. I took the part of an Arabian women. Mr. Folger, the director — er—praised my — er — work."

"Well, he knows," said Tirrey, "but he's not with this company, you know. Have we your name and address and a photograph outside in our files?"

"No."

"Well, if you'll give them to Mr. Dobbs, with your height, weight, color of eyes and hair, and experience, we'll let you know when anything occurs. I'll introduce you to Mr. Dobbs and he—"

He moved toward the door to escape from the cruelty of his office, but a frenzy moved her to seize his arm in a fierce clutch.

She tried to play the vampire as she had seen the part enacted on the screen by various slithy toves. She drew her victim close to her, pressed tight against him, and poured upward into his eyes all the venom of an amorous basilisk.

"I'll pay the Price! I know what it costs to succeed, and I'm willing to pay. I'll do anything you say, be anything to you. You can't refuse me!"

She could hardly believe her own ears hearing her own voice, though with pride in the acting she was going to give her a chance!

* * * *

The next morning found Mem at the studio betimes, borrowing mascaro and advice from Miss Calder.

Claymore was waiting for her when she came from the women's dressing rooms. She was daubed, smeared, lined, powdered, rouged, mascaroed, and generally calcimined for duty. Her heart was beating in alternate throbs of fear and frenzy. Her feet were at the brink of the Rubicon.

Claymore had provided a camera

"I'll pay the price. I'll do anything you say. You can't refuse me."

was doing lifted her from the disgust for the rôle.

He looked at her without surprise, without horror, without even amusement, but—also without a hint of surrender. His only mood was one of jaded pity.

"You poor child, who's been filling your head with that stuff? Are you really trying to vamp me?"

The crass word angered her:

"I'm trying to force my way to my career, and I don't care what it costs."

Tirrey's sarcastic smile faded:

"Sit down a minute and listen to me. A little common sense ought to have told you that what you've been told is all rot. Suppose I were willing to give a job to every pretty girl who tried to bribe me with love. Do you know how many women I see a day—a hundred and fifty on some days; that's nearly a thousand a week. And if you won me over you'd still have to please the director and the managers and the author and the public. How long would our company keep going if we selected our actresses according to their immorality?

"Forget this old rot about 'paying the Price.' Tell Mr. Dobbs your pedigree and we'll give you the first chance we get, and no initiation fee or commission will be charged. How's that? A little bit of all right, eh? You're a nice child, and pretty, and you'll get along."

He lifted her from her chair and put his arm around her as a comrade, and slapped her shoulder blades in an accolade of good fellowship.

She broke under the strain and began to cry. She dropped back into her chair and sobbed. It was good to be punished and rebuked into common decency by the way of common sense.

It chanced that the president of the company was returning to his office from a visit to one of the stages. This was the man whose name was familiar about the world. Every film from his factory was labeled: "Bermond presents—"; "Copyright by the Bermond Company"; "This is a Bermond picture." The slogan of the company was, "This is a Bermond year."

When Mr. Bermond heard Mem crying, his heart hurt him. He did not like scandal, disorder, confusion, or grief on his lot.

He went to Mem and tried to console her. He took her hands down from her contorted face and forced her to look at him. Seen through the cascades of her tears she was strikingly attractive, appealing.

"Sarah Bernhardt failed in her first play, you know, and you may be a second Sarah some day," he said. "Just you wait!"

Mem's eyes were filling with rainbows. A bystander drew Bermond aside. It was Claymore, a dramatist who had had a few successes before he established himself in the moving pictures as a director.

"That girl has the tear," he said to Bermond. "That woman you've given me for my next picture is awful. Let me take this kid and give her a real test. She might have just what we want."

"Sure! Fine! Go to it!" said Bermond, and hastened to [illegible] with the good news that Mr. Claymore—the great Mr. Claymore—man, a few men to handle the electric lights, a property man, and even a pair of musicians—a violinist and the treader of a wheezy little portable melodeon.

Claymore marched her into the scene and gave her a little of what he called footwork.

"Go back to that door and come forward to this spot. Shake hands with—er—with your lover—er—Well—no. Let me see. That's too simple. Let's get down to business.

"You've a— Oh—well, just for instance, you've been—er—betrayed and your child has died and you've been accused of murdering it and you're now being called before the judge and the jury. Do you get me? You're coming into a courtroom under a charge of crime; you feel your shame, but you're innocent of the charge, yet you're overwhelmed with guilt for your fall, and the father of the child is—was killed in the war, say—and you don't much care whether you live or die; so you're in despair, yet defiant. That's a triple layer of emotion for you and I don't suppose you can get much of it over, but—just try to give the atmosphere of it. Now back to the door. Walk through it once."

Claymore was as much embarrassed as Mem, for his invention was not in its best working order so early in the morning. He felt as silly as a man badgered by a peevish child to tell a story.

But his trite plot stirred Mem amazingly. He could not know how close his random shots had come home to her and flung her back from the forward-looking artist to the lorn fugitive who had stumbled into California laden with disgrace.

She was all atremble and her eyes darted, her fingers twitched. Claymore marveled at her instantaneous response to his suggestion. There were born artists who shivered on the least breath of inspiration and suggestion.

His first impression of Mem was that he had found a genius, and he fought against the obstacles he encountered later with the zest of a man digging toward known gold.

In a kind of stupor Mem obeyed his commands like the trained confederate of a hypnotist. She went to the door, came in reluctant, shamefast, doomed. She advanced slowly till she reached the edge of the rug he had indicated, then halted, and with a fierce effort hoisted her head in defiance and braved the lightning of the judge.

She heard Claymore call to her: "That's fine! Now we'll take it!"

She started back, but was checked by the camera man's "Wait, please!" He ran forward and shouted directions on all sides for lights.

"Hit those spots! Throw the ash can on her. Bring up that Kliegl. Put a diffuser on that Winfield. What's the matter with the second spot? Your carbons are flickering. Mike! Mike! Trim those carbons on the second spot! Pull 'em!"

WOOD ROT

Studies May Reduce Losses In Lumber—Incubator Maintains Temperature of Growing Decay.

No pampered child of the idle rich can claim to receive the tender care given to living wood rot organisms at the forest products laboratory at Madison, Wis. Ire Hatfield studies these little plants under the microscope in an attempt to discover some weakness in their life habits which might enable mankind to exterminate them effectively in trees, timber, or wooden structures.

Like chidren, says a Science Service bulletin, decay organisms cannot exist without water, food, warmth and air. Wood is the food element and water is the life element easiest to control. That is why Mr. Hatfield is singling out pure strains of the wood-decaying organisms and rearing them under conditions which are as superior to those surrounding the rich man's baby as the baby's environment is superior to that of an alley cat.

"If my observations can determine the least amount of water wood rot can thrive on or the most water it will tolerate," Mr. Hatfield said, "we will then be able to stop decay and rot in wood either by drying the wood until the wood-rot organisms die of thirst or by soaking the wood until the organisms drown."

The organisms at the laboratory must have just as much air as they would have in any lumber yard and there must be absolute assurance that undesirable alien spores of other organisms are not gaining access to the wood on which the pure wood-rot organisms are growing.

In Mr. Hatfield's series of tests the temperature of the growing decay organisms is maintained by incubator. An elaborate ventilation system, which employs both chemical and mechanical means, relieves the air supply of carbon dioxide and excess moisture. A chemical solution detains all the undesirable decay spores which are universally present in the laboratory air as they are everywhere. By means of one chemical solution through which it passes the humidity of the air—and correspondingly the moisture in the wood—is controlled to a fraction of a per cent. The growth of the wood-rot organisms under the artificially controlled moisture conditions is measured, not by crude physical methods, but by measuring the amount of carbon dioxide given off, just as the work done by an athlete on a physician's treadmill is measured by the amount of carbon dioxide he exhales.

"The battle with decay in wood, whether it be waged with wood preservations or by sanitary control measures, is a contest for a rich prize," Mr. Hatfield said, "for more than four billion cubic feet of lumber and wooden products are destroyed by decay every year in the United States. The magnitude of this loss is comparable only with the loss from forest fires."

MEASURING OCEAN DEPTHS.

United States Coast Surveyors Using Depth Bombs.

For determining the exact depths of the ocean, the United States coast and geodetic surveyors are using depth bombs. Depth measurements are dangerous unless properly located on the charts, as an error in location may mislead navigators by indicating depth where it does not exist. Soundings made in sight of land are easily located with the aid of objects ashore, but when the work is done in fog or out of sight of land the visual method is supplanted by the use of explosives. The method is simple.

After each measurement a small bomb containing TNT is dropped overboard to explode 20 feet below the surface. The sound, travelling under water, is picked up by two hydrophones fifty feet below the surface at known positions near the shore stations, which are several miles apart. From these it is carried by cables to radio amplifying and transmitting sets ashore, which broadcast the sound. This in turn is caught by an apparatus on the ship and recorded on a tape. The surveyors compute the elapsed time between the actual explosion and the return of the radio signal. By using the known velocity of the sound through sea water they are able to determine the distance of the ship from each of the two shore hydrophones. Triangulation then establishes the ship's position with absolute precision. The method has been found accurate up to 200 miles.

TWO-THIRDS ILLITERATE.

There are 850,500,000 People In This Class.

Sixty-two percent. of the population of the world, ten years of age and over, are illiterate. Of a total population of 1,363,000,000 the number of illiterates is 850,500,000. These remarkable figures were obtained through a comprehensive study of illiteracy in the various countries of the world conducted by James F. Abel, specialist in foreign education, U. S. Bureau of Education. In this work, Mr. Abel was assisted by Norman J. Bond, statistical assistant.

While only eighteen countries report an illiteracy rate of more than fifty per cent. the population of these countries is approximately 618,000,000. Contrasted with this is the total of 468,000,000 inhabitants of all the 45 countries reporting less than 50 per cent. illiteracy.

And That's That

That product of modern business, the "yes" man, apparently had his counterpart some 2,000 years ago when Ming Chow, the historian, was transcribing the story of his times on thin leaves of rice paper.

"At that time there was a mighty war lord, Lo Chi by name, who, by the beckoning of his finger, commanded more power than al the trumpet calls of his army. He travelled in mighty state with rich panoplies of golden cloth above his head and was waited on by many servants. No man doubted his word, for to question his wisdom was to question the wisdom of the hills.

"Lo Chi had but one adviser, who never left his side. This man, named Ping, was of small stature and a meek man, yet he was feared by many. And when the mighty war lord spoke, Ping was wont to bow low and say "Yea, my lord, verily it is so."

"It came to pass one evening that Lo Chi was seated in his tent, having dined richly. Beside him was a bottle of rare wine, from which he would fill his golden goblet from time to time. With him were seated his adviser Ping and another. This other was a fine young soldier, a brave man and held in high esteem by his fellows. Nevertheless he was hot headed and feared no man.

"Lo Chi discoursed on famous victories, battles, conquests and many other subjects. At length, glancing at the bottle beside him he said, "Well do I remember on one occasion in far distant lands, when an incredible thing happened. My servant, at my bidding, was pouring wine into my goblet when, from the neck of the bottle, there came forth a rat.' The young soldier, being amazed, quoth, 'Most strange, sire. Indeed it must have been a very small rat to issue from the neck of a bottle.' Lo Chi replied 'By the gods, it was an exceedingly big rat!' The young soldier meditated and still doubting, said, 'Sire, verily then, it must have been a monstrous bottle.' To which Lo Chi shouted in great wrath, 'By the gods I tell you it was an exceeding small bottle! And since you doubt my words, you shall feel the axe on your neck before the sun rises to-morrow.' So saying, he clapped his hands and the young soldier was led away to his death.

"Turning to Ping, the mighty war lord said, 'and you Ping, do you doubt my story?' To which his adviser replied, 'Sire, if the rat had been an elephant, and the bottle a love philtre, still would I believe the words of my master.' And he was richly rewarded."

Canada's Wheat Market

Sherbrooke Tribune (Lib.): There is every indication that, whatever happens, Canada will keep for a long time its privileged position. The production of wheat is increasing at a greater rate than the population, whih leaves a growing exportable surplus, whilst in the United States the exportable surplus for abroad is contracting year by year. Moreover, the cost of production is appreciably less in Canada than it is in the United States, and it will be still more reduced when mechanical processes are extended and become more perfect.

Lights on Horse-drawn Vehicles

Le Canada (Lib.): There can be no doubt that if every farmer agreed to carry a light of some kind or other attached to the rear of his art when he wa son the main road, it would contribute to a greater degree of safety with evening traffic. It would be of particular assistance in certain cases of cars meeting when the headlights of an automobile coming in the opposite direction prevent, even when they are dimmed, one seeing the cart which is directly in front of one's own car, and it is seen often enough too late.

Minard's Liniment—Used for 50 years

The leading French style dictators have adopted eggshell, white, black and purple—the latter running to the dahlia shades—for normal evening wear.

Paradise fitch is a new fur added to the list this season. It shades from a mellow brown to a soft yellow and when combined with shades of brown makes a very effective garment.

LUXO

FOR THE HAIR

Ask Your Barber—He Knows

When Pain Comes

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use rude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

The Sealing Saga Of Newfoundland

Told By Capt. Robt. A. Bartlett in the National Graphic Gives Many A Thrill

LOST IN A STORM

On March 7, the port of St. Johns, Newfoundland, is black with men. On that day the sealing fleet sails for the annual hunt. Eight ships, with 2000 picked men, steam down the harbor. Whistles scream God-speed, bells ring out, cannons fire salutes. I have been with the sealing fleet 19 times, and on almost as many Arctic expeditions with Peary and others. Sealing is certainly more dangerous than Arctic exploring.

The best sealing trip I ever made was in the Bonaventure, my first steel vessel. The details of it gan go for the other sealing trips, too. We started out against a 60-mile wind, taking waves clean over the bridge. In no time the ship was one solid block of ice.

Next day we reached calm water under the weather edge of the ice. For a while we made good progress through leads in the ice, but finally were jammed. We had to resort to all the old tricks—putting out men to break trenches in the ice with axes and dynamite, backing, and charging with our armored prow. And so at last we got through to ice where lay a great patch of seals. Imagine yourself in Central Park surrounded by thousands of sheep and new-born lambs. This is what it looked like.

I put four crews—234 men—on the ice. They began killing and panning the seals, knocking them on the heads with a gaff, removing the sulps or pelts, and hauling them to markers. Markers are colored flags, like golf flags, stuck in the ice at each pile of sculps, so that the ship can come to pick them up.

The crews killed some 8000 seals that first afternoon—all young ones, because the "white-coats" are the sealer's first choice. For three full days the work went on from daylight to dark. On the fourth day a furious gale sprang up, with blinding snow and freezing weather, and only by the greatest labor did we salvage 26,6000 of the pelts scattered on the ice pans. But that was the biggest catch, except one last year, ever brought in from the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Sealing is a hard life. Men on board a sealer are jammed like sardines. Going out, every available bit of space is filled with coal, ice-fighting equipment, sealers' chests and gear. If we get a quick "pick-up," many of the men are "burned out" by a big cargo of skins, which takes up their bunk space, and they've got to double up in already crowded quarters. There is some relief in the watches, when one man is out and another can use his berth.

A sealing ship carries provisions for two months and a half—potatoes, codfish, flour, meat, tea, and molasses to sweeten the tea, turnips and beans. Could some of the old sealing crews take a look at these provisions, they'd think the business was ruined by luxurious living. They had nothing but hard biscuit and tea, pork and duff, with little grease in the duff. No soft breat whatever.

On ship we have what we call Solomon Goss's birthday. He has a birthday three times a week. On these days for the noon meal we get duff. For duff, flour (a barrel to a batch) is stirred with water, currants, and molasses. With a blade like a canoe paddle, the cook mixes it into a paste and adds fat from boiled pork as shortening. The dough is then packed into smal canvas bags and boiled for two or three hours. Pork is boiled alongside the duff, and when duff and pork are ready the cook alls the roll and hands it out.

On Sunday morning the crew gets "brose"—boiled bread and codfish with pork gravy spread over it. Butter, fresh beef, salt fish, potatoes, and turnips are whacked out to the men at different times and they prepare meals for themselves except on Solomon Goss's birthdays. When we get among young seals we boil or fry the seal meat. With onions and butter, I like it better than porterhouse steak and in the North it prevents scurvy.

Each man leaving the ship has on his back a "nunny" bag, in which he carries an orange or two to quench his thirst, some raw oatmeal mixed with sugar, a few hard biscuits, and a piece of seal or pork. This is his grub for a day on the ice.

A sealer must be quick and careful in his work. Every hole in a skin costs a man ten cents. A skillful worker can skin a seal in a minute, and a man who can kill, skin, and pan —that is, haul the pelts to a marker—120 in a day is a good hand.

One of the hardships of sealing is ice or snow blindness. Although all men carry goggles, and are lectured and threatened with punishment if they don't wear them, they are often careless. They raise their glasses, perhaps, to wipe the sweat out of their eyes and forget to pull them down again. Then, before they realize their danger, they are blind. I don't know of any worse sensation. It is like having sand thrown in the eyeballs. Water runs out of the eyes. With a good dose of it, men have almost become insane.

Then, again, there is the danger of falling into the water when a long distance from the ship. Here is a sealer who has slipped into the water. He has "gone down till his cap floated" and he is soaking wet. His "buddy" has fished him out with a gaff. A gale of wind is blowing—freezing weather and no shelter. But he has to get those wet clothes off or have them freeze on him as stiff as the pillar of Lot's wife. The two seek the biggest pinnacle of ice, and in the lee of it the wet man strips off his clothes. His buddy lends him all the clothes he can spare, while they wring out the wet ones. Then he must haul the clothes back on—an awful task.

The chance of losing his men on the ice in a fog or blizzard is a work that always besets a captain. It must be remembered that this work goes on at the worst time of year, when gales of wind and snow are the usual thing. Every morning a skipper must decide whether to put his men on the ice or not, and the decision is often fraught with anxiety. In 1914 the steamship Newfoundland put its men ashore just before a terrific blizzard. When the weather cleared next day, 77 men had been lost, frozen while they attempted to get back to the ship. On another trip the Greenland lost 48 men during a storm. Often, too, in a storm, the ship itself gets "nipped" in the ie and is sunk. Of 57 famous sealing steamers, 29 have been lost.

What do the men get out of all this hard work? The vessel may make a quick pick-up and be through in a few days; again, vessels have been out two months and returned without a seal. The only guarantee a sealer gets is food and a "crop note," an advance of $9. One-third of the net earnings is divided among the crew. Shares have run as high as $238, but the average is about $60.

When the skins reach St. Johns, the valuable fat is scraped from them and reduced to a fluid state. Later this oil is used in the American soap industry. The skins themselves are tanned and used for various leather goods. The skins of this kind of seal are not used as furs.

The next time you enter a leather-goods store to buy a pinseal pocketbook, hold the article in your hands and think of this story. Think of the seals tossing on the ice pans of the Newfoundland coast in hurricane weather. Think of the hardy men who risk their lives walking on the ocean to take the pelts. Think of the strong Newfoundland vessels that bring them home to supply the world with pinseal novelties and purses for its valuables.

Dreaded anaemia can be banished!

IN middle life, when vitality is not as great as it once was, and the blood stream is naturally thinned and devitalized, anaemia easily lays hold on the system. At first, just a tired feeling, it quickly results in bodily weakness that ordinary tonics cannot avail.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills then become a wonderful aid. They supply the necessary oxygen to the blood, increase the blood count and renew waning vigor.

"I was seized with anaemia," writes Mrs. Charles Lambert of Port Hope, Ont., "and was in a very bad state. As a girl I had taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for a run-down condition and decided to take them once more. Again the result was marvellous. In a little while I was fully well again."

You cannot begin too early to check anaemia. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold at your druggist's or by mail, postpaid, 50 cents, from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Finnish Boy Is Interpreter

After only six weeks in Canada, Caino Kulmala, a 7-year-old Finnish boy who, when he arrived, knew not a single word of English, recently helped his mother out of a difficulty by acting as interpreter. Caino's father had been unable to find work in Canada so his mother is working to keep them all, and Caino and his white-haired brother spend their days at the Day Nursery in Belmont Park. Mrs. Kulmala is saving up her dollars to take her boys back to Finland because she fears their education here will be hampered by their language and their father's inability to find work. She wanted to talk to the Nursery superintendent about this but found her English inadequate, so Caino stepped into the conversation and translated.

Caino's is only one of the many nationalities represented in the Day Nursery, which soon is to razed to make way for the new Canadian National Railway station. For twenty-five years the building has been in use, and so dependent on it for the caer of their children have some women become that they have gradually moved their homes nearer to the nursery.

During July and August the average number of children a day was 90, and some days the number went up to 112. Five thousand meals were served during May, exclusive of the staff.

No plans are made yet as to where the children will be cared for after the demolition of the home, but the Board of the Federated Charities believe that the growth of the city demands at least two nurseries, one on the northeast and the other in the centre of the ity.

Lady Allan put her grounds at Ravenscrag at the disposal of the nursery, and throughout the summer, twice a week, picnic parties have been taken there. For five years Henry Gatehouse and Son have conveyed the children to Ravenscrag every Monday, and the Shedden Company, through the kindness of Hugh Paton, have taken the children every Friday. Donations of money for these picnics have been made by Mrs. I. W. Killam, Mrs. T. McHutchinson and Mrs. W. B. Mathewson. Mrs. Wellington Dixon, on the board of the Nursery since 1900, has been president for 16 years.

IS THERE A BABY IN YOUR HOME?

Is there a baby or young children in your home? If there is you should not be without a box of Baby's Own Tablets. Childhood ailments come quickly and meals should always be at hand to promptly fight them. Baby's Own Tablets are the ideal home remedy. They regulate the bowels; sweeten th stomach; banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers—in fact they relieve all the minor ills of little ones. Concerning them Mrs. Moise Cabotte, Makamik, Que., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets are the best remedy in the world for little ones. My baby suffered terribly from indigestion and vomiting, but the Tablets soon set her right and now she is in perfect health." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockvile, Ont.

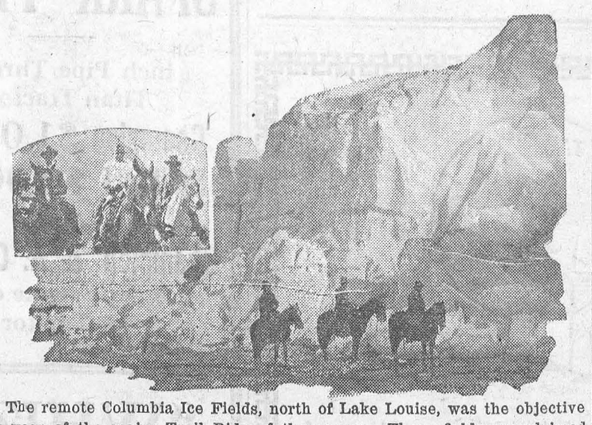
The St. Lawrence Waterway

Vancouver Province (Ind. Cons.): The question of electric power is an important one. Canada will get more power out of the development than the United States, but this is because she has a great many more miles of river than her neighbor. On the international section, the power will be divided equally between the two countries. To the power on the Canadian section our Amerian friends haven't the slightest trace of a claim. Canada will develop it herself and have it for herself. If the present sentiment prevails, she will not export a single kilowat of it.

Empire Solidarity

Hamilton Spectator (Ind. Cons.): There has been a great dea lof talk about the possibilities of making the British commonwealth a self-contained trade unit, and grandiose proposals of more or less practical feasibility have been made; but the talk period appears to be happily passing now into the stage of concrete action. The energetic manner in which the British administration is exploring the opportunities and the steps it is taking to bring about definite action cannot fail to produce good results.

Eighteen Day Trail Ride



The remote Columbia Ice Fields, north of Lake Louise, was the objective this year of the major Trail Ride of the season. These fields are claimed to be the largest body of ice south of the Arctic circle, covering 260 square miles in area whose waters flow into three oceans. Only experienced trail riders are permitted to take this strenuous trip for which they must possess at least the silver button emblematic of 100 miles of trail riding. The trip from start to finish took eighteen days to complete. Picture shows two of the hardy trail riders, W. L. Payne, London, England, and Louis Prevost, of Montreal with Guy Thomas, Brewster's guide, on right, together with a section of the Columbia Ice Fields.

Rotherhithe and Its Memories

The genus loci of Rotherhithe, like that of every other part of the fascinating congeries of amphibian communities, called collectively, Thamesside, is a possession peculiar to itself. It is a thing impossible to define with any exactitude, made up as it is of so many and such various components, appealing to each and all of the senses in turn; of sights, and sounds, and smells, pleasing and unpleasing alike—of chance-see names on street corners, or over warehouses, or on the fronts of waterside inns—of scraps of old history and old association—of the crying of gulls and the wash and gurgle of the tide under the wharves, and the comings and goings of ships along the centuries. And yet—vague and elusive and indescribable as it is—there is in it, none the less for that, something entirely individual and unmistakable; so that if any one familiar with the region in general were to be suddenly dropped down in a particular corner of it he had never seen before, he would probably be able to say and at once unerringly: "This is surely Rotherhithe!"

It is not, perhaps, so historical a locality as Blackwell, or even as its own near neighbor, Deptford—although, as shall presently be seen, it has associations in this sort by no means to be despised. It is not oraly like Wapping, nor leathery like Bermondsey. . . Its predominant smell . . . so to speak—is that of lumber. . .

You may walk its streets all day and seldom see a black face, or a yellow, or a brown Its romance is the world-old romance of sea-faring, and commerce, and toil. It is an honest place, a workaday place, and—for all its superficial covering of London grime—a cheerful place. . .

There are pleasant glimpses to be caught of the river and its busy traffic, or funnels of many colors and the flags of many nations, of bustling tugs, of the brown sails of barges—even, once in a way, of a square-rigger, a fair lady of old time, . . . There is a sudden vignette, perhaps, of a swan sailing, incredibly white, amazingly aloof, among the crowded shipping. There are old, rickety, leaning riverside inns whose names are the names of battles long ago, or of East Indiamen whose timbers have long been dust. There are tarry odours from dark caverns where barges have been built for generations—now, alas! given over to the construction of the dumb barges and lighters which are slowly but surely displacing the picturesque brown sails of tradition. There are ancient watermen's shops, all but deserted, yet where you may still, now and then, get a boat to put you over the water as in days gone by.—C. Fox Smith, in "Ancient Mariners."

When Dearth Means Prosperity

Vancouver Sun (Lib.): Wheat-growers are jubilant. The price of wheat is soaring; many farmers who had a very dark outlook are now expeting a prosperous harvest. And why? Because . . . the wheat crop is below normal. Bad weather conditions have cut down the expected yield. Hence price gare going up. Industry strives for the greatest possible production. Agriculture is compelled to point the other way. A time of plenty is apt to be a time of hardship. A time of dearth is apt to mean prosperity. Right there is a "farm problem" worthy of a good deal of attention.

Canada's Increase

Saskatoon Star (Lib.): The natural increase and the balance of immigration over emigration now combine to produce an annual gain of 1..3 per cent. The doubling period at this rate is more than half a century as it was before 1900. That is to say, it will be 1980 before Canada has a population of 20,000,000 unless the rate of growth is accelerated. It probably wil be. The opening of the Hudson Bay route, the exploitation of the minerals of the north, and the growth of trade with the Orient are have that effect.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION

Nothing is more talked about to-day than the sudden twist in Premier Ferguson's political mind, in announcing the date of the Provincial election. Everyone thought he would save his "big surprise" for the banquet to-night when surrounded by his political beneficiaries, his hirelings and his office seekers, he will be acclaimed the hero of the hour, the greatest premier Ontario ever had, etc. Those who know him best smile in their sleeve, and while admiring his cleverness at bluff and fooling the people, are saddened by the thought that this fair province is being ruined by a liquor policy that is becoming worse than the old barroom system, and being run hopelessly into debt by extravagent waste of public funds.

While the announcement that the Provincial election will be held on Oct. 30th is a surprise to many, it but confirms what Mr. Sinclair, the Liberal Leader, had claimed for the past year. At first he was ridiculed, even laughed at, and Premier Ferguson even went as far as to say that there was no reason for a Provincial election. There are many reasons for his changed attitude, and none in his favour, Anyway the election is on, and that is the chief concern of the electors.

Now what about Dundas? Last Saturday at a meeting at which every municipality in the county—except Morrisburg was represented, held in the town hall here, Mr. N. W. Beach, Winchester, was the unanimous choice to represent the Prohibition Union in the coming contest. Six names were submitted to the convention, they were–Geo. Smythe, M. P. P., Dundas; I. Hilliard, Morrisburg; Dr. Ferrier, S. Mountain; J. W. Marcellus, Iroquois; Thos Johnston, Matilda; N. W. Beach, Winchester; of the six all withdrew except Mr. Marcellus and Mr. Beach, and on a ballot being taken, Mr. Beach was the choice which was made unanimous.

At a Liberal Convention held at Chesterville on Monday afternoon at which Mr. Sinclair, leader of the Liberal party was present, Mr. Wesley Hamilton was the choice of that meeting as the standard bearer of the Liberal Party in the coming election. It was a well attended and enthusiastic meeting, but there was an undercurrent feeling that it would be better not to put a Liberal candidate in the field, and unite in supporting the Prohibition Candidate. However there was one outstanding event that deserves mention, and that was the manly and straightforward attitude of Mr. Geo. Smythe, the present member for Dundas. Mr. Smythe was nominated at the Liberal Convention, but in withdrawing he stated that he did so in the interests of prohibition. He believed that in the interests of Temperance it would be best to get behind the Prohibition Candidate and support him. Mr. Hamilton and his friends however did not agree to this and Mr. Hamilton was chosen to represent the Liberal Party.

The Conservatives hold their Convention on Monday next at Winchester Springs. There has been much scurrying about on the part of the Conservatives to get a candidate who they think will win. The Press happens to know of two men who were approached and practically offered the nomination, and both refused to be associated with the Ferguson wet elements of the Conservative party. But they will find a candidate. Those prominently mentioned are Col. Malloy of Iroquois, and Geo. Challies of Morrisburg. Neither would prove a strong opposition to the Prohibition Candidate. Anyway, Dundas does not want a "Wet" representative, and if the temperance people of the County are as sincere as we believe they are, there is no doubt as to the result.

The Winchester Press does not hesitate to express its attitude. While we have no brief for any candidate, while we have not the right to speak for any candidate, and we can truthfully say we have not even discussed the situation with any candidate or prospective candidate, the Winchester Press will support the candidate of the Prohibition Union. We did so three years ago, and that candidate was a Liberal, we will do so this election and do so because we stand first for the cause of prohibition.

We have been urged to remain neutral, we have been urged to side with one of the parties. We have even been offered inducement to remain out of the fights. The cause of prohibition is more to us than party, person, or even financial gain. We really do not believe that we suffer much financially. The boycott by the Ferguson Government of the Press in the way of advertising may have meant a couple of hundred dollars, but we are kept busy, we manage to get along, we have good friends, and we know we are fighting for the greatest cause, the greatest reform of the age. There is no greater curse to humanity than the liquor traffic. In Ontario, since the coming in of the Liquor Control, it has grown to such proportions that our young people are being manufactured into drunkards, our highways are unsafe, homes are being made into bar-rooms and brawling places. It is to do away with this evil that the Press stands for to-day, and that is why we lineup beside the Prohibition Candidate. What we say we say on our own responsibility. We fight openly and above board.

Owing to extra demands on our space and an unusual rush of Job printing during the past week, the Press is not able to go into this matter of candidates and elections as we would like. We have five more weeks however, and we hope they will be five weeks crowded with earnest and effectual work for prohibition.

A Joke All Round

The Acton Free Press tells the following: A gentleman from a town not far distance met a friend in Acton yesterday morning. In the conversation he confided a little joke he had on a man in his town who drove a car of the same design and make as his. The cars had been confused and his liquor permit had been found in the car. That was a very good joke to be told when he returned to H—. The man was to take from Acton a former minister on his charge to the city. He went to push back the cushion on the seat. It wouldn't go because a bottle of Budwelser beer was in the way. The cushion was lifted up and six more bottles were under the seat. Liquor as well as permit had become lodged in the wrong car. When he left with the minister he was not quite sure whether the joke was on him or the man who had made the mistake.

In speaking on "Revealing the wheat of the lesson" Rev. D. W. Summers, Winchester, Ont., made it very clear how very necessary it is to keep the lesson before the class yet in a spiritual sense and when finished to make a Spiritual application in such a simple way that it will count in the child's life.

Miss Stephens, whose address on "Reason for Convention" was now given in a few well chosen remarks.

Rev. C. I. Armstrong who now addressed the Convention on "The hope of our Church" was to the line in what it is and what it is not. It is not in the old members, or a more perfected organization, but it is in bringing the little ones and young people through the Sunday School to our altar, pray through, getting a definite experience of being saved and santified, filled with His Spirit, given something to do do to help others to God. Adjourned.

Evening service—Evangelistic leader in song. Rev. S. A. Robinson, preaching, Rev. C. I. Armstrong.

Thursday, 10 a. m.—Rev. G. C. Heslop, Shawville, Que., presiding devotional exercises by B. J. Derby, who was in the Spirit, gave inspiration to the meeting in the beginning. Reports from Sunday School Supts. were encouraging.

Rev. G. C. Heslop's address on Evangelism in the Sunday School "Study to show thyself approved unto God a workman which needeth not to be ashamed rightly dividing the word of truth" emphasying the vital necessity of officers and teachers of the Sunday School being the proper examples so no child will be deceived in their conception of Godliness, to be very careful what literature is being used and to use the Bible most of all. the great possibility of saving the child through the Sunday School when they are converted have them under a Spiritual teacher one who will prove there is something worth while.

Miss Stephens, on "Relation of Sunday School to Church" showed how God worked through the Bible Study and memory texts in after years, related one instance where a wayward boy, wounded and dying on the battle field, torn and suffering from poison, only to put in some time to forget his pain, having nothing else to read, thought he would read some in his Testament, opening it, his eyes rested on a Text learned in Sunday School, bringing back old memories his soul began to get hungry. God saved him. When the Dr. came to dress his wounds noted the change instead of swearing was seemingly reconciled. Dr. asked what had taken place. God gave him enough strength to get home and die in his mother's arms, who had feared from his wild life would be hanged, but instead of this came home a christian. She thanked God for answer to prayer through the Scripture taught in the Sunday School. Adjourned.

Thursday, 2 p. m.—Rev. D. W. Summers presiding. Devotional exercises conducted by Rev. S. A. Robinson. Message in song by Misses Aileen Knight and Margaret Johnston.

In absence of Mrs. D. W. Summers, Miss Inda Watts giving the talk on "Sunday School in Session" leaving some good thonghts if carried out especially when Sunday School precedes preaching service of making it less tiresome for the smaller ones.

Mrs. W. E. Hamilton, Ottawa, "Teacher Training" gave some very important truths emphasying the fact "If God calls He equips," and the Sunday School Teacher should be called to their work as it is most important in training the young child If they are called called of God their work will be a success. If the young child is given good teaching in the home and Sunday School their lives are formed and they cannot get away from it.

"The Sunday School and Missions" was given by Mrs. Max Poirier, Inkerman, who tried to make it clear if the boy or girl was properly trained in the Sunday School, the future mission problems of the Church would be solved. This could be easily done if the Missionary Organizations of the Church would work in co-operation with the Sunday School, and the children given something to do apart with missionary maps, charts, pictures and curios, supplied for the Missionary Secretary and Teachers use in class work. Most important is Mission study classes taken at least once a month with a good christian leader who is not afraid to work. It is through these the church is instrumental in getting volunteers for the Mission Field.

Rev. R. L. LeRoy made it very plain how the "Sunday School finance" is a very important matter to consider in order to make it a pleasure to give, that Christian giving is Christian Worship and every Christian boy or girl loves to give not only his or her money but themselves as well.

Rev. C. I. Armstrong's address was again very instructive on "Why Christ was an Ideal Teacher" his main thought being the world's vision of simplicity of language in all His teachings. Sixty-seven per cent of His words being one syllable so the children could understand and the most illiterate.

The evangelistic service in the evening brought the Convention to a close with special mention of the message in song by Revs. Heslop and Armstrong.

Rev. Armstrong again brings message from Hebrew chapter 9 verses 11, 12, 13, 14 and 24, with reference to Titus chapter 3 verses 5 and 6, emphasying the Blood of Jesus. Main text Hebrew chapter 9 verse 24, For Christ is not entered into the Holy places made with bands which are the figures of the true; but into Heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us.

British Win Air Race at 328-Mile Pace

Retain Schneider Cup as Waghorn Flies 217.49 Miles in 39½ Minutes; Italy Second at 248 M.P.H.

Ryde Peirhead, Isle of Wight.—Flying six miles a minute at times to attain the world's record speed of an average of 328.663 miles an hour for the 217.38-mile course, Waghorn, the "baby" of Great Britain's high speed seaplane team, retained for his country the coveted Schneider trophy.

The first starter in the contest for the blue ribbon of aviation, he completed the seven circuits of the course marked out between England and the Isle of Wight in 39 minutes 42 4-5 seconds in the Supermarine Rolls-Royce S-6, the Blue Rocket. In doing so and in making the new average record for the course he surpassed the previous average record of Flight Lieutenant S. N. Webster, of Great Britain, made in 1927, by 47.14 miles an hour. Waghorn competed against two other English navy fliers and three Italians.

Flying officer R. . R. Atcherley, another British aviator, in a plane like Waghorn's, gained another record for his country by flying two laps at an average speed of 332.29 miles an hour, the fastest speed ever officially credited to man.

Atcherley completed the course at 325.45 miles an hour but was subsequently disqualified by the judges for not rounding the pylon off Bembridge, Isle of Wight.

Second Place to Italy

Italy captured second place with the Macchi-Fiat M. 52, piloted by Quartermaster Tomaso dal Molin, with an average speed of 284.20 miles an hour.

Third place was won for Great Britain by Flight Lieutenant d'Arcy Greig, with an average of 282.11 miles an hour. His Supermarine-Napier S-5, and dal Molin's plane, had been flown at Venice in the 1927 contest.

Italy's wonder Macchi seaplane did not do so well, as both Lieutenants Remo Cadringher and Giovanni Monti were forced down just after completing the first lap.

Snowden and Reparations

Victoria Colonist (Cons.): The war burden continues to be piled on Britain and it is to this that Mr. Snowden, on behalf of the British nation, is objecting. He is supported enthusiastically by the people of Britain and by all other peoples of the Empire. The latest so-called reparations settlement wil have to be recast, and in the recasting Britain has every right to insist that she will receive equally fair treatment as that awarded to any other nation in proportion to her claims.

Probe Mysteries Of Southern Pole

Sir Douglas Mawson Starting in Scott's Old Ship

MINERAL WEALTH

Australian Explorer's Third Trip to Ice-bound Continent

One of the most romatic ships ever to fly the British flag will sail from the West India Dock, London, in the course of the next few weeks in quest of a new civilisation.

She is Discovery, the historic vessel in which Scott made his expedition to the South Pole, and now commissioned by the Australian Government to probe again the continnet that is Antarctica.

Wealth is beyond the dreams of avarice lies hidden in this lone world of whiteness. Gold, coal, iron, minerals of almost every kind and sharacter abound there, buired deep under the ice and snow, safe—as far—from the hands of man.

The nation that could successfully colonise and exploit Antarctica would dominate the world. And whether the South Polar continent will ever bb able to suppot normal human life is one of the problems that is to be solved by the coming expodition, at the head of which will be that intrepid Polar explorer Sir Douglas Mawson.

STARTED AS CABIN BOY

The most interesting member of the ship's company is perhaps ex-Scout James W. S. Marr, a tough but schalarly young Scotsman, who has already packed more adventure into the 26 years of his life than many explorers twice his age.

In 1921, as Scout Marr, he became world-famous when the late Sir Ernest Shackleton selected him from hundreds of applicants as cabin-boy of the Quest.

After his return with the Shackleton expedition he studied at Aberdeen University, graduating in 1925. His gaduation was expedited in order that he should be able to join the Algarson expedition to the North Pole.

Since then he has been exploring in the Antarctic with a previous Discovery enterprise and he has now been appointed a specialist in the scientific section of the coming Mawson expedition.

He has written a book about his adventures and a graphic and gripping tale it is too. Told simply and modestly, and yet with the verse of youth, it is packed with thrills that are the envy of every bother Scout to-day.

Captain J. K. Davis, Mawson's old and tried friend of 1911-14 expedition, will be second in command of Discovery. There will be a crew of about 20, in addition to the scientists aboord.

There were requests from all over the world from those anxious to join the expedition. Si Douglas Mawson, however, does not believe that Scout Marrs are to be found every day of the week.

"I dislike pouring cold water on the enthusiasm of young clerks in city offices who are pining advenuture," he has said. "One's calling in life is so often a matte of change or the outcome of private commitments and responsibilities. But life on a Polar expedition calls for men of experience."

It calls, also he might have added, for men who can, if necessary, endure sufferings that beggar description.

Discovery now lies in the West India Dock, and is being busily fitted out for her great adventures. Short trials were undertaken last week.

THIRD TIME ON GRIM TRAIL

She could have no finer commander than Sir Douglas Mawson, whose brilliant scientific abilities are allied to almost superhuman courage and powes of endurance.

This will he his third trip to the little-known, ice-bound continent. His previous expeditions were in 1907-9, when as a member of Sir Ernest Shackleton's scientific staff, he was one of those to climb Mount Erebus and locate the South Magnetic Pole, and in 1911-14, when he again ventued South.

His party, at that time spent three summer and two winters in the Antarctic. They endured terrible hardships, and two lives were lost. Sir Douglas himself was one saved from death by chance. On his return he was knighted and decorated with the King's Polar Medal. He is now Professor of Grealogy at the University of Adelaide.

Although generally believed to be an Australian, Sir Douglas is, by birth, an Englishman. At the age of four he migrated with his family to the Commonwealth.

Fom an early age inspired by stories of Polu exploration, he was dreaming of the days when he himself should tread the grim trail to the pole.

Now in the early forties he is still fired with the impulse to return to the grim wates of the frozen unknown which has nearly been his grave.

At an age when many think of "arm-chair" life the call of the trail is, to him, still irresistible. Broad-shouldered, clean-shaven, with the straight, keen blue eyes of the adventurer, he longs to set out on what may well prove the most hazardous adventure of his life.

His expedition, he says, is purely in the interests of science. "There are great gaps along the coast-line to be charted, the salinity and movements of settlement life in the Antarctic regperhaps o greatest importance, the possibility of such a stretch as the South Polar Continent ever being able to support human life."

His own opinion, he says, is that the vision of a great Polar continent affording facilities for human life on a big scale will never come true, but he adds, "I see no reason why, in the future, small communities should not find life ther tolerable and in some cases advantageous."

Even to-day, he says although woman could not reasonably take part in Polar exploration, he sees no reason why they should not endure station o settlement life in the Antractic regions.

LOST HAIR AND NAILS

In the last expedition in which Sir Douglas participated, and in which, with his two companions dead, he wandered alone in the wilderness of snow and ice, he suffered terrible agonies.

He lost his hair and his nails. His skin peeled off in places, exposing the raw flesh. The soles of his feet, through walking habitually in fur boots, were skinless.

He had been living on dog-meat, and his stomach pains were such that he could only walk in certain attitudes.

Once he fell into a crevasse and dangled fourteen feet from a rope attached to his sledge. He hung over the seemingly bottomless chasm, unable to pull himself up, almost driven to the point of cutting the rope and ending everything.

But he defeated the temptation to "quit," and with superhuman effort drew himself hand over hand back to safety.

There was worse to come, however. His food supply ran completely out as he staggered along, alone, day after day- towards the relief hut. Suddenly, when almost all hope had gone, his amazed eyes saw a cairn in which a search had left a supply of food on the off-chance of its being discovered!

But for that stroke of fate Sir Douglas Mawson would not be alive to-day to lead this new expedition.

That is the type of man who is now going in quest of adventures new, the man who may open up to the world a vast new continent which will not only enrich mankind but will bring new honor and glory to Britain as a pioneer race.

Discovery will first sail for Australia where she will be joined by Sir Douglas Mawson, who will travel there by mail steamer. The port of embarkation for the Antarctic will probably be Hobart, Tasmania.

The Palestine Mandate

New York Times: Whatever may be said of the wisdom of the aspirations and activities of the Zionist organization in Palestine, it was given clear standing and undeniable rights by the British Government. Under the terms of the Palestine Mandate it was recognized as "an appropriate Jewish agency" for the purpose of advising and co-operating with the Administration of Palestine. It was placed under the protecting power of Great Britain. If that demands maintenance for some time to come of a large British force in Palestine, there is no escape from it. England has made herself responsible both morally and legally, and must be prepared to go every necessary length in showing that she intends to live up to her solemn obligations undertaken in the eyes of the whole world.

Race Equality Gandhi's Goal, Says Disciple

Dr. Andrews Charges "Religion of White Man Has Replaced Christianity" Attacks Imperial Policy

Racial Conscription Imposed in India, He Adds

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad.—Dr. Charles Frere Andrews, representative of the Delhi Brotherhood of India, has completed his work in British Guiana and is here for a brief stay before returning to India. Mr. Andrews, a Cambridge University man, is a devoted friend and co-worker of Mahatma Gandhi, and is also a professor in the school of Rabindranath Tagore, the Indian poet and philosopher. His mission to the West Indies was partly in connection with the immigration question, upon which he is an authority.

There are thousands of native Hindus in the West Indies imported as laborers. Thousands more are to be brought here. In Trinidad there is a large East Indian population.

In a statement made here on religions Dr. Andrews declared that the Christian religion at its inception stood for an equality of man.

Attacks Racial Religion.

"It was this that made Mahatma Gandhi such a profound believer in the British constitution as the champion of racial freedom," he said. "But the pendulum has swung back. The reaction came toward the close of the nineteenth century. Equality outside of the white races became a question. What has been called 'the religion of the white race' has taken the place of the Christian religion. This white race religion has carried with it imperial domination and economic exploitation. This has subtly undermined the British constitution and has left it to-day in many parts of the world merely a facade without any substantial background.

"The spread of white racialism has infected the Christian Church. In South Africa Mahatma Gandhi was refused admission to a Christian Church at Christmastide. We have a religion to-day which calls itself Christian but does not acknowledge the ultimate Christian principle of racial equality. This racial wrong is slowly destroying Christ's religion at its very root.

Calls For Spirit of Martyrdom

"Since the World War the racial evil has grown worse and worse. We have suffered terribly in India, where we have had a racial franchise and a racial conscription imposed, and an unjust color bar act in South Africa.

"It is no wonder that the Simon Commission to India, on which only whit men were allowed to sit, is called a 'white race commission.' Meanwhile churches that refuse communion to different races have spread a noxious epidemic which shows little sign of abatement. What is needed to-day is a revival of the spirit of martyrdom and sacrifice for the real Christian faith."

She: "No. You never even had the germ of an idea."

The Juvenile Court

Principles Upon Which the Institution is Founded

By J. J. KELSO

The Juvenile Court is founded on the assumption that children are not inherently bad, that their delinquencies are usually due to causes for which they are not responsible, and that by right methods these causes can be reached and removed, and the child encouraged and assisted to develop character under healthy, normal conidtions.

It should be an educational rather than a police tribunal, conducted by specially selected persons and held in premises different from the ordinary legal courts, either as an adjunct to the school system, or under the auspices of a society specializing in child protection. Its aim is not to convict young children, but to protect them even from the consequences of their own thoughtless acts; to warn, and if need be to punish the tempters or corrupters of youth, and to so improve the environment as to effectually prevent a recurrence of the trouble.

The child safeguarded and protected means much to the community in the prevention of crime, and the peaceful exolution of industrial citizenship. Crime renders property and human life unsafe, is one of the heaviest items of taxation, and can only be eradicated or limited by a complete and thorough system of child protection.

Any one can decide in five minutes whether or not a youth is guilty of theft or some other offence and liberate or banish him to a reformatory, but either decision may be equally unjust and the problem still remain unsolved. The court should be parental in the truest sense and should be so constituted in all its branches as to make the child intuitively realize that love and not hostility is the atmosphere into which he has entered.

When social workers have studied moral conditions ,visited wretched homes, comprehended the utter absence of real affection, the heart hunger, the longing for appreciation and sympathy, then they begin to realize that through the Juvenile Court the erring youth can be brought into contact with true friends and given an opportunity under more favorable auspices to develop worthy character.

The presiding officer of a Juvenile Court should be a man of sound judgment, optimistic and philanthropic, a student of social problems and a lover of children. He cannot do the whole work of reformation, but he can wisely direct, inspire and control the probation officers and volunteers who aid him in the good work.

Much depends upon the number and efficiency of the probation officers, for they have to investigate and report upon character, conduct and home conditions; watch over the schooling or employment, become the friend and adviser of the family and generally to so impress his or her personality upon the child as to effectually restore him to good living. Young business men, teachers and the workers connected with charitable societies and social settlements should be enlisted in this humane enterprise.

The proceedings of the Juvenile Coust should be entirely private and informal, and newspapers should be asked not to publish the follies anh so-called crimes of children. This publicity is not only extremely hurtful in later years to the young people concerned, but so far from proving a deterrent to others, many boys have been known to do wrong in order to get into the papers.

The Juvenile Court stands for a loving, sympathetic and patient effort to win the child over to a recognization of the virtue of being good for its own sake. to awaken ambition, to inspire with high ideals, to stimulate growth in all that makes for manliness and good citizenship. The neglect of children in the past has given us blighted lives, misspent careers, crowded jails, innumerable tragedies, vast expense. Isnt it worth while to make the Juvenile Court thoroughly efficient so that it can, as far as humanly possible, stop all this?—From the National Review, Albany, N.Y.

Reds in Toronto

Toronto Star (Ind.): The police must have possession of the seditious writings which the Reds have been circulating and the police commission must have, through their secret agents reports of seditious utterances in meetings they have attended. Why not go ahead and prosecute these known offenders in the courts and according to laws framed for the purpose? Why wait until rows and rumpuses have gone from bad to worse before taking that legal action that will have to be resorted to in the end before anything decisive can be done? The slapping and booting of offenders—and non-offenders—may provide a sensational entertainment, but it causes greater disorders than it cures.

SWANKY SPORTS TYPE.

It's youthfully chic, comfortable and wearable, interpreted in Wales blue printed silk crepe. The diagonal neckline is emphasized by use of plain blending tone silk crepe applied bands. Sleeves have turn-down flared cuff. Hipline is extremely slender while plaits at left side of skirt provide necessary width and flare. Style No. 645 comes in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. Race Jealousy in S. Africa

Christchurch Press (N.Z.): The truth is that the dying down of racial jealousies in South Africa is going to be such a gradual process that the result of one election is neither here nor there. The history of Canada has shown us that it is quite possible for two racial elements to exist side by side in one State without a serious upheaval, even though there may be friction.

The fruit-fly quarantine, we are told has just about stopt dum-running from Florida. We felt sure from the first that this thing would have serious conquences.—Nashville Southern Lumberman.

DESERTING OLD SOL

Clock Setter Says Fixed Stars Now Believed to Be Best Regulators —Advantages Pronounced.

The sun, man's first ally in the measurement of time, has been deserted for fixed stars as science has stepped in for standard recording.

That fact is brought out in the National Museum in an exhibit, newly completed by Dr. Carl Mitman, which traces time measuring devices from the days when a shadow cast by an upright stick in the ground was the only gauge, says a Washington despatch.

The globe now is the great master clock by which all time pieces are adjusted. Standard time, sent out by the United States Naval Observatory, is reckoned from frequent observations of fixed stars through a six-inch telescope.

The telescope swings past the same fixed star every time the earth rotates. The period of rotation is called a sidereal day and is a little less than four minutes shorter than an ordinary mean solar day because of the apparent motion of the sun among the stars.

Observations of stars, rather than the sun, have three advantages. There are eight fixed stars available. The nearness of the sun to the earth causes a distortion of position because of the atmosphere clinging about the world. Moreover, the sun is too large. Its centre cannot be fixed, whereas the stars are like pin points in the sky.

The history of timepieces is a tale of man's effort to become less dependent directly on the sun. Sundials were of no use in the dark and the need for devices which measured hours during the night brought progress in a new direction.

An early form was the sinking dish, dating back to 4,000 B.C. A bowl with a tiny hole in the bottom was floated in a pool of water. As it became full, it sank and a gong was sounded by a slave to denote that another unit of time had passed.

The water clock followed, in which running liquid actuated a mechanism and registered the effect on a dial. Such a device, called a clepsydra, was used by Caesar during the Roman invasion of Gaul. He was chagrined one morning to arise and find his clock had stopped. The water had frozen.

To overcome the difficulty of liquid that froze in cold water and evaporated in torrid countries, the sand glass was devised.

The regular burning of a candle, rope, or stick of compressed wood dust was a popular form of timepiece. Candle nuts, strung on a shaft of palm wood, burned evenly because of their waxy composition.

Present day watches and clocks found their beginnings early in the fourteenth century. The mechanical escapement did not come into use until 1364 and the pendulum after 1660. Early wood parts gave way to metal.

MAKING BLACK DIAMONDS.

Many Ways of Making Stone Appear More Than Its Value.

Traders who come into this diamond province of Matto Grosso to barter goods of the outside world for the glittering products of the washes must know their diamonds if they would make a profit in their deals, says a correspondent from Cuyaba, Brazil.

There are many ways of making a stone appear more than its value and one of these is cooking a light stone with a pot of black beans all night and then selling it to a trader for a black diamond. The darker hue is only temporary, however, and there is seldom a trader who cannot detect a real black diamond from a cooked one.

Prospectors in the diamond sections here are from every race under the sun, men as hard as those of the gold days of forty-nine or later Alaska fields. Quick to fight in defence of their property, or real or fancied wrongs, these men are real survivors of the fittest in the fields where the law of civilization and crowds is unknown. Any prospector has no hesitancy in leaving his poke of diamonds lying carelessly on a table and no one will attempt to steal it. The reputation of these men as quick on the draw or with a knife thrust is such that their diamonds left lying about are perfectly safe from thieving hands.

AN UPLIFT BODY.

Chinese Officers Encouraged in Good Conduct.

A moral endeavor society for cadets in the Nanking Military College and for officers in the army has been organized under the direct patronage of President Chiang Kai-shek and his wife. The society has its own quarters which house a Chinese cafeteria selling only Chinese foods, and a co-operative store. It offers opportunity for athletics and gives musical instruction in both western and oriental band music. Group singing is also promoted. The educational department offers classes in English, mathematics and in Japanese.

The organization gets its name from the type of pledges all must make upon joining the society. These pledges have to do with personal conduct, and include items such as refraining from gambling, lying, impure living and borrowing money. Chiang Kai-shek himself drew up the pledges. The society is proving increasingly popular.

A Catch.

Here is a good little catch you can try on one of your chums.

Go up to him and say: "I saw a man run over himself yesterday!"

Of course, your chum will be sure to say you are talking nonsense; then you say:

"Oh, but it's quite true! The man asked a boy to run over to a shop for him, the boy refused, so the man ran over himself!"

. . . here is one cause of . . . "LINE'S BUSY" . . . time wasted

ANYONE trying to call this telephone will be told by the operator: "Line's Busy". But the line is not busy. It is really idle. Someone at the other end of the office is wanted and the telephone waits there until he arrives.

The idle telephone, with its receiver off the hook, is a common cause of "Line's Busy", and a common cause of uncompleted calls which are wasting two million minutes every day in Ontario and Quebec. Other causes of unnecessary "Line's Busy" are inadequate office equipment, long conversations during peak hours, trying to repeat too soon after the "busy" report, and asking another to get your party for you.

Many offices may not need more telephones, but they do need to have their present telephones more conveniently located. You may be losing calls because your line is thus "Busy" but really idle. And you may be losing business.

We want you to have the best possible telephone service and we are making every effort to provide it.* We are ready at any time to survey your telephone equipment and submit a report.

New telephone plant and service improvements will mean an outlay, for 1929 alone, of more than $27,000,000.

Heart to Heart Talk

By Dr. John Joseph Haines

LESSONS

My neighbor and friend has a strawberry field, which he cultivates for the market. His success depends of course on his diligence and the weather conditions.

The last crop came through under difficulties; the heavy spring rains beat furiously on the tender plants; it seemed for a time that they would be buried in mud and destroyed. But, at each gleam of sunshine, they sprang to life and vigor again; it was a struggle—a very hard one. At last, however, they grew strong, burst into bloom, and soon ripened the choicest berries I have ever seen. They were sweeter, the neighbor said, for their having plenty of moisture which gave renewed vigor and more active growth. Had there been no clouds, rain and mud, he would not have had half a crop, and that inferior berries.

I thought of myself as a plant in this large field of humanity. When storms beat upon me I sank down from the chill and force of the pelting drops. I was powerless to resist; I had to submit to whatever came, because I could not prevent its coming.

But, the glorious part of it was, I didn't despair and fall down discouraged and helpless. There were gleams of sunshine through the clouds every now and then, more appreciated by their contrast with the cold and clouds. I was able through courage and faith to rise above the storms of adversity, and, whatever of good fruit I have borne, has ripened because of my faith that regards everything for the best.

Human plants are much the same, and subject to the same laws as those of the vegetable kingdom. If we fail to weather the gales, we are weaklings and may perish by reason of the fact. Courage is better than fear, and will carry us through with divine guidance to re-assure us along the way.

United Church W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held Sept. 13tn, in the Sunday School rooms.

Mrs George Armstrong, Cor. Sec., reported by proxy, five letters written, three received. The Treasurers report showed the financial situation satisfactory. Mesdames Slater and Faith had made visits in the interests of the Flower Fund.

Missionary items of timely interest were given by Mrs Helmer, Mrs. Preston Mrs Duncan, Mrs. Ault and Mrs. Nesbitt. Mrs. Waddell led the devotional period,

Mrs. Fay Scott Convener of program committee, introduced the subject "Pioneer Days in Canada," and also Mesdames Preston, Quart and Summers who told the story brimming with interest.

First place among our pioneers was given to Samuel de Champlain who spent the winter of 1604 on a small island off the coast of New Brunswick where thirty five of his seventy nine men died. He returned to France but four years later returned to further explore this new country, believing that its waterways would prove a direct route to China and its riches. He brought with him Father Joseph la Caron as missionary to friendly and unfriendly Indian tribes.

They landed and read Mass near the present town of Penetanguishene where a beautiful white cross, commemorative of that event, now stands.

Many years later the U E. Loyalists, Pennsylvania, Dutch and Scottish Highlanders and others, largely Protestants arrived in great numbers establishing churches and schools in the order named.

The Anglicans held their first service in 1710 and built their first church in Halifax in 1750.

The Congregationalists were the second to begin work, building the "Cotton Mathers" church, also in Halifax in 1750.

Presbyterian Churches were established in 1764.

The Methodist Church began its work with lay preachers and ordained its first minister, Wm. Black, in 1786. To this denomination, through its minister, Egerton Ryerson, belongs the victory in the struggle against a state church in Canada.

The Baptists began their work in Nova Scotia in 1778. To them belongs the honour of publishing the first church paper "The Missionary Magazine" in 1828.

The Scotch Presbyterians invaded the Red River district where they held the faith and waited forty years for their first minister. Thus in brief, the story of Missions in Canada runs.

A duet by Mrs. Dennis and Mrs. M. Wallace fittingly told again Salvation's story.

Mrs. O. Wallace gave a reading, "Beginning at Jerusalem," which deeply impressed itself. Shall we not pray that we as witnesses of these things, do our part to help make Canada a Christian nation.

"Still stands their ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart;
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget."

Recently Purchased Property

He has been very successful in his business and is going in a larger scale, also turning to the poultry business as well. Mr. Summers since his purchase has built a large poultry house to accomodate five hundred hens. At present the house is being all newly decorated and wired, the Beach Electric Co. furnishing the power for house, hennery and bee house. Bryson and Graham Ltd. Mountain

On Thursday night Prayer Meeting was observed as usual in the United Church. At the close of the meeting Miss Evelyn Cheney was asked to come forward, prior to her leaving to take up a household science course at Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph While Mrs. (Dr.) A. Hoy and Miss Alice Weaver made the presentation of a wardrobe case and umbrella. On behalf of the congregation Rev. A. O. Lloyd read the following address:—

Dear Evelyn—This is to be your last choir practice among us. We would like to feel to-night that you are at least a little lonesome. You have always been faithful to your duty as Church Organist, since you assumed that duty last year, and there have probably been times when that duty has taken you away from following your own personal inclinations. To-night we want to thank you for your faithfulness. You have also been faithful in your duty as Sunday School Organist for a long time, and for that also we desire to express our appreciation. We are going to miss you and we hope you are going to miss us. As a token of appreciation and our regard we would ask you to accept these gifts together with our best wishes for your future success.

Signed on behalf of the Congregation

The Brotherhood of Man

It matters not if one may be
A Christian or a Jew.
Or whether he be humbly born
Or if his blood be "blue."

If he be clean and earn his bread
By honest and faithful toil
And if no base, dishonest deed
His willing hands may soil;

If in the race no deed unfair
Doth rob the weak of right;
And he doth share another's grief
And make some burden light;

No word untrue of his doth bring
Reproach to some fair name;
And he is ever quick to praise
And always slow to blame;

If, like the good Samaritan,
He helps another's need,
He's true to God no matter what
May be his race or creed.

For such is what the Father taught
Since first the world began,
That peace and love should join us in
The Brotherhood of Man.

Hints for the Home

by Nancy Hart

DID YOU KNOW— it's the thing now to have bath towels in different colors, one for each member of the family? And that most exquisite pastel colors are available—colors that make the bathroom seem like the end of the good fairy's rainbow, with peach, orchid, jade, maize, turquoise, rose, all hobnobbing together in delightful harmony.

In sanitary interests the idea was begun, the motive being to make it easy for each member of the household to detect instantly his or her own towel. For differences in color are comprehended with much greater ease than variations in shape, size or location.

All in all, we think it a charming innovation. Not only does it enliven those old-fashioned dead white bath rooms that are so woefully out of date, but it relieves us of our job of Supervisor of the Racks. When Bobby gets used to his jade towel, he never thinks of reaching for Eleanor's in peach; nor does he dare to besmirch the big, fluffy maize towel that belongs to Dad alone.

Strange that color could settle this annoying family problem without a single word of argument.

To Cook Ham

Prepared as follows, ham will have a tenderness and juiciness that can be obtained in no other way: Cut a slice of ordinary thickness; take off a few pieces of fat and place in a frying pan over the fire, allow fat to fry for a few moments, then put in ham and cook five minutes, turning once. Pour enough boiling water in pan to cover ham, cover with lid and cook from 8 to 10 minutes, turning ham once.

Creamed Spinach

Cook 2 lbs. spinach, drain and chop fine; return to fire, add 1 tbls. butter, salt and pepper and stir until butter melts. Add 2 tbls. cream and 2 hard-cooked egg yolks chopped fine.

Peach Salad

Scald, peel and halve ripe peaches; chill them; fill centers with chopped blanched almonds and tiny cubes of mild yellow cheese. Dust with paprika, serve on iced lettuce leaf with French dressing.

Almond Sticks

Roll puff paste or short pie-crust 1 inch thick; brush with white of egg and sprinkle with shredded almonds and powdered sugar. Cut in strips ½ inch wide and 3 inches long. Chill and bake in quick oven.

Packing Bottles for Traveling

To prevent possibility of leaking liquid when packing bottles in the traveling bag—pull over the top of each bottle a rubber finger stall or finger from an old kid glove. Then if stopper is inserted firmly, it will not work loose or permit leakage.

Renewing Old Brass Beds

Painted metal furniture is quite the vogue just now, and the smartest finish is one in pastel colors. So treat shabby iron or brass beds to a coat of good metal paint in some shade harmonious with your color scheme.

Your After-Summer Complexion

No matter how much you have read and heard about the necessity for preventing bad cases of sunburn and tan, the chances are that this month finds you with at least minor discolorations and probably major ones.

And now as you begin to plan your new fall wardrobe you are realizing that, however becoming tan may be on the beach and with summer frocks, it is not the most becoming complexion with the formal styles and colors of fall.

Will you bleach, then? It is one sure way to be certain of a skin that looks lovely with any color at any time during the coming season. For remember, if you do wish to be tan with some colors you can always wear a gypsy powder!

The bleach you use will depend upon the result you wish to obtain. In the first place, there are all varieties of tan to contend with, from the light golden to the deep copper-bronze, which usually remains well into the winter months.

For a mild tan try the following recipes: Make an infusion of parsley and horseradish and apply it to the skin. Horseradish infusion is made by pouring a cup of boiling water on two tablespoons of freshly ground horseradish. Parsley infusion is made in the same way. Cool, strain, mix them and use together.

To remove a deep tan try this stronger preparation: Mix magnesia and rosewater into a paste. Leave it on the skin from 15 to 20 minutes and wash off with water softened with oatmeal or almond meal. The oatmeal may be thrown loose into the water or tied into a little cheesecloth bag.

If you are still suffering from the irritation of sunburn, bathe with lime water and olive oil to which a small portion of boric acid is added. Use one part of lime water to two parts of oil, adding about five percent boric acid.

For severe cases of freckles and tan that do not respond to this treatment, procure a reputable freckle or bleaching cream and use according to direction.
