CORNWALL BOY KILLED SLIDING ON HILL

Sliding under an automobile on his hand sleigh on Monday, Raoul Ayotte, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Ayotte, Cornwall, was badly crushed and died in Hotel Dieu hospital Tuesday morning. The little lad was rushed to the hospital immediately after the accident but failed to regain consciousness. No inquest will be held.

With a number of companions, Raoul had been sliding down a steep hill at the foot of Guy street. When his turn came to glide down the hill, he gleefully jumped on the sleigh and was about half way down the hill, when an automobile, driven by Lucien Benoit, Crysler, turned up the street. Unnoticed, the child on the sleigh went directly under the front of the car, his head coming in contact with the front axle.

JAMIESON SCHOLARSHIPS

At the regular meeting of the Morrisburg Board of Education, held on Monday evening last, it was unanimously agreed to establish memorial scholarships at the M.C.I., to be known as the "J.S. Jamieson Memorial Scholarships".

As a fitting tribute to the memory of a principal who gave the best of his teaching career to our Collegiate, which brought the local institution to such a high standard, citizens generally, as well as many ex-students of the late Mr. J.S. Jamieson in all walks of life, will commend the action of the Board in establishing this well-merited remembrance.

The Scholarships will be effective on this school year's work. They will be awarded as follows:

In First Form—Three prizes of $5.00 $3.00 and $2.00, awarded to the three pupils with the highest standing for the year.

In All Other Forms—Two prizes in each form, one to the pupil with the highest standing in the form for the year, and one to the pupil showing the greatest improvement over his previous year's record. Each prize will be $5.00.

The scholarships will be awarded each year at the Commencement Exercises.

MRS. CHAS. CASSELMAN

A kind and faithful mother, in the person of Mrs. Chas. Casselman, died at the Cornwall General Hospital on Wednesday of last week, at the age of 72. The remains were conveyed to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Coir of Morrisburg, where services were conducted by Rev. S.B. Holmes, after which the remains were placed in St. James cemetery.

The late Mrs. Casselman, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Prunner, was born in Nudell Bush in 1863. She was united in marriage to Mr. Chas. Casselman, who predeceased her several years ago.

She is survived by two daughters and seven sons, namely: Mrs. Harry Coir of Morrisburg and Mrs. Lottie Hamilton of Miami, Florida; Homer of Windsor, Robert and Major, of Cornwall; Lorne of Montreal, Fred Hazel and William, Morrisburg. She is also survived by four brothers, Ernest, John, Nelson and David Pruner, and two sisters, Miss Ruby Pruner and Mrs. Wm. Gogo, Montreal.

MR. GEO. E. SUFFEL

There passed away at his late residence at Inkerman, on Friday last, one of the most prominent and respected citizens of Mountain township in the person of George Edward Suffel, in his 75th year.

The late Mr. Suffel had been in indifferent health during the past five years, although he had been able to carry on his work until last August, when he was troubled with severe heart attacks. His strength gradually failed and he passed quietly away on Friday evening.

Deceased was the son of the late Richard Suffel and his wife, Mary Jane Corrigan, pioneer settlers of Mountain township, and had lived his entire life on the old homestead where he had been engaged in active farming. For many years the late Mr. Suffel had conducted a thriving business in lumber, flour and feed, and coal, but ill health had foreed him to abandon business in recent years.

Forty-seven years ago he was married to Miss Jennie Wert, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wert of Iroquois, who survives, with two sons, Arnold Suffel at home, and Dr. Gordon Suffel of Noranda.

The funeral was held on Monday last from his late residence to the United Church, Inkerman, where service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. R.C. McConnell. Interment was made in the family plot at Knight's Cemetery.

AUTO LICENSES TIME EXTENDED

The Ontario Government has extended the time limit on purchases of 1936 license plates for both commercial and passenger vehicles, it has been announced.

Hon. T.B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, stated that passenger-car permits and drivers' licenses would be valid until Jan. 15, an extension of two weeks from the former time limit of Dec. 31.

Commercial vehicles and trailers get a somewhat greater extension in time to purchase their permits. The 1935 markers will be valid until the last day of February.

Reason for the longer time on commercial cars—trucks and trailers—was that the Government believed that many of the truckers depended upon continuous operation for their livelihood.

The second game was the feature of the evening, and the Morrisburg team was extended far greater by University of Ottawa than the score would indicate.

ARTHUR FLYNN Morrisburg, Ont

The GREEN GHOST

by Stuart Martin

SYNOPSIS

Maud Barron awakes with a premonition of disaster. She hears padding footsteps. Rushing into her father's study she finds him dead.

Dr. Sidney Foster, a friend, is joined by Detective "One Eye" Uttock, a mulatto, who has never lost a man.

Maud Barron and Hughes return to England. Dr. Foster gives Maud his address in case of need. He receives a telegram informing him "The Ghost" has reappeared. Foster takes Elsie Monteith for drive.

"Perhaps it is so," Elsie admitted. "I will let mine go back to its natural shade. Peroxide impoverishes the hair, I'm told. As for the 'fast' women, what about the men who run after them? Oh, men. Sometimes I think there is not much left in life if we take away the enchantment of being young.

THE WALK DOWNHILL

She stretched out her hand and touched his that was gripping the front of the seat.

"Shall we walk over the hill? It is getting misty now."

"Let us go down this way, said Foster, pointing to the right. "We can follow the track downhill, and it will bring us out somewhere near the hotel."

There was a curious langour in the air. The earth was settling to sleep with a soft hesitancy, a dreamy haziness. Twilight was fast fading into night. The stars were beginning to emerge from the lepths of velvet space. Down in the town of Dorking the first lights were twinkling, yellow and ruddy.

"I am surprised that you do not take a big role in your profession," said Foster as they moved at a sauntering gait by the fringe of woods. "What you have shown me about yourself proves that you have great understanding."

"They don't want understanding on the stage. They want dancers just now."

"But you've shown me that you can do that too!"

"That wasn't dancing. It was just kicking and swinging. I've done dancing too. but that was in an opera company. We did one show a night, toured the East—Cairo, Calcutta, and went on to other places. Oh, yes. I've danced. One of my numbers was the part of a native girl. I had little on in that dance, just a few yards of coloured muslin and a corsage and tights. It generally fetched the stalls. The asses!"

"Meaning?"

"Oh. some of them came thinking that they had bought the show instead of only a box. They used to invite the girls out to supper and then they thought they could play the goat."

She pointed to the fire that had now grown to considerable dimensions in the distant woods. The flames were rising out of the dark trees, licking the tops of them, and above the flames billows of smoke were rolling down to the valley.

"Isn't that lovely," she cried.

She seemed to lose her animation as she gazed at the spectacle. She had gone exceedingly pale all at once, but her eyes sparkled and a pink spot had appeared in both her cheeks. Foster marvelled at the sudden change in her, and he found himself holding her arm tightly, as if he feared she would dash down the hill in her excitement. They stood looking at the fire, silent and thrilled. As a column of flame shot up into the air she took a step back and pressed close to him. His hand slid from her arm and held her waist; and then, slowly, as one who settles to rest, she turned her face to him and leaned on his shoulder, her face upturned and her fascinating eyes fixed on his.

"Come!" she said in a low, quivering tone.

Her arms slid round him, enfolding his body with a movement that had something snake-like in it. She held him captive, as if she feared to let him go, and her eyes were still fixed on his. The pressure she exerted on him was frantic, irresistible, more than he had dreamed her capable of.

Her head seemed to rise to meet his. There may have been tears in her eyes, he was never sure, but he was sure of the suffocating ardour of her embrace. She was trembling in every limb. He felt her form thrilling against his, she seemed to be consumed by a fever. Up came her mouth, the delicious lips seeking his, and finding them as a sigh escaped her.

"Come! Do you know that I love you, Sidney Foster?"

CHAPTER XI

"THAT KISS!"

The hum of a car on the road above them sounded and their hands slipped from each other. But the car was not near them; it was one bearing visitors to the hill away on the high road..

Elsie Monteith stood very still, her eyes grown less hazy, and looking out from under her brows at Foster. Her bosom rose and fell, and her hands went out and caught his shoulders.

"Well?" she asked breathlessly.

"Well?" he answered.

He was panting astounded, wondering if it had been a dream.

Something in his face revealed the thought that was struggling in his mind. She was about to put her arms round him when she saw that look, and her hands dropped to her sides.

Removing Causes The Only Remedy

Slums Cannot be Removed by Merely Removing the Buildings

Hamilton.—The remedy for the modern slum is not only the replacement of wretched dwellings by better ones, but the removal of causes that inevitably lead to slum conditions. So long as a large portion of the community is maintained on relief, or on wages that are little better than that, slum conditions will develop, for, almost invariably, the first factor to suffer in conditions of poverty is the houses in which the poor are sheltered. As these causes have their roots in the realm of the spiritual, it is, therefore imperative that the church use its energy and influence to have them removed.

This statement of Prof. John Line, of Emmanuel College, before a record meeting here, evoked a keen and animated discussion. Prof. Line is leading an intensive study of the report of the General Council of the United Church on Christianizing the Social Order.

The speaker treated in some detail the achievements and defects of modern industry. He pointed out that the development of machinery and the factory system during the past two centuries had transformed society from an era of scarcity to one of plenty and had released men and women from long hours of exhausting drudgery.

"Growing capacity for co-operation and marvelous development in communications have facilitated a conquest of the earth in its material aspects, such as was never previously achieved," he said.

"Despite all this, however, we are today confronted with a new fact—dire want in the midst of plenty. Production has been restricted and goods destroyed for the purpose of raising prices.

"In the presence of such fear, insecurity and inequality, the pursuit of higher interests becomes difficult, and 'stunted minds and stultified characters ensue.' Individualism, materialism and a competitive system are crowding out growth toward wider co-operation and world brotherhood."

What's the Matter With Marriage?

Clergyman Tells All—Giving Faults of Both Husbands and Wives

PHILADELPHIA—The Rev. Ivan H. Hagedorn, pastor of the Bethel Lutheran Church, answers his own question of "What's the trouble with men and women in modern marriage?"

The trouble with men, he told a meeting of couples he married, is:

1. They are impatient. 2. They are lazy. 3. They are skeptical. 4. They never seem to adjust themselves to the new status of women. 5. They are conceited. 6. They have a mean streak of taking for granted the constancy of their wives. 7. They are unmindful of little things. 8. They are too easily run into a mould — a mould that won't keep shape.

Of women, he said: 1. They are too fond of regulating men. 2. They have no sense of humor. 3. They are possessive. 4. They are argumentative. 5. They are sensitive and touchy. 6. They whine. 7. They often possess the crepe-hanging impulse. 8. They do not keep abreast of the times.

In conclusion, Mr. Hagedorn urged men to "marry by all means. If you get a good wife, you will become very happy. If you get a bad one, you will become a philosopher."

Be Thankful

Too many of us are blinded by little setbacks—thinking only of the misfortunes that seem to keep overtaking us, and not of the good things, which we take quite as a matter of course.

In other words, are you grateful enough that it is not worse?

There are comparatively few who could not be thankful for something.

Lives might be much brighter if consideration were given to the sunshine of life instead of bewailing what can't be helped.

Don't you have many things in your life that others have not, and would enjoy?

Yes, there are many worse off than you are. You have but to look around.

These others are victims of circumstances; have the same troubles that you have, and possibly more.

If you have health, you should be thankful.

Health is the greatest blessing.

Don't bemoan your fate when you are well.

FAITHFUL DOG STILL ON JOB

But "Rikie" Moves Slower After 11 Years of Standing Guard

Winnipeg.—Mary's little lamb followed her to school one day. But Miss Jean Aitken's dog kept it up.

For 11 years faithful "Rikie" has followed Miss Aitken to her work in the Manitoba legislative building, waited around until she was finished in the evening and then escorted her home.

The big airdale is getting a bit stiff now. It is becoming more difficult for him to trot the two miles from Miss Aitken's home to the Parliament buildings.

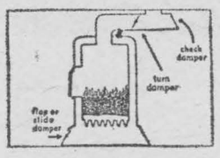
And more and more, "Rikie" is showing a disposition to sleep during the hours of waiting, relaxing just a little the guard he keeps over His Majesty's mail in the provincial post office where he spends his time from 9 a.m. to 5 o'clock.

Ever since he was seven months old "Rikie" has escorted Miss Aitken to and from her place of employment. He leaves her at the east entrance to the building, trots down to the post office in the basement and, sharp at 5, is waiting outside the door.

There was a time when a parcel came through the mail for "Rikie," addressed simply "Rikie." Post office employes knew where to deliver it. When it was opened out fell one good dog biscuit.

HEATING HINTS by James Stewart

HERE'S a suggestion for getting up heat quickly on cold mornings: First, shake the grates gently until the first red glow appears in the ashpit. Then open the Ashpit Damper and let the fire burn briskly. Ordinarily it will not be necessary to put on fresh fuel as there should be enough left from the night before. If some fuel is needed just put on a thin layer at first. Then when the fire is burning briskly and the house is warm add a full charge of coal and set the dampers for normal operation.



If at any time the fire gets very low so that it is nearly out, do not smother it with a full charge of fuel. Open the Ashpit Damper, close the Check Damper and add small quantities of fuel at a time. Then when the fire is again burning brightly, gently shake the grates and add a full charge of fuel.

The Book Shelf

BY MAIR M. MORGAN

"THE CLUE OF THE RISING OON", by Valentine Williams (Musson's, Toronto), is one of Mr. Williams' best mystery-thrillers. The suspects are cleverly dispersed and it is not until the very last chapter that the murderer is revealed. Too, the explanation of what took place is logically explained, which is always eminently satisfying in all Valentine Williams' books.

"THE UNCROWNED KING," by Baroness Orczy, (Musson's, Toronto) author of "The Scarlet Pimpernel," upholds this author's reputation as a writer of romantic tales, well-peppered with adventure and action.

Louis XIX., the uncrowned King of France, Veronique Christopher, the millionaire's daughter, Cyril Bertrand, half-brother to the Prince of the Bourbon's, and bearing a strong family resemblance, Aline Saint-Armand, ambitions young actress, but truly loving Louis XIX.—these are some of the principals of this tale who act, move and have their being in the best Baroness Orczy style.

"THE WEDDING," by Denis MacKail, (Musson's, Toronto) is a book all married folk will enjoy, whether they had a big splash when they walked up the aisle or whether it was a quiet affair —the emotions, worries, mishaps are all there. You are introduced to every member participating in a big social wedding, and at the end of the book, so well-written it is, that you feel you have been present and you definitely feel the urge to wish the bride and groom the best of luck!

"SUNSHINE STEALER," by Berta Ruck, (Musson's), is a romantic story of one Carmen Allen and Jim Travers. Carmen, of Spanish and English blood, is a lonely orphan in London. She finds a wallet containing fifty pounds. Yielding to the power of advertising — a cruise in sunny waters — she buys a ticket. And then her troubles begin. Jim Travers, detective, has also felt the urge to escape London fog. There you have a situation that only Bertha Ruck could unraval to a satisfactory conclusion.

'THE SHINING CLOUD" by Marg. Pedler (Musson's) introduces Gillian Kemsley and her brother Ronnie at the moment of their father's death, when they discover they have been left penniless. They rise nobly to the occasion and secure a position as host and hostess at a resort hotel. Gillian, attractive and impulsive, meets and falls in love with a reclusive living on an island across from the bay. What was the secret that kept these two lovers apart? A thrilling romance that will appeal to all.

"THE SUN and the SEA" by Ruby M. Ayers (Musson's) "After You, Who Could I Love?" The words of the song found a sad little echo in Julie's heart. She wos decidedly unhappy—even though she was actually on a Mediterranean cruise after years of genteel poverty in a London flat. The whole trouble was that she loved Tod Goddard — and he was being nice to her in a pitying way. Well, if she couldn't have Tod, she would not have anyone. Julie knew that Arthur Poley, who was kind and wealthy and forty-five, was going to propose and she didn't want him to. There was nothing she wanted except to lose the ache in her heart for Tod.

"Asylum" by William Seabrook (Geo. J. McLeod, Ltd.,) a detailed record of the bewildering life in any asylum, experenced by the author.

"The Tragedy of Henry Thornton" by D'Arcy Marsh is the story of a man's life tied up with the destiny of a great railway during the Nineteen-Twenties.

GIFT - GIVING

We hope as you read these lines that you are possessed of the comfortable glow that can only come from virtuous knowledge that all your Christmas packages are ready to the last holly sprig and bow of red ribbon for delivery to their ultimate owners. All the same, even the most fore-handed giver usually finds a few leaks in her careful campaign of preparedness.

To staunch those in a way that will make everybody happy, we are suggesting that you go right out to the kitchen and make up a few glasses of jelly to have handy for last-minute presents.

Mint jelly has all the glow of Christmas and is easy to make besides. For a rich Yuletide red, take the juice of canned strawberries or red raspberries and boil it down. There are always cranberries, too, and if you've never tried turning grape juice into jelly, now's the time to do it. Peaches and pineapple are also good, just use the juice from the canned ones.

Relish is another Christmassy looking kitchen present — the green of peppers and cabbage, the red of beets and pimentos make a perfect holiday color scheme.

Mint Jelly

One-half cup good cider vinegar, 1 cup water, 3¼ cups granulated sugar, ⅞ cup commercial pectin, ½ to 1 teaspoon mint extract, few drops green coloring.

Put vinegar, water and sugar into a large sauce pan. Mix and bring to the boiling point. Add coloring and as soon as mixture boils add pectin, stirring constantly. Bring again to a full boil and boil hard for thirty seconds. Remove from fire, skim and add extract to taste. Pour at once into sterilized glass, cover with parafin and when cold cover with another layer of paraffin.

Cranberry Jelly

Two pounds (2 quarts) ripe cranberries, 4 cups water, 5 ½ cups granulated sugar, ½ cup commercial pectin.

Put water and cranberries in a large sauce pan and bring to the boiling point. Cover and simmer ten minutes. Rub through a strainer. There should be 7½ cups pulp and juice. Add water if necessary. Combine sugar and fruit and bring quickly to the boiling point, stirring constantly. The mixture must boil hard. Begin to count the time when hard boiling begins and boil hard, stirring constantly, for one minute. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Skim and pour at once into sterilized glasses. Cover with paraffin as in preceding recipe.

Grape Juice Jelly

Two cups grape juice, 3 cups granulated sugar, ½ cup commercial pectin.

Put sugar and juice into a large sauce pan and mix well. Bring quickly to the boiling point and add pectin, stirring constantly. Boil hard for thirty seconds. Remove from fire, skim and pour at once into sterilized glasses. Cover with paraffin.

Beet Relish

Two pounds beets, 6½ cups granulated sugar, 1½ cups cider vinegar, 1 cup commercial pectin.

Cook beets until tender, plunge into cold water and slip skins. Put through coarse knife of food chopper. Pack firmly in measuring cup and measure 2 cups. Put sugar and vinegar into kettle. Add beets and mix well. Bring quickly to boiling point, stirring constantly. Boil hard for two minutes, stirring. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Skim and stir alternately for five minutes. Pour into sterilized glasses and cover with paraffin.

Pepper Relish

This makes a green relish which is very pretty to serve with the beet relish. Beets and peppers are always in market so these relishes are splendid to make for Christmas.

One dozen green peppers, 6½ cups light brown sugar, 1½ cups cider vinegar, 1 cup commercial pectin.

Cut open peppers and discard seeds and white pith. Put through finest knife of food chopper twice. Drain pulp. Measure, packing solidly in cup until juice comes to top. There should be 2 cups. Mix sugar, vinegar and prepared pepper and bring quickly to the boiling point stirring constantly. Boil hard for two minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Skim and stir alternately for five minutes. Pour into sterilized glasses and cover as in foregoing recipes.

Strawberry Jelly

Two cups juice from canned strawberries, 1 lemon, 4 cups granulated sugar, ½ cup commercial pectin.

Drain the syrup from the canned berries and add the juice of lemon. Put sugar and syrup into sauce pan. Mix and bring quickly to the boiling point, stirrng constantly. Add pectin, stirring constantly and bring to a hard boil. Remove at once from the fire, skim and pour into sterilized glasses.

PLEASING GIFTS THAT WILL GRATIFY MEN

At this time of year, the feminine mind is always more or less perturbed. There is scarcely a member of the gentler sex, from the age of fifteen to the period when age has been forgotten, who is not confronted with the annual Christmas problem. What should I give to the male?

There are a great variety of males in this world, but here is a tip for the perturbed female who has to solve the problem. Do not forget the fact that every man has a touch of vanity in his make-up. If he lacks that he is not just the sort of male you should know. Whether he is your father, brother, nephew or gentleman friend, the rule applies. There must be a trace of vanity if he is the sort to fit into your scheme of existence. So, play upon that masculine touch when you are doing your Christmas shopping.

The finest way to play upon the masculine vanity is to hand the gentleman something to add to his personal appearance. The shops are filled with such things at this season of the year, as you will readily see by a display of the ads. in the papers, and you will be astonished when you visit a haberdashery shop, to discover how simple it is to solve the male problem of gift-giving. For what man ths side of the North Pole can be impervious to the gift of a shirt, a pair of slippers, a pair of pyjamas, a new neckscarf, a necktie or any one of those almost unaccounted gifts which the average haberdashery stores are now displaying in such a tantalizing manner.

An Appealing Array

The female of this season has not done her duty until she has visited some of these stores. Shirts, specially made up for the Christmas trade, are displayed in all their appealing vanity. It does not matter what the temper of the male, the answer can be found on the shirt counter of the men's store or the departmental institution.

If you are really trying to solve the Christmas problem in the most acceptable manner, devote a few days to studying the types of shirts which your particular male likes to wear. If he is youthful, of the College Boy type, the stores will have plenty of colors to meet his most exacting taste. If it is friend husband, the answer is the same. No matter who the man or what his walk in life, you will be able to satisfy him with the appropriate gift.

CHRISTMAS RECIPES

Giblet Stuffing

Two cups soaked stale bread, two minced onions, two chopped apples, one teaspoon poultry seasoning, one set of giblets (heart, liver and gizzard), two-thirds teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon pepper. Squeeze bread quite dry. Add the minced onion, apple, seasoning, and finally giblets, which have been simmered in water until tender and then chopped.

Chestnut Stuffing

Three cups sweet chestnuts, one-half cup butter, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one-quarter cup cream, one cup cracker crumbs. Shell and blanche chestnuts. Cook in boiling salted water until soft. Drain and mash, using potatoe ricer. Add half the quantity of butter along with salt, pepper and cream. Melt the remaining butter, mix with the cracker crumbs and then combine the mixtures.

An Oyster Cocktail

Oyster cocktail sharpens the appetite for the good things to follow and is quite appropriate for Christmas dinner. For each person take six raw oysters, one tablespoon tomato catsup, one half tablespooon of vinegar or lemon juice, two drops tabasco, pinch of salt, one teaspoon celery finely chopped, one-half teaspoon worcestershire sauce. Mix ingredients, chill thoroughly and serve in cocktail glasses or in cases made from hollowed out green peppers.

Turkey Bones Soup

Don't throw away the turkey remnants without first considering the following recipe: Take turkey bones and any left-over pieces of meat and boil three-quarters of an hour in water enough to cover them. Add a little rice and celery chopped fine. Just before serving thicken with a little flour, (browned), and season with pepper, salt, and a small piece of butter. This is a cheap but delicious soup, and softens the otherwise hard bump the family receives when a return from a festive to every-day fare is necessitated.

Food Decorations

Canned cherries and other fruits are decorative for salads, puddings and other desserts, and are a delicious accompaniment.

The woods can most always furnish material for a bouquet for the centre of the table. Let us not begrudge the very small amount of time and effort such things require, but let us introduce daintiness and beauty into our lives in any way and whatever we can.

Happy Together In Their "Phobic Prison"

This is the first picture made since the marriage last summer of Professor William E. Leonard 59-year old University of Wisconsin poet, and his bride, the former Miss Grace Golden, 28. Their marriage attracted wide attention when Miss Golden willingly entered his "Phobic Prison," a fear that he has of going more than half a mile from his home.

Politeness of the Orient

Japan's Official Travel Bureau Advises on Treatment of Tourists:

Do not whiser among yourselves or titter in the presence of foreigners.

Don't imitate fancy gestures learned at the cinema, which will only excite disgust on the part of foreigners.

Don't ask a foreigner's age unless it is absolutely required.

Light pranks add zest to your service; but don't pull people's ears.

Don't eat bananas without cutting them up. Don't suck your fingers or form a circle with your thumb and forefinger.

Don't go as far as the door when you direct foreigners to the lavatory.

Don't go into the bathroom when foreigners are bathing to ask whether the temperature of the water is just right or to help them wash themselves.

Large napkins should be offered to foreign ladies, so that they may hide their knees when sitting.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON XI. — December 15

EZRA TEACHING THE LAW OF GOD

Ezra 7:10; Nehemiah 8:1-3, 5, 6, 8-12

GOLDEN TEXT — Thy word have I laid up in my heart. — Psalm 119:11.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

TIME — The year of the revival recorded in Nehemiah 8 is not definitely stated, but it would seem that this event followed immediately the completion of the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem and, consequently, occurred B.C. 444.

"For Ezra had set his heart to seek the law of Jehovah, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and ordinances". This important passage was extensively commented upon in the lesson for December 1, and need not occupy us again at this time. Some qualifications for instructing men in divine truth are bestowed by God himself; others are received from the hands of great teachers and great books; while others can be had only by a deliberate consecration of one's heart to the teachings which it is one's purse to expound.

"And all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the broad place that was before the water gate; and they spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which Jehovah had commanded to Israel". Probably the latter half of the seventy-third verse of the preceding chapter should be attached to this verse. Suddenly there now appears in this vivid narrative, for the first time, the scribe Ezra, who had been in Jerusalem twelve years before this and had spoken severely to the citizens of the city concerning the expulsion of the strange women (Ezra 9).

"And Ezra the priest brought the law before the assembly both men and women and all that could hear with understanding". How much of the book of the law was in the hands of Ezra, we do not know. Possibly the entire Pentateuch, but how much of this was read before the people, it is difficult to determine. "Upon the first day of the seventh month". This was a day of the new moon and the beginning of the autumn era.

"And he read therein before the broad place that was before the water gate from early morning until midday, in the presence of the men and the women, and of those that could understand; and the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law". Exactly where this reading took place we are not definitely told, but it is probably the same location as that mentioned in Ezra 10: 9 and is supposed to be the broad place lying between the southeast precincts of the temple and the eastern wall.

"And Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people (for he was above all the people); and when he opened it, all the people stood up". (Cf. Luke 4:17.) Standing was sometimes the posture of prayer denoting humility (1 Sam. 1:26; 1 Kings 8:22; Luke 18:11, 13).

"And Ezra blessed Jehovah, the great God". This blessing probably took the form of a prayer. "And all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with the lifting up of their hands (cf. 5:14)." Some churches have responsive worship now.

"And they bowed their heads and worshipped Jehovah with their faces to the ground". Such an attitude of prayer is a frequent occurrence in the Scriptures (Gen. 19:1; 42:6; 48:12; 1 Sam. 20:41; 24:8; 1 Chron. 21:21).

And they read in the book, in the law of God, distinctly". The word here translated distinctly occurs in Num. 15:34 and means with clearness and precision, for which careful study was required. "And they gave the sense", This phrase occurs only here in the Old Testament, and refers to the parenthetical comment introduced by the reader to explain the text which he is reading. "So that they understood the reading". The result was that the great multitude were able thus to comprehend the words falling upon their ears.

"And Nehemiah, who was the governor, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, This day is holy unto Jehovah your God; mourn not, nor weep. For all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law". As the people had listened to the words of the law, they became conscious of their own sinfulness and broke out in great weeping. Read the Sacred Volume, and, whether you will or not, it will so affect you, so pierce your heart, so work its way into your very marrow, that, in comparison with the impression so produced, that of orators and philosophers will almost disappear; making it manifest that, in the Sacred Volume, there is a truth divine, a something which makes it imeasurably superior to all the gifts and graces attainable by man.

"Then he said unto them, Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto him for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto our Lord". See Deut. 16:14; Esther 9:19; 1 Sam. 9:13; 2 Sam. 6: 19; Ezek. 39:17-20. "Neither be ye grieved; for the joy of Jehovah is your strength". There is a natural adaptation or provision in the gospel, both of what it brings to us and by what it takes away from us, to make a calm, and settled, and deep gladness, the prevalent temper of the Christian spirit.

"So the Levites stilled all the people, saying, Hold your peace, for the day is holy; neither be ye grieved". "And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declared unto them". The people had sorrowed because they had not kept the law: they were able to understand the law.

An Old Man's Thoughts at Christmas

Old Santa Claus, a tough old chap
Oh surely he must be,
He's made the trip each Christmas eve,
Since I was only three.

And now I'm over seventy,
And like to take my ease;
Yet Santa still is on the go,
You'd think he'd surely freeze.

And he must have come the chimney way,
As nimbly as of old;
For the windows and the doors are fixed
For keeping out the cold.

And yet on Christmas morning
Were presents on the tree and floor;
And all the children's stockings bulged
With toys and sweets galore

I would like to know the secret
Of how Santa keeps so spry,
And of how he always keeps that
Merry twinkle in his eye.

Of course, that trip behind the deer,
Is dandy for his health;
But it takes some pluck to tackle it;
I'd hate the job myself.

So here's good luck to Santa,
And his reindeer and the sled,
And also in his snow-white beard,
And to his coat of red.

And may he long continue when the Winter breezes blow,
To make his trip on Christmas eve
At forty-odd below.
And fill the children with delight
And make the old folks glad,
When they think upon old Santa
And the happiness they've had.

"Though all approve of general peace, there are quite a number who are unprepared to run any risk in order to preserve it."—Viscout Cecil.

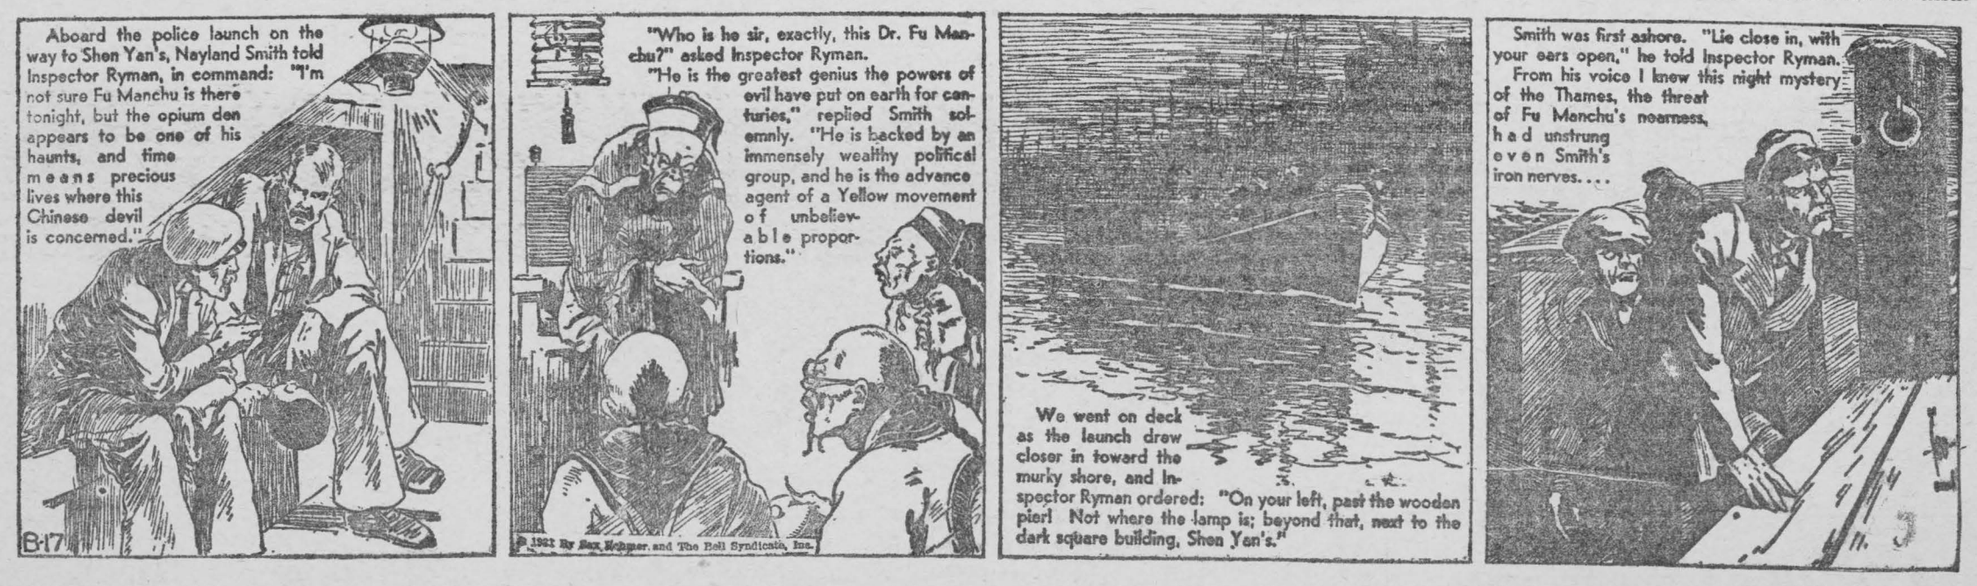
THE SEVERED FINGERS—On a Perilous Errand.



News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The winter care of pigs causes no anxiety to the farmer who has adopted the all-year-round cabin. These portable cabins are useful for 365 days in the year and are efficient and economical. They are cool in summer and provide adequate shelter in winter. Built of rough lumber, with securely fastened sides and hinged sections, each cabin has room enough for four or five breed sows, and breeding stock of all ages will thrive in the semi-outdoor life, for the cabins on the advent of winter can be moved to fresh ground or to wherever convenient. Hogs fed in cabins will rarely become crippled, but for this class of stock an open shed with a low, straw-covered sleeping berth is better. The average piggery is difficult to ventilate and therefore damp. Dampness, impure air, lack of exercise, and over-feeding make a combination that will soon discourage the hog-feeder and relieve him of his stock. Not so with the all-year hog cabin.

Wax Plucking Economical

One of the reasons for the popular adoption of the wax plucking of poultry is that the process is not an expensive one. Recovery of 95 per cent of wax—a figure which can be realized without much difficulty—means a loss of about one pound of wax in the dressing of forty average birds. The reclaimed wax may be used repeatedly. The reclaiming operation consists in simply melting down the pieces of wax, allowing the mass of wax and feathers to get quite hot, and then straining. A broad-bladed pliable knife, or even a flat stick, can be used to press the larger part of the residual wax out of feathers, pins, and other extraneous matter left in the bottom of the strainer. Slight changes do occur in the wax on long usage, but these will not be serious, states the bulletin recently issued on the use of wax in the plucking of poultry, and the farmer-operator will be able to use the wax almost immediately. Repeated melting of the wax removes most of the dirt and keeps the mixture comparatively sterile. As the wax is used up, fresh wax may be added to keep up the volume.

Canadian Homespun

Canadian graded wools are held in high esteem by British manufacturers, and of late years some foreign countries have shown considerable interest in the purchase of Canadian wool. In all the provinces of the Dominion however, there are still many sheep raisers who do not consign their wool for official grading and much of the wool is used in the home. Many woollen mills in the centre of sheep-raising localities buy wool direct from the producer, and pedlars and local stores barter wool for groceries and other goods. Wool dealers in cities and towns are also large buyers of wool. Owing to the low price paid for wool and the necessity of farmers to reduce farm expenditure, home spinning and weaving have received considerable impetus in late years, and it is estimated that every year nearly 5,000,000 pounds of wool produced in Canada is spun and woven at home on the farms, particularuy for winter wear. Many of the Canadian mills are large users of Canadian wool, especially those manufacturing yarns and articles of wearing apparel such as suits, overcoats, mitts, socks, mackinaws and blankets. At the same time, Canadian wool must be kept free from seeds and chaff if it is to bring the highest price.Too little atention is paid to this defect in ungraded fleeces.

Seed Market Report

reported for anykind of seed in eastern, central and northern Ontario and with the exception of an undetermined amount of the alsike, all of the small seeds are still in the growers hands. The year's for this portion of the province is estimated as follows: red clover, 574,000 lbs; alhike, 225,000 lbs; alfalfa, 515,000 lbs;sweet clover, 275,000 lbs; timothy 3,350,000 lbs; and timothy mixtures 1,500,000 lbs. The bulk of the red clover alfalfa, alsike and timothy is in central Ontario, the St. Lawrence Counties, the Ottawa Valley and northern Ontario Most of the sweet clover is in Central Ontario and the St. Lawrence counties. The only known offerings for timothy are 3 to 4 cents per lb., basis no. 1 or 2 to 3 cents per lb., for country run seed, while for sweet clover, in the St. Lawrence counties, offers are 3 cents per lb., basis no. 1, and 1 to 2 cents for country run. In south-western Ontario the per centages and quantities of seed still held by the growers is estimated as follows: alfalfa, 95% or 1, 375,000 lbs; red clover, 75% or 750,000 lbs; alsike, 10%, or 75,000 lbs; sweet clover, 80% or 625,000 lbs; timothy 75% or 2,635000 lbs; Canada Blue Grass, 80% or 90,000 lbs. There is still a good demand for alsike as shipment of this seed to Great Britain has been active. The demand is fair for alfalfa but poor for sweet clover and timothy.

Feeding for Early Lambs

In view of the fact that a proper systemsystem of feeding is hte principal essential of thesuccessful raising of early lambs particularly those for the maketin the later part of June and early July, farmers who understand the basic principles of winter dairying will usually make a success of raising early lambs. A feeding ration that will produce an abundance of milk, results in the porluction of early lambs that grow rapidly and finish for the marget at an earl age. Alfalfa or clover hay are essentials as they are protein roughages. Corn silage, mangels or sugar beets are also valuable succulent foods and besides keeping the ewe they stimulate the flow of milk Ewes with lambs at foot also require a liberal grain allowance, usually not less than a pound a day, and ewes with twin lambs often taking up to two pounds daily. Oats are a safe feed for milking ewes, and as this grain is most common on all farms, it is generally recommended for ewes in milk.

A ewe flock raising eary lambs under a system of feeding as suggested above will bring their lambs forwardto the spring grass without set back. As a rule lambs at the time the ewes are turned to grass will have learned to eat both grass and roughage, and if the pasture field is accessible to the barn it is advisable to make a creep for the lambs so that theycan be fed grain while on the pasture. Grain feeding on pasture increases the rate of growth and development and makes it possible to market at an earlier date. As a rule June lambs ae woth moe by the pound thanJuly lambs and July lambs ae worth more htan August lambs.So that a few bushels of grain fed ti early lambs is invariably marketed as finished lamb well above current market prices.

WINS INTER-COUNTY PUBLIC SPEAKING CONTEST

(Alexandria Times

The Rural School inter-county public speaking contest was held at Kemptville recently, when pupils from Eastern Ontario Counties met in competition. The pupils eligible to compete were those winning the county contests held during the fall months. Miss Connie McDonald, who had previously carried off Glengarry honors represented the county and was again awarded first place. This honor entitled her to represent Glengarry in the final contest at Toronto at Easter for the championship of Ontario.

Miss Connie McDonald is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McDonald, formerly of the "Blue Room" restaurant, Alexandria, and at present popular manager of Locksley Hall, at Williamsburg. She is a pupil of S. S. No. 11 Lochiel Township. Miss McDonald has been receiving the congratulations of her friends and best wishes are extended to her for success in the finals at Toronto.

Her address follows:—

GLENGARRY—MY COUNTY

Mr. Chairman, Honorable Judges, Ladies and Gentlemen:

"Won't you come with me across the lofty Rockies. We are in the City of Vancouver. A banquet is being held. Toasts are given, each one received with due enthusiasm. One man rises, and raising his glass says 'to Glengarry'. At once the whole company are on their feet and with a loud cheer, respond to this toast by 'Long Live Glengarry.' This happens annually as certain Highland Societies hold their annual banquets. Not only in Canada but in all parts of the world where men and women from Glengarry meet (and there are many such places) this same feeling is shown and outsiders wonder what there is about this county that can still hold their sons and daughters so strongly although they no longer live within her domain. And so for a short time, in a very humble way, I am going to add my words of praise to Glengarry—our banner county.'

"It is the most easterly county of Ontario; the mighty St. Lawrence rolls majestically at its feet. Quebec and Stormont support its sides. It is only about twenty-nine miles square and is made up of four townships, Lochiel, Kenyon, Charlottenburgh and Lancaster.

Its earliest settlers were United Empire Loyalists, who came from United States after the Revolution. The greater number of men had served under Sir John Johnston who commanded the Royal New York Regiment and when the proclamation of peace deprived them of their occupation as soldiers, and their homes, as enemies of United States they must accept the British Government's offer and hew out homes in the trackless wilds of Canada. We find many of them settling along the St. Lawrence, going as far north as Williamstown, a village which received its name from Sir William Johnston. Later some Highland Scotch came and settled in St. Raphaels, a little rustic settlement among the hills. Alexandria, our own home town has been named in honor of Rev. Alexander Macdonell, first bishop of Upper Canada. Other settlers from Scotland quickly followed and such names as McCrimmon, Dunvegan Skye Glen Sandfield all proclaim from what part of Scotland these people hailed. These men and women have laboured well and have done what to-day we would consider an impossible task. They have transformed the land from wilderness to the well-tilled farms which we, to-day, in our complacment pride point to as ours. Not only in agriculture did they excel, but we are proud to note that at our first Parliament of Upper Canada, which met in 1792, of the sixteen members two were from Glengarry, John McDonell, who had been a captain in Butler's Rangers, and his brother Hugh, a lieutenant in The King's Royal Regiment and he was elected Speaker of the House. The first Premier of Ontario after Confederation was John Sandfield MacDonald, a native of St. Raphael's

"Have you read "The Man from Glengarry", "Glengarry School Days" "Rock and River" and numerous other books written by Ralph Connor? If you have not, start at them to-day and remember, Ralph Connor was born and brought up in St. Elmo in Glengarry. Read the "Shadows of Tradition", written by Miss McGillivray of Williamstown. Truly they are worthy writers.

"In a short speech it is impossible to mention all our great men—men who have served in the Missionary fields, in the gold mines, in the lumber regions, in the athletic fields, masters in every sphere of life.

"From the deep unbroken forests
they have hewn our happy homes
From the giants of the forest,
They have reared our glittering domes.
Still we hear the members speaking,
Letting loud their voices ring,
Still we see the faithful hurrying
To the Kirk to serve their King.
Still we hear men exploring
Over river, mine and grove,
See the athlete keenly striving,
See the brawny muscles move.

Perhaps Glengarry owes more to the Scotch pioneers than to any other nationality. But modesty forbids me to praise them too much for you know, no matter how much a true Scotchman loves to be praised he never wants to show it. Once when Queen Victoria was on her way to Balmoral, a gentleman of Perth sent a basket of fruit. It was very fine fruit and the Queen surely did enjoy it and sent the gentleman a note thanking him for the gift. The gentleman took the note to his gardener and said 'Here John, is a note written by the queen herself.' John took the note and although bursting with pride would not admit it but merely said 'she dina say anything aboot sending back the basket.'

"But in these few remarks about Glengarry I must not forget to ask you to come back with me to the gloomy days of 1914. Many of you remember too well how our Glengarry boys answered the Motherland's cry for help. From every spot in Glengarry issued forth recruits. After all these years, in many homes, there is still grief for those who lie at rest beneath a foreign sky; but, there is pride and thankfulness as well in the knowledge that Glengarry's sons were not found wanting. The names of those who gave their lives are engraven on monuments, erected at Lancaster and Alexandria. Those names will serve to keep before our minds the glorious cause for which our soldiers fought. And so, I leave you, with the hope that we, the younger children, may all grow up to be noble citizens of Glengarry—to show that, they have not died in vain. I thank you."

PROVINCES TO RECEIVE RELIEF AID

Chief achievements of the Dominion-Provincial Conference, which is expected to end at Ottawa some time today, are:

1. Agreement between the Dominion and eight of the Provinces that the British North America Act should be changed by the Federal Parliament.

2. An undertaking on the part of the Dominion to give further financial help to the Provinces in meeting the relief requirements of the larger municipalities.

3. A general recognition that the baffling financial problem cannot be solved in the short space of a week.

4. Agreement as to the need of stability in the conditions and taxation imposed on the mining industry.

5. A decision to secure closer cooperation between the various Governments in agricultural services.

The reports of two important committees, those on unemployment relief and on finance, have yet to be drafted for presentation at the plenary meeting of the conference, which is expected to be convened some time this afternoon.

CANADIANS AND THEIR INDUSTRIES—AND THEIR BANK

· DAIRYING ·

HENRY: "Angus, do you ever think of the time we started this dairy business?"

ANGUS: "You bet I do, Henry. It all started with me driving that milk route at $20 a month and board. I worked early and hard for what I got, but the turn came when the boss was willing to sell out. The Bank of Montreal knew I was thrifty from the way my savings account had grown steadily. They helped a lot by lending me some money—on good security, of course; it gave me a good start. I still worked mighty hard, but the profits made me forget I was so tired. We have a nice balance at the Bank now."

HENRY: "Yes, and you took me in as a partner and gradually we worked up to a fine herd of our own and later a modern dairy outfit. And don't forget what our wives and children did, Angus."

ANGUS: "No, indeed! Even the girls joined calf clubs and borrowed money from the Bank to buy the first fine stock. They did their bit in building up our present prize-winning herd."

Not only are the largest dairy concerns in Canada customers of the Bank of Montreal, but hundreds of independent dairy farmers as well. Large and small, they keep their business deposits and savings at the Bank and borrow at times for seasonal requirements. Many of them call on the Bank for other services, such as credit information, market conditions. Many of them have their bonds and other valuable papers with the Bank for safekeeping.

After a prolonged illness, there passed away on Friday, at his home in Hulbert, H. Lindsay Morrison, in his 72nd year. Mr, Morrison had been one of the outstanding men in the communpity. For a number of years he carried on a cheese and butter manufacturing business, later turning to dairy farming, and the breeding of registered Holstein cattle. He had always been an ardent worker of the United Church of Canada, and in politics was a Conservative.

MR. CHRISTOPHER DAWLEY

Christopher Dawley, an old and respected resident of the Toll Gate section, died December 3rd. Had he lived until Christmas day, he would have attained his 79th birthday, being born in Williamsburg township on December 25, 1856, a son of the late Ira Dawley and his life, Eliza Reddick. He had been in failing health for some time.

About 50 years ago he went to Cornwall township, where he resided until his death. He was of a quiet, retiring disposition, and enjoyed the esteem of all who knew him.

The funeral was held on Thursday afternoon at Trinity Church, Cornwall, where service was conducted by Rev. J.E. Lindsay, rector. Burial was made in the cemetery at Williamsburg.

AUTUMN BEAUTIES

"The most beautiful sight in America," writes Arthur Brisbane from New Jersey, "is the changing colors of autumn foliage on the North Atlantic seaboard." We enter a demurrer. Those who know the scarlet and orange of Eeastern Ontario maples, the red plumes of the sumacs on many a nearby hillside, the rich copper of the beeches in our parks and woodlands, the burnished yellow of countless trees that gild this district into a cloth of gold, will hold that the most beautiful sight in America is the changing of colors of autumn foliage in these parts.—Ottawa Citizen.

"A NATIONAL SHAME"

A movement is afoot to persuade the Government to provide more adequate quarters for the National Gallery in Ottawa. The Herald is heartily in accord with this movement.

Although it does not seem to be widely recognized, the collection of pictures on show in the present National Gallery building is excellent and highly representative of the European and North American schools, ancient and modern. There is, also, a striking array of Canadian paintings, an array which removes any doubts concerning the existence of a truly characteristic Canadian school. But there are, also, statuary, pictures and other works of art stowed away in vaults, because there is no room for their display.

That these should be permitted to deteriorate in darkness is a national shame.—Hamilton Herald.

THE BRITISH RACE

What a race those Britishers are! Samuel Hoare, Foreign Secretary, has proved a big man in a big place. Once he completed an airplane flight to India and caused Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin to remark: "What with Lord Birkenhead winning diving competitions in Madeira, Leo Amery skiing in the most mountainous country in the Alps, and Sam Hoare flying to India, I feel like a circus manager whose performing fleas have escaped."—St. Catharines Standard.

PRIVATE ROW

Windsor man when visiting in Hamilton saw a man and wife fighting and stepped in as peacemaker. He received a beating and was informed it was a family affair. People are strange that way. The husband probably feels he is within his rights in beating his wife, and the wife is probably glad to welcome the chance to lay hands violently on the man of her choice.—Peterboro Examiner.

AN ANNUAL PEST

The mosquitoes and the black flies have long departed but we still have to face the pest who says he doesn't want anything for Christmas.—Toronto Saturday Night.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

A man's beauty parlor has opened in New York, which looks like another symptom of prosperity and wild spending.—Hamilton Spectator.

"LIGHT" BOMBS

The aviator son-in-law of Signor Mussolini gives the world the assurance that "only bombs weighing less than 10 pounds each" are being dropped on Ethiopian towns and villages. It reminds us of the tuna fisherman who wrote a friend in this office last summer saying: "We were out yesterday, but only got a little fellow weighing 190 pounds." The person who thinks "light" bombs mean little is a person who has never experienced the explosion of one of them.—Halifax Herald.

ONLY A MILK BOTTLE

A few years ago the writer was astounded when informed by a local dairy manager that bottle replacement was costing him $3,000 yearly. Not all broken, by any means, as milk bottles are used for a multitude of purposes not intended when the bottles are left at the householder's door in the dusk of morning.

Writing on this subject of small wastes that grow to be large ones the Kingston Whig-Standard has this to say:

From the United States Department of Agriculture comes a reminder of the large cost of carelessness in small matters on the part of many people. Its bureau of dairy industry, which has been watching milk bottles for some time, has given out figures that prove the annual loss in the United States from broken or misplaced bottles at close to $3,000,000. That is what milk bottle carelessness costs in the United States. The chances are the loss in Canada is proportionate, or nearly so.

The figure is suggestive of our thoughtless wastefulness on this continent by our small regard for little things. It's only a broken milk bottle! Never mind, the dairy furnishes them! How many articles in common use, like the milk bottle, are counted as costing nothing?

Who pays for the loss in milk bottles? Somebody has to stand it. The bottles, the bureau of dairy industry tells us, cost a little over a nickel apiece. The manufacturers get their price for the bottles. The farmers and dairies selling the milk charge back what they can to the consumer and take the rest. Somebody has to pay for the losses of a going concern. There is no profit in waste.—Niagara Falls Review.

THE GIFT OF SLEEP

But to woo sleep it is necessary to relax, and here we come to the crux of the matter. Difficult and not very profitable is it to attempt to sleep when the body is tense. We must learn to relax, and anything that enables us to relax will help us to sleep. Reading in bed aids, providing it is a dull book. One man put himself to sleep with the Encyclopedia Britannica; a minister reports he can not keep awake if he goes over the points of the next sermon.—Hamilton Spectator.

NEED MORE THAN GOOD EYES

There is a wide difference between "seeing" and "observing." A man's eyesight may be perfect and his powers of observation low. To be a really good driver you must be observant because you have to watch the poor driver who is dividing the road with you. It is little satisfaction to know that you had "the right of way" if your car is wrecked by an irresponsible driver who was dead wrong. The good driver is not insistent on his rights — he "avoids" accidents.

Speed alone is not the prmary factor in accidents, but speed plus carelessness is a disastrous combination. The people who argue for a material reduction in the speed limits have a logical argument. The "speed' should be governed not by what is safe for a good driver, who is in the minority, but to safeguard the public from the poor driver who is in the great majority.—Toronto Telegram.

MORE THAN TEACHING

There is many an adult today who can thank some lady school teacher for having had a profound influence on him during the years when he was open to receive suggestion. She may have set him out to the school pump to wash his hands and face; she may have shamed him to the point where his hair would be brushed and his teeth cleaned, and it may have been the teacher who insisted that the boy should tip his cap when he met the teacher or any other lady out of school hours.

Actually she was doing a great deal more than teaching things which were set forth in the text books. Possibly the boys in school may have thought at the time the teacher was a "sour old maid," but they know now she was not. Mature judgment has stamped her as a great force and a helpful influence in their lives and as such they will continue to remember her.—Peterboro Examiner.

THE EMPIRE

A LINK WITH THE PAST

Among the many distinguished forbears of the Duchess of Gloucester is one whose name should be known wherever Scottish songs are sung. Yet, how many of the countless numbers who are familiar with "Annie Laurie" remember that the writer of the song as we know it now was Lady John Scott, a great-grand-aunt of the Duke of Gloucester's wife.

This song-writer, who lived until the first year of this century, was Miss Alicia Spottiswoode of Spottiswoode, in Berwickshire, and her marriage to the only surviving brother of the fifth Duke of Buccleugh took place in 1886. She was a patriotic Scotswoman, and once declared, "I would rather live in a pigsty in Scotland than a palace in England." She made a wonderful collection of old Scottish songs for her brother-in-law, the Duke of Buccleuch. — Glasgow Herald.

SCOTLAND YARD TEACHES

Scotland Yard is teaching the world how to go about its police work. There are a few countries that have not sent representatives to learn from the Metropolitan Police. Among the next batch of "pupils" will be detectives from New Zealand. Police officers have come from Newfoundland, Hong Kong, Singapore, Canada, Australia, France, Spain, Germany, and other Continental countries to glean much from our methods.

Superintendent Batley, chief of the Fingerprint Department, is going to lecture to "pupils" on his subject. Chief Inspector Rowe will demonstrate the Criminal Records Office. The wireless cars and broadcasting methods of the "Yard" will be explained by the Radio Chief, Chief Constable Best. Sir Bernard Spilsbury will give lectures on poisons. Dr. Roche Lynch, the Home Office analyst, will teach his own subject.

The value of scientific research — the examination of bullets, cartridges, and clothing — will be shown by Dr. Davidson, chief of the Crime Laboratory at Hendon. Finally, there will be special lectures on crime detection by Chief Constable Horwell and Superintendent Hambrook of the C. I. D.

Designer's Advice To the Over-weight

From Hollywood and the atelier of a rising American designer who is good-looking enough to model her own clothes, comes a warning to the flesh-conscious woman who would be smart though over-weight.

Helen Taylor, who created the thirty-six ensembles for Josephine Hutchinson, Hollywood star, offers ten fashion "don'ts" to calory-watchers.

1. Don't ever wear shiny-surfaced fabrics—even if Paris insists you may look like last year's date in flat crepe or dull black.

2. Don't wear a blouse or jacket of one color with a skirt of another. Cuts your height at least two inches.

3. Don't fall for tomato red evening slippers when your dinner dress is black. Try black slippers and watch the results.

4. Don't—please—wear huge furs or voluminous collars. Content yourself with small skins worn close to the neck. Reason obvious.

5. Don't affect wide, flaring sleeves or sleeves so unique that they call attention to themselves. Makes you twice as wide.

6. Don't let that crafty millinery clerk talk you into a pill-box hat, even if it does have a flattering veil. Brims are more becoming to the broader face. AND men prefer them.

7. Don't buy a size sixteen when you wear an eighteen. You are fooling nobody but yourself. A wall-paper fit in clothes adds pounds to your appearance.

8. Don't fasten a large bow on your bosom unless you have the virtues of a brassiere model. It does terrible things to your silhouette.

9. Don't delude yourself into thinking that a bateau neckline will give you a long line from throat to waist. It will only accentuate the width of your shoulders and make your head appear too small for your body.

10. Don't—ever—wear all white.

Miss Taylor believes that a designer's greatest hope in creating original ideas in modern costume lies in the development of new fabrics. She uses cellophane velvets, cellophane laces, metallic satins, ribbed satins and rhinestone cloth—all new departures in screen fabrics. She does not, however, feel that these materials should be adopted indiscriminately by the average woman.

"I know what temptation it is to try a new and rich material," she says, "with designers offering each year a dazzling line-up of unusual woolens and silks. But the woman who is overweight must watch her fabrics as closely as her diet. Three yards of rhinestone cloth on the wrong figure can wreck a girl's smartness reputation overnight. An afternoon frock of cire satin which looks divine on a size 12 can make a freak out of a perfectly nice 36."

In addition to building complete screen wardrobes for Josephine Hutchinson, Helen Westley, Laura Hope Crews and Mona Barrie, Helen Taylor has created street and screen costumes for such stars as Merle Oberon, Marlene Dietrich, Marion Davies and Norma Shearer.

"Of all the pestiferous insects that annoy mortal flesh, the education snob is the most detestable."
——Harold Bell Wright.

Doctor Approves Women's Scanty Dress

"Women have far more energy and waste far more of it than man." So said a doctor of psychology the other day.

"They rush at things in a desire to get them done, and then find they have gone the longest way round in the end."

It is very true.

It is a feminine failing to plunge at a job without a second's thought.

It's a masculine failing to think so long over a job to be done that there is not time left to do it.

Why not combine the two.

Control your first violent impulse to be up and doing, and, instead, seize paper and pencil and work out a sensible program.

Go through an average day's work and see how many times you have duplicated jobs. How many unnecessary trips to store cupboards or files, how many unnecessary telephone calls you have made and letters you have written.

No employer would be annoyed if you showed him neatly on paper how you could save your time and his—you might even get an increase of salary for your intelligence.

For Limited Wardrobe

The charming blouse patterned for today, is a life saver for limited budget. It's one of those useful blouses in bright crepe silk that fills a dual role. It's simple enough to wear to the office, and then to keep that dinner "date" at any fashionable restaurant.

Simple to sew with sleeves that cut in one with shoulders. It may be "tuck-in" or overblouse and either neckline.

Style No. 3209 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18 years, 36, 38 and 40-inches bust. Size 16 requires 2⅝ yards of 39-inch material for blouse with cowl neck.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of pattern wanted.. Enclose 15c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide Street, Toronto.

Indulgence Bad For Crippled Child

Needs "Intelligent Encouragement," Dr. Keith Maintains. — Handicaps Overcome.

Toronto.—Apathy and indulgence are the enemies of crippled children, and "intelligent, resourceful and sustained encouragement," their greatest friends, Dr. William Keith of the Hospital for Sick Children, told the fifth annual convention of the Canadian Association of Occupational Therapy here recently. In co-operation with Miss Jean Hampson of the Wellesley School for Crippled Children, he showed motion pictures describing results achieved at the school by occupational therapy.

"One has only to see the retrogression that too often takes place when the school is closed in the Summer months to realize the danger of over-indulgence by parents," he remarked.

Occupational therapy is playing an invaluable part not only in the remedial field but in adjusting children to society he said.

As examples of success achieved by children in overcoming handicaps, Miss Hampson showed work of pupils that had taken first prizes in competition with the work of normal children. One article was a dress, trimmed elaborately with binding, made by a little girl, paralyzed below the waist, who operated a treadle of her sewing machine by her crutch. Another was a home spun scarf made by a boy on a loom which was used to straighten out his flexed wrists and to limber his shoulders.

Another little girl, 10 years old, whose right arm is paralyzed, embroidered a towel that took first prize in a section of the C.N.E. for 16 years and older.

"We have a little girl who wears a brace on a leg, but who can swim a mile and a half," said Miss Hampso. "The other day one of our boys went to the dentist. The dentist asked him how he broke his tooth off, and the lad said, 'playing football.' I can imagine the surprise of the dentist for this boy walks with two braces and a pair of crutches.

"The theme of our work is to lead normal lives and our children play the same games as other children, even though the umpire may sit in a wheel chair, and it takes two boys, one holding the basketball and another to hit it, to get it over the ring."

Surgery so steadily progresses in achieving wonderful results that parents should never cease, no matter how hopeless the outlook seems, taking their children at regular periods for examination by a surgeon, she said.

Dr. Howland Re-elected

Dr. Goldwin Howland, re-elected president of the association, described great progress in use of occupational therapy in Scotland, and expressed the opinion that its merits are not sufficiently appreciated by Canadian physicians and surgeons or Canadian hospitals and institutions. He believed the Ontario Government should give some special monetary aid towards the cost of occupational therapy classes conducted in connection with the extension work of the University of Toronto.

Other officers elected were: Vice-presidents, Dr. B. T. McGhie, Dr. J. H. Elliott (president of the Toronto association); and Dr. Frank Pedley (president of the Montreal association); honorary secretary, W. J. Dunlop; secretary, Miss Helen P. LeVesconte; honorary treasurer, Dr. R. E. Gaby; treasurer, H. H. Loosemore; organizing secretary, Miss Kathleen de C. O'Grady, and assistant organizing secretary, Miss Jean Perigoe.

Provincial representatives, all of Toronto, are: Dr. H. H. Hyland, Dr. T. G. Heaton, Dr. Edward Brooks, Dr. Ruth Franks, Miss Helen Mowat, Miss Isabelle Gordon, B. Evan Parry, Miss Marion Gibson and Dr. C. H. Hair.

Officers elected by the Ontario society, which is holding its annual convention in conjuction with the Canadian, are: President, Mrs W. L. C. Allwell; vice-presidents, Miss S. Norris, Miss Verna McBroom, London, and Miss Eileen McGregor, Hamilton; treasurer, Miss Lillian Perry; recording secretary, Miss Helen Lowatt; corresponding secretary, Miss Barbara Fernie; and committee, Miss Marion Gibson, Miss Gertrude Ellis, Mrs. Douglas Hogg and Mrs. Donald Gunn.

Over - Subscribed!

Whites the Peterborough Examiner —"A remarkable expression of confidence in their country by Canadians." That is what Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Finance, said when he announced the Dominion loan of $75,000,000 had been oversubscribed. He secured money at low interest, 2-15 per cent. on short term and 3.08 for long-term money. Mr. Dunning is not the first Minister of Finance to make use of that phrase about the people showing confidence in the country by purchasing its bonds. It has been said many times before.

Probably it does show confidence, but it also shows a desire for security. People know they are eliminating risk when they buy government bonds; they are taking a low interest rate but they are safeguarding their capital. That desire for safety is probably a greater factor in the situation than any desire on the part of the people to show confidence in their country.

It would be better for the country if we had arrived at the stage where people would once again take their surplus money and put it out to do a day's work. That is actually the sort of confidence we need right now. It is nice of course for a government to get cheap money, but there should not be confusion between what is called confidence in the country and the desire on the part of the people to do nothing more than make a perfectly safe investment of surplus funds."

Employment Gain Reported for October

Ottawa.—An employment gain in Canada of 14,803 persons between Oct. 1 and Nov. 1 is reported by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The Bureau says Nov. 1 payroll of 9,482 firms making returns stands at 1,012,103 persons compared with 997,300 on Oct. 1.

The bureau reports the employment level at Nov. 1 is higher than that of any month since Dec. 1, 1930. It says particularly important improvements occurred in logging, while highway and building construction, mining, retail trade and manufacturing also contributed gains.

Gain in manufacturing, contrary to seasonal trend, is especially pronounced in the iron and steel industry. Textiles and some other industries are more active, but food and lumber divisions released large numbers.

Transportation, railway construction, communications and services show contractions.

The bureau reports improvement in Ontario, Quebec and the prairie provinces.

Clever Chinese

Brides and Grooms to be Taught Duties of Matrimony

Shanghai.—With the introduction of mass marriages into China, the Chinese Women's Temperance Association has suggested brides and bridegrooms participating should receive a course of instruction in the duties of married life before going to the altar.

In order to improve Chinese family conditions the association believes brides should be trained in such matters as housekeeping and cooking and should be taught to rear their children properly. Bridegrooms should be given lessons on how to be good husbands and fathers.

The fourth mass marriage was performed here early in October, the largest ever conducted in China, involving 146 couples. The mass marriage plan, first started here, has spread to Nanking, Hankow, Peiping and many of China's larger cities.

The plan was devised to combat the wasteful Chinese habit of spending enormous sums on weddings. For centuries the custom has been to go deeply into debt to stage sumptuous wedding celebrations. The mass marriage plan places a frugal limit upon the cost of wedding celebrations.

Horses Coming Back

Canada's horse population has declined greatly during the past fifteen years, due principally, to the invasion of the motor vehicle into the field of endeavour so long ruled by the equines. Unable to compete with the speed and convenience of automobiles as a mode of transportation, the horse naturally suffered prestige, and with the adoption of power machinery on farms his sphere of usefulness became even more limited with the result that the number of horses in Canada declined from 3,610,494 in 1921 to 2,933,492 in 1934, notwithstanding the growth of the country during that period.

Despite the continued decline in recent years, indications point to better days ahead for "Old Dobbin," with both horse population and demand on the increase. An estimate of the number of horses in Manitoba as at June, 1935, places the horse population at 297,000, an increase of 1,000 over the preceding year. Another favorable indication is the distinct increase in horse-breeding activities. Horse breeders' clubs in the Prairie Provinces numbered 166 in 1934, an increase of more than 30 per cent over the number in operation in 1933, and a number of districts reported inability to secure satisfactory stallions. Imports of pure-bred stallions and mares of the draft breeds numbered 50 in 1933, and this number was more that doubled in 1934.

World Peace

Woman Submits Plan That Sounds Simple

New York.—Bearing a world peace plan so simple she believes "everybody will be for it and no one against it," Mrs. Grace Oswalt is in New York from West LaFayette, Ind.

A plump, grandmotherly person who manages a woman's dormitory at Purdue University, Mrs. Oswalt gave newspapermen a preliminary insight into her plan.

She proposes to allow other nations to pay into the international bank at Basle the war debts owed the United States. This sum would be the nucleus for the democratic support of the League of Nations, the World Court, the international Red Cross and all other peace agencies now in existence, working as part of the machinery of a united states of the world, guaranteeing economic security to all the nations, thereby eliminating the need of armaments. The president of the united states of the world would be elected by popular vote of all peoples on the earth.

Mrs. Oswalt's idea first came to New York in a letter to the League of Political education at Town Hall after a broadcast in which citizens were asked to submit their ideas about possible ways of effecting world peace. Her letter, selected from 3,000 responses, was considered by the league to contain an idea that would be the simplest of attainment.

One woman is reported to have recently said: "We women would be just as well satisfied if old Santa Claus would just take the runs out of our stockings."

Place Names

If any person looks at an official map, he will find a well known community in Wolford township designated "Easton" observes the Brockville Recorder. But if a letter be addressed to such a destination, it will probably reach the Dead Letter Office or else be delivered to a place of the same name in Nova Scotia. Similarly, a village in rear of Leeds and Lansdowne is officially designated by the map-makers as "Seeley Bay." But the post office in the village is officially styled "Seeley's Bay" by the Post Office Department.

The map-makers are also responsible for such versions as "Row Corners," "Seeley," "MacIntosh," "Lake Loyada' and Sweet Corners," whereas these places have been known for generations and are still known as "Row's Corners," "Seely's," "MacIntosh Mills," "Lake Eloida" and "Sweet's Corners."

It all started some years ago when some busybody attached to the Geographic Board of Canada set out to rename communities in the counties of Leeds and Grenville, regardless of the wishes or the customs of the inhabitants. There is no evidence that he or his associates consulted anybody in making these and other decisions. They simply made them and expected people to follow suit.

We humbly submit that before officialdom tries to shift familiar old place-names, it should find out what the residents of the communities concerned think about it and certainly the spectacle of a village possessing one official name on the map and another official name in the post office directory is ridiculous in the extreme.

Canals Cost Set At $988,794,100

OTTAWA — Canada has spent $988,794,100 on the construction and maintenance of Canadian canals since Confederation, a report on the waterways of the Dominion issued by the Bureau of Statistics discloses. This total was distributed in round figures as follows: Investments, $670,231,000; maintenance, operation and subsidies, $236,389,200; dredging, $82,173.800.

The total investment of the country in harbors and rivers, exclusive of dredging, represented $6 per capita.

The greater part of the shipping engaged in the Canadian trade is of the steam or motor type vessel with a small percentage of sailing vessels in the fishing industry off the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. No authentic statistics regarding the total water-borne freight tonnage in and out of all Canadian ports has ever been compiled, however, it is estimated by the Bureau that the water-borne commerce in and out of Canadian ports was between 35,000 and 40,000,000 tons for 1933, made up as follows: Sea going, 17,360.000 tons; Great Lakes, 15,000,000; Pacific coastal trade (Canada only), $2,500,000; lower St. Lawrence and Atlantic coastal (Canada only), 1,000.000.

ON CALLING A PIG

One just can't pick up a newspaper without learning something. Here is a story about a hog-calling contest sponsored by the University of California at Berkeley. It was won by a senior from Indiana, whose declamation of "Who-e-e-e pig, pig, pig," won high praise from the professional judge. Other contestants, it was reported, had good range, adequate volume, fine tonal qualities, but they made the grave error of calling 'Soo-e-e-e, pig, pig, pig," which means "scram" to a pig, it was explained carefully, and so presumably disqualified those who said "Soo-e-e-e" because after all it was a calling contest.

What fascinates us in the story is the degree of culture possessed by Californian pigs that it reveals. We have serious doubts that Carleton county pigs know "Who-e-e-e means come to dinner and "Soo-e-e-e" means scram. To tell the truth it is a long time since we called pigs, but we do not recall that they showed remarkable intelligence or were conspicuous for their regard to the niceties of tone and pronounciation. Volume, however, was imperative, and if the call were loud enough it seems to us the pigs didn't care much whether one said "Who-e-e-e" or "Soo-e-e-e," or sang about the Bicycle Built for Two.

In California, though it's different. There, apparently, pigs have learned to distinguish between the command to come and the order to go hence, and hog-calling has become an exact science. It must be the climate, one supposes, or perhaps the Berkeley pigs have imbibed something of learning from a scholastic environment.—Ottawa Journal.

RATIONS FOR DAIRY COWS SET BY SUPPLY

Two important factors must be considered in formulating suitable rations for dairy cows: The supply of feed on hand, or available at a cost in keeping with the value of the product to be produced, and the selection of feeds that will supply the necessary food nutriments in a palatable form, plus sufficient variety and bulk.

Data secured at the Dominion Experimental Farm, Nappan, Nova Scotia, show that the cheapest supply of feed is secured from our own farms. In other words, home-grown feeds are the most economical.

It is generally recognized that on the majority of farms sufficient protein cannot be produced to supply the dairy cows with the necessary requirements. By producing clover or alfalfa hay, however, along with roots or ensilage and the common cereal crops, it has been demonstrated here during the past three years that the only feed purchases necessary are small amounts of high protein supplements. One supplement that is produced in Eastern Canada is fish meal

Experiments have been conducted during the last three winters comparing fish meal with linseed oil meal when used to balance a home-grown ration. It was found that equally as good production, at as low a cost, could be expected from a grain ration made up of 300 pounds of ground oats and barley, or oats, wheat and barley, plus 50 pounds high grade fish meal, as when 125 pounds of linseed oil meal was used to replace the fish meal. In either case the ration contained slightly over 19 per cent protein. Good quality hay and swedes were fed as sources of roughage.

With any ration made up of feeds grown in Eastern Canada, a mineral supplement such as ground limestone and bone char is necessary. When the fish meal is fed, this is not so essential, but it is excellent insurance in any case.

DUNDAS - GRENVILLE PRESBYTERY.

Rev. S. R. Collins, missionary on furlough from Africa, in speaking before the meeting of ministers and laymen of the Dundas-Grenville Presbytery at Chesterville said, in part, that the crisis throughout the missionary work of the United Church of Canada is more than a crisis. R. H. Morrison, Kemptville, who followed, stated in the report of the missionary and maintenance committee that the proposed cut of $100-000 in 1936 foreign mission budget may have to be made unless a great increase in givings to the M. and M. fund are made before the end of this year.

Rev. Thomas Knowles, of Iroquois, chairman of the Presbytery, was in charge, with Rev. G. H. Smith of Morewood, assisting. Attendance of ministers and laymen was small.

Rev. S. C. Moore, B.A., B.D., past president of the Bay of Quinte Conference; Rev. Mr. Collins and visiting members were made corresponding members.

A letter was received from the Lord's Day Alliance, calling notice of the court to the alleged marked increase in offences against the Lord's Day Act.

Letters of sympathy were ordered sent by the presbytery to Mrs. C. W. Norval of Williamsburg, whose husband, a former valued layman, recently died, and to E. H. Adams, Spencerville, who was injured in an accident lately.

Rev. W. R. Johnston, South Mountain, reported on pensions, while T. M. Somerville told of home missions. In his report on Christmas education Rev. E. Lacey of Matilda mentioned the work among young people conducted by Dr. C. A. Myers, Rev. D. T. I. Forsyth, Rev. R. C. Tait of Chesterville; Rev. C. C. Gilbert of Maynard, and Rev. R. D. Smith and Mrs. J. C. Gilder of Iroquois.

In the report on home missions, Rev. A. G. Steers of Bishop's Mills, requested permission to leave the pastoral charge at the end of the conference year, and a grant of $200 for the field was requested by the committee.

Rev. Dr. Moore, who represented the Ontario Temperance Federation, asked for assistance in clearing Dundas County of beer rooms. He said he believed the tempeance cause had lost ground in legislative matters, but was gaining in public sentiment.

Frederick Hutt, of Inkerman, stated the church had gained more than 100 members as the result of revival services held there.

In the evening the Religious Educational committee, under Rev. Mr. Lacey, was in charge, when Rev. J. McKay of Ottawa, chairman of the conference committee, spoke.

Rev. J. H. Hamilton, of Maxville, led in the discussion on "More Adequate Adult Work in the Sunday Schools."

Rev. Mr. Smith and Oscar Wallace assisted at the evening session.

Meals were served by the Ladies' Aid of the church andvotes of thanks to that organization were moved by Mr. Lacey and Rev. Kenneth Woodwork. Mrs. W. O. Dixon replied.

Presbytery expressed thanks to the Official Board of the church through Rev. R. Douglas Smith, of Morrisburg, at the close of the session.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear father, Ezra Duval, who died December 15th, 1931.

This month brings back sad mem'ries
Of a loved one gone to rest,
And those who think of him today
Are those who loved him best.
So to those who have a father,
Treasure him with care,
For you will never know his value
Till you see his vacant chair.

Daughter, MYRTLE.
