$10 million tourism industry threatened by aquatic weeds

by Lesley Cadham

SOUTH LANCASTER — The 230 h.p. motor boat skims easily over Lake St. Francis. Suddenly, the boat hesitates and the motor sounds like it is running out of gas.

"Weeds," mutters the driver as he heads for the motor. After a quick look to confirm his suspicions, he returns to the helm. A moment later, a clump of chopped weeds is ejected into the jetstream.

According to Raisin Region Conservation Authority General Manager Mike Lalonde, Lake St. Francis is infested with weeds which get tangled in the propellors of passing motorboats, and in fishing lines. They are unattractive and unpleasant to swim in, he adds.

The tourism industry in that area is worth about $10 million a year, said Mr. Lalonde, adding that figure comes from a recent throne speech by Premier David Peterson.

The weeds, if left unattended, could eventually be responsible for closing down area marines because the boats will not be able to reach them. Waterfront properties could be reduced in value and commercial fishermen may suffer too, says Mr. Lalonde.

Allan Flaro, part-owner of Dan's Place says, "This area is infested with Quebec residents all summer long. It's a shame because the lake, which is a big attraction, is going to pot."

The authority is currently looking for funding to purchase a weed harvester to cut boating channels in the lake.

Since 1980, the authority has harvested the weeds three times, using a harvester rented from manufacturer Limnos for $85,000 over 8-10 weeks. The Ministry of Natural Resources paid the bill, but refuses to provide permanent funding to harvest the necessary 200-300 acres each year.

"They (the ministry) said they could no longer afford to fund such a program," said Mr. Lalonde. The ministry has not offered to fund the purchase of the equipment, but is considering a one-time grant. Meanwhile, the authority will be looking into any possible funding source.

Mr. Lalonde believes annual harvesting will be a valuable project. Once they own the machinery, the authority will pay the $15,000 yearly cost of running it.

"We'll get the money wherever we can. We recognize we have a valuable program. I'm hopeful we'll be able to come to some arrangement to purchase the equipment. I hope (funding) agencies see it that way, too," said Mr. Lalonde.

The regional director for the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation has told Mr. Lalonde there is a good chance Wintario will pay 50 per cent of the purchase price. He will be meeting with a consultant from the ministry this week.

In addition, letters of concern from Lake St. Francis boaters and residents have been re-routed to the Ministry of Natural Resources, of Tourism and Recreation and to Premier Peterson.

The weeds have a nutritional value and if an annual harvesting program can be established, the authority may research the weed's potential as fertilizer.

BAD WEEDS—The driver of the boat propelled by this 230 h.p. motor removes weeds which become entangled in the propellor. Dan's Place part-owner Allan Flaro says he's been repairing a lot of motors this year and he attributes the problems to dense weeds in Lake St. Francis.

Lochiel youngster found drowned on family farm

LOCHIEL — A three-year-old Lochiel Township girl died after falling into an old cesspool near her home, Sunday.

Alisha Vander Byl's parents, Tony and Jo-Ann of Lot 23, Conc. 4, noticed their daughter missing early in the afternoon. After searching the house and immediate area, they called the Lancaster OPP.

Alisha Vander Byl

The youngster was found at 6:30 p.m. in an unmarked cesspool surrounded by tall grass, after a 4 1/2 hour search. The search party numbered 30 and consisted of OPP officers, family and friends.

The cesspool was eight feet deep and six feet wide and covered with logs and planks. The girl is believed to have fallen through a one foot diameter hole. The cesspool has since been filled in.

Fleurette Cadieux, who lives across the road from the Vander Byl's farm, says she helped search for the little girl. Mr. Vander Byl's brother, Adrien, was searching near the barn when he fell into a waist-deep water-filled hole. The body was found after the Alexandria fire department pumped water from the hole.

Mrs. Vander Byl said she and her husband previously found several holes on the property and filled them in. They were unaware this hole existed and have contacted the farm's former owner to find out if other holes exist. The Vander Byls have two other children, aged one and two.

Const. Gilles Ruest says foul play is not suspected. Const. Brad Eamer is investigating the death.

SD&G elementary school enrolment increases for first time in 17 years

CORNWALL—For the first time in more than 15 years education officials are reporting an increase in elementary school enrolment throughout Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry.

Combined elementary school enrolment for the SD&G County Board of Education and the SD&G Roman Catholic Separate School Board totalled 14,890, an increase of 254 over last year.

By themselves, the figures do not seem impressive, but they are significant considering the fact that the public board alone has recorded a reduction in enrolment every year since its inception in 1969. More significantly, the public elementary school increase seems to be heaviest in the Kindergarten and Junior Kindergarten levels, suggesting an increased birth rate that may have a positive impact on the system for years to come.

The seperate school board reported the largest elementary boost, jumping 166 from 1985 to a new total of 8,714, for a 1.9 per cent increase. The real advance came from the board's English language schools, where enrolment increased 4.9 per cent, up 193 pupils, to a new total of 4,132.

In sharp contrast to the English panel, the separate board's French language schools declined in enrolment again in 1986, losing 27 students for a new low of 4,582.

Rosaire Léger, director of education for the public board, said Tuesday the elementary enrolment figures gathered Sept. 17 were slightly higher than what administration officials had projected. Both boards will have "official" attendance figures from Sept. 30, but neither expects any significant changes.

The secondary schools, with the exception of St. Joseph's in Cornwall, all recorded reduced enrolment, continuing a trend that began in 1978, said Mr. Léger.

Secondary enrolment with the public board totalled 7,170, a drop of 58 from 1985. The record year for the board was 1977 when more than 9,300 attended public high schools in SD&G.

Glengarry District High School (GDHS) dropped 23 to a 1986 total of 441. GDHS's sister school in Alexandria, Ecole Secondaire Regionale Glengarry (ESRG) came down 38 to a new total of 460.

In Williamstown, Char-Lan District High School dropped 20 to 298, while Tagwi Secondary School near Monkland lost only four pupils, reporting an enrolment of 526.

The separate board's only high school, St. Joseph's in Cornwall, increased substantially from 184 last year to 250 in 1986. The increase was largely because of the addition of Grade 12 to the school, which continues to expand due to equalized funding from the Ontario government.

In the separate board's elementary schools the biggest decline was at Iona Academy in St. Raphael's, where enrolment dropped from 387 to 301.

This is misleading, however, since St. Joseph's School in Alexandria, which previously operated as a satellite of Iona, has become an independent school. Attendance at St. Joseph's, expanded to include Junior Kindergarten through Grade 4, has soared from 19 to 119. Combined, Iona and St. Joseph's show a real increase of 14 students.

The largest real decrease of all elementary schools in Glengarry was at Alexander Separate School in Alexandria, where enrolment dropped from 199 to 178. In Glen Robertson, Ecole Lauriere Carriere dropped 11 to 145. Perpetual Secours in Alexandria dropped four to 195. St. Joseph's in Lancaster recorded a decline of five, for a 1986 enrolment of 129.

Four more separate elementary schools in the county reported increased enrolment. North Lancaster's Ste. Therese jumped 13 to 113; Ecole Elda Rouleau just outside Alexandria increased 12 students to 294; Ste. Marie in Green Valley added 10 students for a new total of 231 and St. Bernard's in

Party balloon flies in from California

Bert Watts received a message from the Creekside Elementary School in Stockton, California, Sunday morning. They didn't communicate via mail, telephone or telegram, they tied it to a yellow balloon and let it fly.

Mr. Watts was leaving his home on Dornie Road in Kenyon on his way to church, when he noticed a balloon tangled in some trees.

A small attached tag aread, "Join our PTA." The school's name, address and telephone number followed and printed at the bottom of the tag was, "Please write and let us know how far this balloon travelled."

The Glengarry News called the school and Principal Ed Cattuzzo was shocked and pleased to hear the balloon had travelled so far—about 3,000 miles. Stockton is roughly 35 miles south of Sacramento.

Mr. Cattuzzo said the school's second grade class set 450 balloons free at 11 a.m. Friday, as part of a PTA sponsored membership drive. The school has done this before, but he believes the farthest a balloon has travelled is Bakersfield, California.

Liberal delegates say no to leadership review

by Dann Rogers

ST. ISIDORE DE PRESCOTT — Most Glengarry-Prescott-Russell Liberal delegates will oppose a leadership review at their party's national convention in November.

Members elected five delegates to the convention and of the nine candidates, the four who spoke strongly in support of Liberal leader John Turner were defeated.

Those who were elected had spoken in favor of "renewing" the party.

No one openly opposed the leader, however. Interviewed after the vote, most said they were opposed to a leadership review.

Mr. Turner's most vocal supporter was M.P. Don Boudria, a man who had campaigned actively for Jean Chretien two years earlier.

"We are not choosing a leader, we are confirming our support. My support is for John Turner and I hope the delegates are all solidly for Mr. Turner," says Boudria.

At the 1984 Liberal leadership election, Mr. Boudria and four of the other seven delegates supported Jean Chretien.

"It's a fair question to ask why I support Mr. Turner now since I actively supported Mr. Chretien in the leadership election," says Mr. Boudria.

"It's because I have worked with Mr. Turner in the House of Commons, at committee meetings and drumming up support after the election defeat.

"I know how hard John Turner works. He could have left this party after the defeat and nobody would have blamed him. But he stuck with it and the Liberal Party is back and we are going to win the next election with John Turner," he says.

Alexandria delegate Blair Williams, a policy worker for the Liberals, thinks party solidarity will last through the convention.

"Every thinking Liberal knows we have to present a unified front and solid support for the leadership going into the next election," says Mr. Williams.

"Some people may have doubts about John Turner, but for the sake of re-election, they will be quiet about it," he says.

Mr. Williams was responsible for getting two of the 28 policy resolutions on the agenda at the November convention.

One calls for the Liberal Party to commit itself to reforming the tax system and the other to protecting agricultural supply management in any trade negotiations.

"Make the tax system simpler and

Police charge Alexandria man with two weekend auto thefts

An Alexandria man wanted by police for the theft of two vehicles was apprehended early Sunday morning by Hawkesbury OPP.

Roma LaRose, 24, of 22 Peel St. in Alexandria was found trapped inside his mother's car, which had rolled over three times in a ditch on Hwy. 417. The car, a 1982 Mercury valued at $3,500, was completely destroyed in the one-car accident. Yvonne LaRose had reported the car stolen at 5:25 a.m.

Mr. LaRose was later charged by Alexandria police with theft of the car and by Maxville OPP with the theft of a truck from Fassifern.

The truck, a 1981 Datsun pickup, was reported stolen from Campeau Auto Sales late Wednesday night or early Thursday morning. The truck was recovered later Thursday in Alexandria but a shotgun reported to be inside was missing.

The gun was recovered from the home of Marc Seguin, 42 Sinclair St., Alexandria, on Sunday.

The arrival of several police cruisers at the Séguin home caused some commotion in the neighborhood, but the public should not jump to conclusions, Police Chief Don Eastop said Tuesday.

"The gun was found in Mr. Séguin's home, but he did not know it was there," said the chief. "He's not involved in any way, shape or form. He wasn't aware of it at all."

Mr. Séguin told The News he was shocked when the police arrived at his home, but readily gave them permission to conduct a search.

At one time there were six police vehicles in front of his home, he said. Police officers were outside talking and taking pictures of the house and were there most of the day, he added.

Cruiser gets bruiser

Well, October is here andf it's time to drink beer. Every year at this time people who have gone dry until now sell all their worldly possessions and fly to Munich.

When they get to Munich they spend all their money and wind up sleeping on train station lockers or wherever else they fall down.

This is not healthy. The good people at the Lions Club have decided to save us the expense and burden of having to travel to Munich to attend the Oktoberfest or visit the Hofbrahaus.

They are organizing an Oktoberfest party at the eglise Sacre Coeur hall Oct. 11. Admission is $4 and the entertainment will be provided by the Bavarian Swing Band.

We haven't been able to confirm if the beer will be served in those litre glass steins that everyone loves to steal, but if they are, be sure not to take any.

The new police cruiser got a bruiser. The right front fender was dented at 1:20 a.m. Sunday after Const. Paul Deveau responded to a call saying there was a disturbance in front of the Alexandria Hotel.

Five females, three from Alexandria and two from Cornwall, were involved in a shoving match and one girl threw another into the cruiser, causing $250 damage. The two Cornwall girls were arrested for causing a disturbance.

protect farmers through tariffs and other government programs,'' he says.

Other cures to the country's ills were voiced by guest speaker Robert Kaplan, Liberal justice critic and grandfather of the Canadian Security Intelligence Services (CSIS).

''Tonight you're picking the delegates who will give the final push to policy development. We have to be able to answer questions like how do we maximize Canadian productivity? With a rich country like ours, how come we aren't delivering the goods? How can we make the youth of today feel enthusiastic about the future?'' he asked.

After his speech, he said it was important to develop programs where students could get work experience before leaving school.

He also said CSIS and hostile governments were both actively recruiting on the country's campuses.

Mr. Kaplan spoke highly of John Turner and dismissed Prime Minister Brian Mulroney as a waffler.

''John Turner has gathered the forces and provided leadership based on integrity and honor. He has recovered the grass roots and increased our popularity in the west. He pulled us together during difficult times,'' says Mr. Kaplan.

Mr. Kaplan also spoke of the contributions of Don Boudria and other rat pack members in helping to rebuild the party.

''Only two years ago, when we were at 17 and 18 per cent in the polls, Don founded the rat pack which was so instrumental in rebuilding the Liberal Party. Don delivered a lot of criticism of the Conservatives which gave the rest of us the strength to continue. I remember being so down after the election that someone came up to me and asked ''Didn't you used to be Bob Kaplan?''

The delegates elected were: Blair Williams, Judy Wood, Kathleen Andrews, Bernard Pilon and Roger St. Denis.

The association will send nine delegates to the national convention. Four were selected before the meeting: M.P. Don Boudria, association president Pierre Aubry and two youth delegates, Don Letouzel and Sylvia Gagne. The meeting was in St. Isidore de Prescott Sept. 24.

Triplex decision next week

by Joanne Stevenson

NORTH LANCASTER — Lancaster Township Council has promised to decide about a proposed triplex on Lancaster Street in Green Valley at its next meeting October 1.

At council's Aug. 6 meeting, property owner Helene Beriault requested an exemption to existing zoning to allow construction of a multi-unit residential building. Mrs. Beriault attended council's last meeting, Sept. 24, and council agreed to delay a decision one more week in order to better guage public reaction to the triplex.

On Aug. 6, eight objectors attended the council meeting. A petition containing 24 signatures of Green Valley residents opposed to any change was delivered.

Since then, Mrs. Beriault has spoken with objectors, hoping to minimize opposition. A photo of the planned triplex shows a building similar to a single family dwelling. She hopes to be able to rent half of the main floor to her son.

However, once the exemption has been granted, no restrictions to the size and appearance of the building would be applied.

Clerk Mike Samson questioned whether the objectors opposed this one building or the idea of apartments being constructed throughout the hamlet.

''Some were worried about a big square apartment building. Others thought apartments would be allowed all over Green Valley,'' he explained.

Council will decide whether or not to approve the exemption on Oct. 1. Following the decision, both Mrs. Beriault and the opposition will be given an opportunity to appeal.

REAL'S TRUCK STOP

Over the past two years, Mike Kreuza, a resident along a private canal near Real's Truck Stop, has been expressing concern about possible pollution problems resulting from operations at the truck wash and truck stop in Curry Hill.

Earlier this summer, the Ministry of the Environment (MOE) and the health unit responded to his letters, saying no proof existed linking the truck wash to major water contamination.

According to Mr. Samson, Mr. Kreuza later contacted local MP Don Boudria who forwarded the matter to provincial Environment Minister James Bradley.

The local MOE office has since investigated and repeated its earlier stance, saying Real's operations will only produce a minimal effect on the water and insisting no sewage will be directed into the canal.

Therefore, as far as the MOE is concerned, Real's is not contributing significantly to water pollution along the private canal and Gunn's Creek.

NO TO FUNDING

The Ministry of Recreation and Tourism informed council its request for funding for a recreation field had been rejected.

At council's May 21 meeting, members of the North Lancaster Sports Club asked council to participate in a plan to construct recreation facilities near Ecole Ste. Therese. The club hoped a Wintario grant from the province would match money raised locally for the club.

At the time, the sports club promised to undertake the project with or without funding.

Baseball and soccer fields, track and field facilities, tennis courts and a parking area are planned.

Maxville came up one for a total of 86.

Combined, separate elementary schools in Glengarry Increased their enrolment by 11, with French schools up 18 and English schools down seven.

Glengarry's public elementary schools reported a total increase of three.

Williamstown jumped 22 to 280, followed by Maxville Junior Public School, which gained 15 for a new total of 241.

Martintown Public School reported the largest decline, losing 15 students compared to last year, for a new low of 109. School officials believe much of the loss is attributable to students switching to Williamstown to take advantage of the French immersion program there.

Maxville Senior Public School lost 12 students, dropping to 79, followed by Laggan, which lost seven for a new total of 160.

In Lancaster Township, where two schools were combined into one expanded building this year, enrolment was unchanged at 158. Last year Lancaster Township had 89 pupils and Lancaster Village had 69.

Government refuses funding for Glen Robertson rec hall

GLEN ROBERTSON—The Ontario Government has rejected a request from Lochiel Township for a $100,000 grant to help renovate Glen Robertson's deteriorating recreation centre.

Township council was notified of the refusal in a letter from the Ministry of Culture and Recreation last week, Reeve Ron MacDonell confirmed Tuesday.

The grant would have paid half the projected $200,000 cost for a major renovation project at the recreation centre, a former elementary school. The project would have included replacement of the roof, which has been leaking badly, causing heavy damage to the rest of the structure, updating electrical wiring, installing a new heating system, filling in a number of large windows and properly insulating the building, among other items.

A new $16,000 septic system has already been installed as part of the community's recent sewage project, with 75 per cent of the cost paid through a grant from the Ministry of the Environment. The township was left to pick up about $4,000 of the bill, said Mr. MacDonell.

Glen Robertson's recreation committee has committed itself to raising the community's $100,000 share of the project's cost, said the reeve, adding township council is not prepared to invest more money. Much of the community's share could be raised through donated labor and equipment, he explained, and the committee has already brought in a substantial amount of money, perhaps as much as $25,000.

Last week Lochiel Township submitted another application to the Ministry of Culture and Recreation for a $40,000 grant to cover the cost of a new roof. Without the roof, there remains the risk that further water damage could result in the building being abandoned, said the reeve.

"We got to get that roof fixed, at least," said Mr. MacDonell. "That much is essential before winter. The roof has to be done to save the building. If we don't fix it, the building maybe lost."

He said he had spoken with government officials and was hoping for a positive response to the application before council's next meeting on Oct. 14.

If this application is also rejected, "we'll just have to hope for the best and apply again next year." There is no hope for the project to proceed without substantial government support.

The repairs were recommended following an architectural study of the building completed at the township's request by Kostuch Engineering of Cornwall earlier this year. The study followed a request by a local senior citizens group that repairs be completed as quickly as possible and was needed before the government would consider a grant application.

The engineers said replacing the building with a similar sized structure would cost at least twice as much as the repairs.

Mr. MacDonell said the government had received more than $80 million worth of applications for similar funding under the Wintario program, but there was only $15 million available.

The reeve conceded not everyone was in agreement with the project. A number of Lochiel residents outside Glen Robertson have expressed opposition, but most residents of the hamlet seem to be in favor, he said.

He personally supported the project, he said, provided local residents can raise their share of the cost on their own. The township could not afford to pick up the tab, he added, but could assist with some items, such as hauling.

Money is tight," he said. "That's the main problem."

The reeve said he and other members of council may take a look at Lancaster Village's new recreation hall, completed earlier this year at a cost of about $60,000.

"It's a lot cheaper," he conceded, "but the Glen Robertson recreation centre will have a lot more space."

FIRE POWER—Aime Lalonde of Arrow Fire Equipment gives the keys to Lancaster's new water tanker truck to Lancaster Township Reeve Bernie McDonell. Lancaster Township purchased the $12,000 truck to assist the fire department in fighting fires in outlying areas.

Lancaster gets new watertruck

LANCASTER — Lancaster Township Reeve Bernie McDonell accepted the keys to a new fire truck for the Lancaster Village fire department, Friday.

Lancaster Village provides fire protection to the township.

Lancaster Township realized there was a need for more water to fight fires in outlying areas, so they purchased the $12,000 GMC water tanker truck to complement the village's equipment.

The old truck held 900 gallons and the new one has the capacity for 1,200.

In addition, the firefighters raised money to buy a tank—which resembles an above ground swimming pool—to hold another 1,500 gallons.

The fire department will set up the tank at the scene of a fire. The new water tanker will fill it and head out for more water.

Lancaster Village Fire Chief Roger Menard says, he feels there are buildings they could have saved if they'd had the extra water.

"It was frustrating when we knew that if we'd just had a little more water, we'd have been able to save a place," he says.

Village Reeve Milton MacDonald, lieutenant in the fire department, says, "We've had a fire cornered and we've had to leave it. When we've come back, it's going strong again."

Hopefully, they'll be able to save more buildings with the new truck, says Mr. MacDonald.

The tanker was purchased from Arrow Fire Equipment.

The Lancaster Fire Department began dousing fires about 35 years ago. At the time, they used an old cattle truck carrying two 200-gallon tanks. In 1960, the village purchased a fire truck with a 600-gallon tank. They graduated to a 900-gallon tank in 1978.

The fire department consists of the chief, captain, two lieutenants and 20 volunteer firefighters.

Local girl in finals

Natalie Lapierre, 18, of Alexandria, who was crowned Miss 1986 Ontario Quality Teen last May will be competing for the title of Miss 1986 Canada Quality Teen this October.

The program will be held October 8-11 at the Howard Johnson's Airport Hotel in Toronto.

At the pageant, Miss Lapierre and 90 other young ladies aged 14-19 will be honored and recognized for their achievements both in school and their community.

Miss Lapierre and the other contestants must maintain at least a "B" grade average in school and participate in community volunteer service work, helping the needy and less fortunate.

During the pageant weekend, the contestants will participate in a Volunteer Service Seminar by the Muscular Dystrophy Association of Canada as well as participate in a T.E.E.N. fund raiser for MDAC. The funds are being raised by each contestant in her own community and every penny of it will go to Muscular Dystrophy.

The contestants are judged in five categories, all with equal value: Scholastic Achievement, Volunteer Service, Talent Demonstration or Speech Presentation, Personal Interview, and Formal Presentation. There is no swimsuit competition. Awards will be given in each of the areas of competition.

Among the prizes awarded to the new Miss 1986 Canada Quality T.E.E.N. is an all-expense paid trip to Kansas City, Missouri, to be a special guest at the national Miss T.E.E.N. pageant in the United States. The winner will also receive a $1,000 cash scholarship, clothing, jewellery, hair care products fragrances, cosmetics and an 11x14 portrait. She will also receive her official crown, sash and trophy to keep forever.

Natalie is presently attending Ottawa University in the Social Sciences Dep't with a major in Psychology. Her volunteer service work includes candystriping at Glengarry Memorial Hospital, remotivation at the Community Nursing Home and other activities which did not require long term services.

Gets 30 days in jail

A Martintown man was sentenced to 30 days in jail Thursday in Alexandria Provincial Court, after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Christopher Aubin, 22, of RR2, Martintown, was charged July 6 in Charlottenburgh Township. An OPP officer was dispatched to a single-vehicle accident near Martintown on Cty. Rd. 20. When the officer arrived at the scene of the accident, the vehicle of the accused was in the ditch. Mr. Aubin had tried to drive the vehicle out of the ditch, but his back wheels became stuck further in the ground.

When the officer approached the vehicle, Mr. Aubin was sleeping and lying across the front seat. The officer had difficulty trying to wake him up. After he woke up, the man was unsteady on his feet outside the vehicle.

Mr. Aubin was taken to Lancaster OPP for a breathalyzer test and his readings were 178 and 175 mgs. of alcohol in 100 mls. of blood.

There was no damage to Mr. Aubin's car. His licence was suspended for one year.

EDITORIALS/OPINION

End universality

Finance Minister Michael Wilson freely admits the Conservative government will not achieve its goal of reducing the federal deficit to below $30 billion this year.

The revelation comes as no surprise, keeping in mind the unexpected drop in world prices for both oil and wheat.

Despite strong pressure from business lobbies, Mr. Wilson has ruled out the possibility of cutting government spending or raising taxes still further to meet the deficit goal of $29.5 billion. Such action would do more harm to the economy than reducing the deficit at a slower pace, he said.

Of course, he is correct. Ottawa is already doing too little to care for the underprivileged and to promote new jobs, especially for the young.

The government does have some room for movement, however. Canadian taxpayers continue to spend about $2 billion a year on old age pensions and baby bonuses to Canadians who do not need them.

Jack Pickersgill, the old Liberal Party warhorse and cabinet minister under prime ministers Louis St. Laurent and Lester Pearson, criticized the waste during a television interview with Douglas Fisher recently. He ranked himself and Mr. Fisher among those drawing taxpayer-funded pensions unnecessarily and pointed to Prime Minister Brian Mulroney as the country's best known recipient of the baby bonus.

It amounts to nothing more than "a bonus for the well-to-do," he said.

Should the government find the courage to cut off wealthier recipients, it could save nearly enough to bring the deficit back in line. Better still, the money could be used to help the elderly and the young families who are truly in need or to fund make-work programs for the unemployed youth.

In the interest of fair play and decency, the concept of universality in pensions and family benefits should be abandoned and help given to those who need it most.

Re-examine drivers

There are far too many accidents on Ontario streets and highways caused by simple negligence and foolish mistakes.

We're not talking about drunks, or the idiots who get a thrill from high speeds and taking chances. We're talking about basically responsible, cautious people who simply do not possess all the skills required for operating motor vehicles.

Already, the Ministry of Transportation and Communications requires our oldest drivers to pass annual driver examinations. The reviews may come at an earlier age if there has been an accident. But it's not the elderly drivers who are causing most accidents.

All drivers should be tested every three to five years. In that way, poor habits picked up over the years may be corrected. Some, who should never have been allowed to drive in the first place, may have their licenses revoked.

We would all be forced to meet the same basic standards of driving competence we demand from 16 year olds taking to the highway for the first time. The inevitable result would be a reduction in the number of accidents. A few lives may be saved.

It's a common sense approach to highway safety that should be given serious consideration at Queen's Park.

Dismal summer

The following editorial was published by The Glengarry News on Sept. 30, 1976. It is reprinted here to show that things really haven't changed much in 10 years.

This is the last day of September and we imagine most Glengarrians will be happy to see so cold and wet and generally unpleasant a month out of the way. When a chilly drizzle was not falling there seems to have been a cold wind blowing, or at least black clouds were rolling across the heavens. There probably were some warm, sunny days in September but darned if we can remember them.

And so with the nights. When there was not the threat of frost, September nights were still chill enough to make demands on the furnace. That overworked heating unit was called on at times even in August and it will have to prove itself through a winter that threatens to extend over most of the year.

September's song must have been a dirge this year and among things to be lamented was much of what promised to be a bountiful corn crop. Frost knifed through most area corn fields on more than one cold September night and one must admire the stoicism with which the farmer accepts such blows of nature.

In this part of Canada at least a most unsatisfactory summer tailed into a dismal September. Can we hope for compensation in October?

NDP - Third party now, but no joke, no more

A FEW THOUGHTS
Joanne Stevenson

Could this be the year of the New Democratic Party? This year, Canada's traditional third party appears to be attaining adulthood and is now being viewed by many voters as a realistic alternative to the federal Conservatives and Liberals.

Although opinion polls and newspaper reports can sometimes be questioned, results at the voting booth cannot be disputed.

Clearly, the NDP has delivered at the polls, and Canadian voters are warning the other two parties their patience and allegiance have worn thin. A vote for the NDP is no longer a joke or a quixotic gesture.

The socialist party has performed suprisingly well in two provinces where it is yet to win a seat. In fact, a seat in Alberta was little more than 200 votes away. Such were the results of the Pembrina byelection.

The NDP did well at the St. Maurice byelection. Francophones are delighted to discover Mr. Broadbent's French is miles ahead of Mr. Diefenbaker's.

During the last election, Mr. Broadbent was criticized for his practice of campaigning in areas where NDP support was weak. It was argued the party should have concentrated on regions where the election of an NDP member was possible.

However, the new message being delivered is the NDP is no longer a regional party made up of socialist theorists and former CCFers backed by union money. Now, Canadians are beginning to perceive the party as a viable alternative to the present government.

The party appears approachable.

During a recent federal election, I can recall a Halifax visit by all three federal leaders. Joe Clark and Pierre Trudeau were whisked to the sixth floor, completely sealed off, of the Duke Tower to deliver speeches to the Halifax Board of Trade.

Apparently, only big business and not the great unwashed, was to be graced by their presence.

Meanwhile, in the basement shopping level, who was busy shaking hands with us common folk?

Guess it is all paying off now, Ed.

The NDP has often wrongly been considered a party with impractical, expensive and idealistic platforms. Furthermore, it has often been suggested Mr. Broadbent has the easiest job in the world. He can say anything he wants, so it goes, because he will never be elected prime minister.

However, the NDP under David Lewis had exacted much significant social legislation from a minority Liberal government. The NDP knows how to use balance of power. The party is not composed of pie-in-the-sky airheads, but of experienced politicians.

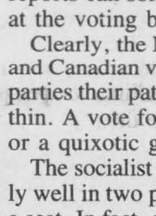
It will be interesting, nonetheless, to see if the NDP popularity will continue to rise or if the voters will revert to historic voting patterns when faced with a ballot box.

Will the NDP change its tune when power is within its grasp?

And, finally, Ed Broadbent as prime minister?

I wonder.

Wanted: One speaker accustomed to children



SECOND LOOK
Phil Rutherford

By the time you read this the Canadian House of Commons will have a new speaker.

For the first time, the House of Commons is testing new rules allowing for a democratically elected speaker. All MPs will be able to freely vote for their choice as the new speaker. The office will no longer be filled by prime ministerial appointment, in consultation with the Leader of the Opposition. Instead of being dragged reluctantly to the speaker's chair, the new speaker will actually be someone who has run for the job.

These elections could take a while, however. Every MP will automatically become a candidate for speaker and have his name listed on the first ballot, unless he makes a point of telling the Clerk of the Commons that he's not interested in the job. There will be repeated ballots, with the MP attracting the fewest votes dropped after each round, until one member has a clear majority.

There will be a different colored piece of paper for every ballot. If too many MPs seek the job, there may not be enough colors in the spectrum. The voting could carry on until next week.

It's too late to put a stop to this nonsense. Anyone who has ever taken the time to watch the House of Commons Question Period on television can tell you MPs should be the last considered for speaker. In fact, the Commons would be done a great service if all MPs were automatically disqualified. MPs are the problem. Naming one to enforce basic rules of civility on the remainder makes less sense than asking a six year old to guard the cookie jar.

Who would be better qualified? Try prison guards, army sergeants, animal trainers or hard nosed police officers. The ideal candidate would be a man or woman with a good cross-section of experience in the above occupations; someone accustomed to dealing with the unruly, the childish, the discipline problems and the potentially dangerous.

To make the search for a new speaker truly non-partisan the Governor General could be enlisted. She spent a few years in the speaker's chair herself and must have been shocked to learn that the latest crop of MPs is still more rude and unruly than the gang she tried to ride herd on.

Madame Sauve might well compose the following help wanted advertisement:

WANTED: ONE SPEAKER

Ideal position for an experienced babysitter or regimental sergeant major. Previous experience as a town crier or rodent exterminator would be a definite asset.

The successful candidate will be responsible for enforcing rules of procedure and maintaining proper decorum in the House of Commons, Ottawa, making use of a loud voice, a firm hand and a variety of stern disciplinary options, short of capital punishment.

A sense of fair play is essential, provided Conservative MPs are treated more fairly than others and the prime minister is never told to sit down.

. The employer offers an excellent compensation package, including a salary of $110,000, luxurious apartment on Parliament Hill, country home in the Gatineau Hills, chauffered limousine, robes and tri-cornered hat (black).

This is a unique and challenging career opportunity of interest to the physically and mentally strong. The squeamish need not apply.

Of course, none of this is going to happen. Pity. By now we have another MP riding herd on other MPs, probably with the usual level of success. We could accomplish just as much if we locked them into one big room and supplied them with pea shooters.

Rain brings color

LOOK OUT
Dann Rogers

Our environment spy, Fig Leaf, says the color change of leaves is running about two weeks ahead of schedule.

It has something to do with all the rain and nothing to do with spy swaps or other turncoats.

I wonder if most Glengarrians appreciate the privileged position we hold in being able to experience this annual color cavalcade. Certainly many of our correspondents, from whom I stole this column idea, appreciate the beauty at hand.

Since leaving high school biology courses, have you ever considered the color change? We will consider it now and not think of it again.

Color change is the product of two phenomena. The first is a mix of different pigments within tree leaves and the second is the annual shutdown of the tree's food-producing factories for winter.

Every tree species has its own unique mix of enzymes which produce the various foods and specialized chemicals needed by the plant. The most important is chlorophyl, which converts sunlight, carbon dioxide and other raw materials into sugars.

In fall, the earth's tilting (relative to the sun) is reducing the day length by about five mintues per day, as well as the light reaching planet earth. The energy level reaching us may drop as much as 80 per cent in heavy cloud and persistant rains soak the ground.

These events signal to the plant's genetic memory that winter is coming on.

Most trees then begin the process of shedding their leaves. As each leaf shuts down its production of chlorophyl, the green fades away, revealing the yellow pigments which are the fall trademark of poplars and birch.

In a few species (like sumach) their pigments go through elaborate chemical changes and produce the vibrant orange and red colors.

Trees that grow with their toes in the water, like swamp maples, are the first to change because the soil in low spots is the first to be saturated.

This year, both August and September have been unusually cloudy and exceptionally wet (no kidding, Sherlock!) producing conditions which the trees think are more typical of late October.

As a result, swamp maples are about to peak and in the highlands color is advancing early, but is also strung-out.

Many of our trees may never hit peak color unless we get Indian summer weather. The leaves will simply rot off and unceremoniously drop like mouldy tissue.

And there are far too many of those mouldy tissues lying around since everyone is sharing that awful October cowd.

Do you fidget?

THAT'S LIFE
Lesley Cadham

Do you fidget? Then I have wonderful news for you.

According to a Canadian researcher, fidgeting burns between 200-800 calories a day. Miracle of miracles.

In an era when researchers seem to frequently report that anything enjoyable has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals, it's refreshing to hear that something generally relaxing, has its benefits.

I called Sandy, who was as thrilled as I to hear the news. She figures if she cuts out her traditional morning doughnuts and increases fidgeting, she can lose 35 lbs. by Christmas.

Sandy's the nervous girl who shreds all the paper napkins and then looks wistfully around the table for something else to fiddle with. When the waitress delivers the food, she must clear a mound of tissue from Sandy's placemat and bring seven more serviettes for diners to wipe their hands on.

If you've ever picked up a pen that looks like it's been mauled by a sabre-tooth tiger, you can be sure Sandy has used it.

One afternoon we were preparing a shopping list for an upcoming party. Sandy wrote feverishly for a moment, then chewed the end of the pen and wrote and chewed. She had eaten three pens before the list was complete.

Brian is also the restless sort, compulsively playing with anything in his reach. One day, while playing with a panel of switches in the submarine where he served as a navy crewman, he sent a torpedo into Halifax harbor. It was a dud, thankfully, but nonetheless, created a fair-sized hole in the hull of an anchored ship.

Brian was discharged from the bell-bottomed crew and I doubt he'll ever get a job as an armed guard.

I think out of all of Sandy's habits, the constant changing of television channels is the one that bothers me the most.

Last month we sat down to watch Magnum, P.I. As she punched the buttons on the remote control, I also caught glimpses of Family Ties, Lorne Green's New Wilderness and a 1950's movie starring Humphrey Bogart.

By the time I left for home, I was convinced that Thomas Magnum and Elise Keaton had been exiled to the wilds of Africa for stealing the Maltese Falcon.

Americans wrong in Nicaragua war

The Editor
The Glengarry News

On June 25th the U.S. Congress approved $100 million for the Contras based in Honduras. The "Freedom Fighters" (President Reagan's name for these terrorists) are waging terror against the civilians along the northern border of Nicaragua.

In March of 1985, Lorne and Thérèse Whelan of Alexandria and myself had the good fortune of being able to visit this Central American nation that is continously being threatened.

The Director of the Centre for Education and Promotion of Agriculture (C.E.P.A) told us at that time that four to five civilians were being murdered each day by the Contras. Since then, President Reagan's administration has increased its aid to them, therefore we can only think that this number of killings has now increased.

Not only Nicaraguan citizens fall victim to these acts of aggression, but now international solidarity workers are included in these attacks.

During our visit to Nicaragua, we met one of these "internationals." Maurice Demierre and his wife, Chantale, came from Switzerland in 1982 and were working in northern Nicaragua helping uprooted people from the war zone resettle into various housing co-operatives. gave themselves fully to their mission.

In our minds, we can still see this beautiful couple and remember them as being calm, warm, loving and compassionate young peope. However, recently, we received the shattering news that "Mauricio" (as the locals called him) had been killed along with five Nicaraguan women. The jeep he was driving hit a land mine and was blown off the road. The land mine had been detonated by remote control by a group of Contras who were waiting for the innocent victims. When the vehicle was immobilized the Contras came out of hiding and sprayed the truck and its' passengers with their guns so that there would be no survivors.

We are saddened by the loss of such a fine, young "international" and feel for the pain, Chantale, his widow, is agonizing. However, Mauricio lives on in our hearts and the hearts of the Nicaraguan people and we are more hopeful that the Nicaraguans, with the support of many nations, will succeed in reconstructing their country and their society.

Readers refusing to face reality

Box 82, Williamstown

The editor,
The Glengarry News:

A recent article on your front page reported yet another incident of sexual abuse of children. Several other newspapers had carried similar stories of other incidents during that week indicating the extent to which this crime has spread.

The fact that this one took place in a nearby town had no special significance to me except that now area children had been involved and it made me realize, once more, that society's ills plague us all.

The real significance of the story was that an incident of sexual abuse had occurred and more children had been scarred. As I read it I commended your paper for printing the whole story, including location and names, since I believe that publication of the crime can well become the deterrant for a future abuser.

How surprised I was the following week to read that your article had stirred discomfort and anger in some readers. Not discomfort and anger over the fact that more children—area children—had suffered abuse, but discomfort and anger that the story had named the location and the alleged abusers!

Some readers apparently feel that these facts, as well as the story itself containing "such" subject matter, should best be left unprinted, "kept quiet," "not mentioned," "hidden away," "not on the front page to be read by children."

I support your story and your publication of facts. This lets children know that such experiences are very, very wrong, and not normal. It lets them know that other adults say it's wrong and that other adults can help. It lets children question what might be happening in their lives. Publication also warns abusing adults that society does not tolerate such abuse of its children.

Those readers who object are refusing to face the reality of this crime, and in doing so, are protecting the abuser, not the abused.

Large headlines if necessary

RR#2, Martintown,

The editor,
The Glengarry News:

I couldn't believe my eyes when I saw page 2 of the Sept. 17 edition. So one person supported you. Wow! I didn't write because I thought you would be deluged with letters from concerned parents, grandparents and caring people, thanking you for your diligence.

What is more important to us, our children's mental and physical health and welfare, or a headline informing everyone that this community has the same social problems as the rest of society?

It is a newspaper's duty to inform us. When the issue is as shocking and evil as child abuse, no headline is too startling. The very fact that people were nauseated, reveals that it was the subject matter and not the placing of the headline that was so offensive.

Do people really believe that the "exiles" who receive this excellent paper, were offended? I'm sure they were pleased to read that we were being alerted to one of society's evils.

Keep up the good work, and if it takes sensational headlines to open people's eyes, then use them.

Sybil Hall

Mice - those poor maligned creatures

WORD SKETCH
Sybil Carello

For the last five years, hundreds of residents from the Minneapolis suburb of Richfield (and who knows where else) have been learning how to make mouse rugs.

While it's true that mice can be destructive, gnawing away at the bark of fruit trees and rose bushes and plundering indoor food supplies, I question that this is a just cause for turning them into 12 by 12 rugs.

Since time began, mice have always had bad press. Preyed upon by hawks, owls, cranes, butcherbirds, skunks, weasels and other small mammals, including smakes and lizards, theirs has been a fugitive's existence.

I would think that the years spent in the flourescent confines of research laboratories would have been punishment enough, but no, a further indignity has been added to their scurrious lives.

The mouse rug-making course, offered at a place called the Wood Lake Nature Center, attracts people from different socio-economic groups.

Clearly, these established mouse rug-makers are people who, for a number of reasons, have never identified with Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse Club. Had they but once sung M-I-C-K-E-Y M-O-U-S-E with Annette Funicello and the gang, pinning little pelts onto corrugated carboard squares would never have become part of their extra-curricular activities.

The center's manager, Ann Sigford, says the course is wildly popular because "people wonder what its like to actually skin an animal."

Could it be that our primal instrincts are coming home to roose, or is it simply that we've run out of clever things to say at social gatherings.

"Hey! Did I tell you I'm designing my own mouse rugs these days?" might be a comment quipped between sips of a cool beverage.

"I'm not surprised. You've always led such a full life," might be an appropriate reply.

According to the story, carried in the October anniversary issue of Omni magazine, it all started when a worker at the center discovered there was more than one way to skin a mouse. Since the city-sponsored Nature Center has a large store of mice on ice to feed the snakes on display, a full utilization of the critters was considered.

And so, a generation of mouse rug-makers was born.

The course begins with the intracacies of skinning, followed by an exploration of the mouse anatomy and finally ending with a philosophical look into life itself, i.e., "how life goes from one living thing to another." This is illustrated by watching two bull snakes eat the little skinned mice.

More than likely, however, this probably illustrates the morbid curiosity of human nature, not to mention the large leap of faith in assuming that life is still present in a thawed, skinned mouse.

"People are always amazed that you can buy a bag full of frozen mice," says Sigford. "But you can. Its just like buying frozen chicken."

Mighty Mouse and Minnie Mouse might argue the distinction between the two.

More housing needed

A study to determine whether additional subsidized housing is needed for seniors and families in Alexandria is expected to be completed by the end of January.

The Town of Alexandria has hired Larry D. Cotton and Associates to carry out the study and the Ontario Housing Corporation (OHC) has verbally assured the town they will get a $7,500 grant. A contract will be signed as soon as confirmation of funding is received from the OHC.

"We need family and senior citizens housing at a decent rent. There is a good-sized waiting list and we have to prove it," says Mayor Touchette.

Mr. Cotton's firm has already done background research. Questionnaires, to be mailed to 518 seniors over 58 years old and 359 tenants have been prepared and will be sent as soon as the contract is signed.

Once the questionnaires have been returned to Larry D. Cotton and Associates an open meeting will be held at town hall to discuss the results.

This is the time for stopping to smell the flowers, or rather, viewing the glories of nature, the Fall colors. The pallet has been mixed and the colors painted in that special blend that only a superior hand could do. We humans on our own do not have the imagination to set the colors in exactly that blending of shades.

We can take pictures and copy on canvas what we see, and sometimes we can do a truly lovely picture on our own, but we have to get the ideas from nature. We originally saw the blend that was done by the Master Painter. How can we be so dull as not to give Him the credit and thank Him for His beautiful world?

On Saturday, September 20, Stanley MacCaskill and Mary Williams were married at the Dunvegan Manse. A reception was held on Sunday at the MacCaskill home at Baltics Corners with about 50 guests in attendance.

Among the guests were Mary's daughter Mallory, and Danny Charette and son Christopher of Ottawa, Stanley's father, Donny MacCaskill of Alexandria, Rene and Joan MacCaskill, Vankleek Hill, Wayne and Sylvia MacCaskill of Monkland, Ian MacCaskill of Alexandria, the Rev. Mr. Fresque and Mrs. Fresque, and neighbors and friends. We wish them a long and happy future.

Last week Catherine McRae and daughters Doris Barton and Phyllis Stewart travelled to Detroit, Michigan where they spent the weekend with Mrs. McRae's brother-in-law Murdie and Iris McRae. On Saturday they attended the wedding of Julie Ann Pfeiffer, granddaughter of Murdie and Iris McRae, to Jeffrey Semroc. On the way to Detroit they called at Toronto to see her sister Gretta and Keith Muir.

We drive along the 417 and if we notice the signs, after seeing them so often we forget about them. We heard on the news and read in the paper of the great tragedy that happened to Michele Bedard. This woman, who had a high profile position, was killed when the car in which she was a passenger hit a moose north of Montreal.

Later that night the same tragedy could have come to Dunvegan, when a car in which Greg McIlwain was a passenger also hit a moose on 417. The four young people were returning from Ottawa, where they are students at Algonquin college, when the accident occurred. There had already been one moose killed, another hurt, when its bawling brought the third one crashing across the highway right in front of their car. Greg came out of it with cuts, broken teeth and a broken bone in his hand. He most likely lived because he was sleeping in the front seat, and did not receive the full impact.

These things happen, and most times cannot be avoided because of the unpredictable behavior of wild animals, especially at this time of year, but we of Dunvegan are certainly thankful that Greg is still with us, and not too badly hurt.

His friends were hurt also, but again, thankfully, they will be able to go on with their lives, and who knows what the future will bring for those fine young people. The rest of us will have to remember the signs that say "Moose crossing" and go very carefully through that area, because we are all needed.

We congratulate Jennifer LaPlante on becoming Vice-President of the student council at the Alexander School.

On Sunday evening, the regular meeting of the Dunvegan Recreation Association will be held at the Sunday School Hall at 8 p.m. Everyone is invited to attend. Please make it a really good meeting, by being there.

KENYON PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Preparatory Service for communion will be held Friday night at 8 p.m. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be celebrated on Sunday.

Normally I make up the column on Monday evening, so that news items can be called in or sent to me on Monday, but on the long weekend-Thanksgiving weekend—I will need your news to take in on Friday, as I will be away for the weekend, and will have to receive it not later than Friday morning, and take it in Friday afternoon.

PIONEER MUSEUM

The museum closes for the winter on the long weekend, so if you are planning to come out to see it, you only have two more weekends. On Thanksgiving Sunday, the 'Wool from Glengarry' peope will be at the museum to show the fine wool that is grown here in our own county. They will be glad to see you and answer any questions.

BOOKMOBILE

The evenings are longer now and life will be slowing down because of it. Maybe you would like some new reading material. It that is true, come out Thursday to the travelling library and pick out your reading material. They have something for everyone. There are cookbooks, craft books, books on just about every subject you can think of, and children's books, both French and English, and such a variety of novels. You won't believe it if you've never been to the bookmobile, but it's all there. Come out and surprise yourself. The time is 1 to 1:35 p.m.

The Skye WMS will meet Thursday at 1:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Mack MacRae.

The Kenyon WMS will hold a celebration of their 110th anniversary on Oct. 7 at 1:30 p.m. at the church.

Local Ham radio operators finish in second place

The Eastern Ontario Amateur Radio Club placed second in its class in Canada during the 1986 Amateur Radio Field Day exercises held in June.

The slip from first place last year to second was a disappointment but they are determined to get back on top of the heap in 1987.

Apart from the sheer exhiliration of competition, Field Day provides ham radio operators the necessary practice to be able to set up and operate back-up radio communications under total emergency conditions. That is without the use of commercial power, using make-shift shelter, and with antenna set-ups made on the spot.

The Eastern Ontario Amateur Radio Club has a clubroom and repeater facilities at Moose Creek and is the official Emergency Services group for the counties of SD&G and the City of Cornwall. As such, they would be called upon by the Canadian Red Cross to set up emergency communications, if required, should a disaster, man-made or natural occur in the area.

Anyone interested in joining the Eastern Ontario Amateur Radio Club, whether presently licenced, or interested in obtaining a licence can contact Ian McAuley at 525-1770.

Seldom do we give much thought to the everyday sales tax, income tax and any other tax the government chooses to hand us. Right now we're faced with house taxes and there's just no way of turning the other cheek. The best reasoning that I can come up with to compensate the pinch, is that we must be grateful they only come twice a year.

To burn or not to burn is township's question

by Joanne Stevenson

NORTH LANCASTER—They'd better start up the shuttle so we can send the garbage to the moon,'' suggested Councillor Roch Major during Lancaster Township's council meeting Sept. 24.

Clerk Mike Samson had just presented a letter from officials of the Ministry of the Environment (MOE) outlining conditions under which burning wood waste would be permitted. For over a month and a half, the municipality had not been allowed to burn at the dump.

However, the MOE is now prepared to permit the municipality to burn, provided conditions regarding distance from domestic waste, quantity, fire safety and supervision are met.

Nonetheless, the township faces the possibility of later being forbidden to burn at all. The MOE has been regularly receiving complaints from Jean Lacelle, who lives east of the dump.

Mr. Samson explains how quick Mr. Lacelle is to call the MOE. Two Thursdays ago, when Mr. Samson picked up the phone to inform the Ministry's Don Munro of the township's burning at the site, he was informed, Mr. Lacelle had already called to complain.

Mr. Samson described Mr. Lacelle's constant vigilance, saying, ''If you have an O.P.P. officer following you around, he's bound to find something wrong. With all these complaints, all these investigations, they're more likely to find something wrong.''

Council wondered why other neighboring landowners do not complain.

Deputy-Reeve Charles Sangster felt a long-term solution to the waste disposal problem should be sought.

''We're going to have to join with others for a study,'' he said. Our dump is not going to last many more years.''

Local boys making Monday trip to Beavers

WILLIAMSTOWN
Sue Harrington
347-2279

It seems everywhere I turn these days, I am hearing about beavers. We all know, of course, that the beaver is recognized as one of Canada's symbols and, as such, appeared on Canada's first postage stamp and still graces the "tails" of our nickels. But do you know about all the Williamstown applications of beavers?

I'm sure you've all seen beavers or their dams up around the railway bridge in Williamstown, but did you know that the beaver graces the crest of our own Williamstown Public School? The crest was designed several years ago by Elspeth Greer, who no doubt chose the beaver to represent our eager, hard-working, (buck-toothed?) students.

Then a couple of years back, a group of "beavers" was added to the Scouting groups available to local boys. As you probably all know, these Beavers meet in South Lancaster, but did you know that two of their leaders are from Williamstown? Vivian Trudel and Betty Doonan have volunteered their services this year.

Local boys making the Monday night trip to Beavers include: Steven Doonan, Jesse Lafave, Simon Harrington, Bucky Ross, Bruce Ross, and Steven Smart.

All this beaver talk is just a prelude to telling you that the Nor'Westers Beaver Club of Glengarry is about to hold its Sixteenth Annual Beaver Club Dinner, which takes place at St. Mary's Centre on Friday, Octobeer 17th at 7 p.m.

Dinner chairman Jim Hill has this to say about plans for the big evening: "The senior partners are brushing their top hats or airing their kilts; the voyageurs and coureurs du bois are cleaning up their tuques, fur caps and Sunday best clothing. The ladies, or 'comforting squaws' are putting final touches to their gowns or Indian costumes in preparation for this fun event."

Rumor has it that a number of the group have been practising some old time dances with a few of the fiddlers.

The 'Cap Huff's Rum Punch' is at this moment fermenting in the barn of one of the senior partners in preparation for the dinner.

Once again, Rita Nielsen will cater the banquet in fine old Nor'Wester style. some of the menu will give one an idea of what is in store for the dinner guests: salmon with Lake Nippissing sauce; braised herb pork with bread sauce; saucisse voyageur; wild rice and quail; volaille du vieux trappeur.

The ferocious boar's head that was carried into the 15th annual dinner by Archibald MacDonell and John R. MacDonell will appear again this year. It will probably be a brother or offspring of the ugly looking creature.

Members of the Beaver Club and their friends will arrive from Montreal, Toronto and points in Glengarry for this unusual event.

For further information contact Annette MacDonald, clerk of the company or Jim Hill, chief senior wintering partner, both of Williamstown, or Don Shaw, chief factor, Summerstown.

Reservations must be confirmed before Oct. 11th.

I was telling Sally Blacker the other day that I hadn't seen her recently and she replied that she was busy, "crocheting up a storm". Since a lot of Sally's work is done in fine white Victorian cotton, I thought that her description was particularly apt.

For those of you who are interested, Sally makes miniature hats, suncatchers, Christmas ornaments, etc. for sale or on commission.

The Ladies' Guild entertained at the Chateau Gardens Nursing Home in Lancaster, recently, teting those residents with August and September birthdays.

I am told the event, including a sing-a-long was a big success, especially with all that hand-kissing!

The Friendlay Neighbors will be hosting the October party at the Chateau Gardens. It will be held October 16, at 1:30 p.m. Everyone is welcome to come and help Williamstown's Danny Jim McDonell, a resident at the Gardens celebrate his birthday.

The Friendly Neighbors held an open euchre recently. Ladies winners were Edith Major, Viola Lauzon and Janet Venne. Skunk was Edith McBride.

For the men, Ed O'Brien, Donald MacGregor and Martin Van Sleeuwen took the prizes. Skunk went to Maurice Chretien.

Joan Abrams claimed the door prize while the 50/50 went to Yvonne Leblanc, Viola Pilon, Margaret McMath, and Dorothy Seguin.

An SOS goes out to all you sedentary men who are free on Thursday afternoons at 2. The exercise class, held at St. Mary's Centre, is learning dance steps and needs your participation. For those of you who think exercising is a little too rigorous, many of the exercises done this year are on chairs.

Several Williamstown residents recently teamed up with the Lancaster Jolly 50's to visit Wakefield and Kingsmere, formerly Mackenzie King's summer home.

Big news in local hockey circles is the departure of Neil Sandilands, former OHL and Char-Lan Rebel player, who has left to play hockey in Assen, Holland. Neil was one of four Canadians selected to this Dutch team and will be sharing a housse, a car and 4 bikes with his Canadian teammates. What an interesting opportunity!

Neil's sister, Brenda Sandilands-Murray, who spent the summer completing a master's degree at the University of Reading, in England, has returned to her teaching position in Milan, Italy after a holiday resting at home with the family in Williamstown.

GLEN ROY—La Caravane in Glen Roy will hold an auction Thanksgiving Day, October 13, to raise money to meet its financial needs.

The auction will be held on the premises under a large Marquis tent—rain or shine—and Marcel Major of North Lancaster has volunteered to be auctioneer.

Items to be auctioned include a piano, a 100-year-old pump organ, new and used furniture, an old butter churn, TVs, stereos and a lot more. Some articles are new and others are second-hand. A clown will be on hand to entertain the children.

La Caravane (Mary Farm Inc.) is part of a world-wide system of L'Arche communities. La Caravane provides the opportunity for handicapped individuals to live and learn in a family environment. Two families currently oversee La Caravane.

Donations of auctionable items are still being accepted, with the exception of used clothing. To make a donation, contact Allan Poulin or Marcel Major at 525-2704, Brock Currie at 525-3756 or Therese Whelan at 525-1724.

Police looking for driver

Alexandria police are looking for the driver of a red Honda car that may have caused an accident on Dominion Street Friday afternoon.

Daniel St. Louis, 18, of 95 Victoria St. in Alexandria suffered minimal injuries when he fell off his motorcycle near the intersection of Dominion and Derby Streets at 6:15 p.m.

He told police an eastbound car on Derby had come to a full stop at the intersection and then pulled out in front of him. Unable to stop in time, he said he had to take evasive action, which resulted in him losing control of his motorcycle.

Police estimated damage to the motorcycle at about $300.

Optimist Club season begins

NORTH LANCASTER
Bernadette Campeau
347-2572

I am happy to announce that I now have a correspondent from the North Lancaster Optimist club. She is Bev, the wife of club member Luc Poirier. The following is her first report.

Well, here it is folks, the start of a new "Optimist Club" season—may it be as successful as the first!

Topping the list of events is a buffet dinner for members and spouses to be held Saturday to honor the club founder and outgoing president, Normand Vaillancourt and to welcome newly elected Club President Claude Leroux.

Taking over from Yvan Desautels in that all-important (and oft-times thankless) position as secretary-treasurer will be André Leroux.

The administrative council for the 1986-'87 season is as follows:

Vice-President Yvan Desautels; Vice-President Brent Vachon; Directors (1 year) Jean-Luc Desautels, Denis Major and Gilles Glaude. Director (2 years): Luc Poirier, Pierre Bourbonnais and Jean C. Major.

It is a well known fact that even the most "optimistic" club members feel their work is never done. But thanks to your dedication and the unequivocal support of the community (as small as it is), the North Lancaster Optimist Club will this year and in years to follow "be a star" in their district.

NEW MEETING DATE

At the last meeting of L'Union Culturelle, the members were informed that they will now meet on the second Wednesday of each month, same place, same time. Please make a note of this change. New members are invited to join.

As you probably know the GDHS and ESRG kids are busy selling chocolate bars for the school. For each box sold a student is eligible for a prize. Congratulations to Nathalie Decoste who won a telephone answering machine and Richard Campeau for his prize of a compact disc player.

ECOLE STE. THERESE

On Monday at 8 p.m., parents are invited to the school for a special meeting where elections will be held for the parent/teacher committee for the year 1986-87. Special guests will be Georges Cuerrier and Bernard Besner. Cheese and coffee will be served for refreshments.

The "used stamps" club is continuing this year with Ginette Poirier and Brigitte Valade in charge. Two new people are helping out at our school: Shirley Castonguay will be keeping an eye on lunch hour and Shirley Samson is helping with the pre-kindergarten and kindergarten class.

The first literary session will be on Friday at 10:30 and parents and friends are extended an invitation to attend. The new student council has been elected and they are: Grade 8 Suzanne Glaude, pres; Grade 5 Rena Carriere, vice-pres.; Grade 6 Dominic Desautels, secretary; Grade 7 Jean Vaillancourt, treasurer.

Councillors are: Stephane Ferland, Judith Roberge, Julie Lalonde, Eric Decoste, Denis Juillet, Timothy Corput, Annie Juillet and Anik Samson.

Congratulations and a good year to all.

Couple celebrates diamond wedding anniversary

GLEN SANDFIELD
Lorna Champman
874-2408

Congratulations to Gladys and Gilbert MacRae on the event of their 60th wedding anniversary. Last Sunday, an open house celebration was held at Maxville Manor.

A great number of relatives, friends, neighbors and well wishers turned out to help them celebrate. While enjoying refreshments, the guests joined in a sing song, led by Lorna Chapman and Freddy Goodman of Ottawa, and Mrs. Arnold MacRae's aunt Annie McCausland also of Ottawa. They were accompanied on her accordian with Bessie MacLennan at the piano. Mr. Goodman's little wooden "dancing man" puppet danced a lively clog, in time to the music.

Later Bessie MacLennan and Lorna Chapman entertained with an impromptu of Scottish songs. An official plague from Ottawa was on display congratulating the MacRaes on their special anniversary.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. John Ferguson on the recent arrival of a new baby boy.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chapman just received word of a new great grandson, born in Ville La Salle, to Sylvie and grandson John Chapman.

All Glen Sandfield residents were saddened to hear of the death of Alisha Vander Byl on Sunday. She was the 3-year-old daughter of Tony and Joanne Vander Byl. Please remember this grieving family in your prayers.

Hazel Gibbs has had her day in the sun. How many of you caught Thrill of a Lifetime last week? Well Mrs. Gibbs was on the program and her thrill was to go up in a helicopter, with the CJAD road-traffic team, and she did!

The came and got her and flew her back to Dorval. She spent the night in a large hotel in Montreal and accompanied the air crew next morning on traffic patrol.

Not many get to realize their fondest wish, but she did. She handled it all with cheerful ease, and her usual good humor. Well done Hazel!

Just a reminder that the Fall salad-tea and bake sale will be held in the Glen Sandfield hall Oct. 4, 2 to 4 p.m. Hope to see you there.

Members and guests of the Lancaster Jolly 50's senior citizen club enjoyed a bus trip on Sept. 23 through Hawkesbury and stopping at Montebello for a coffee break, then to Wakefield and a tour through the Gatineau.

In spite of the rain, the fall colors were gorgeous. The club will be holding their business meeting next Tuesday when an important item will be discussed, so full attendance is suggested.

Good old fashioned hard work is needed

GLEN ROBERTSON
Kathy McGrath

The Township of Lochiel staff advises that the application for a grant to repair the recreation centre was not accepted at this time by the Ministry of Recreation and Tourism. In the meantime, the septic tank has been installed with the assistance of a Ministry of Environment grant covering 75 per cent of the cost and a letter has been forwarded to the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation requesting a grant to have the roof of the building repaired.

If the present building is to be saved a new roof will have to be installed before winter arrives.

Perhaps, Glen Robertson residents should seiously look to Lancaster Village where a modest recreation centre was recently constructed for about $60,000. Maybe, we would have settled for a sum much less than the $200,000 requested and with some good old fashioned hard work and determination, a modest structure could have been built, which would well serve our needs.

Even if the construction of a new roof goes ahead, the building will not be usable this winter. If a building can be constructed in Lancaster for $60,000 there's no reason it can't be done in Glen Robertson, let get on with it.

Matinée Récréative will be starting up next Wednesday at L'Union Culturelle room in the church hall, from 9 to 11 a.m. All mothers of preschool children are most welcome. At present the group will meet once a week. For further information contact Theresa van den Oetelaar at 874-2079.

The bookmobile will be stopping in the village on Thursday from 9:30 to 10 a.m.

The Glen Trimmers, a branch of Calorie Counters, have started their meetings at The Ol' Presbytery on Wednesday nights from 7 to 8 p.m. The group welcomes anyone wishing to lose a few pounds or maintain a good weight. For further information contact Adeline McCulloch at 874-2088 or Juliette Robertson at 874-2267.

Visiting Tom Borror on Sunday afternoon were Ernie and Norman Sulpher of Peterborough and Dunbar. Ernie and Tom were wartime shipmates on HMCS Prince Rupert in 1944-45. It was a most welcome visit after more than 40 years.

AVONMORE AG-OFFICE—The Honorable Jack Riddell, minister of agriculture and food, cuts the ribbon to officially open the Stormont ag-office's new location in Avonmore. Stormont ag office moves AVONMORE — The Ministry of Agriculture and Food (OMAF) has opened the new Stormont County agricultural office in Avonmore. OMAF Minister Jack Riddell officiated by cutting the green ribbon, September 24.

Also officiating at the ceremony were: Avonmore Reeve, John McIntyre, Avonmore Trustee, Glenn McIntyre and Doug Reycraft, parliamentary assistant to the Honorable Sean Conway, acting minister of government services.

The ribbon-cutting took place after speeches by the men, in which they commented on the sunny, warm weather—perfect for an opening-day celebration.

The 5,500 square foot office, located just off Hwy. 43 on Centennial Crescent, cost the Ministry $385,000. Construction began January 14 and was completed June 27. The office will be more geographically accessible to area farmers, who previously had to travel to Cornwall.

"We're here in the heart of Stormont, geographically—and in the agricultural heartland of this area, as ministry, for our field services, is accessibility to our clients," said Mr. Riddell.

The Stormont agricultural office was opened in Cornwall in 1944. Because of the flooding of the St. Lawrence Seaway, the farming population became more dense in the county's north end. For the last 15 years the agricultural office has held meetings and given courses on rented premises in Avonmore.

It made sense to locate the office in the centre of the area it served, said Dale Miller, agricultural representative.

According to Mr. Riddell, the Avonmore building has been designed as a prototype for all new field offices. The well. Our number one aim in the Ministry has started a major program of updating and improving facilities and will replace some outdated offices around the province.

"I'm not saying we'll be as common an architectural sight as the famous golden arches (McDonald's restaurants), but certainly this is the look of the OMAF field office in the future," said Mr. Riddell.

The building was designed by Joe Sillig, architectural designer of the Ministry of Government Services and was built by Sinclair Supply Co. Ltd., of Vankleek Hill.

The re-location has created 20 additional jobs.

Fall is the time to treat quackgrass

AG REPORT
Glen J. Smith, Ag. Rep.

If quackgrass is a common sight in your fields this year, now is the time to consider getting it under control for next year's cropping program.

The common herbicides used to control quackgrass are atrazine and Roundup. If corn is to be grown for two or more years, heavy infestations of quackgrass will be best controlled with a split application of atrazine. Apply the first 2.25 kg per hectare (2 lbs per acre) (active) before plowing in the fall or spring. If you are plowing deeper than four to six inches the atrazine rate should be increased proportionally to arrive at a similar atrazine concentration in the plowed layer.

Make the second application of 2.25 kg per ha after planting the corn, as an early post-emergent spray in an oil-water emulsion. To reduce the effects of quackgrass competition on the corn the second application should be applied when the quackgrass is in the two to four leaf stage.

If you want to leave all crop options open — not locking yourself into corn, Roundup should be considered for quackgrass control.

Apply 2.5 1 per hectare (1 1 per acre) of Roundup after harvest. The Roundup should be applied in 50-100 litres of clean water per hectare (4.5 — 9 gal per acre) using flat fan nozzles. Flood jet nozzles should not be used with the reduced rate of Roundup and water.

Spray when most of the quackgrass is at least 20 cm (8'') in height (three to four leaves) and actively growing. If a frost has occurred, wait several days to determine if the quackgrass has recovered.

Quackgrass can be treated after a mild frost provided there are three to four green leaves actively growing at the time of spraying. Do not till between harvest and fall spraying of Roundup. Roundup should only be considered on fields not tilled for three months, enabling sufficient leaf growth from all rhizome pieces. Wait at least five days for the Roundup to translocate into the rhizome before tilling.

Where quackgrass pressure is heavy, or for long term control, the full rate of Roundup 4.75 — 7.00 1 per ha (2—3.5 1 per acre)

Everyone on executive must pull his weight

SPORTS

Peter Conway

The Glengarry Soccer League is the oldest of its kind in the country. Each spring players at the minor to senior levels, don the shorts and spikes and inhabit the soccer pitches from one end of the county to the other.

Saturday night at the Bonnie Glen, the league honored its players, teams and coaches. As usual, the affair was well attended.

With Chairman Roy MacMaster on the injury list and unable to attend, Millan MacPherson stepped in and handled the master of ceremonies duties. Millan made the job look easy and he got plenty of support from league executive members.

There is probably no league in the county that gives out as many trophies as the Glengarry Soccer League. Trophy presentations were short and sweet and very well organized.

League officials can take a bow for running such a smooth affair. While a league depends on its executive for continuity, one person stands out for outstanding contribution towards the league.

Sylvie Chenier finished her first term as league secretary. Like her predecessors, Sylvie handled the job in a professional manner. The position takes up a lot of time and effort and she's to be congratulated for her dedication this summer.

While the executive plays an important role in any league, it's the secretary of the Glengarry Soccer League who has the high-profile position. I'm sure Sylvie spent countless hours on the phone this summer, rounding up scoresheets and rescheduling contests.

At times, it is a thankless job. You have to love and care for the game. For someone who accepts the secretary's position, there is a monetary reward. But, the money doesn't compensate for long hours spent on the phone or scurrying around the county for game reports.

The Glengarry Soccer League has been fortunate over the years, in that it's had rfeliable people as secretary. In the past, however, people have resigned from the position due to lack of time or the workload.

I get the feeling it's been the same for Sylvie this summer. It seems over the years that the secretary's position has been taken for granted. This isn't to say that Sylvie hasn't received co-operation from her fellow league members, but I don't think some people realize the work involved with the secretary's position.

It wouldn't be a surprise if Sylvie didn't return as secretary next season. That would be unfortunate. The league needs dedicated people like her.

But, whether it's Sylvie or her successor, more co-operation is needed from the rest of league officials. If everyone pulls their weight, the league will be more enjoyable for everyone concerned.

OVER FOR THE RIDERS

I'm sure the staunch Ottawa Rough Rider fans in the county are mourning this week, following the club's dismal setback to Hamilton Saturday night.

The Riders are still mathematically alive for a playoff spot, but highly improbable. The club has lost 10 of their last 11 games. They trail the second-place Hamilton Tiger-Cats by seven points with only five games left. The Riders' management has to take a long look at keeping Joe Moss on as coach. He has one year remaining on his contract.

Joe Moss and his run-and-shoot offence has failed. I still wonder why the run-and-shoot scheme was ever introduced to the club by Moss.

Surely, the club's pathetic record would indicate that the run-and-shoot is not the answer. In the Russ Jackson era, the club was the class of the league and it wasn't a run-and-shoot offence responsible for the team's success.

The Edmonton Eskimos, who are supposed to be rebuilding this season, are having an outstanding year. Their offence isn't a run-and-shoot. The same can be said for the B.C. Lions and Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

I'm not sure if firing Joe Moss is the answer. But, throwing the run-and-shoot offence out the window is.

ENJOYABLE SEASON

Bob Boisvenue was saying recently how much he enjoyed organizing the Novice Softball League the past summer. But, he was quick to point out he didn't deserve the credit from the organizational end of it.

"I had a lot of help from the parents and we got a lot of co-operation from the sponsors," says Boisvenue. "The kids had a lot of fun and I'm sure everyone is looking forward to next season."

Completes Montreal race

MONTREAL—While Margie Laferriere will probably never win the Montreal International Marathon, just crossing the finish line is enough of an award.

In a field of 10,000 competitors, Laferriere finished with an unofficial time of 4:29.44 (4 hours, 29 minutes, 44 seconds).

"I concentrated on a finishing time, but I was very happy because I never stopped once to walk. I felt pretty strong throughout the race," says Laferriere, competing in her second marathon this year.

Laferriere felt her previous participation in a marathon gave her some confidence throughout the race.

"I had a few long distance runs under my belt and the past experience in a marathon gave me the confidence to take it easy and concentrate on a finish, rather than pushing for a personal record."

She teamed up with fellow runner Earle Jones of Cornwall and ran the first half of the race in two hours. For Laferriere, the finishing stretch was gratifying as the spectators crowded the fenced-in area and cheered as if she was the first runner to cross the finish line. She was handed a bronze medal and a bag of food as she finished the race.

"It's a very exciting race, which begins on the Jacques Cartier Bridge at the blast of a cannon," says Laferriere. "It's a dramatic start and finish and I recommend the marathon to first-time runners. It's a very exciting course to run and the place to be."

Cornwall Royals deal for Sabourin

by Peter Conway

CORNWALL—The Cornwall Royals bypassed Luc Sabourin in the 1983 midget draft.

But, after three seasons with the Guelph Platers, including last spring's Memorial Cup championship team, the Alexandria native is coming home to finish his OHL career. Well, sort of.

The Royals siged the veteran defenceman last Wednesday following completion of a deal with the Platers. In order to get Sabourin, the Royals gave up an undisclosed draft choice they obtained earlier from the London Knights for goaler Steve Titus.

Sabourin, an overage player, was the last player chosen in the 1983 draft, 288th overall. After one season with the Alexandria Junior B Glens, Sabourin beat the odds and earned a spot on the Platers' blueline.

While he didn't figure in Guelph's plans as an overage skater this season, he was kept on the club's protective list. Sabourin was in the Royals' lineup last weekend in a pair of losses to the Ottawa 67's. He collected an assist in Sunday's 5-4 loss at the Cornwall Civic Complex.

Referees needed for clinics

Anyone interested in officiating local minor hockey this season, should mark this weekend down in the calendar.

A Level I clinic will be held this Sunday at Cornwall's Bob Turner Arena. The clinic gets under way at 8 a.m. On Saturday at the Charlottenburgh Recreation Centre, a Level II clinic is being staged. The clinic begins at 8:30 a.m. A Level III clinic is set for Saturday at Cornwall's Bob Turner Arena.

Cabers meet Sunday

by Angus H. McDonell

The hospitality that prevailed at the Loch Garry spring meet of the Glengarry Cabers Club was one of the reasons to return next Sunday, October 5, for the fall competition. Next year the club will alternate with the Williamstown Fairgrounds field.

The Sunday program is slated to start at 10 a.m. There is a possibility that one of the chief contenders at the Glengarry Highland Games, Bill Moorse, Antigonish, N.S. may attend. Another entry could be Ted Dandro, Altamonte, N.Y.

The veterans from Syracuse, John MacDonald and Pat Lynn, will be on hand along with the Glengarry athletes. Keen interest will be focused on Willie Lang who finished third at the Montreal Highland Games, Aug. 3, close to Tennessee Tom Carmichael and California's Keith Tice.

Racing record stands

RECORD STILL STANDS—Stanley G. McDonald, right, shows Angus H. McDonell the American Power Boat Association Certificate, of his outboard motor and boat. The Maxville resident set a world record in Class C in a race at Lake Maggiore, St. Petersburgh, Florida in the early 1960's that still stands today.

by Angus H. McDonell

Maxville's grand old man, Stanley George McDonald, is always an interesting personality to meet regardless of the occasion. He has rounded the cliche four score and ten bend and is heading briskly to the century milepost a class gentleman and sportsman.

On his daily jaunt to the post office he usually stops for a morning coffee. Should you share a table with him you are assured that the topic of conversation will be relative to the realm of sport. And of late he may casually refer to the U.S. "Class C" Service runabout (outboard motor) races.

However, to learn of his interest and personal achievement of this world classification of outboard motor racing game one must prod through the characteristic modesty of Stanley G. McDonald. Briefly, 22 years ago at St. Petersburgh, Florida, his own improved engine propelled a racing boat to a world record speed mark that has not been equalled to date.

Glengarry sport fans are likely to wonder how this farm boy, without a high school course in mechanics or a university engineering degree, could go all the way to compete with the top bracket of world designers and manufacturers of outboard motors and develop by his own skill a motor with sufficient power to set a world's record that still exists.

In order to relate a story in sequence of Stanley's mechanical and outboard motor racing career we must begin with his first venture at the drafting board. About 80 years ago during the fall grain threshing season the threshing mill was in the McDonald barn on Sunday. (This McDonald homestead is on the fringe of Dominionville and now the home of Jim Vallance and his wife Lee Anne.)

Stanley and his brother Alex, we presume, spent most of that Sunday in the barn drawing to a mini-scale a pattern of a pioneer flatbed thresher. The major problem, Stanley recalls was the cylinder that separated the grain heads from the stems. The barely teenaged brothers devised a similar cylinder by flattening nail heads to the shape and exact placement of cylinder teeth.

The rest was mostly simple wood work and, of course, manual power re-enacting the horse powered treadmill.

The finished model threshing mill was so accurate in every detail that a handful of grain-laden straws fed gently into the cylinder rendered the same results as a Ferguson (Maxville) thresher.

The authentic evidence of natural inventive talent by the McDonald boys indicated they would shortly leave their farm home birthplace and seek a livelihood in the mechanical field. That is exactly what happened.

The advent of the automobile lured Stanley and Alex McDonald to Ottawa in 1911. In a brief period of time their mechanical knowledge and professional motor aptitude became widely known in Ottawa, then really an overgrown town.

Alex McDonald became the founder and operator of an Albert Street garage. Stanley was his master mechanic, but not for long. In order to maintain an expensive touring car on long trips over rough roads to Montreal and distant points, the tycoon president of Ottawa Electric and Ottawa Street Railway, Thomas Ahearn, singled out Stanley as his personal driver and mechanic.

That was all right for a while but Stanley longed to get back in the shop. Following World War One he returned to his home town, Maxville, and opened his own garage and Chevrolet sales dealership. (That became Hammie Morrow's garage and is now the Bill Campbell's Ford Mercury agency.) Stanley, although successful at home, still had a keen desire to work on motors, especially small ones. So he returned to Alex's Albert Street garage.

In 1938 Stanley finally got the break he was waiting for since they built the model threshing mill. Plaunt Hardware was the main Ottawa outlet of Johnson Outboard Motors. Their store and contents, including several outboard motors, were heavily damaged by fire. In the salvage operation that followed the motors were moved to Alex's garage and Stanley was assigned to rebuild as many motors as possible.From that day on Stanley George McDonald never looked back.

Stanley opened his own shop on Wellington Street, specializing in outboard motor sales and service. Success breeds success and more space became a necessity. Then as one drove along Scott Street there was the attractive illuminated sign—"Stan's Outboard Motors."

Outboard motor boat racing grew in popularity at that time, mainly in Arnprior and Valleyfield. Among the top drivers was Stanley McDonald, frequently an award winner after piloting his own fine tuned motor first across the finish line.

Now rated among Canada's leading drivers and mechanics at the "Class C" level, Stanley wished to compete with his counterparts in U.S. racing. Following several successful race meets in central Florida, Stanley raised his sights to the lofty level of the prestigious St. Petersburg Outboard Motor Club. First he dismantled his pet motor several times, changing the port timing to gain more power and r.p.m. Engine bore had to be exact, with new pistons added for perfect fit, new bushings at the top and perhaps the bottom. He did all this skilled work in his own shop.

Now Stanley was as confident of his motor as E. P. Taylor was of Northern Dancer. Stanley was a bit older so he turned the tension-filled driving of his beloved boat and motor to a younger pilot, American Ronald Messenger.

February 9th, 1964 was a balmy day at Lake Maggiore, St. Petersburg. Three other boats lined up beside Stanley's ready to go in this five-mile race. Messenger was first across the finish line, setting a world's time record of five minutes, 47.2 seconds, an average speed of 51.814 statute miles per hour. That was 22 years ago and that "Class C" Runabout Outboard Motor record still stands.

Quite a career, eh folks, for a Dominionville farm boy, from building a toy threshing mill to out-classing the best designers and craftsmen in building an outboard motor of that classification, and recently the feature photo of the Outboard Racing Magazine.

Lancaster wins opener

by Sue Sloan

The Border Hockey League season opened on an up note for the Lancaster team Thursday when they toppled Glen Nevis 8-5 to take game one of the year.

Richard Picard's pair off the top got Lancaster on the board while Mike Tessier tapped in two of his own followed by singles from Chris Eamon, Maurice Andre, Donald Wightman and Glen McKay.

Cholette places second at National race

After recently winning the Eastern Castrol Series in the 250 cc Pro Formula road racing, Alexandria's Michel Cholette had hopes of adding another title to his accomplishments.

But, at the final race of the season, Sunday, in the National Castrol Series, Cholette had to settle for second best in the country.

Cholette battled points leader A1 English from start to finish, but couldn't overtake the champion. He had qualified at the pole position

Off to Netherlands

by Angus H. McDonell

WILLIAMSTOWN — Williamstown, the quaint village nestling on the banks of the Raisin River that wends its way through the soil rich Charlottenburgh farm lands, has been long known as the cradle of many Glengarry great athletes. The first evidence of this rating was recorded away back in the 1870s when R. R. "Big Rory" McLennan defeated Scotland's world champion, Donald Dinnie, in the hammer throw challenge.

Among those to follow, mentioning just a few, were Gerry Sullivan with Cornwall's world champion lacrosse club, "Randy" MacLennan of Queen's hockey and football renown and the Klondike Stanley Cup series with Ottawa's historic Silver Seven.

There was Bill Cattanach who finished close to Boston Marathon winner Tom Longboat in a road race from Lancaster to the Williamstown fairgrounds. In 1919, before the British Empire troops set sail for home lands, Williamstown's "J.K." MacDonald was total points medal winner at a military track and field meet in England. Paddy Sullivan was selected by Pittsburgh to lead their forwards in the Yellow Jackets' bid for an entry in the National Hockey League.

The list goes on and on, creating a major portion of the Glengarry Sports Hall of Fame foundation. And a younger generation continues to carry with distinction Williamstown's sport heritage torch.

A few years ago Ian Sandilands at the Highland Games in Orlando, Florida, was successful in being admitted via his points record to the select group of the best caber tossers and weight and hammer throwers in the U.S.

Now we add Ian's brother Neil Sandilands. Yesterday (Tuesday) Neil boarded a Montreal flight to the Netherlands. He has signed a pro contract with Holland's Assan Hockey Club.

One of the success trademarks branding athletes is that they are hungry to play. Neil was in that category from his first day skating on the river across the road from his home. Due to the fact there was no minor hockey in Williamstown because there was no rink, he was driven to Maxville where he joined the Atoms. Next was the Peewee grade and by that time Williamstown had a brand new arena complex.

Neil Sandilands, by reason of his playing in Maxville, was ready to bolster the Williamstown Bantams. His improved play indicating future potential attracted the attention of junior scouts. That was the initial step to signing with Windsor's Major Junior "A" club of the OHA.

The next year Kingston needed defence help and Windsor a forward so Neil was traded and a subsequent exchange brought him to Cornwall. After assessing the potential of Williamstown in Junior "B" against the chances of Royals in Junior "A," Neil opted for his home town Rebels.

Up over the blueline Neil Sandilands was not comparable to any one of the famed Sullivans. However, back of the blueline he anchored the Rebels on their successful drive last spring to the Junior "B" championship of Eastern Ontario, reminiscent of Williamstown's one-time great defenseman Clarence Cattanach.

Huron, Roy's capture titles

It may be still early in the hockey season, but the Huron Hockey School outclassed their opponents, winning the A championship over the weekend in the Lucien Leroux Old Timers hockey tournament.

In four games, the tourney champions outscored the opposition 33-1. Only Roy's Garage, the tournament B champions, managed to slip a puck past goaler Steven MacDonell in the opening game for both clubs.

While MacDonell was backstopping the club, Mike Lalonde was providing the offensive power. Lalonde was the top scorer in the tourney and was the most valuable in the A Division.

In the A final, Huron Hockey School skated to an easy 7-0 win over Clement Logs and Pulp. Mike Ruest, named the best defenceman, scored twice while Paul O'Dacre tallied three times. Richard MacDonell and Ken Chadwick rounded out the scoring.

In semi-final action, Mike Lalonde and Brian Tardiff scored three goals each during an easy 9-0 win over Sauve Trucking. Singles went to J.C. Blanchard, Ken Chadwick and Sebastian Cerdonni.

Huron Hockey School dumped Chico Gareau's team 8-0 in the second game of the tourney. Mike Lalonde, Richard MacDonell and Ken Chadwick each scored twice, while Brian Tardiff and Paul O'Dacre chipped in with singles.

Roy's Garage fell 9-1 to Huron Hockey School in the tourney opener. Mike Lalonde and Mike Ruest fired hat tricks each, while Paul O'Dacre, Sebastian Cerdonni and Rod McLeod added singles.

Steven MacDonell was chosen the top goaler in the A Division while "Ti Coq" Lalonde was the best goaler in the B Division. Other trophy winners in the consolation round were two players from Roy's Garage. Gilles Gareau was the top defenceman, while Gilles Massia was the most valuable player.

In the B final, Dave Lepage scored the winner in the second overtime period to give Roys's Garage a 5-4 win and the B title.

Sun sets on soccer, but stars still rising

by George Kamporis

Last Saturday's awards banquet brought the curtain down on another Glengarry soccer season. Almost, the game, as practiced hereabouts requires a fall season and, in the case of school teams, a deep fall season.

To other soccer cultures the Glengarry game would seem exotic. Played on rolling highland fields and places where you could mine peat. The winners of the coin toss at Greenfield usually take the uphill side. Beset by squadrons of mosquitoes and random plagues of bizarre insects. At Lochiel there are even dog and traffic hazards.

No two fields are the same and the average goal crease is either hard, muddy, rocky, deep in sand or all four, like your worst golfing nightmare.

Although sometimes accused of being "kick and run" soccer, Glen style is a good mix of both the aerial and ground games.

Says one referee/player, "It works when you have the players for it," meaning all-or-nothing long ball artists ready for heavy contact.

A local schoolboy told of playing the All-Ontario Tournament, "it took the other teams a while to figure out how to play us, they never saw anything like it before."

This madness is said to be the oldest game in North America, dating back to successive early waves of Scottish settlement. To fully appreciate a wave of Scottish anything, check out the English battlefield prints at the Hub. Hasn't it gone on long enough?. "No, you see?" says an ancient footballer in a serious lilt. "The season's too damn short!"

Indoor maybe? Six aside boards. A different game to be sure. A fast, power game though, played in the off-season. Right now it's good training for the real game and no choice between them need be made.

Only two things can improve soccer anywhere - coaching and training. A coach needs to get into the game, watch the action closely, listen to players coming off and finally to keep ending in direction and strategy as the play develops. Some coaches shout from the sidelines, other say little or do nothing.

A coach, can also make or break training and how players develop. Practice builds a team. Players have to learn each others moves and habits and work themselves into partners of play.

All you need is time and a good set of soccer drills, long and short passing, set plays, speed drills, open field one on one, four aside in the box or on the gym floor. Coaching means not being afraid to move players around or tell someone he needs work.

Sometimes the most profitable time is spent in practice or just feeling around where you can try new moves and gain confidence without pressure.

Here's a short list of players any coach would like to have with the understanding of course that the abilities of individuals are but a product of the competition and skill levels among the leagues.

Joey MacRae (Glen Nevis, Hearts) has good anticipation and can read a play well on both defence and offence. He's not fast, but he is quick.

Trevor Marley (Alexandria Bantams), the opportunist is fast and would probably score with his teeth if he had to.

Alanna DaPrato (Alexandria A's) is a good technical winger who gets the ball there; count on her to create four good scoring opportunities per game.

Stuart MacDonald (Glen Nevis, Hearts) should be a drill sergeant. Expect the unexpected. His name is on the Chisholm trophy so many times it thinks its him.

Phil Lewis (Greenfield, St. Andrews) an effective back, he can turn the play inside, outside or around. He's a little guy doing a big job in a place where no one goes to make friends.

Donna Clarke and Betty Ann McLeod (Dunvegan), the doomsday defence, stopping trouble before it happens. They've got it down to a science.

Frank Morris (Greenfield) is always where the play is. He's a team leader who even sweats red.

Sylvie Chenier (Glen Sandfield) A thinking player she takes the time to look around and pick a play to make. Defensive anchor.

Alexandria Bantams: immpeccable ground game, calm and arrogant.

Gerry Simpson (Alexandria Bantam coach) A players' coach, he doesn't miss much. He can dish it out and take it too.

So another season ends with a brief fanfare. Where to next? Where are the college recruiters? The regionals and nationals? The pro scouts? Somehow it seems the big time isn't ready for Glengarry yet. Like the man said at the banquet "here, everybody's a winner."

Yeah, right, next year.

Rebels' Grads beat current crop in an exhibition contest

WILLIAMSTOWN — This year's edition of the Charlottenburgh Rebels found out Saturday night the "old boys" can still play hockey.

With the help of four current skaters, the Rebels grads skated to an entertaining 10-8 win over this year's squad at the Charlottenburgh Recreation Centre.

Mike Lapensee tallied three times, while Herbie Seguin and Gary Theoret added singles. All three will skate this season for the Rebels. Kenton Spinks sparked the attack with four goals, while Mike Tessier added a single. Kevin Poapst set up seven goals for the winners.

Leading the way for the current Rebels squad was Mike Jodoin with a hat trick. Chipping in with singles were Daryl Menard, Dave St. John, Chris Villeneuve, Eric Thomas and Kevin Renwick.

The Rebels swing back into action this weekend with a pair of exhibition contests against the Winchester Hawks. The Hawks play the Rebels at the Charlottenburgh Recreation Centre Saturday night. Game time is 7:45 p.m.

The Rebels travel to Winchester Sunday afternoon for a 2 p.m. game.

Cornwall native Kevin Cameron was recently released from the Ontario Hockey League's Cornwall Royals. Cameron is expected to play for the Rebels between the pipes this season.

Mass held for sick

The first general meeting of CWL members was held in the Blessed Sacrament Hall with Kay Dubreuil presiding.

All convenors tall and short vowed to continue in daily prayer and good work for at least another couple of years.

Prior the the meeting a concelebrated mass was offered for family relatives, friends, and neighbors and especially for the sick, shut-ins and underprivileged people.

Our director invited Bishop Eugene LaRocque to be the guest speaker and his words of wisdom gave food for thought when turning corners, thisaway and thataway for the pesty evil spirit seems to be lurking around our land again, be wary for fear you make the wrong turn, retracing is obnoxious and time consuming, when there is so much good work to be done now.

The lady members of the parish served a delicious lunch and young Father Kevin poured tea or coffee with or without cream.

Construction begins

OTTAWA—A sod-turning ceremony will be held at the Maurice J. Grimes Lodge, Ottawa Civic Hospital, on Tuesday to mark the start of construction of an expansion to accommodate cancer paitents from Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec.

The event will include an "Oktoberfest" lunch.

The lodges offer free accommodation to out-of-town residents who require treatment at the clinics of the Ottawa Regional Cancer Centre. Nursing supervision is provided and each lodge has areas for dining, crafts and recreation as well as lounges and a beauty shop.

Somewhere along the way there must be a connection

by Donald Macdonald

Last October on a photographic tour of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, I paid scant attention to this tiny roadside graveyard near Invergarry.

All that changed, however, during two slide presentations from that tour, in another Glengarry, in March, when I had the good fortune to meet some of the descendants of the people who once lived in that wild and romantic land. I was deeply moved by the loyalty and interest these people still show for the ancestral homeland, and I vowed then to take more time to savor their past.

It was in May this year, while leading a group through the same area that I looked forward to documenting in whatever way I could the lands of these fine people.

"Lookout for the Invergarry road sign," I instructed Tommy Ross, our bus driver, giving him lots of time, since we had just passed through the protective custody of the Five Sisters of Kintail, on the Glenshiel Road.

"Aye," Tommy replied in his distinctive Sutherland accent. "Do you want to have lunch there?"

"No," I answered, "I want to have much more than lunch there; I want to taste the Glen."

Tommy looked sideways at me, quizzical furrows forming on his brow. "Aye?", he mumbled, directing his eyes to the road ahead.

You see, Glen Garry was not an area that I felt I knew well, but I had sampled the magic in Alexandria, and I instinctively knew that my group would not feel put upon by any selfishness of mine. After all, the rules were clear: "Anyone who wants to stop the bus, just yell, 'Stop!' " Simple as that, and our 12-passenger Mercedes stopped many times along the way.

Sgur nan Conbhairean, almost as high as Ben Nevis, loomed ahead and to our left as we came alongside Loch Cluanie. It was one of those mixed weather days, so typical of the Highlands, when the mist lends its own magic to the mountains, and we almost missed the Roderick Mackenzie memorial as we left Loch Cluanie for Loch Loyne.

Everyone got off the bus at this cairn, and the devotion of the Highlander to his cause took on a new meaning. It was not necessary to mention the attitude of Mackenzie of Kintail to the Jacobite Cause, for, by this time, the fierce individuality of the native was an accepted fact with our group, already half way through this fantastic Highland journey.

All that aside, we soon came to the shores of Loch Garry and interest was peaking. Our senior tour member, at 80, a Cameron herself, was first off the bus when we spotted this little stone walled cemetery on our left, and the bus stopped at that chorussed command.

Tommy, ever-conscious of his passengers, asked us all to stay aboard while he shuffled that bus like a comfortable old pair of slippers beyond the nearest possible parking spot, so that no one would have to walk too far through the damp grass.

I thought I was alone, as, camera in hand, I disregarded the wetness and made my way to the broken down old gate to gain entrance to this sacred place, but I was mistaken. Almost all of my group were there ahead of me, through a shortcut. Well, they hadn't been brought up in the Highlands, where graveyard gates must be opened with reverence and walls must not be scaled—even old ones like this!

Most of the two dozen or so headstones inside were too old to be read or photographed with the equipment we had at our disposal, but we managed to record several. One describes the passing of a whole family, engraved, we presume, as time went on, or perhaps after all had gone. It is in blue-grey granite, and reads:

In Loving Memory of Alan MacDonell son of Donald Bhan (sic) MacDonell (Old Ladund Invergarry) Who died at Dell Stratherrick 12th February 1880 and his wife Jane Kennedy who died at Ardochy Stratherrick 21st October 1888; also their daughters: Jessie MacDonell who died at Glendoe Lodge Fort Augustus, 14th September 1885; Sarah MacDonell who died at Smithy Cottage Invermoriston, 23rd August 1911; Mary (Glendoe) who died at Smithy Cottage, 17th July, 1942 aged 95. On whose sweet souls Jesus have mercy.

Perhaps only cousins in the Canadian Glengarry will know who those people are, and it is possible, with these meagre details, no one here knows, but the word 'Clan' as we know it, is from 'Clann', meaning family—and there is bound to be a connection, somewhere along the way.

Holstein group honors Murray

CORNWALL—Holstein breeders and other people connected in the cattle industry gathered at the Parkway Hotel in Cornwall last Wednesday night, to toast and roast Campbell Murray of Martintown.

Mr. Murray, recently concluded his term as president of Ontario Branch of the Holstein Association. The Murray family operates Murrayholm Farms.

Master of ceremonies for the evening was Murray Howes, a director of the National Association, while Garry Howes of the Stormont Club headed the organization of the affair.

Mr. Murray has been a director with the Ontario Branch since it was formed in 1981. He is the first local farmer to serve as president.

"I am grateful for many things during my year as president," says Mr. Murray. "Chairing the board meetings in Toronto and all the travelling to shows and fairs was an enjoyable experience."

Mr. Murray also said that having served as a director made his job as president that much easier.

"I think it's important you serve as a director before serving a term as president. We can appreciate that the Ontario Branch is young and we've come a long way in a short time. The transition period, taking over the responsibilities from the national directors has been a smooth one."

One of the highlights for Mr. Murray as an Eastern Ontario Director, was the Eastern Breeders Progeny Showcase, where visitors from 22 foreign countries inspected daughters of E.B.I.'s top eight proven sires.

Over the past years, Murrayholm Farm has captured Premier Breeder and Premier Exhibitor at the Stormont County Holstein Show. Campbell and his wife Alison, are leaders of Cornwall Centre 4-H Club.

In 1985, Campbell was named "Farmer of the Year" by the Stormont County Soil and Crop Improvement Association.

"As president, I really enjoyed meeting all the people in Holstein business the past year. We're a pretty close group. It's exciting when you're close to what's happening and you're there to witness the changes," said Mr. Murray.

Campbell Murray

Murrayholm Farm consists of 577 acres and 130 head of cattle.

The Ontario Branch of the Holstein Association has about 7,500 members. Mr. Murray says he is very proud to be a member of the association.

"It's nice to be a part of the Ontario Branch because it plays an important role in the national picture. We like to think we're leaders with our branch in the industry," he says.

Helping Mr. Murray operate Murrayholm Farms, is his wife Alison, and children Sandra, Dale, Susan and Devon.

Guest speaker Sister Theresa Quesnelle, Director of Baldwin House in Cornwall, addressed members of the Martintown Women's Institute and their guests, members of McCrimmon Women's Institute, at the September 'Grandmothers' meeting.

Sister Quesnelle gave a brief description of the origin of the home for abused women, then proceeded to outline its daily routine, problems it faces, as well as the wonderful support it is now receiving from groups like the Institutes and others. She was introduced and also thanked by Stennetta Lagroix, convenor for family and consumer affairs.

Eileen Johnson, the president, opened the meeting in the usual manner.

Roll call was "An article or a memory treasured from childhood."

The business report was kept to a minimum with even the minutes being condensed for this special meeting by Secretary Joan MacKenzie.

The Eastern Ontario Convention is being held once again at the Talisman Motel in Ottawa on Oct. 27 and 28. An item for the bazaar has been requested and Sylvia Thomson consented to be a delegate.

A special thanks to Leaders Gerdie Huizinga and her daughter, Annette Huizinga, who have consented to be leaders for the 4-H project "Etiquette for the 80's," and a further thanks to Leaders Linda Prichard and Shirley Beaudin who have volunteered to attend the Seniors' "Short Order Meals" workshop, on Thursday at the Martintown Community Centre, 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Mrs. Johnson expressed thanks to all who had helped in any way to make catering at the Williamstown Fair so successful. Sincere appreciation was extended to the young folk who gave their time so willingly.

In the absence of Lillian Munro, Onagh Ross conducted a series of contests which were enjoyed by all present. Luncheon was then served by hostesses Allison Murray, Ellen Ann Dupuis, Cathy Stringer, Onagh Ross and Melba McDermid, bringing a conclusion to a pleasant afternoon. Mention should also be made that corsages were given to all the grandmothers present.

The corsages were made by Stennetta Lagroix.

Mrs. Lagroix also had on hand a photo album containing pictures of the new bridge built at Martintown, pictures from the very first day construction commenced, to the unveiling at its completion. Be sure to try to see this most interesting album.

Wounded heron found

A wounded blue heron found by children in a field in Glen Norman died Saturday after 2 1/2 hours of surgery.

Roch Decoste and Ian and Lindsay Cameron noticed something flapping in the field and found a disabled female heron. Roch's father, Gerard, caught the bird with no trouble, put it in a feed bag and took it to Dr. Janet Lalonde at the Alexandria Veterinary Clinic.

The bird was weak and, judging by the number of maggots on its body, had been in the field about two days, said Dr. Lalonde.

The heron was suffering from multiple fractures of the forearm and the bone fragments had pierced the skin. Maggots had collected and were eating it alive.

Dr. Lalonde said the bird had been shot and believes it was left to die, adding herons are easy prey for hunters because they are awkward on land.

"Eighty per cent of birds injured have been shot," said Dr. Lalonde.

Blue herons are a protected species and hunting them is illegal.

Dr. Lalonde had arranged for the bird to be transported to a Kingston clinic specifically for injured birds of prey.

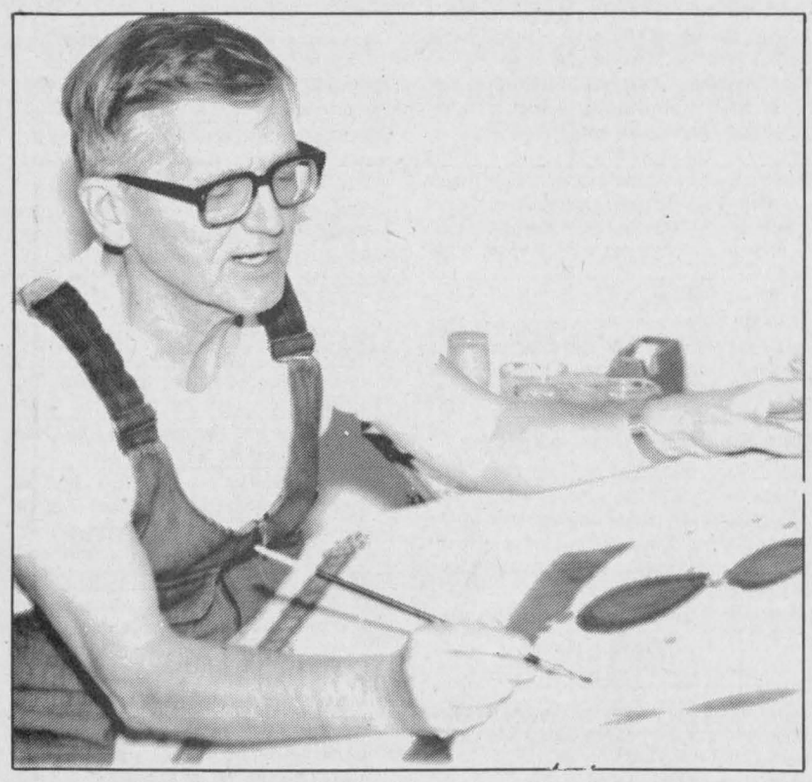
Former newspaper publisher is now the Donnybrook Elf



DONNYBROOK ELF AT WORK—Ross McGregor Greer one-half of the Donnybrook Elves Inc., creates a rustic sign to be displayed in Alexandria's Jenny William. Mr. Greer and his wife Norma, have been creating the signs since January and say business is booming.

He appears at the front door clad in faded denim overalls and a short-sleeved t-shirt. On his feet are a pair of well worn running shoes.

"Welcome to Donnybrook Farm. That was Donnybrook Lane you drove up and there's Donnybrook Drive over there," he explains.

There is a smell of fresh lumber inside the house he and his family built and his works of art hang proudly on many walls of Donnybrook Manor. The music of bagpipes emanates from another room.

He is 55-year-old Ross McGregor Greer, Irish born, former Quebec newspaper owner and publisher and current Glengarry resident and owner of Donnybrook Elves Inc. He claims Scottish heritage because his mother was born in Inverness, Scotland.

Mr. Greer and his wife, Norma, are the elves. Together, they put together elaborate rustic signs now adorning establishments such as Jenny William in Alexandria and Willow Inn in Hudson.

The Greers began dabbling in paints in January and already there is a demand for their work. They are currently sawing, whittling and painting 10 hours a day, preparing more signs to exhibit at shows and to fill Jenny William when it expands.

Mr. Greer bought the 100-acre farm, one mile west of Fassifern, 11 years ago. He and his sons started with a hole in the ground and slowly built the sprawling brown brick home of the Donnybrook Elves.

"Twenty-five years is a long time to be doing the same thing," says Mr. Greer of the newspaper business as he displays his latest signs. He laid down his press cap two years ago to live full time in Glengarry, finish his home and work with decorative plaster.

In 1984, with plaster in mind, he founded the Donnybrook Elves. The Greers created their plaster mouldings for homes, restaurants and business offices but soon found there wasn't enough demand for the architectural art.

Mr. Greer began trying his hand at carving little wooden plaques and visitors to his home, said he should sell them. It wasn't long before he realized there was a market for old-fashioned sign-painting.

Mr. Greer spent most of his life in Montreal and its suburbs.

As a child, he was interested in sports. He recalls his days on the football field and on a particular ski hill in Montreal where he participated in the National Ski-Jumping Championships for several years.

He grins at the memory of one competition, entered at age 11, when he was a member of th Ski Skunk Ski Club.

"I came in last. There was a booby prize—a little red tuque for being last," he says.

As he was presented with his treasure, he was interviewed and heard on nation-wide radio.

"That was an unbelievably proud moment, he recalls.

At 20 Mr. Greer started work with Beaver Construction Company. Within 10 years he had worked his way from labourer to project superintendent and he remembers the task of moving the towns of Long Sault and Iroquois, "lock, stock and barrel", to make way for the flooding of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

The job required too much travelling, though, which meant leaving his wife and children alone. Though his wife disagrees, Mr. Greer cannot remember being at home for the births of any of his children.

"One day, I was sitting in my office and I went into my boss' office and I said, I quit. I don't see a future here for me," he says.

Enter media career. Because of his interest in sports, he began to write sports stories for a Montreal weekly newspaper.

"It was a low-quality, give-away, throw-away newspaper. I started writing stories about the broomball league. I made it (stories) up. I didn't realize what I was doing," he says.

By the time he began to do radio sports for Gordon Sinclair of CFOX radio in Montreal, he had a grasp of the obligation of a journalist to report the news truthfully.

"One day Sinclair phones me. 'You're covering the curling,' he says. I told him I didn't know anything about curling and he says, 'fake it'. I go down to the Lachine Curling Club and I haven't got the faintest idea what is going on on the ice. I got a fellow to sit with me, and between the two of us we carried it off," recalls Mr. Greer.

In 1962, he founded what later became the second-largest English language community newspaper in Quebec, The North Shore News, operating out of Pierrefonds.

The business started small in the basement of the Greers' home. The first two newspapers were distributed as circulars—netting an income of $60. Over the years the paper grew from an eight-page bi-weekly tabloid to an average of 30 pages as a weekly broadsheet. When Mr. Greer sold, The North Shore News circulated to 8,200 subscribers.

"I was doing everything—writing, keeping the books and selling the ads," he says. Mrs. Greer organized handcarriers to distribute 5,000 weekly copies, while caring for three children.

"Norma took classified ads over the phone with babies screaming in the background," he says, shaking his head.

One day he realized he would have to sell his papers rather than give them away.

"Paid circulation was the only way to go. I was afraid to ask people to pay for them for fear they wouldn't. I put an ad in the paper saying they (recipients) would have to pay for the paper for the month of March," he recalls.

Advertisers weren't interested in placing ads in a paper with a circulation of less than 5,000, he says. The Greers waited anxiously for a response to the ad. At the beginning of April, patience ran out and Mrs. Greer called the newspaper carriers to find out how many customers they had retained. The North Shore News was a success—4,800 out of 5,000 recipients agreed to pay.

Even when the paper expanded to 14 pages, Mr. Greer was still filling it himself. He recalls working into Wednesday morning to prepare the last pages to put on a bus to go to the printing plant in St. Jerome. Then he'd catch a few hours sleep.

"I'd get about six hours sleep, while Norma ran around telling the kids to shut-up because they're waking the old man," he says.

Wednesday night, he'd drive to the plant to work through the night, proofreading the pages. Sometimes he caught a couple of hours sleep in a $6 motel room, while waiting for the final copies to be printed and then it was back to Montreal, where the Greers distributed the copies to the carriers.

In 1964 Mr. Greer moved operations to a small rented office and in 1970 expanded into a local shopping centre. Over the years, as the paper grew, he hired 12 full-time and 18 part-time employees, took out a loan to buy a headliner and typesetter and in 1980 the business was lucrative enough to interest The West Island News and Chronicle.

Mr. Greer sold, remaining as a consultant and eventually becoming publisher of The News and Chronicle. During his reign at The Chronicle, the weekly won several awards, including second prize for Canada's best all-around community newspaper, third prize for best editorial page and the Blue Ribbon Award for all-around editorial excellence. But Mr. Greer departed The Chronicle after 14 months.

"I left because of, quote, irreconcilable differences. Their ideas of running a newspaper were different from mine," he says.

He still keeps an eye out for mistakes in local newspapers and points out several journalistic habits which annoy him, punctuating his complaints by pounding his fist on The Ottawa Citizen.

His motto was, "Get the news, get it first and get it right."

The Greers like Glengarry. "It's a much easier, relaxed pace of life. People are polite. You step outside the door in the morning and you don't hear anything. So tranquil," he says with a sigh.

In Memoriam

SCOTT—In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather Maitland, who passed away October 5, 1985.
Time speeds on, one year is gone
Since that sad day was cast upon our home,
Where all was bright, and took from us
A wonderful father and husband.
His vacant place, none can fill here,
We mourn, but not in vain,
For in heaven we will meet again.
—Lovingly remembered by wife Catherine and son Melvin and two daughters Cheryl and Lorna. 40-1c

Troupe entertains at GDHS

GDHS
Paula Wheeler

On Sept. 22, GDHS was entertained by three members of Trampoline Theatre.

The Toronto troupe performs at schools promoting the trampoline as a sport and also the safety involved with the use of such an apparatus.

The first part of the performance was a demonstration of the correct and incorrect uses of the trampoline.

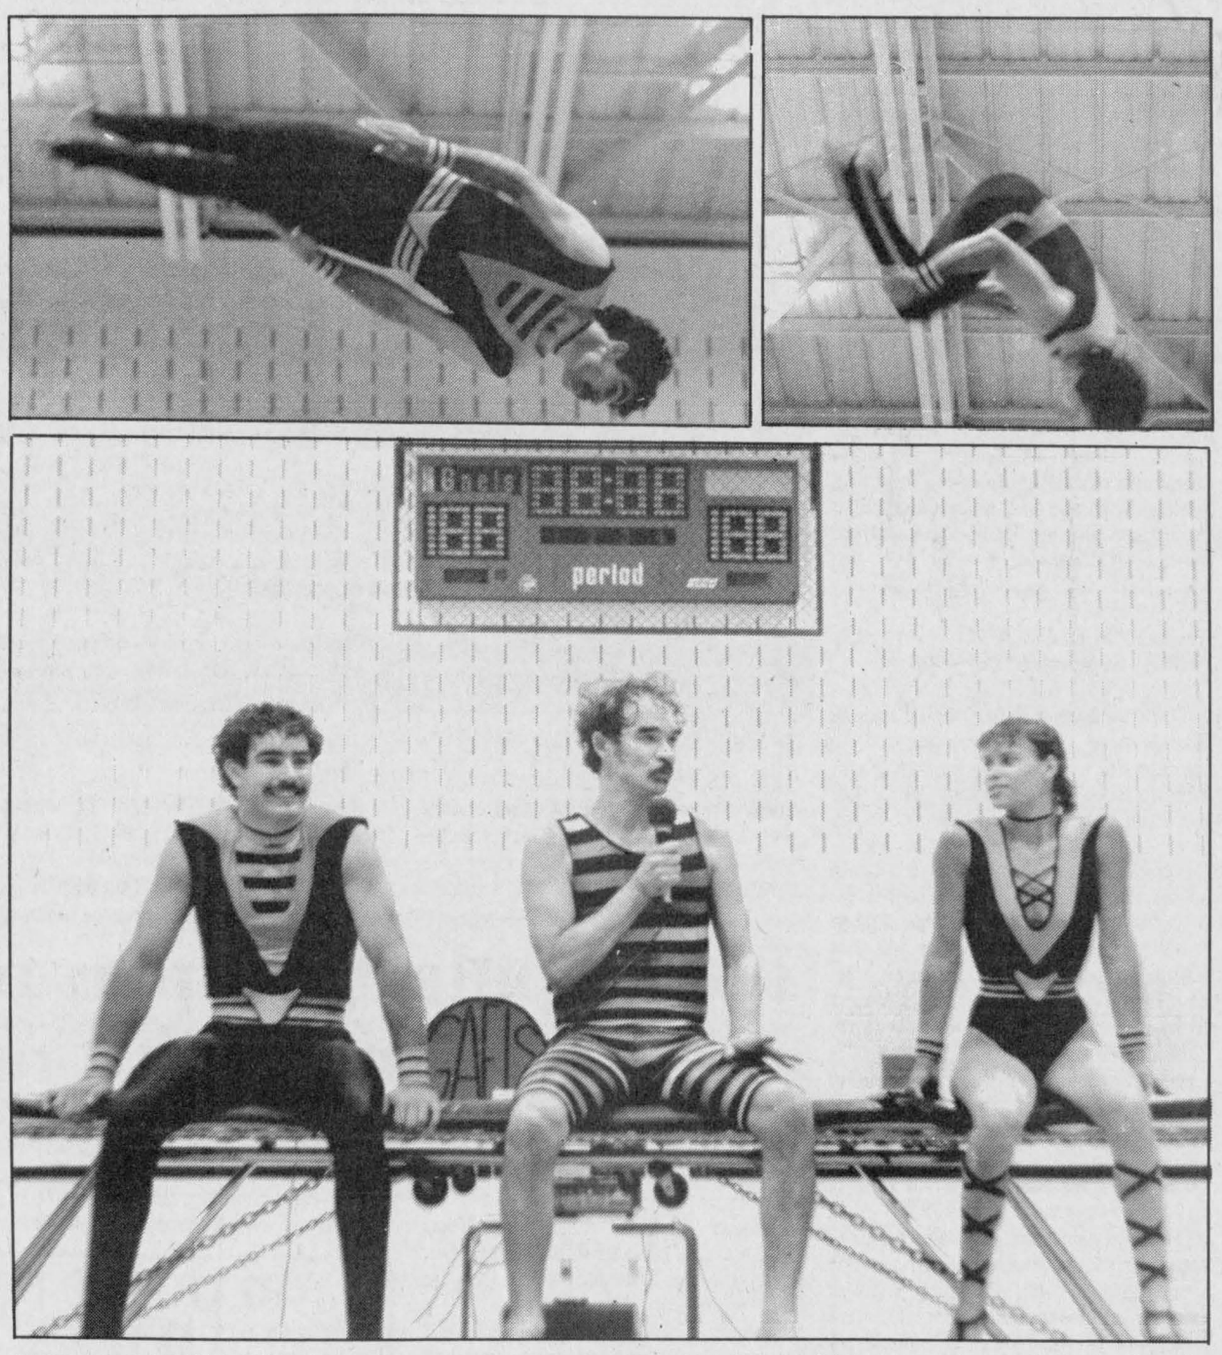
To demonstrate safety, one member of the troupe pretended to be totally unaware of the correct uses of the trampoline while another member tried to teach him correct procedures.

Using well orchestrated stunts, the troupe demonstrated trampoline safety. During the same part of the show, simple trampoline manoeuvres that could be attempted by a person with very little training were executed.

The second part of the show consisted of trampoline routines carried out by the troupe. Two of the routines performed are recognized for the Ontario and Canadian trampoline championships.

Each of the three members performed at least one routine during the show.

The performers easily proved that the trampoline can be an enjoyable sport when the equipment is used properly. Besides demonstrating the sport and safety involved, it provided good entertainment before the start of our serious work of the day.



FLIP, FLOP AND FLY—The Trampchamps from Southern Ontario gave a trampoline demonstration at GDHS Sept. 23. The trampoline theatre troupe began in 1969 and spends most of its time producing educational and entertaining assembly programs for Ontario schools. Seated on the trampoline are: Dan Normand (left), Durango Coy and Cheena Foster.

TAGWI NEWS
Norma Wheeler

Spirit Week, which ran from Sept. 22 to 26, was a great success. Participation in special dress-up days was high.

For many, the highlight of the week was seeing Mr. Poirier in the pyjama competition.

On Tootsie Day, Heidi Suscynski and John MacCormick were proclaimed Tagwi's most "eligible" couple.

The turnout for Thursday's Video Beach Dance was more than 400.

Homeform 9D, led by Christie McPhail, was the winner at the Grade 9 Assembly, earning a centipede mascot for their spirited efforts.

Groups such as the student council have begun fundraising. On Friday, a representative from Quality Gift Shop gave a presentation on the articles the company carries. Students, armed with a gift catalogue and order forms, will be roaming around SD&G looking for support. Maple Ridge Public School is involved in a similar campaign. The company representative stated that $12,000 worth of sales would mean a $5,000 profit for the school. The gift catalogue contains many interesting items for Christmas giving. Isn't it hard to believe that we've only three months and 80 shopping days to go?

Many of us who have attended Tagwi for the last four years agree that never has there been such spirit shown in school activities. Much credit is due to our cheerleaders who are very vocal in their support.

Athletically, we are having a good year. Led by Bernard Julien, our Junior Boys Soccer Team has a record of four wins and one tie. On Thursday, both our senior and junior soccer players competed against Char-Lan.

The juniors had a 6-2 win, while the seniors went down fighting. Both schools showed considerable talent.

Tagwi is very proud of Kelly Conroy who recently won a (U.S.) $10,000 scholarship from St. Lawrence University in Canton, New York. Last year, Kelly was an important part of both our senior basketball and volleyball All-Ontario "A" championship teams. We wish Kelly the best of luck at Canton.

SPECIAL CEREMONY—During a social gathering Sunday afternoon at Alexander Hall, St. Finnan's parishioners presented Msgr. Donald Bernard McDougald a gift and flowers, celebrating his 35th anniversary ordination to the priesthood. Bishop Eugene LaRocque was also present. Making the presentation to Msgr. McDougald are Rachel Conway, president of the parish council, and Arthur Maclaren, chairman of church property.

DALKEITH

Jean MacLennan
874-2385

This week I'll start with a couple of late items—Gerald Seguin of Saskatoon spent a weekend with his mother, Mrs. Nelson Seguin and sisters Lise and Edna.

* * *

Alma and Charlie MacIntosh of Cornwall visited Teresa Hay.

Phyllis and Melvin Terry spent a few days with Velma and Henry Nicolson of Napanee, during the past week.

* * *

The local 4-H club "Dalkeith Elegant Etiquette" under the leadership of Mary Fraser and Wendy McNaughton have held their first two meetings. The president is Kim McNaughton and the secretary is Rae Upton. It is a very educational and interesting club with a lot of fun mixed in I bet.

* * *

On Saturday, Esther and Gordon Hardy celebrated their Golden Wedding anniversary with a lovely "At Home." They were married in East Bolton, Que. Fourteen years ago they moved to Dalkeith. Their two sons, Gordon Jr. and Edward, three granddaughters, Esther's aunt, Mrs. Muriel Hudson of Edmonton, as well as guests from Dorval, the Eastern Townships, Hamilton, Toronto, Ottawa and the local area were present.

* * *

Recently, as Fred Stewart of Braeside, Ont., was driving near Spring Creek, an albino chipmunk darted in his path and was killed. Fred picked it up and had the rare specimen mounted.

On Sunday, Archie and Marjorie MacRae had many visitors, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil MacRae of Cornwall, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Palfrey of Cornwall, Mr. and Mrs. John Fourney of Lancaster and Mr. and Mrs. Les Edgar of Kamloops, BC. Mr. and Mrs. Edgar were 57 years married on Sunday.

The Dalkeith Recreation Club reports the following activities: During July and August there were volleyball games each Sunday evening. The finals were held and the winners were the Duval family—gold, the Meloche family—silver, the Piche family, Rev. Dumoulin and Loczy group—bronze.

In tennis the gold winners were—female under 18, Shirley MacLeod; male under 18, Jamie MacLeod; female over 18, Linda MacLeod; male over 18, Louis Loczy.

The award for the best design on the boards of the hockey rink was won by the Duval family. The prize was dinner for two at the Granary.
