15 YEAR TERM FOR MEISNER

London, Ont., Feb. 6—"Fifteen years in penitentiary". In those four words, David Meisner, the gangster who had tried to introduce American kidnapping methods into Canada, heard the end of his brief career of terrorism this afternoon. Thus ended the Labatt case, which will go down in history as the Dominion's first great kidnapping. Thus ended the sensational train of events which began last August 14, with the abduction of the wealthy London brewer, and which reached their climax on Tuesday night with the sudden flight across the border of the two star defense witnesses.

His undersized body tense in the prisoner's dock, and his white features striving pathetically to achieve the tradional poker face of the American gangster, Meisner heard Mr. Justice McFarland pronounce upon him a sentence which would have been longer but for the prisoner's ill health.

Concurrent terms of fifteen years each were imposed on the additional charges of unlawful imprisonment and robbery.

Still maintaining the protestations of innocence, the Canadian-born hoodlum was led away to his cell a few minutes after sentence was imposed. Meisner stoutly declared to his brother, Richard, that some day the truth would be known, and his name would be cleared.

"The maximum is life and lashes, and it should be imposed in this case," said Mr. German, K.C., of Toronto, special prosecutor, "especially that it may be a deterrent to others contemplating such crimes."

Charles W. Bell, K.C., chief of the defense staff, was not present when the jury returned, and representations on Meisner's behalf were made by Howard C. Cluff of London, who made a strong plea for leniency.

"I can relieve your mind at once on the question of lashes," said the Judge in passing sentence. "Because of your age and physical condition, and especially because of the fact that Mr. Labatt was not injured, and there was no physical brutality, I will not sentence you to the lash. I fully agree with the verdict of the jury. The sentence is that you shall serve fifteen years in Kingston Penitentiary on each count, the terms to be served concurrently".

ONTARIO TO ABOLISH EXAMINATION FEES

Throughout Ontario, school children and their parents are in a happy frame of mind. The annual drain on the family exchequer through payment of examination fees is to be no more. Also, the harrowing thought of examinations in July will not plague the students.

Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn has indicated that "there will be no fees for examinations in future."

Hon. L.J. Simpson, Minister of Education, has also announced that the final date for examinations this year will be June 28. He said the examination time-table has been drafted at the Department, and all tests will end on that date.

NEW WARDEN HONORED

On Thursday evening last, a large crowd assembled in the school house at Moose Creek to honor George L. McIntosh, who has recently been appointed warden of the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry.

When the hour arrived for beginning the evening's entertainment, the warden-elect and Mrs. McIntosh were escorted to their chairs, and the audience rose and sang, "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," followed by three hearty good cheers for the new warden. The chairman, Mr. Neil McIntosh, called the meeting to order, and after suitable introductory remarks, proceeded to announce the evening's program.

Several well-rendered instrumental selections were given, and were much appreciated. Th audience was delighted by a French song, several Gaelic selections on the victrola, and a vocal number. Gentlemen present who were called upon for short speeches were: D.A. McLeod, Hugh Blair, James Cummings, Jack St. Denis, J.K. McLean, Cecil Begg, Dan Begg, Oren Crawford. The speakers were unanimous in heartily congratulating Mr. McIntosh on his appointment.

The following toasts were proposed and responded to: Our King by Walter McRae, in response to which the audience rose and sang the National Anthem; Our Flag and Country, by David Ross and James McKillican; Our Municipal Government by Alphonse Lavigne and John Dyer; Our Ladies, by Eddie McKillican and Mrs. Wm. Robertson; Our Warden by Stanley McKay, to which Mr. McIntosh replied, expressing appreciation to members of county council for his apopintment, and to his friends for thus meeting together in his honour.

A pleasing feature of the evening's program was the presentation of an address and a Waterman pen and pencil set to the Warden by two little girls, Laura St. Denis and Eleanor Bethune.

A tasty lunch was then served, after which several old-time songs were joined in by all. The singing of Good Night Ladies and Auld Lang Syne brought a pleasant evening's entertainment to a close.

The TUDOR HOUSE

By MRS. STANLEY WRENCH

(Author of "Sing for the Moon" "Strange Lovers," etc).

SYNOPSIS

Michael Borde, 40 unmarried, born and bred in a Birmingham slum, is now a wealthy motor manufacturer. One day he visits the countryside around his old home and rescues Daphne Eden from a menacing tramp. He falls in love and proposes. Daphne accepts and introduces him to her father, who greets him with the words "Get out of here you cur — you ruined my home — stole my wife — curse you!"

Daphne's father dies and she disappears. Michael explains to her friend Mrs. Gregory that he was misrepresented. He buys the old Tudor House owned by the Hamill-Hardy's. Mrs. Gregory promises to mail a letter from him to Daphne arranging a meeting. Daphne does not appear. On the way home Michael collides with a car driven by Diana Hamill-Hardy.

Mrs. Eden notices an announcement of the engagement of Michel and Diana Hamill-Hardy.

At the solicitors she is met by her stepmother.

Mrs. Gregory dies. Daphne hears from her solicitors.

"You must wait, Denis," Daphne said softly. "I feel flattered,: who would not, for I am older than you, my dear . . ."

"In years, but what do yairs count?" he broke in bodly, and that shadow deepened across the floor.

"Wait," she said again. "There are so many things I have to think of before . . ."

But there Daphne Eden paused.

There was a curiously imperative letter from her step-mother that very day, which the solicitors had forwarded.

In this, one strangely worded passage caused Daphne some perturbation.

"You'll have to stand by me, Daphne," she wrote. "We are in this thing together. It was your father's invention, and he has stolen the rights. We stand to make a lot of money, I find, for I have consulted a solicitor, and apparently Michael Borde didn't patent this lighting device until a few years ago. So you see, Daphne, he has been biding his time."

Daphne laid down the letter again, which she had been re-reading when young Birch came in.

Did years matter in love? Michael Borde was older than she, the difference in age between them as great as that between her and Denis Birch.

"Wait till I come back from London, Denis." she said softly. "I will answer you then."

WRITTEN EVIDENCE

London seemed far away now. Back here, it seemed to Daphne as though she had come home, although the cottage in which he had died no longer remained home. It belonged to Daphne now, the furniture was still there, but she hated it; the place was choked with memories she wanted to forget and could not. It seemed to her when she opened the door of the room where Richard Eden had died that she could still hear his accusing voice and see his burning eyes.

Strange to discover how Richard Eden's words came back to her when she visited the cottage again.

"He picked my brains . . . stole my plans . . . ."

Daphne sat down and looked around wistfully. She had set open the windows, and from the far distance, across the vale, came the song of the cuckoo, apple blossom slowly drifted to the grass plot, spring was passing into summer. Up on the hillside gorse shone golden, the warm sweet perfume, faintly reminiscent of the smell of ripe apricots, was wafted to her. She could hear the clucking and cheeping of fowls, and incessant hum of bees in the blossoming trees together with the croon of a wood pigeon in the trees below met her ears. It was sound without noise. The countryside flung its charm around her.

All this was hers. In the goodness of her heart Lorna Gregory had made it possible for her to live in the heart of green England, among the people she had grown up to love, with her own land, her own house, and with more money than she knew how to use.

The house at the top of the hill in which Mrs. Gregory had died, looked away to the Vale of the Red Horse, and rather wistfully she had once explained why she had built it here, in order to follow with her eye the hounds which she loved. From its windows too, Daphne remembered one saw the old grey Tudor house nestling in the hollow, and recalling this, she frowned. She would constantly be reminded of Michael Borde, and even if their ways did not cross, the sight of Werbuge Lucy would bring him before her.

"If only he had written . . " wandered into her mind, then she angrily dismissed the thought.

"This won't do," she cried impatiently. "I thought I had finished with that. It will be better to clear up everything and start again. If I get busy I shall be happy."

Already she had been to the chicken farm, arranged with the farming pupils that everything should go on as before, had been congratulated on her good fortune, although neither of them knew the extent of this. Except for her lawyers, no one seemed to be aware of Mrs. Gregory's wealth, and they had regarded as a slightly eccentric woman who had made a success out of her hobby, that was all.

In Daphne's mind a plan was forming. If she lived at her house herself she would prefer to be alone. The other girls were considerably younger, they were friends, and she had always been aloof before. Living with her father, and with the care of him on her mind, she had never joined in with them, although being on perfectly good terms. It struck her now that her cottage might easily be given to them for sleeping quarters. The furniture might remain, and all she need do was clear out her own personal belongings, her father's books and papers, and anything she might wish to keep. With this in mind she began a tour of inspection, looking about shrewdly as she decided everything was simple indeed.

She would get her friend Mrs. Birch to come up her tomorrow and make arrangements for all the personal belongings to be taken away. There was the black tin japanned box, which Richard Eden had always spoken of as the Deed Box, in which his private papers were kept, and a small locked despatch case, in which she knew were her mother's photograph and letters. The letters could be burned but there might be other papers of importance.

For a minute she hesitated. Might it not be wise to make a clean sweep of the whole thing, and without any regrets commit the lot to the flames? What she did not know she could not grieve over. Yet something held her back.

She had a key which opened the Deed Box, and she knew that inside the Deed Boox lay another key which would unfasten the little case. Without hesitation now she unlocked the black box and took out this key, and a minute later was looking at the picture of her dead mother, so oddly like herself that except for the old-fashioned clothes it might have been her own photograph.

A packet of letters, tied up neatly, a marriage certificate, her own birth certificate, a lace-edged handkerchief yellowed with the years, a little box of withered flowers . . .Daphne's face grew sad as she fingered these. In an age when sentiment is sneered she felt uncomfortable looking at the relics of her own mother's and father's love-making. Into the grate they went, together with the box of withered flowers; it seemed sacrilege, but a match quickly applied made an end to them, and with a sigh of relief she turned again to the black japanned box.

PELEE ISLAND, fifteen miles out in Lake Erie, was the scene of a hunting accident. The local doctor advised immediate removal of the victim to the hospital at Windsor, 60 miles away. Fortunately, an aeroplane was on the Island. A message was radioed to Leamington where the Long Distance telephone operator advised the Windsor hospital. • All within an hour of the accident, the patient was at the hospital, thanks to the speedy trio—radio, telephone and aeroplane.

Low Heels on Newest Shoes

Round-Toed Slippers For Street, Beach and Evening

Brightly colored leathers and fabrics, with highly decorative details, characterized spring footwear exhibited recently at the National Shoe Retailers Association convention in New York.

A trend toward lower heels was evident in the 300 exhibits, the popular two-inch heel being featured consistently. Round-toed and flat-heeled slippers were shown for street wear.

The most discussed newcomer was a skeleton-type sandal, cut high over the instep. Described as a charioteer or Grecian sandal, the shoe is held to the foot with narrow bands and a T-strap. This model was shown with low heels for daytime wear and higher heels for evening.

Another skeleton-type shoe is designed with narrow bands of leather woven in a loose lattice pattern. The open work theme is developed less extravagantly in buck and linen pumps or ties, with perforations embroidered in colored threads. Brass eyelets serve as decorative in other types

Bright blues, frequently combined with darker shades, were stressed in a number of models, both in leather and linen. Bright blue or brown linen with whitie kid trim were given prominence in the afternoon group.

Shoes of checked or plaid linens and basket-weave cottons were offered among the novelties, which included a pair of red and blue gingham plaid pumps.

Mrs. Carmel Snow, a fashion editor, told a style conference that shorter skirts for spring and summer will accentuate the importance of footwear.

Movie Guide

Kalamazoo's public library has inaugurated a unique service which informs parents as to the merits of certain movies which are playing at local cinema houses.

Whether the picture in question is suitable for little "Johnnie" or little "Susan" can be easily determined by calling the library.

The library maintains an index rating on all motion pictures indicating whether they are fair, good, excellent, very good, and whether they are suitable for family audiences, adult audiences, or young people.

These ratings are arrived at from the findings of previewing committees of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, and eight leading magazines.

What Does Your Handwriting Reveal?

GEOFFREY ST. CLAIR
(Graphologist)
All Rights Reserved

(Editor's Note: Many people have problems on which they would like some disinterested advice. The author of these fascinating articles has been able to help many of our readers with their personal problems, through his ability to analyse character from handwriting. See his invitation to YOU following this article).

A Toronto gentleman asks a very interesting question in a letter that reached me a few days ago. He wants to know how it is possible to detect writing that has been disguised. He says: "Supposing I write to you and completely change my handwriting. Will you be able to tell me my correct character from that handwriting?"

Well, it is not so simple as all that. In the first place, if you are genuinely interested in getting a character analysis of yourself, then you would obviously send your usual handwriting. If you send different writing entirely, then there is bound to be a difference in analysis. A graphologist, making a character analysis at a person's request, does not look for evidence of disguised handwriting. Sometimes, to be true, there are indications that some attempt has been made to disguise the writing, so obviously that the writing tells its own story.

But, as a general rule, if you wilfully disguise your writing, then the analysis will be somewhat different, in certain points, from your correct character. After all, when a peson sends in for a Character analysis, the presumption is that he is genuinely interested in getting the truth. And that is what a Graphologist expects and looks for.

There are cases where there is a possibility of criminal intent. Cases of disputed wills come under this class—and as a matter fact, there is a case in a Canadian Court at the time I write this, where there is a difference of opinion as to a certain signature — then various writings are compared, and the handwriting expert is able to decide as to the writing in question. But these are entirely different from cases of character analysis. In these disputed cases, the expert knows of the circumstances, and a comparison is always made with writings that are quite genuine.

A large corporation has recently announced its intention of having the writing of applicants for important positions analysed by expert graphologists. This is still another example of the growing faith in this science of character reading from handwriting.

There can be no doubt about the advisability of being able to find out the true characteristics of people, both in a commercial sense and also socially. And the science of Graphology has vindicated itself so often during the past few years that it is no wonder that more and more people are making use of its aid in helping them in various ways.

And even at this stage, Graphology is by no means at the end of its resources. Research, that is proceeding all the time, is finding new truths, fresh facts, that add to the value of the science. The time will come when Graphology will be accepted just as matter-of-factly as in medicine and dentistry and psychology. Even today, there are countless people who realise its great intrinsic value and literally swear by it.

Some readers, from time to time, enquire whether it is possible for them to learn Graphology. Some of them are primarily interested in it as a study to occupy their time, and to help them socially. Others are interested in a more mundane sense looking to it as a possible career.

I shall be glad to help any reader who will write to me and who is anxious to take up the study. It is fascinating, always interesting and intensely valuable.

Would YOU like to have a personal character analysis from your own handwriting? And have you any friends about whom you are anxious to know their real nature? Send specimens of the writings you wish analysed, stating birthdate in each case. Send 10c coin for each specimen, and enclose with 3c stamped envelope, to: Geoffrey St. Clair, Graphologist, Room 421, 73 Adelaide Street West, Toronto Ont. All letters are confidential and replies will be forwarded as quickly as is possible, having regard to the large number of letters that are coming in.

DOES NOT HARM THE HEART

Woman's World

By Mair M. Morgan

FOR GLAMOR

There probably isn't a woman in all the world who doesn't want to be considered glamorous. Regardless of how many other nice things are said, she gets a special thrill whenever anyone even intimates that there's an air of glamor about her.

The dictionary says that glamor is a noun, meaning charm on the eyes, causing them to see things differently from what they are in reality. A designer who, by the way, is glamorous herself, insists that glamor is what makes a person stand out as a distinctly different individual.

The young couturie's theory is probably a little more helpful to women who go in quest of the elusive trait. If you take the dictionary's definition literally you may start thinking that in trying to be glamorous you are replacing it with the illusion of something you are not. This, of course, is wrong. On the contrary, as the designer hints, the more individual you are, the more glamor you are apt to have. In other words, be yourself!

Remember that dowdiness is the antithesis of glamor. The most charming personality in the world can't make up for a dingy neck, soiled or unpressed clothes, stringy hair and makeup that is haphazardly applied.

You feel better and have a more confident outlook when you know perfectly well that you're immaculately turned-out. And the minute you have a little swell of personal pride in your heart, your chances of being truly glamorous are doubled and re-doubled.

TAPIOCA TIP KEEPS SANDWICHES FRESH

Lord Sandwich had no intention of upsetting the world's party menus when he first ordered his roast beef between two slices of bread. The combination was so good that it became popular and has been ever since. But even in the eighteenth century, it was recognized that the filling had to be moist and flavorsome, the bread firm and fresh, to make a perfect sandwich.

For home parties the hostess has to make her sandwiches hours ahead; and thousands of Canadian women pack lunch boxes every day and worry about ways of keeping sandwiches perfectly fresh. The new minute tapioca will work miracles for them. No need to get the bread limp by having the filling soak into it for hours while the sandwiches are rolled in paper or a damp cloth.

This tapioca holds the moisture in sandwich fillings and yet does not in any way interfere with the flavor of those clever appetizing combinations that everyone likes. The tapioca helps to make chicken, fish, or cheese, go a long way, too.

Sandwich Fillings

To prepare sandwich fillings, place liquid in top of double boiler and bring to a boil over direct heat. Combine minute tapioca and dry seasonings, add gradually to liquid and bring to a brisk boil, stirring constantly. Place immediately over rapidly boiling water and cook 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from boiling water. Combine remaining ingredients in order given; add to tapioca mixture and blend. Cool—mixture thickens as it cools.

Vegetable omelets are very popular on winter menus—for lunch, dinner, or interesting late suppers. Minute tapioca will hold the omelet high and fluffy after it leaves the heat—and every cook will agree that that is a miracle.

Vegetable Omelet

2 tablespoons minute tapioca
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¾ cup milk
1 tablespoon butter
4 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon-colored
4 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Combine tapioca, salt, pepper, and milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 3 to 5 minutes), and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add butter. Remove from boiling water; let cool slightly while beating eggs. Add egg yolks and mix well. Fold in egg whites. Pour into hot, buttered 10-inch frying pan. Cook over low flame 3 minutes. Then bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 15 minutes. Omelet is sufficiently cooked when a knife inserted comes out clean. Fold carefully and place between the folds the vegetable mixture made with

½ cup green peas
½ cup diced celery
2-3 cup diced carrots
2 tablespoons sliced onion
2 tablespoons butter
Dash of salt
Dash of pepper

Cook celery and carrots in small amount of briskly boiling salted water 20 to 30 minutes, or until tender. Drain. Heat peas in small amount of their own liquid. Drain. Saute onion in butter until tender; add to other vegetables. Season with salt and pepper.

Corn recalls August and golden kernels of delicious flavor. The vegetable can be made into a soup of the finest creaminess with minute tapioca.

Corn Soup

1½ cups canned corn
1 cup meat broth or
1 cup water and 2 bouillon cubes
2½ cups rich milk
1½ tablespoons minute tapioca
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon sugar
Dash of Cayenne
½ teaspoon scraped onion
1½ tablespoons butter.

Cook corn in broth 10 minutes; force through sieve. Combine with milk, minute tapioca, salt, sugar, Cayenne, and onion in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 5 to 7 minutes), and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add butter. Serves 4 to 6.

Baked Apple Tapioca

3 cups water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tart apples, pared and sliced
½ cup minute tapioca
1 cup light brown sugar, firmly packed
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon mace
3 tablespoons melted butter

Combine water and lemon juice and pour over apples in greased shallow baking dish. Cover and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 15 minutes or until apples are partially cooked. Mix together minute tapioca, ¾ cup brown sugar, salt, and mace. Sprinkle over apples, mixing thoroughly. Add melted butter. Continue baking 10 minutes. Then stir well; sprinkle remaining sugar over apple mixture, and bake 5 minutes longer. Serve hot or cold with cream. Serves 6.

LIMA BEANS ARE GOOD WHEN BAKED

The dried pea, bean and lentil family have come down in the world a bit recently with word from the laboratory that they are incomplete protein foods and must be supplemented by egg, cheese and milk. All the same, they fill an important niche for phosphorus in good-sized quantities.

Long slow cooking is imperative to soften the tough fiber and make dried legumes palatable. When served to small children they should also be rubbed through a sieve.

You've probably often baked the navy bean, but did you ever serve the lima the same way? If not, try it for luncheon some cold noon with hearts of celery for a relish (there's a dish for you') and prune and almond Bavarian cream to follow.

Baked Lima Beans

Two cups dried lima beans, ½ teaspoon soda, 2 sweet green peppers, 4 thin slices bacon, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 cup canned tomatoes, 1 cup hot water, ½ teaspoon salt.

Pick over and wash beans. Cover with cold water and let stand over night. Drain from water, cover with fresh cold water and bring to the boiling point. Simmer five minutes and add soda. Let simmer one mintue longer. Drain and rinse in cold water. Put a layer of beans in a baking dish, sprinkle with shredded pepper and two slices of bacon cut in tiny squares. Continue until all the beans are used. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and pour over hot water and tomatoes. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) for four hours.

Prune and Almond Bavarian

One-half pound prunes, 1 orange, 1½ tablespoons granulated gelatine, ¾ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons chopped almonds, 1 cup whipping cream.

Wash prunes thoroughly and cover with two cups cold water. Let stand over night. In the morning simmer in the same water until tender, adding the yellow rind of the orange pared very thin. Drain prunes from juice and cool. Soften gelatine in 4 tablespoons cooled juice. Add with sugar to one cup hot prune juice and stir over heat without boiling until gelatine is dissolved. Add one-half cup stoned and chopped prunes, juice of orange, almonds and salt. Stir over ice water until mixture begins to thicken. Then fold in cream whipped until firm. Decorate a mold with prunes, replacing the stones with blanched almonds and pour in gelatine mixture. Let stand on ice for several hours until chilled and firm. Unmold and serve with remaining prunes which have been stoned.

The Change In Newspapers

Looking over some copies of the Stratford Beacon of the year 1863 it was noticed that a number of references were made to items taken from other papers and credited to them. Many of these were given as matters of news rather than the expression of editorial opinion, and the reason would be there was no adequate facility for the sending out of news in 1863.

Among papers mentioned which are no longer in existence we noticed the following:

Owen Sound Advertiser, Chatham Union, St. Marys Standard, Clinton Courier, Hamilton Times, Toronto Leader, Chatham Planet, St. Catharines Journal, Kingston American, Stratford Examiner, Galt Reformer, Berlin Telegraph, Kingston News, Guelph Advertiser, London News.

No doubt had there been more extended investigation there might have been a greater list, but the papers listed above were all in existence 72 years ago while none of them is in operation today under the same name. Failure and amalgamation are the reasons.—Stratford Beacon Herald.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson VI., February 10 — Peter Preaches at Pentecost. Acts 2: 22, 28, 36-41. Golden Text.—And Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized everyone of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING.

Time.—A.D. 30 or 31, forty days after the crucifixion of our Lord, and, consequently, in the middle of May.

Place.—The city of Jerusalem, first in the upper room where the disciples were gathered together, and then outside in some large area where many people were able to assemble, presumably near the temple area.

"Ye men of Israel." A phrase never found in the New Testament outside of the Book of Acts (3: 12; 5: 35; 13: 16; 21: 28), and informing us that Peter's entire congregation was made up of Jews. "Hear these words: Jesus of Nazareth." Peter's great commission was to preach Christ, not himself, nor some humanly conceived philosophy. He at once turns the attention of his hearers to the Saviour, introducing him by one of his human titles. "A man approved of God." The verb means "to point out, to show forth, to declare, to prove what kind of a person any one is." "Unto you by mighty works and wonders and signs." The first word powers, or mighty works, indicates the exercise of a power. The next word, wonders, indicates the effect produced by the power upon the mind of other people. The last word, signs, indicates the value of the power and of the wonder it produced. "Which God did by him in the midst of you, even as ye yourselves know. Literally unto you (cf. John 12:37).

"Him, being delivered up." This is one of the many different words used in the New Testament in speaking of the death of Christ. "By the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God." Also, Rom an4: 25; 8: 32. There were two counsels involved in the death of Christ, a human one, on earth, a divine one, in the mind of God. "Ye by the hand of lawless men." A reference, probably, to the Roman soldiers, though the hardened, hating Pharisees of the Sanhedrin had acted more lawless than they. "Did crucify and slay." The Greek word here translated "crucify" occurs only here in all of the New Testament and means literally, "to fasten to" something. The verb translated "slay" simply means "to put out of the way," and is often used to express the idea of killing another.

"Whom God raised up." It was according to God's counsel that Christ should be slain; it was also his counsel that Christ should be raised again. "Having loosed the pangs of death." A figurative expression, as though one were being born from the dead. "Because it was not possible that he should be holden of it." It was not possible because: (1) death had no rightful claim over him; (2) Old Testament prophesies had predicted his resurrection; (3) Christ had himself announced his resurrection; (4) the whole plan of redemption demanded it.

"For David saith concerning him." The passage here quoted is from Psalm 16: 8-11. "I beheld the Lord always before my face. For he is on my right haand." The imagery may be taken from that of the trials in which advocates stood at the right hand of their clients. "That I should not be moved."

"Therefore my heart was glad, and my tongue rejoiced; moreover my flesh also shall dwell in hope." The reason for this hope is given in the next verse.

"Because thou wilt not leave my soul unto Hades." Hades is the New Testament name for the abode of the spirits of the dead, and is often used as a synonym for the grave. "Neither wilt thou give thy Holy One." God is often spoken of as "the Holy One." "To see corruption." Christ's body saw no corruption, for he was raised before such could take place."

'Thou madest known unto me the ways of life. Thou shalt make me full of gladness with thy countenance." Better, being in thy presence."

"Let all the house of Israel therefore know assuredly, that God hath made him both Lord and Christ. If the preceding statements are true, and they undeniably are, this is the only conclusion possible. There is a sense in which through all the years of public ministry he was God's anointed One, speaking the word of authority; both Lord and Christ. Here, however, the Apostle indicated the fact that at a crisis, definitely, positively, God did by one act make him both Lord and Christ. "This Jesus whom ye crucified."

"Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart." The Word performed its office as a sword (Hebrews 4: 12). The word translated "pricked" is the same word found in Genesis 34: 7. "And said unto Peter and the rest of the apostles, Brethren, what shall we do? To escape the penalties which must fall on the nation that has so sinned against light and knowledge; who have had the true light in their midst, but have comprehended it not, and have crucified the Lord of glory.

"And Peter said unto them, Repent ye." The Apostles began as the Baptist began (Matthew 3. 2), as the Christ himself began (Matthew 4: 17, Mark 1: 15), with the exhortaheart and life, not to mere regret for the past. "And be baptized every one of you." First the inward change, and then submission to the external rite. "In the name of Jesus Christ." The one whom they had crucified, but whom God had made both Lord and Christ. "Unto the remission of your sins." Remission comes from a verb that means "to send away," hence, to give up, to forgive, to remit. "And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." The Spirit of God would be a personal and an abiding possession.

"For to you is the promise, and to your children, and to all that are afar off. Even as many as the Lord our God shall call unto him.

"And with many other words he testified, and exhorted them." One of the many phrases in the historical books of the New Testament indicating that we have only a fragmentary record of all that occurred in the crowded, glorious early days of the Church. "Saying, Save yourselves from this crooked generation." "Crooked" means something that is no longer conformable to law, to the right, hence wicked, perverse.

"Then then that received his word were baptized." To receive what Peter said was to acknowledge the truthfulness of his statements and a submission to what such truth demanded. "And there were added unto them in that day about three thousand souls." The word translated added literally means to place forward; that is, the placing of certain things next to things already in existence, for the increase of that which is already in existence.

Haig's Maps

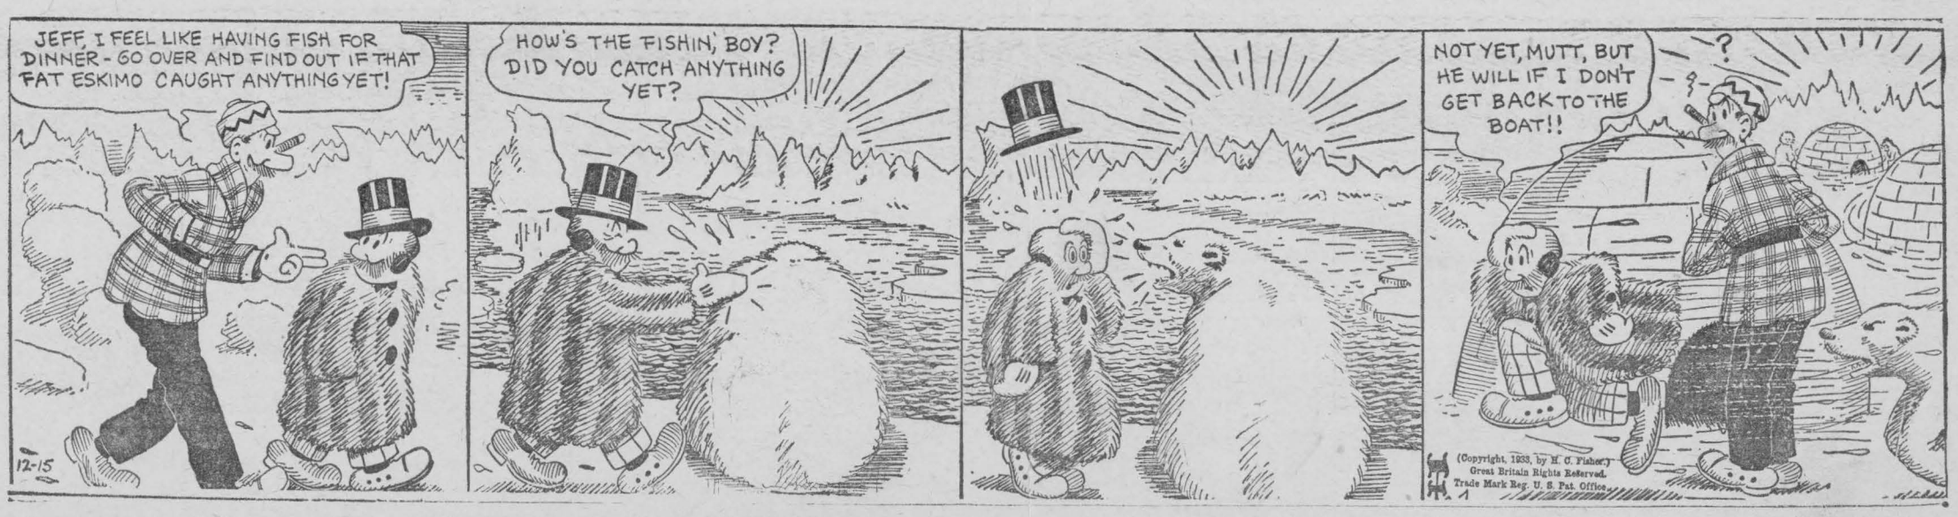

Lady Haig has lent to the Imperial War Museum all the maps used by her famous husband during the war. In themselves they constitute a complete day-to-day history of the Western front, illustrating more clearly than in any book the ebb and flow of battle.

There are 639 maps and about 250 aerial photographs and panoramas. All are stamped "secret" in big letters, and many are labelled "Commander-in-Chief." One map, dated 11-11-18 tells at once why the Armistice happened just when it did. The German line had been almost straightened out, the troops were exhausted. Green dots show the German divisions known to be unfit, red ones denote the active troops. The four armies comprised 186 divisions, and on this map 184 of them are colored green.

Another map shows the final German push of July, 1918. Over 300 miles of front, the heavy black mark indicating the Hindenburg line bulges ominously where the Allied troops were forced back. It is perilously near Paris.

Among the photographs is one of the first panoramas taken — just after the retreat from Mons. The view is from Haig's headquarters looking across the valley of the Aisne and the German lines to the wooded ridge beyond. Corn still stands in stooks and trees wave leafy boughs. Very soon afterwards this peaceful looking valley was the scene of some of the fiercest fighting of the war, the whole area being completely devastated. — Overseas Daily Mail.

Processing Canadian Fruits

Improved quality has been an important factor in increasing the total domestic consumption of canned fruits and vegetables in Canada, as well as opening the door to expending foreign markets. Provided quality and continuity of supply are maintained, a larger market seems assured. These factors are progressively operative and, if adhered to, justify the expectation that the volume of fruits and vegetables processed in Canada will continue to grow. Already a considerable part of the Canadiap production of fresh fruit and vegetables goes to the processors, and the proportion so used is likely to increase. This trend should be impressed upon growers in order that the best varieties and the best quality for processing may be produced in sufficient quantities.

Feed Sunshine

Cod liver oil, the sunshine substitute, is one of the most important items in the properly balanced poultry ration. Where birds are closely confined during the winter months, as is the case in most parts of Canada, they receive very little direct sunlight, and with the rations usually fed, they do not receive all the vitamins they require. Calcium and phosphorus are two minerals specially required for laying pullets and hens in the manufacture of eggs. The digestion and assimilation of materials, especially calcium, require one of two things: an abundance of direct sunshine or an abundance of vitamin D. Cod liver oil is rich in vitamin D, and is one of the reliable sources of this type of food.

Market for Barley in Bacon and Beef

There is practically no limti to the production of barley in Canada, and recent tests show that it produces better bacon and beef than other grains. It is proving fully the equal of corn when fed with suitable supplements in the form of home-grown leguminous roughages. Barley can be used in almost any proportion of the grain ration up to one hundred per cent. As a hog feed, it develops an entirely satisfactory class of bacon, which is more than can be said for corn fed in equal proportions, and as a feed for beef cattle, barley is undoubtedly one of the best of our Canadian grown coarse grains. The increased use of barley and other coarse grains at their present low levels will make for much better quality in the beef being marketed, and this in turn will help create a demand ofr more beef.

Your Seed Supply

It is not too early in the season for a farmer to be thinking about his seed supply for the coming Spring. In far too many cases no thought is given to the matter until a few days before the seed is required, and by that time it may be difficult to obtain, and he will be compeled to take seed of inferior quality. It is a good policy to be sure of your seed supply early in the season. The farmer who is growing a standard variety of grain that is yielding well and is adapted to his farm, would be well advised to use it for his own seeding requirements. It has been proven that if such grains are well cleaned, free from weed seeds, mixtures and other impurities, and the very best sown, it would improve rather than deteriorate.

On a lot of farms, there are bins of the very best grains that are being fed to our livestock or being sold for feeding purposes. Would it not be good business to set up the fanning mill at this time of the year when farm work is not so pressing, and clean this grain or haul it to your nearest cleaning centre? Smaller grains may be chopped or taken home and fed whole. They make good feed, but poor seed, the best is none too good to sow, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. Start early, clean and reclean your best grain before feeding, and keep the best for seeding purposes. It will also pay you from a financial standpoint. The tendency is for prices to go up as the season advances, and the supply gets less plentiful. It is good farm practice and you will save time and money by being sure of your seed supply early.

Eastern Canada Potatoes

Now Under Regulation

The Eastern Canada Potato Marketing Scheme submitted by representatives of the potato industry, has been approved by Hon. Robert Weir, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, and the Governor in Council, upon the recommendation of the Dominion Marketing Board.

The scheme embraces the provinces of Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Ontario. The potato growers in these provinces have been receiving inadequate returns for their potatoes, and the position of the growers has been particularly difficult this year. A very large crop and lack of organization has resulted in demoralized marketing conditions. The 1934 potato crop for the four provinces is placed at 43,308,000 bushels, an increase of 8,188,000 bushels compared with the production in 1933.

Under the scheme, it is expected orderly marketing will result primarily through control of the grades of potatoes entering the commercial channels of trade, and potatoes of inferior grades will not be allowed to 'glut' the market. Consignment selling, which has been contributing largely to price demoralization, will be prohibited, and sales will be made under firm contracts. The scheme also provides for the development of export markets and for increasing domestic consumption of potatoes.

Moreover, it is believed the utilization of potatoes in various forms which might be marketed in this country or find an outlet to other countries, has not been fully explored, and that organization of those concerned with potatoes will greatly facilitate the type of work necessary to develop such possibilities.

The proposed scheme was submitted by representative potato growers and dealers. Originating with a meeting of representatives of the potato industry held at Ottawa under the auspices of the Canadian Horticultural Council, the scheme has since been endorsed by meetings of producers and dealers held at central points through all the important potato producing areas in the four provinces.

The scheme will be administered by a Local Board.

Repairing Tillage Implements

Careful repairing of tillage machinery each winter or early spring, with replacement of doubtful or worn parts, has been proven in experiments on cost of operating farm machinery to pay large dividends by preventing major costly repairs.

Tillage implements generally receive less care and more hard knocks than any other class of farm machinery.

The value of any implement can only be measured by its usefulness in acres covered, quality of work done and freedom from the necessity of costly repairs and delays. Delays due to break-downs during the rush tillage season of spring and summer are costly and easily prevented if the farmer, with a few tools and a little time, will check over carefully every working or wearing part long before he is going to use the machine.

Check over every machine carefully for loose, worn or stripped bolts; replace broken spring washers and check all loose or slack parts. Wheel and power lift bearings, disk boxings and all moving parts should be adjusted for year. Clean all working parts of old grease, oil, dirt and steel particles with kerosene and replace with plenty of fresh lubricants.

Plough shares, cultivator shovels disk blades and all cutting edges should be sharpened well in advance of spring. Have all spare sets sharpened as well. Check the alignment of brace arms, beams, hitches, landslides and mouldboards. Harrow teeth and cultivator shanks generally need straightening after every season's run.

Make a list of all new parts needed, secure these during the winter and replace the old parts before spring work starts.

SHORT COURSE AT BERWICK CLOSES

With the opening of the last week of the short course in agriculture held in the community hall at Berwick, interest reached its height. Livestock judging held on a nearby farm on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons last, attracted many who were not attending the classes. On Tuesday evening, the classes heard a lecture by J. Coke, secretary of the organization committee which arranges and edits the report on the agricultural situation and outlook in Canada.

On Thursday, Mr. Gordon, of the Agricultural Department, gave an interesting illustrated lecture on swine and how they should be raised for marketing.

Course classes were divided into organizations which will function after the course has been completed. On Wednesday evening, a joint meeting was held in the community hall with Miss Margaret Alguire and Wendell Henry, presidents of the ladies' and men's classes, in charge. It was decided that the ladies' class would take the name of "Finch Township Junior Homemakers" and the men's class "Finch Township Junior Farmers". The organizations will meet together, but the business of each will be carried on separately. When the business has been completed, both groups will join again to enjoy a social evening.

A yearly program is to be made out, and the meetings are to be held on the last Thursday of each month. Those who were enrolled as members during the course will also be members of the different organizations for the coming year. The classes are open to all.

POLICE MAY ENTER BEVERAGE ROOM TO ENFORCE THE LAW

Instructions issued to police announce that for the purpose of clarifying the position of the municipal police in relation to the enforcement of the Ontario Liquor Control Act and the regulations of the Liquor Control Board, the following questionnaire was submitted to the solicitor for the Liquor Control Board for his direction:

1—Is it the duty of city police to inspect beverage rooms and clubs to see the regulations are complied with, such as (a) persons employed therein; (b) hours of sale; (c) holidays; (d) methods of service; (e) club regulations?

2—Have the city police authority to enter such premises without a warrant?

W.B. Common, K.C., solicitor to the Liquor Control Board, replies:

"It is my opinion that it is not the duty of the municipal police to inspect such premises. These duties are within the jurisdiction of inspectors appointed by the Control Board.

"A beverage room in a standard hotel, in my opinion, is a 'public place' within the meaning of the Liquor Control Act. Consequently, a police officer would have authority to enter beverage rooms in the general enforcement of the provisions of the Liquor Control Act; provided, however, that if a search is desired, a warrant is necessary. In the case of licensed clubs, a search warrant is necessary in the first instance."

THIS MIGHT WORK.

"How can I get my husband to tell me about his business affairs?" plaintively inquires a correspondent? Ask him for money for a new dress. —Halifax Herald.

BOLIVIA'S ADVANTAGE

Apparently disabused of the idea that the interminable warfare between Bolivia and Paraguay in the Gran Chaco jungles can be halted by means of heart-to-heart chats with the combatants, the League of Nations committee entrusted with the task of settling the dispute has decided to settle it by taking sides. The coin came down "heads," so Bolivia will now get all the arms she needs, with the blessing of the League, while embargoes on munitions shipments to Paraguay are strengthened.—Border Cities Star.

SEALING WAX.

The use of sealing wax on letters is a very ancient custom, but it by no means follows that it is entirely suitable to present day uses. The postal employees wax angry at its present day use on the back of letters because of the danger from flying fragments of hardened wax to the eyes of the employees. The post office authorities, however, have ruled that "the department knows of no justifiable reason for requesting the public to forego the use of a sealing material which has been in use from time immemorial, and which, as far as the department is aware, has no substitute."—Moncton Transcript.

CURFEW.

Like Port Stanley, Fort Erie has a curfew law that is being enforced to the extent that parents who let "teen" age children roam the streets are being haled into court. That's getting at the root of the trouble.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

FALSE GOSPEL.

"War alone brings up to its highest tension all human energy and puts the stamp of nobility upon the peoples who have the courage to meet it." So declares Premier Mussolini, the ruler of Italy. A terrible falsity. Canada proves it so. From the close of the War of 1812-14 with the United States to the outbreak of the World War of 1914, Canada enjoyed practically one hundred years of peace. Then came the World War of 1914. From our small population Six hundred thousand Canadians became soldiers—and those who got into battle proved that there were no better soldiers in the world.—Ottawa Journal.

REMINDER.

Let the printed sheets of dates which we call a calendar remind us every day in the year that time is passing, and we must get something valuable out of each day.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

PACIFIC COAST SALMON.

The Professor of Biology at Stanford University said in a recent address betore a scientific association that each tributary of streams flowing into the ocean was shown to have a distinct colony or race of salmon. It was further stated by the professor that if these races are destroyed by dams or other man-made devices on the Pacific rivers they cannot be replaced—Halifax Herald.

HEARST ON RUSSIA

The American newspaper publisher, William Randolph Hearst, took occasion in a recent national broadcast to speak the "plain, uncensored truth" about Russia. Despite his earlier views on the great communistic enterprise in that country, he is definitely critical today. He described the Soviet governmental experiments as a fearful failure, which was "only to be expected from putting people who could not care for their own interests successfully in charge of the administration of public affairs.—Calgary Herald.

GREATEST SEAPORT.

When people think of big British seaports they instantly call to mind Liverpool and Southampton, therefore, it may surprise them to learn that London is Britain's busiest seaport by a long way.

During the year ended October 31, the net tonnage using London was 58,693,242. Liverpool was a poor second with 33,505,650, and Southampton third with 25,267,860. Then came Hull with over 11,000,000, although no large liners call there, being on the east coast, and fifth place was occupied by Manchester with over 7,000,000, which is pretty good for a port that is 35 miles from the sea to which it only has access by a man-made canal.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

An Alberta driver the other day just missed beating a train to the crossing, but no doubt he will try it again.—Calgary Herald.

PRAIRIE FRIENDLINESS

Prairie neighborliness has become a byword throughout Canada. It has been thrown into new and still brighter relief in these years of economic ordeal. Men, women and children on the prairies, and, as well, in the towns and cities that dot them, have gone out of their way to do the kindly neighborly thing. This personal helpfulness has become an institution in the west.—Regina Leader-Post.

WALKING AT NIGHT.

People who have to walk along roads at night should pay heed to Chief Shute's reminder that the safe way is to keep to the left, thus facing oncoming traffic. And to add to one's safety under such circumstances it is advisable to have something white visible. Even a white handkerchief carried on the hand would be seen quickly by the driver of a motor car. Persons dressed in dark clothes are often almost invisible until within the direct focus of the headlights—and then it is usually too late.—Edmonton Journal.

THE VACANT CHAIRS.

Magistrate Browne, of Toronto, whose profession brings him into daily contact with the problem, made some striking reference to the automobile death toll in an address the other night.

The deplorable waste of life occasioned by traffic accidents, he declared, was "a ghastly indictment upon our civilization."

'I am often told," says the magistrate, "that damages will be settled. Yes, but tell me, what insurance company can ever fill a vacant chair?"—Peterboro Examiner.

HARD TIMES IN THE ARCTIC

Turkeys at Aklavik, states a radio dispatch from the tiny ice-bound settlement, would have been valued at $1.50 a pound—if there had been any turkeys.

There weren't, so the white and native trappers ate roast caribou and wild cranberries for Christmas and New Year's dinners.—Winnipeg Tribune.

THE EMPIRE

APPETIZER.

At an eating competition, a collier succeeded in disposing of a leg of mutton, a loaf of bread, and a plentiful supply of vegetables, finishing up with a substantial plum pudding.

He was decided the winner.

When going home, he said to some of his admirers, "Now, lads, don't yo say nowt about this to my missus, or she won't gi'e me no supper.—London Advertiser.

POLITE THOUGH HATLESS.

I am in the habit of wearing a beret. As this form of headgear fits tightly to the head it is almost impossible to remove it in time. It is equally difficult to replace, especially if one hand is occupied with, say, a stick or an umbrella. To bow with the beret on seems scarcely courteous; to touch the forehead with the right hand has a menial air; to make a Fascist salute is un-English. Can any one tell me what to do?—London Times.

PARADE OF 400 'PLANES.

One of the high points of the King's Jubilee Year will be a royal review on a big scale of the Royal Air Force.

Air ministry officials and Service officers are discussing the arrangements. One suggestion is that the climax of the review should be a grand "fly-over" on a scale never yet attempted in this country, engaging 400 airplanes, and a "royal salute" with the squadrons diving in formation before the King.

The biggest formation of aircraft that has yet flown over the British Isles consisted in rather more than one hundred aircraft under the leadership of the late Air Commodore C. R. Samson. The flight was made over London some 10 years ago. In size that fleet easily surpassed in numbers the largest enemy formation to appear over English territory during the war — British Aircraft Society.

TOURIST ADVERTISING

Ceylon is rapidly fading off the tourists' map of the world. There has been in recent months a striking decline of tourist traffic. This is the more remarkable because "the world," as Mr. M. S. Milne remarked on Sunday at Nuwara Eliya, "has gone cruising mad." Economic recovery has multiplied tourists and is sending them to the four quarters of the globe. Japan, despite, its drawbacks of distance and language, was expecting to receive an unprecedented number of tourists this year. It was thought that the total would exceed 30,000 visitors as against an average of 17,000 or 18,000. The reason for this sudden influx is a lesson which Ceylon may take to heart. The propaganda carried on against Japan's cheap goods is regarded in Japan as the biggest advertisement for the country. Evidently it is better to become even notorious than remain in respectable obscurity and be ignored.—Times of Ceylon, Colombo.

BETTER TIMES IN N.Z.

This is going to be a much better import year than 1933 was, or, indeed, any year since 1930. With imports so drastically reduced stocks of commodities in this country have become depleted, while the small inward flow has effected employment and contributed to the general sluggishness of trade. Its revival can be attributed in part to the need to replenish supplies of overseas commodities. But that need has existed earlier, when trade still remained at a low ebb. It has been started moving again by several conditions which can easily be assessed. A belief that the future will be better than the past can be given some of the credit. A more important factor has undoubtedly been the dissipation of that atmosphere of uncertainty which restrained importers from operating. The tariff amendments have been made and the exchange policy has been stabilized. Therefore plans can now be formed more confidently than was previously possible.—Auckland News.

Canada-South Africa Need Fast Shipping

Johannesburg—Need for a direct and speedy shipping service between the Union of South Africa and Canada was emphasized in an interview by J. H. McDonald of New Westminster, B.C., chairman of Canada's first trade mission to South Africa.

"We suggest" he said, "that the two governments should jointly subsidize one of the shipping lines to run a regular and fast service between the Union and Canada. A direct service will enable Union exporters to enjoy some of the preferences which our government extends. Once goods are shipped via the United Kingdom they lose their identity and come under a different tariff."

The Canadian visitors spent a day at Pretoria interviewing members of the South African government. Later they visited Durban and returned to spend two or three weeks in this city. They propose going to Rhodesia to talk Canadian trade in Bulawayo and Salisbury.

Quintuplets News Interests Editors

"There Is But One Leaning Tower of Pisa; One Dionne Family"

The Sault Ste. Marie Star says editorially:

"A woman wrote up the Dionne household for the last issue of the Canadian Home Journal, and was apparently much perturbed at the modest furnishings. The large 'bare' living room plainly impressed her, for she lists the stove, table, plain chairs and the few other articles it contained.

"To a northerner who knows something of the modest requirements of its pioneer households, the Toronto woman's reaction is interesting. Even where more elaborate furnishings could be afforded, simplicity in rural homes in the north is seldom departed from. That the Dionne family could add something to the living room must be apparent from the fact that a piano is listed in the parlor.

"The settler in the north is used to the simple life. He does not favor cluttering up his home with more furniture than he thinks he needs even when he could afford to do so."

EDITORIAL REPLY.

The Stratford Beacon-Herald replies editorially to a correspondent, a man, who wants to "get a rest from all the fuss over the Dionne babies."

"Well, we remain interested ourselves," says the editor. "One man who returned from a trip to Florida told us the people at the hotel where he was staying asked him about the Dionne children when they found he was from Ontario; there was a letter in yesterday's mail from Washington and at the bottom was the query 'How goes it with the quintuplets?' It's a fact the news about them has been carried pretty much all over the world for the Dionne sisters are the only quintuplets in the world. There is but one learning tower of Pisa, just one Gibraltar and just one Dionne family.

"We admit we are interested in the Dionne sisters. If we could shove one of them about in a cart we'd gladly do so, or perform any other minor or major service. Not being able to do that we print things in the paper now and then about them, put in their pictures so people can see how they are getting along, and we'll keep on doing it. Much better material, we think, than a plethora of stories about bad men, bandits, wars, divorces, depressions and so on. Why, just think of it—five at a time and all living and fat as pups! Nothing like it in the world."

Trying Experiments With Strawberries

Quebec—The agricultural districts of the province in general, and the district of Quebec City and the Island of Orleans in particular, are expected to derive considerable benefit from a new co-operative experiment that is being conducted by the Provincial and Dominion departments of agriculture with cold storage garden strawberries.

Some 30,000 pounds of last year's crop of strawberries, which have been kept in cold storage, will be offered for sale on the Montreal market in the near future, and if the experiment proves successful, it is expected between 200,000 and 300,000 pounds of Quebec strawberries will be similarly marketed in the winter of 1936.

It is claimed that, early in the season, long before the province's strawberries are available, a considerable amount of berries are imported from the United States and Ontario and are sold at fairly high prices, but that Quebec cold storage berries, which retain their excellent taste and fine quality, could easily and profitably take their place.

LIKE A DAGGER IN HER BACK

Fixed With Rheumatism

GREAT BENEFIT FROM KRUSCHEN

A woman correspondent writes:—"I was crippled with pains stabbing me like a dagger in the lower part of my back. From there they would go from joint to joint, almost fixing my shoulders so that I could not move my arms up and down for pain. At times I thought I would never rid myself of this terrible agony. I walked the room night after night with no sleep for week after week. I tried lotions of all kinds, but got no relief whatever. Then I tried Kruschen Salts, and started straight away with the wonderful results which I am obtaining at this present moment.

"No fear of going to bed, not afraid to eat a meal. My food used to nearly choke me. It must have been all acid in my body, which I am very thankful to say is not the case now. I am reaping great benefit from Kruschen, which I take regularly every morning. To me it is worth its weight in gold. It has put new life in me.—(Mrs.) E. P.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are caused by deposits of needle-pointed uric acid crystals in the muscles and joints. The six salts in Kruschen stimulate your liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action; assist them to get rid of the excess uric acid which is the cause of all your suffering. When poisonous uric acid—with its deposits of needle-pointed crystals—goes, there's no doubt about those aches and pains going too! Nor is that all. Kruschen keeps your system so regular, so free from stagnating waste matter, that no such body poisons as uric acid ever get the chance to accumulate again.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c and 75c per bottle.

The Necessity of Hospitalization In the Early Treatment of Infantile Paralysis

By DR. J. L. McDONALD
(Surgical Staff, Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto)

In this War against Disease, the cause of certain conditions still remains unsolved, and one of the most striking examples of this is Infantlie Paralysis (Acute Anterior Poliomelitis). Here we have a disease which appears to be on the increase; and at the present time is responsible for more crippling in childhood than any other. Medical men in various parts of the world have been working feverishly to discover the cause of this condition and to produce some type of prophylactic serum to protect children against it. In this war that is being waged the lives of many brilliant young physicians have been sacrificed, but up to the present the problem still remains unsolved.

We do know, however, that when an individual becomes afflicted with Infantile Paralysis, early in the disease there is a widespread paralysis of muscles, and that as time goes on some degree of recovery occurs in every case which in many instances may be complete. During this period of recovery, it is very important that the paralyzed muscles be protected by splints to keep them from becoming stretched, and that massage be instituted early to keep up the nourishment of the affected limbs. It is during this period that it is imperative that the child be treated in Hospital, because it is almost impossible to obtain as good results if treated in a private home.

The length of time that the child should remain in hospital varies in different cases, but generally speaking it should be long enough to have the patient become thoroughly accustomed to wearing splints and braces and until the case has become one that can be easily handled by the mother at home without taking too much of her time from the other children.

Wireless Launches New British Liner 12,000 Miles Away

Barrow-in-Furness, Eng. —An electrical impulse originating nearly 12,000 miles away in Australia recently launched a new 14,000-ton liner here.

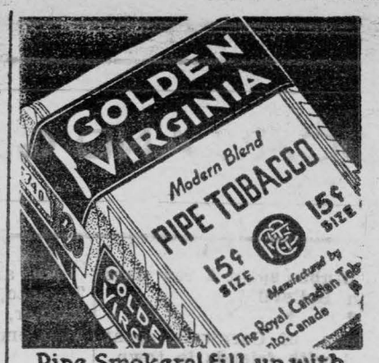

The Duke of Gloucester, then touring Australia, touched a button while attending a concert in Brisbane and almost simultaneously the "Orion"—12,000 miles away—was released from the clutch of the stocks to glide down the slipway into the water.

The method used for this remarkable long-distance launch was wireless telephony. The arrangements were made by the co-operation of the British and Australian Post Offices. The electric current went by land line from Brisbane to Sydney thence by radio to England where it was put onto the land telephone trunkline to Barrow.

The new liner is 665 feet long and there is to be only one mast. She will be employed on the Orient Line's England-to-Australia service. Her engines are to be twin-screw turbines with water-tube boilers fired by oil fuel developing about 24,000 horse power.

The managers of the Orient Company have long wished to have a vessel called "Orion." Now the owners of other existing ships of that name have agreed to rename their craft to make way for the new liner and thus avoid confusion.

The liner's launching occurred the day before the first air mail direct to Australia was started from England. Both are instances of how distaance is being clipped and lessened by natural science in its remarkable developments.

Royal Air Force Sets Safety Record

(By the British Aircraft Society.)

The Royal Air Force in 1934 set a record which will speak more eloquently of the skill of British aviators and the trustworthiness and efficiency of British aircraft material than the most spectacular flight.

In the year Service airplanes have done more flying than in any previous 12 months since the War, yet the number of serious accidents shows a substantial decline and is better even than in 1921 when the Royal Air Force was about one-third of its present size and flew little more than one-tenth of the distance flown this year.

A conservative estimate shows that R.A.F. machines have flown in 1934 about 47,000,000 miles. In 1921 every 2,238 hours' flying was attended by a death; in 1934 the figure has risen to approximately 12,000 hours.

And in '34 the decreased number of fatal accidents goes with an exceptionally good record in other accidents which were not fatal but caused injuries to personnel. For comparison, the French Air Forces flew last year about 38,000,000 miles, employing about twice the number of aircraft flown in the British Service, which returned 44,000,000 miles in 1933; French casualties last year amounted to 45 deaths.

The present figure shows that the 93 squadrons of the R.A.F. have sustained 19 fatal accidents in 1934, involving 28 deaths. Corresponding figures in 1921 were 33 squadrons. 22 fatal accidents, and 37 deaths. That year the Service flew not more than 5,000,000 miles. In the worst year—1926—61 squadrons in all had 54 accidents, involving 85 deaths.

Risks are inseparable from military flying. The Royal Air Force is charged with patrol and policing duties over a million square miles of territory. It flies daily in three continents, much of the time over perilous country where engine failure would mean disaster.

Even in the British Isles, the force gets much bad weatherflying; it can use no region of sunshine and perfect visibility comparable, for example, with the great state of Texas, where much of United States military flying is done. And this year's record is the more striking in view of the increased flying done in air exercises and manoeuvres that were conducted as far as possible under active service conditions.

Undoubtedly much credit for the improvement must go to improvements in recent years of training methods and to extension of the instructional period. Every Royal Air Force pilot, for example, is trained nowadays in "blind" flying by instruments alone, which makes for safer navigation in fog and cloud. But perhaps even more credit must got to modern British aircraft and aero engines. Engine failure is now a rare occurrence; engines in the service commonly run 400 to 500 hours without overhaul so dependable and troublefree are they. Aircraft frames are not overhauled till they have flown some 1,000 hours.

That is the kind of progress in aeronautical engineering of which one hears all too little, bearing directly on the safety of all kinds of aviation, civil as well as military.

WILL ROGERS EXPLAINS ALL

Cowboy - Humorist Tells Philadelphia How Things Stand

Philadelphia—The ABC's of the United States have been explained fully to Philadelphians, thanks to Will Rogers.

The cowboy-humorist made everything clear recently at a dinner of the Poor Richard Club, commemerating Benjamin Franklin's 229th birthday, where a medal was pinned on Roger's blue serge suit, honoring him as 'America's ambassador of advertising." The blue suit, he had explained, "doubles" for a tuxedo at formal functions.

Most of his talk concerned President Roosevelt, who he said he had "wised up" the night previously at Vice President John N. Garner's dinner in Washington.

"You can't meet the president and not love him," Rogers said. "He's doing a lot of cockeyed things. But his hold on the American people is due to the fact they have confidence in his honesty of purpose.

"He can't answer whether we're going to have inflation or what the dollar's going to be worth. He can't tell. But he's trying hard to do things."

Rogers said he thought he had "got the president off the idea" of appointing any more "guys" to the supreme court.

He also expressed his appreciation of the medal by telling Franklin's home town what he thought of its Sunday "blue laws."

"Philadelphia is a great little town . . . six days a week, but on Sunday, the best thing you can do is get right out of town," he said, urging Mayor J. Hampton Moore that Sunday moving picture would be a good thing for the city.

Would Seize Tombstones

Memorial Craftsmen Say Monuments Bought, Not Paid For

Toronto.—Can a tombstone be sold better in the cutter's shop than in the cemetery plot? This question brought forth heated argument at the 24th annual convention of the Canadian Association of Memorial Craftsmen.

An Ottawa dealer, speaking in praise of the sale-on-site system, said he had been able to boost one tombston sale from $600 to $6,000 by accompanying the relatives to the site.

Exception to this was taken by a Toronto man who declared that if the dealer went to the cemetery his prospects were likely to start picking out parts of every tombstone to be incorporated in one, thus leaving unsold the stock he had chiselled out all winter.

The executive announced it would apply to the Ontario Government to allow dealers to take from cemeteries unpaid for tombstones. One dealer claimed a Toronto man had refused to pay for a tombstone, pointing out it was impossible for the dealer to do anything about it.

The Canadian Hen

The Canadian hen in the last year or two has been building up a commerce of her own. Four years ago Canada was sending no dressed poultry to Great Britain, but lately there has been a sharp development in the export trade. A large supply was sent to the British Christmas market last year and the year before. During the past twelve months over two and a quarter million pounds of dressed pouultry have been exported and another generous supply was delivered to the British Christmas market. A large supply of Canadian poultry finds its way to Newfoundland. Two years ago the Canadian export of eggs was only 270,000 dozen, but it is now running at the rate of two million dozen in the year, having increased nearly eight times. Great Britain is the chief market.

Animated Map Traces Growth

From Year 1,000—Explorers of North America are Followed

Ottawa.—By means of the new "animated map," Lawrence J. Burpee, Ottawa, recently took members of the Canadian Institute of Surveying step by step over the routes followed by the early explorers of the northern part of North America.

Beginning about the year 1,000, with the voyages of Lief Ericson, whose ships were the first known to reach this continent from Europe, his screen picture showed the map of Canada coming into being with the first tiny fringe of Labrador located by these Norsemen. Then it carried on through the St. Lawrence and Great Lakes, indicating the work of explorers such as Cartier and Champlain.

The outline of the Pacific Coast was seen shaping up through the discoveries of Captain Vancouver and his contemporaries.. Chartings of great northern waterways of Canada, by men like Thompson and Mackenzie were photographically shown. search of the northwest passage,

Sir John Franklin's explorations in which ended with the tragic loss of his entire expedition in Arctic waters a century ago, could also be seen as the map added the outline of Canadian northern shores. Amundsen's contributions in the early part of the present century in the schooner "Gjoa," the first and only ship to ever sail from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean by the northwestern route, were also indicated.

Toronto Port Collections Rise $6,305,088 in 1934

Toronto.—Customs and excise collections for the port of Toronto for the year 1934 were greater than those for 1933 by $6,305,088, the first substantial gain for a calendar year since 1929.

The revenue for the port for 1934 amounted to $45,937,694, according to the report of Mr. J. H. Bertram, collector of customs.

The revenue of $3,793,170 for the month of December was the highest it has been for the past five years. Total revenue for 1932 was $52,906,087, for 1933 it was $39,632,605, and for 1934 totalled $45,937,694. The increase, said Mr. Bertram, shows a definite trend toward better times.

Growing Deaf With Head Noises? Try This.

If you are growing hard of hearing and fear catarrhal deafness, or if you have roaring, rumbling, hissing noises in your ears, go to your druggist and get 1 oz. of Parmint (double strength) and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to take. Anyone who is threatened with catarrhal deafness or who has had head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Assessors' School Planned in Alberta

Calgary, Alta.—In an endeavor to establish an equalized standard of assessment on property in different parts of Alberta, Hugh Allen, Minister of Public Works, informed the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts convening in Calgary that the Government has under consideration establishment of a school for assessors.

By this means land assessors would be trained toward a similar viewpoint in placing a valuation on property which would aid greatly in equalizing the tax levies throughout the province.

Mr. Allen pointed out that gradual changes in land values had been effected year by year, and felt that an assessors' school would serve to equip those employed as assessors with a better and more uniform basis for valuation.

More ancient records, in the form of a "Day Book" containing a record of far expenses of the late James Merkley, in 1862, were brought into the office of the local paper this week by Mr. Ern. Casselman of Mariatown. While the book is weather-beaten to an extent that would indicate its age, the accounts are fairly clear and readable. It is worthy of note that the prices of farm produce, as recorded in this book in pounds, shillings and pence, were approximately the same 73 years ago as they are at the present day, notwithstanding that the farmers' expenses have increased by more than 90 per cent.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE MEETING

A meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Agricultural Office on Monday evening, Feb. 4th, at 7.30 o'clock. The meeting opened by singing the Institute Ode, and roll call. The Treasurer reported the receipt of a cheque for $26.00 from the Cameo Theatre, said amount being the Institute's share of the proceeds of "Sorrell and Son". The Secretary was asked to write a letter to Mr. Morton, thanking him for the courtesy and kindness shown the Institute by him and his staff during the showing of the picture. The minutes were approved as read. The annual food sale and tea in aid of the Public Library was discussed, committees formed and all necessary arrangements completed for the tea, which will be held in the Agricultural Office on Saturday afternoon, Feb. 16th.

The guest speaker, the Hon. Geo. H. Challies, was then introduced by the President. Mr. Challies' subject was "British Columbia," a trip across the province being described and illustrated by views. The resources, industries, vegetation and climate were mentioned briefly, and interesting features spoken of. At the close of the talk, a vote of thanks for a very delightful and instructive address was tendered Mr. Challies.

After singing the National Anthem the meeting was closed.

MORRISBURG FERRY JUNIORS COMPLETE ST. LAWRENCE SCHEDULE

Following the last game of the regular schedule, the Juniors journeyed to Prescott on Saturday last, and were beaten in a thrilling match which was considered the best of the season.

This final defeat, however, eliminates the team from the play-offs, but considering that their home ice was at Iroquois, and the little practice that they had, the team put up a consistent showing and will be heard from in the future.

The final score of the game, 8-6, indicates that the team had scoring punch as well. To compensate the players for their splendid showing, they will represent the Ferry Co. in six exhibition games during the rest of the season.

To give the Juniors an oportunity of developing into a very strong aggregation, their President has arranged that several Iroquois and Cardinal senior players augment the team.

Their probable line-up in the six remaining games at Potsdam, Massena and other American towns will be as follows:

The above augmented lines will give the Morrisburg boys who played the last game in the Junior St. Lawrence League, a splendid opportunity in stepping along with celebrated seniors of the Senior St. Lawrence Hockey League.

SPORT FLASHES

In the column headed "On the Highways of Sport", by T.W. Munns in the Toronto Globe, referring to the fastest skaters in the N.H.L., the editor quotes an authority on the subject as saying that the late Ken Mallen "could lead them all, skating backwards or forwards". Ken's many local supporters will heartily agree.

Hockey fans of Cardinal and vicinity paid tribute to the late Rodger D. Smith on Friday last, at the Memorial Rink, Cardinal, when a one-minute silence was observed prior to the start of a St. Lawrence League game between Iroquois and Cardinal. It was at this rink the deceased referee handled his last game, between Chesterville and Cardinal.

The winning string of the New York Rangers was stopped last night by their fellow townsmen, the Americans. The Rangers had previously gone 13 games without a defeat, winning two from the powerful Maple Leafs. A feature of the game last night was the return to form of Sweeney Schriner, sensational Amerk rookie, who scored three of his team's goals and was the most effective player on the ice.

* * *

Wilf. Cude, Canadien goaler, has been robbed of more shutouts this season than probably any other netminder in the N.H.L. Last night, his bad luck continued to hound him, when Laurie Aurie poked the puck home with less than a minute to go.

* * *

Last night in Toronto, Eddie Shore turned the old power and led his Bruins to a 4-4 tie with the Maple Leafs. Shore was in the thick of alost every goalward rush, counting one goal and two assists, for three points. Not a bad evening's work.

* * *

In the only other game last night, St. Louis defeated Chicago 1-0 when Scotty Bowman, powerful Eagle defenceman, sank one behind Chabot midway through the overtime period. The Eagles have been playing to better crowds lately, 7000 attending last night's contest.

Another of the Toronto Maple Leafs has turned "bad man", in the person of "Buzz" Boll. One week ago last Saturday, he turned on Cooney Weiland, of Detroit, one of the cleanest players in the league, and after knocking him cold, jumped on him, apparently trying to break him to bits. Last Saturday, when the Leafs played the New York Americans, this same Boll boarded "Happy" Leighton Emms heavily, as a result of which Emms is now recovering from a fractured skull, a concussion, and a deep gash over his eye. Of course, Boll is still a sweet little sugar plum to the Toronto papers, in spite of the fact that they were the first to sound the trumpet against Eddie Shore recently, when Jimmy Ward of Maroons was hurt in a game at Boston. It subsequently came out that Shore was not even near Ward at the time.

In an exhibition contest Tuesday evening, M-W Sailors, the Morrisburg-Waddington Ferry entry in the Intermediate Basketball League, Ottawa, scored a victory over "Orfuns" of the Senior League, by a margin of two points, the score being 24-22.

The Morrisburg senior team in the Longue Sault League was victorious on Monday night, shutting out the Aultsville sextet while racking up three goals in their own cause.

* * *

Cornwall and Cardinal teams in the St. Lawrence League tied 3-3 here last night, after a wide-open game. Had the Card defence been a little steadier, they might have won the game, as they seemed to have it "in the bag". Penalties to Lampson and Robinson proved costly to the starch-towners, allowing the Canucks to draw on even terms.

* * *

The Canadian press has sounded the clarion call to affiliated sports writers to name an all-star N.H.L. team. One of the first submitted is as follows: Goal, Worters, Americans; defence, Shore, Boston and Wentworth, Maroons; centre, Blinco, Maroons; wings, Conacher and Jackson, Toronto.

Dizzy Dean, St. Louis Cardinal's ace pitcher, signed his players contract yesterday for the 1935 season. Neither Dean nor Sam Breadon, the Cardinal's owner, would reveal the salary Diz is to get, but the talkative pitcher said it was more than the 17,500 he had been offered originally.
