Province Takes Control Highway Across Counties

Confirmation Made This Week to Include Ridge Road in New Highway Between No.'s 31 and 34 Through Chesterville.

ELIMINATE CROSSINGS?

CONFIRMATION has been made by the Minister of Highways that the Province has taken over the Counties' highway between Highway 31, from the four corners south of Winchester, to Highway 34, which connects Lancaster and Hawkesbury, giving a Provincial east-and-west highway connecting two north and south highways, which has been a crying need throughout these counties. The new highway will pass through Chesterville, Finch, Avonmore and Monklands and on to Alexandria, a distance of some 42 miles.

With this new road under consideration, it will provide an opportunity to eliminate two very dangerous level crossings in the vicinity of Chesterville, crossings which have been death traps for a considerable number of victims within the past twenty years. We refer to the Main street north crossing in this village and to the other a mile and a half west of Chesterville, which was the scene of the most recent fatality.

While the crossing in the village will always have a very considerable traffic over it to the north, through traffic can be relieved of the hazard and at the crossing farther west, by re-routing the highway at a point just beyond the west crossing and then following the railway right-of-way on its southerly limit for 200 or 300 yards, bearing southerly to join the Nation River road at J. C. Hummel's grove.

Mr. Hummel's dwelling and his barn are on opposite sides of the Nation River road and it is conceivable that he would be willing to exchange enough of his land to the north of his dwelling to permit the new highway to angle gently into the River road and enter Chesterville by way of Queen street and pass through on Main street.

These two level crossings can be eliminated at this time at a fraction of the cost which would eventually have to be paid for more efficient protection than that now afforded. Just how dangerous they are regarded by locomotive engineers of the Canadian Pacific was recently very well demonstrated, when a freight train was brought to a standstill to permit a funeral cortege to pass over without chance of mishap. That this was done shows that the enginemen have clear view for a long distance each way and still consider it so dangerous that they prefer to give motor traffic the right-of-way.

Shaver- -Dillabough

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the Elma United church parsonage on Tuesday afternoon when Beatrice, the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Dillabough, became the bride of Mr. Arnold R. Shaver, of South Mountain.

The bride was attired in a gown of rich royal blue velvet with hat to match, and was attended by Miss Lola Sullivan, of South Mountain.

The groom was attended by Mr. Bertrand Nesbitt, of Richmond.

The happy couple left immediately at the close of the ceremony for Ottawa and Montreal. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. R. S. Smith, B.D.

Barns and Crops Burned Cause of Fire Unknown

Fire, said to have started in the upper part of the barn late Saturday, destroyed the outbuildings on the farm of Hobart Holmes, south of Winchester.

All the season's hay, more than 300 bushel of grain, three calves, machinery and the potatoes and garden vegetables which had been stored in the barn temporarily, were lost. Mrs. Holmes and some of the children were absent and Mr. Holmes was in the field of a neighbour when the fire was noticed. Neighbours had difficulty in saving a valuable bull, half crazed by the smoke and flames. A pole supporting the main lines of the Bell Telephone Co. from Toronto to Montreal was burned off, the lines severed, and the service interrupted. The silo had just been filled and the threshing completed.

No cause for the fire could be determined.

Second Car Needed To Carry Produce For Western Relief

Citizens Give Generously of Bountiful Crops and Car Almost Completed At Chesterville.—Huge Loads From Communities.

HERE YESTERDAY.

Yesterday the farmers and others of Finch and vicinity and Chesterville and Morewood and their neighbourhoods showed that they fully felt the responsibility laid upon them when assistance was asked for their fellow Canadians in distress in Western Canada, when the railway car was practically completed at this station, with only enough room left for the accommodation of a small part of what is expected at Winchester and Inkerman stations.

The car was on Finch siding Tuesday and came to Chesterville yesterday half filled. All kinds of produce of the finest quality testified that the givers neither held back in quality nor quantity of the bountiful harvest this section has had this year. It is altogether likely a second car will have to be started at Winchester which will be completed at Inkerman.

It was a delight to see heavily laden trucks come in yesterday from the different districts, the one from Nation Valley actually having a load of 3135 pounds, while others equally as heavy, although unreported, came in from Maple Ridge and Morewood.

The Record will be pleased to print any letters received from the West in acknowledgement from those who may have benefited from the contents of the car.

Grand Master of Ontario Attends Oddfellows' Rally

Mr. Albert L. Bruner, of Ruthven, Grand Master of the I.O.O.F., visited Kemptville District at Chesterville on Thursday evening and was greeted by about 200 visitors from the surrounding district. Amity Lodge from Prescott, conferred the first degree on a class of 18 candidates.

The Grand Master of Ontario was introduced by D.D.G.M. Roy Fetterly and P.D.D.G.M. Wm. Robinson. Noble Grand Geo. Gillard welcomed Mr. Bruner, and after a few remarks the Grand Master asked the Prescott degree team to confer the first degree.

Members of the team were: N.G., W. G. Francis; V.G., A. V. Pratt; R.S.N.G., W. J. Ranson; L.S.N.G., W. S. Johnston; Warden, Walter Webb; Conductor, F. R. Henry; R.S.V.G., Willard Fretwell; L.S.V.G., W. W. Place; Chaplain, E. Attridge; P. Grand, A. R. Robinson; I.G., Geo. Hutchcroft; R.S.S., W. C. Whitney; L.S.S., W. I. Spero.

At the close of the degree, the Grand Master made a few fitting remarks on Oddfellowship. A banquet was served and then several visiting officers spoke.

Distinguished guests present were: Bro. Albert Brunner, Grand Master, of Ruthven; Bro. Chas. Ranson, Grand Herald, Prescott; Bro. Jas. Gaw, Grand Warden, Grand Encampment, Kemptville; Bro. John Summers, D.D.G.M., Ottawa; Bro. W. Mowat, D.D.G.M., Cornwall; Bro. A. Mills, D.D.G.M., Harmony District, and also about 35 Past District Deputy Grand Masters

This rally was one of the most outstanding ever held in this district, and was sponsored by Bro. Roy Fetterly, of Morewood, and Bro. Geo. Gillard, of Chesterville.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS THANKSGIVING DANCE

A large crowd attended the Thanksgiving dance sponsored by the Ladies' Lawn Bowling Club on Monday evening in the Community Hall. Music was by Johnstone Brothers' orchestra.

CENTENARIAN CRITICALLY ILL.

Mrs. Rachel Timmins, of Winchester, who is in her 102nd year, is very ill at present and is not expected to recover.

"I wonder why they call these things dressing gowns? You can't dress in one of them."

"Well, you don't take a bath in a bathrobe, do you?"

PLAN NEXT YEAR'S GARDENS FOR HEAVY FLORAL BLOOM

IT has been suggested that all citizens when preparing their gardens before heavy frost, make plans to grow flowers in every available nook and corner next year in honour of the expected return of our former boys and girls from the corners of the earth. Other kinds of decoration will be used about town but there is nothing quite so pleasing as an abundance of flowers.

Morrisburg Minister Killed As Car Leaves Highway

Rev. Stanley Gartung, of Morrisburg, was killed and four women injured on Tuesday when their automobile plunged from No. 2 Highway three miles east of Kingston and turned over three times. Slippery pavement was believed responsible for the driver losing control of the car.

The injured: Mrs. Gartung, Mrs. Fred. Casselman, Mrs. Ralph M. Swerdfager, and Mrs. Austin Salmon, all of Morrisburg.

Officials at Kingston General hospital, where the injured were taken, said the injuries were serious. They were rushed to the operating room after being admitted to the institution.

Coroner Dr. C. W. Bennett was notified, but so far has not decided on arrangements for an inquest into the clergyman's death. It is believed the minister, driving from Morrisburg to Hamilton to attend a Lutheran church convention, lost control of his auto on a turn near the Barriefield military camp site.

The women are expected to recover, doctors at the hospital said. They suffered greatly from shock and lacerations, and possibly spine injuries.

ACCREDITED AND SUPERVISED HERDS.

Three Plans Operated by The Department Are For Eradication of Tuberculosis.

THREE plans are in operation by the Health of Animals Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis, namely, the accredited herd plan, the supervised herd plan, and the restricted area plan. The object of the first plan is the eradication of the disease in pure-bred breeding herds. These herds are tuberculin tested free of charge by salaried veterinary inspectors. To be eligible for acceptance under this plan, a herd must contain at east five per cent of pure bred cattle of one breed, registered in the applicant's name. The number of registered pure breds, however, must comprise at least one-third of the total number of cattle in the herd.

As soon as a herd has passed two annual or three semi-annual tests without an animal showing signs of the disease. and contains at least ten registered pure breds it is designated a "Tuberculosis-free Accredited Herd." Compensation is paid for reactors—that is, those animals which show signs of the disease as a result of the test—and is based on two-thirds of No compensation is paid for animals by veterinary inspectors of the Health of Animals Branch. The maximum amount of compensation permitted under the Animal Contagious Diseases Act is $100 for pure breds and $40 for grades. No compensation is paid, however, for cattle affected with lumpy jaw, nor for grade bulls which react to the test. Such animals, nevertheless, must be slaughtered under federal inspection.

The supervised herd plan is a single herd policy applicable to grade herds irrespective of the number of pure-bred or grade animals they contain. No compensation is paid for animals that react to the test, but the owner receives whatever proceeds there may be from the salvage. Owners placing their herds under this plan must agree to slaughter reactors, to promptly cleanse and disinfect their premises, and to keep their catte from coming in contact with urtested animals. If a herd is not maintained on the premises, breeding operations must be restricted to a tested animal.

The restricted area plan has for its object the eradication of tuberculosis in definite areas. At least two-thirds of the cattle owners in any definite area must sign a petition for the establishment of such an area under this plan. The petition must be forwarded by the Provincial Minister of Agriculture to the Minister of the Dominion Department of Agriculture requesting that the necessary action be taken.

Dairy income is regular income

The dairy farmer sells his product every day.

Spring, summer, fall and winter—good weather or bad weather—the milk crop is the surest and most regular farm earner.

Every day of every year, Borden distribution and salesmanship are at work to speed the flow of milk from the farm and of milk money back to the dairy farmer.

It is this highly specialized job of creating new milk products and finding new milk markets that helps make each dairyman's income a better year-around income.

HYDRO...
Driving Force of Industry

A busy plant—the hum of machinery—the steady movement of parts toward an assembled whole—finally—the manufactured product which brings profit to the manufacturer, salaries to staffs, payrolls for the workers.

Throughout Ontario this steady hum of industry is increasing—payrolls are being added to—manufacturing costs are steadily rising higher—yet the cost of the driving force of Ontario industry—Hydro power—moves steadily downward.

Have you ever stopped to consider what would happen if Hydro power was suddenly cut off throughout the Province—the loss in money and inconvenience you would suffer? How vital Hydro is to industry?

You should, because Hydro means much to you in personal income. Low-cost power attracts industries, with consequent employment of thousands of workers increasing the individual buying power within the Province, consequently influencing your income regardless of your occupation.

The success of Hydro in the past two years in lowering power costs has been outstanding. Its efforts to increase the prosperity of our Province by lowering power costs still further, and extending the benefits of low-cost electricity to those in cities, and those on farms, to commerce, to industry, to all who may benefit by its use, is something which you, as a partner in this enterprise, may take justifiable pride.

Dundas Teachers Meet In 63rd Annual Convention

The 63rd annual convention of the Dundas Teachers' Institute was held on Thursday and Friday in the Community Hall. The Thursday forenoon session opened with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. R. C. Tait. These were followed by the registration of teachers and the singing of "O Canada." Miss Louva Allison, president of the Institute, gave an excellent address on "Training the Child For Life." The minutes of the last meeting, as well as communications, were read by the secretary, Mr. H. Hamilton.

Following this, the teachers were addressed by Mr. V. K. Greer, B.A., Chief Inspector of Public and Separate Schools of Ontario. Mr. Greer paid tribute to the splendid work of Inspector W. J. Stewart, also to the high standard which has always been maintained by Dundas teachers. In discussing the new programme of studies, he first pointed out the defects of the course used formerly. Mr. Greer felt that the course had been too rigid and inflexible, that classification and promotion of pupils were but annual decisions to be made, and that the pupils listened to teachers' lectures to too great an extent. He then discussed the special features of the new course. The main feature is that pre-eminence is given to Health and English. English now includes reading, spelling, writing, literature, composition, grammar and language. As a result, teachers in rural communities are not confronted with the problem of formulating a complex timetable to which they must adhere. The elasticity of the course permits all teachers to have freedom in selecting lesson content and in the method of instruction. Desires of the children at each particular age must be considered, and content and methods be adoped to suit such needs. Inspector Greer emphasized the fact that pupils must participate in what is going on if they are expected to make proper judgments and decisions for themselves later.

The afternoon session opened with community singing. Following the reading of the financial statement, Mr. Arnold McMartin gave an interesting address and demonstration on the construction and use of a hectograph. Mr. R. C. Dillabough gave a detailed account of the O.E.A. convention held at Toronto.

The subject of profitable seat-work was capably handled by the Misses Marjorie Young, Eileen Smyth and Geraldine Cook. Matters concerning federation and automatic membership were discussed by Mr. Gordon Faulds.

Banquet in Evening.

In the evening, the teachers attended a banquet given in Trinity United church dining hall. During the evening, a musical programme was provided by local talent. Mr. Greer gave an address on "The Teacher." Inspectors Blackwell and Routley were introduced by Mr. Stewart.

Following the banquet, a dance was held in the Community Hall, music being furnished by Johnston's orchestra.

Visiting Teachers on Friday.

On Friday, the teachers from Prescott and Russell were welcomed. Rev. Father P. J. Keaney conducted the devotional exercises. Useful correlations between natural science and geography were discussed by Messrs. R. Dillabough, J. Cross and H. Potter. Mr. D. MacKerracher spoke on Mental Arithmetic, and a demonstration lesson on Marco Polo as it should be taught according to the new course was given by Inspector Routley.

In the afternoon, Miss Rebecca Stenhouse, B.A., of Winchester, spoke on "Agricultural Conditions in Central and Western Canada." She stressed the importance of farming and the reasons for cultivating in children a liking for agriculture. Miss Viola Collins, president of the Russell County Teachers' Institute, addressed the teachers on Art.

The report of the nominating committee named as Hon. President, Mr. W. J. Stewart, B.A., B.Paed.; President, R. C. Dillabough; Vice-Pres., Lillian Gregory; Sec'y., H. Hamilton; executive committee—John McCarthy, Helen Stevenson and Eileen Smyth.

Following remarks and instructions by Inspectors Stewart and Routley, the teachers were given the opportunity of visiting the plant of Nestlé's Milk Products (Can.) Ltd. They were conducted through the factory, which is one of the largest milk processing plants in the world, in four groups of 40, and the various processes explained.

Payne Valley

Mr. Herbert Reddick, Morrisburg, was a business caller through our Valley on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Cameron visited Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Benning and family one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris Rupert spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Hunter at Morewood.

Prize Money is Increased For Ottawa Winter Fair

THE directors of Ottawa's Winter Fair were so certain of renewed interest and a big response from exhibitors this year that they increased the already generous prize money by nearly a thousand dollars. Many new classes were added for the show which opens at the Coliseum in Ottawa on November 9th and continues until November 12th.

The attractive premium list for the Winter Fair is now ready and will be mailed on application to H. H. McElroy, Ottawa Winter Fair, Journal Building, Ottawa. Prospective exhibitors should secure their copy at once as entries for all pure bred classes close October 19th, and for the horse show, junior department, poultry, seeds and vegetables on October 26th.

This regional show is again only open to breeders and farmers in Eastern Ontario and Wester Quebec. As is usual at Ottawa, every effort will be made to have outstanding junior classes and a large seed show. The added money and classes for pure bred animals will interest many breeders.

Wrong From the Start.

The holiday resort was dull and the weather was bad. Mrs. Miggs was in anything but an amiable mood.

"John,' 'she said, "whatever made you choose this place for a holiday?"

"Why, darling," he said, "you suggested it."

"I know," she returned. "But why on earth did you agree?"

YOUR NAME IN MONDAY'S PAPERS!

Will your name appear in Monday's newspapers? If it does, will you be writhing with pain in the emergency ward of a hospital, will your mangled remains be resting in a funeral parlor—or will you be held by the Police on a charge of manslaughter?

If you are a motorist and value life and property, help to stop this slaughter of innocent people. The death toll from car accidents in Ontario must go down!

We are justly proud of the Police of this Province—but they cannot be everywhere. Most accidents occur when a policeman is not around. Traffic violators know better than to speed, cut in or crowd other cars with a policeman in sight.

Ontario Motorists will Co-operate

When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders.

May Have to Remove Vine Covering High School

(Held over from Last Issue.)

Although it is a beautiful sight, the vine covering the High School building is becoming a nuisance on account of the myriad of sparrows nesting in it and their flilth attracting bies, reported Princple W. P. Markle to the High School Board meeting Tuesday evening. It is proposed to trim the vine away from the windows and if this is not satisfactory it will be cut down completely.

Bills passed by the board included the teachers' salaries, coal from S. Barrie and Sons, and a list of supplies.

A letter was read from Dr. H. H. Casselman, M.O.H., explaining why he ordered the closing of the High school one week after the September opening when a case of poliomyelitis was reported in the district, and the communication was ordered filed.

The secretary read replies to an advertisement for a used incubator and Mr. Markle will examine two machines to determine their usefulness to the school.

Mr. Markle reported that conditions of the school were very satisfactory, that teachers and pupils were cooperating splendidly and he hoped for a good year.

He submitted a list of supplies required for the school and the purchasing committee, composed of H. E. Wales and H. S. McMurray, was instructed to check on the list.

Members present included Dr. A. B. Clayton, chairman; Ingram Cross, H. E. Wales, H. S. McMurray, Walter Carr, Jack Morris, and the secretary, W. N. Fulton.

Card of Thanks and Appreciation

I TAKE this opportunity to express to the electors of Grenville-Dundas my grateful appreciation for the wonderful support given me on October 6th, last. Especially do I appreciate the personal sacrifices made by many citizens of the riding on my behalf.

I wish to assure all the electors of the riding of my continued interests in their welfare and of my constant efforts on their behalf.

Yours sincerely,

Geo. H. Challies.

To the Electors of Grenville-Dundas:

Spencerville, Ontario,
October 7th, 1937.

Now that the Election has come and gone and the wish of the electors of Grenville and Dundas has been made known at the polls, I wish to take this opportunity of thanking all those who supported my candidature also those who gave so generously of their time and effort on my behalf, Conservatives and Liberals, alike.

Though I myself was unsuccessful in the riding in which I reside, yet it is very gratifying to know that my old friend and leader swept the Province on behalf of the Liberal Cause.

To Mr. Geo. H. Challies, the successful candidate in Grenville and Dundas, I extend my sincere congratulations.

Sincerely,

P. R. Barnard.

Morewood

PRESBYTERIAN W.M.S. MET.

The October meeting of the W.M.S. of Morewood Presbyterian church was held at the home of Mrs. Chesley Marcellus on Thursday last. The ladies were pleased to welcome Mrs. A. Nimmo, of Athelstan, Que., as a guest. The programme proved very interesting with Thanksgiving hymns, and gleanings from the sectional meeting held recently at Winchester Springs were given by Mrs. T. E. Coulthart and Miss Lill Feeley.

The fall activities of the society were planned, consisting of a lunch and sale of home-made cooking in aid of the Mission Band, and also the thankoffering of the W.M.S. when the Winchester W.M.S. will present their splendid missionary play entitled "It Just Can't Be Done."

C.G.I.T. HELP CELEEBRATE MEMBER'S BIRTHDAY

The Wanakita C.G.I.T. group of Morewood United church, attended the show in Morrisburg in a group and on returning to town had lunch at the home of Mrs. Abner Dillabough while Mrs. H. P. Benzanson entertained the girls with music.

The main feature of the lunch was a birthday cake in honour of Miss Reta Faulkner on her fourteenth birthday. The cake was made by Mrs. H. Faulkner, leader of the C.G.I.T.

(See also Page Two.)

Elma

Mr. and Mrs. C. Arnold, of Bethel, Vt., have been guests of Rev. and Mrs. R. S. Smith. Mr. Arnold is a member of the banking profession and is a prominent philatelist in his home state. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Gilman and their son Fred, of Bedford, P.Q.

Mr. Herbert Smith, B.A., of Montreal, spent the Thanksgiving holiday with his parents at the parsonage, Elma, Rev .and Mrs. R. S. Smith.

The October meeting of the W.A. was held on Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. George McBride, Dunbar, with a goodly number present. Plans were made for the fal work, and a very enjoyable social hour was enjoyed during which the hostess served a delightful supper.

Mr. Kneeland, B.S.A., of Ste. Anne de Bellevue, has been the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Bernice Barkley.

Rev. J. Hurst, of Manotick, was calling on friends on Monday.

"OUT OF DEBT, OUT OF DANGER"

AMONG the meanest citizens in any community are those who can but will not pay their bills. This is the coolest kind of indifference to obligations, and perhaps accounts, in part for the development, especially in cities, of the "cash and carry" plan of doing business. But it cannot be made effective by merchants in many towns and villages where the credit system is entrenched, nor can it be insisted upon by professional men. Doctors are numerous among the victims of this neglect to pay bills; so are grocers, butchers and other tradesmen. "Let him wait. We need the money for something else"—something that can't be "charged"—is the attitude toward bills presented. So accounts accumulate on the creditors' books, and in turn he cannot meet obligations to those who sell him supplies.

This, of course, is an old story, but the condition created is serious, and, no doubt, will persist. Meantime such debtors continue with a bold front. The grocer and the butcher note the "swank," but cannot collect their bills. There is a remendy—drastic and perhaps not generally usable, but it works. A writer in The Times, London, tells the story of how a Devonshire vicar pulled a local tradesman out of the red. From the pulpit he announced casually:

"A certain grocer in this neighbourhood is in serious financial difficulties through no fault of his own, but owing to the large number of overdue accounts on his books. On going through the books with him I am astonished to find that most of his debtors are members of my own congregation and a number of them are listening to me now. Next Sunday I propose to read from this pulpit a list of those accounts which are still outstanding."

The following week saw the grocer rehabilitated financially; and not only that: other tradesmen found delinquent creditors paying up, and the village generally noted more money in circulation. No doubt it would be regarded as a mean business to threaten with publicity all slow payers, but it wouldn't be any meaner than their own habit of ignoring small obligations which they are well able to meet. "Bad debts" have been the ruination of many a too-trusting merchant.

HOW A HIT-AND-RUN DRIVER FEELS.

WELL, you got away with it. So far anyway. Of course you're still a bit nervous. You are startled by doorbells; your palms sweat when you pick up the morning paper; your mouth gets dry when a stranger seems to stare at you. For there is just a possibility that some chance passerby saw you. But your pulse is beginning to behave again. Each passing day brings added safety.

If it will make you feel any better, you may never be caught. But, my craven fellow, you'll never escape yourself! You'll never escape the shame of having killed a child and run away. You'll never escape the aching, burning memory that, faced with the test, you preferred cowardice to courage.

You will live the rest of your days bluffing yourself into believing that you didn't have time to think (although life's crises are not scheduled for men's convenience); that anybody else would have done the same thing (although you don't dare tell anybody else); and that it wasn't murder, but just an accident (as though people hid themselves after an accident). The days will be trying, but not so bad compared with the nights, when you lie awake with your conscience and when, having fallen asleep at last, dreams steal into your tired brain to re-enact that scene of secret shame. Yes, the nights will be hard.

A thousand times you will wish to release that pent-up shame to scream "I killed a child and ran away!" It would make you feel better, but you won't do it.

Listen Mr. Hit-and-run Driver: You didn't get away with a thing! And you know it!

AS EASY AS THIS . . . WHEN YOU GET YOUR NEW 'PLANE

MARY Elizabeth Prim, reporter for The Boston Transcript, never took a flying lesson in her life but when told by the pilot of a Sherman-Hammond 'plane, "Now you do it," she did. As she describes it:

"The non-technical reporter gripped the wheel like grim death, but the 'plane continued to slide gently along on even keel. She found that only the slightest pressure on the wheel was needed. There was the reporter, feeling like the movie airline hostess who takes over the controls after the pilot and co-pilot have been knocked out or off by cinematic gangsters. She discovered that the 'plane would go higher if the wheel was pulled toward her and lower if pushed forward. Then she learned that if only sky showed above the instrument panel the ship was climbing, and if scenery showed, the 'plane was descending.

"The reporter got into the spirit of the thing after a while and tried left turns and right turns, upward soarings and slight drops, now and then glancing suspiciously at the pilot to see if he wasn't secretly doing the whole thing (with mirrors, probably). He continued to sit back, however, glancing down at the jumble of houses and twisted streets with an 'I'm-a-stranger here myself' interest.

"'Just point it down if you feel like landing,' said the pilot, and pulled a lever like an emergency brake in a car. The reporter did as required and the 'plane wafted sweetly to earth and slid along on its three-wheel accident-proof landing gear. But she was dashed on discovering later that the 'plane had recently been piloted over Washington by a 10-year-old boy."

SPEED IN THE OLD DAYS.

Dundalk Herald.

HOW times have changed. The Tara Leader reports that in looking over the files of 1912 they came across the following item headed "The Automobile Danger." "Ladies or gentlemen who navigate motor cars at a higher speed than 15 miles per hour over the country roads in this Province will owe their escape, if any, from death or injury, to good luck rather than good management."

A NEW APPLE.

Simcoe Reformer.

LOVERS of the ever useful and delicious fruit, the apple, have in this district had the opportunity of making the acquaintance this year of a new variety, the Melba. It is a dessert apple, a cross between a McIntosh Red and the Duchess of Oldenburg, and it has tender flesh and a delicious flavour. It was first propagated at Vineland, at the Government Horticultural Station there. Glenorfolk Orchards, east of town, marketed the new variety comparatively early in the season, its early ripening making it a favourite with those who were glad to get hold of early appes for table use.

Gallingertown

(Held Over From Last Issue.)

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cooksey, Hamilton, arrived Thursday evening to spend some time with Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Murphy and Wallace.

A number from the community attended the nomination at Finch, Wednesday.

Mr. John Coyle was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sam. Kyle, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Locke and Sidney, of Cornwall, and Mr. Nathan Thomas were Sunday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Murphy and Wallace.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Gallinger and Lois and Gerald were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Grandaw and June.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Murphy and Wallace and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cooksey were in Cornwall on Friday.

Miss Leitha Warner was an overnight guest of her sister, Mrs. Lloyd Gallinger, on Wednesday.

Old Mrs. Smith (reading the paper) "Cotton is declining—well, I thought as much: the last thread I used was remarkably feeble."

Overlooked.

"I understand that your vacation resort overlooked a lake."

"Yes, and good beds, good food, and lots of other things!"

A BRUNETTE CANADA GOOSE

Interesting Facts About Our Dominion of Canada.

A RACE of dark-complexioned wild geese reside in the Coastal region of British Columbia and south-eastern Alaska. They are similar in appearance and size to their better known relative the Canada Goose, or "honker," but differ in being very much darker. They are known as the White-cheeked Goose.

Apart from the difference in colourtion between these two races of geese there are differences in habit also, the most important being that of migration. The Canada Goose makes long annual journeys to and from its nesting ground; some raise their young on James Bay and spend the winter on the Guf of Mexico. The White-cheeked Goose, on the other hand, may spend the entire year, or even all its life time in the same region.

Wild geese do not breed until they are at least two years old so that in every goose community there is usually a bachelor population of both sexes. These non-breeding birds remain in sociable flocks during the time the birds of an older generation are incubating eggs or caring for young.

During the moulting period, which lasts for a month or so in the summer, geese are unable to fly and for their protection must depend on hiding instead of flight. At this time they are seldom seen but at almost any other season White-cheeked Geese are conspicious on the tide flats along the many deep fjords which cut deeply into the shore line of British Columbia.

A sight of these magnificent geese in powerful flight and the rich chorus of their deep voices can never be forgotten, is the remark of all who have seen the White-cheeked goose.

Employer (to valet about to go out) "John, I notice you are wearing my overcoat."

John: "That is so, sir. It is raining rather heavily, and I knew you would not wish your new suit to get wet."

Exonerated.

Mistress: "That brooch I have missed for some time has been found in your trunk."

Maid: "I am so gad, ma'am. If you had not found it, you might have suspected somebody of stealing it."

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

LATEST RUMOUR OF B.-P.'S RETIREMENT OFFICIALLY DENIED BY I. H.

Official denial of a rumour circulated in London following the close of the International Scout Jamboree in Holland, that Lord Baden-Powell was contemplating retirement as World Chief Scout, was made by Mr. J. F. M. Stewart, of Toronto, upon his return from the Jamboree, where he acted as official head of the Canadian Scout contingent. Mr. Stewart is Chairman of the Executive Board of the Canadian General Council of the Boy Scouts Association.

"It was officially announced by Imperial Scout Headquarters in London," Mr. Stewart stated, "that there was absolutely no foundation to the rumour.

"My wife and I had the pleasure of spending a week end at Pax Hill with Lord and Lady Baden-Powell, and the World Chief Scout was in excellent health, full of energy and discusing a long list of Scout engagements. Some of these were two years ahead. This winter he will visit South Africa and Rhodesia. In 1939 he expects to attend a Scout Jamboree in the West Indies, and another in New South Wales, on the other side of the world. He also plans to attend the next World Rover Moot, to be held in Scotland in 1939.

"No, the old Chief is still the irrepressible, ever-youthful B.-P., and he's not for a moment thinking of going on the shelf."

* * * *

CANADIAN SCOUTS MADE GOOD IMPRESSION.

The international gathering of Scouts in Holland Mr. Stewart reported as a splendid, happy gathering that offered an unforgettable example of international youth friendiness, in contrast to the strain and turmoil that characterizes so much of the adult world today. Some 28.000 boys were present from 32 different countries, and only the happiest fraternizing characterized their two weeks of camping.

The Canadian Scouts made an excellent impression, and very creditably represented the Dominion in the various reviews. In the great opening march past before Her Majesty Queen Wilhelmina of Holland and Lord Baden-Powell, Canada had the honour of leading the British Empire section of 8,000 boys, the largest division of the review. The next largest visiting contingent was the French, whose 2,000 Scouts made a splendid appearance.

And then there was the manufacturer who had a band play the National Anthem all day in his plant to prevent a sit-down strike.

No Encouragement.

Sambo: "Does 'at smile mean yo' fo'give me, sweetness?"

Liza: "Stay away, big boy. I'se jes' smilin' to rest mah face."

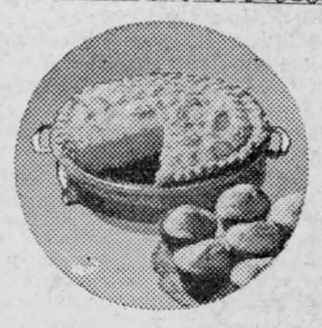

Quite Right.

Drill Sergeant: "Mark time, there!"

Recruit: "With my feet?"

Sergeant: "Have you ever seen anything mark time with its hands?"

Recruit: "Yes, sir—a clock."

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

MISS HELEN LACEY, B.H.Sc.

HOW DO YOU SERVE CHICKEN?

WHETHER fried, roasted or boiled, chicken is more or less a treat to most of us. But, like everything else, we are apt to have a special method of preparing and serving it—and we do this one way so well we forget that chickens can be cooked in a variety of ways, all equally tempting.

FRIED CHICKEN.

If you have never prepared chicken according to the following method, I do wish you would try it as chicken fried in deep fat cannot be equalled.

Cut small chickens into four or six pieces. Put in a kettle and cover with boiling water. Season, and stew one-half hour until chicken is partly tender. Drain and when ready to fry dip in dry bread crumbs, beaten egg and again in bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat which will brown a cube of bread in 60 seconds, until a golden brown. Remove from fat, drain and serve hot, garnished with parsley.

FRICASEE OF CHICKEN.

1 chicken
2 tablespoons fat
2 cups chicken stock
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 egg yolk
Salt and pepper

Singe, clean, and cut chicken in pieces. Brown in a pan with the fat. Cover with boiling water and salt and pepper. Simmer until tender (about an hour), strain and thicken one pint of the liquor with the flour mixed to a smooth paste with a little cold water. Add the milk beaten with the yolk of the egg. Heat again until slightly thickened, pour over the chicken and serve with dumplings.

DUMPLINGS.

1 cup flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon butter
1-3 cup milk

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in the fat. Add milk to make a soft dough. Break off small pieces; roll lightly in flour; or roll out and cut as small tea biscuits. Cook in kettle with chicken and gravy.

CHICKEN A LA KING.

2 cups chopped chicken
2 green peppers (medium size)
1 can pimentoes
1 small can mushrooms
Salt and pepper
Paprika
2 eggs
Cream to cover

Cut green peppers in slices. Cook until tender in a pan with butter. Add mushrooms and chopped pimento. Add cooked chicken; season with salt, pepper and paprika. Add enough cream to cover and bring to a boil. Add well beaten eggs. Cook three minutes. Serve on buttered toast. Garnish with a piece of parsley.

This is a good way in which to use left-over chicken as the main dish for luncheon or supper.

CHICKEN CROQUETTES.

2 cups cooked minced chicken
⅛ teaspoon grated onion or onion salt
1 teaspoon lemon juice
½ tablespoon chopped parsley
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon celery salt
Few grains cayenne
1 cup milk

Mix chicken and seasonings. Make a thick white sauce; add chicken. Spread on a plate to cool; shape in cylinders or pyramids. Roll in crumbs, egg and crumbs. Fry in deep fat until golden brown. Drain, garnish with parsley and serve.

CHICKEN CASSEROLE.

1 chicken
Butter
2 cups rich brown stock
12 small mushrooms (may be omitted if so desired)
12 potato balls
1 carrot, sliced
6 small onions
Salt, pepper, paprika

Wash chicken and cut in pieces. Sauté the pieces in a little butter until well browned on all sides. Place in a greased casserole, add brown stock, cover and cook in a slow oven for an hour. After chicken has been cooking for an hour, sauté the carrot slices, the potato balls, the onions and the mushrooms in a little fat, stirring lightly around until they are well browned. Add these vegetables to the chicken in the casserole, season with salt, pepper and paprika. Cover and cook three-quarters of an hour. Remove cover and allow chicken to brown before serving.

To determine the age of poultry, examine the feet and cartilage at the end of the breast bone. If both are soft, the bird is young: if hard, the bird is more than a year old.

* * * *

When roasting chicken, allow 15 to 20 minutes for each pound.

* * * *

The white meat of chicken is very easy to digest and for this reason is often given to invalids when all other forms of meat are prohibited.

* * * *

Chickens are descendants of the red jungle fowl of India.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE

KNEE-DEEP in snowy billows of fine cotton cloth, long ravellings of which clung to her trim dark-blue morning dress, Fair Ellicott looked with troubled eyes across the quiet, grassy square.

From the other side of the square a row of quaint dormer windows above laden apple boughs peered placidly back at her These dormer windows were old friends of hers.

"It's a shame!" she declared to herself and the billows, as she reached for two selvages and began to measure one against the other. "It's a thorough shame!"

She snipped emphatically with her scissors; then, with repeated tugs that relieved her disturbed feelings, she rent apart the breadths of new-smelling cotton cloth. "Ten!" she counted. "And if it's true' I think—"

"In my day," observed some one behind her, "we had to overcast seams down the middle. It wasn't just tear and hem."

"O Aunt Molly!" Fair turned impulsively to the newcomer. "My Great - Aunt Molly Grandon! Did you hear that John Halpine intends to—"

"Sheets first!" Great-Aunt Molly remarked crisply. "Finish tearing—and then we'll try John Halpine for all his future sins."

The brisk little lady—in spite of the silvery curls that framed her flesh-coloured face, no one thought of her as old—sat errect on the straightest of the available chairs, and looked on while Fair swiftly doubled the remaining piece of material, clipped the fold, and, with a sweep of her round young arms, tore apart the last two sheets.

"A whole dozen?" asked Miss Grandon.

Fair nodded happily. "I told father thirty-nine yards, but he brought me forty. He said he might as well buy an even number of yards while he was at it. So I've allowed for splendid wide hems. Forty whole yards of sheeting! The glory of it nearly took my breath away when I began to measure them!"

"You'll have a proper setting out. Did you ever make up a set of sheets before?"

"Never all by myself," said Fair, "though I helped Cousin Martha hem hers two years ago."

"And how did you measure them?" inquired Miss Grandon.

"Why, with a yardstick, of course! Wasn't that right? First I thought of doubling and cutting the whole big piece in two, then in two again, and then each of those pieces in three; but it was so bulky to handle that way that at last I figured out exactly how many inches to allow for each one,—a hundred and twenty,—and measured the first one; then—"

"You cut each of the other eleven by that?"

"It came to the same thing. I folded the first so that I could use it to measure the second one, then tore off the first so there would be less to handle, then used the second to measure the third by, and so on."

"All the way down the dozen?" a queer twinkle lighted Miss Molly's blue eyes.

"Until I reached eleven and twelve, of course," said Fair. "The last piece had just two sheets in it so I didn't have to measure by number ten. I simply halved the piece."

Great-Aunt Molly raised her hands—then let them fall helpessly at her sides. "Fair Ellicot! Bring me that yardstick! Now, you measure the last two."

There was a rustle of sheeting; then the young girl looked up perplexed. "I—I can't make them come out right. They ought to be a hundred and twenty inches long, but they're almost a hundred and thirty! The piece must have run over forty yards, don't you think?"

Great-Aunt Molly shook her head. "Now, measure number ten."

Fair measured, and then remeasured. Her brown eyes opened wide.

"Scant hundred and seventeen! Aunt Molly, it's bewitched! I can't make it any other length! What ails it Why are you laughing?"

"It's a lesson you'd have had to learn some time, and no great harm is done, thanks to your father's extra ward. Why, I've known some people who measured that way, instead of making sure that each piece matched the first in length, and got only eleven sheets and a piece over. Some folks tear scant, and some allow over without knowing it. But I'd let them stay as they are; some day you may need a pair extra long and there they'll be.

"Now," she went on, "you can tell me what's wrong with John Halpine. I didn't know he had come back."

"I—I don't think he has," began Fair, bringing her mind with some effort away from the blunder she had made. "But the whole township ought to get up a protest! Think of any man's having the heart to tear down the old, old homestead where his family had lived for ever so many years before the Revolution, and to put up a house with modern improvements instead of those sturdy walls! And all because the town council wouldn't pay an exorbitant price for it, when there was a question of turning it into a historical museum! Hasn't he any pride in it? Why, artists and writers have come from all over the country to see it! And think of the old stories of how the Halpine women barred the windows and doors, and kept the Indians from burning it, for days and days, while all the men were away hunting!"

"Who told you?" asked Miss Grandon.

"Oh, Mrs. 'Lias Moody. Imagine a porte-cochère in place of that lovely old pointed trellis with the trumpet vine! It would be sacrilege!"

"You feel proper certain, Fair? You know last week you were so worked up because the Farrows were going to let their little granddaughter be adopted by strangers out West, so's not to have the expense of keeping her—and 'twas all talk. And then the fuss about the new rules in the Sunday School that made you feel so discouraged. It was all smoothed over easier than not. Mrs. 'Lias Moody, eh? And she said who told her?"

"She said the whole thing came to her direct from headquarters."

"H'm! Now, I'd give something worth while to know what she'd call headquarters this time. Niece Fair!"

"Yes'm!" with a start.

"How strong in you is the 'Ellicott grit, as your father calls it? You used to have plenty—walking little narrow fences, and keeping from crying when you fell down."

"Why,—I hope—there ought to be a good stock of it inside me somewhere!" asserted Fair stoutly. "It's a thing you have to bring out and prove though, before you can be altogether sure."

"Precisely!" said Miss Molly. "Well, if you've enough 'Ellicot grit' to follow this story back to what Mrs. 'Lias Moody calls headquarters, and bring me word exactly how it started, step for step, you shall have those double-damask napkins with the clover pattern for your linen chest. Will you do it?"

Fair gasped. She was not afraid of Mrs. 'Lias Moody — but the rumour might have reached her through half Wilchester. She looked up quickly, catching a queer expression—was it quizzical or doubtful?—in Great-Aunt Molly's eyes that roused "Ellicot grit" in every inch of her. With a sudden swoop she gathered all the sheets remaining on the floor and tossed them recklessly on the couch, whisked the clinging threads from her skirt, hastily slipped on her hat and marched downstairs.

Mrs. 'Lias Moody, mending a huge faded blue-yarn sock with royal-purple cotton, was rocking comfortably on her side veranda. Fair sat down on the step and glanced up at her.

"Mrs. Moody," she began, trying to assume a casual ease of manner, "did they—whoever it was—tell you what firm in the city was getting out the plans for John Halpine's new house?"

"They?" repeated Mrs. Moody. "It was Barby Farrow heard all about it and happened to mention it to me, comin' home from Sewin' Circle. You might find out from her."

"You say Barby told you it was really certain that John Halpine intended to pull down the old homestead because he resented the town council's not buying it?"

Mrs. 'Lias Moody stirred heavily—perhaps uneasily.

"Well — leastways she 'lowed that was the only reason there could be for his doin' it. She said there'd been talk of persuadin' him to sell it, so's it could beused for a liberry and a museum, sort of, but he set the price higher'n they'd a notion to pay. I don't hold with gettin' even that way, nohow; but it come straight to Barby from them as knew."

"Perhaps, then, she will know about the architect," said Fair, with a queer little quaver in her voice as she stood up to go. Barby was—well, Barby was abrupt.

"Let me know who she says 'twas!" Mrs. Moody called after her.

Barby Farrow, tall and angular, was frying doughnuts in her small summer kitchen when Fair knocked. Barby turned with a disconcerting snort, and with a jerk of her head motioned the visitor to a chair.

"Hot day!" she said grimly.

"There's quite a breeze in the shade. I found it quite pleasant on Mrs. Moody's porch."

"Humph!" Barby Farrow sniffed. "What'd she have to say?"

"She had been telling me what is being said in Wilchester about the old Halpine house. Have you any idea what firm of architects Mr. Halpine is employing to make the plans for him? For the new house, I mean? Great-Aunt Molly was interested in hearing about it, so I stopped in to ask Mrs. Moddy."

"What'd she know? All I told her was what her that was Car'line Babbitt told me— that he'd have to get some of them high-toned city fellows to draw out the plans for him. There'd likely be no one here in Wilchester good enough to do it for him, now he's been to the legislater and Cuba and got notions! I told Sarah Moody I s'posed he'd be havin' porty-cosheers and all them fancy sort of fixin's on it. All else I know is that he's plannin' 'bout tearin' down the old place soon as he gets here from his trip. And there's to be modern improvements all over it—'lectric push buttons and steam-heatin' radiators, and the like, I s'pose. Her that was Car'line Babbitt had it come to her right from them that ought to know, if any do, so there ain't no mistake 'bout that part of it. Have a fried cake. Them on the platter ain't too hot to eat."

The doughnut of ceremony eaten, Fair went on in quest of "her that was Car'line Babbitt." Wilchester offered no other title to Israel Briggs' wife, who still kept the sign that bore her maiden name swinging above the door of the one real "Dressmaking Establishment" in the village. Caroline was too good a manager to let a perfectly good blue-and-gold sign be wasted.

"'Specially when folks has come to know it all through the country," she argued. "If I took it down and put up 'Mrs. Is'rel Briggs' instead, they'd go away thinkin' 'twas some stranger had bought out the 'stablishment. Is'rel ain't never been what you'd call a public character."

Fair looked up at the sign and wondered whether it would prove the mark of "headquarters." But "her that was Car'line Babbitt" had gone to "the store," and the "Dressmaking Establishment" was, for the time, in charge of the mild-faced little man who sat with his chair tilted against the worktable, contentedly whittling.

"Perhaps you'll know, then, Mr. Briggs," pleaded Fair. "Did Car'line tell you anything about the firm of city architects who are to make the plans for John Halpine's new house? Barby Farrow heard of it from Car'line."

"Why," piped Israel Briggs, "all Car'line knowed was what she happened to hear some one 'at was settin' on Hawtree's porch talkin' over with Kathern. They was sayin' that John Halpine would be sure to tear down the old place and put up a spandy new residence. And as Car'line's got the notion as how some day John and Kathern's likely to make a match of it, why, Kathleen ought to know what she's talkin' 'bout."

Katherine Hawtree! Was she the "headquarters?" Fair shrank from going to her tall, handsome friends, with the dwindling story that grew more elusive; but she braced herself and entered the Hawtrees' gate.

Katherine, in the side garden path, noticed the little stiffening of her shoulders.

"You'd better tell me what it is, Fair," she said, slippig her arm through the young girl's. "I've seen you setting your courage for an encounter before this, and I know the symptoms. Out with it!"

"Katherine! It's—it's such a queer thing to do,—to ask,—but I've promised. A queer story came to me, and made me—hot. I told Aunt Molly, and she offered me something I want very much if I'd show enough 'Ellicot grit' to find the headquarters from which it started. It hasn't been easy."

"And you've traced it back to me?"

"I think so," said Fair honestly.

Katherine's face grew puzzled. "I wonder what it can be? But your Great-Aunt Molly is a wonderful person, and my special chum. She would not have started you on such a chase if there hadn't been some good reason."

"You see," said Fair, "each person had heard it straight from one who knew. Mrs. 'Lias Moody, who had told me of it, passed me on to Barby Farrow—and Barby wafted me into the 'stablishment of 'her that was Car'line Babbitt.' Car'line happened to be out, but Is'rel told me that she had overheard a talk between you and some person unknown on your porch in which it was said that John Halpine would be sure to pull down the old house and build a modern residence in its place."

Katherine's face was a study in bewilderment and interest; then suddenly it lighted up.

"I'm not headquarters, Fair, but I can send you direct to them. The person with whom I was talking is your Great-Aunt Molly Grandon. And I believe she knew it when she sent you out!"

Fair hastened homeward, half tempted to laugh and cry at the same time. She found Great-Aunt Molly still in the straightest chair, with her hands folded in her lap.

"You," said Fair, "are headquarters, Great-Aunt Molly Grandon."

"So?" Miss Grandon's eyebrows went up visibly. "Who told you?"

"Katherine Hawtree. Is'rel Briggs told me that 'her that was Car'line Babbitt' overheard a conversation between Katherine and one unknown, which conversation she passed on to Barby Farrow, who was Mrs. 'Lias Moody's informant."

"And how much of the story did you have left to take to Katherine?"

"You—or Katherine—said that John Halpine would be sure to tear down the old house and put up a new one—with modern improvements."

"Why, so we did! A new henhouse, in place of that ramshackle old lean-to that fills up the corner of the meadow. It's been an eyesore for years. You know, John is an enthusiast on scientific poultry culture, and means to take it up in earnest. He wrote me so last week."

"Niece Fair," went on the little lady with a twinkle in her eyes, "did it occur to you, while you were out matching one story with another,—and finding 'em fall short when you got right down to measuring,—that history sometimes repeats itself proper quick? Before you went out, you know, you were—"

"Tearing sheets!" said Fair Ellicot.

The master of the house rang for the maid. The girl was in the act of cleaning pots and pans, and, before she could tidy herself, her employer entered the kitchen to see what was delaying her.

He looked at her dirty hands and face. "My word, Mary," he said, "but you're pretty dirty, aren't you?"

Mary smiled coyly. "Yes, sir," she replied, "but I'm prettier clean."

SCARLET FEVER.

SCARLET FEVER is a disease common to children, and is caused by a virus (living organism) finding its way into the body. It occurs most frequently in the autumn and is usually epidemic in character because it is highy communicable.

As a rule, the period of invasion is sharp and acute lasting from twelve to twenty-four hours. The patient complains of feeling sick all over, with headache, sore throat, vomiting and a burning up feeling due to a temperature which may range from 103 to 105 degrees Fahrenheit. On the second or third day of illness, red spots appear first on the neck and chest and then spread rapidly over the body. The chin and an area around the mouth usually escape. The skin may be swollen and tender to such an extent that it makes movement of joints painful. The tongue is covered at first with a whitish fur but this disappears on or about the fourth day revealing a bright red tongue dotted with bright red spots popularly called the red strawberry tongue.

During the period that the red spots are coming out the throat remains sore, there is pain in swallowing, the voice is altered, and unremoved tonsils are markedly prominent, generally covered by yellowish membrane.

The temperature remains high — from 103 to 105 degrees Fahrenheit, until the rash begins to fade, which it does in three to ten days.

Then comes the stage of convalescence. As the rash disappears the skin begins to shed itself (disquamation the scientists call it) beginning on the face, neck and chest and this lasts from one to three weeks, sometimes longer.

A disquamation is probably the period of greatest infection. great care should be exercised then as throughout the disease to protect other persons from contagion.

The patient should be kept in bed from two to three weeks depending upon the severity of the case, and isolated for five to six weeks until all danger of infecting others has passed.

It should be emphasized that scarlet fever is one disease that is frequently associated with complications involvng other parts and organs of the body. It is most important therefore that proper treatment be commenced at the onset of the disease.

And a word to mothers. If your child complains of feeling unwell and shows symptoms in whole or in part as described in this article, immediately put him to bed, away from any other children, and call your doctor. Scaret fever like other infections requires to be treated intelligently. And the earlier the treatment and management are begun the less likely are complications to follow.

STORING FARM MACHINERY

Machinery Must Be Protected From The Elements—Greatest Factor in Prolonging its Life

PROPER care should be exercised at all times to protect the large investment in farm machinery from rapid deterioration. Heat, moisture, wind, frost and direct sunlight are the most destructive elements encountered by farm equipment. Storage means protection against these deteriorating effects during the inactive life of the machines, and has been found to be the greatest single factor in prolonging the life of farm machinery. The most active period of deterioration is during the season of machine use. It is important, however, to protect machinery the year around from the effects of weather. Generous use of paint on all wood and metal parts, wherever the original has worn thin, and the removal to a dry shed of all slats, canvasses, knives, plough shares cultivator teeth, etc., immediately the machine is out of use, will help prolong the useful life of the implement.

Pack all bearings with the correct grade of lubricant. Cover all exposed parts worn bright from use with old crankcase or transmission oil before putting the machine aside even for a few days. This will keep out all dirt and moisture from the bearings and off the wearing surfaces, thus preventing excessive wear due to rust. Clean all seed from drill boxes, make sure that all dirt is removed from plough or one-way disc bottoms and that they are well greased before leaving. All straw, grain or weeds should be thoroughly cleaned from binders, separators, cultivators, discs, etc., before greasing and painting for storage. Bright sunlight and moisture cause exposed parts to warp and crack; paint applied early will prevent this destruction. Metal parts exposed will rust and wear; grease or paint will save these surfaces.

Inside storage of grain boxes, wooden drills, wagon running gears, and wooden separators is desirable, but not essential. Outside storage of machinery has been found highly successful when proper care has been exercised to protect against animals and weather by good fences, the use of paint and proper lubricants.

The teacher wrote on the margain of little Betty's report card:

"Good worker, but talks too much."

Betty's father wrote on the opposite margin when it was returned:

"Come up, some time, and meet her mother."

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"This is just like being home!"

Bill Watson occasionally gets fed up on that out-of-town job. Work is oppressive. His pals are dull. Meals are tasteless. The outlook, generally, is bilious. Good, old-fashioned homesickness, that's what it really is — and Bill has a sovereign remedy, once he has diagnosed the case: a long distance call home. And it costs so little, too, that he has decided to forestall attacks by a regular schedule of weekly calls.

Bill's ideas are right in line with the rest of the family. The Watsons have come to appreciate fully the comforts, conveniences and low cost of Long Distance. Do You realize how little it costs to telephone?
