HENRY'S Shorthand School Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

CHICKEN SUPPER AT MOREWOOD

Morewood United Ladies' Aid will hold a Chicken Supper in the Church Hall on Friday evening, Nov. 8th, from 6 to 8 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, of Cornwall, with other talent will provide the programme. Admission 50c and 25c.

United Ladies' Aid

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid of Chesterville United church was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. S. Bogart.

Final arrangements were made for the Thanksgiving supper and concert to be held in the church Monday evening, Nov. 11th.

The program consisted of an instrumental by Mrs. Geo. Raeburn, and a reading by Mrs. J. Smith. Lunch was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Tate, Mrs. Saucier, Mrs. Geo. Hummel and Mrs. W. Hamilton

Good Prices at Auction Sale

As announced in The Record last week, the sale of live stock owned by William Glasgow was held Tuesday. This sale was caused owing to Mr. Glasgow losing his barns and contents recently. The day was fine and the attendance large and good prices obtained for the stock. Mr. Glasgow expresses himself as being very well satisfied with the results and wishes to thank his many friends for their attendance and bidding. Another feature of the sale which seemed to please many was that the "mystic wand" was in the hands of James Currie of Crysler, who, owing to illness, has not been active in the auctioneering business for some years, but has taken up the cudgel once more with his same old eloquence and vigor.

The prices obtained were good. The cows and heifers, expected to freshen 39 in all, made an average of $60.50, lacking only a few cents, which we expect Jim, the auctioneer, will put up. We would be pleased to have the average prices for Grade Milch Cattle obtained from other large sales through the Record.
Nov. 6th. 1929.

Garage and Restaurant Burned at Crysler

Last Monday morning the garage of Dubois Bros. and the restaurant and dance hall of J. O. Marleau at Crysler were totally destroyed by fire of unknown origin, making considerable headway when discovered about half past three. The two story frame metal sheeted hotel belonging to Mr. Varin within a few inches of the burned buildings was saved by heroic efforts of the volunteer fire fighters assisted by chemical engines from Finch.

Ottawa Winter Fair

Every effort is being made by the directors of the Ottawa Winter Fair to make this year's show of greater interest than ever to the farmers of the Ottawa district. The number of classes open only to local exhibitors and the prize money for these classes has been substantially increased. Over $28,000.00 will be distributed in prize money this year.

Interest in the Ottawa Winter Fair was never so intense. Enquiries have been pouring in from all parts of the Dominion and already it is certain that every foot of space in the building will be filled when the show opens on December 2nd. There will be exhibits from every province in the Dominion. However, every effort will be made to look after the interest of local exhibitors first.

Entries do not close till November 23rd, so that there is still plenty of time for local exhibitors to get their stock ready, but this should be done and entries made at once.

The Ottawa Winter Fair is now the largest live stock exhibition in Eastern Canada and has grown faster in the past five years than any fair in Canada. The new Coliseum at the Exhibition Grounds, Ottawa, is already too small to accommodate the many activities of the fair.

Look up the advt. of the Big Auction Sale at Aultsville in this issue of the Record. A whole week of high class goods at your own price.

BAZAAR AND SUPPER

The Ladies' Aid of Chrysler Presbyterian church will hold a Bazaar and Supper in the Hall at Crysler on Saturday, November 9th. Bazaar in the afternoon, supper served from 5 to 8 for everybody. Admission: Adults, 35c; Children 25c. (1)

Roxborough Boy Gets B. C. Appointment

Dr. Wallace Ray Gunn, eldest son of James Gordon Gunn of Avonmore, has been appointed Live Stock Commissioner for the province of British Columbia. He will have charge of all departments of the live stock including horses, cattle, sheep, swine, goats, poultry, dairying, ranching fur farming and will also be Provincial Veterinarian. His headquaters will be in the parliaments buildings, Victoria, B.C. Dr. Gunn will take over his new work on December 1st.

Upon graduating from the Veterinary College he entered practice at Finch where he continued for about four years. While at Finch he did work for the Federal Dairy Branch and lectured at the Kemptville Agricultural School.

Game Wardens, Attention!

In spite of the closed season for deer in the United Counties recently promulgated, deer in the vicinity of the Ninth Concession are being hunted with dogs, much against the will of the residents of that district who are doing everything in their power to protect the deer and have them increase. During the past eight or ten days dogs have been reported running deer on several occasions and it is only by the forbearance of the residents that the dogs have not been shot. The Record has been asked to give the dog owners fair warning that their dogs will be destroyed, if the opportunity offers when again following deer in this county.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

During the past year more than 9,000 girls and women took advantage of the systematic instruction given by the Department in the following short courses: "Food Value and Cookery," Home Nursing and First Aid," "Sewing," and "Millinery." This training should prove of great value to the home of the average Ontario farmer.

A prophet is said to be without honor in his own country. But after he has made good, it is a different matter. So it proved in the case of Dr. George I. Christie, who returned from the United States to assume the presidency of Ontario Agricultural College and who recently was accorded an enthusiastic reception when he visited his native village of Winchester.

Potato Grading.

As federal law requires that all potatoes in commerce be graded, farmers are instructed in standards and methods of grading. This will be a feature of an exhibit at the Royal Show, being arranged by the Crops and Markets Branch co-operating with the Ontario Agricultural College.

Ontario Rams for West.

The first consignment of Ontario purebred rams, numbering 275, or four carloads, have reached the ranches of Western Canada. They comprised Southdowns, Cheviots, Hampshires, Leicesters, Cotswolds, and Lincolns. It is the largest shipment ever sent, but the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers expect that next year's shipment will be even greater.

Valuable Rainfall.

Recent rains have been of untold value to the province. Reports from the various counties indicate that while too late to materially improve pastures, the widespread rainfall has improved fall wheat wonderfully and has permitted fall plowing to proceed. Live stock is generally reported in poor condition, and with grain scarce and feed high, the whole milk supply is short in all parts of the province. Most of the apple and root crops have been harvested.

Ontario Potatoes.

"Ontario potatoes are staging a come-back," states J. A. Carroll, of the Crops and Markets Branch. "Ontario has always grown good potatoes, but owing to a faulty marketing system the bulk of the crop has reached the market improperly graded. In strong competition this meant a reduced price which in the distress conditions of late year meant about 50 per cent below the top. Growers are improving their cultural methods and are producing tubers which when properly graded cannot be beaten for quality."

O. A. C. Live Stock Sale

The recent annual sale of purebred live stock at O. A. C. attracted many buyers from all parts of the province. Many choice specimen of beef, dairy, and fat cattle were readily sold and brought good prices. An outstanding lot of swine, including Yorkshires, Berkshires, and Tamworths, was distributed. The top price in the cattle sale was $260 paid for a six-year-old cow. Total receipts were $7,759. This sale has become an institution, with a truly educating influence. By the distribution of these high-class animals throughout the province, desirable improvement in Ontario-bred live stock will be effected.

Turn to Barley.

From reports of agricultural representatives during the past two weeks, it appears that there will be a decided falling off in the area of fall wheat to be harvested next year. In all probability, the land on which it was intended to sow fall wheat will be utilized for some other grain for which there is a steady demand, that is, barley. The increasing demand for this grain for industrial purposes in Ontario practically assures the grower of consistently good disposition at good domestic prices. As a result of several years' special development effort on the part of Ontario growers and a splendid harvest this year, there should be available next spring almost unlimited supplies of seed barley of the finest quality.—O. A. C. No. 21.

Helping the Newcomer.

There is a moral in this little story: In the spring of 1929, William A. Pullman, a Welsh miner, landed in Canada with his wife and family of nine children. They had no money and no prospects of work. The immigration agent got in touch with Mr. Elon Weir, a Norfolk farmer. The latter furnished them with a tenant house, hired the head of the family, and found positions on neighboring farms for the older boys and girls. All have made good. In the course of a year Mr. Pullman expects to take up his own farm and with the assistance of his boys he should become a highly successful farmer. It shows the possibilities of making newcomers into useful members of the rural communities if someone will only undertake to befriend them and instruct them in the ways of Canadian farming.

New Regulations.

The Roots and Vegetables Act, as amended this year, in the section dealing with marking, distinctly provides that "every person who by himself or through the agency of another person offers for sale, sells, or has in his possession intending for sale, any vegetables for which grades are provided by these regulations packed in baskets, bags, closed barrels, closed crates or in bulk, shall mark the initials of his Christian names and his full surname and address or in the case of a firm or corpoation, the firm or corporate name and address and the grade of the vegetables, also the weight, in a plain and indelible manner. In baskets by tag or on the handle, in bags by tags or printed on the bag; in barrels by ¾ inch letters; in crates by ½ inch letters. Exceptions to this rule are vegetables with the top leaves attached or green vegetables and potatoes offered in closed barrels."

Fighting the Corn Borer.

According to Prof. Caesar, who has directed the fight against the European corn borer in Ontario, a considerable improvement has been shown in the borer-infested counties during the past year, and although one or two counties in Western Ontario still have a serious infestation, and the farmer's unremitting vigilance will admit no relaxation, the alarming aspects have been vastly mitigated. The work of the county inspectors during the past two years and the increased co-operation of the farmers generally have played a prominent role in the clean-up. Prof. Caesar is now concentrating on a machine that will cut the corn stalks close to the ground and make "plowing under" an easy process. Next year he hopes that his machine will find general use in the corn-growing area. Farmers who desire to learn more about the proper methods of cleaning up their fields and of waging effective war against the borer should obtain from their agricultural representative one or other of the instruction pamphlets which have been issued by Prof. Caesar.

A Fool at the Wheel

What an utter fool he was. Maybe only that one minute. He may have been sensible before. He probably is now. He went up a little hill on a broad road right over on the wrong side. He met a sane driver at the top of the hill. Two cars smashed to smithereens. Three women badly hurt. One man a fool one minute did it. The highway is wide, smooth, excellent. No possible cause for an accident. Yet it happened recently. One man so absolutely foolish that he went up a hill on the wrong side. No congestion. No bumps in the road. Just a fool at the wheel. Maybe he never was foolish before. We meet them occasionally.

Cornwall General Hospital Grateful For Support

We would like to take this opportunity of publicly thanking the citizens of the Town of Cornwall, and the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, for their generous donations and support during the recent Campaign, for funds, for the Cornwall General Hospital, which enabled the committee in charge of the Campaign to go over the top, to the extent of almost 70,000.00.

The Campaign Committee also desire to express the warmest appreciation for the assistance rendered by the canvassers of the Town of Cornwall, also by the following rural districts: Avonmore, Gravel Hill, Apple Hill, Moose Creek, Berwick, Aultsville, Farrans Point, Newington, Lunenburg, Finch, Iroquois, Morrisburg, Martintown, Northfield Station, Grants Corners, Tollgate, Williamstown, Monkland, Bainesville, Lancaster, Wales, Mille Roches, Moulinette, Chesterville, Winchester, and North Williamsburg.

Much of the credit for raising the above mentioned amount, is reflected upon the energetic collectors.

The committee composed of Messrs. Geo. A. Stiles, K.C.; Arnold N. Smith, M. P. Harry, and Ned Smith, which waited upon executives of out of town corporations, and a second committee composed of Messrs. A. C Robertson, A. E. Hall, T. O .Clark, A. E. Currie, and R. E. Snetsinger, which canvassed the local firms, are deserving of the heartiest thanks for their good work.

The Campaign Committee also appreciate the assistance rendered by the Misses Lillie Miller, Hazel Rivier, and Mae Eaton, who did all the secretarial work in connection with the campaign, and also wish to thank Mr. Harry W. Snetsinger, who placed his office at the disposal of the canvassers, as a Campaign Headquarters; also Mr. W. L. McFarlane, manager of the Cornwall Street Railway Co., who had advertising banners erected in various parts of the town; the different speakers who were kind enough to address the gathering at the Banquet meeting, held at the Cornwallis Hotel previous to the Campaign, and the management of the hotel, who catered for the occasion.

The splendid co-operation of the press of the United Counties, particularly the "Cornwall Standard," and the "Cornwall Freeholder," was a great factor contributing to the success of the campaign, and the Committee extends its gratitude to the publishers and the staffs of the "Iroquois Post," "The Morrisburg Leader," "The South Mountain Herald," "The Winchester Press." "The Alexandria Times," "The Glengarry News," "The Chesterville Record," and the Cornwall Newspapers.

Tanking all those who assisted in any way in making the Campaign the success it was and looking forward to a brighter and more prosperous future for the Cornwall General Hospital, we remain,

The Campaign Committee:
Aaron Horovitz, Chairman,
W. L. G. Snetsinger, Secretary,
John H. Cline, Treasurer.

Herbs that Heal when Bronchial Tubes Seem all on Fire

Fifty years ago, a quiet-going soul, James Gallagher, came to Peterborough County. His was a marvelous skill in compounding herbal medicine.
One of his many prescriptions—for folk subject to Bronchitis or similar ills and nasty coughs and colds—was his Indian Herbal Remedy, full of the health-giving power drawn from Mother Nature, herself. Wonderfully healing to inflamed tissues. A builder of good, red blood. Make the acquaintance of this tried, reliable remedy. Keep well this Winter. Lost Airplane Party Now Reported Safe

Their quest for gold thwarted by fuel shortage and a northwest gale in which they lost their bearings, Col. C. D. H. McAlpine, of Toronto, and his intrepid partners, flying in two aeroplanes, were forced to land on the rocky Arctic coast and to win their living by rifles as they trekked for fifty-five days through dreary wastes to safety.

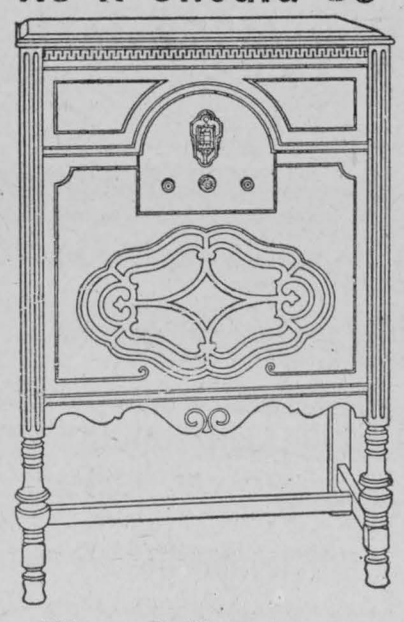

The two aeroplanes, missing for eight weeks, did not crash, but landed undamaged on the Arctic coast just west of the Ellice River, near Melbourne Island, according to a wireless message received by the Department of Marine at Ottawa at nine o'clock Monday night. The message stated the explorers pulled their machines up on the shore and then headed along the coast with three Eskimo hunters to Kent Peninsula, thence crossing Dease Strait to Cambridge Bay, where they arrived on Sunday in good health, though some members of the party had lost considerable weight in their strenuous fifty-five-day trek.

The Young People's Rally at Colquhoun United church was held on Sunday evening, Nov. 3, with a very large attendance. The service was conducted by the President, Mrs. Durham Wells, while addresses were given by Mr. Hector Kirk, lately returned from the mission field in Africa, who told of prayer at home for his continued success. Rev. Morrison, of Elma, gave a very inspiring address on "The Harvest is past, but are we saved?" which was enjoyed by all. Mr. and Mrs. Carmi Thompson sang a duet, and a solo was given in the foreign tongue by Mr. Kirk. Different members of the Y. P. S. took the devotional parts through the service. Mr. Chesley Colquhoun, who with Mrs. Colquhoun, is visiting relatives here and who at one time was a member of the church and choir, delighted the audience with a solo and surprised his old friends with his presence here. Fruits and vegetables helped to decorate the church which were afterwards sent to Cornwall General Hospital. We wish to thank all very kindly who assisted in this service.

Mr. and Mrs. Schell, from Saskatchewan, called at Mr. W. H. Swerdfeger's on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Froats, of Aultsville, spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Durham Wells.

Miss Hattie Epaugh spent last week with friends at Cornwall.

Mrs. Ed. Swerdfeger entertained at a quilting bee on Friday.

The Y. P. S. enjoyed a jolly Hallowe'en party in Mr. Fred Beckstead's vacant house, Elma, on Friday night.

RIVERSIDE

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Casselman and family, of Ottawa, spent Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. Aden Casselman.

Mrs. A. Hawn and Miss Mina Hawn, of Newington, visited Mr. and Mrs. R. C Bogart Saturday.

Mr. Archie McPherson, of Aultsville, was a caller at his parental home on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Pollock spent Thursday of the past week in Cornwall.

Mr. and Mrs R. C Bogart and Ernest spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Gordon C. Bogart, Chesterville

Mrs. R. C. Bogart and Mrs. S. Hutt visited Mrs. J. Ferguson at the parsonage, Finch, on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Smirle and baby Wilson visited Miss Bella McMillan recently.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving memory of our dear sister, Mrs. Wm. Merkley, who passed away one year ago, November 13th, 1928.

You bade no one that last farewell,
You said good-bye to none;
The gates of heaven were opened,
A loving voice said "Come."

Days of sadness still come o'er us
Tears in silence often flow,
For memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you died one year ago.

When we leave this world of changes,
When we leave this world of care,
We shall find our missing loved ones
In our Father's mansion fair.

Loving sisters, Bessie and Florence

JOHN KING, CHESTERVILLE

Mr. Geo. Beattie and Family Honored

On Friday evening, November 1st, friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Beattie to bid farewell to them before leaving for their new home in Cornwall. A very pleasant evening was spent in music and games. About eleven o'clock the party was called to order and Mrs. Ingram Cross read the following address and at the right time a library table and rocking chair were presented:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Beattie and family:

It was with deep regret that we, your neighbors and friends, heard that you were moving from the "Old Homestead" and we are taking this opportunity for showing our love and esteem.

Mr. Beattie, you have given of your time and talents for the betterment of this community. You have always fostered the spirit of brotherly love as your work and interest in the different fraternal organizations bears ample testimony. For years you acted on the School Board—then, on the Township Council and at present you are giving service as Reeve of this Township. We appreciate public spirited men and the contribution you have made, but it is as a neighbor that we shall miss you and your family most keenly.

Your home has always been a social centre. Many are the good times that we have enjoyed under your hospitable roof. Yes—we shall miss you all, but we are still loyal friends and it is this bond of friendship that unites though distance may divide.

We are glad your new home is not so far away but that we may hope to see you often in the future and we assure you a hearty welcome anytime you visit this neighborhood.

You carry with you our best wishes. We know you will not forget, but in order that you may daily have tangigle evidence of your old-time friends, it is our wish that you accept these gifts.

May God's choicest blessings attend you at all times.

Signed on behalf of your neighbors and friends: Hudson Johnston ,Geo. Gillard, Geo. Edgerton.

Mr. Beattie very ably made a suitable reply on behalf of his wife and family, thanking all present for their gifts and good wishes and inviting all if ever in Cornwall to come and visit them.

All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," after which a dainty lunch was served by the ladies.

IN MEMORIAM

Price—In loving memory of my dear husband and father, Angus Price, who died November 8th, 1928.

Father dear was taken from us,
Called to leave this vale of tears;
He has gone to be with Jesus
There to live through endless years.

Sudden was the message given,
Him from earth was called away,
But we know that he was ready
That dread summons to obey.

He to us has been a father
Faithful, loving, always kind,
And our hearts are almost broken
Since he left us all behind.

Oh, I miss thee, dearest husband!
And my heart is sad and sore,
But we know that thou art happy
In the bright forevermore.

Sadly missed by wife and family.

Morewood's Early Days

A paper, prepared by Mrs. Jas. Bogart, and read at a meeting of the Women's Institute following a desire by the Institutes of Ontario to record the early history of the province.

Ontario, which holds the palm among Canada's fair provinces, can boast of no fairer township than Winchester, named in 1798 after a city in Hampshire, Eng. When the early residents settled along the Nation River and began to unravel the tangled skein of their destiny, they put heart and intelligence into their work and soon various sections of the township became dotted with the familiar shanties, and the sound of the woodsman's axe echoed where now is heard the merry voice of children, the hum of modern harvesting machinery, and the whirl of industry on every hand. Not only the unflinching perseverance of the settlers, but likewise, the uniform par excellence of the soil contributed to their prosperity.

Settlement first commenced along the Nation River in 1825, when two young men came over from New York State and made arrangements to build a sawmill. Further settlement took place in 1832.

In 1862 a Post Office was opened at Morewood in the residence of the late Alex. McKay, who acted as Postmaster, and also kept a small store. Later he sold out to the Wallace Bros., who built and operated an ashery along with the store.

The character of the land had a lot to do with the locating of both schools and settlements. The high, rolling lands being the most easily cleared, drained, and sown, and in each group or settlement a school was opened as soon as possible. The first school in Morewood was opened about 1855 and was known as S. S. No. 12. Some of the first teachers were Messrs. Barrie, Summers, Whittaker, and Miss Woolman. Later this school became a Continuation School and then a fine new High School was built.

About the middle of the 19th century Methodism obtained a footing in the Morewood district, services being held in a typical old-time school house which stood not far from what is now Cannamore. Soon a fine frame church was built, and in 1865 a Sabbath School was organized. The early ministers were Rev's. Wm. House, Huxtable, Knowles, and Mr. Beamish.

The early services of the Presbyterian charge were held in the barn of James Kyle, and a hall known as the "Arc" belonging to Joseph S. Kyle. Some of the early ministers were Rev's. Dickey, Quinn, and Bennett. In 1870 the present stone church was erected on the farm of James Fraser. Among the ministers since then were Rev's. Rowat, Shearer, Kellock, and Stewart.

Before closing I would like to say that our township is very modern and up-to-date. We have our hydro electric system furnishing lights for our homes and power for our factories, telephone connection with towns and cities, and highways leading to large centres of population, which provide markets for the products of the township. Every individual can succeed materially in this district for there are fine farming lands as well as thriving business places. Then, too, are fine churches and well equipped schools where he may become a more efficient citizen, morally, mentally, and socially.

"How long has your family lived in Chicago?"

"Oh, about average. Grandpa wasn't shot until he was twenty-nine.'

Canada's Northern Climate Not As Ordinarily Believed

"If Canadians actually knew that there is twice as much heat in the Arctic circle as at the equator during the summer, that wheat conditions are better at Fort Vermilion, 700 miles north of the United States boundary, than at the boundary a national optimism would be developed throughout Canada that would have a tremendous economic effect," Vilhjlamur Stefansson declared, speaking to a Toronto audience.

"You can't reckon the length of summer in Canada by the calendar," he continued. "Though the temperature at the equator and Fort Yukon are the same, the heat at the equator lasts only 12 hours of the day, while in the north it lasts 24 hours. The sun works twice as long and does twice as much work in Canada as it does in Brazil." For that reason, he stated that wheat would soon be grown far north of what is believed to be the limit, once the people of Canada overcome the "knowledge" of the north which they obtained from their school books.

He admitted that he himself had been "a victim of the average North American education and the variety of miscellaneous mis-information which characterized the American system," and even taught at Harvard what now he knows to be incorrect and absurd.

Fallacies About the North.

He proceeded to blast several popular held fallacies concerning the north—that the North Pole is the coldest place on earth, that the temperature there never rises above freezing and that there is continual snow, that Eskimoes live in ice houses and drink oil, that there is no vegetation except a little moss and lichens, and no trees.

"Distance from the equator, from the ocean and height above sea level, are all necessary to obtain a maximum cold" he, went on, "and it is quite obvious that only one of those factors is present at the north pole. At the farthest north point at which regular temperatures have been taken, the greatest cold has been 52 degrees below zero, whereas coming south to Fort Vermilion, you get 72, and in Montana, 68."

Summer weather 1,000 miles north of Edmonton is as warm as Edmonton, he said. At Lake Athabasca often it is 97 in the shade, and that is much worse than farther south as the air is so humid and the heat lasts 18 or 19 hours of the day.

"Notwithstanding the fact that the Canadian and American weather bureaus have been registering temperatures in the Arctic for 25 years that are often as hot as at the equator. the Canadian and American school books still say that 'it is always cold north of the Arctic circle.' One publisher here in Toronto, recently published that because the sun is so slanting in summer that it never rises above the freezing point in the Arctic.

Why pay for such books and the registration of those high temperatures by the weather bureau up there at the same time?"

Referring to the amount of vegetation found, he stated that several hundred varieties of flowering plants live in the Arctic, that mosses and lichens are a very small percentage. "We found blue grass and timothy and dandelions as well as dozens of other plants on the farthest northern island that has been trod by man, on my third expedition, on an island that that never seen an Eskimo."

"As for the Eskimo, half of them have never heard of a snow house, unless they have been to school. And the text books of four provinces say they have no books. That isn't saying much for the Moravian and Lutheran Missionaries who have been there for two hundred years. They don't tell you that there is a magazine up there that is just as Eskimo as the Spectator is English, that has been published steadily since 1867. The truth is a great deal more interesting as well as having other advantages, than this fiction."

In an effort to explain the prevalence of so many wrong impressions, the difficulty of displacing long fixed beliefs was paramount, and he cited the ostrich putting his head in the ground when frightened as an example.

Explorers Are Silent.

"The explorers haven't tried very hard to enlighten the public either, although many books and articles have been written by them. Perhaps it is because it is so easy to be a hero. The public has certain ideas about the 'eternal silence and the everlasting cold,' so all you have to do to be a hero is go north and the public does the rest. If the explorer doesn't write too much, they acclaim him for his modesty, when he is merely trying not to give the game away." (Laughter.)

The daily press then came in for its share. Numerous stories, obviously false, had been printed, even over the A.P., which Dr. Stefansson had trackdown. "The trouble is that the terrible things are news and the ordinary things are not news," he declared. "Last winter there was a story of a baby freezing to death while sleeping between its parents. The coldest day at Churchill was 7 degrees warmer than La Pas and 3 degrees warmer than Winnipeg. There must have been a lot of babies frozen to death in Winnipeg. As a matter of that that baby died of pneumonia. But that is not news."

"An advertisement for certain cigarettes in England last year stated that wolves run in packs and pursue people. They don't, absolutely; that is testified by the American and Russian governments. When the De Reske people learned the facts they withdrew their advertisement from circulation and apologized for it. But shortly after an American geography came out stating that wolves ran in packs in Russia. There you have a cigarette company apologizing for the same thing an educational authority is publishing."

The trouble with the present system in Canada, he said, was that textbooks were chosen by the state from a number submitted by the publishers; "and some of them are rotten." The evil lay in the system, not in the teachers or the minister of education or his deputy. The government does not say directly what shall go into its text books.

AIR AND VENTILATION

It has been known that air can be polluted in such a manner as to be injurious. For many years, it was thought that poluution was due to an excess of carbonic acid gas, but it is now understood that, in an ordinary occupied room, the amount of this gas is not harmful, nor is there a sufficient reduction of oxygen brought about to account for the effects of bad air.

In the early years of this century, it was proven by experiments that the symptoms caused by living in so-called bad or vitiated air are due to the temperature of the air, its moisture, and its stillness. In other words, conditions of the air which do not favour the loss of heat from the body are the conditions which cause the ill-effects of bad air. The body is constantly generating heat and if the person is to be comfortable and fit, the surplus heat must be got rid of. The skin is the means for getting rid of excessive body heat. When the body is surrounded by hot, humid, still air, it is difficult or impossible for the skin to eliminate as it should, and, as a result, there is discomfort, and, later, if the condition persists, there will be headache, shortness of breath, and an increased pulse rate and temperature.

We know, from common experience, how much more comfortable we are on the warm day when there is a breeze as compared with the way we feel when the day is hot and still.

To secure comfort and fitness, we should live in an atmosphere of cool air in gentle motion, and the object of ventilation is to maintain such an atmosphere. This can usually be accomplished in a satisfactory way by having a thermometer in the room and by opening a window. A considerable amount of the ill-health that occurs in winter is due to the lowered efficiency of the body which follows upon living and working in overheated places. The body is toned up by cool air and upset by overheated still air.

Good Advice.

A young man just out of college sought the advice of a hard-headed and successful business man. "Tell me, please, how I should go about getting a start in the great game of business."

"Sell your wrist watch and buy an alarm clock," was the laconic reply.

by the Peptimists Club of Room A, since our last report. The program of that on October 25th was devoted to "The Care of the Hair, Skin, and Nails." The October issue of "The Gossip" was read and proved as successful as that of September. Donations to the mite box amounted to 30 cents. Five girls of Room A presented a new mirror for use in the room and a vote of appreciation was tendered to them. The inspector, Mr. Fetterly, was present for part of our meeting.

The Hallowe'en program was held on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 31st, instead of on the regular Friday period. A very interesting program of ghost stories, Hallowe'en recitations, etc., was given. The members donated 16 cents to the mite box. They also expressed their appreciation to Dr. O'Connor, the Ontario J. R. C. Director, who has been good enough to send to our Club a parcel of Red Cross foreign magazines, posters, etc. On exhibit now in Room A are magazines from, and in the native language of, the following countries, all of whom have the Junior Red Cross movement in their schools:—Latvia. United States, Canada, Austria, Belgium, Italy, Japan, Jugo-Slavia, Chili, Spain, France, Greece, England, Sweden. Hungary, New South Wales, Australia, Bulgaria, Czecho-Slovakia. The members hope to add to their collection as soon as other foreign copies can be secured.

STRANGE SEAS

Little Miss Spencer had ever been a lonely little woman, and when her brother James, whose housekeeper she had been, was gathered unto his fathers, she found that her possessions consisted of a few articles of furniture, a five-thousand-dollar life insurance policy, and that feeling of loneliness which can only come to those who, living their own lives in a large city and yearning for the sympathy of friends and relatives for the first time, suddenly discover that they have neither.

Little Miss Spencer's hair was turning white, but now that the first shock of the loss had passed from her, her eye was as bright as ever, while she sat in the front room of her apartment talking to a legal-looking gentleman. Let me describe her to you more fully, so that you may be able to see her, and respect her, and love her perhaps, for the lonely little woman that she was.

There are some characters so complex that, if ten persons were to compare their first impressions of them, it would be found that all these impressions would vary; and there are others so open and simple that everyone sees them the same. Miss Spencer was of the second kind. Upon seeing her the first word that would occur to your mind would be "Sweet!" and the second thought would be, "And isn't she small!"

"Sweet!" It was in her eyes, in the expression of her mouth and in the soft melancholy that mumined her face when she smiled. It was in the intonations of her voice. It was in her dress, in her black silk gloves, and particularly was it in the tenderness which fell upon her whenever, looking out of her front windows, she saw the woman across the street taking the baby for a walk.

"And isn't she little!" She was, indeed, of that charming height which, no matter how tall he is, as they walk along together brings the top of her head always on a level with his shoulders. On the same diminutive scale were her hands, so small that they seem never to have grown up; while the size of her shoes was a standing source of pride and despair to the shop where she had gone for thirty years.

"And so," said the legal-looking gentleman, "and so you have decided to keep a select boarding-house."

"Yes," said Miss Spencer so modestly that she almost whispered it; "I can't stay here, you know, Mr. Seymour ,and—" She made a gesture with her hand and asked, "What else can I do?"

"Of course," he said, "it's a bad time to start, nearly everyone being settled for the season; and I fear that even at the best you are launching your boat on a troubled and stormy sea. Don't you think that you had better put it off until next fall, perhaps, and think it over well in the meantime?"

"No," she said. "There's only the five thousand dollars, and it will cost a lot to furnish the house; so the sooner I start the better."

Following out her determination, she visited the real estate agencies the next day, and, although the rents staggered her for a moment, she consoled herself by the thought that other boarding-house keepers had to pay the same. Then followed a vigorous search for just the right house. Up and down the streets tripped little Miss Spencer, a business- like little reticule in her hand and a most determined look upon her face. This house she dismissed with a glance; at this one she looked carefully but shook her head after examining the neighborhood; and this house looked well from the outside, but the interior arrangements were such as to make it impossible. Up and down stairs climbed little Miss Spencer, peeping into cellars, looking closely into kitchens, judging the suitability of diningrooms, thinking of the convenient positions of closets and keeping implacable account upon the number of rooms. Shrewd questions, too, did little Miss Spencer ask the eloquent agents: Why was the rent so high? Why had the last tenants left? What was their present address? So that some of the agents lost their eloquence and found refuge instead behind a halting "I don't know." Early and late did little Miss Spencer pursue her quest until one morning, passing along a block which had always appealed to her as a model block, she paused for a moment across the street from the nicest house of all and was memorizing its advantages and beauties—the ivy that covered it, its dignified stone steps and wrought-iron railing, and its general air of refinement and home—when a man came out of the basement and began to fasten up a sign, "To Let." Half an hour later, little Miss Spencer had her house.

Busy times now, busy, busy times; and little Miss Spencer seemed to be everywhere at once. Who was this carrying a lantern down cellar and showing a guilty pamter his shortcomings? Miss Spencer. Who was this up on the roof testing the skylight with a pitcher of water to see if it leaked? Miss Spencer. Who was this at the paperhanger's shop choosing a design for the hall bedroom on the second floor? Miss Spencer. And who was this in the furniture stores walking past interminable rows of chiffoniers and testing the comfort of chairs by the sensible method of sitting down upon them, her gray hair, nearly loose from its fastenings, her blue eyes bright and serious and "business" written large all over her? It was little Miss Spencer again.

And what excitement when the things began to come! The wagons backed, the horses stamped, and the drivers shouted as though a mighty battle were about to be waged and the enemy must first be intimidated by much noise; but when the drivers found Miss Spencer was their only foe their noise died away as if by magic, the men forgetting their diapasons and speaking only in whispers of the most respectful hoarseness. Among all the confusion, Miss Spencer found a cook, a waitress, a maid, and a man.

Everything was finished at last, the last piece of furniture was put in its place, the last picture was hung in the last room, and Miss Spencer had called at the last newspaper office and left a neatly written copy for an advertisement to be inserted under "Boarders Wanted," which stated that persons desiring board in a select neighborhood would do well to apply to No. 56 Lincoln Street. Everything was finished at last—nothing was wanted now except the boarders.

Little Miss Spencer sat in the parlor and looked up and down the street her heart moving strangely within her. Every time a figure turned the corner of the block she had it under inspection in an instant, and as it drew nearer and passed by her emotions slowly changed from hope to anxiety, and she watched all the closer for the next. Sometimes three or four persons entered the block together, and, trying to watch them all simlutaneously, Miss Spencer was indeed in a state of mind. An untidy bit of paper flew in her basement court. She ran out, snatched it up and ran in again, stopping a moment on the top step to glance up and down the street. A cabman driving by happened to look up at Miss Spencer's second- story window, and she fancied that he smiled in amusement. She ran upstairs in a fright but found nothing to laugh at. Still unconvinced, she put on her coat and hat, walked to the end of the block, crossed the street and walked slowly past her house, her eyes all over it. Still she found nothing to make a cabman laugh. On the contrary, as she proudly told herself, she had the nicest house, the nicest curtains and the nicest curtains on the block, and as for the ivy— It came to her then that the cabman had not smiled in amusement, but in admiration. Yes, it certainly was admiration. She remembered his expression exactly, and when she smiled the same way he had smiled she percieved with relief that it was admiration she was expressing, and not amusement. She went in, took off her hat and coat and sat down again near the window.

A frail bark and a troubled sea.

Lunch time came; she had a sandwich and a cup of tea and hurried back to her station of observation. A man turned the corner with a paper in his hand, and as he walked along he looked at the numbers on the houses. Little Miss Spencer's hands trembled in her lap. Now he was looking at 64; he was a nice young man. Now he was looking at 62; he was rather pale, though, but Miss Spencer would soon attend to that. Now he was at 60; he should have the hall room on the second floor— But wait! He was going up the steps of 58! She considered for an instant the propriety of running out and telling him that this was the place, but dismissed the thought and waited for him to come out. Five minutes she waited, ten minutes, and then a fearful idea seized her. She had put the wrong number in her advertisements and 58 was stealing her boarders!

She found the newspapers and looked at her advertisement in each. The first one had the number right; so did the second; so did they all. For the second time that day she sighed with vast relief and again took up her watch.

What a disagreeable-looking man this one was that was approaching Miss Spencer felt instinctively that she could never stand a man like that, like the poor bird that cannot keep its eyes from the serpent, Miss Spencer watched the disagreeable man come nearer and nearer, watched him turn in at her steps, walk up them and ring the bell. In the desperation of despair Miss Spencer ran to the door, opened it an inch or two, faintly exclaimed, "We are all filled up,; thank you very much," and gently closed the door. The disagreeable man scowled, raised his hand as if to ring the bell again, but, thinking better of it, went back to the department store at which he was employed and which had sent him to see if all of Miss Spencer's things had reached her safely and in good condition. As she went back to the parlor, Sarah came marching down the hall to answer the bell. "It's all right, Sarah," said Miss Spencer, "I—I answered it." went back to her chair and watched the disagreeable man out of sight.

A frail, frail bark and a strange, strange sea!

The afternoon waned; the shadows fell; but no persons desiring board in a select neighborhood applied at No. 56 West Lincoln Street. Sadly Miss Spencer dressed for dinner, and, fearful that the maids, the cook, or the man she had hired would think that she cared, she entered the diningroom promptly when Sarah rang the dinner bell and took her seat at the head of the table with a dignity that became the mistress of the house.

It was a large diningroom with a long table in the middle and four cosy little round tables on the sides; the long table had chairs for ten, each of the round tables had chairs for two; and in this large diningroom at the head of this long table, sat little Miss Spencer, and unto her appeared Sarah, bearing a soup tureen that matched the room for size. Solemnly Sarah set it down before Miss Spencer, and solemnly Miss Spencer help herself to two spoonfuls of soup. Below, the cook garnished a halibut steak, stood back to regard it with admiration and sent it up to the pantry on the dumb waiter.

At half past six Miss Spencer had entered the diningroom; at half past seven she arose from her coffee, walkchairs and withdrew to the parlor. ed past the lines of empty chairs and withdrew to the parlor. At ten o'clock she turned out the lights, tried the doors and went to her room.

"Perhaps," she reflected just before she went to sleep, "perhaps—after all—I should have taken the disagreeable-looking man."

Another day came and went; and others. The lonely diningroom began to tell on little Miss Spencer's nerves She dreaded the sound of the dinner bell, and she knew that soon she would grow to hate it. On the evening of the fourth day, while she was waiting or the dinner bell,sorrowfully playing the piano, the doorbell rang and Sarah ushered a lady, a gentleman and their three grown-up daughters into the room. Miss Spencer felt her eyes grow warm and full as she led them upstairs to see the rooms. In her hand she held a card, and she noted with a thrill of pleasure that Mr. Willet's names was closely followed by the initials "M. D."

She had always told herself, in rehearsing for this occasion, that she would show her top-floor rooms the first and gradually work down, if necessary, to the floors below; but as her five prospective guests followed in her train she faltered not but led them straight to the front rooms on the second story—the very best rooms in the house.

"How much are these rooms?" asked the doctor.

She had invariably conspired with herself that she would first name a figure higher than the one she expected and gradually work down, if necessary, to her rock-bottom figure; but when the five looked at her for an answer she named her rock-bottom figure at once and knew within herself that she would go even lower yet than face that empty diningroom again.

"At what hour is dinner?" asked one of the daughters.

"Half past six."

"And breakfast?"

"Oh, whenever you like it!" cried Miss Spencer eagerly.

"Could we have it in our rooms?"

"Just as well as not, but," she firmly added, and her firm voice surprised even herself, "dinner will only be served in the diningroom!"

And if a hostess looked proud and happy, it was little Miss Spencer as she hurried down a few minutes later and gave orders for five additional plates to be laid; and if ever a waitress gave herself airs, it was Sarah as she brought in the soup; and if ever a cook looked satisfied with life, it was little Miss Spencer's cook as she sent up the roast and listened for a moment to the hum of voices above; and if ever a maid nearly beamed her face off, it was Ella as she helped with the vegetables; while John, the man, breathing hard in sternest joy, waited at the basement door ready to pounce out the moment the trunks arrived. Among it all the doorbell rang again; and while Sarah is answering the doorbell I will tell you a secret.

After she had paid her first quarter's rent, her furniture bills and all her other accounts. Miss Spence had been going around the last four days possessing exactly eight cents and not another penny in the world.

Sarah came back trembling with her news

"Three young gentlemen," she whispered, "want to see the rooms."

No longer roared the breakers, no longer gleamed the rocks: and as little Miss Spencer led the three young gentlemen into the diningroom a few minutes later—while the doorbell rang again—her heart soared within her. and her silvery little head wagged for a moment among the stars as instinctively she felt that her bark was in safe waters at last!
