JUDGE JAMES R. O'REILLY

(Cornwall Standard)

The sudden death of His Honor Judge O'Reilly, which occurred at the Court House on Tuesday morning, was a great shock to the community. Judge O'Reilly had not been in robust health for some time, but was able to carry on his work. When he reached the Court House on Tuesday morning to preside at a sitting of the Division Court it was noticed that he did not look as well as usual. He proceeded to open the court, but before the business was commenced he was seized with a sudden weakness and instructed the bailiff, John Denneny, to adjourn the court. He was assisted to the Judge's chamber in rear of the court room, and lying down on the couch lit a cigarette. In a few minutes he was seized with a fit of coughing, caused by asthma, from which he had been suffering for some time. Court House officials telephoned for a doctor, but were not able to locate one immediately. In a few minutes the coughing became distressing, and before medical aid could be secured, His Honor had passed away. With him at the time were Mr. Harold Fawthrop, Clerk of the Division Court, Mr. J. G. Harkness, County Crown Attorney, Mr. Adrian I. Macdonell, Local Registrar of the High Court, and other officials. Dr. A. J. Lalonde arrived shortly after, but Judge O'Reilly was beyond human aid. Dr. J.A. Hurteau also came. The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Corbet reached the Court House as soon as possible after the sad news reached him.

The news of Judge O'Reilly's death cast a gloom of deep sorrow as it became known through the town. Being a man of kindly character, he was known to all classes of the people, and his ever pleasant greeting will be sadly missed. To those who enjoyed his intimate friendship he was a delightful companion, and his sudden passing will cause them the deepest sorrow. During his nearly thirty years residence in Cornwall, he was ever actively interested in every movement for the advancement of the community, and with his cultured eloquence he was always ready to advocate a good cause. This was especially evident during the trying period of the Great War when public appeals were frequently made to arouse and keep up the enthusiasm of those who could only "do their bit" at home.

His Honor Jas. Redmond O'Reilly was the eldest son of the late James O'Reilly, Q.C., M.P., born at Kingston, Ont., Feb. 14th, 1862, and educated at Regiopolis College, Kingston, Kingston Collegiate Institute; St Marys College, Montreal and Queens University, Kingston, from which latter institution he graduated with the degree of B.A. and gold medal in Political Economy in 1882. He was called to the Bar in May, 1885, and successfully practised his profession at Prescott for several years until his appointment as Senior County Judge for Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, in March, 1900. His Honor was formerly a Liberal, and he was president of the South Grenville Liberal Association for thirteen years. He married on Dec. 31st, 1889, Miss Rose Mary Bermingham, daughter of the late James Bermingham of Kingston. He is survived by his wife and two sons, Mr. James O'Reilly of Toronto, and Mr. W. Harty O'Reilly, of Montreal.

Before his elevation to the Bench, he was an active supporter of the Liberal party, and took part in several election campaigns during that period. He was a member of St. Columban's Parish and took a deep interest in the activities of the church. He was formerly a member of the Knights of Columbus, but of late had not been active in the Order. Taking a prominent part in the social life of Cornwall, he was a past president of the Cornwall Club, and a member of the Cornwall Golf and Country Club. When the Cornwall Boat Club, the parent organization of the Golf Club, was organized in the year 1909, he was appointed Honorary Commodore.

In March 1930, Judge O'Reilly would have completed thirty years on the bench, which would entitle him to retire, and he was looking forward to that event with pleasant anticipation.

The funeral took place on Thursday morning from the family residence to St. Columbans Church, thence to the C.N.R. station for interment at Kingston.

BITTEN BY DOG

Olive Moriarty, 3 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moriarty of Chesterville, was badly bitten by a dog belonging to her grandfather, on Wednesday. Dr. Brown, of Aultsville, attended the child and put six stitches in the various wounds.

Mrs. Moriarty, Olive and baby were spending a few days with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Manion, at Archer, when the accident occurred. The dog was tied up in the summer kitchen, and was asleep. It is supposed that the child went over to touch it.

The dog was killed immediately, and the head forwarded to authorities at Ottawa, for examination, the result of which is being anxiously awaited. Meanwhile, in case the dog might have been affected with rabies, Dr. Brown is giving the child treatments to prevent developments. Olive is reported to be doing as well as can be expected at the home of her grandmother.

FARMER COMMITS SUICIDE

Mr. Ernest Coulthart, a well-known farmer residing about two miles north-east of Inkerman, committed suicide by hanging himself in his barn on Monday morning last. Mr. Coulthart had risen at five o'clock, and had gone to the barn to commence the day's work, while Mrs Coulthart prepared breakfast. When he failed to come in, Mrs. Coulthart sent her little daughter to the barn to notify her husband that the breakfast was ready. Finding the doors locked, the child gained entrance through the horse stable, and discovered her father hanging in the west section of the barn. She immediately ran to the house and the neighbors were called, and when they examined the man he was dead. Dr. P. McLaughlin, coroner, of Winchester, was immediately summoned and he declared the man dead for some time by strangulation. Mr. Coulthart had apparently gone to the barn, and immediately hanged himself in the west mow of the barn by tying a 3-4 inch rope to the track at the peak of the roof, for no work had been done when he was found.

Mr. Coulthart had been in poor health all winter, and was in a despondent mood, but no one imagined that he was contemplating taking his life. He was, for a number of years previous to his moving to Inkerman, a resident of Winchester.

He was 49 years of age, and is survived by his widow and four children.

WISHES TO BE REMEMBERED TO OLD FRIENDS

Renewing his subscription, Dr. C. H. Weagant, of Winnipeg, says:

"In enclosing another years subscription to The Leader, I want to say that I have never missed a single copy of the organ since I came West in 1892—and The Leader is just as interesting to me now as The Courrier was back in the 'nineties'. Not a word is left unscanned. Old family names always stand out prominently, like Meikle, Bradley, Merkley, Fetterly, Colquhoun, Casselman and many others. I send greetings to them all, and invite them to come and see me when in Winnipeg. Northern Manitoba mines and the New Railway to Hudsons Bay are going to give Manitoba a new place on the map of Canada.

"With best wishes.

"Sincerely yours,
"C. H. Weagant."

MR. JOSEPH BEAUPRE

It is with sincere regret that we announce the death of the late Joseph Beaupre, who died Wednesday morning, April 17th, 1929, at his home in the 3rd Concession of Williamsburg, where he has resided for a number of years.

Deceased was born in Lower Canada, and was in his 81st year.

He leaves to mourn his loss his widow; five sons and three daughters: Julius, of Aultsville, William, of Morrisburg, George and Roy, of Aultsville and Wilfred at home; Mrs Stephen Furnace, Wales, Mrs. Julius Mitchell, Wales and Mrs. Thurb. Barnhart of Carthage, N.Y. Fifty grandchildren and eighteen great-grandchildren also survive.

The funeral took place from his home to St. Marys Church, Friday morning at nine o'clock. The remains were placed in the vault to await burial.

Numerous spiritual and floral offerings were received by relatives and other friends of the deceased.

Fifteen Cents will admit you to the Carnival of Fun in the United Church on Thursday night, May 2. Beginning at eight o'clock, there will be continuous fun and programme. # RESURRECTION ROCK

by Edwin Balmer

© Little, Brown and Company

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Was the body of that gay young lieutenant, Barney Loutrelle, lying cold and stiff in the snow and ice? This was the fear in the heart of Ethel Carew, when she rushed from the home of her grim old grandfather, Lucas Cullen, Senior, who had been struck with anger and terror when he learned that Loutrelle was going to Resurrection Rock, that ghostly island in Lake Huron, with its unoccupied house. Loutrelle and Ethel had met in these northern woods of Michigan. In London he had received, in a seance, messages from Ethel's father, instructing him to go to the Rock—a trip which he hoped would clear up his obscure parentage.

Old Lucas Cullen, winner of millions in violent battles for timber land in the early days, tries to prevent Loutrelle from reaching the Rock and Ethel fears that Barney had been killed by Kincheloe, acting under Cullen's orders. She tries to reach the Rock herself.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Ethel reached the lake and removed her skis. Kincheloe was still far ahead of her, but he was exhibiting an uneasiness which restored to Ethel her fears of the night. Miss Platt's husband seemed to be losing determination; he no longer was hurrying but was glancing back often at her, and he was wandering off from the direct line to Resurrection Rock.

She noticed that something on the shore seemed to disturb him and, looking about, Ethel observed that Asa Redbird had emerged from the trees and was hastening after them. Asa was carrying his rifle.

"You want me to stop him?" Asa inquired when he came up.

Ethel shook her head. "Just come with me."

In silence they completed their journey to the mysterious house on Resurrection Rock. There were no signs of life and when Ethel and Asa Redbird reached the main entrance, the girl received the first shock.

The glass panel over the knob had been broken. After a moment's hesitation, Ethel thrust her arm through the hole so plainly prepared for turning the key from the outside.

As she did so she realized that neither Bagley nor Barney Loutrelle would have need to enter in this fashion.

"Bagley got key from Wheedon," Asa explained. "Barney Loutrelle came yesterday and Bagley right here and let him in."

That hall was wide and pleasant, furnished with gay, bright wall paper picturing tall herons standing in river reeds. There were pretty, painted chairs in gray and gold, matching a table and a lounge which had cushions of black silk embroidered with gold herons. Underfoot was a handsome, silky rug in the blue and yellow designs of the Chinese weaver. It showed no wear or soil; nothing showed use.

Ethel stood amazed at the beauty and brightness; she found herself thinking of a woman in connection with this house on Resurrection Rock—a woman of positive and good tastes.

Draperies hung in a wide doorway opening into a big room at the front. Bright, diffused light fell upon a large, heavy, carved table near the center of the room; upon chairs and a couch on one side; upon a grand piano at the east end with a tall lamp and music cabinet nearby. In the wall to Ethel's left, which was the interior wall, was a large and beautiful fireplace with a high, marble mantel.

The room showed no sign of disorder of of violence done there; yet sight of the room itself amazingly disturbed her. She did not know why, at first; she merely felt frightened as by something uncanny.

"Asa, I've been in this room. I've never been in this house before; but I've been in this room!" Ethel exclaimed.

"Yes?" Asa inquired, unable to comprehend her.

It was plain to her that this room once had been part of a French building. French of the sixteenth or seventeenth century. Ethel's recognition of this partly explained her impression of familiarity here; when she was a child at her aunt's chateau, Aunt Cecelia had taken her on visits to chateaux of many of Uncle Hilaire's friends. She might indeed have been in this very room before. It was hopeless for her to try to recall from her memories of when she was five and eight.

Her mind was not now dwelling upon what might have been her own association with this room. What was Barney Loutrelle's? He had been sent across the ocean to the room. Why?

She moved nearer the mantel and gazed at the design incised over the fireplace; it bore a dignified, formal device like—yes, very like—the device wrought upon Barney Loutrelle's ring.

They searched the house thoroughly. No one, living or dead, was in the house; nowhere had they come upon sign of violence or indication of course for Barney Loutrelle's disappearance.

"You want me to stop him?" Asa inquired.

"Where's he gone, Asa?" Ethel appealed finally.

"How do I know?" the Indian returned irritably, and Ethel appreciated that his nerves were on edge.

She heard scratching at the door and, remembering the dogs, she recalled the brown mat in Lad's hair.

"Let them in, Asa," she directed.

When the door was opened and the dogs ran in, she thought that they rushed into the salon because she was there; but Lad only brushed against her on his way to the further end of the great room where he thrust his head down and smelled of the floor, whimpering and scrambling about in a circle.

Lass blundered about near him so excitedly that Ethel followed to see what was there, only to find a space of bare, varnished floor. But her interest stirred Lad to leap upon her and dash to the door on the south which communicated with the outside steps down the Rock to the summer landing.

When she looked through the glass of this door, Ethel observed for the first time that those steps showed the depressions of deep footsteps.

The dogs jumped into the snow and floundered down the steps to the ice where they shook themselves and rolled over, barking. She was fearfully expecting that Lad was leading her to the sort of horror which she had believed to be in the house when she came upon chunks of ice standing beside a hole, about a yard in diameter, which had been chopped through to the water.

Young ice had frozen over, not yet half an inch thick. She knelt and leaned forward with her hands on the edge of the hole, peering down through the new, glassy crystal into the dark, deep water underneath. She felt footsteps on the floor of ice and looking about, she saw that Asa, after some delay, had descended from the Rock. He came to her side and gazed into the hole.

"Water hole," he said quietly. "Bagley chop it here yesterday to fill buckets. Bagley did not chop it so big."

"Yes; that's it; why? Why, Asa?" she cried, suddenly losing control of herself. "Why should any one want that hole bigger?"

"Nobody would," Redbird assured positively, "for water."

"No," she said. "No; no; no!" She meant, first, agreement with Asa; then revolt at, and denial of, the images in her own mind. The Indian and she now understood the same events alike; Asa, indeed, had discovered more than she.

"What kept you up there?" she asked him.

He said he would show her; and together they ascended the steps in the Rock. He led her to the part of the floor where the dogs had been sniffing.

"Somebody washed right here, you see. Somebody did it last night, I think; somebody scrubbed. But no place else."

"Somebody burned cloth in fireplace," Asa informed, going to the hearth and producing a handful of ashes which exhibited the woven texture of cloth; he produced also a charred bit of shaped wood which had been the back of a scrubbing brush. Asa offered it to her and she put out her hand to take it, and then she could not touch it. Blood had stained it before it had been burnt; Kincheloe had put it in the fire to burn away—blood.

Asa had let go of it, thinking that she was taking it, and it dropped to the floor between them. It was to make sure that such trifles as this were completely burnt, she thought, that Kincheloe wished to come to the Rock early this morning.

She could think these things; but she could not say them.

She told him about the mat of blood in Lad's hair.

Asa went out and examined the dog.

"Nothing there now," he reported when he returned. "Hair there all cut off."

This brought her to the door to witness for herself that, since her discovery early that morning, come one had clipped the hair close under the dog's jaw. Who had done that? Kincheloe? Or Miss Platt? Or her grandfather?

"Somebody was killed here, Asa?"

"What else to think?"

"But who—Asa, who?"

"Who was here last night?" Asa returned logically.

She flinched. He meant, of course, her friend of yesterday, Barney Loutrelle.

CHAPTER VII.

"Well," Lucas hailed Ethel on her return. "Well, you're back from your little sunrise erpedition, Kincheloe tells me. Tell me all about it."

"Grandfather!" she cried, breathless from her excitement and from hurrying. "He was just here. Kincheloe musn't go away; he—"

"What's the trouble with you?" her grandfather demanded, seizing her arm. "Step in here and explain what's come over you."

He used just enough force to overcome her physical opposition. She did not struggle violently, as his grasp warned her that if she exerted more strength, he would also employ more and overpower her.

He was angry with her for what she had done in the night and for having gone out early this morning; but he was big and firm-handed and so much as usual, that she cried out confidently: "Grandfather, you don't know what he's done!"

"Who done?"

"Kincheloe!"

"Well; well," he demanded. "What's he done that I don't know? Tell me about it," he invited.

"You know about it; all; all!" she cried aloud. "Oh, grandfather!" And she shrank back before him under her share of the horror and guilt of what had been done.

Dreams

Here to these muted shores the worn ships drift
Gently as petals fluttering from a tree,
And on the crumbling shore the curled waves lie
Like lace stripped from the cold breast of the sea.

Calm as a rural night this silent port
Invokes no lusty cheer for safe return.
For in the time-washed harbours of the heart
Old dreams come back are ships the wide seas spurn.

How far would you go to be sure of a better Oil-?

Knowing that a better oil means smoother performance, longer life, greater economy and bigger trade-in-value for your car, you'd probably go a long way to be sure of a better oil.

That's what Imperial Oil Limited did—went all the way to tropical South America for the crude out of which to refine Marvelube.

There's lots of crude oil available right at Canada's front door. If Canada's largest and most modern refineries had been able to evolve as good an oil as Marvelube from locally available crude they would have been glad to do so. Peruvian crude made a purer, carbon-free, fuller-bodied oil—an oil that meant better lubrication—so Peruvian crude was decided upon.

The decision set a new standard in motor oils. Aircraft operators, the most particular buyers of oil, are enthusiastic about Marvelube because it has given them a longer period of operation between engine overhauls, and a greater margin of safety.

You can enjoy the same benefits in your car, and there is a grade of Marvelube that is refined to meet the exact requirements of your car. Consult the Marvelube chart at good service stations and dealers everywhere.

Essex Again Flooded With Week-End Rains

Sandwich Homes Cut Off by Rivers of Water

Windsor.—A heavy all-day rain on Saturday has revived flood conditions along the Detroit River front, and several houses in Sandwich are cut off from the town by water varying from two to four feet in depth. Trucks have been requisitioned to provide a ferry service to the main roads in order to allow the residents to come to and from their homes.

At Riverside the whole river bank in flooded and summer cottages will be menaced again if the water level, already very high, rises any further.

Throughout level Essex county water is standing in the fields, and ditches have become miniature torrents.

CANAL STREET FLOODED.

Tilbury.—Canal street in Tilbury lived up to its name Sunday, as a river of water a foot deep flowed across it, to the delight of the juvenile population, but to the discomfiture of hundreds of transient motorists who stalled in the flood. The flood, caused by a heavy rainfall and the inability of the town sewers to carry off the surplus, extended for some distance on the provincial highway either side of the town. The street which forms the link with the provincial road is for the most part a residential district, and with the exception of a few flooded cellars no damage was done.

Dr. G. C. Creelman's Useful Life Ended

Former President of the O.A.C. Has Sudden Call by Grim Reaper in Beamsville

ACTIVE CAREER

Ontario lost a gifted son when Dr. George Christie Creelman, former president of the Ontario Agricultural College, was suddenly called to his last reward at his home in Beamsville on Thursday last.

Born in Collingwood, May 9, 1869, educated at the public school and Collegiate institute there, he proved a first class student and evinced great aptitude for assimilating knowledge on all kinds of subjects, winning several diplomas. He proceeded to the University of Toronto, where he graduated in 1888, with degree of B.S.A., afterwards taking post graduate courses at Cornell and Wisconsin universities and Michigan Agriculture college, gaining further honors and acquiring an international reputation. In consequence of that, McMaster university, at a special convocation, conferred upon his the LL.D. degree (honoris causa) in 1910.

Dr. Creelman delved deeply into agricultural pursuits and methods, always with the thought in mind of doing something to improve the status of the farmer and to lighten his labors. His studies along these lines attracted the attention both in Canada and the States, and numerous tempting offers were made him to cross the border. He accepted an appointment as assistant professor of biology at the Mississippi Agriculture and Mechanics college, in 1889, and became professor in 1892, retaining that position until 1897.

Returning to Canada he was appointed superintendent of Farmers' Institutes of Ontario, which kept him busy for seven years; then he became superintendent of agricultural societies and secretary of the Ontario Fruitgrowers' Association.

APPOINTED PAESIDENT.

He was appointed president of the Ontario Agricultural college in February, 1904, to succeed his father-in-law, the late Dr. James Mills, and during the 17 years of his regime there effected many changes of a beneficial character. On resigning in 1920 he was appointed agentgeneral for Ontario in Great Britain, but was obliged to relinquish the duties of that office in 1922 owing to failing health.

Returning again to the Dominion he was offered several attractive positions which he declined, and ultimately acquired a fruit farm at Beamsville.

Among other positions he held at various periods were those of president of the American Association of Farmers' Institutes, delegate to Europe to investigate agricultural methods on that continent and in Great Britain, director and senator of the University of Toronto. During the Great War he was commissioner of agriculture for Ontario, and rendered valuable service in connection with recruiting. He was author of a "handbook for the use of women's institutes and other works," also he was a chief of the Six Nation Indians.

In religion Dr. Creelman was a Presbyterian. He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Ada Mills; three sons—James, who operates a fruit farm at Beamsville; Ross, with the Copp Clark company, Toronto; and Donald, at home; two daughters—Mrs. Nicholas Curtis of Edmonton, Alberta, and Mrs. Wilfred C. James of Toronto, also a brother, Fred, in California.

Deputation Sent to Kabul to Urge His Abdication

Peshawar, India.—The end of the reign of Bacha Sakao, bandit-king, at the capital of Afghanistan, appears near, according to advices received here.

Nadir Khan, former aide of the abdicated king, Amanullah, was said to have decided to send a deputation of Mullahs to Kabul to urge the bandit leader to abdicate the throne he seized during the Afghan civil war last autumn. Nadir Khan offered Bacha Sakao guarantees of safety if he acted promptly.

It was expected that Nadir Khan would attempt to enter Kabul at once and prepare to offer the throne to a member of the old royal family. Amanullah, who recently has attempted to regain his throne, was expected to waive his claim and seek a ministerial post, reports said.

Bacha Sakao's army has been defeated several times recently, and many of his men were reported deserting.

Further Changes In Ontario Police

Establishment of Liquor Control Investigation Branch Announced

Toronto.—Establishment of a liquor control investigation branch; appointment at an early date of a number of officials with the entirely new designation of "staff inspectors"; the placing of the force on a uniform basis throughout, by means of the abolition of the post of "provincial officer," and a tightening up of the training methods of the Queen's Park Training School, through which every applicant for a constable's job must pass, and in which every constable from time to time takes refresher courses, were announced recently by Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General of Ontario, as further steps in his readjustment of the provincial police force.

With these changes the Attorney-General believes he has the force on a "firmer basis" than ever before, and ready, in every respect, to take over this summer the administration of all county high constables, and to work out regulations and plans that "will very much improve the general police administration throughout Ontario."

The liquor control investigation branch, now established, will be headed by the present chief provincial inspector, Frank E. Elliott, with Provincial Inspectors A. E. Garvis, H. Graham, A. R. Elliott, W. C. Killing and A. Moss, assisting him in the administration of the branch. These men, the Attorney-General pointed out, will have charge of general investigation in particular cases relating to liquor affairs throughout Ontario, and this work will be carried on in the same way as the criminal investigation branch, the senior branch of the service.

E. L. Foster Shoots Better Than Canadian Holder of Title

Bisley, England.—Miss E. L. Foster's record-breaking score of 105 made in shooting here was the first "highest possible" anyone has made in the King's first stage match since the diameter of the bull's eye was reduced to five inches in January, 1928.

The best previous score was 103 made by Lieutenant Desmond Burke, Canadian Gold Medalist at Bisley last July when he won the bronze medal.

Miss Foster, who runs a poultry farm, put seven consecutive shots into a five-inch bull's eye at two hundred yards, seven more into a fifteen-inch bull's-eye at five hundred yards, and a third string of seven into the same fifteen-inch bull's-eye at six hundred yards, totalling a maximum of 105 points.

Canada's Team

Ottawa—Lieutenant Colonel G. T. Chisholm, R.O., Toronto, formerly of the 48th Highlanders, has been appointed commandant of the Canadian Bisley team.

Captain W. G. Colquohoun, M.C., of the P.P.C.L.I., Victoria, B.C., has been selected as adjutant. Announcement of these appointments was made by the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association.

Both officers have been very active in rifle shooting activities for several years. Lt.-Col. Chisholm is an old D.R.A. shot, and is at present chairman of council of the Ontario Provincial Rifle Association. Capt. Colquohoun has been a competitor at the D.C.R.A. annual prize meeting at Connaught ranges during the past few years.

The Canadian Bisley team will sail from Montreal on the S.S. Montrose on June 12, and will take part in the Bisley program from July 8 to 20.

Fails to Lower Seagrave Record

Capt. Malcolm Campbell Makes Two Attempts at Cape of Good Hope Track

Verneuk Pan, Cape of Good Hope.—Captain Malcolm Campbell, famous British automobile racer, Sunday afternoon made a gallant but vain attempt to wrest the world's record of 231 miles an hour from his countryman, Major H. O. D. Segrave.

In two attempts over a measured mile course Captain Campbell attained a speed of 224.58 miles in his first run in a westerly direction, but in the second run in an easterly direction only pushed the nose of his "Blue Bird" over the course at 212.51, making his average for both runs 218.54.

Misfortune dogged his heels persistently. The captain had decided to start this morning and weather conditions at the moment were favorable. When everything was in readiness it was discovered a number of private cars had strayed onto the track and when, after much difficulty, these had been cleared off and Campbell took his seat in the cockpit, a violent wind suddenly arose, blowing clouds of dust across the track and making it impossible to start. Campbell regretfully climbed out and helped push his car back into the shed. Even earlier in the day a defective timing apparatus had delayed his attempt.

The high wind raged all morning and when it died down somewhat after lunch the captain again inspected the track and tested the wind velocity. At 4.40 he decided the moment had arrived and the Blue Bird was rolled into position. The start was made in a reversed direction from previous trial runs in order to get the wind behind the car.

MAKES SECOND ATTEMPT.

The machine passed the measured mile like a cloud of smoke and drew up without accident. The pace, to onlookers, appeared terrific. Mechanics rushed through the tire changing and made the necessary adjustments for the re-run in an incredibly short time. The wind by now had almost ceased and conditions looked ideal.

Another tremendous roar of the engines and Captain Campbell took off, dashed past the measured distance for the second time, slowed down as he approached the hundreds of spectators and was given a wonderful ovation when he brought his car to a stop.

Campbell showed signs of the severe strain as he climbed from the cockpit at the end of his first run. Within 20 minutes the Blue Bird was fitted with new tires and the captain immediately began his second try. The wind had freshened slightly, enough to cut down his speed 12 miles under the time of his outward journey.

"I haven't done it," was his curt comment at the end. After examining the track of the racing car he said that there were still bad patches on the course. "It is impossible to attempt to race again until the whole track has received attention."

Campbell complained that he had two severe bumps during his drive which had "strained my back and given me a headache."

Later he said that he was prepared to make a further assault on the record if the necessary funds were available to repair the track. He hoped that it might be ready in a week.

Valuable Work Making Life Better

The Victorian Order of Nurses Have Extensive Program Besides Nursing

Several young ladies in a western coast city who attended the class in Home Nursing conducted by the Victorian Order nurse in that city have entered hospital to commence their training as nurses. At these classes the girls learned the rudiments of care of the sick. Their interest was aroused and they decided to go further.

One thinks of the Victorian Order nurses as engaged in a full-time job of actual bedside care of the sick. They are—but in addition to this very valuable work Victorian Order nurses in 1928 taught over 400 classes in Home Nursing, First Aid and Little Mothers' League classes. Among others these classes were given to Girl Guides, Boy Scouts, C.G.I.T., C.S.E.T., and other church groups, women's clubs and technical school groups. In co-operation with the Canadian Red Cross a number of classes were given to groups of women and girls interested in Home Nursing and First Aid.

The Victorian Order nurse realizes that only by definite, careful education can the principles of healthful living be conveyed to Canadian citizens, and one of the best ways of accomplishing this, for old or young, is undoubtedly by group teaching.

UNTIL you have driven the new Nash "400" with the Twin Ignition motor, you can have no adequate idea of how much pleasure it has added to motoring.

Here are some plain, unvarnished facts and figures which may serve to convince you that you owe yourself a ride in a Twin-Ignition-Motored Nash.

With Twin Ignition instead of single ignition (two spark plugs per cylinder firing simultaneously, instead of one) higher compression is practical, and a much more efficient combustion of the gases is accomplished.

The result is that the identical Nash motor, by actual test, produces 22% more power than with single ignition, 5 miles per hour more speed, and gives you 2 extra miles of travel from every single gallon of gasoline you buy.

In fairness to yourself, don't think of buying any motor car today, until you have seen and driven the brilliant new Twin-Ignition-Motored Nash "400."

Sunday School Lesson

April 28. Lesson IV.—The Suffering Servant of Jehovah—Isaiah 53: 1-12. Golden Text—With his stripes we are healed.—Isaiah 53: 5.

ANALYSIS.

I. THE COMING GLORY OF JEHOVAH'S SERVANT, Chap. 52: 13-15.

II. HIS HUMILIATION AND DEATH, Chap. 53: 1-9.

III. THE ACCOMPLISHMENT OF HIS WORK IN THE WORLD, Chap. 53: 10-12.

INTRODUCTION — Throughout chapters 40 to 55 we meet the figure of Jehovah's servant again and again. He is called by the names "Jacob" and "Israel" (chs. 41: 8; 43: 1; 44: 1-2, 21; 45: 4; 48: 20; 49: 3), and seems quite clearly to be a personification of Israel as Jehovah's chosen people. He is represented as "chosen," "called," "not cast away," strengthened, helped, upheld by God, destined to render a great service to the world, both to the Gentiles, and to his own nation. Yet he is blind to the great things which Jehovah is doing in the world on his behalf, and deaf to the words of Jehovah's prophets who seek to instruct him. He has much to learn before he can accomplish his task. His blind eyes must be opened and his death ears made to hear (42: 19; 43: 8-10). Then he shall be Jehovah's witness to the nations that he is the supreme and only God as against the false and powerless gods they worship. That it is the people who are thought of as God's servant, and not an individual person, is clear from the passage above quoted (43: 10-12) where the plural pronoun is used ("Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, and my servant whom I have chosen").

I. THE COMING GLORY OF JEHOVAH'S SERVANT, Chap 52: 13-15.

Israel, beaten, humiliated, enslaved in Babylonian exile is soon to be delivered and restored to his own land. There he will be exalted and honored, to the astonishment and wonder of the other nations. The Hebrew text of this passage is in some confusion. The word rendered "deal prudently," or "deal wisely" (Rev. Ver.), should rather be rendered "prosper" (Rev. Ver. margin), as in Jer. 10: 21 and Prov. 17: 8. In v. 14 we should read "at him" instead of "at thee," as in two of the ancient versions. In the first part of v. 15 the ancient Greek version has "So shall many nations wonder at him," probably correctly.

These verses may be rendered more perfectly as follows:

"Behold my servant shall prosper, being exalted, lifted up, and very high.
For as many were appalled at him, so marred was he from the likeness of a man, and his form from that of the sons of men,
So shall many nations wonder at him, kings shall do him reverence,
For that which never before had been told them shall they see, and that which they never had heard of shall they consider."

Israel in exile had suffered so terribly as to have lost the semblance of a nation of living men All the more wonderful, therefore, will be his deliverance and exaltation. The Hebrew expression "shut their mouths" (v. 15) simply means to hold in silent awe or reverence.

II. HIS HUMILIATION AND DEATH, Chap. 53: 1-9.

The many nations or their kings, who are astonished at Israel's deliverance and exaltation, are, apparently, represented as the speakers. The story they tell of Israel's humiliation and subsequent rise to a place of glory and honor among the nations seems too wonderful to be believed (v. 1). Verse 2 should be rendered as in Rev. Ver. "grew up," not "shall grow up." The reference is to Israel's past as a comparatively small and poor people. Moffatt renders:

"Why, Israel of old grew like a sapling,
Like a shoot springing from dry soil;
He had no beauty to attract our eyes,
No charm to make us choose him."

Now forlorn, captive, or dispersed among the nations, he is despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows. The description fits perfectly Israel in the latter half of the sixth century, B.C., exiled in Babylon, in Egypt, and in many other lands.

People of other nations looking on thought Israel to be suffering entirely for his own sins, stricken of God, and afflicted. Now they know his suffering to have been on their behalf, that he might thus be qualified and prepared to teach them the ways of the Lord, that he might be God's prophet to them. In Babylonian exile the nation of Israel went down to death, and to the grave, vs. 8, 9.

It is true that this ideal of sinless sufferer was never perfectly realized in Israel. It remained to be fulfilled in Jesus Christ. He is the true realization and fulfilment of the prophet's vision. It is in him, in his life of service and of sacrifice, that we see completed Israel's ideal and hope as the servant of the Lord; in him the realization of Israel's ideal of character and of self-sacrificing, loving service to humanity. In that sense we may truly say that we have in these verses the most perfect prevision and portrayal of the suffering Saviour.

III. THE ACCOMPLISHMENT OF HIS WORK IN THE WORLD, Chap. 53: 10-12.

The prophet tells us here that it was all a part of Jehovah's plan for the world's redemption. The meaning of v. 10 is simply, "It pleased the Lord, or it was the Lord's will, to bruise (or crush) him, making his life an offering (sacrifice) for sin." In days to come he will be revived and restored. He will see his posterity carrying out his mission to the world, and seeing that accomplished for which he had labored and suffered he will be satisfied. The knowledge which he has so hardly gained will be for the world's instruction, making many righteous.

Finds British Discord Growing in Egypt

Van Ek Reports Bad Feeling is Rife Over Question of Independence

Professor Jacob Ek of the University of Colorado, in a report, declares that political disagreement between Great Britain and Egypt is evident on every hand. The report, sent from Athens, declares that the difference between the two countries arise from a fundamental question, which is of the utmost importance to both parties.

"Egypt desires independence," he writes. "The leaders have undoubtedly succeeded in arousing the lower classes to the cause of nationalism and independence. The demand for independance and nationalism has evidenced itself in a very virulent form on several occasions during the last decade. On the basis of their past activities, I think it is safe to say that the leaders will not compromise their stand, which seems to be for complete independence.

"On the other hand, Great Britain seems to be convinced that control over Egypt is necessary for the maintainence of the British Empire. Hence she will continue to insist upon control over Egypt's foreign affairs, no doubt on the basis of the four matters which are now reserved to her control. It is also maintained that Great Britain desires to keep control over Egypt for the purpose of economic exploitation.

"At present, affairs seem to be at a standstill. The Egyptian Parliament has been suspended for three years from July 19, 1928, and Egypt is being governed by a dictatorship.

"Illiteracy is very widespread in Egypt. There are plans for a school system, but funds are not available for the realization of these plans.

"Mohammedanism is a great force. It affects every detail of the lives of the people.

"There is, however, a woman's movement, and no doubt this will be an influence for the improvement of woman's condition of life."

Immigrants

The word immigrant has lost a great deal of its old significance in this country. Once it described one who was escaping from a life of suffering and hardship to an unknown land of freedom but of uncertain opportunities and possibilities. The modern immigrant it typified in the seven girls photographed above who were recent arrivals on the Canadian Pacific Duchess of Richmond. Their future as domestics in the city of Toronto was assured before they left their homes, and the comfortable quarters they occupied on the regal Atlantic vessel was a long cry from the accommodation they must have endured had they been but one generation earlier.

Michael, having spent a tiring day at the local fair, was driving home, when a great drowsiness overcame him, and he lay down in the cart and went off to sleep. The horse, finding that he could do as he liked, kicked himself free of the traces and ran away. When the Irishman awoke he found the horse was missing. While he was pondering the situation a stranger appeared on the scene. "Oh," said Michael, "am Oi Mike or aren't Oi?" "Oi'm sure Oi dunno," said the stranger. "Well," declared the other, "if Oi'm Mike, Oi've lost a horse, but if Oi'm not, Oi've found a cart."

To Learn Canadian Farming

AN admiral's son and one of the "Young Ambassadors of the Empire", the latter having visited Canada last year with the British "Young Ambassadors" Party were amongst recent arrivals, at Halifax, of juvenile Britons coming to Canada for farm work.

The admiral's son was Edward G. B. Kiddle (right), son of Admiral Sir Charles Kiddle, R.N., and the "Young Ambassador" was Frederick T. Mace, (left), who completed a correspondence course in Canadian farming and who has proceeded to Winnipeg for placement.

The boys were among a party of 125 arriving on the Cunarder "Ascania" and who travelled westward over the lines of the Canadian National Railways. Their placements were handled under the auspices of the British Immigration and Colonization Associatio

The Contest Is Closed

For the time being, the contest is closed.

Following is a very interesting letter from Miss Mattie Rabb of Palmerston, Ontario, offering some suggestions for a future contest:—

Palmerston, April 9th, 1929.

Gentlemen:—Accept hearty thanks for the Dollar I received yesterday, April 8th, being prize in "Limerick Contest". I see by last week's "Palmerston Spectator" that the Contest is closed, I think it was a splendid feature and would liked to have seen it continued for awhile longer. A real good contest is a Picture Title Contest, prizes to be given for the most clever or original title. You could give, say, several prizes each week ranging from $5 to $1 or whatever amount you saw fit to give. 1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes, and then say five of one dollar each. Allow each contestant to submit three titles each week if they wish. Nothing to be written on the post card but the titles and name and address, have no strings or restrictions attached, simply that each person trying the contest must write their titles on a post card and send in up to a certain date each week, this is really an excellent contest, lots of fun and interest is aroused in it, or another good one is to have the four lines of a limerick printed on a certain article and the contestant is to supply the last (fifth) line, and prizes to be given for the best last lines. Another good contest is to have some certain line of goods in an advertisement and a certain phrase in double quotation marks will be in these ads and the contestant is to pick out the phrase in the ads and then make up rhymes or jingles on the product or firm represented and for the best jingles or rhymes prizes to be given each week. Any of these contest are good. I would very much like to see some one of them continued for a time. If there are any instructions or more information I could give you in regards these contests I would be pleased to do so. I remain yours Respectfully,

(Miss) Mattie, Rabb,
Box 113, Palmerston, Ont..

We will be glad to hear from those who have taken part in the contest just closed or have enjoyed reading Limerick Corner. Let us know what you think of Miss Rabb's suggestions or send along some of your own.

Tariff Revision

Philadelphia Ledger: The weight of opinion, as shown in the House hearings, favors an immediate and upward general revision of the Tariff Act. The Administration is not in sympathy with a sweeping revision. Administration policy, so far as is known, points toward limited changes. The agricultural duties must, of course, have an overhauling in connection with farm relief. The cement industry seems to be listed for immediate help. Textiles, apparently, are marked for immediate attention. However, the plan has been to hold back from and discourage any general and thoroughgoing redrafting of the present tariff law.

Sanitary Etiquette

Among the several modes of transmission of human disease, modern sanitarians have assigned high place to personal contact. There are a large number of serious and important diseases, known as contact infections, which are transmited and propagated largely, not exclusively, by personal contact. Such diseases include pneumonia, influenza, diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles, whooping cough, smallpox, chickenpox, mumps, and the common cold. These are, of course, all germ diseases. Their method of spread is through personal contact between a person who harbors the infection and another who is susceptible to the same infection. In typhoid fever and some other diseases the person who harbors the infection need not necessarily be sick; he may harbor the infection as a carrier—and in some diseases the carrier is an important source of transmission.

These personal contacts may be direct or indirect, the more direct the more dangerous. Such contacts literally represent an exchange of bodily secretions or excretions between the persons involved. These contacts are far more common than most people realize; and under our modern complex social organization, especially in large cities, close personal contacts in a variety of ways are absolutely unavoidable. Some depend upon customs and usages difficult to break up, as, for example, inconsiderate use of the handkerchief with soiling of the hands, indiscriminate kissing, and hand-shaking. The Chinese custom of bowing and then shaking one's own hand is far more desirable from a sanitary standpoint. There are a number of these contacts, however, which can not be defended on any grounds. They simply represent unhygienic manners. One of these habits is particularly reprehensible, and it is the habit of passing some article to another person after it has been wet with saliva.

In view of the prevalence of influenza, which is one of the important contact diseases, it is a good time to bring to public attention this habit, which is very common, easily avoidable, and thoroughly condemnable from any standpoint. This is the habit of sticking one's fingers in his mouth before performing some action that involves another person. It is usually associated with the passing of some article to another person after it has been wet with saliva. Could there be any closer or more direct personal contact between individuals?

The prevalence of this practice is widespread. From limited observation, it would appear particularly common among those who have to handle paper of any kind, that is paper which is piled in stacks or bound in books. But it is by no means confined to those engaged in such activities. With many persons it seems simply to be a form of nervousness, or a nervous bad habit.

A while ago some sanitarium, impressed with the undue prevalence of customs and habits involving an exchange of saliva among persons in their daily contacts, cleverly suggested, in order to visualize what was really going on, that we should imagine salivary secretions colored blue. He then, in imagination, followed a few individuals through a day of active existence. At the end of the day he tried to evaluate them chromatically. He concluded that most of them in the color scale would be found well spotted to an indigo blue.

What should we do about it? Certainly in matters of this kind education is far more effective than law. If people generally disapprove unhygenic habits, then public opinion will correct them speedily.

Why condemn promiscous spitting, unguarded coughing and sneezing and common drinking cups, if we continue to permit people to contaminate objects by saliva-moistened fingers? It is all of a piece and all should be condemned together.

The essence of good manners is, after all, consideration for others. This is applicable equally to social or hygenic good form. In this golden age our culture should keep pace with other progress.

When someone writes that book that has been mentioned on "The Hygiene of Etiquette," then, let us hope, we shall all learn more about prophylactic manners and practice hygenic as well as social courtesy.

Trust To Be Trusted

"Some years ago," said J. J. Kelso, the Ontario Superintendent of Children's Aid Societies, "a fourteen year old boy gave the police a lot of trouble and after several warnings he was arrested for theft and committed to the reform school. A telephone message was sent to the police that if he were brought to the railway station an official would look after him the rest of the way. Two officers accompanied him and to their great surprise a young lady stepped up to claim the lad. "But" they remonstrated, 'he will get away from you within five minutes after we leave.' 'No,' she said, 'if he will give me his word of honor I will trust him fully.' The boy readily assented and the officers departed, but only to go to another end of the building where they could watch proceedings without being themselves observed. The lady talked pleasantly with the boy, sent him to buy her ticket, gave him her valise and parcel to carry, and by her evident sincerity in trusting him completely won his regard. When they were comfortably seated in the train the boy said, 'You know I would have run away from those cops in a minute, but I would go anywhere for you.'

"This young lady had learned that there is a certain amount of chivalry inherent even in the worst boys, and if that can be successfully appealed to then the task of reformation is made easy."

HEARTS OF OAK

Glasgow Herald (Cons.). The ancient charge that we are an ill-mannered people has been publicly repeated by Colonel Applin, M.P. . . . To what nations may we turn for instruction? There is that tribe inhabiting a quarter of the East Indies where politeness is so highly esteemed that rather than embarrass themselves and the stranger by refusing his request they will beat out his brains with a club. There are the French whose easy manners were commended by Lord Chesterfield, but their men embrace each other on meeting and parting. There are the Spanish whose grace and poise are the envy of the world, but they quarrel like sparrows. Evidently there are beams in other eyes than ours, and we may well hesitate before changing our rugged manners for the slightly exotic affability of the Continent.

Unemployment

London Times Trade Supplement: In some respects it is fortunate that the report of the Conference on Industrial Reorganization and Industrial Relations between the group of employers associated with Floyd Melchett and the General Council of the Trades Union Congress were published hard on the heels of the Balfour Report. After reading both documents it becomes convincingly manifest that there is no single remedy for unemployment and that failure to restore prosperity to British industry is not due to ineptitute or inertia, but to the complexity of the problem. The Conference recommends certain specific measures to "alleviate" the present position, but of the application of basis remedies it can only suggest future consideration. Evidently the optimism of bright spirits who in speech and print declare that they have a panacea is not shared by serious men in close touch with realities, whether they be drawn from industrialists, labour leaders, or the ranks of distinguished economists.

KEEP YOUR BABY HAPPY AND WELL

Every mother wishes her child or children to be well and happy; to be bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked boys and girls. No mother, though, can expect her children to escape all the ills of babyhood and childhood, but she can do much to help them fight the battle for health.

All prudent mothers constantly keep at hand the means of aiding their little ones when sickness comes suddenly—as it generally does in the case of children. In every home where there are infants and young children Baby's Own Tablets should be found. Read what Mrs. Mary Hill, Centre Dummer, Ont., says concerning these Tablets:—"I am the mother of six children and would not be without Baby's Own Tablets. They are a wonderful medicine for little ones."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus break up colds and simple fever, banish constipation and indigestion and allay the irritation accompanying the cutting of teeth. They are absolutely safe and are pleasant to take. The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Women in Politics

Manchester Guardian (Lib.): at the annual meeting of the National Union of Societies for Equal Citizenship a woman speaker urged that only able women should be allowed to get into Parliament. As it was, she said, some "silly women' got in just as "silly men" did. Did she remember Mrs. Poyser's remark, "I am not denying that women are foolish: God Almighty made them to match the men"? That is the truth of the matter. But foolishness is a relative term ,and if the Council has its way it is clear that they will force an improvement in the standard of intelligence in the House of Commons.

Choking An Industry

London Evening Standard (Ind. Cons.): (The oil combine have increased the price of gasoline twopence-halfpenny a gallon, which, following the fourpence a gallon tax imposed by last year's budget, is a serious blow to the motor industry). The thriving of the motor industry in the United States is sometimes held up to us as a warning example of the supremacy of American enterprise and mechanical ingenuity. In the United States the very gipsies drive cars, and the life of small towns and farmhouses has been galvanized by motoring into something livelier, happier and more prosperous. But in America gipsies need pay only tenpence a gallon for petrol, and their equivalent to our crushing and unfairly borne horsepower tax is but a sort of registration fee which averages £2 12s. per car. The sudden growth of the motor industry did not inspire the American authorities with the idea of instantly bleeding it almost to death.

When Pain Comes

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

Converted into an oil-burner, the Rapids King of the Canada Steamship Lines, once familiar as a coal-burning vessel and running on the Rapids Division of the Company's services in 1927, will be again plying in that section of the river. Refitted and remodelled, she will be operated commencing June 2. Although she will not carry passengers on the upbound trips, provision has been made for the carriage of automobiles. This Montreal-Prescott service will present a changed aspect this season as passengers will be taken only on the downbound trip from Prescott, shooting the rapids en route. The service will be commenced by the Rapids Prince on June 1 from Montreal. The steamers will leave Prescott at 9.30 a.m.
