Illegal Fishing on Rideau.

Fishery Inspector H. Philips made a big haul the other night, when he seized about 500 yards of nets that were being used for illegal fishing in the Rideau Lake. Four men were implicated, and they not only suffered the loss of their nets, but were severely fined as well. The alertness of the official is having an effect, and the illegal netting of fish is now pretty well stopped in the Rideau.

Outbreak at Goderich.

Smallpox is epidemic at Goderich, and between forty and fifty cases have been quarantined. The schools have been closed and a general vaccination ordered. The churches held no service yesterday on account of the outbreak. Service was held in the Roman Catholic Church, but an announcement was made that no further services would be held until the spread of the disease had been checked.

A Narrow Escape From Death.

A very serious accident occurred at the Canadian Condensing Co's plant in this place yesterday afternoon. Mr. Archie Harrison, who was working on the boiler house, tripped over a scantling on the scaffolding and fell to the ground. He was at once removed to his home. As the doctors in town were away Dr. McLaughlin of Winchester, was called and later Dr. W. A. Brown, who made an examination and found one of his legs badly fractured, and his whole system badly skaken up, and a bad cut in the face. It is freely expressed that it was a miracle that he was not instantly killed, when it is known what he escaped in the fall. The prospects are good for his recovery.

Oscar Fulton of Avonmore Dead.

Oscar Fulton, exM. P., of Avonmore Ont., died at his residence on Friday evening, at 9 o'clock. He was a prominent man in his vicinity, having held the position of Reeve for the township of Roxborough for several years. He was elected in 1878 to represent the old county of Stormont in the interests of the Conservative party of the late Sir John A. Macdonald's advent to power on the defeat of the Mackenzie administration, which position he resigned in favor of the late Dr. Bergin, after the joining of the old county with Cornwall in 1882. He was a candidate for the provincial Legislature in 1894, in a three-cornered contest between himself, John Bennett and the late Wm. Mack, and was defeated on account of the popularity of the patrons of Industry, whose candidate was elected in the person of John Bennett, of Avonmore; a justice of the peace for the county, conveyancer, insurance agent and also a captain during the Fenian Raid in 1870. He was a pioneer in the Mercantile business stand practically in the woods in the 1870, and, after a few successful years alone, took into partnership his brother-in-law, the late W. H. Wyatt, of Osnabruck, county of Stormont, in 1843, he was 64 years of age on the 22nd of March last. He was a prominent member of the Church of England having been clergyman's warden for some twenty years, and Synod representative for a number of years. His advice was very often solicited in judical as well as other matters, and being naturally of a legal turn of mind, his advice was almost invariably proven correct. He leaves, besides, a large circle of friends, a widow, three sons and three daughters to mourn his loss: Cyril a prominent physician; Lewis, in the mercantile business at Avonmore; Mrs. Rev. R. J. Dumbrille, of Iroquois; Mrs. J. R. Cockurn, of Crysler; and Anna, the youngest, at home. He married Mary Catherine Wyatt, of Osnabruck, in the year 1867, who predeceased him some twelve years ago. His second wife was the daughter of the late John Annable, of Avonmore. The funeral took place at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Induction at Kenmore.

Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 26th was a red letter day in the history of the congregation of Kenmore and Marvelville, for on that date Rev. Wm. McNab was inducted there as the first settled pastor over this new charge. Some six months ago Vernon separated from Kenmore, and Mr. Prettie, who had ministered to the united congregation for over seven years, chose to stay with Vernon. Since that Kenmore has been without a minister, until a call was extended to Mr. McNab, of Powassan, Ont.

The pretty church was crowded early in the afternoon. Rev. Mr. Prettie of Vernon, moderator of the Ottawa Presbytery, presided. Rev. W. Crow of Manotick, preached, Rev. T. A. Sadler of Russell, addressed the minister, while Rev. Woods of Winchester, addressed the congregation.

In the evening a reception was held to extend a hearty welcome to the new minister and his family. After supper was served in the basement Rev. Mr. Cross of Kenmore, and Rev. Mr. Tredrea of Metcalfe, gave words of welcome on behalf of the Methodist and Baptist people of Kenmore and vicinity. Short addresses were also delivered by Rev. D. Stewart of Morewood, Rev. Prettie of Vernon, and Evangelist Woods of Metcalfe. The musical part of the program was furnished by the Kenmore choir. Mr. McNab enters upon his duties with a warm hearted band of workers who will loyally support him in all his endeavors.

...NEW BLOOD.

That is What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Do—That is Why They Cure So Many Diseases.

When persons have not enough blood, or when their blood is weak and watery, the doctors name the trouble anaemia. Bloodlessness is the direct cause of many common diseases, such as indigestion, palpitation of the heart, debility, decline, neuralgia, nervousness, rheumatism and consumption. The surest signs of poor blood are paleness, bluish lips, cold hands and feet, general weakness, low spirits and headaches and backaches. If anaemia is not checked in time it will probably develop into consumption. There is one certain cure for anaemia —Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually make new, rich, red blood, which fills the veins and brings new life, new energy and good health to bloodless people. In proof of this Miss Mabel Clendenning, Niagara Falls., Ont., says: "For two years I suffered from anaemia. I was weak, thin, had no appetite. I sometimes had distressing headaches and felt low spirited. My heart would palpitate violently; I could do no work around the house; I became very pale and my nerves got unstrung. The efforts of two good doctors failed to help me. I was in such a pitiful state. One day a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I did so. Soon I saw the pills were helping me and by the time I had taken nine boxes I was completely cured. I had a good appetite; gained in weight, I hadn't an ache or pain, could sleep well and I am in far better health now than I ever was. I cannot speak too highly of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me."

...SICKNESS.

Prof. Koch Finds That Crocodiles are the Cause.

Professor Koch has given a most interesting account of his recent experiments in East Africa to a special correspondent of the Lokalanzeiger, of Berlin, Germany.

The professor, who is in the best of health, said that he had been living for the last eighteen months on a desolate island belonging to the Sesse group, in the middle of Victoria Nyanza, with an army medical sergeant as his sole white companion.

They dwell in a straw hut similar to those occupied by the natives and saw only three Europeans throughout their stay, two of them being Viennese doctors and the third a German official. Their only means of communication with the world was a primeaval native boat fashioned out of a tree trunk, which conveyed them to the mainland.

Sleeping sickness is particularly prevalent in the Sesse Islands, the inhabitants of which are gradually dying off through the ravages of the disease.

Professor Koch has ascertained that wherever crocodiles are found the disease may be discovered, but only in places near the banks. The blood of crocodiles forms the chief nourishment of the glossina palpalis, the insect which conveys the germs of the disease. The insects suck the blood between the plates of the animal's hide.

The extermination of the glossina is impossible, but the same end may be reached by destroying the crocodiles or by the removal of the bushes and undergrowth where the animals lurk. RISE OF THE SASSOONS

READS LIKE A TALE FROM THE ARABIAN NIGHTS

From India They Went to England, and Now are Among the Intimates of King Edward.

The tale of how the Sassoons came to bask in the sunshine of royal favor in England is as romantic as a chapter from the Arabian Nights, writes a London correspondent. One member of the family, Arthur Sassoon, has just enjoyed the honor of entertaining his majesty at Tulchan Lodge in Scotland—and not for the first time, either. There is no more striking example of the power of wealth to carry one to the pinnacle of social eminence than that furnished by the Sassoons.

Abdallah Sassoon, the father of Arthur Sassoon, was a Bagdad Jew. For ages the family had been settled at Bagdad. They had the Semitic talent for making money and keeping it and transmitted the gift to their posterity. As merchants, bankers and financiers they waxed rich, generation after generation. The size of Abdallah's pile aroused the envy of his Mohammedan neighbors. They formed a plot to murder him and loot his property. Abdallah got wind of it. Hastily gathering together what valuables he could carry, he fled with his family to Bombay, abandoning perforce much of his possessions.

Bombay or Bagdad—it was all the same to this genius for making money. The Parsees—refugees, too, originally from Mohammedan persecution in Persia—had, even at that time, cornered most of the lucrative businesses in Bombay. They resented Abdallah's intrusion on their pet preserve. They tried to crowd him out. But Abdallah proved more than a match for them. He stuck and was soon making money

FASTER THAN ANY OF THEM.

But though he had changed his habitat he still clung obstinately to his patriarchal mode of life; and insisted that all the members of his family should retain the ancient Hebrew costume. Not until the breaking out of the mutiny did he consent to let them wear European clothes. "Let them see what side you are on," he remarked, as he gave them leave to adopt the sombre garb of Western civilization. He used to sit on a dais in the spacious hall where his business was transacted. With his flowing beard, turban and robes he was an imposing sight. No one ventured to speak to him unnecessarily In his own house he exacted all the deference that is usually accorded only to royalty.

At Abdallah's house in Bombay, one of Arthur Sassoon's sisters, Aziza Sassoon, was married. When one of her nephews was married later on, King Edward, then Prince of Wales, attended the wedding. The description, given by an eyewitness, of Aziza's marriage reception is worth recalling.

"The girl—she was only sixteen years old—was seated on a kind of throne, in the upper end of the room, railed off from the part where we unbelievers were permitted to come in order to view her. She was shrouded in a veil of white muslin, powdered with gold, and literally loaded with jewels. Long necklaces of pearls, strung and uncut jewels, and gold coins were piled upon her shoulders. Grouped about her were a number of old women who sprinkled her with rose water and chanted continually in a sort of mournful recitative—presumably blessings and wishes for the future joy. The wedding breakfast was conducted on original lines. We sat about the room in groups, and the servants came in with dishes of savory meats and sweetmeats. We had no plates, and it was a trifle embarrassing to take a bit of highly spiced chicken off the end of a fork with your fingers, and eat it as if it were a wafer or bread and butter at afternoon tea."

ABDALLAH WAS A PROUD MAN.

He had a high appreciation of his own lineage. He would do nothing to curry favor with the Gentiles. Like a Hebrew patriarch of old he abided by the ways of his forefathers. But it was different with his three sons, Abdallah, Reuben and Arthur. To England they came. Abdallah had his name changed to Albert soon after they arrived in England—Abdallah being too suggestively Oriental—and bought an immense house in Queen's Gate overlooking Kensington Gardens. Reuben took a big house in aristocratic Belgrave Square. Arthur took a mansion in Albert Gate. Society sniffed at them at first, but society could not resist their dinners. Society really had no cause to sniff at them at all. From Abdallah they had inherited keen intelligence as well as wealth; and as far as gentlemanly behavior went old Abdallah had taught them more in that line than most of the scions of the British aristocracy ever learn. It was because they were Jews and Orientals that society did not at first welcome them with cordiality.

That did not worry the Sassoons. They put their heads together, made their plans and waited. And they hadn't long to wait, either. Just how they managed it nobody knows, but it was not long before the King, then Prince of Wales, had taken dinner with each one of them in turn. Society gasped, but sniffed no more.

THE SASSOONS HAD ARRIVED.

It was Reuben Sassoon to whom the prince was most partial. Reuben used to get up big luncheon parties for him. At those entertainments the talents of one chef in particular were always brought into prominence. He had been imported from India because he could compound more delicious Indian curries than any other man in the land of their origin. And in those days the Prince of Wales was very fond of Indian curries. As time went on Reuben Sassoon became one of the most intimate of his majesty's friends. Indian curries would never have carried him that far. Nor would his share of old Abdallah's pile alone have sufficed. But it is equally true that had he not been a very rich man, he would never have got the chance to make good with his majesty. He died a year or two ago.

Albert, the eldest brother and Arthur the youngest, were only a degree or two less intimate with King Edward while he was still Prince of Wales than was Reuben. It was an unprecedented thing for the prince to show such strong partiality for three members of the same family. Albert, the former Abdallah, was made a baronet through the influence of the prince. He died in 1896 and his son Edward succeeded to the title and the royal favor.

Sir Edward added considerably to his inheritance by marrying the enormously rich daughter of

BARON GUSTAVE DE ROTHSCHILD

It was a very different sort of wedding from that of his aunt in Bombay, which has been described. It was the society event of the season. The King, then still Prince of Wales, was present. Nothing showed more strikingly how far the family had advanced since its flight from Bagdad some 60 years earlier.

After his father's death Sir Edward sold the Queen's Gate mansion and bought the showy house in Park Lane —London's millionaire's row—which has been built by Barney Barnato. Barney committed suicide before it was ready for his occupancy. He had mastered the art of making money, but not of getting enjoyment out of it. His Park Lane house was a monstrosity of ostentatious bad taste. Sir Edward wrought a great transformation in its interior and made it a fitting place for the entertainment of royalty.

Sir Edward has been a member of Parliament since 1900—a Conservative, of course. He goes in for imperialism and painting as much of the map of the world red as possible. There isn't much of the old Bagdad patriarch about him. If he puts enough money into his party's war chest, say anything from $200,000 to $300,000, he will no doubt obtain a peerage some day.

Arthur Sassoon, now that Reuben is dead, is the prime favorite of the King among the family. And Arthur studies to please the King. It was that which led him some years ago to lease Tulchan Lodge of the Dowager Countess of Seafield. Tulchan Lodge affords the finest grouse shooting in Scotland. The King can't eat Indian curry as he used to do, but he is still VERY FOND OF GROUSE SHOOTING.

Every fall he goes to Tulchan Lodge to get the pick of it. Portions of the estate are specially preserved for him. The King's heir, the present Prince of Wales, also pays an annual visit to Tulchan Lodge for the sport he gets there.

It has been a sore point with Arthur Sassoon that he has been unable to induce the dowager countess to sell him the property outright. But she has an aristocratic prejudice against parting with any of her family's ancestrael acres. However, the fact that he only leases the property has not prevented him from spending a lot of money in enlarging the house and fixing it up to suit the somewhat exacting taste of the King.

His Majesty's rooms at Tulchan Lodge, so far as privacy is concerned, are quite apart from the rest of house. They constitute a spacious, elaborately equipped flat with a private hall. Over the entrance is the inscription, "King Edward the Seventh." The color scheme of the interior decorations was selected by the King himself at the request of Mrs. Sassoon. Tulchan Lodge is really as much at the disposal of the King as if he owned it, and the arrangement involves the substantial advantage that it costs him nothing. When he goes there, the house party, of course, is of his own choosing and includes his particular friends of both sexes.

The Sassoons have left Bagdad and Bombay far behind them, but they have always stuck to the faith of their ancestors. Even if the King was their guest at the time, his entertainers faithfully observed the Jewish Day of Atonement in silence and fasting. And out of respect for their feelings, his Majesty's gun was silent that day and there was no slaughtering of grouse.

"Seest thou a man diligent in business," says the Talmud, "he shall stand before kings." To suit these modern days it might be rendered: Seest thou a man diligent in spending money; he shall sit down with kings.

HERRINGS 33 A PENNY.

Sixty Million Herrings Landed at Yarmouth One Day Recently.

There were remarkable scenes at Yarmouth, England, the other day. The town was full of herrings. It is estimated that 60,000,000 fish were landed from the boats, and prices dropped to as low as 2s. 6d. per cran of 1,000 herrings—thirty-three for a penny.

The work of unloading proceeded that night along a stretch of nearly three miles with the aid of flare lamps. Hundreds of horses and carts were occupied till past midnight carting away fish to the curing houses, and the Highland herring girls, pursuing their work with the aid of naphtha torches, lightened their labors by singing choruses.

Some boats were diverted to Grimsby to ease off the pressure. Hundreds of baskets and barrels filled with herrings had to remain all night on the quays. Every man in want of a job was able to find one during the day.

One firm report that the average catch of their fleet of a hundred boats was 130,000 fish. The sea under the influence of a good tide and a full moon seemed teeming with herrings.

She turned when he had closed the door, and Gordon saw that she was trembling. "I had told her to say that I was not here to anyone who came," she said, "I was afraid of being followed and—and also I expected someone who—who——"

"Usher?" asked Gordon, yet while the words passed his lips, he regretted the question.

Miss Gaunt bit her lip, but said nothing. "My father? How is he?" she asked after a moment.

"He is well, quite well," returned Gordon, "or rather he is well in health, but worried about you. It is to tell him your news that I have come here to-day."

"But how is it—where have you seen him?" asked the young girl, astonished.

"I left him not an hour ago in a house down at the East End. How I came to meet him was an accident, purely an accident, but that I can tell you later. I happened to mention your illness and your—forgive me—your hasty departure from my house——"

"And I found to my surprise that he knew nothing of it, though the—person who had given him the latest news he had of you, was aware that you had been in my house and also that you had left it—was he not?"

Miss Gaunt nodded, and remained a moment in thought.

"Mr. Usher" she said at last.

Gordon nodded. "Mr. Usher," he said.

"I do not understand why he did not tell my father at least a part of the truth," Miss Gaunt said after a moment, "but perhaps he had a reason which was good. He did know I had left your house, for—for I wrote and told him so."

"Yes," he said, "I guessed that. Here is the letter."

Miss Gaunt stretched out her hand and took the paper from him, while her eyes met Gordon's inquiringly.

"My letter?" she said.

Gordon bowed. "I have, of course, not read it," he said. "And yet when I say 'of course,' I am wrong, for I very nearly did read it. You must forgive me. I had better tell you the truth. I do not like Mr. Usher——"

Miss Gaunt was staring at him fixedly, but she made no sign; and Gordon continued: "I may be wrong—you must forgive me for that, too. When I heard that he was keeping your father, and had kept him in the dark, about several things, I considered him to blame. Your father wished to have news of you from a reliable source, and he begged me to bring him word of you. I went to Mr. Usher, and I asked him for your address. He denied having it. It happened that there was a photograph of yourself and some papers lying on a table by his side——"

For the life of him Gordon could not have helped bringing in the photograph, and watching the flush rise to Miss Gaunt's cheek as her eye met his, but he had no time to analyze her look, and went on:—

"While I talked, he seized one of the papers and attempted to hide it. I naturally thought that he was prevaricating, and that the papers had to do with yourself. I took it, and read the address——"

He stopped suddenly, for Miss Gaunt was looking at the wound on his temple

"You are hurt," she said, quickly. "You fought?"

Her tone made Gordon's heart beat tenderly. "It is nothing," he said. "Do you care?"

The young girl's face turned white, and for a moment he feared she was about to faint; and he bitterly regretted having allowed the question to escape his lips, for she turned away and, walking to the window, stood silent, looking out into the street.

"Forgive me, Miss Gaunt," he said coldly.

It seemed to him that she bent her head, but she did not turn round, and spoke again.

"Let us continue what I have to say," she said. "I have found you here and learn rather that, so far, you are safe, but what of the future?"

"The future?" The words were murmured only, but Gordon caught them, and the tone in which they were uttered.

"The future," he repeated. "Yes, what of the future? Oh, forgive me, but consider what you do! Hesitate; do not to your father from whom indeed you ought not to be separated; delay, I beg of you, before you put your future into the hands of this man Usher, who—who——"

Miss Gaunt took a step forward, looking him in the face, then, slowly she held out to him the letter which he had brought. "Read it," she said.

"Shall I?"

"You may," she returned, with her eyes still on his.

Gordon opened the paper, and read:—

"Since you left me yesterday, I have been thinking—thinking deeply. Safety may lie in the path which you suggest—safety for my father, which is everything, safety for myself, too, which I assure you carries little weight towards the decision you wish for. But does safety lie that way, even for my father? There may be another and a better and a juster way. It is I who am really the guilty one, and not my father; it must be so. It was I, and I alone, who was to blame for that terrible, terrible thing. I was the cause; is there any doubt? and it is I who should pay the penalty. I am thinking over it, I have thought over it, and I have decided; but this much I will grant to you—this much, I think—I am sure—I owe to you. If nothing happens, I, for one, will do nothing for a week. I will do nothing rashly, but, I am afraid, I am afraid, I cannot tell you to hope that I shall change my mind. I must beg you to leave me to myself for a week. At the end of that time you can come to me, and I will tell you what I have decided to do. Until then, believe me, I am grateful for what you have done for us.

"Vivienne Gaunt."

Gordon felt himself turn color as he read the letter, and his heart beat fast. Then he had been right from the very first moment he had seen her. She had not committed that deed, she could not have done it, for did not her letter say as much? A person who has committed a crime does not speak as the writer of that letter did. There was some mystery, some fearful misunderstanding; as he had always known there was, but Gordon had always felt that she was innocent, and now he knew it.

Yet the way was very dark. How was it that her father could believe her guilty, and what did it mean in her letter to Usher when she spoke of her father's safety and talked as if, to Usher, it was he that was the guilty one. Was it possible that to the daughter the father seemed the guilty one, and to the father the daughter—and what devilish trap had this Usher laid?

He looked up at last. "A week," he said, "well, a week is something. You will keep to that letter?"

"Certainly; what do you mean?"

"Will you give me that week, too?"

"I do not understand you."

"Will you give me that week in which to work for you, to prove to you that I was right when I took you away from that room that night, when I thought that I could save you."

"Save me—me! Ah, Colonel Gordon, you do not understand. You mean to be kind, but to save me would mean—— But you have just read my letter."

"It would mean to lose your father?" returned Gordon. "Well, Miss Gaunt, I promise you that it shall not mean that. I promise you, if you will, that rather than your father should be lost, you shall sacrifice yourself. Oh, yes, for that is what your letter means. But there may be yet another way, which neither you, nor even perhaps, this Mr. Usher, has thought of."

"What way? What way can there be?"

"Forgive me, it would be useless to tell you now. But this I can tell you: I believe from the bottom of my heart, Miss Gaunt, that there is another way. Will you give me that week—me—in which to try and find it?"

He stepped forward, and, after a moment's hesitation, held out his hand.

For a moment they stood facing one another. The young girl's lovely eyes looked into his, and Gordon meeting them with his own keen grey ones felt that she understood him.

"The future may not be as dark for you as you thought it," he said, gently; "if I am not mistaken in myself. If I could only feel as sure that my own might be as bright!"

Miss Gaunt did not answer, but her hand met Gordon's, and raising it gently to his lips, without looking at her again, he left the room.

CHAPTER XVI.

"A week," thought Gordon. "I wonder how much I can do in a week! We shall see; however, the first step must be to let Gaunt know how his daughter is."

He was turning in the direction of the East End, when he noticed that the evening was already drawing on, and remembered that he had had nothing to eat since morning. He concluded that he would have a hasty meal somewhere in the neighborhood, before making his way down to Minden Lane, and he was standing still looking about him, when a man passed him slowly, turned and came back, glancing quickly at him as he did so.

Gordon started, and looked after him. He had a quick eye and a particularly good memory for faces, and he felt that he knew this man. Who was he and where had he seen him before? And then he smiled. The fellow was one of the men in his regiment, of course, a corporal, who had enlisted at the beginning of the war, and retired after serving through it.

Gordon was walking on again, when suddenly his heart leaped. "Corporal Sterrett," that was the man. Gordon remembered now, and felt himself turn cold. The fellow was, or had been, in the Police Force before volunteering for Africa, and he recollected all about him now. He had borne an excellent character on his enlistment, but somehow or other had not been a great success in the regiment. Called variously "Stoat," or "Ferret;" he had never succeeded in making himself popular with his fellows, who, perhaps bore a natural antipathy to a man in blue, and he had never distinguished himself by any particular attention to duty, though he had done well enough to become a corporal. He was a man who had a great fondness for strolling about by himself, "stoating and ferreting about," as his comrades had put it, and had always been suspected of giving an eye more to the unearthing of hidden Boer treasures than to distinguishing himself in any of the numerous sorties round Rothville.

Yet Gordon knew that the man had been useful to him on many occasions, when his peculiar habits had put him in possession of details connected with the Boer besiegers—details which would have escaped the eyes of any one but "Stoat," and which often proved invaluable to Gordon in his defence of the beleagured town.

And the man was a Police Volunteer. He had been in the Force, in what position Gordon could not remember, and in all probability had returned to it. He was in plain clothes now; was he in the detective branch, and (it was this thought which had made Gordon's heart beat) was he watching Vivienne? Were they already so nearly on her track?

Gordon shuddered as he remembered "Stoat's" silent, dogged ways and keen penetration. If he had only a week before him, and this man against him, already at Vivienne's door, what hope could there be? Yet was there not a chance that he might be mistaken? Many things, notably his old wandering habits, might have brought the "Ferret" to this neighborhood, and it might, after all, be but the purest accident that Gordon had met him there as he came from Vivienne's house.

He determined to decide the question before he left the neighborhood, and, walking on carlessly, he turned a corner and waited. If "Stoat" had seen and recognized him, he might follow; or, if he was indeed watching the house, he might stay there, and when Gordon returned, as he intended to do if he saw no sign of the fellow pursuing him, he would make certain of the fact and decide what was to be done.

He waited round the corner, about a dozen yards down the street, holding a cigarette and a match-box in his hand. After a moment or so he heard a quiet and steady step come round the turning after him; and, striking a match, he lighted his cigarette, casting a glance at the approaching promenader as he did so.

It was the "Ferret:" and, throwing the match away, Gordon walked on.

As he walked he looked about him for a restaurant where he might satisfy his hunger, which was now becoming serious. Mr. Sterrett might wait while he ate and considered what was best to be done. Gordon did not want to lose him until he had come to some decision, but he felt as sure of the "Stoat" now as if he had him tied to a string. He knew that gentleman's quiet persistence; and coming at last to a clean-looking Italian restaurant, he turned carelessly in, and took a seat at a table.

He was deep in the intricacies of a very Cockney-Italian menu, when the door opened and Sterrett entered. He passed Gordon without looking at him, and taking a seat at a table to one side, he called to the waiter, and gave an order.

Gordon looked hard at him, but for a minute or two "Stoat's" face was blank and impenetrable. Then, suddenly, he looked up, stared at Gordon, and rising quickly to his feet, gave him a military salute.

Gordon nodded, a little puzzled.

"Sterrett?" he said. "I am glad to see you again."

"Thank you, sir," said the man, and, rising, he came across to Gordon's table.

He stood there quietly by Gordon's side, not saying anything, and with his impressionless face turned toward s the window, and Gordon for a minute or two hardly knew what to do.

"I hope you are getting on well, Sterrett, my man?" he said, at last.

"Not very well, sir, thank you," said Sterrett.

Gordon looked up at him. "Oh, I am sorry to hear that. What are you doing now? You have gone back to the pol—to your old trade, I suppose?"

"Yes, sir; I have gone back. The Criminal Investigation Department's my job now."

His face did not change, nor was there any particular meaning in his tone, yet Gordon felt as if "Stoat" had somehow implied very much more than his words had said.

"The work must be very interesting," he said at last, more from a desire to give himself time to think than anything else. "Aand from what I remember of you, Sterrett, it should suit you."

"Yes, sir; I am useful to them up there. I see most things that come my way."

"And some that don't, eh?" said Gordon, smiling, and trying to speak carelessly. "Are you at work now?"

"Yes, sir, I am on a job now."

"Is it—er—is it a difficult one?"

"It was, sir, a little; but I'm making my way fairly—now."

The last word and the slight intonation on it, made Gordon start, and look up quickly at Sterrett's face. But it was quite blank, and he was not even looking at Gordon.

Gordon tried back again.

"And yet you don't like the work?" he said. "Why is that?"

Sterrett's grim lips relaxed a little, and he turned to Gordon.

"Leads to nothing, sir," he said. "Too much like the army. Too much master and not enough man. You do the work—other people take all the credit; and the money, sir, and the money. Now money's a very useful thing, ain't it, sir?"

"Very."

"Yes, sir, money's a very useful thing. I could do a good deal with a bit of money now."

Gordon stared at him suddenly. Then he pointed to a chair in front of him. "Sit down, Sterrett," he said. "Can I order anything for you?"

"Thank you, sir, I have told the waiter. But my table's over there."

"It doesn't matter. I shall be pleased if you will have your dinner here," said Gordon, quickly; and he told the waiter to move Sterrett's place.

He knew Sterrett well enough to be aware that the man had some very good reason for his proceedings, and also for his words, which he was not in the habit of wasting—but what was he after?

"Yes, Sterrett," he said at length, as the other ate his dinner silently; "I suppose money is a very useful thing. Fortunately, I have enough for my wants myself."

"Yes, sir, so I thought."

It struck Gordon that "so I should suppose" would have been more natural under ordinary circumstances. "So I thought" seemed to imply that Sterrett had been thinking about it; and with a sudden comprehension, he turned and looked at the man, who met his gaze calmly.

"Oh, you thought so, Sterrett?"

"Yes, sir; I thought so."

"Then you have been thinking about it?"

Sterrett's expressionless face turned more blank than before. "Oh, no, sir," he said; "only sometimes I have been thinking lately what good use I might put a bit of money to if I had it. I was thinking so, funnily enough, sir, when I see you come out of that house in Charles Street just now."

"Why you wretched scoundrel," said Gordon suddenly to himself, "I'm hanged if you aren't hinting that you are to be bought! I wonder what your price is, and how much you know?"

And he watched Sterrett for a moment curiously. The ex-corporal had ordered that wonderful creation, a "fritto misto," and as he ate it he prodded it about with his fork as if he were investigating its innermost secrets, and "ferretting" it out, so to speak; and as Gordon eyed his heavy jaw and overhanging eyebrows, and remembered the almost uncanny experiences he had had of "Stoat's" powers of observation round Rothville, his mind turned instinctively to his bank account.

SIMPLE PRESCRIPTION.

EASILY MIXED AT HOME AND CURES ALL RHEUMATISM.

Full Directions to Make and Take This Simple Home-Made Mixture — Makes Kidneys Filter Acids.

When an eminent authority announced that he had found a new way to treat that dread American disease, Rheumatism, with just common, every-day drugs found in any drug store, the physicians were slow indeed to attach much importance to his claims. This was only a few months ago. To-day nearly every newspaper in the country, even the metropolitan dailies are announcing it and the splendid results achieved. It is so simple than any one can prepare it at home at small cost. It is made up as follows: Get from and good druggist Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. These are all simple ingredients, making an absolutely harmless home remedy at little cost.

Rheumatism, as every one knows, is a symptom of deranged kidneys. It is a condition produced by the failure of the kidneys to properly filter or strain from the blood the uric acid and other matter which, if not eradicated, either in the urine or through the skin pores, remains in the blood, decomposes and forms about the joints and muscles, causing the untold suffering and deformity of rheumatism.

This prescription is said to be a splendid healing, cleansing and invigorating tonic to the kidneys, and gives almost immediate relief in all forms of bladder and urinary troubles and backache.

TRUTHFUL JOE.

How He Cured a Smoky Chimney a Little Too Much.

Joe Mundy called in at Squire Holton's lately, and found him almost choked with smoke, when he suggested, "You don't know as much about managing smoky chimneys as I do, Squire, or you'd cure 'em."

"Ah!" said Holton, with interest, "did you ever see a smoky chimney cured?"

"Seen it?" said old Joe. "I think I have. I had the worst one once, and I cured it a little too much.'

"How was that?" asked Holton.

'Why, you see," said Joe, "I had a little house built out yonder ten or twelve years ago. Jim Bush, the fellow that built it, kept getting tipsy. I told him I thought he'd have something wrong, but he stuck to it, and finished the house.

"Well, we moved in, and made a fire next morning to boil the tea-kettle. All the smoke came through the room, and escaped out of the windows; not a bit went up the flues. We tried it for two or three days, and it got worse and worse. By and by it came on to rain, and the rain began to come down the chimney. It put the fire out in a minute, and soon it came down by the pailful. We had to get the baby off the floor as quick as we could, or it would have been drowned. In fifteen minutes the water stood knee-deep on the floor.

"I pretty soon saw what was the matter. The stupid fellow had put the chimney wrong end up, and it drawed downwards. It gathered all the rain within a hundred yards, and poured it down by bucketfull."

"Well, that was unfortunate," remarked Holton; "but what in the world did you do with the house? You never cured that chimney?'

"Didn't I though?" answered old Joe. "Yes, I did."

"How?" asked Holton.

"Turned it the other end up," said the incorrigible, "and you ought to have seen it draw. That was the way I cured it too much."

"Drew too much?" asked Holton.

"Well, Squire, you may judge for yourself," said old Joe. "Pretty soon after we got the chimney the other end up I missed one of the chairs out of the room, and directly I seed another ofem shooting towards the fireplace. Next the table went, and I see the back leg going up. Then I grabbed the old woman under one arm and the baby under tother and started; but just as I got to the door I seed the cat going across the floor backwards, holding on with her claws to the carpet and yelling awfully. It wasn't no use. I just seed her going up the chimney, and that was the last of her."

"Well, what did you do then?" asked Holton; "of course, you could not live in such a house?"

"Couldn't I though?" said Joe. "But I did; I put a poultice on the jamb of the fireplace, and that drawed tother way, so we had no more trouble."

'Luckiest man I ever knew—everything succeeded with him. He had only to say what he wanted and he got it. Why, confound it, I was walking with him one day—the very last day of his life—and he said to me. 'When I die I want to die suddenly.' Got run over that very night. Ever see such luck?"

Greene—"You often hear of the river falling, but it never seems to hurt itself." Browne—"Well, you see, it always falls on its bed!"

About the Farm

STARTING A FLOCK.

To persons wanting to begin raising fowls, and to those who are tired of going along slipshod fashion year after year, the best advice is to begin right. Get a good start, and half the battle is over. If you are new at the business, read and study all the things you can about poultry, and that will do no harm if you are tired of unbusinesslike methods and want to make money. The old saying, "Be sure you're right, and then go ahead," is peculiarly fitted to this business. A good start means everything in making a success later.

Several things enter into getting a right start. In the first place, too much money should not be spent; in the second, you must be sure you have time and patience for the work; and third, you must study conditions. It is foolish and useless to introduce a few pure-bred chickens into a mongrel flock and expect them to be the leaven that will leaven the whole lump. Many have tried this plan, and have failed miserably. Neither is it advisable to put pure-bred, or any other kind of fowls, into a filthy house, thinking you will house them there for a short time, and clean up later on. Put off buying your fowls until everything is ready. Clean up the premises thoroughly, and plow under every bit of soil fouled by chickens that have belonged to you or anyone else before starting. Get your yards and coops into good condition, and then go ahead.

Save money on everything but your stock. Make your coops out of old boards, and cover with straw or corn fodder; make coops for little chicks out of store boxes; nest boxes out of cheap boxes; use old dishes for drinking vessels, and in every way economize so as to keep expenses down. Chickens do just as well in a cheap coop as an expensive one, provided it is dry and warm. Even a framework of poles banked with fodder or straw to be burned the following spring has been known to keep chickens safe and warm all winter, and one successful chicken-raiser always uses the family supply of fire wood, raked up into walls and covered with straw for her fowls. In this way she has a new coop every fall, and thinks the chickens do better. Of course, she has a permanent house too, but she likes the "wood house" for the winter season.

It is poor economy to starve the chickens under the impression that you are economical. Better feed them well and rush them to market than to have a lot of hungry, peeping fowls at your heels whenever you set your feet outdoors. A hen will lay just as fine eggs in an old water-pail filled with straw as in a patent nest box; but she must have her crop well filled with seasonable food to make her worth anything as a layer or for the table. If wheat is very cheap in your locality, do not discard it for expensive corn, but manage to give the fowls plenty of good food, and use a variety. Milk, alfalfa, corn, table scraps, fresh meat and other things will keep chicks in good condition.

Don't waste money buying a lot of medicines in the start. Just remember that lice and filth are the bottom of most poultry evils, and determine to be without both. An occasional dose of some sort of poultry food (and there are many good kinds) will do much toward keeping off diseases, but cleanliness and care will do more than all the medicines in the world. The best way to doctor most sick chickens is to cut off their heads and bury them deep in the earth.

When it comes to buying your first fowls, make up your mind which is the best breed for your peculiar conditions, and then buy of a reliable dealer. If you want an all-around hen select that type; if you live in town, where the range is limited, get some of the big, lazy fowls that do not care to wander, and if there are marked peculiarities in the preferences of the people you expect to be your patrons, keep them in mind when you start. While it would be foolish to spend time consulting all tastes, it would be equally foolish to buy a variety for which there is no demand in your neighborhood. Begin modestly in everything but the grade of the fowls, and work to the top of the ladder. In this way your chicken business will be both pleasant and profitable.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

If the hens are compelled to hunt their food entirely, and receive little consideration from their owner, they will be unable to give a satisfactory return for the space they occupy on the farm.

A grain mixture consisting by weight of linseed meal two parts, wheat bran two parts, and corn and oats chop four parts; fed in quantities adapted to the size and capacity of the animals, from six to ten pounds daily, should keep up the flow of milk. The quality of the milk will vary with the animal.

Roots and tubers should form a large part of the feed for calves in the winter. Turnips, artichokes and beets are all good, cheap feeds for calves and sheep in the winter season. They [illegible] much better on half the [illegible] with roots and tubers. [illegible] tired of all feed in winter, get so that they do not eat well. They relish some succulent much better.

It has been found that [illegible] cow calving the last of October, well kept, housed and fed during winter, will give in twelve months nearly 30 per cent. more milk than will if she calves in April; and in addition to 30 per cent. more milk there is a paying demand for fine butter the winter, and the milk of this cow prolonged by the grazing of the summer pastures, can be made into [illegible] cheese, the dairy will be raised in commercial importance and be put on a yet more substantial basis. Of course there must be a conspicuous farm improvement to carry out these plans, but a farm improvement is always an improvement that pays twofold.

To a weaning colt feed the following: two pounds cut hay, three pounds wheat bran, two pounds linseed meal. Let the wheat bran and linseed meal be mixed together and then mixed with the moistened cut hay. This may be given in two feeds with what long hay it chooses to eat. Cornmeal is a heating food and should be avoided as a food for a growing colt, but wheat bran contains the best elements to grow good healthy bone. The linseed meal will be excellent to keep the digestive organs in health, grow muscle and give the colt a smooth coat.

If will not do to feed brood mares on meal, although it is not likely that it would affect all of them, but it might be the cause of abortion to one or more, and it is therefore unsafe to feed it. For brood mares feed with cut oats, two pounds cornmeal and three pounds bran, and if from their heavy weight they require more, add one pound bran. We consider cut oats, with straw, as probably less nutritious than good hay. Much cornmeal is improper for [illegible] brood mares, because of its heating effects. Bran is a cooling food, [illegible] cellent to keep up the vital energy, furnish the material for developing the coming foal.

Special Prizes for Poultry.

A special prize list is being prepared for poultry at the Eastern Ontario Live Stock and Poultry Show at Ottawa, January 10th to 24th, 1908. The specials will have a value of over $500 and include 22 silver cups, several medals, silk ribbons by specialty clubs, goods and over $100 in cash. The cash offered in regular prizes amounts to $2,000, so that altogether prizes to a value of $2,500 are offered for poultry. Intending exhibitors should apply to A. P. Westervelt, Secretary, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, for a copy of the special list, which will be ready for distribution about the 15th of December.

The poultry exhibition room at this show is a splendid one in which to display poultry. Every part is well lighted and galvanized iron wire coops are provided for all birds. The entry fee covers the cost of cooping and feed during the time the birds are at the show. Breeders who wish to increase their sales of birds and eggs can not do more effective advertising than by exhibiting at this show.

Easy te Mix This.

What will appear very interesting to many people here is the article taken from a New York daily paper, giving a simple prescription, as formulated by a noted authority, who claims that he has found a positive remedy to cure almost any case of backache or kidney or bladder derrangement, in the following simple prescription, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease.

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

A well-known druggist here at home, when asked regarding this prescription, stated that the ingredients are all harmless, and can be obtained at a small cost from any good prescription pharmacy, or the mixture would be put up if asked to do so. He further stated that while this prescription is often prescribed in rheumatic afflictions with splendid results, he could see no reason why it should not be a splendid remedy for kidney and urinary troubles and backaches, as it has a peculiar action upon the kidney structures, cleansing these most important organs and helping them to sift and filter from the blood the foul acids and waste matter which causes sickness and suffering. Those of our readers who suffer can make no mistake in giving it a trial.

The Late Richard Loucks.

At Froatburn, on Thursday, Nov. 14th, occurred the death of Richard Loucks, a highly respected resident of the township. Despite his advanced age 82 years, he had remained in good health until the last summer when a gradual decline began. He is survived by two daughters and four sons, one of the latter being Mr. John H. Loucks of this town. The funeral service conducted on Saturday at St. John's church, Riverside, by Rev. J. C. F. Rupp, was attended by a large number of sympathizing friends.—Herald.

THE EQUALIZATION APPEAL.

In Progress Last Week Before His Honor Judge Liddell.

The hearing of the appeal entered by the Township of Osnabruck against the Equalization By-law of the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, began on Monday morning last before His Honor Judge Liddell, to whom it was referred by the consent of all parties.

The appellant municipality is represented by Mr. J. C. Milligan; the respondent United Counties by Mr. Adrian I Macnonell; the town of Cornwall by Mr J. G. Harkness; the townships of Williamsburg and Matilda and Iroquois by Mr. I. Hilliard; the town of Alexandria by Mr. A. L. Smith; the townships of Finch and Winchester and village Chesterville by Mr. W. B. Lawson.

The evidence of the valuators of the township of Osnabruck, James Martin and A. T. Shaver, was taken during Monday and the greater part of Tuesday, Mr. Martin being subjected to a very severe cross-examination, after having been one day giving his evidence in chief.

The evidence of Mr. Shaver was then taken and he corroborated Mr. Martin nearly every particular. From the evidence produced it appears that the assessment of the township of Osnabruck was made at about the actual cash value.

The village of Finch was then taken up and concluded before rising on Thursday night. The valuators, M. A. Smirle and D. G. McMillan, gave testimony as to the lands and buildings in the village.

D. D. Cameron, the assessor of the village of Finch for 1906, was also called and testified as to his method of assessing, and swore that he assessed the land at one-half what he thought the actual value and the buildings at about two-thirds.

The valuators placed the actual value considerably above the asessed values.

The hearing was adjourned until Thursday morning.

The hearing of the appeal was resumed yesterday morning. The day was occupied with the taking of the evidence of the valuators for the Township of Finch, S. Stevenson and D. J. McMillan; also of D. D. Cameron, the assessor for 1906 and 1907, and of James Simpson, the township clerk. The evidence showed that the township is assessed at about half the actual value, the assessor stating that he made up his mind what the land and buildings were worth and then assessed them at one half.

The case of the township of Roxborough was taken up this morning, Mr. C. H. Cline, of Maclennan, Cline & Mclennan, appearing for that municipality. The examination of the valuators, A. Fraser, of Sandringham, and Duncan Miller, of Avonmore, and the assessor for 1906, Charles Monroe, of Monkland, will probably occupy the entire day. It is proposed to take up the cases of the township of Cornwall and the town of Cornwall to-morrow.

Among those present were Deputy Reeve W. C. Markell and Councillors Glbert S Hodgins, A. J. Shaver and W. A. Stewart, township clerk H. E. Hodgins, and assessors E. Johnston and Ed. Shaver, of the township of Osnabruck; Reeve J. K. McLeaan, Deputy Reeve J. D. O'Gray, township clerk J. R Simpson, and the valuators, D. G. McMillan and Stanley Stephenson, of the township of Finch; Reeve George McLean, of the village of Finch; G. F. Jardine, Newington, and Roy W. Helmer, Lunenburg; Reeve A. J. McMillan and Deputy Reeve D. A. McGregor, Roxborough—Cornwall Freeholder.

Death of George Utman.

George Utman, who carried on the shoe-making business in Winchester for several years, died at his home there Sunday morning, Nov. 17th, at the age of 75 years. Mr. Utman had been ailing all summer, but had only been under the treatment of a physician for about five weeks, the disease being diagnosed cancer of the stomach. The deceased who was born in the township of Williamsburg, was a devoted Methodist and in politics a staunch Liberal. The funeral was held at the Methodist church, the remains afterwards being interred in the family plot at Vancamp. A widow, three sons and one daughter are left as survivors. The sons are Nelson of Cardinal, and James and Allen of Winchester. The daughter is Mrs. Albert Weir of Bishop's Mills.

John Low, of Bear Brooke had both eyes blown out by dynamite which he was using to blow out stumps on Thursday. He was tapping the stuff into a hole when it went off and injueed his eyes. He is not fatally injured.

Top of Head Blown off.

The news has reached Brockville of the terrible end of George Beatty, a native of Leeds county, and for many years a resident of Lansdowne, where he was born and raised. At Red Deer, Alta., while shooting rats in the cellar of his hotel, the gun discharged in taking it down from the wall, and the contents, entering over the right eye, took an upward course, blowing off the top of his head.

Deceased left these parts twenty-five years ago, after serving with the Canadian troops in the first Riel rebellion, and engaged in farming near Red Deer, subsequently purchasing an hotel. He leaves a widow and family. Walter Beatty, ex-M.L.A., Delta, is a brother

Two Small Fires at Smith's Falls.

Two fires broke out in Smith's Falls in the early hours of Sunday morning. The first occurred at half past two, in the Scranton Correspondence School, in the Clark block, Main street. Before the fire could be got under control all the contents of the room were destroyed.

While this fire was in progress, flames were noticed bursting from windows in the third story of the Russell House, which is located diagonally across the street. The water was at once turned on and the fire was soon put out, but not before the contents of the room were destroyed.

Several residence in Aylmer were robbed on Wednesday night.

Dr. McIntyre, M. P., was renominated by the Liberals of Strathcona.

Rheumatism
I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.
In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

SAN FRANCISCO'S HARBOR

Perhaps the Most Notable "Bottle" Harbor In the World.

Perhaps the most notable "bottle" harbor in the world is that at San Francisco. Here is a vast reach of water fifty-five miles long and in some parts twelve in width. Into this bay the tides of the Pacific flow through the famous Golden Gate. This is a strait about a mile in width in its narrowest part and very deep. The proud Californians look out over this serene expanse and tell you that here is anchorage for the combined navies of the world, which indeed seems a very mild statement of the case. Aside from the immensity of this harbor facility it is interesting to notice that California's two big rivers after traversing the great interior valley flow into this bay. Thus nature has furnished two serviceable water roads, leading from a most notable natural harbor into the very heart of a rich farming, mining and lumbering region. These rivers, the Sacramento and San Joaquin, are of the same commercial significance to California that the Hudson is to New York.

The harbor at San Francisco is the more noteworthy because it is the only one of first magnitude south of Puget sound. Between these points California presents to the orient an inhospitable cliff coast, only occasionally broken by a little beach or minor inlet. Little coasting steamers make landings, it is true, at several points along this grim front, but it is a matter of considerable hazard. In some places along this coast great cranes fixed upon the cliff hoist people and freight ashore in baskets. And the daring little skipper must even then keep one eye to windward lest a crashing storm drive in upon him and forever terminate his service on the sea. Thus it is that the two great harbors mentioned must for all time share a monopoly of the Pacific ocean commerce. One familiar with the Atlantic seaboard can parallel the situation by blotting out in his mind's eye all the ports between Savannah and Portland save only New York and between these in place of the numerous hospitable inlets substitute a scarcely broken sea cliff. He will then have the conditions before him which give to San Francisco its pre-eminence. —Walter J. Kenyon in St. Nicholas.

MEANING OF MOLES.

A mole on the right side of a man's forehead denotes wonderful luck; on the left side of a woman's forehead, gifts from the dead.

On the left side of a man's forehead a mole denotes a long term in prison; on the left side of a woman's forehead, two husbands and a life of exile.

A man with a mole in the middle of his forehead has a cruel mind. A woman with such a mole is foolish, idle and envious.

A mole on the neck in man or woman promises a long and happy life, wealth and fame.

A man with a mole on the left side of the upper lip rarely marries, and such a mole in the case of a woman denotes suffering.

On the right side of the upper lip a mole promises good to both sexes.

Simple Cure For Neuralgia.

Here is a simple method of curing facial neuralgia: If the neuralgia is on the right side of the face the left hand should be placed in a basin of water as hot as can be borne, or if neuralgia is in the left side of the face then the right hand should be placed in the hot water. It is asserted that in this way relief may be obtained in less than five minutes. The explanation is that the two nerves which have the greatest number of tactile nerve endings are the fifth and the median nerve. As the fibers of these two nerves cross any impulse conveyed to the left hand will affect the right side of the face or if applied to the right hand will affect the left side of the face. This is on account of the crossing of the cords. —Indian Review.

An Elastic Conscience.

"Here, my dear," said the husband, producing a roll of bills—"here is $40 I won playing poker over at Brown's last night. You may have it to buy that dress you wanted." Reluctantly the conscientious wife took the money, then said, with an expression of rigid rectitude: "I simply shudder at the thought of using money gained in such a way. Henry, promise me that after you have won enough for me to buy the hat to go with the dress you will never again touch those awful cards. I don't want my husband to become a gambler."—Judge.

Lunar Athletics.

The "man in the moon" must surely regard with amused contempt our much vaunted athletic records. A good terrestrial athlete could cover about 120 feet on the moon in a running broad jump, while leaping over the barn would be a very commonplace feat. He would find no difficulty in carrying six times as much and running six times as fast as he could on earth, all because the moon attracts bodies with but one-sixth of the force of the earth.

Both Alike.

The wife in the middle of the night was awakened by the loud snores of her husband. She endured the horrible racket as long as she could. Then, pinching the man sharply, she said:

"Herbert, you'd make less noise if you kept your mouth shut."

Herbert, sleepy and surly, muttered: "So would you."

Replaced.

Mistress — Why, Bridget, what on earth are you doing with all the broken dishes on the shelf? Bridget — Sure, mum, yez towld me Oi wur to replace every one Oi broke. —London Answers.

STOP THE STRENUOUS LIFE.

Weakens the Tissues and Lessens Organic Vitality.

The stress and strain of the strenuous life in both city and country tends toward stomach troubles:

The frantic rush for pleasure, money and excitement is bringing serious results Elaborate food, late suppers, over-eating, and too much drinking are some of the causes of stomach weakness for which the individual is responsible.

Five people suffer to-day where one did ten years ago with sick headache, dizziness, flatulence, distress after eating, specks before the eyes, bloting, nervousness, sleeplessness and the many other symptoms of indigestion.

All who are suffering with stomach troubles, and that means at least two out of three in Chesterville and other towns, should use Mi-o-na stomach tablets. Nothing else is as safe, yet effective; nothing else can be so thoroughly relied upon to relieve all troubles from indigestion as Miona. It is unlike any remedy heretofore known, and is actually one of the most valuable discoveries in modern medical science.

It is not a mere digestive taken after the food is eaten, but a true tonic, stimulant and strengthener for the muscular walls of the stomach, increasing the flow of digestive fluids and putting the stomach into such condition that it does the work nature expects of it. It is an absolute and lasting cure, for it banishes all weakness and debility from the stomach and bowels.

Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere for 50 cents, and we positively guarantee to refund your money should you purchase a box and be dissatisfied with results. Write for free sample, addressing Booth's Mi-o-na, Box 997, Buffalo, N. Y.

INVITE A TEST.

Catarrh Sufferers Should Try Hyomei on This Guarantee.

There is no other treatment for catarrh that in any way resembles Hyomei, none that gives such quick curative results and lasting satisfaction, no medicine that can take its place, none that can be sold on a guarantee like this, to Refund the money unless it cures.

Catarrh is a germ disease, and can be cured only by breathing Hyomei, so that the most remote air cells in the nose, throat and lungs are reached by its antiseptic healing. In this way all catarrhal germs are killed, the irritated mucous membrane is healed and catarrh is driven from the system.

This wonderful medicated air treatment does not drug and derange the stomach, but is breathed through a little pocket inhaler that goes with every dollar outfit.

We positively guarantee Hyomei, for should you buy a complete outfit, price $1.00, and be dissatisfied with results, your money will be refunded. Hyomei is sold by druggists everywhere. Write for literature. Booth's Hyomei Co., Buffalo, N.Y.

The Magnet Cream Separator.

The Petrie M'fg. Co., Ltd.

Hamilton, Ont.

Gentlemen,—I purchased a Magnet Cream Separator from your agent, C. M. Munro of Chesterville, I saw as soon as I examined it that it had many advantages over any other separator that I had seen. First, the square gear is more durable, second the bowl staid at both ends, third easy to turn and just the right height and easy to wash which I consider is a big saving of time and it skims perfectly clean.

I take pleasure in recommending the Magnet and would advise all dairymen to give it a trial.

HOASIC.

The silent messenger, at 9 30 p. m. on the 12th, called to his reward one of the pioneers of Dundas County, Mr. George E. Wells, of Hoasic. Mr. Wells who was so well and favorably known through out Dundas and Stormont counties, had been in ill health for over a year. Prior to this time, however, even though he had celebrated his 72nd birthday, from his very active habits he seemed young and continued to take the same keen interest in live public questions of the day and in the skilled and scientific tilling of the soil as had characterized his whole life. Mr. Wells was not only one of the most successful and prosperous farmers of Dundas County but he had, for a period of 20 years prior to 12 years ago, carried on a very lucrative business in farming implements and all kinds of up-to-date machinery, his dealings with his fellows still being most favorably commented upon. Many were the remarks that "his word was their bond."

The funeral which was very largely attended, was conducted in his own residence, Rev. Mr. Roy of Osuabruck Centre, and T. C. Cassidy, Methodist of Aultsville, officiating.

The pall bearers were the deceased's four sons, Edward J., George H. Curtis and Durham, and his two son-in-law, Mr. R. C. Bogart, of Berwick, and Dr. Bogart of Berwick, and Dr. Bogart, of Kingston. Much sympathy is extended to the bereft widow and the four sons and three daughters who mourn their loss.

Rosy Cheeks For Pale Girls.

Don't be debarred from strength and spirit, don't give in to illness and despair. Ferrozone supplies tone and vigor through which all functions of womanly life are maintained and fortified. From New Richmond, Que., comes the following statement from Mrs. Isidore Boissoneault: "I take deep pleasure testifying to the powerful influence of Ferrozone. For years my daughter has been pale and sickly—showed signs of advanced anaemia. Her lips got so white and her cheeks so devoid of color I feared consumption. I can certify Ferrozone made an excellent cure, and to-day my daughter's health is the best." 50c. per box at all dealers.

EUROPE'S AIR WARSHIPS

FIVE NATIONS AT LEAST HAVE DIRIGIBLE BALLOONS.

Germany, England, Austria and Italy Have Squadrons of the Air.

At least five of the great Powers of Europe now possess more or less efficient dirigible war balloons, and these machines may play an important part in the next great conflict. France has La Patrie, the first and perhaps the most practical of all. Germany has the Parseval, the unnamed Gross balloon, and the Zeppelin airship. England has the Nulli Secundus, and both Austria and Italy have war dirigibles which really sail the air, though very little is known about them.

France was the first country to develop an aerial engine of war which was a distinct advance over the old time balloon, such as did good service as far back as the siege of Paris in 1870-71 and was used for observation in the Russo-Japanese war. On July 14 of this year, at the review of the garrison of Paris at Longchamps, La Patrie made her first appearance. The note of a siren in the air drew the eyes of the great crowd aloft, and there was a sure enough dirigible, looking like a great whale, sailing over their heads, now with, now against, and again athwart the wind, ascending and descending and changing her course at the will of her crew.

The later doings of La Patrie—how she sailed around the Eiffel Tower on July 23, with Premier Clemenceau as a passenger, called on President Fallieres at the Elysee Palace on August 9, and made various other flights under test conditions—are well known. The French consider her one of the most important features of the national defence. Their confidence in the present airship is [illegible] at any rate to cause them to appropriate $180,000 for the construction of [illegible] more.

The main body of La Patrie resembles

HUGE BOLOGNA SAUSAGE,

[illegible] that at one end it is pointed like [illegible]ar. It is nearly 200 feet long and 35 feet in diameter. It has two propellors, each of about 8 feet [illegible]meter, which gives it an average [illegible]ed of about 27 miles an hour. The [illegible]r is suspended from the body of the balloon and besides fuel for a ten hour flight it will carry a weight of more than 2,500 pounds. All the framework is made of steel tubing and the under side has a sheathing of light, tough armor-plate calculated to resist rifle bullets.

Equally like a sausage but shorter and thicker is the latest German balloon, which seems to have put both the Parseval and the Zeppelin inventions in the shade, at least for the present. It made its first appearance on July 23, sailing to Berlin from the artillery school at Jungfernheide and back again, remaining in the air three hours and twenty-five minutes. It is the invention of Maor Gross of the Tegel aeronautic battalion of the German army, and it is understood that a whole flotilla is to be constructed on the same general pattern. The Germans continue to back Count Zeppelin also in his experiments with airships. He has actually constructed an airship of aluminum 500 feet long, which rose to a height of 2,500 feet and made a journey of thirty miles, flying over Lake Constance in 1906. The enormous weight and size of this machine render it hopeless as an adjunct to an army in the field and the Count is now busy trying to build a more easily portable military airship.

[illegible] Austrian dirigibles were first heard of on August 1st last. Three of them made a flight that day over the fortifications of Cracoria. They remained in the air a considerable time, and the other Governments believe that they are serviceable. The secret of their construction has been carefully guarded, as has that of the Italian war balloon. Little or nothing is known of the latter except that in the autumn field manoeuvres of the Italian army this year it was in constant operation, and staff officers, so far as they would talk about it at all,

EXPRESSED SATISFACTION.

England is the latest Power to give a demonstration of military aeronautics. The voyage of the Nulli Secundus to London and its failure to get back in the teeth of a stiff gale were recently told by cable.

So certain are the war experts that the balloon is to be a prominent factor in the strategy of the future that they are all forming large aeronautic establishments. France has no actual school for balloonists, but there are several balloon clubs, whose employees acquire a certain amount of skill in aerial navigation. These when they perform their military duty are drafted into the Battaillon d'Aerostieres, which has its headquarters at Moissons, and they spend their entire term of service learning to navigate and fight and do scout duty in the air. The post is under a commandant, and it occupies the old zoological garden of St. Cyr. There is another station at Chalais-Mendon, also near Paris, where there is a large balloon factory..

Germany has a private school for aeronauts at Chemnitz. The military school and experiment station is at Jungfernheide. The head of the service is Major Gross of the Aerostiers of Tegel.

England has experimental stations both at the camp of Aldershot and at Farnsborough in Hampshire, whence the [illegible] Secundus started on its memorable [illegible]. Probably every country in Eur[illegible]s a busy corps of experimenters at [illegible]ivity even in little Belgium was shown recently by the report of experiments in firing at balloons with artillery. This illustrates the new problems that the dirigible balloon is bound to introduce into the art of war.

The question is of dual bearing: What will the balloons accomplish, and what can be done against them? In the primary stage, of course, their utility for scouting is most obvious. With the present range of fire the prime requisite of every commander in the field is some means superior to cavalry scouts of locating the enemy and gaining some idea of the STRENGTH OF HIS DEFENCES.

The dirigible balloon keeping the air for ten hours and travelling at the rate of 27 miles an hour plainly solves this problem. Many hundreds of feet in the air, the engineers of each army can trace the fortifications of a city, sketch the earthworks of an army arrayed for battle, count the guns and the battalions, estimate the re-enforcements coming up and form a fair idea of contemplated plans of attack. Much of this information can be conveyed by signal flashes direct to headquarters, and plans, sketches and photographic films can be dropped within the friendly lines without wasting time to descend.

Havoc can be spread in the enemy's lines by dropping explosives upon him. Carrying a crew of four men, La Patrie is said to be able to life more than 2,000 pounds of dead weight to a height of 1,000 feet and remain aloft two hours. What is to prevent her, the French experts ask, from hovering over the enemy's camp or works and dropping explosives there?

As these possibilities are open to both sides alike, the means of countering to the war balloon are eagerly discussed. At a height of 1,000 feet the balloon is safe from artillery fire. No guns now existing can be elevated sufficiently to fire at it. The rifle bullet is futile against the balloon itself. The hole which it bores in the envelope practically closes itself like a puncture in a rubber tire. Of course there is a leakage, but it is so trifling in proportion to the volume of the balloon that it would not seriously affect its buoyancy in a whole day's fight.

Even shrapnel has failed to bring down an old-fashioned balloon which was riddled with it for many hours. Shell are equally useless. They pass through the envelope without exploding and the chances of their striking the framework and causing serious harm are trifling.

Finally there is the prospect of encounters between the war balloons themselves, and this is what some students of the subject look forward to as the characteristic feature of future war. Each army will send out fleets of airships not merely to attack the enemy on land but to defend itself.

Hence arise theoretical estimates of future baloon fleets, their armament and their tactics. Whether they will fight with light cannon at long range or will attempt ramming and boarding, whether great battleships will be built with numerous crews or whether the fighting will be confined to skirmishes between light craft—these are the questions that soldiers in Europe are asking.

CHILDREN OF THE ANCIENTS.

Present-Day Boys and Girls Hold a Very Different Place in the World.

There has recently been put upon exhibition in the British Museum a new collection, or more strictly speaking, a rearrangement of certain old collections in such a way as to make an entirely new exhibit, representing the surroundings and houses of the Greeks and Romans two thousand years ago.

One sees here the dress, furniture, kitchen utensils, surgical instruments—all the paraphernalia of life of the old peoples.

But among all the cases none is of more fascinating interest, none brings the far-away centuries more vividly before us than the case containing the toys of the children. Here are a tiny chariot with two prancing horses an inch and a half high, a leaden horseman, a Pomeranian dog, a fox-terrier with a collar,—and also with a fine long tail,—a monkey eating a bun.

Here are tiny mechanical toys, a doll's chair and a sofa of some brown glazed ware with imitation rolled back and arms. There are also mugs painted with figures of children, and here, too, are the dolls. Most of them are carved, many with beautifully jointed legs and arms, and plainly very expensive, but the child of today would pass them by with no more than a curious glance. She would be right, for these dolls at least were never played with—they were discovered, nearly all of them, in funeral urns.

But among them there is one that no doll-loving little girl could fail to recognize—a little rag doll, faded and yellow and worn. That, there is no question, was loved and cherished by some child twenty centuries ago.

There are other things in the collection. Rattles of strange shapes, with glorious possibilities of noise, more soldiers, fish-hooks which the wise declare, save for a little rust, might have been made last year. All the libraries of the world could not prove so clearly the eternal kinship of childhood as this one case of battered toys.

But, as a writer in the London Spectator reminds us, although the children two thousand years ago were playing the same games as the children of today, childhood itself now holds a very different place in the world. It was only their own children whom the old Greeks and Romans loved and protected—the children of other nations, the poor and the outcast, were either neglected or put to violent death. Children's homes, children's hospitals, children's courts, vacation societies of all kinds, free kindergartens and schools, these and uncounted other places and organizations are caring for the children of the twentieth century as they have never in the history of the world been cared for before.

ODDITIES OF WARFARE.

Owing to the small calibre of the bullets used during the Russo-Japanese war many soldiers did not know that they had been struck by them until the frenzy of an attack had passed. During the battle of Mukden a company of Japanese infantry, of a strength of ninety men, attacked a Russian party holding the opposite bank of the river. The attack was carried through with great spirit until the Japanese arrived under the river-bank, when the Russians evacuated the position, evidently believing that their fire had been without any effect. It was only then that forty out of the ninety Japanese discovered that they had been wounded during the advance. The company commander only made the same discovery in his own case by seeing the water of the river redden by his blood. There was apparently no physical effect of the wounds so long as the men had been sustained by the fury and excitement of the advance. But on seeing that they were wounded, all, from the officer downward, experienced the moral effect of their injuries, and all at once felt that they could advance no further.

THE KING AS SPORTSMAN

HIS MAJESTY IS VERY SKILLFUL IN MANY GAMES.

Cricket and Football Are About the Only Sports in Which He Is Not Proficient.

The world knows all about the marvellous feats and sportsmanship of the strenuous tenant of the White House, but it has heard very little, curiously enough, about the really remarkable sporting record of the sovereign of the British Empire. It is as a sportsman indeed that his subjects love him most. Other people may bow to his qualities as a diplomat, a tactician, a wise ruler, but to the Englishman Edward VII. is first and foremost an excellent sportsman.

Almost the only outdoor games in which the King is not proficient are cricket and football. Although keenly interested in cricket he never excelled as a player. He and his brother had a professional coach, who tried to teach them the game when they were boys at Windsor, but though the man labored hard with his eager pupils he never succeeded in accomplishing great results, and went away lamenting that he "could make nowt on their Royal Highnesses." Yet notwithstanding this inability King Edward, like all the rest of his subjects, studies cricket scores and follows all the big matches. His football experiences are limited to watching such games as those between the Army and Navy

AT THE QUEEN'S CLUB.

He seriously thought of going out to the Crystal Palace to the cup final between the Australians and the English, but was dissuaded.

As a shot he has always shown wonderful skill and enthusiasm. In Baroda and Ceylon, in addition to buffalo and deer, he brought down an elephant and doffed it of its tail, according to custom. A visit to Nepal introduced him to tiger hunting (he is credited with a bag of half a dozen specimens in one day). His American experiences made him familiar with the sport that the far Western prairies afford, and on the occasion of his first visit to Chillingham Castle thirty-five years ago, by concealing himself in a haycart, his Majesty accomplished the rare feat of laying low a specimen of the celebrated herd of wild cattle for which Lord Tankerville's border seat is famous.

However, in spite of his record as a hunter of big game, it is as a performer in the home coverts that his subjects boast of him. At Sandringham he once brought down fifty birds with fifty-five shots. Even this incident is not recalled with such pride as the notable feat performed years ago when King Edward was the guest of Lord Carnavon at Highclere Castle. In addition to the then Prince of Wales and his host there were four other excellent shots who in the course of three days brought down

10,800 HEAD OF GAME.

As a feat of endurance alone that performance was remarkable, for close upon 18,000 cartridges must have been fired, which gives an average of 1,000 cartridges a man each day. Allowing that the recoil from each cartridge exerted a force of 30 pounds, a simple calculation shows that the King had to withstand a force equivalent to raising forty tons weight one foot, while in addition the task of raising the gun to his shoulder at least 1,500 times would almost equal in three days the force requisite to raising nine tons one foot.

As an ardent and personally interested spectator at races the King is well known, and as a judge of horses he is in the first rank. Many of his entries have won at national and international races. The King himself was once a winning jockey. When stationed at Curragh Camp as Prince of Wales he rode his horse Rupee and easily won a steeplechase.

At golf the King plays an excellent even game and is often to be seen on his links at Balmoral in all sorts of bad weather, which is the test of the true golf lover.

Only the other day His Majesty easily won in a croquet tournament. He is very fond of this game, as of billiards, where his quick eye enables him to make the most

REMARKABLY ACCURATE SHOTS.

All England knows that the King's great interest in motors and all their improvements has helped the trade in automobiles. As a yachtsman his knowledge has been valuable to many, and his love of the sea has made him take a keen interest in all matters pertaining to boating, the building of boats, etc. Not even Sir Thomas Lipton himself was more disappointed when he failed to bring back the cup from America than was the King.

Of course, with increasing years, the King's sportsmanship is less strenuous, and while preserving a great interest in the advancement of all sports, he has turned somewhat to quieter things for himself. He has become a pigeon fancier, and has a loft at Sandringham, where he keeps his birds, the original ancestors of which were given him by the King of the Belgians. Also he spends many hours at bridge. Here he shows his sportsmanship in being an excellent and agreeable loser when necessary, and while a remarkably fine player himself, is always a very uncritical and patient partner for less skilled players.

MISER'S PECULIAR WILL.

William John Watson emigrated a half century ago from Portadown, County Armagh, Ireland, to Australia, where he made a fortune of over £10,000. A few years ago he returned to his native town and has since lived the life of a miser in a small three-roomed house, where he was found dead three days ago. By his will he leaves the whole of his [illegible] Portadown, for the purpose of providing healthy recreation [illegible] but he bars football or race rowing. The will further provides that the urban council shall, out of the interest have a dinner every five years, the expense not to exceed £1 per head. At each of these dinners the will is to be read publicly.

MINER'S RETURN TO LIFE

PENNSYLVANIA MAN'S EXPERIENCE IN LIVING TOMB.

Lay in Crevice of Earth 450 Feet Below Surface Four Days and Nights.

For almost four days and nights—to be exact, eighty-four hours—McCabe lay in a crevice of the earth 450 feet below the surface. Early on a recent Saturday he was digging in a shaft of the Draper colliery at Gilberton, Penn., when an unlucky shot brought the earth down upon him, cutting off all escape.

That was bad enough, but the knowledge that what he felt would be his grave lay directly underneath the home in which his wife and children awaited his coming, sent a peculiar poignancy to his plight.

It is not often a miner works 450 feet beneath the floor of his own cottage, but that is what McCabe was doing when the roof fell in, and he knew it. His wife and family learned it later when they were told he had been caught and that there was little or no hope of his rescue.

MORE DEAD THAN ALIVE.

For four days and sleepless nights the wife moved about in her cottage with the knowledge that somewhere, almost right under her feet, her husband was slowly dying. The agony of it was a little too much for the woman, so that when they brought him back to her it was a long time before she could realize that it was her husband who had returned to her in the flesh from the grave.

When the top of the chamber in which he was working caved in and caused a rush of culm and water from the surface, relays of workmen toiled unceasingly to reach McCabe. Shortly after midnight the following Wednesday the rescuers detected a scratching noise which told them that McCabe was still living, and with renewed vigor fresh reliefs were put to work with the result that at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning he was reached.

McCabe was more nearly dead than alive when reached. He had not changed his position from the time the rush occurred, as he feared that by moving about another rush of culm might start which would end his life.

PRAYED FOR WIFE AND "KIDS."

After he realized that he was saved and had recovered a little of his strength, McCabe told this story of his experience:—

"When the shot went off it took down the whole roof for 120 feet, they tell me. The slush coming down put my light out. If I had been six inches farther out I would have been caught. Right away I knew I was cut off. The first thing I did was to say my prayers, and I thought of the wife and kids above me. I was praying for them more than for myself. I knew I would come out all right. But there I was down in the earth and they were right above me. If I could dig my way up I would come out in my own cellar. And I kept thinking of the wife, up there thinking she'd never see me again.

"I was in a space about ten feet square, but the highest part was only four feet, so I couldn't stand up. I had only one match and I saved that. I didn't know but maybe the water would rise and I kept the match so as to be able to find higher ground if I had to. Besides you never can tell about fire damp after a fall.

DRANK KEROSENE.

"So I spent the whole time in the dark. I found a couple of old dynamite boxes, and these I put together for a bed, and after a while went to sleep. When I woke up I was hungry. I had some tobacco with me and chewed some of that. The tobacco kept me from getting hungry, but after a while that wouldn't do.

"I think I took a long sleep, for when I woke up I felt as empty as an old powder can. I couldn't stand it any longer, so I commenced to sip the oil out of my lamp. The oil kept me from getting weak. There must be lots of nourishment in it. I broke off chips of wood and chewed them and swallowed a little when I got it fine. It didn't go bad mixed with the oil. When I got thirsty I caught handfuls of the sulphur water dripping from the rocks. It was pretty strong, but there wasn't anything else on tap.

"It must have been some time on Tuesday that I heard the men working, and I knew help was near. That last two hours seemed longer than days."

INDIA'S INSECT PEST.

An Ant Which Bores Holes Through Sheet Metal.

India has insect pests which make anything of the kind in this country appear trifling. The tea bush has no less than four destructive enemies from which no means of escape has yet been devised by man. These are the bark-eating borer, the sandwich caterpillar, the mosquito and the white ant, all of which attack the bush and do immense damage.

The worst and the most invincible of these plagues is the white ant, the mosquito merely attacking the leaves and causes a blight. The ants, however, begin at the roots and eat upward, reducing the wood to powder and leaving only the bark to support the top, which soon topples over by reason of its own weight. There is no wood that resists its attack except sandal. It delights in reducing pine and white wood to a powder. It cannot work in the light, but must get at the wood from some dark recess and work within a shell.

It will in some mysterious way get into a veneered or lacquered picture frame, and in a short time nothing will remain but the veneer or lacquer, nothing else [illegible] left but a small portion [illegible], the rest being con[illegible]. [illegible]k is by emitting [illegible]stroys the wood. [illegible]en known to bore holes through the sheet iron bottoms of trunks.

Mamma: "Dear me! I wonder where baby got such a temper?" Papa: "Never mind! We haven't got time to find out that question just now."

KILL HUSBANDS BY SCORE

WOMEN FEED THEM ON THE WRONG SORT OF FOOD.

Responsible For Deaths in Many Cases—Should Exercise Discretion in Cookery.

Women who allow their husbands to get fat are roundly scolded by George Harvey, editor of the North American Review. Those who are widowed before they reach the age of 60 years are blamed for the loss of their providers through their ignorance of even simple rules for the management and care of husbands.

According to Mr. Harvey, a married man is under no obligation to familiarize himself with conditions conducive to his physical well being, "The entire responsibility," he says, "rests upon the wife, who has vastly more at stake, to care for, while pretending to obey him.

"And how ill equipped for the performance of this task, however well intended, is the average woman! Practically all she knows is that milk is good for babies, and all she thinks is that grown men must have much food to feed the furnaces of their physical organism. A failing appetite is to her a signal of danger, and, forthwith, anxious and well meaning, she places before him tempting viands and pleads with him to try and eat more if only to please her, with the inevitable consequence that he, being weak and chivalrous and hating to be hectored and wept over, lugubriously yields and adds fuel, often fatal, to a lurking disorder.

WILFUL IGNORANCE.

"Wilful ignorance is at the bottom of all such blundering; while fatuously striving to save them women kill good providers by the score, and then hold themselves to be fit objects of sympathy because, forsooth, of their self-imposed widowhood. Frankly, we have no patience with such persons. There is no more occasion for a woman under 60 to be a widow than there is for her to be a spinster. The average man is tough, easily guided, and only too glad to conform with any subtle suggestions that are not too obviously for his good or too contrary to his inclinations. His attitude is neither obtuse nor contumacious, but he desires tactful suggestion of a rational remedy, not mere reproachful statement of bitter fact, and that is what the woman who has failed to equip herself for the performance of her duty as a caretaker is unable to give. Primarily, therefore, women are responsible, through ignorance, for the multiplication of tobacco, hearts and the filling of married drunkards' graves."

Reduction in the quantity of food consumed and intelligent regulation of its character are declared to be absolutely essential to the longevity of the husband. In proof of this are the writings of Luigi Carnaro on the subject of diet.

HARVEY CITES CARNARO.

"Carnaro," says Mr. Harvey, "ate of all kinds of food, animal as well as vegetable, but in small quantity, and he drank moderately of the light wines of his country, diminishing his slender rations as age increased. He finally died without agony, while comfortably seated in an armchair, at the age of 104. The mere fact that one never hears of an old stout man establishes the wisdom of the method proposed for the aged, but it is equally applicable to middle life.

"What folly, then, for a woman to endeavor, through the concoction of special dishes and by means of earnest pleadings, to tempt the appetite of her bilious provider! Better far deprive him of all food till the natural expenditure has exhausted the income, and then resist rather than encourage the ravages of nature."

EX-LORD MAYOR'S BEST WORK.

Sir William Treloar Has Collected $300,000 for Cripples' Home.

Last week Sir William Treloar laid aside the robes of the Lord Mayor of London. The bulky, graybearded carpetmaker and merchant carries his sixty-five years lightly. His has been the most active administration of this highly decorative office known in recent years. The greatest of his works has ben the collection of £60,000 ($300,000) for building a big home for crippled children on sixty acres of land in Hampshire given him by act of parliament.

The fund was started with £40 ($200) a year ago. The King and Queen immediately gave their support and money has poured in steadily ever since, coming from all classes, but most of it from workingmen. The closing days of Sir William's term are being picturesquely connected with this fund.

The other evening found the old campaigner in evening dress, with the star of knighthood gleaming on his breast, addressing a crowded meeting of sports at Wonderland, the Whitechapel home of boxing. The pugilists knocked off pummeling each other while the Lord Mayor told with pathetic simplicity the wants of tens of thousands of little boys and girls of the metropolis, who needed back or leg braces, cork legs, crutches and invalid chairs.

The sports listened with deep attention. It was a motley throng, some being in evening dress, but the majority wearing the diversified clothes of an east end street. When the speech ended the crowd broke into uproarious cheers and shillings and sovereigns began to roll into the Lord Mayor's handbag.

When it comes to lying it doesn't matter how reckless a man is.

When a wise man gets real angry he goes away back and sits down.

GIRLS DEFENDED THE SOLDIERS.

Boycott Against Boycott in a German Village—Cure for Jealousy.

There is always jealousy in the German rural districts over the favor that the troops detailed to various villages and small towns find from the young women.

Things took a queer turn this summer in Forst, a village of Baden, near Bruchsal, where the One Hundred and Forty-Second Regiment of the line, recruited at Offenburg, was quartered during the season of field training. The good old method of thrashing soldiers who made themselves agreeable to the girls proved a dismal failure. The men of the One Hundred and Forty-second were husky and hard hitters and stood together when threatened by numbers. The country boys at last determined to get square with the girls who accepted attentions from the soldiers.

The word was therefore passed around that any girl who was detected in talking, walking or flirting with a "mu[illegible]teer," or receiving visits from [illegible] should be boycotted—they have [illegible] the word into German— [illegible] which was to follow [illegible] vices at the close [illegible] notice to this [illegible] in the Bruch[illegible] quite set[illegible] on the [illegible] at the [illegible]

In the [illegible] Bruchsal paper [illegible] of the unanimous [illegible] dens of Forst to bo[illegible] local youth at the con[illegible] mal invitation was furn[illegible] the members of the One [illegible] Forty-second Regiment to [illegible] dance, with an assurance [illegible] would not lack partners so fa[illegible] Ferst girls would go round. The [illegible] woman's notice ended with these pa[illegible] olic words:

"It is not clear to us why we should be expected to treat the soldiers slightingly. Are they not as good men as our lads in Forst? And why should the poor soldier who serves his God, his prince and his fatherland have no one to say a kind word to him?"

This was signed "The Association of Girls of Forst for the Improvement of Foreign Relations, Especially with Regiment No. 142." Negotiations for a truce, it is reported, were not wholly unsuccessful, and no engagements were broken.

An abnormally heavy rainstorm in Edinburgh district in October caused a serious landslip on the east coast line near Newhailes. The main line was temporarily blocked, and some trains were considerably delayed.

FATAL ENDING OF TUG RACE

A Port Dalhousie Vessel Was Struck By a Barge.

A despatch from St. Catharines says: A terrible accident occurred on Lake Ontario, ten miles below Port Dalhousie, about 8 o'clock on Saturday night, whereby three lives were lost and three others had very narrow escapes, when the tug Escort was sunk by being struck by the barge Harrison, in tow of the steamer Westmount. Early in the evening the Westmount and barge were seen away down the lake, approaching Port Dalhousie. Two tugs, the Escort and Golden City, started out from port in a race to secure the barge, there having been great rivalry between the tugs to secure tows. The Escort was in charge of Capt. Harry Dunlop and the Golden City in charge of Capt. McCoppen. They raced about ten miles down the lake before meeting the Westmount and barge, the Golden City slightly in the lead. As they approached the barge the Golden City made a circle to come alongside of her, but the Escort to save time endeavored to cut across the bow of the barge, between the Westmount and Harrison, which were going about ten miles an hour. The captain of the Escort evidently miscalculated the speed or distance, and the huge steel tow line caught the pilot house of the Escort, tearing it away. Almost immediately after the Harrison struck the tug amidships, capsizing her. She sank, carrying down Capt. Harry Dunlop, Engineer Albert Dunlop, and a canal helper named Charles Christmas, none of whom were seen again. Three others on board, Melvin Barnes, the fireman; Herman Cook, deckhand, and Mrs. Annie Bartlett, cook on the tug, were rescued with great difficulty by those on the tug Golden City.

The Westmount had slackened speed immediately when the accident occurred and every effort was made to rescue those on board the ill-fated tug or recover the bodies of those drowned, but they have not yet been recovered and it is probable they are imprisoned in the wreckage of the tug, which sank in a hundred and twenty feet of water. After cruising around for some time the Westmount came on to Port Dalhousie, and the tug Golden City, with the rescued on board brought in the Harrison.

Sir William Van Horne's View of the Stringency.

A despatch from Montreal says: Sir William Van Horne, Chairman of the Canadian Pacific Railway board, returned from his trip to the Northwest on Monday. When seen in regard to the financial situation in the west Sir William said he had heard nothing in the nature of complaints against the banks. My opinion is that the present financial pressure will be only temporary, but I would rather not venture to prophesy. Notwithstanding the inconvenience resulting from the general money conditions now prevailing, I heard no complaints, and everything wore a cheerful aspect. The movement of merchandise from the east into the Northwest is considerably above that of the corresponding period of last year. That I regard as a very favorable indication of the condition of the people up there.

Surgeon's Remarkable Operation in Hospital at Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: A remarkable operation was performed at the General Hospital on Friday afternoon by Dr. Armstrong on a woman who had for some time been given up as a hopeless cripple with a broken back. The woman, Mrs. Rudolphe Bayle of Vancouver, B. C., the wife of a C. P. R. telegraph operator, fell downstairs and was believed to have broken her back. She was brought to the hospital with her lower limbs completely paralyzed. For nearly three hours she was under chloroform. It was found that the spinal cord was not injured, but that the vertebrae had been dislocated and broken, the result being that a portion of the splintered backbone had pressed upon the spine, thus causing the paralysis. This Dr. Armstrong gradually succeeded in overcoming, and finally closed the wound, convinced that the woman would completely recover. The operation is regarded as one of the most remarkable and successful ever performed at the big hospital.

FISHERY LAWS

Several Boats, Many Nets and a Large Quantity of Fish Seized.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: The most important seizures of fishing boats, net and fish effected by the Dominion Government officials in years, have been made in the neighborhood of Killarney, by Capt. A. C. Duncan, Dominion Inspector of Fisheries. It is expected that wholesale prosecutions will be instituted by the Government. Many thousands of dollars are involved in the seizures.

Capt. Duncan passed through the Canadian "Soo" on Thursday on his way west, after inspecting fisheries under his jurisdiction in the eastern division. During his operations in the neighborhood of Killarney, just below the "Soo," Duncan was accompanied by a number of officers from the "Soo," and the flotilla under his charge consisted of a tug, a sailboat and a gasoline launch

In nearly every instance Capt. Duncan found that the fishery laws were being violated, the result being a large number of seizures, some of them considered of the most important nature. The largest number of infractions of the law consisted in catching whitefish and trout out of season and having them in their possession.

One of the tugs, belonging to Purvis Bros., was seized, as well as a large number of pound nets and two gasoline launches, belonging to Gauthier, of French River.

James Noble, Dominion Fish Commissioner, it is alleged, was found to have freshly caught whitefish and trout in his possession. Noble claimed the fish were caught in the open season and had been kept over, but the officers claim they were fresh. Even had they been caught in the manner described, the offence is none the less flagrant in the eyes of the law, which distinctly states that none of the fish mentioned shall be in the possession of any party after the closing of the season on Nov. 1. James Rock, a fisherman of Killarney, was caught with whitefish and trout in his possession.

The fish were all confiscated by the officers, and the boats which were seized were liberated after the officers had obtained a receipt from the owners for them, which practically means that they are still in the hands of the Government.

Capt. Duncan did not feel inclined to deal offhand with the case, considering the extent of the seizures and their importance in the eyes of the Government. He accordingly referred the matter to the Government, which will take action in the near future.

The fire is supposed to have originated in the floor beneath an overheated gas range. When Zuver was awakened by the dog he sprang from his bed, to see the flames filling the sitting-room. He forced the window sash out, calling to his wife to bring the baby. Climbing to the porch roof, he met one of the older boys coming through a window. The boy fell senseless on the roof and dropped to the ground. Flames prevented Zuver from re-entering by the window and he also dropped unconscious from the roof.
