FIRST OF ITS KIND ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD

ALL IN A MATTER OF SECONDS —You can cash a cheque, or bank your money without leaving the seat of your car at the curb-teller which the Bank of Montreal has installed as part of its newly opened main office at London, Ont. It saves end-less time and trouble looking for a parking space and queuing up inside a bank, and most transactions are completed in less than a minute. The first curb-service banking unit in Canada, this new installation was designed by the bank's chief architect in collaboration with the manufacturers, and is the only one of its kind in the world. Picture shows London's mayor, Allan Rush, an old customer of the bank, who cut the ribbon signalizing the opening of Canada's lost modern Banking Office, making the first deposit in the new bank. Serving him at the teller's window is Gordon Ball, B of M president, who 30 years ago was teller-accountant at the little Ailsa Craig branch, 17 miles from London. Standing by hte curb-teller are Broadcaster Ward Cornell and B. C. Garlner, Chairman of the Bank's Board of

OLD MORRISBURG BOY IS HONOURED ON RETIREMENT AT HARTFORD, CONN.

Richard J. Bennet, an ex-Morrisburg boy now resident in Hartford, Conneticut, recently resigned as vice president and general manager of the Connecticut Company.

The "Hartford Times" ran the following editotrial under the title "He Earned a Change".

It takes something few men have to give fifty years of service to a public trolley and bus company and be as well preserved in mind and body as is Richard J. Bennett, who is rettiring as vice president and general manager of the Connecticut Company.

The riding public may not have seen much of Mr. Bennett, but he knows an awful lot about his customers. One reason why Mr. Bennett seems to have thrived on the wear and tear that goes with a job of this kind is that he takes a sincere interest in the riding public. His splendid public relations ability made cheerful service of his type comm naturally.

A Canadian by birth, Mr. Bennett in 1904 joined the organization that later became the Connecticut Company. He moved up into higher positions as a matter of ability and seniority.

Mr. Bennett is a born public transportation leader. He took a prominnt part in th lctrification of the New Haven Road between New York City and New Haven. Thereupon he helped steer the Connecticut Comppany services from the horsecar stage through the trolley phase and into the bus type of transportation. Each produced no lack of problems but Mr. Bennett accepted tthem as challenges and gave them his undivinted, competent attention.

His position in the company placed him in the sensitive spot of having to carry out policies and at the same time to seek to satisfy everey whim of the riding public. It was his practice to take note of criticism published in letters in the newspapers. It probably disappointed him more than the unhappy patron that the service could not be organized to meet all demands.

Mr. Bennet is entitled to all the relaxation, recreation and useful activity which retirement will now afford him. Perhaps he will find new pleasure in riding on a Connecticut Commpany bus".

CARD OF THANKS

To all who so kindly remembered me while I was a patient in hospital and also to those who were so very thoughtful at the time of the death of our infant son, we express our most sincere gratitude.

—Mr. and Mrs. Donald Strader.

I wish to extend my sincere thanks tto all those who so kindly remembered me with gifts, cards, and flowers, while I was a patient in the Kingston General Hospital.

EARL B. CROBER.

MR. PETER McKERRON

Following an illness that had spread over the last four or five years, Mr. Peter McKerron succumbed to a heart attack at his home in Williamsburg last week.

A true Scotsman, he was born in Charlestown, Aberlour, Scotland, on January 18th, 1882, a son of the late Alexander McKerron and his wife, the former Jessie Anderson. The last surviving member of a family of five, the late Mr. McKerron came to Canada in 1924, and for 15 years farmed in the Winchester Springs area. In 1939 he moved to Williamsburg, and for the past 15 years had been a highly respected and belofed citizen of the Village of Williamsburg.

Peter McKerron was a distinguished war veteran, having served in two theares of war, the Boer war in South Africa, and th eFirst World War, both with the Imperial British Army, from which he was pensioned after 19½ years loyal service. In that time Mr. McKerron won several medals. He married the former Georgia Harper in Winchester in 1934. She is the lone survivor.

Final tribute was paid the late Mr. McKerron at the funeral held at the Funeral Parlours of Locke & Fairbairn. The Rev. George Dunlop conducted the service, taking his text from Psalm 1:4. A trio, composed of Mrs. Clarence Thompson, Mrs. Ball and Mr. Strader McIntosh, sang by request, "Does Jesus Care", and the congregational hymn was "What a Friend We Have in Jesus". At the request of the deceased, music of the bagpipes was provided by Prescott pipers.

Interment was made in Maple Ridge cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. Walter Loucks, Garnet Weegar, Arden Trickey, Clifford Casselman, Charlie Pitts and A. Whittek-

Many beautiful floral tributes testified to the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

MARIAN YEAR PROGRAMME ANNOUNCED BY ARCHBISHOP O'SULLIVAN

The amount of $600,000 has been set as the financial goal of the Archdiocese of Kingston Marian Year Campaign for the House of Providence and St. Mary's of the Lake Hospital, it has ben announced by the Most Reverend Joseph A. O'Sullivan, D.D., Archbishop of Kingston.

The campaign, announced two weks ago, is being undertaken to provide funds to build a new 100-bed wing at the House of Providence and to renovate and fireproof existing buildings of the institution, and to build a 138-bed wing at the St. Mary's of the Lake Hospital. The House of Providence provides care for the needy aged and infirm, regardless of race or creed; St. Mary's provides care for the needy chronically ill, without regard to religious affiliation.

The $600,000 sum has been emphasized as a "minimum goal" by Archbishop O'Sullivan — the amount absolutely necessary to meet requirements of the two institutions and the long immediate waiting lists which exist at each. General Chairman Barry J. Stafford stressed the fact that a substantial oversubscription will be needed to furnish and equip the institutions so that they may properly serve the area.

In conducting the campaign, a volunteer organization of more than 3,000 men is being formed in the area — the Archdiocese of Kingston covers roughly the territory from Belleville to Morrisburg, and as far north as Carleton Place.

Each parish of the archdiocese will have a campaign organization. Gifts will be in the form of subscriptions payable monthly over a 24-month period, and will be welcome from Catholics and non-Catholics alike. The solicitation period of the campaign is scheduled to begin on Sunday October 17, though special contributions work will take place earlier.

MRS. EMERIE LORTIE

The village was shocked at the sudden death of Mrs. Emerie Lortie, which occurred on Sunday evening, and caused much sorrow to her many friends in this district, where she was highly esteemed and respected. Her health had not been good for some time, but she was about her home daily. She was returning with her husband and daughter in law from a motor trip to Prescott when death came without warning.

Born in Alexandria, Ont., in 1903, she was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ladouceur, her mai den name being Marie Yvonne Ladouceur. She was educated in Alexandria schools and in 1926 was united in marriage there tto Emerie Lortie who survives. They came to Morrisburg in 1936, where her husband is section foreman for the C.N.R.

Other survivors are five sons — Roger Lortie, St. Catharines; Gerald Lortie, at present sailing on the lakes Claude, Leo and Robert Lortie, at home; and one daughter, Mrs. Russell Sheldrick, of St. Catharines; also 3 brothers — Hermoine Ladouceur, J. Ladouceur, Richard Ladouceur, all of Cornwall; and three sisters, Mrs. F. doyno, Cornwall; Mrs. Raoul Henault and Mrs. Adelard Clement, both of Montreal.

The body rested at her home, on St. Lawrence Street until Wednesday at 9 a.m., when the pastor, Rev. W. L. Terrion, celebrated Requiem Mass at St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Following the service here interment was made in Sacred Heart cemetery in Alexandria.

MR. AND MRS. FRRED DUVAL MARK 60th ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. rederick Duval, Henry Street, observed the 60th anniversary of their marriage on Sunday, September 19th, receiving numerous messages, gifts and calls from their many friends in the district..

The day was observed quietly due to the illness of Mr. Duval, who suffered a stroke some months ago, from which he is slowly recovering.

Both born in Williamsburg, they hav resided continuously in the district and for 45 years have been residents of Morrisburg, where Mr. Duval followed his trade as blacksmith, one of the few remaining, until illness forced his retirement.

A lover of horses, he competed with several when fall fairs were an annual event in towns and villages. When no longer taking an active part, he was a frequent visitor at the local track, just to watch the animals in their daily exercises.

An anniversary dinner, attended by immediate relatives, was served at the home of their son Mason Devaul on High Street.

At the Presbyterian Manse Morrisburg, on September 19th, 18994, the marriage took place of Matilda Duval, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Duval and Frederick Duval, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Duval, all of Williamsburg Township. The late Rev. Dr. Hugh Cameron officiated. The young couple took up residence in Williamsburg, and later came to Morrisburg, where they have since resided.

Their family consists of two sons Mason of Morrisburg, and Robert of Brockville.

There are also several grandchildren and great grandchildren.

GARNET SNYDER SERIOUSLY INJURED AT TORONTO

His many friends in Morrisburg will regret to learn of the serious injury suffered by Garnet Snyder, son of the late and Mrs. Alfred Snyder and brother of Mr. William Snyder

Garnet fell and fractured his legs. He was rushed to the Western Hospital where he spent 5 weeks. He is again in hospital at Malton, where he has to learn to walk again. He expects to be in hospital about two months. of Morrisburg.

50th ANNIVERSARY FOR MORRISBURG COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clark motored to Utica, N. Y., with Mrs. Hugh Shennette and Mrs. Herbert Clark on September 15th, and celebrated their 50th anniversary. On their return home, friends and relatives gathered for a banquet Friday evening in the Castleman Memorial Hall, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion with lovely fall flowers. Guests were present from Ottawa, and Mrs. Thrower of Toronto, who attended the wedding 50 years ago.

Rev. F. L. Howald, their pastor, based his remarks on Psalm 118. Mr. Clark replied to the toast and Mrs. Clark invivted the guests to their home on Main Street.

Mrs. Grant Black, president of the St. Paul's Lutheran Willing Workers presented Mr. and Mrs. Clark with a Rogers Silverware Chest with clock inset, from the two societies. Mrs. Clark, delightfully surprised, thanked the W.M.S. and W.W. ladies for their kindness in remembering them on this anniversary. Gary Shennette, Kingston, a grandson, took colored pictures of the guests and tables centered by a three-tiered wedding cake and yellow roses. Hugh Shennette expressed the appreciation of the family to the ladies for preparing and serving a bountiful repast. After singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" all retired to Mr. and Mrs. Clark's home where the honored couple opened many beautiful gifts amid tthe admiration of their friends. A social evening was enjoyed with the best wishes and the hope that they may be spared to enjoy many more happy anniversaries.

NEW POLICE CHIEF HIRED FOR MORRISBURG

At a special meeting of the municipal council held last night, Council decided to hire a new police chief for the village.

He is Austin Carkner, 38 of Orm, ond, Ont. 38 years of age, Mr. Carkner is 6 feet tall, and weighs 215 pounds. He has had 6½ years experience with the City Police in Ottawa and at present is a member of the police department at Delhi, Ont.

The new Chief will assume his new duties about September 29th.

THE PROPERTY OWNERS' ASSOCIATION

"The object of this Association is the protection of the rights and interests of its members as affected by the Seaway and Power Development".

On August 19th, our Association sent a petition to our town counril "requesting it not to arcept any Hydro plans until all legitimate costs of re-establishment of municipal properties are met".

This was accepted in open Council at the regular monthly meeting held in the council chamber on Monday, September 13th.

For the individual property owner, one of the best arguments he can present as to the value of his property, in case of expropriation by Hydro, is an appraisal of his property by a recognized competent appraisal firm.

Our Association has profided such a firm and we strongly urge that our members take advantage of this service.

All those wishing an appraisal of their properties now should immediately notify the Secretary-Treasurer of the Association.

FRED J. BARLOW, Sec.-Treas.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Gwendoline D Clarke

Time was when the Women's Institute was thought to be an organization intended mainly for the benefit of rural women who were anxious to get together, primarily for the purpose of exchanging recipes, plant slips, knitting patterns, quilt blocks and for organizing quilting bees. That may be true — and still is, for that matter — but to all such domestic programmes there is now a mighty big "plus"! Yes, country women still exchange recipes and many of them love a quilting party but they are also interested in social studies, literature, international affairs, history and art, in all of which they are participating more and more. No one can doubt it after the excellent exhibit of original paintings that were on display following a competition that was sponsored by the Salada Tea Company and for which prizes were offered on a provincial level. Entries reached the provincial competition by a process of elimination. The best pictures were chosen, first from the branch, then from the District, and finally from the Convention Area, each painting featuring a Canadian landscape.

The competition may not have brought to light any outstanding genius but at least it will have done much to satisfy and encourage the artistic and creative urge in many women — talent that may have been dormant for years. How many women, when looking at a beautiful sunset, or a particularly attractive garden, have said with a longing sigh — "Oh, if only I could paint, what a picture that would make." In years gone by a few of them ever made the attempt. But of recent years night schools in many country districts included classes in art. The result was amazing. Women who apparently had been interested only in culinary arts came out of the kitchen and went to work with paint and palette. At one night school where classes had been held for three years two entire classrooms were given over to paintings — one for elementary students and the other for second-year advanced classes. And most of the sudents were from rural areas.

One time there was a young lad who was asked if he could play the violin. He replied — "I don't know yet — I haven't tried!" The same answer would be equally commendable coming from a person if she were asked if she could paint a picture. Naturally, only a person with outstanding talent and ability can play or paint without some form of training, but there are hundreds of persons, who, with a little encouragement and rudimentary training are amazed to find within themselves latent talent that was never even suspected. So the Salada Tea Company is definitely helping the cultural life of rural Ontario by sponsoring such a worthwhile project.

The judges were two well-known artists — Palmer and Casson. I was interested in one criticism they made — that the artists showed a tendency to copy a scene exactly as they saw it. "Sometimes," said Mr. Palmer, "there is more in knowing what to leave out of a picture than what to put in it." That takes a little digesting but if you mull it over long enough it sounds so reasonable. After all a painting is not a photograph — although, come to think of it many photographs would also be improved if a few of the details were left out! But a painting . . . take a shapely elm for instance, its lovely symmetrical branches sheltering lazing cows beside a stream. It is a beautiful tree but it has quite a number of dead, disfiguring branches. A camera would photograph those branches but an artist would never dream of letting them appear on his canvas. Isn't that typical of what the critics meant?

By the way, I thought Mr. Casson had a wonderful idea. He suggested that the Department of Education set up a truck with an instructor to go out to amateur art groups throughout the Provinces and show them how to buy and handle material. Now there's a constructive suggestion if ever there was one.

Which reminds me, I have a reprint of a beautiful picture by A. J. Casson, P.R.C.A. It is called "Canadian Spring" and features white trilliums. Early last January when old calendars were being discarded I saw this picture hanging in a feed store. I asked the manager what he was going to do with it. "Nothing — take it if you want it." I often look at that picture and think what a treasure I rescued from the trash can.

Well, I seem to have let pictures and painting run away with my space. But we're still here on the good old farm. Partner has been getting a pen ready for our pullets, then he dug my flower bed ready for geraniums next spring. The 50-odd cuttings I set out in the garden appear to be quite healthy — and I keep adding to their numbers. When it comes time to pot them ready for winter storage it could be that my enthusiasm may suffer a slight set-back.

IN A MESS—Mike Dougherty, 2, is all tangled up with his goats, en route to the Fair at Pomona. Mike hopes to straighten out the mixed up four-week-olds in time to win a couple of the blue ribbons and some of the $61,000 prize money.

Coconut Fudge Chiffon Cake

Sift into a bowl, 1 c. plus 2 tbs. once-sifted cake flour, 1½ tsps. Magic Baking Powder, ½ tsp. salt, ⅞ c. fine granulated sugar; mix in ½ c. desiccated coconut. Make a well in dry ingredients and add in order given (do not stir mixture), ¼ c. corn (salad) oil, 2 unbeaten egg yolks, ¼ c. plus 2 tbs. water, 1 tsp. vanilla, 2½ ozs. unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled. Stir liquids a bit, then stir in dry ingredients; beat until batter is smooth. Measure into a large bowl ½ c. egg whites (at room temperature) and sprinkle with ¼ tsp. cream of tartar; beat until whites are very stiff—much stiffer than for meringues, etc. Add flour mixture, about a quarter at a time, and fold after each addition until batter and egg whites are well combined. Turn batter into an ungreased 8" angel cake pan; bake in rather slow oven, 325°, about 1 hour. Immediately cake comes from oven, invert pan and suspend cake until cold.

Always Dependable

Junior - Be warned!

Lest Junior return to school this fall with the notion that "mechanical brains" have made the "three R's" a dead language, let him be warned:

At least two of them will just keep on r-r-rolling along for quite a while yet.

Why are we so sure? Well, Junior, we got it right from the thinking machine's mouth — or at any rate its mouthpiece, an expert in one of the companies that makes those ponderosities.

This expert says his company is constantly sending its office personnel back to school to learn reading and writing, particularly of figures, because (how do you like that?) the basic food of the complicated calculators is hand-gathered, hand-copied records which are fed to the machine.

Yes, Junior, its disappoining. It's confusing and disillusioning, too. It is like learning that your favorite supergadget, rocket-propelled, remote-controlled space-ship of the outer ether has to be kept in a box stall and fed oats in a nose bag just like old Dobbin.

Of course, you won't learn that—but you'd better learn your hand-writin'. — From The Christian Science Monitor.

Hitler Apologized Twice — Too Late!

It was the boast of the late unlamented Adolf Hitler that he apologized to only two men in his life — Field-Marshal von Brauchitsch, who had constantly stressed the importance of rocket research, and Major-General Walter Dornberger, the soldier-scientist in charke of soldier-scientist in charge of who did more than any other man to develop the V2.

Why did the mighty Fuhrer so humble himself? Because he had never had faith in rockets as a war weapon; and when in 1943 he had a dream they would never be operational against England he refused any priority.

Too late — he realized his blunder. Hence the apologies.

Between September 8th, 1944, and March 27th, 1945, 1,190 V2's were launched against London, with deadly effect. Nearly 3,000 people were killed and over 6,000 seriously injured. But in his book "V2" a fascinating account of German rocket development from its early beginnings in 1930 — Walter Dornberger reveals that but for Hitler's blindness it might have been possible to have launched that number every month from 1942.

Would such a barrage of V-weapons have altered the course of the war? The author believes so, and quotes President Eisenhower's war history "Crusade in Europe," in which he wrote: "If the Germans had succeeded in perfecting these new weapons six months earlier and put them into action as opportunty arose, it is probable that our invasion of Europe would have come up against tremendous difficulties and might have become impossible.

"I am certain that after six months of such action, 'Operation Overlord' — the attack on Europe from England — would have had to be written off."

OATMEAL ROLLS

● Stirring constantly, quickly pour 1 c. boiling water into ¾ c. oatmeal. Scald ¾ c. milk, 2 tbs. granulated sugar, 1½ tsps. salt, 2 tbs. molasses and 3 tbs. shortening; cool to lukewarm. Meanwhile, measure into a large bowl ½ c. lukewarm water, 1 tsp. granulated sugar; stir until sugar is dissolved. Sprinkle with 1 envelope Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast. Let stand 10 minutes, THEN stir well.

Mix in oatmeal, then lukewarm milk mixture. Stir in 2 c. once-sifted bread flour; beat smooth. Work in 2⅔ c. (about) once-sifted bread flour. Knead on lightly-floured board until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl and grease top of dough. Cover and set in a warm place, free from draught. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Punch down dough and turn out on board sprinkled with oatmeal; cut into 2 equal portions and cut each portion into 16 pieces. Knead into smooth balls and arrange in 2 greased 8" square cake pans. Grease tops. Cover and let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake in moderately hot oven, 375°, about 30 minutes. Yield — 32 small rolls.

Can You Answer These Questions

Controversy is raging among the authorities responsible for educating British children. The intelligence test which forms part of the 11-plus examination that sends a child on the road to further education is under fire, because many thousands of children are being coached to pass this test, and many thousands are not.

The intelligence tests now held in all British primary schools aim at deciding what the child's potentialities are for further education. Will he profit by an academic of a practical type of teaching? Does he show the aptitude for grammar school education, or would he be better in a technical college of a modern secondary school?

It all depends on the intelligence test. Children can do brilliantly in arithmetic and English, yet fail when confronted with this mysterious and almost secret yardstick.

Because it is unlike anything they normally have at school, sensitive and anxious children are shocked into failure.

These I.Q. tests are based on the results of scientific and psychological research, which have proved that the growth of intelligence is completed early in life.

How It's Done

The American psychologist Lewis Ternan, introducted the idea of the "Intelligence Quotient," or I.Q. The I.Q. is calculated by dividing a person's mental age by his actual age. The resulting fraction is multiplied by 100, to bring it to a whole number. Therefore, the I.Q. of a child of seven whose mental age is seven is:

$$\frac{7}{7} \times \frac{100}{1} = 100$$

Mental age itself is determined by the age-level of the test taken and the score obtained. One hundred is the average I.Q. over the whole population.

A boy of ten who is able to score as many in a test as the average boy of fourteen has an I.Q. of 140. People who have I.Q.'s of 140 and over are regarded by educational psychologists as "geniuses," and are rare. Only one per cent of the population have I.Q.'s of over 130.

Each test is rigidly timed. Here are some typical questions. They are deceptively simple-looking, yet 8 per cent of children fail:

Vocabulary: Cascade means—drum, box, firmament, waterfall (choose one.)

Number Sequence: From the numbers 21, 19, 23, choose the number that continues the series 2—3—5—8—12—17.

Classification: Earth, Venus, Mars, Sun. (One word does not belong with the others. Which is it?)

Analogies: Day is to 365 as week is to 7, 38, 52, 12 (choose one.)

Opposites: (underline the word Same, Opposite, or Unknown);

Kind, Cruel: Same, Opposite, or Unknown.

Droll, Odd: Same, Opposite, or Unknown.

Best Answer: The saying "A miss is as good as a mile" means: A girl can walk just about a mile: errors cannot be forgotten; to fail by a little is still to fail (choose one.)

WHERE YOU RIGHT?

(Turn page upside down for solutions.)

Vocabulary, waterfall; Number Sequence, 23; Classification, Sun; Analogies, 52; Opposites, Kind and Cruel are opposites, Droll and Odd are the same; Best Answer, to fail by a little is still to fail

Pretty Soon We'll Live "For Free"

Once upon a time in a Far Country a Smart and dynamic young man fell in love with a clever and glamorous girl. She returned his Affection, and they were married on the strength of a selling job which promised him "up to" $200 a week. They went to live in a House which was the last one left of a Bunch advertised as priced "as low as $6,000.

But although the young husband's commissions climbed up, they didn't ascend "up to" the Glistening mark suggested by the advertisement. And although the cost of their Home might be deemed low by some standards, it didn't turn out to be "as low as" the other one sold just before they got there. So the once-hopeful bride and groom soon found themselves "up" all all right — up against it! And Winter was coming on!

However, he was Smart and she was Clever. So, naturally, the turned to the advertisements again. There they learned that if they insulated their Domicile with a certain brand of shredded mineral they would save "up to" 25 per cent of their Fuel bill; if they put in a certain kind of storm Windows they would save "up to" another 25; if they installed a certain Pump in their heating system, "up to" a fifth more; and if they threw out the Furnace they had altogether and bought another using a wholly different type of fuel they would save, this time, "up to" 30 per cent.

Furthermore, the young couple learned that if they changed to "Fusion" from the mere "Fission" gasoline they had been using they could drive their car for "up to" 15 per cent less. And if they sold their old Crate and bought a new Guided Missile they would save Actually 35 per cent at the corner Pump.

So the Smart young husband and the Clever wife did all these things. Thenceforth they heated their Home cosily for nothing, and buzzed around the countryside right merrily for Half Price. And they lived Happily ever after.

But, remember, this was a Very Far country where the Decimal Point is optional—From The Christian Science Monitor.

C'EST SI BON — Louis Armstrong, one of the great jazz performers of his day, does a real-life mopping of his brow to imitate the characteristic pose portrayed in the painting above him. Louis will portray King Oliver, the first "jazz king," on a forthcoming TV show.

AFTER THE STORM—A National Guardsman stands guard over a restaurant and boat that were wrecked by Hurricane Carol at Onset, Mass. The boat was hurled 100 yards inland by winds.

Making Records Among Eskimos

As soon as the hunting or other work was over, I set my marvellous machine working and recorded songs, old stories, vocabulary, etc., on the tape. The recording machine was a success from the start. . . . On it the Eskimos were able to hear their own speech and their own songs; they laughed heartily and thought the whole thing a queer, amusing game. . . .

Curiously enough, the Eskimos have taken to the microphone as if it were the most natural thing in the world. . . .

Now there are floods of songs; I find, indeed that this isolated people in the depths of the mountains has preserved a mine of them. They love singing — through it they express the changing moods of daily life; they abandon themselves to it with a kind of intoxication. A hunter may be sitting in his tent gazing in front of him, when suddenly the urge to sing comes over him. When he begins, the others — men, women and children — join in from time to time. The chorus grows stronger and the tempo quicker; a storm of strange notes fills the skin tent. . . .

We had had a musical evening in the skin tent, with gaiety and laughter. One Eskimo after another had taken the microphone and sung, and a few of the women had participated, even the reserved Kaliksuna who had sung an amusing ptarmigan song. The children had made their contribution, funny little verses and jingles, followed by outbursts of laughter. Then I turned the tape back and let the Eskimos hear their own voices, to the delight of all.

Then I said to Paniaq: "Now call the animals as you do out hunting." Paniaq took the microphone and started. He gave an animal concert so astonishingly true to life that we might have had all the beasts in the wilderness about us. He called caribou, moose, mountain sheep, fox, raven, owl, yellow-billed loon, ptarmigan, ground squirrel, and all the rest. Last came the wolf. And the wolf's howl rang out, so perfectly true to life in its harsh dissonance that I felt a chill down my spine.

Suddenly he received an answer. The dogs which had lain asleep in the snow outside the tent awoke, raised their muzzles to the stars and howled, too — From "Nunamuit: Among Alaska's Inland Eskimos," by Helge Ingstad.

Lindbergh's First Sight of Britain

The Thirty-First Hour. . . .

For aviators approaching from the sea, a coast line choose between two methods of appearing. When air is crystal clear it announces itself delicately, subtly, as a fine, dark line, barely breaking the evenness of the horizon; rising, growing, flowering gradually, giving one plenty of time to adjust to its presence, its shades of color, its intracacies of character and shape. But in heavy haze or fog it can loom up with terrifying suddenness, not even leaving time to turn from its crushing impact. On one day, it uses the curvature of the earth as a cloak. On another, it veils itself with different shades of mist and weather. . . .

The coast of England is well above the horizon when I see its outline, pale and whitish in the haze. Then there's no fog over Cornwall. I can let go of Ireland completely, and move forward another notch in the rachet of my mind. No matter what happens now, I'll not return to those hilly, bouldered fields for safety, or land in the waves beside some Celtic lighthouse keeper's house. If by any dwindling chance I still have to turn back from Paris, I now have England for a haven.

Above the sheer Cornish cliffs, rising straight out of the sea, farm fields break off abruptly where the soil has tumbled down into encroaching waves. As a schoolboy I read of the slowly changing surface of the earth, of clam fossils found on hilltops, of glaciers building and melting, of drifting continents and dried-up seas. But all these things were measured on a time scale that made little impression on my mind — hundreds of centuries — ages before the Sphinx was built. Here, I see the earth actually in the modeling, in terms of time that I understand. The signs below are fresh, unmistakable. The road, and little houses and barns on top of the cliff, are all set back from the precipice, leaving a strip of green fields along the edge, a few generations' worth of land to delay the inevitable collapse into sea.—From "The Spirit of St. Louis," by Charles A. Lindbergh.

Played Wrong Tune

It was a great occasion when the President of the Lebanon Republic, Kamel Chamoun, recently arrived here on a State visit to Brazil.

The red carpets came out, flags waved, and bands played stirring music. Amity between nations seemed to be the theme of the celebrations staged to welcome the distinguished visitor.

Outside the steps of the presidency the Lebanese President inspected the guard of honour and stood stiffly to attention while yet another band played the national anthem of his country.

At least that is what the band though it was playing. And apparently no one noticed the slightest flicker of emotion pass across Mr. Chamoun's face. If only they had known, this was evidence of supreme self-control on his part.

For, as has since come out, the tune the band was playing with such gusto as a compliment to Brazil's honoured guest was not the national anthem of Lebanon but the national anthem of the neighbouring State of Israel.

And officially, a state of war still exists between Israel and the Lebanon.

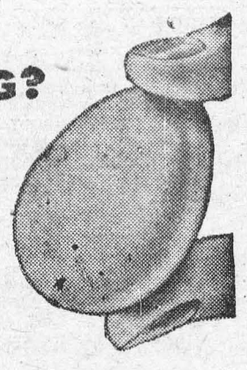
WHAT PRICE ONE EGG?



Ever divide your production costs by the number of eggs produced? It's the price you pay to get one egg. Cut those costs with balanced feeding. Follow the XL (EXCEL) feeding programme — for economical egg production. Better feed means higher egg production — lower costs per dozen eggs. And the lower the costs, the greater your profits!

Cut Your Costs with XL (EXCEL)

Make your layers pay. Your birds need the added essential nutrients in XL (EXCEL) feeds — the proteins, minerals, vitamins. Cut your costs this way: —

Have us mix — 3 bags your grain —
1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 32% Egg Producer Concentrate.
or 4 bags your grain —
1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 35% Laying Concentrate.
Then — watch egg production go up and costs go down!
If you haven't your own grain — feed XL (EXCEL) Laying Mash.

The old saying "you can have too much of even a good thing" certainly doesn't seem to apply to Milk. Liquid, semi-liquid, or powdered, it's something that should be a "must" for young and old. Yes! And middle-aged too.

The following recipes call for evaporated milk — and they're worth while trying now, or clipping for future use.

Rice Pudding
(Serves 6)

1 large can undiluted evaporated milk
1 cup water
2 eggs
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1½ teaspoons vanilla
2 cups cooked rice
¾ cup shredded coconut

Beat milk, water, eggs, sugar, salt and flavorings until smooth. Pour over cooked rice, mixed with ¼ cup shredded coconut in 2 quart casserole. Place casserole in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 30 minutes. Stir lightly but thoroughly. Continue baking 30 minutes. Top with remaining coconut during last 5 to 7 minutes. Cool before serving.

Pineapple Upside Down Cake
(Consists of two parts—the batter and the caramel)

Batter

¼ cup shortening
¾ cup sugar
1 egg
1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup undiluted evaporated milk
½ teaspoon lemon extract

Blend shortening with sugar and egg until fluffy. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk. Add flavoring. Beat 1 minute.

Caramel

¼ cup butter
½ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
¼ cup almonds
1 can sliced pineapple

Maraschino cherries

Melt butter slowly in heavy 10-inch frying pan. Add sugar and salt. Stir until melted. Remove from heat. Arrange pineapple, almonds and maraschino cherries in caramel. Pour in batter. Bake in moderate oven (350-370° F.) 30 minutes. While hot turn upside down on plate. Serve warm with whipped cream.

Lemon Cake Pudding
(6 servings)

½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
¼ teasoon salt
2 egg yolks
½ cup undiluted evaporated milk
½ cup water
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ teaspoon lemon rind
2 egg whites

Mix sugar, flour and salt together. Beat egg yolks. Add evaporated milk with water, then lemon juice and rind. Add sugar mixture and mix well. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into custard mixture. Pour into 1 quart shallow baking dish. Set in pan of hot water. Bake in slow oven (325° F.) until set, 50 to 60 minutes. Cut in squares. Serve warm or cold.

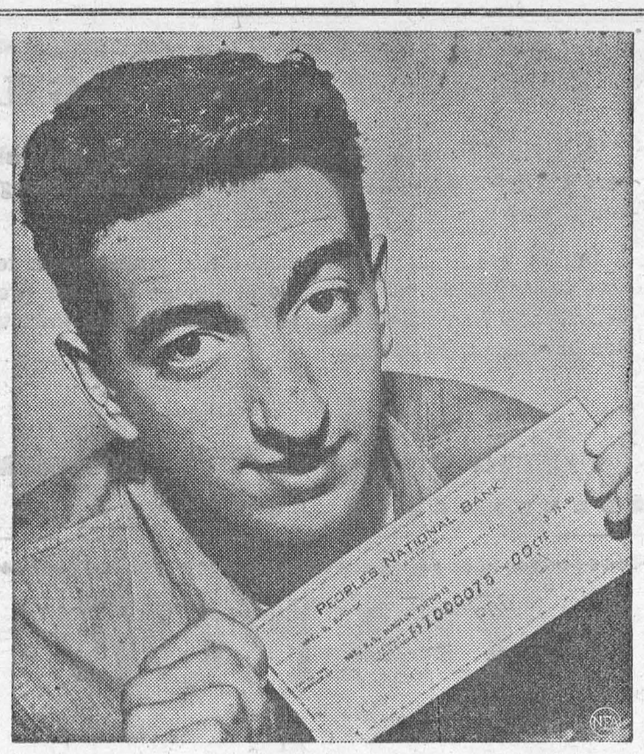
Pink Velvet Pie
(Makes one 9-inch pie)

16 graham crackers, crushed fine (1 cup)
¼ cup melted butter
1 package strawberry jelly powder
½ cup hot water
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup sugar
1 tall can undiluted evaporated milk chilled for whipping
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Mix crackers with butter and line well greased deep 9-inch pie plate, saving about ¼ cup of mixture for topping. Dissolve jelly powder in hot water. Add lemon juice and sugar and let stand. Whip chilled evaporated milk to a stiff froth. Add jelly mixture to whipped milk and continue whipping until stiff peak is formed. Stir in lemon rind. Pour over cracker crust. Top with remaining crumbs. Chill about 4 hours.



SOME ERROR—Sgt. Robert G. Burdick, stationed in Tokyo, Japan, was out of luck when he tried to cash this check. It was erroneously made out for $1000075 and also $75, depending on how one looked at it. Because it was half right and half wrong, the check was worthless. Burdick got the check from his mother.

What the Baby Saw May Have Cost His Life

All of Britain was shocked by the news that the three-year-old son of Samuel Savile Kent, of Road Hill House, near Trowbridge, Wiltshire, had been taken from his cot during the previous night, brutally murdered, and hidden in a pit in the garden. It was on June 30th, 1860. Medical evidence established that he had been suffocated, then cruelly stabbed and his throat had been cut.

His nurse, Elizabeth Gough, who slept only nine feet from him, swore that she had heard nothing. His father and mother, who slept in the next room, made similar statements, so did the six adults occupying the floor above. Yet it soon became obvious that the crime could only have been committed by one or more of these nine.

In the house at the time were four children by Kent's first wife (two elder daughters, Constance, aged sixteen, and schoolboy William) and the children of the second marriage (the murdered child, Savile, his sister, Eveline), the nurse and two housemaids and other staff.

What manner of man was this Samuel Kent, fifty-nine, inspector of factories for the West of England? Evidently a domineering philanderer type who soon left his first wife in the seclusion of her own room and carried on an affair with the good-looking nurse, Mary Pratt, engaged to look after the children. Gradually, he handed over to her the household management, and asserted, unjustly, that the wife had been kept secluded because she was insane.

In May, 1852, shortly after he had taken Baynton House, East Coulston, near Westbury, Mary Pratt left the family for the first time to visit friends in Devonshire. The next day Mrs. Kent, who had been in good health, was suddenly seized by terrible pains, and died in great agony three days later — according to the local doctor, from an internal obstruction. Mary returned immediately, and in places where the Kents had previously lived suspicion grew rife that she and Kent had brought about the wife's end.

For fifteen months, Mary continued to live there as governess. Then, in August, 1853, the family went up to London, where she married Kent at Lewisham Church. The next year they moved to Road Hill House. Re-investigating the whole case in her absorbing book, "Saint — with Red Hands?", Yseult Bridges shows that, once many became a mother herself, her affections shifted to her own children. Her step-children she treated harshly, regarding Constance and William as encumbrances, dressing them shabbily and making drudges of the elder girls.

Once when Constance, just entering her teens, took up the cause of William, who was neglected and never sent to school, both were locked in their rooms for several days with little food.

Told that she would not be returning to school, Constance cut off her long red hair and in an old suit of William's ran off with him to Bristol, hoping to find there a ship to take them to their elder brother, Edward, officer in a ship serving the West Indian islands. Footsore and hungry, they were sent back from Bath by the police and thrashed on their return.

Despite all this, Constance appears to have been always tender to her little step-brother, Savile, and loved smaller children. She was a serious, thoughtful girl.

By the fateful June of 1860, the nurse, Elizabeth Gough, had been with the family some months. She was an attractive girl of twenty-one, recently a lady's maid — and, it is alleged, Kent's mistress, like Mary when she was governess. Miss Bridges, in fact, points out, two astonishing parallels in Kent's life:

(A) 1.—In 1844, when Mary Pratt was engaged as nurse, the first Mrs. Kent was thirty-seven and expecting a baby. 2.—She had three children living: two girls and a boy. 3.—She had been married sixteen years. 4.—Mary was twenty-one.

(B) 1.—In 1860, when Elizabeth Gough was engaged as nurse, the second Mrs. Kent was thirty-seven and expecting a baby. 2—She had three children living: two girls and a boy. 3.—She had been Kent's mistress for sixteen years. 4.—Elizabeth was twenty-one.

No less astonishing was the behaviour of the chief people concerned. Elizabeth said she noticed that the child was not in his cot at 5 a.m., thought perhaps Mrs. Kent had heard him cry and taken him to her room, so did not inform her till 7.15 a.m. The upper bedclothes had been remade and smoothed, obviously by a practised hand.

Mrs. Kent gave no immediate orders for the grounds to be searched when a drawing-room window was found to have been opened — from the inside, not forced. Kent lay in bed for some time before sending word to the village constable, and driving four miles to Trowbridge to inform Police Superintendent Foley. At Southwick, on the way, he told the turnpike keeper, "I have had a child stolen and carried away in a blanket." He also mentioned the blanket to the policeman's wife, though later he denied any reference to it.

This was remarkable because the body, wrapped in the blanket, was not found until after he had left.

Foley so bungled his inquiries that plenty of time was left to remove clues. A woman's blood-stained nightdress, found in the unlighted boiler-stove, vanished unaccountably. Kent was actually able to lock in the kitchen two policemen detailed to watch for anyone going to reclaim this clue.

In the end both Constance and the nurse, Gough, were charged with the murder. But they were not committed for trial owing to insufficient evidence. The coroner was a friend of Kent who had often been entertained at his house. The murder remained unsolved.

In 1865, Constance entered an Anglican House of Retreat. Then came the amazing sequel. Under the spell of prayer and fasting she impulsively confessed to the murder. At the trial which followed she insisted on pleading guilty, and was sentenced to death — a sentence later commuted to life imprisonment.

Was she really guilty or, deluded by religious hysteria, merely expiating the sin of another — her father? Miss Bridges' theory is this: Kent, in his secret intrigue with the nurse, had formed the habit of visiting her in the nursery late at night.

Little Savile was a precocious child and a tale-bearer. He woke, saw them together and immediately cried out.

Frantic at the thought of being discovered, Kent snatched a piece of the nurse's clothing (found with the body), held it over the child's mouth to prevent his screaming, and accidentally suffocated him, then cut his throat and stabbed him before disposing of the body.

Why? Because of recent years there had been some throat-slitting crimes in the district, evidently the work of a maniac who had never been caught, and this might be assumed to be one of them — hence the opened drawing-room window.

Carefully sifting clues and testimony overlooked at the time, and the evidence at inquest and trial Miss Bridges makes a fascinating study of this grim mystery, one of the most gripping in the annals of crime.

One wonders if there was not another unsolved mystery in his first wife's death?

Goats That Have Lost Their Smell

Four very puzzled billy-goats are wandering round a hill in Connecticut too confused to nibble even a tempting jam tin. The reason: they've lost their smell.

They were fed with chlorophyllin tablets by their owner, Dr. Charles Hoeffle, a veterinary surgeon of Wilton, Connecticut.

Before the chlorophyll was added to their diet the four buck goats — two Alpines, a Toggenburg and a Nubian — had an aroma which was overpowering at thirty yards.

Even after they had been scrubbed with detergents their perfume was such that their best friends would have stayed silent — and away.

After the chlorophyllin was given to them they were so effectively deodorized that Dr. Hoeffle had to hold his nose right down on their coats before he could detect a faint trace of odour.

Fired by Dr. Hoeffle's success, other Americans are reported to be experimenting with—skunks!

NOTHING TO SNEEZE AT — Until Jack Frost "cures" all hay fever sufferers for another year, these 80 needles and some 20 serums will look good to hapless sneezers. Used in lengthy allergy tests, they're viewed by amazed 10-year-old Robert Blumert.

Snooping In World's Icebox

Slashing from the west through the ice cap which sits atop the world, the icebreaker Burton Island made an extensive survey of thee northland this summer, making a study of the ice breaker in the Bering Sea and Bering Straits of the far north. Scientists accompanied the expedition to collect sea water and ice for further tests and analysis. Another icebreaker, the Coast Guard's Northwind, cut through from the east to cross the path and thus make the two ships first to complete the passage of McClure Strait. It was a joint Canadian-U.S. project

PARIS FASHION REACTION — HELLO MME. STRING BEAN

By Rosette Hargrave, NEA Paris Fashion Writer

Paris (NEA) — The appearance on the fashion scene of "Madame String Bean" would appear to have caused more of a sensation in Canada or the United States than in her native land.

The majority of Frenchmen are inclined to take the vagaries of fashion czar Christian Dior in the same philosophical spirit as they would any other new school of art. Few would be ready to take up arms for the cause.

Nevertheless, the H-line is being commented upon pretty widely, not only in the woman's page of Parisian and provincial dailies but also in the sober weeklies.

"Express," a political publication, devotes a half page to it. After explaining the cycle of any one fashion, the writer concludes: "The 'String Bean' lady, as she appears at her birth, is supremely elegant, supremely boring, supremely joyless with her effaced bosom and narrowed shoulders. But let us take heart: she will get over this phase.

"When this fashion comes down into the Parisian streets, it will do so bereft of all exaggeration. Remember the aggressive New Look? The strangled waistline, bulging hips and skirts swishing around the ankles, once they had been broken in like a pair of new shoes by the Parisienne, gave place to the youthful swinging dresses which every woman has worn since 1947."

By 1956, say the experts, the New Look will be as old hat as the dodo. It will have lasted 10 years, the life span of any one style. By then the "string bean," inspired by the Giotto frescoes Vertes, successful painter, poster artist and cartoonist, says: and Japanese prints, will have been adapted and adopted.

Meanwhile Dior so far has received about 50 letters (less than when the New Look was launched), about equally divided for and against from people at home and abroad.

Those in favor acclaim the "new elegance of the bustline"; those against protest against the "suppression of woman's most charming asset" (from an American whose name cannot be disclosed).

The following cable, however, caused quite a stir in the Dior entourage: "I hereby challenge you to a duel on behalf of the American man. I have glamorized and transformed the natural and full bustline. I am insulted by your recent attempt to flatten the bust and feel compelled to fight for the rights of the American male who enjoys the glory of an untrammelled and unhampered bosom. I await your reply as to choice of weapons."

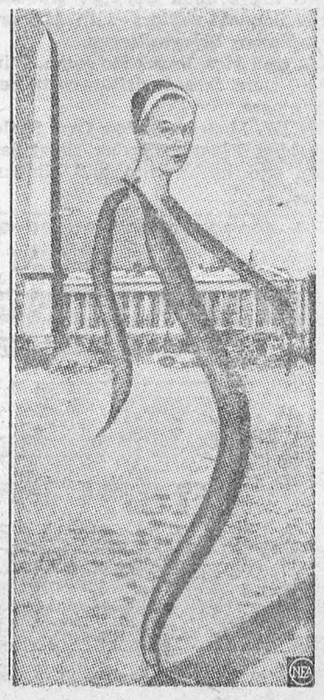
To which Dior replied: "A cable demands a cable. Thank you for your interest but pins, needles and scissors are weapons too dangerous to fight with. Best regards." A Dior spokesman declared the author of the first cable was not a manufacturer of brassieres or falsies.

Perhaps the most pertinent appreciation of Dior's "Madame Haricot Vert" appeared in "Samedi Soir," popular Parisian weekly, by seasoned author Paul Reboux: "The advantage of the H-line is that it does away with fraud. If a woman's charms are suppressed, a man no longer runs the risk of being duped."

"Fashions pass but the bosom remains."

But M. Josipovici, author, movie producer and husband of beautiful actress Viviane Romance, protests: "I am against this obsession of an elongated silhouette. Above all else, women must remain feminine. The H-line is merely an androgynous complex (something to do with girls and boys looking alike—Ed.) from which Leonardo da Vinci suffered."

Author and playwright Jean Cocteau tries to get to the heart of the matter: "What is meant by 'raising the bust'? What would women do if they were ordered to wear their bosom below their waistline, for example? Women are prone to think too much of their outward appearance or line. They neglect their innermost line."



That Lengthy Arm Of Coincidence

A girl slipped on a pavement. The young man who helped her up found she had twisted her ankle and popped her into his tradesman's van so that he could drive her home. He met her sister and later the girl with the sprained ankle met his brother. It made a recent double wedding in Stoke Newington.

Scarcely less strange was the meeting of Sheila Fox with handsome Keith Nicol. He went to South Africa to set up as a physiotherapist. Sheila, a nurse, went there on holiday. They both had an invitation to the same dinner-party in Cape Town and soon found, while chatting, that they both lived in Richmond, in the same street.

"What number?" asked Keith. "I'm at 35."

"I'm at 37!" said Sheila.

"That's next door!" gasped Keith—and now the two neighbours who never exchanged a word while in London have married and set up house together in Cape Town.

Mrs. Clara Phillips will never forget a certain cold spell during the war. Her water-pipes burst and she rushed next door to her bachelor neighbour. "Mrs." was then "Miss" — and thanks to that flaw in the plumbing the Phillips family of seven is now one of Manchester's happiest.

It takes a lot to make a successful marriage — yet it's the little things that count. When Tommy Tapsell found a hole in his sock, he happened to tell Clara Stoneham. She said, "Let me darn it!" The banns were soon read — and yet another couple found happiness.

Or take the case of the young man who last year tried to steal a kiss when he found himself alone with a girl in a train compartment on the way to the Midlands. Eagerly, he said, "I hope to be seeing a lot of you." Murmured the girl, "You certainly will." And within a few days he found himself hauled into court and fined for assault. The girl was a policewoman.

Luckily, the story has a happier ending. After the case, the young man asked to see the girl and profusely expressed his apologies. Then he asked if he really could have a kiss—and she consented. In due course the wedding bells rang.

You'll Relish Hamburgers Even More When You Use Relishes

BY DOROTHY MADDOX

ALMOST everyone likes hamburgers. And they taste even better with these easy-to-prepare special relishes.

Mayonnaise Pickle Relish
(Makes 1 cup)

One-half cup mayonnaise or salad dressing, ½ cup sweet pickle relish, 2 teaspoons grated onion, freshly ground pepper to taste. In a small bowl or a jar, combine mayonnaise or salad dressing with remaining ingredients; blend well. Cover and keep in the refrigerator until time to serve with hamburgers.

Mustard Mayonnaise
(Makes 1 cup)

One-half cup mayonnaise or salad dressing, ½ cup prepared mustard, 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish.

In a small bowl or a jar, combine mayonnaise or salad dressing with remaining ingredients; blend well. Cover and keep in the refrigerator until time to serve with hamburgers.

Ever here of Catch-a-Fellow Salad? It's quite a dish—whether or not it catches a fellow.

Catch-a-Fellow Salad
(Serves 6)

Six hard-cooked eggs, chopped; ½ cup finely chopped celery, ½ cup finely chopped pimento, 2 tablespoons chopped, green onion; 1 teaspoons prepared mustard, ½ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing, 6 large tomatoes, salt and pepper to taste, crisp salad greens.

In a bowl, combine eggs, celery, pimento, onion, mustard and mayonnaise or salad dressing; mix thoroughly. Cover and chill several hours.

Hamburgers, the any-time, any-place treat nearly everyone enjoys, acquire enhanced taste appeal when served with relishes.

For each salad, turn the tomato stem end down and cut into quarters, not quite through. Spread tomato quarters out a little on the crisp salad green and spoon egg salad mixture into the tomato roses. Or cut each tomato crosswise, into 3 slices. Arrange the largest tomato slice on the crisp salad greens. Top with egg salad mixture, then with second tomato slice, egg salad mixture and remaining tomato slice.

THE BIG PILE—To the right of Webster's unabridged dictionary lies a stack of publications printed in the development of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and the last 10 copies of the Congressional Record. They are examples of the large amount of material the Government Printing Office in Washington, D.C., had to put out in the last session of Congress.

THE FARM FRONT
by John Russell

A simpler poultry ration is naturally the goal most chicken "aficiandos" are aiming for; so these remarks, by Stanley B. Smith of the University of Rhode Island, may be of interest to some of our readers.

Leave the baking powder out of a cake, and chances are it won't turn out so good. The same thing is usually true of a poultry feed — leave out an essential ingredient, and egg production and hatchability can hit the skids.

But now, after five tests, we've found out something that might save you money and work in the future; you can leave all the animal protiens like fish meal and meat scraps out of a breeder ration without doing a bit of harm to the hen, or to egg production and hatchability. In fact, sometimes we get even better results from a simple ration than from a complicated one.

To show you how we streamlined the old-type ration down to a simple one for our tests at the University of Rhode Island, here are the ingredients for each:

The biggest change we made was to substitute butyl-fermentation products for the oats, wheat middlings, meat scraps, and red-fish meal.

New-type simple ration:	Yellow corn Alfalfa meal Soybean oil meal Steamed bone meal Mineral & vitamin mix Puverized oats Wheat middlings Meat scraps Red-fish meal
Yellow corn
Alfalfa meal
Soybean oil meal
Steamed bone meal
Mineral & vitamin mix
B-fermentation products
Old-type

One of the biggest surprises we get when we feed the simple ration is that it dosn't lower egg hatchability. Hatchability did drop when we first tried the simple formula, but then we added 2% alfalfa meal and 2% butyl-fermentation products to supply A and B-complex vitamins, and hatchability rose again. Also, the hens laid larger eggs.

With the coming of fall, the majority of pullets will be approaching maturity. Now is the time to make preparations to help to insure the health of the birds throughout the coming laying year.

The laying house should be thoroughly cleared out — the old litter removed, and the walls and floor scrubbed with a hot water and lye solution, or some other satisfactory disinfectant. Roosts, nests, and other places where the birds congregate should be treated for mites. Old crank case oil painted on these areas will supply adequate protection against these parasites.

After cleaning, fresh litter is added to the house. Chopped straw or wood shavings is satisfactory for this purpose. Ample watering space must be provided for the young pullets, and four to six inches of feeder space is recommended. Three to four square feet of floor space is the requirement per bird — heavy birds such as Barred Rocks or Light Sussex need four square feet, while the light breeds, such as Leghorns or Leghorn crosses, will do well at three or three and a half square feet per bird.

Before the pullets are to be housed, make a check to determine if lice are present, and if so, treat the birds. Similarly, if there is evidence of worms, treatment should be carried out while the pullets are still on range.

Plan to house the pullets when they approach 25 per cent egg production on the range. It is wise to house in the morning so that the birds will become acquainted with their new quarters before dark. This may eliminate losses due to crowding in a strange location. Cull the pullets when housing, removing all unthrifty and sickly looking birds.

* * *

Pullets coming into production have a three-fold strain on their systems. (1) the maintenance of their bodies, (2) increasing their body weight to mature weight, and (3) egg production. To supply the birds with their needs during this critical period, top quality feed must be used. A 17 per cent protein ration (22 per cent laying ration 50:50 with scratch grains) should be fed at the onset of egg production and continued for a month to 6 weeks, after which the ration may be reduced to 15 per cent protein. Oyster shell and fresh water must be available to the pullets at all times.

That 'Sixth Sense' Is Mystifying

An Italian woman, with deep-set eyes and a high fore head, seriously believes that every time she suffers from a severe headache it presages an earthquake in some part of the world.

She declares that she knew in advance about the recent Greek earthquake — because on the day before she had a very bad headache. She also claims that she foretold in this way a severe earthquake in China.

Her strange power to sense catastrophe in advance is puzzling scientists. But people who have talked to the dark, attarctive Signorina Adelma Romanelli are convinced that she genuinely senses impending seismic disaster in remote parts of the globe.

Often the most ordinary people have been proved to possess an ability to "see" visions of events destined to happen at enormous distances from them.

Take the case of Mrs. Canner, an American woman living in Washington, who was walking home one day when she stumbled and fell, scattering the papers she was carrying in all directions. She got up, unhurt, collected the papers and walked the remaining fifty yards to her house.

By the first post next morning she received a letter from a friend living 250 miles away who had foreseen her accident in a strange way at least twenty-four hours before it occurred.

"As I was sitting in my room, I felt a sudden sensation of shock," wrote the friend. "Before my eyes I saw the whole incident — saw you stumble and fall and the papers scatter, saw you pick them up.

"You had on your black skirt and velvet waistband. It was all so plain to me that I sat down at once to write this letter to you."

Mrs. Canner was so impressed — even her friend's description of what she was wearing was accurate — that she handed it to a scientist who was investigating other reported instances of second sight. His careful investigations showed beyond question that Mrs. Canner's friend possessed some inexplicable sixth sense.

He found that she had "seen" a railway disaster three whole days before it took place, naming the place and several victims who were famous and whose faces she therefore recognized.

There was also the young and wealthy Budapest business man who was rung up early one morning by an agitated friend.

"Whatever you do, don't sleep in your usual bed on the night of September 20th, exactly a fortnight from to-day," his friend warned. "As I shaved this morning, a strange feeling suddenly oppressed me and I saw in my mirror a vision of you being killed by that heavily framed picture of a Spanish beauty which hangs on the wall above your pillow. And the date on the calendar on the mantlepiece in your bedroom was September 20th."

The business man only laughat him. "You've been working too hard — you need a holiday," he said. "Take one and you'll see no visions."

Reluctantly, the friend took his advice. But as he shaved on the first morning of his holiday, the vision came again. He warned his friend by telephone, but was scoffed at. So he wrote him a letter that day, September 17th, giving him full details of the tragedy which he was sure would occur in three days' time.

It did. The business man was killed instantly when the picture fell on him as he lay in bed at 11.30 p.m. on September 20th. His housekeeper found the warning letter describing in advance exeactly what happened, lying crumpled in his waste-paper basket.

Sceptics sometimes try to laugh off these stories of people who claim to "see" things in advance. But they always find it impossible to explain them away. It is not a question of coincidence.

No Need For Fear

On every side today there seems to be a spirit of unrest and doubt.

Normally clear-thinking people scan the news with apprehension and the more they read of national and world affairs the more beclouded become the issues.

On one hand there are the "don'ts" and on the other the "do's."

One national leader has only to express himself on any international question when, barely before his words are assimilated by the public at large, another lets go a broadside contrary in every way to the first individual's line of thought.

No wonder Mr. and Mrs. Every Day Citizen are confused and filled with foreboding.

It is time we got off this merry-go-round and returned to the fundamentals of living and thinking.

One doesn't have to wait for the opinions of any leader of the moment, acclaimed thinker or heralder world affairs analyst.

The answer to peace, contentment, serenity, and a full untroubled life, has been with us for over 2,000 years.

"For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but to power, and of love, and of a sound mind."

You will find it in II Timothy 1: 7—the answer to all unrest.—Clarkson (Wash.) Herald.

OBEYED ORDER

The wife of Lord Chancellor Hardwick once asked his bailiff if he could procure for a state dinner a pig of such and such dimensions.

The bailiff burst into the drawing room where she was entertaining guests, announcing:

"I've been to the market, my lady, and I've bought a pig of exactly your size."

Memory Selection: Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven. Matthew 5:16.

Through the past three months we have covered practically every activity that contributes to the Christian's growth, beginning with the normal early life of the Saviour as our example and proceeding to the things that help us to grow inwardly and outwardly. We have considered Bible study, prayer, worship, self-discipline. We have taken up fellowship, giving and service to the church, to industry, to our community, and have endeavoured to see how God's love diffused through all our being gives meaning and effectivness to all that has gone before. Now we come to witnessing.

Dr. Daniel Steele once said that if every pulpit in the country was turned into a witness stand for just one Sunday, there would be a revival of religion on a national scale in a week's time. The early church was a witnessing church. They went everywhere gossiping the gospel. A publisher was discussing how a book becomes a best-seller. It clicks with the people and they begin telling their friends. The best type of advertising is when a man who has read the book enthusiastically tells his friends about it.

O that we may have the Holy Spirit as did these disciples. They were salt cleansing and preserving their generation. They were light dispelling the darkness of sin's domination. They were witnesses telling about Jesus and his power to save.

We have a great responsibility to spread the Good News. This is the most important task of every preacher and layman. Let us get busy.
