Township Council Advised Provide Relief Single Men

Announcement that the Department of Public Works for the Dominion had approved a further payment of $3.350 to the Township of Winchester, on account of the Little Castore river drainage scheme, was made to the council which met Monday in the Town Hall, Winchester, by Reeve Howard H. Nesbitt.

Reporting to the council, which had delegated him to ask A. C. Casselman, K.C., M.P., of Prescott to bring the chief engineer to inspect the drain Mr. Nesbitt said K. M. Cameron, of the Department of Public Works, had inspected the completed work, finding 73 per cent of the excavation finished. The account, setting out the expenditures, with a drawback of $4,356 25, and the payments to the contractor were found to be correct, with the work itself proceeding in accordance with the terms of the by-law. The total grant received to date on account of the $8,000 provided for in the supplementary estimates, now totals $6,150, which has been deposited to the credit of the scheme. Monday's payments to the contractor following a report by F. M Eagleson, C.E., were $4,792.

A letter from D. B. Harkness, secretary of the unemployment relief branch of Ontario, stated the memorandum for the withdrawal of direct relief for single employable men had been rescinded, as of October 1st. While the advancing season had decreased chances for unemployment municipalities were advised to provide work for relief applicants.

GUILD MEMBERS MEET.

The ladies of the Guild of Holy Trinity church met at the home of Mrs. John Sutherland Tuesday afternoon with the session in charge of the president, Mrs. H. H. Casselman. Several items of business were attended to, including the payment of taxes on the rectory, a tea and food sale, and further discussion was held on the recipe book to be published. The secretary was instructed to ascertain the cost of printing and report back to the committee.

At the conclusion, a very nice lunch was served by the hostess who was assisted by Mrs. H. H. Casselman, Mrs. Jas. Hanna and Mrs. A. Morris.

Droppo---Johnston

A well-known former Chesterville young man was married Saturday afternoon, when Harriet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Johnston, of Bobcaygeon, became the bride of Allen Droppo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Droppo, of Chesterville. The ceremony was performed at Trinity United church, Bobcaygeon, at 4.30 o'clock, by Rev. Mr. Leach. The church was beautifully decorated with maple leaves, autumn flowers and roses.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was becomingly gowned in a dress of eggshell silk chiffon velvet made on long lines and falling in a short train. Her veil was of tulle and worn shoulder length, and her turban and accessories matched the bridal dress. She carried a bouquet of Butterfly roses and lilies-of-the-Valley.

The bridesmaid, Mrs. R. B. Rumble who is a sister of the bride, wore a blue silk chiffon velvet dress ending in a small train, and with matching turban. Her bouquet was composed of Johanna Hill roses. The groomsman was Mr. Hosea Droppo, brother of the groom, and the ushers were Messrs. Fred and Percy Johnston, brothers of the bride. Miss Hilda Webber played the wedding march and the accompaniment for Mr. R. C. Pardy who sang "All Joy Be Thine" during the signing of the register.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony with the immediate relatives present. Mrs. Johnston, mother of the bride, received in a gown of prune silk canton with black hat and accessories and wore a corsage bouquet of Butterfly roses. The groom's mother, Mrs. Droppo, aiso received, her gown being of plum shade tree-bark crepe, hat of matching material, and her corsage bouquet was of Johanna Hill roses.

The groom's gift to his bride was a beaded evening bag, to the bridesmaid, a compact, and best man, a bill fold with cheque enclosed.

Later in the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Droppo left by motor for a honeymoon to Quebec and eastern points, the bride's travelling clothes being a navy crepe dress, navy hat and accessories, and grey tweed coat with wolf trimming. On their return they will reside at Vaughan road, Toronto.

Mr. Droppo is a member of the Toronto staff of the Bank of Nova Scotia, and started in the service of the bank in the Chesterville branch.

A reception was held at the home of the groom's parents last evening with a large number of friends attending, and the young couple were presented with numerous gifts.

Moss-Gauthier

A pretty fall wedding was solemnized on Monday morning at 8 o'clock at Ste. Theresa church, Marionville, when Rosa Gauthier, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herson Gauthier, of Winchester, was united in marriage to Mr. Victor Moss, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. R. Moss of Crysler. Rev. Fr. Lapointe officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a royal blue crepe dress with hat, shoes and accessories to match. The bride was attended by Miss Irene Moss of Aylmer, Que., sister of the groom, who also wore blue. Mr. Wilfred St. Pierre of Moose Creek, cousin of the bride, was best man.

After the ceremony dinner was served at the home of the groom's parents to immediate relatives. Later a largely attended reception was held at the bride's home.

Alba, Mo.—Dr. Daniel Alexander Carlyle, 64 years old, well-known Alba physician, died at 2.10 o'clock, Friday afternoon, Sept. 27, at his home here.

Dr. Carlyle had been in ill health about four years, his condition becoming worse in July. He had been bedfast only 36 hours previous to his death, however. Although ill, blind and nearly deaf, Dr. Carlyle continued with his practice, until Sunday.

He had been practicing in Alba 32 years, coming here in February, 1903, from Ashbury where he had practiced a year and a half.

Born at Morewood.

Born at Morewood, Ontario, Canada, Dr. Carlyle came to this district in August, 1901, settling at Ashbury. He was a graduate of McGill University at Montreal, Canada, and of Tulane University at New Orleans, La. He was a charter member of Criterion Lodge No. 586, A. F. and A. M., at Alba, and was the lodge's first worshipful master. Prior to that time he had been a member of Prince Edward lodge of the order at Montreal.

Dr. Carlye also was a charter member of Beacon Light chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, at Alba, the Presbyterian church and the Canadian Order of Foresters at Morewood, Ont. At the time of his death he was secretary of the Alba Masonic Blue lodge which office he had held 19 years.

Surviving are a son, Kenneth Carlyle of Alba; three sisters, Mrs. J. W. Bogart of Morewood; Mrs. Margaret Campbell of Western Canada, and Mrs. A. E. Maye, in Oregon; four brothers, Adam Carlyle of Morewood; S. W. Carlyle, William Carlyle and Matthew Carlyle in Alberta, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Methodist Episcopal church with Rev. Max Barnes, pastor of the First Methodist church at Webb City, in charge. Burial was made in Faskens cemetery.

Fetterly---Christie

A quiet wedding took place Wednesday evening, October 2, in the United church manse at Murillo, Ont., when Louise Mansel, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Christie of Kakabeka Falls, was united in marriage to Hugh Carson Fetterly of Montreal, son of Mrs. Fetterly and the late James Fetterly of Morewood. Rev. J. C. Anderson officiated in the presence of immediate relatives.

The attendants were Mrs. Robert Arthur and Mr. Andrew Christie of Port Arthur, sister and brother of the bride.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a Hattie Carnegie gown of rust crepe in peasant style, with a full bodice shirred to a high neckline which was trimmed in front with brown Siberian squirrel tails, touches of brown squirrel also garnishing the patch pockets.

Over this was worn a coat of brown duvetyn with a stand-up collar and lapels of fitch Her hat was a shovel brim model of brown corded silk, and she wore brown kid gloves and shoes. A corsage of Talisman roses, lilies-of-the-valley and fern completed her ensemble.

Immediately after the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served to immediate relatives and friends at the home of the bride's parents at Kakabeka Falls. Mr. and Mrs. Fetterly left later in the evening for Port Arthur, enroute to Ottawa where they spent a few days prior to leaving for Montreal where they will reside.

Trinity United Y.P.S.

The weekly meeting of the Young People's Society of Trinity United church was held on Monday evening with a good attendance. Mr. Frank Moodie gave a very interesting talk on "The Origin of Coal and Oil" and a few facts on Western Canada. A number of lantern slides revealed the wealth of this land of ours in both minerals and oils. Other slides showed points of interest and the beauty of the west. Mr. Moody also displayed a number of precious stones which he had collected.

Next week's meeting will be devoted to "Citizenship."

74th Anniversary Services Huge Success at Monkton

The 74th anniversary of the founding of Presbyterianism in the community was fittingly observed in Knox Presbyterian church, Monkton, on Sunday last. The guest speaker at the 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m. services was Rev. J. W. Mills, B.A., of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Blyth, Ont. Large congregations were present at both services particularly in the evening when there was the largest attendance on record for many years, nearly 500 people. The special thankoffering for the day amounted to $400.

Great credit was due the organist and choir leader, Miss Olive Wilson, for the excellent music presented by her choir of 30 voices.

On Monday evening a fowl supper was held in the basement of the church, remitting proceeds to the extent of $200. The programme was provided by Duncan R. Cowan and Co., noted entertainers from Toronto.

The pastor of the church is Rev. Fred D. Douglas, B.A., L.S.T., formerly minister in charge of St. Andrew's church, Chesterville.

A Child Must See Correctly In Order to Understand

* * * *

IF HE OR SHE cannot see correctly, they cannot learn correctly. In short, poor vision affects mental growth. The child is clumsy where other children are skilled. He is slow where they are quick. He struggles to discover the cause but cannot and he visits the eye specialist and his sight is corrected.

* * * *

A CHILD cannot know that his vision is imperfect until that vision has been corrected.

* * * *

IT'S UNWISE to abuse good eyesight.

GUARD WELL your own sight. It changes with the years. A pair of glasses worn at the time you need them may mean all the difference in the world to you and to your yes.

Chesterville's Community Hall

A GLANCE at the plans of Chesterville's new Community Hall is convincing proof that the fine structure going up so rapidly will be an even better one than that burned on the afternoon of Remembrance Day last year. The granite-faced cement blocks with which the walls are being constructed have a dignified, substantial appearance and have the advantage, also, of absolute fire protection. This hall will be as nearly fireproof as it is possible to build it and nothing short of a bomb will have any effect on the completed structure.

Reeve Casselman was kind enough to allow us a "once-over" of the plans the other evening and to explain the details of construction. The hall, facing west on South Main street, will present the appearance of solid granite, trimmed with stone of a lighter shade. The main entrance will be flanked by a pilaster, and a pilaster will also be built into each corner of the building, making four for the front. While the roof will be flat, and of gravel construction, the upper end of the front will not be cut off in a box-like way, but is to be stepped up in a pleasing fashion to a central peak. Five pilasters will be placed on each side and will bear the heavy steel girders supporting the first floor and roof.

Entering the main door, one will find to the right and left the stairs leading to the main auditorium on the second floor. Immediately ahead to the left (that is the side next the Nation River), is the entrance to the movie hall which will run the full length of the place. This theatre will be modern in every respect and fireproof. All plans were submitted to the provincial department and given official sanction by Mr. T. P. Buckley, inspector of theatres under the Theatres and Cinematographs Act.

The floor, of cement, contains a very modern feature. It is ramped, of course, to give everyone a clear view of the screen, but about two-thirds of the way up the grade is changed and the floor slants upwards toward the stage. This gives anyone seated near the front a much more comfortable position and does away with the "pain in the neck" one gets from tipping the head back in order to look up at the picture being presented.

The seating will accommodate 210 persons under the rules of the act. An option has already been secured on this number of theatre seats. For an occasion other than a movie, the seating capacity can be increased to 260. The rows will be 14 seats long with an aisle at either end and a five-foot aisle at both front and rear leading to fire doors of the same width built at the outside ground level. Doing away with the centre aisle usually found in theatres of this size will eliminate the nuisance of patrons blocking the view of others while deciding which seat they are going to take.

The projection and rewinding booths are also fully constructed of concrete and supplied with ventilators and an emergency exit. The stage is not very large as it will be used only for the movie screen and at gatherings such as court, conventions, etc. All of the larger functions will be accommodated in the large second floor hall. The stage is connected with the kitchen so that entrance may be made there by anyone not wishing to walk up the length of the hall in view of everyone. A door through the Library will permit of entrance to the ladies' rest room.

Returning to the front again, we find the Hydro office the first room on the side opposite the theatre. In here is located the ticket-selling office for the show and also the auditorium. In here also the council will hold its sessions. The new vault will be placed at the front under the stairway. A door then takes us to the furnace room in which will be placed the central heating equipment. The location here of the furnaces will permit of the finest heating for both floors. In here also the gentlemen's toilet is to be built, entrance being made (after the Hydro office is closed) through the furnace room door at the south side.

The Public Library is next to the east and will be entered through its own outside door. The Women's Institute will occupy this room, and entrance is aso provided to the kitchen which will be considerably larger than the former one and will be provided with running water.

All walls and floors of the first storey will be of solid concrete, the walls and ceilings covered with metal lath and plaster. The only wood will be in the doors and window frames. Doors facing the movie show will be faced with iron and the plaster in the theatre will be of cement.

The second floor is entered by way of two stairs. Seating for 520 will be provided here without a pillar or post marring the view to the stage. Comfortable seats are assured with spacing to conform to official regulations which require 18 inches per seat and 32 inches from back to back. When used for dancing, the floor will be unobstructed and one of the largest and finest in Eastern Ontario. A splendid stage is planned to be considerably deeper than the first one. Spacious dressing rooms are provided at either end. In the right-hand dressing room at floor level, is an emergency exit to be used in addition to the large doorways at the rear. Lighting of the hall will be by indirect means, the lights being placed in a trough near the ceiling so that they will be invisible but at the same time provide illumination by reflection from the ceiling. Here, also, the walls and ceiling are covered with metal lath and plaster. Provision is made by the strengthening of the girders at the rear for the addition of a balcony at a future date. The cost of a balcony has necessitated cutting it from the plans for the present.

The floor is supported by four huge I-beams resting on the pilasters, and the roof is held by a similar number of steel girders. Permanency and beauty are the points which struck us as we discussed the details of this second hall arising from the ashes of Chesterville's first effort for a hall to accommodate the community to advantage.

Contracts call for completion by December 20th and on the weather will rest the responsibility of this. The walls are going up at a very fast pace and if the structure can be enclosed before bad weather sets in the interior can be finished in the face of snow or cold.

Enthusiastic plans are already being made for a grand five-night opening to include a banquet the first night with prominent speakers from both the Federal and Provincial Houses, followed by two dances and two bang-up movies. However, this is only tentative and may be changed as circumstances permit.

The grounds, which were built up last year ready for the opening that did not take place, will be landscaped, it is understood, by the Horticultural Society. A nursery has been maintained on the farm of Councillor Thos. Allen in which 250 shrubs are doing well, many of them now being ready for transplanting as soon as conditios will permit.

Much has yet to be accomplished before the financing is completed. The officials responsible for the erection are greatly heartened by the splendid response to a canvass by citizens of both village and district. A market for the $14,000 of debentures has been secured and the sale will be executed at once. Such support is deserved by the 1935 council members who have given many, many hours to planning and arranging details down to the smallest requirement.

Several local men are receiving employment but the contractors are using mostly their own men in order to speed the job. As many men from town as it is possible will be given work, it is understood. The Bell Telephone Company and the Hydro Commission have removed their poles from around the site which allows the building to stand out to a better appearance. The Bell have carried their cable across the McCloskey House property to Church street, and then down to Main, while the Hydro line ends with the street light at the eastern corner of the municipal lot.

On returning from a country holiday a child was met by its mother. The little one at once began to talk about country experiences, and described picking strawberries for breakfast. The mother replied: "Yes, and I wonder you didn't fall out of the tree and break your neck."

One day, as Mark Twain was very busy writing in his study, his little daughter asked where daddy was, and was told she must be quiet and not disturb daddy because he was upstairs writing an anecdote.

Not long after the door bell rang and the little girl ran to answer it. The caller asked if Mr. Clemens was in, to which the little Miss proudly replied: "Yes, sir, he's in, but you can't see him, 'cause he's upstairs riding a nanny goat."

They were discussing the bore of the seaside boarding house. "He would talk a dog's hind leg off," observed Smith.

"And even then," answered Brown, "he would go on with the tale."

To the Electors of

Grenville = Dundas

WHY are we witnessing today the greatest change in public opinion ever known in Canadian political history ?

WHY has the tide of Canadian public opinion turned so unmistakably to the Right Honourable R. B. Bennett and the Conservative Party ?

WHY has the Right Honourable R. B. Bennett received the greatest ovations ever to be accorded any political leader in Canada in the course of his triumphal tour across the Dominion ?

BECAUSE the people of Canada are profoundly grateful to Mr. Bennett for his courageous leadership in piloting the Ship of State safely through the worst depression in the world's history. The Economic Council of the League of nations says: "Canada is leading the world in her progress toward prosperity."

BECAUSE the people of Canada realize that the legislation placed upon the Statute Books by the Conservative Party represents the most outstanding achievement in reform legislation ever to be placed upon the Statute Books of Canada: Unemployment Insurance, Minimum Wage laws, 8-hour Day, 1 Day's Rest in Seven, Natural Products Marketing Act, Trade and Industry Commission.

BECAUSE the Conservative Party's fiscal policy of Protection has meant security and wages for the industrial workers of Canada and has attracted 282 new industries to Canada with an invested capital of $26,000,000.00.

BECAUSE the Empire Trade Agreements negotiated by Mr. Bennett in 1932 provided new markets within the Empire for the products of our farms and factories to the extent of $122,000,000.

BECAUSE the people of Canada find in the platform of the Conservative Party now offered the only practical solution of Canada's problems.

BECAUSE the other parties seeking the support of the Canadian people either offer no platform at all, or platforms which the sponsors themselves know are impossible of fulfilment.

Holmes---Merkley

A very interesting and fashionable wedding took place at Valleyholm, the beautiful country home of Mr and Mrs. Geo. C. Merkley, on Wednesday last, at high noon when their eldest daughter, Emma Lenora, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry H. Holmes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Holmes, Winchester Springs. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. C. Tait of Trinity United church, Chesterville.

The bride entered the drawingroom on the arm of her father to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March played by Miss Helen Timmins of Winchester. She was preceded by the little flower girl, Miss Elaine Crowder, who strewed pink roses in her pathway. An alcove was fashioned into a beautful bridal bower, a silver wedding bell hanging from a star that was banked with dusty miller and blue salvia, was connected with huge baskets of autumn bloom and ferns by streamers and bows of white satin ribbon.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of amethyst chiffon velvet made on long lines with the skirt falling in a slight train. The bodice had a cowl neckline fastened with two silver clips. The sleeves were long with a fullness above the elbow and tight cuffs. A plait of silver and velvet of the same material as the dress was worn on her hair. She carried a shower bouquet of Talisman roses, lily-of-the-valley and maiden hair fern.

She was attended as bridesmaid by Miss Dora Holmes, sister of the groom. She wore a gown of rust-coloured silk velvet with rhinestone trimmings and a plait of rhinestones on her hair. A corsage bouquet of Sunburst roses and maiden hair fern.

The tiny flower girl looked sweet and winsome in pink crepe trimmed with embroidered roses, and carried a basket of pink roses. Mr. Lloyd Merkley, brother of the bride, acted as groomsman, and Master Harold Merkley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Merkley, carried a Mrs. Van Warner dahlia in the heart of which rested the wedding ring.

Following the ceremony, the guests, numbering 25, proceeded to the dining room where dinner was served. The diningroom was appropriately and beautifully decorated with numberless autumn blooms. The serving table was laid with a lace cloth, silver baskets of white clematis, and lit with pink tapers in low silver holders. The dinner was served at several small tables adorned with silver pieces, each centred with a miniature silver vase containing mountain finger and a pink aster. The bride's cake was placed on an individual table which was illuminated with pink tapers in low silver holders, and was cut by the bride and served from there. Miss Mabel Suffel and Miss Eva Donaldson of Winchester were in charge of the serving, assisted by Mrs. Enos Munro, Miss H. Jamieson and Mrs. Kenneth Merkley of Nation Valley.

Mrs. Geo. C. Merkely, mother of the bride, received in black triple sheer crepe and touches of white and wore a knot of pansies. Mrs. Holmes, mother of the bridegroom, wore brown silk crepe with touches of white and a corsage bouquet of lily-of-the-valley and maiden hair fern.

Shortly after dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Holmes left by motor for North Bay, the bride travelling in a two-piece ensemble of green tweed with trimmings and collar of grey squirrel, a dark green felt hat and accessories to match.

On their return, they will reside at Winchester Springs where the groom is a popular and successful young farmer.

Mrs. Holmes is widely and favourably known throughout this district, and Nation Valley is losing one of its most popular and attractive young ladies.

"If you arrived home late one night and had only one match, had a fire to light, gas to light, and a cigarette to light, which would you light first?"
"The match."

He broke one of the boiled eggs and called the waiter.
"I say, my man," he said, "these eggs are exceptionally small, aren't they?"
"'Fraid they are a little, sir," replied the waiter.
"And they don't appear to be very fresh," went on the customer.
Then it's lucky they're small, ain't it, sir?" replied the waiter.

Dear Marjorie and Doreen,—

We, your school chums, have gathered here this afternoon to bid farewell to you before leaving us for your new home in England.

In your few years of school life among us, Mary, you have made staunch friends of us all, and we regret that you are going to leave us. But, although you are going far we will not forget your kind disposition and loving ways.

As a remembrance of the school chums of S. S. No. 11, Winchester, we ask you to accept this gift, not for its intrinsic value, but as a small gift in remembrance of your school days among us.

And you, Doris, although you have not yet started to school, you have become as one of us, so we ask you to accept this little gift.

May your years be full of peace and prosperity.

Signed on behalf of your school chums — Gladys McLaughlin, Gladys Marcellus, Alton Thomas, Garnet Crump, Gladys Coulthart (teacher).

Presentations were made to Marjorie of a decorated green and gold toilet set consisting of comb, brush and mirror by Lucille Edgerton, and to Doreen of a sterling silver locket and chain by Lois Marcellus.

If Not Bennett?

NEXT MONDAY Canadian voters go to the polls to choose their government. The government they select will rule Canada's destiny for the next five years. In the ordinary course of events the next general election after this one will come in 1940.

Here is a vital decision for Canada. Especially about this election there can be nothing casual, nothing second rate. We are marching steadily forward out of the world depression. The League of Nations' experts have stated that Canada leads all the nations of the earth out of the depression; but we are not yet completely free from depression's evil influences.

We are on the road. We must go forward. Who will lead us?

Canadian voters have a four-way choice.

There is Mr. King. He was Prime Minister of Canada between 1921 and 1930. During his term of office the stock market boomed, peope got rich—on paper—overnight; but it was also during his term of office that the stock market collapsed, and people who had thought they were rich found suicide the easiest way out. Mr. King asks the voters of Canada to restore him to the premiership, supported by the same group of politicians who carried out his policies between 1921 and 1930. If you wish a reversion to the 1921-1930 policies you will vote for Mr. King and his candidates.

There is Mr. Stevens, who, a beaten man in 1930, was saved from obscurity by Mr. Bennett. Mr. Stevens has made his appeal to the electorate. It is based upon unrest and dissatisfaction. Everybody who wants something for nothing is invited to join Mr. Stevens. Mr. Stevens promises everything, well knowing that he will not be called upon to implement his promises because his party cannot attain a working majority in the House of Commons The Reconstruction Party hopes to be in a position in the next House to make deals. Mr. Stevens is an expert dealer; but we do not quite see him as Prime Minister of Canada. If you are merely registering a protest vote, if you feel that you should get something, without working for it, vote for Mr. Stevens.

And then, of course, there is Mr. Woodsworth. It is difficult for a practical man to deal with Mr. Woodsworth. If all the world were full of high minded, fine thinking, Christian people who followed the teachings of the New Testament without deviation, Mr. Woodsworth's policies would be splendid politics, and no voter could retreat from them. Unhappily, hard facts are different. Mr. Woodsworth envisions a Utopia which does not exist. The Canadian government, during the next five years will have to deal practically, harshly, if necessary, with selfish Nationalism, selfish Communism, selfish Nazism, selfish Fascism. We do not think Mr. Woodsworth is of the stern, strong fibre needed in this contingency. If you are a dreamer, you will, of course, vote for Woodsworth.

Finally, there is Richard Bedford Bennett. He has brought his country, which he loves so dearly, successfully through five years of the most desperate, the most dangerous economic depression the world has ever known. Because he has proved himself a man and a leader his opponents accuse him of being a dictator. The mere fact that a general election is being held on Monday next is sufficient answer to that charge. Why should a dictator go to the polls for a popular vote? Stalin tolerates no such test. Hitler controls by force every German balloting; Mussolini does not permit popular elections. Those are Dictators. Bennett is Prime Minister in a democratic government founded upon the British parliamentary system.

Bennett! No man in Canada's history has given more of his mind, his health, his services, to Canada. He stands to-day head and shoulders above every politician in the country. He is Canada's only real statesmen. He offers you a practical, workable reform programme; he stands for Canada first, not for party.

King, Stevens, Woodsworth, Bennett.

If not Bennett—who?

RT. HON. R. B. BENNETT

No man in Canada's history has given more of his mind, his health, his services, to Canada. Next Monday's vote will determine whether his practical, workable programme will continue to pull Canada out of the depression.

HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

APPENDICITIS.

THE APPENDIX is the most useless and, at the same time, one of the most troublesome parts of the body. It is a slender tube, usually about three inches in length, attached to the large bowel in the lower right side of the abdomen.

Because of its size and structure, the appendix is prone to fall victim to infection by invading germs, which set up an inflammation called appendicitis. The germs may enter from the bowel, or come in the blood stream from distant parts of the body, such as infected tonsils or teeth.

The symptoms of appendicitis are usually definite. The first symptom is pain. Generally sudden and severe, it may be felt over the region of the appendix in the lower right side of the abdomen, but just as often it is in the pit of the stomach, or it may be a general abdominal pain.

A feeling of nausea, with vomiting, follows the onset of pain. At this time, there is some fever. Constipation is usual, but occasionally there is a diarrhoea. The severity of the symptoms will vary.

Appendicitis occurs at all ages and in both sexes. It is rare during the first five years of life, but about one-half of all cases occur under twenty years of age.

Recovery from the first acute attack is the rule. Unfortunately, in some cases the appendix ruptures, the infection spreads and a fatal peritonitis develops; in others, a local abscess forms. For many, the acute attack is the beginning or a chronic condition, with acute relapses.

There is one thing which everyone should know. When there is abdominal pain—stomach-ache, colic, or whatever name you call it—do nothing but send for a doctor. Such pains are always a sign of danger. NEVER, NEVER, give a laxative to a person young or old, who has a pain in the abdomen.

The doctor is never called too early. The reason why so many people die from appendicitis is because the doctor is summoned too late and the patient has been given a laxative.

If you must do something for abdominal pain put on an ice-pack or compresses wrung out of cold water while you are waiting for the doctor, but always remain on the safe side and avoid giving laxatives.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 194 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

HE COULDN'T TALK— BUT COULD HE WALK!

"LOST CHILDREN" duty at fall fairs brings Boy Scouts varied experieces. At the Ottawa exhibition this fall a four-year-old picked up and "not called for" could give neither name or address. Did he know his way home? Yes, and he pointed, apparently, down a nearby street. Holding his hand a Scout set out to take him home. Some hours later a wilted Scout returned. Very slowly, but surely, the small hiker had led him on, and on—to a home several miles in the country.

A unique angle of Scouting as a world peace movement was emphasized by its originator, Lord Baden-Powell, in an address at Winnipeg, when the "hero of Mafeking" declared that the movement in South Africa had made an important contribution toward healing the breach between the British and Dutch, of which Mafeking was one of the historic struggles.

As a result of the impression made upon him by their "behaviour, work and courtesy," the Boy Scouts of Sierra Leone have been presented by Mr. Alfred C. GOOD THINGS TO EAT

Conducted By
MISS HELEN LACEY, B. H. Sc.

HOW DO YOU SERVE CHICKEN?

WHETHER fried, roasted or boiled, chicken is more or less a treat to most of us. But, like everything else, we are apt to have a special method of preparing and serving it—and we do this one way so well we forget that chickens can be cooked in a variety of ways, all equally tempting.

FRIED CHICKEN.

If you have never prepared chicken according to the following method, I do wish you would try it as chicken fried in deep fat cannot be equaled.

Cut small chickens into four or six pieces. Put in a kettle and cover with boiling water. Season, and stew one-half hour until chicken is partly tender. Drain and when ready to fry dip in dry bread crumbs, beaten egg and again in bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat which will brown a cube of bread in 60 seconds, until a golden brown. Remove from fat, drain and serve hot, garnished with parsley.

2 tablespoons fat
2 cups chicken stock
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 egg yolk
Salt and pepper

Singe, clean and cut chicken in pieces. Brown in a pan with the fat. Cover with boiling water and salt and pepper. Add these vegetables to the chicken in the casserole, season with salt, pepper and paprika. Cover and cook three-quarters of an hour. Remove cover and allow chicken to brown before serving.

To determine the age of poultry, examine the feet and cartilage at the end of the breast bone. If both are soft, the bird is young; if hard, the bird is more than a year old.

* * * *

* * * *

The white meat of chicken is very easy to digest and for this reason is often given to invalids when all other forms of meat are prohibited.

AS BETWEEN REPORTERS

(Complete in Seven instalments of which this is No. 5)

THE HERALD, the World and the Tribune carried the story of the vault burglary, but only the Times-Star had Pat's personal story of the theft of her own fortune.

Mr. Hillman read her story silently, sent it up to the linotypes unchanged, dressed it with pictures, made a big feature of it. But he did not call her a pest. Pat was miserable. To lose a fortune was bad enough; to be in deserved disgrace with her idolized chief was worse. Even Wentworth's unconcealed indifference to her loss didn't rouse her from despairs. The staff was comradely sympathetic, really sorry; Pat was touched by a little bunch of flowers Tommy laid on her desk and his whispered, "You don't need a fortune any more'n you need a new bus."

Her story told the tale with which she had tried to convince "Beauty"—that she had fallen asleep in the safe deposit vault rooms, to wake when the burglars entered. Hillman knew better, but forebore to press her; tips are as sacred to a newspaper man as a confidence to a doctor or a lawyer. The police didn't believe her. But even when the department told her that without the source of her information it couldn't trace the robbers, Pat stuck to her story.

"If you can't trace them through my description and their names, 'Beauty' and 'Gander,'" she answered, "then I'm out a fortune."

'Oh, we know well enough it was Beauty Halliwell and Gander Cramp ton. We are, though there isn't any evidence, that 'Dabney' is your old enemy. But if we knew who tipped you off, we'd be able to trace where the bonds went, maybe."

For "Dabney" Pat substituted "Kelly" in her mind, but knew it was hopeless to say so.

"Nobody tipped me off," she answered, and to that story she stuck. "I won't implicate a man who's trying to run straight for all the fortunes in the world," she thought, passionately. "Dan Jacobinski risked his liberty to save my fortune. It's my own fault if I lost it. I won't let them put him behind the bars again, when he's going to run straight for the sake of his little daughter."

It was her one great comfrot for the loss of the bonds the thieves were clever enough to keep, not try to sell. "They're probably right here in the city, in some other safe deposit vault,' mourned the police captain in charge of the case. "They'll wait until this is half-forgotten, and then feed them out a few at a time. You should have had them registered."

That was cold comfort to Pat. The way her father had left them had been good enough for her; she had never though of having them registered. Nor would she ask the International Trust Company for restitution, although half a dozen lawyers made "fifty-fifty" propositions to sue the company for improper safeguards and employing venal clerks. She dismissed them without ceremony and went straight to Mr. Morton with the tale.

"It's my fault," she told him. "You are not responsible. I shall not sue nor complain."

Mr. Morton thanked her gravely.

Yet Pat had too many things to think of to mourn much for money which she had repeatedly proclaimed she didn't know how to use or what to do with. The Times-Star campaign for an honest Legislature and a graft-free city administration was bitterly fought. Pat was in the thick of it and expected to continue. A newspaper thrives on a fight; a hard contest makes its circulation grow rapidly. The Times-Star bought a new rotary to keep up with the demand for copies.

Up to the kidnapping, Senator Kelton in the State Senate had done his manful best, but the State Legislature was not intimately in touch with its metropolis. Man after man, officer after officer, contract after contract, the Times-Star went after, piled up evidence, made dramatic exposés and drove grafter after grafter into hiding or into the courts. But one broom cannot sweep out a city; and it seemed at times as if two stole from the city for every one the Times-Star exposed.

"Tommy, it's so hopeless We don't get anywhere!" Pat protested just after the dead line. The paper carried a screaming four column head. "Dabney Released. Kelly Victorious," referring to the result of a court action.

"S'satso?" jibed Tommy. "Pat, when you've grown young and handsome—look at me!' you'll be infantile enough to know that the blows for right are cumulative; it triumphs in the end. Go read Kipling: 'After me cometh a builder; tell him, I, too, have known!'"

Pat tried to find comfort in her fellow worker's words; but there was none. Mr. Hillman was worried, which was upsetting. Someone was buying Times-Star stock, heavily. Hillman suspected Kelly, but had no means of proving it, or of stopping any stockholder from selling at a fancy price. "If they get a good minority holding, they'll change the policy of the sheet at the annual stockholder's meeting right after election," Tommy told Pat.

"Why, how can they do that?" she demanded. "The stockholders don't dictate the policy of the paper!"

"Indirectly they do," explained Tommy. "For ten years Mr. Eddington, as managing director, has been elected and reëlected by the stockholders. He is responsible to the stockholders for profits; it was he who made the Times-Star an honest, graft-and corruption-fighting sheet. He made Hillman city editor; and the city room is the works as far as the political policy of this sheet is concerned. If Kelly can buy or get control of enough stock at the annual meeting just after election day he'll elect a managing director he can control—and that someone would fire Hillman and most of us. Oh, I wish I had money!"

IN THINKING over the peril which menaced Mr. Hillman, the remark slid through Pat's mind without making much impression. Later Tommy's longing for the source of all evil was to come back to her mind. But all thoughts of Kelly and the contest for control of the Times-Star, danger to Mr. Hillman and the impending election were swept from Pat's mind that evening. Mr. Hillman sent for her to come to his desk. She went in fear and trembling; she had not yet had any word from him about her vault-robbery story, and she feared what she might hear.

It came straight from the shoulder shocking, devastating.

"Pat, you are fired," he began without preliminary. "Ditching us for the Herald over the Kelton fire was half modesty, half ignorance. Taking a chance on the kidnapped child for a story was wrong, but understandable—and I forgave it. But a newspaper is a public servant, not a game. You could have prevented the vault crime. You permitted it for the sake of a greaty story."

She stood before him, white-faced. Twice she opened her lips, only to compress them to still their trembling. Fired! Fortune gone, no job—and her own fault! Her eyes filled until she could see no longer. She put out a hand gropingly, as once half-blinded Jenny had done; a little sob rose in her throat. Of course Mr. Hillman was right. She deserved no better. Suddenly she knew how tortured Jenny had been in those old days when she despaired over the work she loved and could no longer do. Pat lived the Times-Star, her work, its difficulties, hardships; she gulped down a sob; not seeing Hillman's curious eyes fixed on her face. Turning away, she took a dazed step, and stumbled. She would have fallen but for Hillman's quick grasp.

"The new sob sister will come on duty to-morrow," went on Hillman. "I am making other changes. Wentworth wants to go back to the Herald and—I'm letting him go. Miss Thomasson from the World will come in your place."

Pat nodded, miserably. Wentworth left too late to do her any good. It was nice for Miss Thomasson, whose story Wentworth had stolen.

"Write your resignation now. I want the newspaper to know you are out. Then," continued Mr. Hillman, as if it were part of her sentence and not preliminary to opening the gates of paradise, "go secretly to the Capital, and take a job I'll get you. And, you pest, if you ever forget that a newspaper woman owes a citizen's duty to society greater than the need of her paper for a great story, I'll—I'll chain you to the copy desk."

Pat's world went around dizzily. She gasped, then disgraced herself with a flood of tears.

"Why, girl, girl! Do you care so much? Of course you do! I'm rather a brute. Don't you dare cry."

Pat looked at Mr. Hillman with starry eyes. He turned his away uncomfortably.

'Listen!" he commanded, brusquely. "I'm not sure about Representative Gilford. Apparently he's a consistent fighter for cleanliness in government. Good citizens believe in him. But there's something fishy about it. Kelton's reform bills have a habit of not going through the House; when they do, there's usually a coloured person concealed in the fuel pile—a joker or a rider or an innocent little amendment that takes all the kick out. I want the inside dope on Gilford. You are to get it."

"How?" Pat tried to keep her voice professional, but she wanted to sing. "Not fired—not fired."

"If they think you are tired of newspaper work," answered Mr. Hillman, "or sore on the Times-Star because you lost your fortune through it, the little world of secretaries, hangers-on, clerks in the Capitol, may take you in. It'll be a mean job. You'll miss all this. You won't be able to sleep nights or stay awake days. But—Pat, we've got to win. A paper making a winning fight is a success. Lose against corrupt politics and we are dead—people won't advertise in us. Without advertising, we can't live. It's the ambition of Ward Boss Kelly's life to ruin this paper to a point where he can buy control. If we don't win this fight, he may succeed."

"But Senator Kelton will recognize me the minute he sees me! He's honest. He'd think I was just what I appeared to be. He'd blurt it out—"

"Kelton has taken his family South," responded Hillman. "He's afraid of another kidnapping. Change your -dress style. Make yourself a flapper. Put on heavy glasses. Paint up a lot; it'll make you fit in the office I'll get you in. Kelton won't be there for a couple of weeks."

"When do I start?" asked Pat.

"Write your resignation now. I want the Herald to believe it. I let Wentworth go because his heart isn't in this fight. I think he's been had!" (Newspaperese for "bribed.")

Pat wrote her resignation, thankful it was not what it appeared to be. She went home, packed and departed for the Capital. Two days later, in a modest boarding house, she received a letter from Representative Gillespie—her appointment as his secretary.

LATER Pat looked back upon two most difficult weeks. Changing her hours made her sleepy all the time. Night is day for a sob sister, and day is the time to sleep. Her new work was iiksomely monotonous—copying, copying, copying on the typewriter, filing, answering the telephone, showing visitors into Mr. Gillespie's office. Had it not been for a stray word here, a hint there, a sentence in a document or a lifted eyebrow at the mention of a name, showing she was on the right track, it would have been unendurable.

In a little red notebook always in her pocket or under her pillow at night, she made notes of every clue, no matter how slender. She made friends with other secretaries and clerks and became hard-boiled and slangy in language, since her fellow employees were so. Slowly but surely conviction came: Representative Gilford, who apparently led the House forces of right and justice against corruption, was in reality tarred with the other stick. Not a word did she hear which could be used as evidence, and yet intangibilities convinced her. "Wait until I see Gilford—I'll fix it with him." The words floated out a half-open door in Gillespie's private office. What could Gillespie, a friend of Boss Kelly, "fix" with Representative Gilford? "Gilford? Oh, he gets his from the money crowd"—a totally unprovable statement from the private secretary of another representative, made at luncheon with Pat. No proof, but illuminating.

Every day she picked up phrases, words, hints. All were carefully set forth in her little notebook. Separately, nothing; together, material for a story, the publication of which might give Representative Gilford trouble. Pat doubted that it would be published, but it might be set up in type and a proof shown Mr. Gilford with the promise of publication if he didn't push in the House the Bribery and Corruption Act which Senator Kelton and the forces of honest politics were trying to pass.

Long, long days; hard, tiresome, monotonous labour; stupid evenings boarding house, a drab and uncomfortable room. But she forgot them all when the big chance came.

Glancing through a Capitol corridor, going out to lunch, Pat looked through a door standing ajar in Representative Gilford's office. It was empty. She stepped quickly in and closed the door. On his secretary's desk lay two letters. The one on top was of no interest; she lifted it to scan the second—and drew in her breath sharply. "Prentiss has resigned from the Times-Star and is working for Gillespie. Warn him and watch your step. K."

Pat stood uncertain. What to do? K? Kelly? No matter! Someone warning Representatives Gilford and Gillespie to beware of her. She tucked the letter in her pocket and flew.

"I suppose I'm a burglar," Pat grinned. "But this is too priceless to be true."

Pat walked rapidly back to her boarding house, packed her bag, paid her bill, and left on the first tram. Her usefulness at the Capitol was ended; what she knew was too important to keep. Doubtless the loss of that letter would be reported to Mr. Gilford at once; his secretary might suspect who had stolen it.

"They are not squeamish," Pat thought. "Kelly and Dabney would as soon have robbed as not. I think I won't go home on this train."

Pat got off at the next stop, waited over one train, took the next and got off again, this time seventy-five miles from the city. Here she hired a car to take her the three hours' journey home.

But the best-laid plans of sob sisters cannot stand against a worn-out tire. A tire blew out, and fixing it on the road in the dark was a long and wearisome job. When the hired car finally limped into the city it was late, and Pat was tired out.

"Oh, well, it'll keep until tomorrow," Pat said to herself. "Drive me to 8657 Somerset—know where that is?" she asked the driver.

Pat counted out the thirty dollars, her bargain for the long ride, and walked wearily up the steps of her apartment. She noticed no one on the street; no moving shadows in the dim hall spoke of danger. Pat was sure her two train changes and journey in the car had baffled any possible pursuit.

Pat's apartment, a "walk-up" like the one in which she had lived with Jenny in her apprenticeship days on the Times-Star, was old but very comfortable. Quiet people lived in it; it was in a respectable if unfashionable neighbourhood. No wild parties disturbed its peace at night, its tenants were not patrons of bootleggers; its service was good. Pat loved her little home, and took out her key to let herself in with a sigh of thankfulness. It had been a long day; the two weeks had seriously interfered with her sleep.

The key stuck, oddly, in the lock; she tried three times before it finally went in.

The lock opened at last; Pat closed the door, lit the light in her little living room and examined her key. Some white substance stuck to it.

"Wax!" she cried aloud. "Does someone else know of Tubby Spitzer?"

She went over her apartment minutely, but found no trace of any intruder; nothing was missing.

"I'm a fool," she told herself. "The janitor has been waxing the woodwork. My, it's late!" She looked at her wrist watch, then wound and set her living-room clock—it was midnight.

She threw her bag in the closet without unpacking it; then thought better of it, and opened it. From it she took the letter and the little red notebook. "I'll just read this over before I go to sleep—oh-h-h-!" came a yawn. Pat undressed. took a warm bath, and then sat down by her dressing table to read her notes. But the letters danced before her eyes; she yawned repeatedly. Finally she gave it up, put letter and book on the dresser and crawled into bed.

SHE was alwost instantly asleep, but her slumbers were troubled and restless. She dreamed queer dreams. Senator Kelton bought the Herald and hired her. She kinapped Ward Boss Kelly and held him for ransom; he paid back her bonds for freedom, but they were worthless. Then she entered his house with a waxed key to steal evidence, and the boards in his home creaked under her feet. The light she flashed in his eyes was reflected back to her own—Pat awoke with a start She looked into blackness; she never slept with a light yet the impression of illumination was strong. Then the dimness which was her window oriented her—she was in her own apartment, not burglarizing another! She was in bed and tired, and must sleep; she turned over to compose herself. But something was wrong! She sniffed; what was it that smelled so—so— A board creaked. Pat started, then sank back on her pillows; boards often did creak in the old apartment. Still she was not comfortable; something was not right. She knew herself half asleep, still partly in a nightmare. And yet—she sniffed again. Then she sat up in bed, suddenly wide awake.

By that intangible unknown nameless sixth sense which warns of danger, she felt she was not alone. Someone was in her room!

"The wax!" she whispered inaudibly. "A burglar!"

Pat was fearless, but not foolishly reckless. Burglars usually carried guns, and guns were to use. Pat had no valuable worth risk of injury. Her impulse was to lie still and pretend the sleep the burglar—if she was not still dreaming—undoubtedly thought she was enjoying. Then a new thought disturbed her: had she been seen coming home? Perhaps she was not as clever as she thought; Senator Gilford's secretary might have reported the theft of the letter to "K," and the burglar might be after it.

Suddenly Pat became angry. A thief after money could have it and welcome. But after her hard-won story? Two unhappy and uncomfortable weeks flashed through her mind. She threw off the bedclothes and darted to the dressing table on which she had laid the book and the letter. Then she screamed, a healthy full-lunged yell, cut short by a hand clapped across her mouth. A rough push whirled her to one side; a slow chuckle, a swift step—her door slammed. Shaking, Pat groped for the table and the light. Her first glance was for the book and the letter—and both were gone.

Hand to her heart, Pat shivered; then she sniffed again. This time the odour was strong enough to recognize—the thoroughly disliked small of a perfume.

"Wentworth!" cried Pat, her hands clenching. "Wentworth!"

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

Canada increased her share of the canned apple trade of the United Kingdom by 26.5 per cent for the first six months of 1935 as compared with last year, 51,829 cases being imported during the 1935 period, or 12 per cent of the total imports.

Barley production in Ontario this year will amount to 17,000,000 bushels, an increase of 2,309,000 bushels over 1934. Production of barley in Ontario has averaged for the last ten years 15,945,000 bushels. Too rapid maturity was a factor tending to lower the standard of grains in Eastern Ontario.

Farm Cash Accounts and Financial Statements.

Methods of recording financial statements relating to the farm are important. An adequate record of cash transactions is a necessity in the preparation of the Income and Expenditure statement. For this purpose it is highly desirable to cultivate the habit of securing a voucher for each transaction at the time it takes place. These should be filed in some orderly fashion. Statements and account sales by companies to whom products are sold or shipped, and invoices for purchases are good vouchers. A receipt should be given when money is received and the particulars entered on the stub. When payments are made by cheque, the stub should be completed. Failing the foregoing, pencilled memoranda are useful and a pad and pencil in the barn or the time-honoured kitchen calendar have their place in building up an adequate record but do not in themselves make up that record. From these original records, the cash book should be written up as frequently and regularly as possible by the farmer, his wife, son or daughter.

For farms operated by managers, farmers' clubs, co-operatives, and those individual farmers who are anxious to keep exact records, a columnar cash book is recommended. A columnar book may be purchased with the desired number of columns, or an ordinary notebook may be ruled as required. The purpose of such a book is to classify receipts and payments into whatever groupings are desired.

Clean Up and Burn Areas Infested With Weeds.

Much good can be accomplished at this time by cleaning up any weeds which did not receive attention during the growing season. Seeds are retained by many weeds until freeze up when they are distributed by various agencies including wind, water, birds and man, thus infesting new areas.

The wind carries some weed seeds long distances, not only with drifting soil but also over frozen ground and snow in the winter An experiment conducted in Saskatchewan proved this fact when it was found that six ounces of surface soil taken from a spot along a road contained the following seeds: Stick Weed 330, Wild Mustard 267, Hare's Ear Mustard 99, Stinkweed 3, Black Bindweed 159, Lamb's Quarters 15, and Pig Weed 9.

Another experiment conducted some years ago showed the presence of many weeds on snow—32 seeds of nine species having been found in two square feet of a snowdrift.

Many weed seeds are eaten by birds during the late fall and early winter when other food is not plentiful. According to Jack Miner, an authority on bird life, these seeds will not lose their vitality and may be carried for miles in this way.

Seeds of neglected weeds growing in vacant lots, around buildings, fence lines and ditches will be carried long distances by spring floods. By cleaning up and burning all neglected weeds at this time we improve the appearance of property and will help to control weeds—not only on our own property but also on that of our neighbours.

Preparing Poultry For Market.

To a great extent the ultimate success of the poultry enterprise will greatly depend on the manner in which the products are marketed. The discriminating customer will be attracted by the well-fattened and well-dressed chicken or fowl, and will pay a premium in price for appearance as well as quality.

Success in fattening and marketing will depend to a great extent on the operator's knowledge and ability to prepare his product in the most economical and attractive form. Special feeding for a week or two will greatly improve the quality and pay for the extra feed and labour involved.

As only birds with strong constitutions can stand heavy feeding with limited exercise, very young and extremely thin birds seldom make profitable gains in the fattening pens.

A serviceable crate, six feet long by twenty-four inches wide, and eighteen inches high, may be made from slats nailed one inch apart with a galvanized pan beneath the slatted floor for droppings. Partitions two feet apart will provide compartments two feet square, and will accommodate four or five birds according to size.

To insure freedom from lice, dust the birds with flour of sulphur and create a good appetite by starving for the first twenty-four hours. The second day give only slight feed and gradually increase the amount until the third day; from then until finished all they will eat twice daily at regular intervals about twelve hours apart. Mix to a batter that will pour slowly from a pail, skimmilk or buttermilk with two parts of cornmeal and one part finely ground oats. Feed in troughs suspended in front of crate. A good finish should be obtained in ten to twenty-one days. Feed enough to thoroughly satisfy at each meal, but leave nothing over in the troughs to stall the birds. Starve for at least twenty-four hours before killing, bleed by "sticking" in the roof of the mouth, and dry pluck. Grade to uniform size and quality and pack in neat boxes.

Play is Well Received.

The play entitled "The Ghost Bird" presented by the South Mountain Dramatic Club under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, proved a decided success Tuesday evening in the Music Hall. It would be difficult to pick out any stars as each part was portrayed particularly well. Between acts, Mr. George Baker of Morrisburg entertained the crowd with vocal selections, playing his own accompaniment on his guitar. After the play, the ladies of St. Andrew's church served lunch to the members of the club at the ice cream parlours of W. L. Hummel.

Those taking part were Mrs. Wm. Farrell, Misses Laura Good, Violet Berry, Margaret Wright, Marion Shaver, and Helen Cleland; Messrs. Mac Johnston, Jack Johnston, Ersol Murdock, Ernest Barkley, Lyall Ferrier and Orval Barkley.

W.M.S. Sectional Meeting Largely Attended Thursday

The annual sectional meeting of the W.M.S. of this part of the Dundas-Grenville Presbyterial of the United Church was held on Thursday in Winchester Springs, with Mrs. Davidson, of Winchester, presiding. The devotional exercises for the morning session, which opened at 10 o'clock, were in charge of the Chesterville auxiliary. Hymn 488 opened the meeting, followed by prayer by Mrs. W. H. Lloyd and scripture reading by Mrs. Cross, who used Cor., 14th chapter, as a basis for a most inspiring talk on "The Greatest Thing in the World."

The minutes of last year's sectional meeting were read by Mrs. Geo. Reaburn, and approved. Mrs. Cecil McIntosh of Winchester Springs most graciously welcomed the ladies on behalf of the Winchester Springs auxiliary and church. Mrs. Colquhoun replied to these words of welcome and, at the same time, invited the section to meet next year at Colquhoun. Roll call was conducted by Mrs. Earle of Winchester, the secretary of each auxiliary reporting some interesting point in connection with her auxiliary's work for the past year. A solo by Mrs. Steele of Williamsburg was much enjoyed, followed by an interesting address by Mrs. G. H. Smith of Morewood on Band Work. Mrs. A. B. Allison, of Morewood, the Presbyterial president, brought to the meeting a very interesting talk on the subject "Can We Christianize Our Dollars?"

The Branch president, Mrs. Murdock, interested her hearers most deeply by her resumé of the highlights of the "Know Your Church" programme which had just concluded in Ottawa. At the close of the morning session, lunch was served by the ladies of the Winchester Springs auxiliary.

Afternoon Session.

The devotional exercises for the opening of the afternoon session were in charge of the Elma auxiliary. Miss Violet Trickey, delegate to the Branch annual meeting in Quebec City, gave a very complete and interesting account of that gathering. Mrs. Nash, Presbyterial Corresponding Secretary and Mrs. Merrill, Presbyterial Treasurer, each brought a message on the work of her department. A duet by Mrs. McIntosh and Mrs. Thompson of Winchester Springs was enjoyed, and Mrs. Atchison of Winchester brought an inspiring message on "Prayer." An excellent paper on "Christian Stewardship and Finance" was given by Mrs. W. N. Fulton of Chesterville. Mrs. R. C. Tait and Mrs. Earle were in charge of a questionnaire which turned out to be very Instructive. Mrs. Hilliard of Morrisburg was given a very enthusiastic welcome back to the section as she rose to bring a message on "Temperance." She urged that all auxiliaries make more use of the free literature issued by the Temperance League. Mrs. Ault of Winchester, made an appeal for wider use of The Missionary Monthly and World Friends.

The courtesy committee, in its report, thanked the hostesses of the day most cordially, and the closing thoughts by Mrs. Doering of Chesterville brought to a close a day's sessions who everyone present felt had been very worth while.

Trinity United W.M.S.

The October meeting of the W.M.S. of Trinity United church was held yesterday in the S.S. hall with the president, Mrs. W. H. Lloyd, in the chair. The programme for the day was in charge of Mrs. C. W. Casselman. Two very excellent papers on the study book for the year "The New Africa," were given by Miss Edythe Johnston and Mrs. P. Davidson. A solo by Mrs. W. N. Fulton was much enjoyed and several ladies who had attended the sectional meeting in Winchester Springs brought some thoughts from that most interesting session. The meeting was concluded with the Lord's Prayer.

IN MEMORIAM

Merkley—In memory of our darling Wife and Mother who passed away October 7th, 1934.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is still,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
—Mr. W. C. Merkley and Family.

One year instead of Three Years

Farmers insuring in our companies have now the option of insuring for one year instead of three years, owing to low prices of farm produce, and consequent scarcity of money. This may be to your advantage until conditions improve.

Winter and the Cold Weather Always Increase Fire Hazard

I am prepared to give a special low rate on dwellings and contents, in companies established over half a century.
