W.I. Delegates Convene Here For District Annual

Mrs. J. Singleton, Winchester, Again Heads Branches of County.—Trinity United S.S. Hall Scene of Large Gathering on Tuesday.

The Annual District Meeting of the Dundas Women's Institute was held in the Sunday School Hall of Trinity United church on Tuesday with delegates present from Winchester, Williamsburg, Morewood, Morrisburg, Iroquois, Matilda and Chesterville. Mrs. J. Singleton, of Winchester, presided over the sessions.

The morning session convened at 10 o'clock, the meeting being opened with singing the Institute Ode and recitation of the creed. A resolution from Dundas District having been sent to the Ottawa convention last year regarding the Women's Institutes of Ontario having a definite objective, a letter was read from Dr. Wherrett stressing the need of a Sanitorium in Eastern Ontario to care for tuberculous patients and urging the Women's Institute to support this project. The secretary reported 306 members with an attendance for the year of 2208. $1982.34 was raised and $1154.-79 expended. All the branches have been active during the year and assistance has been given to various needs in the different communities, service is the key note of the success of the Women's Institute and this was exemplified in the reports. Relief has been given to many, Christmas stockings and baskets were distributed, contributions made to the cancer fund, libraries, cemeteries and many other worthy projects. One Branch paid for the removal of tonsils of six school children and supplied medicine when required; a child was sent to the school for the deaf, and several children were supplied with glasses. Mrs. Tanner, Federation Representative, brought greetings from the board and gave a resumé of the work.

The afternoon session opened at two o'clock when reports were received from the several branches. Rev. Robt. Tait brought greetings from the church and paid tribute to the work of the Women's Institute not only in Ontario but also in Saskatchewan where he formerly lived. Mr. W. H. Casselman, Reeve of Chesterville, welcomed the delegates and visitors on behalf of the town. This was replied to very graciously by Miss Jane Smith, Morrisburg. Mrs. Catherine Foster, a former member of this distict, brought greetings from Stormont district. Solos were contributed by Mrs. W. N. Fulton, Mrs. Geo. Merkley, and Rev. Mr. Tait.

Miss Esther Slicter, of the Department of Agriculture, was present and gave a talk on a new co-operative programme which is coming into effect this year.

A new feature was introduced this year, being an exhibition of quilts, and some 25 very lovely quilts were shown. These had to be the work of Institute members. Miss Slicter, Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Tanner were the judges and they had great difficulty in awarding the prizes as all the quilts showed much time and work had been expended. Mrs. Gilroy of Winchester won 1st prize, Mrs. Harkness of Matilda, second, and a third prize was awarded a member of the Morewood branch.

The officers for the year 1935-36 are:

President—Mrs. J. Singleton,
1st Vice-Pres.—Miss Jane Smith,
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Whittaker,
3rd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. A. McGinnis,
Sec.-Treas.—Miss E. McGee,

The meeting closed by singing "God Save the King," and the visitors and delegates were entertained to supper by the local branch. The next meeting will be held in Winchester.

GLEANINGS FROM THE GREENS

By The Secretary.

The Victoria Day Tournament was a huge success. Mrs. Ken Woods got the first "toucher" for the season and Doc Clayton's four took home the china, when they nosed out Geo. Reaburn's rink.

The day was ideal for bowling and should have warranted a larger entry for the President versus Vice-President's opening of the greens for the season.

The draw:

Mrs. Boyd, Olive Casselman, Mrs. Senn, Dr. Clayton, skip.

Mrs. McKercher, Mrs. Marcellus, Mrs. Hutt, G. W. Reaburn, vice-pres., skip.

Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Reaburn, Mrs. Dixon, T. Flynn—skip.

Mrs. Barkley, Mrs. Merkley, L. David, K. Wood—skip.

The first prize night of the season was held Tuesday night, four rinks being in the draw. The greens work wonderfully well for this time of the year and the three rinks went into the last game all tied with Robertson one point up. Art's rink faded badly in the last game and Ham took advantage of the slump to hand out a trimming to the tune of 7 to 1, which gave Ham a one-point lead over the pack and the prize for the evening.

Jim Hanna played one man short all night although several members came in late who could have joined in. Snap into it, lads, and be in on time for the draw.

Hockey's Iron Man, Mel Harper, came out for the first and turned in a game to make any skip's heart glad. For a novice, Mel did exceptionally well.

The line-up:

Waldorf, Willis Harper, Wales, Hamlen—skip.—15.

Merkley, Mel. Harper, Durant, Clayton—skip.—14.

Lloyd, Flynn, Lacey, Robertson—skip—10.

Alguire, Woods, Hanna—skip—9.

HUBERT HARPER WON TWO FIRSTS AT MONTREAL MEET

At the 13th Dominion Interscholastic track and field meet at McGill stadium in Montreal Saturday last, Hubert Harper, representing Chesterville High School, proved himself a one-man field team when he won the running broad jump with 5 feet 11⅜ inches and the pole vault with 10 feet 6 inches. At the same meet, D. McIntosh, representing Finch High school, was third in the 440-yards dash, which was won by D. Anderson of St. Thomas Collegiate in 52 1-10 seconds.

LOOKS LIKE GOOD FRUIT YEAR.

ALTHOUGH there has been much decidedly cool weather during this month, fruit trees of all kinds are blooming most profusely which should be an indication of a good yield of fruit in this dstrict. Since the recent rains growth has been very rapid and the difference in the appearance of meadows and early sown grain throughout the country is almost beyond belief and we believe not far behind that of last year.

Citizens Mourn Passing of Popular Blacksmith

Alfred Morris, 60, Held Several Offices in Community and Had Completed 46 Years at His Trade.—Many Attend Funeral Tuesday.

Chesterville this week mourns the death of one of its very highest type citizens in the death of Alfred Morris at the age of almost 61 years, who passed away in Ottawa Civic hospital shortly after midnight Sunday morning, after an illness of about ten days. The late Mr. Morris was a well-known blacksmith of this place and while shoeing a horse on Wednesday, May 15th, about noon was stricken with a severe headache, with increasing pain on Saturday and Sunday following, his condition becoming so serious that on Monday it was decided to remove him to the Civic hospital, Ottawa. About ten minutes after his admission to the hospital a cerebral hæmorrhage was suffered and, while he was unconscious for an hour, the trouble seemed to clear up rapidly and he was quite bright until early Friday morning when another attack followed and he never regained consciousness in spite of two terfine operations Friday night. He sank rapidly on Saturday and passed away shortly after midnight.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon in Holy Trinity church, when Rev G. Oliver Davies, the rector, conducted the service, referring to the exemplary habits of the deceased in his constant attention to his church duties and attendance at service. The speaker took occasion to point out the numerous important decisions which centre around church life, commencing with the baptism and continuing through confirmation, marriage and the services for the dead. He urged on his hearers the desirability of church life and the constant adherence to its teachings.

Miss M. Fisher presided at the organ and accompanied Mr. G. W. Brooks when he sang "He Wipes the Tear From Every Eye."

Many Grantley friends were in attendance and the church was filled to overflowing in a last tribute of respect to one they had known well and respected in this community. The pall bearers were Messrs. Harry Fairbrass, Tophile Labre, Garnet McLean and P. G. Hewitt.

Large numbers visited the family home on Water street while the body lay in state surrounded by flowers, including offerings: Pillow from the Family, Cross, the Congregation of Holy Trinity church; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. A. Barkley, Dunbar; spray, Chesterville Village Council; wreath, Chesterville Citizens' Band; spray, Mr. and Mrs. W. Fyke; roses, First Chesterville Troop of Boy Scouts; cut flowers, Mrs. Geo. Cass, Miss Marion Casselman, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fulton, Mrs. Fred Smith, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Lacey, Mr. and Mrs. A. Peake, Joan, and Mrs. Ina Seymour of Brock-4ville; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Woods, Mr. and Mrs. A. Harradine, Mr. and Mrs. T. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Julyan, Mr. and Mrs. Sim Droppo.

The deceased was born September 16th, 1874, at Bridlington, East Yorkshire, England, and at the age of 14 was apprenticed to the blacksmithing, where he served seven years studying and later passed his examinations as a Registered Shoeingsmith. On Christmas Day, 1898, he took as his wife Abigail Ann Broadley, who survives her husband with their four sons, William of Cardinal, Sydney, Jack and Harry of Chesterville, as well as his sister Helen in England.

On coming to this country he first followed his trade with the late S. Hutt in Berwick, aferwards working in Grantley for eight years, then moving to Chesterville. He worked at Dunbar for two years, Williamsburg two years and for the past 11 years had conducted his own business in town. He was a sidesman of Holy Trinity congregation and a member of the finance committee, chief of the village's fire brigade and president of the Citizens' Band for several years in which during the past year he was its drummer.

In early life he was interested and active in athletics, especially weight lifting and wrestling being identified with Geo. Jowett, open champion middleweight wrestler, and was in charge of several bouts. Mr. Morris was a charter member of the St. John's Ambulance Association in England as well as a member of the I.O.F. which he transferred to Grantley court where he held office. He was for many years a member of the Orange Order and was a member for years of the Volunteer force in England. In 1909 he was granted the long service medal by the Bridlington Fire Brigade, of which he was a member for 12 years. In recent years he was actively interested in Town League hockey and other sports.

Felix Gutierrez Ramirez, a slaughter-house employee, known as "The Marihuano," was the loser.

He paid the bill and waited. Within a few minutes a man entered and was stabbed through the heart.

The victim, who was not identified, had never been in the saloon before, the proprietor said.

Ramirez was taken to the penitentiary charged with murder.

Injured Goose With Scripture Tag Recovering in Park

Jack Miner's Tag Found on Bird Picked up by Youths.—Game Protector Amputates Leg.

Rochester, N.Y.—A one-legged Canada goose, its other leg amputated by a game protector because of a serious injury, is spreading the gospel in Mendon Ponds County Park Bird and Animal Sanctuary.

"Be not afraid, only believe.—Mark 5:36" was inscribed on a small aluminum tag attached to the goose from the famed Jack Miner sanctuary when it was picked up by two Seneca Falls youths near East Varck. The bird was turned over to Game Protector Lloyd Anderson, who amputated the injured member and sent the goose here to recuperate.

The Scripture quotation was signed "Jack Miner, Kingsville, Ont."

Labour Declares Business Withholds 4,000,000 Jobs

"Nation Condemned to Continue in Depression" Says American Labour, Accusing Capital "Strike."

Washington.—The American Federation of Labour accused "organized business yesterday of withholding 4,000,000 jobs as a protest against pending business control legislation.

"No strike of labour ever reached such proportions or has any labour strike condemned the nation to continue in depression as this strike is doing," the federation said in its monthly business survey.

The legislation the federation cited as the cause of the capital 'strike" included the Social Security Bill, the Wagner Labour Disputes Bill, the 30-hour Week Bill, the Utility Holding Company and the banking legislation.

Mare Hauling Laundry Cart Pauses for Birth of Colt

"Event" Passes Off Speedily as Passer-by and Policeman Assist Surprised and Helpless Driver.

New York.—Motherhood al fresco came to Lower Harlem when Nellie a bay mare, paused in her rounds between the shafts of a laundry wagon to give birth to a fine colt.

Aaron Lax, born and reared in Manhattan, was a pretty surprised driver and quite helpless until Andrew Duffer came along.

"Here," he said, rolling up his sleeves, "I used to handle horses in Europe. I know what to do. Lend a hand."

The driver and a policeman took orders from Duffer and the "event" went forward speedily and successfully.

Nellie trotted away proudly behind a truck to take the rest of the day off. Her 35-pound colt rode off in an S.P.C.A. ambulance.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

Ontario Leads in Horticulture.

The leadership given by the Ontario Horticultural Association was appreciated last year when many letters were received from all Provinces in Canada, except British Columbia, and from several parts of the United States, on the practical talks broadcast on the Canadian Radio Commission chain.

In response to a demand for similar service this year, the Ontario Association by kind co-operation of the Radio Commision commenced a series of talks on Saturday, May 4th, which concluded on Saturday, including "Gardening Hints" by John F. Clark, Toronto; "The Vegetable Garden," by George Rush, Toronto; "May Planting," by H. Occomore, Guelph; "Pruning and Spraying," by J. B. Spencer, Ottawa.

Agricultural Attractions.

The Directors of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies at a meeting a few days ago, discussed at length attractions for fall fairs.

It was agreed judging should be arranged to afford educational opportunities and be as attractive as possible. Suitable rings should be provided for al llive stock and the names of winners should appear on hall exhibits.

Inter-community competitions were recommended, such as special prizes for Women's Institute displays. Junior classes have been found to arouse much interest and this year Agricultural Societies are sponsoring over 180 clubs for boys and girls.

In addition to the usual attractions, the following were suggested, having been tried by societies and requiring little cash outlay:

Antique displays.
Oxen demonstrations.
Hitching, driving and riding demonstrations.
Milk Maid contests.
Horse Drawing Competitions.
Classes for jumping horses.
Teams or horses versus six or eight men.
Horse back wrestling.
Sheaf binding competitions
Log sawing.
Log chopping
Potato races.
Musical chairs—mounted.
Band competitions; Old-time fiddlers' contests, etc.
Demonstrations of various kinds.

Organized Milk Patrons Try To Improve Conditions

One of the most promising features of the time is the disposition of manufacturers and distributors of farm products to get together with producers to work out their mutual problems. All of these movements, of which there are many, are going on quietly without attracting much attention.

The Tobacco manufacturers have gone on record several times lately expressing their satisfaction with the arrangements arrived at and the improved condition of the industry. The bean growers and dealers have improved conditions largely in a sensible business like way. The city milk producers and distributors with the able assistance of the Milk Control Board have got together. Potato growers and dealers are working out their difficult problems. Fruit and vegetable growers have made notable progress with jam manufacturers and other processors such as fruit and vegetable canners. Grape growers and their principal customers, the wineries, are getting closer together and many other groups, such as those concerned with cattle, hogs, cheese, butter and poultry are recognizing their common interest in working towards some measure of restored prosperity to the basic industry that supports us all.

The latest development featured by the milk interests with the assistance of the Milk Control Board and this office is an effort on the part of the condenseries and other manufactured milk interests to work out improved conditions with the large numbers of Milk Producers in Ontario who have organized provincially for the purpose.

Farmers realize as never before the importance of stable markets and beneficial trade agreements. Unfair competition and trade wars inevitably react on the producers.

There are in Ontario approximately 5,000 farmers producing milk for manufacturing and processing purposes. Some 4,000 of these are now organized in local associations, producers to each plant or condensery being a local organization. From these local associations has been formed an Ontario Manufactured Milk Producers' Board.

Approximately 409,000,000 pounds of milk was used in this industry in Manufacturers and processors in the province are about ten in number not including several distributors of whole milk who make out of their surplus milk after skimming a roll process skim milk powder which competes with the spray processed powder from the regular processors.

200,000 FARM SCHEDULES BEING DISTRIBUTED

DURING this week, 200,000 Farm Schedules will be distributed by the rural school teachers to the farmers of Ontario. The Schedules are for the purpose of compiling agricultural statistics and the work is being carried on jointly by the Ontario Department of Education, the Ontario Department of Agriculture and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Every effort is being put forth to have each farmer in the Province fill in a Survey Card giving the information for his farm. Publication of timely crop and live stock statistics is one of the most important duties imposed upon the Government and is performed primarily in the interests of the farming community.

The important facts ascertained by this Survey are the acreages sown to principal field crops in 1935, the numbers of live stock and poultry on hand at June 1st and the numbers intended for marketing in the next six months. This data is used as a basis for practically the entire body of agricultural statistics in Ontario. It is also combined with the same information for other provinces to secure Canadian totals and then sent to the International Institute of Agriculture for the preparation of world summaries. In each of the other eight provinces this Farm Survey will be conducted during the same week.

Farmers are requested to complete the cards promptly and return to their local school teacher who will then forward them to the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The cards are tabulated, and the estimates prepared as speedily as possible and released to newspapers and radio stations so that every one may be advised of the changes in crop acreages or live stock population at the same time. The results are also published in the Monthly Crop Report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, which is mailed free to any individual who requests to be placed on the mailing list.

The cards are treated as absolutely confidential and used only in the Statistics Branch for the purpose of compiling statistical information by county divisions. The information on individual cards is never divulged to any one. The cards are not used in any way for taxation purposes. It is desired that farmers complete the schedule and return to the school teacher by June 4th. If any farmer does not receive a schedule he should notify the Agricultural Branch, Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa, and a card will be mailed to him. No postage is required on letters addressed to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

A SAFETY FIRST DEVICE.

A child opening the back door of an auto in which he was riding was thrown to the road and seriously hurt. It is an easy matter to attach a belt, with strap attached, to the back of the seat, to confine youngsters riding in cars. Thus they will be safe and the parent can give his or her whole attention to driving without worrying about the child in the rear.

"Why do they call it a dental parlour?"

"Parlour is another name for drawing-room."

Mrs. Thompson: "I've told the new maid that, but it's no use."

At different times, it has been working beside _____, _____, etc. where the work is very heavy and while they all took their turn in the repair shop we never lost a minute.

"Have had considerable fun with one dealer here. He started comparing his 1½ ton truck with mine, said that the springs, drive shaft, axles and frame were just as heavy and strong as the Chev. Killers of Former Canadian Arraigned in Old Bailey

Widow of Architect and Young Chauffeur Alleged to Have Killed Him With Mallet.

London.—Eight weeks after the death of Francis Rattenbury, aged architect who lived many years in Canada, his wife and their 'teen-age chauffeur stand this week in the dock at the Old Bailey.

Central figures in one of the most celebrated trials in recent years were Mrs. Alma Rattenbury, 38, and Geo. Stoner, only 18, charged with the slaying of Rattenbury by blows from a mallet which caused his death on March 28th, four days after he had been attacked while sitting in his villa at Bournemouth.

Opening address of counsel for the prosecution took up most of the first day (Monday) of the "triangle murder case" before the first witness, Miss Irene Riggs, reached the stand to testify that she had been aware for a 'long time" that Mrs. Rattenbury and the chauffeur were "lovers."

Counsel contended the relations of the two accused were adulterous and that they got Rattenbury "out of the way." He reviewed the evidence at the preliminary hearings in Bournmouth, laying stress on the conflicting statements alleged to have been made by each of the accused.

Attention of the jurors, two of whom are women, was directed by the prosecutor to the statements allegedly made by Mrs. Rattenbury following the attack. These were said to be, in order: First, that she had been awakened in bed by a noise and had found Rattenbury in his chair unconscious; second, that she told a policeman: "I did it with a mallet; Rats lived too long;" third, that her husband had dared her to kill him and she struck him.

Prosecuting counsel also reviewed statements credited to young Stoner, that he admitted he "did the job and Mrs. Rattenbury had nothing to do with it." This was made after a statement in which Stoner was alleged to have said he was in bed during that evening and was awakened by Mrs. Rattenbury to find her husband wounded. Counsel said at the time Stoner claimed to have been in bed he was borrowing the mallet from his grandfather, a carpenter.

MAN SLEPT FOR TWO WEEKS BESIDE HIS DEAD WIFE

Brooklyn, N.Y.—Joseph Shipulo finally consulted his parish priest.

"I can't wake my wife," he said. "I feel strange about it. I don't trust the police. Will you see what you can do?"

The priest entered the bedroom and found Mrs. Shipulo dead. He called police, who found currency, a bank book, first and second mortgages and Liberty bonds hidden in the mattress.

The police took Shipulo away in a straightjacket—his wife had been dead two weeks and each night he had slept beside the body.

The Home of the Holy Grail Found in Ontario Town

Ancient Wooden Vessel is Displayed by Brantford Resident as the Long-Sought Original.

Brantford.—Has the search for the famous Holy Grail ended in Brantford?

George B. Bremner vows it has, and is displaying an ancient wooden vessel which he claims is the original.

Bremner declares the vessel was presented to his brother-in-law by a Christian Jew, in Jerusalem several years ago. The Jew, the last of his line, said the Holy Grail was given by Pontius Pilate to an officer of the Roman guard. The officer, the Jew claimed, was an ancestor of his. It had been passed down through his family for hundreds of years.

The vessel is of olive wood. It is remarkably well preserved, if its age is that claimed.

Tradition has it the Holy Grail was obtained by Joseph of Arimathaea, who took the body of Christ from the cross and buried it. Joseph took the grail to Glastonbury Abbey in England, so the story goes. There Joseph's thorn still exists, planted from his walking stick, according to tradition.

The Holy Grail was sought by King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table and by the Crusaders. It was never found.

FORSTER PITCHED GAME HERE AT THE FALL FAIR

The Montreal Royals lopped a pitcher from the active list this week and added another. Clair Forster, young Ottawa right-hander, was sent to the Hazelton club of the New York Pennsylvania League subject to 24 hours' recall.

It was felt by the Royals' management in sending Forster out on option that the young Ottawan would gain much-needed experience and it would be better in any case for him to be playing ball in a league of lower classification than sitting on the Montreal bench.

Hazelton and Williamsport in the N.Y.-Pa. League wanted Forster but Hazelton got him as Catcher Stack is there on option and strongly advised.

HELPING TO BUILD THE BRITISH 'ROUND-THE-WORLD HIGHWAY

In 1880, the Canadian Pacific Railway was organized for the purpose of completing a line to span the continent.

The Bank's directors, confident of the future of the Dominion, placed a generous share of the Bank's resources behind the project, which was completed in 1886 and formed the transcontinental link in the "British 'Round-the-World Highway." Subsequent events have shown that this undertaking contributed more than any other to the settlement and development of Western Canada.

The Bank promptly opened branches at Vancouver and Victoria, subsequently at points along the railway which since have become thriving cities.

This is one of many experiences showing how the Bank of Montreal, looking forward with Canada from the beginning, has been a useful factor in the development of the country. In the future, the Bank expects to continue that usefulness—to continue to look forward with Canada, toward the nation's future destiny.

Widow and Transient Are Arrested For Murder

Medico Legal Expert Ascertains Death Due to Asphyxia by Throttling.—Young Mrs. Volvey Taken Into Custody, Man Already Held.

Clarence Cameron, 28 - year - old transient from Amherst, N.S., and Mrs. Viney Belle Volvey were charged with the murder Tuesday afternoon of Louis Volvey, 55-year-old Cornwall township farmer, following the verdict of a coroner's jury implicating both in Volvey's death. Cameron was already in custody on a charge of perjury arising out of evidence given at earlier inquest sittings. Mrs. Vovey was arrested by Provincial Constable W. J. Franks as she sat in the court room.

The verdict of the jury, returned after less than 10 minutes deliberation, was: "from the evidence presented to us, we find that Louis Volvey came to his death by being strangled or throttled. Further, we believe from the evidence that both Mrs. Volvey and Clarence Cameron had knowledge of this fact or were accessory to said act of strangulation."

Mrs. Volvey Arrested.

As soon as Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico legal expert, had completed his evidence, Crown Attorney J. G. Harkness, K.C., instructed police to arrest Mrs. Volvey after the verdict was in. When the jurors filed back to their seats, Mrs. Volvey was sitting near the rear of the court room with a friend, listening to the proceedings with much interest. She leaned forward to catch every word of the verdict and flushed when the words were read which inferred that she had knowledge of the manner in which her husband met death. Constable Franks walked up the aisle, spoke quietly to Mrs. Volvey and she rose and followed him from the room. The charge was read to her in the corridor as she was taken downstairs to the counties' jail.

Cameron has been in custody for the past two weeks on a charge of perjury and the warrant was served on him in jail. He was not at the inquest.

Details of numerous bruises upon Volvey's body were given in the formal report read by Dr. Frankish.

"The hyoid bone at the top of the throat was broken," Dr. Frankish said. "This is a small horse-shoe shaped bone in under the chin. There was also a hæmorrhagic condition in the glottis on the left side of the neck.

"I found no fracture of the skull and no hæmorrhagic condition on the scalp, either on the back of the head, the dome or the upper forehead," Dr. Frankish continued. "There was no fracture of the vertebræ and there was no hæmorrhage of the muscles along the spine."

Strangled to Death.

"The cause of death in this case I believe to have been asphyxia, the result of pressure on the throat of sufficient force to fracture the hyoid bone. The man was throttled. There was an abrasion on the neck about two inches square and I believe that it was the result of pressure. It is a most unusual thing to find both ends of the hyoid bone fractured and it is most unusual for a hyoid to be broken in a fall or other than by direct pressure.

"If this man had fallen downstairs either head first or backwards, I would expect to find some marks on the dome of the head, but the only marks found were below the eyebrows."

Juror G. S. Kilgour: "How could this man suffer such injuries in a fall?"

Dr. Frankish: "Were they done in a fall?"

Juror: "Could the bone in the throat be broken by pressure of the hand?"

Dr. Fankish: "I think that is the only way it could be done."

Dr. Frankish stated that Volvey's stomach contained about four to five ounces of food which was almost completely digested. The process of digestion would normally take about three hours.

"I would say that the time elapsing between his last meal and his death was probably three hours," Dr. Frankish declared. "I believe that estimate to be fairly accurate."

Juror Kilgour: "You are satisfied, then, that if this man had his supper at about five o'clock, you would say that he was dead by eight o'clock."

Questioned by Mr. Harkness, Dr. Frankish said that it is a common thing for the head to move freely after death, although there is no fracture of the vertabræ and it was therefore an easy matter for Dr. Talon to ascribe death to a broken neck after the first post-mortem. It is almost impossible, he explained, to determine definitely if the neck is broken without taking down the vertebræ one by one.

"There is absolutely nothing else to indicate any other cause of death than that this man was throttled," Dr. Frankish declared. "He was choked to death."

Dr. Frankish read a report from Prof. L. J. Rogers, analyst, that there was no poison whatever in the body.

THE PROFIT MOTIVE.

The "Congress of Youth" is over in Toronto. Young people usually have a lot to say, and they usually agree with anybody who can say things as if they meant something.

We see that the Congress "establishes the fact that unemployment is here to stay as long as the present economic set-up remains in existence, and that unemployment can only be abolished permanently when the system based on production for use instead of profit is put into operation."

The profit motive is the finest thing in the world and as they get old enough to realize this they will see how wrong their resolution is. A man wants to make a fortune so he can help the world along. Look at Andrew Carnegie! Nature herself is the best example of the "end justifies the means." The present system, then, based on private profit, even if it means hardship for a few, will be the best in the long run.

Those of us who are older should point out to youth where they are wrong. If a man gets no profit, he will not produce, therefore production can never be separated from profit.

$165,000 A DAY

THE Brockville Recorder and Times draws attention to the fact that for officiating at the sittings of the Price Spreads Commission, a Toronto lawyer was paid $32,000.

This legal gentleman, if you please was paid at the princely rate of $165 a day.

And this in a time when hundreds of thousands of families are subsisting on relief allowances, and when thousands of farmers are unable to pay their taxes.

One hundred and sixty-dollars for a few hours a day One day's pay to this one man equals the amount paid to a family of six on relief in Kingston in four months.

Three days' pay is all that they receive a year. A week's pay at $165 a day has to keep a relief family of six in Kingston for two years.

As the Brockville Recorder and Times points out. it is upon "such inequalities that Communism breeds."

There seems to be no limit to the fees which these big city lawyers can exact from governments when their own party is in power.

The Prime Minister of Canada, who has been working twelve and sixteen hours a day for five years in the interest of the people, gets a salary of $15,000 a year, plus his indemnity.

The cabinet ministers who are on the job all the vear around, early and late, get $10,000 a year. A university professor gets about $4,000 a year.

Yet the Government pays a Toronto lawyer in these times of stress at the rate of $165 a day. The ironical touch about the whole thing is that this enquiry was instituted against companies accused of gyping the public.

"Has my boy," wrote the proud parent to the schoolmaster, "a natural bent in any direction?"

"He has," replied the schoolmaster. "He gives every indication of being an industrial magnate some day. He gets the other boys to do all his work for him."

THE WEEK in OTTAWA

By
FREDERICK EDWARDS

Unethical business practices must be abolished; capitalism must serve the people, not control them, Premier Bennett told the country in January when he outlined his intended programme of Reform for Security. Big Business interests smiled tolerantly, thinking themselves secure behind financial ramparts.

But the Price Spreads Commission's report shook them from their lethargy. The people were told how dangerous it was to interfere with business as it is presently constituted, that Mr. Bennett and his government would not be playing fair if they made the changes suggested by the Commission.

There was, and is, fear in the ranks of the Big Interests, not in the least allayed by the developments of the past week in Parliament. There the country's elected representatives gave first reading to four important measures framed to implement the findings of the Price Spreads Commission. They deal with livestock industrial disputes, weights and measures, amendments to the Criminal Code designed to improve the conduct of business.

Contentious matters, all! And the industrial and financial barons have their lieutenants in the House of Commons primed to oppose the reform legislation at every step. It will be of interest to note who among the Opposition factions will fight the battle against reform.

The Criminal Code amendments, sponsored by Minister of Justice Hugh Guthrie, admittedly may give rise to some constitutional difficulties in reference to false advertising, mininmum wages, maximum working hours and secret rebates of a discriminatory nature.

Under the livestock bill packing-plant yards are made public yards, and the same regulations governing inspection of meat for external trade are to be applied to livestock and meats sold for interprovincial trade. The bill does not create the livestock board recommended by the Commission because its functions are now performed by officers of the Agriculture Department.

Short-weighting of the public by corporation-owned stores will be eliminated by tightening of the Weights and Measures Act and sharp increase in the scale of penalties for violations. Authority of inspectors to check weights and measures is greatly strengthened. Regulations are made for the weight of containers and the markings thereon.

False advertisers will be faced with the burden of proof in the event of prosecution Severe penalties are imposed on employers contravening the minimum wage and maximum hours requirements, or otherwise attempting to evade regulations and there is also provision for heavy fines in the case of secret rebates. The Minister of Labour is given power to investigate complaints of intimidation or other discriminatory actions by employers or employees.

Three more important bills arising out of the Price Speads report still remain to be brought down for approval. One will concern creation of the Federal Trade and Industry Board and may well prove the most contentious of the seven. It is at present being considered carefully by the Cabinet Council.

After the long Liberal filibuster on the million-dollar Toronto tunnel and the $2,500,000 item for harbours and rivers, the House got down to business and completed approval of the balance of the $18,000,000 public works construction bill. This now stands for third reading, and the decks are cleared for consideration of the $15,000,000 for railway equipment purchases. An amendment was made to the public works bill setting forth preferences to be observed in employing men on the government jobs, it being stipulated that preference be given to men resident in the district where the work is being done.

Hester had been in a railroad accident. The lawyer had just called.

"What you-all want?" she asked.

"I've come," said the lawyer, "to assist you in getting damages."

"Damages, my foot!" shouted Hester. "I done got all the damages I wants—what I craves is repairs."

THIEF TAKES NEW SHOES BOUGHT WITH MAN'S BLOOD

New York.—Lamike Carr, 30, of the Seamen's Church Institute, sold blood in a transfusion Sunday for enough money to buy a new pair of shoes. Sauntering toward the East River, he arrived there just in time to see Thomas Ryan, 60, floundering around in the water. Carr removed his new shoes before he dived to the rescue. When he came back the new shoes were gone.

ITCH.

OF ALL the parasites which seem to exist solely for the annoyance of mankind, none is more widespread than the one known as "itch-mite," which is responsible for that common affliction called "the itch," or scabies, which is familiar to both sexes and all ages.

The itch-mite can be seen without the aid of the micrscope. It is round and whitish, with four pairs of legs. The trouble arises from the fertilized female burrowing into the skin. She cannot turn around in the burrow, so must continue to go ahead, laying an egg or two a day until she dies. These eggs are hatched, and the adult is developed in about two weeks, the female being large and the male small.

The disease is spread by contact with the infested person or with his clothing and bed-clothing. It is most common where more than one individual uses the same bed-clothing, under conditions of over-crowding and standards of personal cleanliness.

The burrowing of the female itch-mite sets up the skin irritation which causes the itch. The itch-mite prefers thin, folded and moist skin. The disease commonly begins on the front of the wrists and elbows and between the fingers, but it may spread all over the body. The itch is experienced chiefly at night. At this time in the warmth of the bed clothes, the itch-mite becomes active and does most of her burrowing.

Once the condition is recognized, it can be corrected by the proper use of such an itch-mite poison as sulphur. The first step treatment is a hot bath with the free use of soap and a soft nail brush. This exposes the tunnels or burrows so that the sulphur which is later applied may reach and destroy the itch parasite.

Sulphur, prepared as an ointment, is applied night and morning for two or more days. being rubbed thoroughly into the parts most affected. At the end of that time, but not before, another hot bath is taken, and the underwear is changed. The clothing and bed-clothing must be sterilized; linen is boiled and blankets are baked. The whole household must be cleaned up or the parasites will soon spread to those who have been freed of them from those who were not treated.

Itch is not a dangerous disease, but it is responsible for a great deal of discomfort. As a result of the itching sleep is lost. Scratching very often breaks the skin with the result that infections, such as boils, sometimes develop.

Itch will seldom, if ever, occur among those who keep their bodies clean by regular bathing, who wear clean under-clothing and keep their own toilet articles for themselves. However, anyone may be exposed to and contract scabies, and so it may be introduced into the family. If this happens, it should be attacked by proper methods until the whole family has been entirely freed from it.

Train Slices Off Front of Woman's Automobile

Woodstock Woman Escapes Death as Her Auto Slides onto Crossing Tracks in Front of Engine.

Woodstock.—"So near and yet so far," is the story of escaping death told by Mrs. Frank Renn, Woodstock.

Mrs. Renn was driving her car Saturnday along a highway. Reaching a level-crossing near Creditville, she looked to the west, the track was clear, and moved ahead.

And then she looked to the east. A Canadian National Railways train was almost upon her. She jammed on the brakes and the car slid to a stop.

But she was not quite quick enough. The train ploughed into the front end of her car, taking with it the headlights, front fenders, bumper and license plate.

She was not injured.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

Conducted By
MISS HELEN LACEY, B. H. Sc.

MEATS DRESSED UP.

WE ALL GROW TIRED of the same cuts of meat cooked and served in the same way time after ti me. Even though we know different methods of preparation we are apt t o forget them and nothing is easier to get into than a rut in meal-plan ning.

SPICED ROAST HAM.

1 ham
Brown sugar
Soft bread crumbs
1 teaspoon mustard
Mixed spices

Boil the ham 20 minutes for every pound, and skin it. Remove some of superfluous fat. Mix brown sugar and soft bread crumbs in the proportions of four parts of sugar to one of crumbs, add one teaspoon of mustard and spread this mixture over the ham. Insert whole cloves or mixed spices about one inch apart, making a diamond pattern. Bake in a moderate oven 10 minutes for each pound.

If ham is being prepared for a small family, buy an inch and a half thick slice instead of a whole ham.

MOCK DUCK.

1½ lbs. round steak
1½ cups bread crumbs
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon summer savoury
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ tablespoon chopped onion
1½ tablespoons melted butter

Trim the bone and any superfluous fat from the meat. Wipe with a damp cloth; spread on a board. Mix crumbs and seasonings and add melted butter. Spread over meat, roll and tie in shape. Place in a roasting pan; pour around the meat 2 tablespoons melted dripping and 1 cup boiling .water. Cover tightly; cook in a moderate oven 1½ to 2 hours. Uncover for the last half hour of cooking. Serve with brown gravy.

CHICKEN MOUSSE.

½ raw chicken breast
1 cup cooked chicken meat
2 egg whites
½ cup thick cream
½ cup thin cream
Salt, pepper and paprika

Chop raw chicken very fine. Add slightly beaten white of one egg, ½ cup of thin cream, salt, pepper and paprika to taste. Mix thoroughly. Mix together chopped cooked chicken meat, slightly beaten white of second egg and one-half cup of thick cream, whipped. Combine the two mixtures and when well blended. turn into one large mould or into individual moulds. Place in a pan of hot water, cover with wax paper and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Turn out on a platter and serve with sauce made by substituting ½ cup of meat stock instead of half the milk in a medium white sauce and add one teaspoon of lemon juice to each cup of the sauce.

ROASTED TONGUE.

Wash one beef tongue thoroughly and allow to stand 24 hours in water to cover, to which has been added ½ cup of salt. Remove from salted water, cover with boiling water and cook until tender (about four hours). A few mixed spices may be added to give flavour. When tender, drain, skin and place in a well-buttered baking dish and brown in a moderate oven.

CHICKEN À LA KING.

2 tablespoons fat
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 cup cream
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 cup quartered mushrooms (may be omitted)
1 green pepper, minced
1 pimiento cut in narrow strips
2 cups cooked, diced chicken
2 egg yolks

Make a white sauce of the fat, flour, milk, cream, salt and pepper. Add the mushrooms, green pepper, pimiento and chicken. Cook until the meat is thoroughly heated. Just before serving, stir in egg yolks (slightly beaten) and cook for a moment. Serve at once on squares of hot toast or in patty cases or croustades.

The pièce de resistance refers to the main dish of a meal, for example, the roast.

* * * *

When purchasing vegetables in the summer, buy only the amount you can use immediately because they deteriorate in quality very quickly and are best cooked soon after gathering from the garden.

* * * *

An entrée is a dish that is served as an independent course between two main courses of a meal.

* * * *

When buying meat, allow one-quarter of a pound (without bone) for each serving as meat will shrink from one-third to one-half during cooking.

* * * * *

Sugars are not equally sweet. Maple sugar, brown sugar and molasses, weight for weight with white sugar, are a little less sweet than the white sugar. Corn syrup is only about three-fifths as sweet as white sugar.

"THE Value OF YOUR TELEPHONE IS JUST WHAT YOU MAKE IT"

Not Ladylike

"I DECLARE," Mollie Tanner exclaimed, "I don't believe you have heard one word I've been saying!"

"Yes, I have," Janet Hayden answered stoutly, although a careful listener might have detected a note of uncertainty in her voice. "You were telling me that Gladys Thornely did not like my bringing those manzanita branches to decorate the stage for our play."

"That's as near as I thought you could come to it!! You simply were not listening!"

"What was it?" Janet asked meekly.

They were on the front seat of the electric car and a new motorman was being broken in. Janet had been listening to what the instructor was saying; but she had thought that she was hearing Mollie, too.

"Gladys thought the manzanita was perfect," Mollie explained; "but she was shocked to see you carry it along the street, like any boy. She said that she walked behind you down the hill from the car, and that two or three people turned to look at you."

"What harm was there in my carrying it?"

Mollies' colour heightened. She did not dare to repeat the criticism that Gladys had made.

"Well, anyhow, Janet," she said at last, "you know ladies don't do that sort of thing."

"What sort of thing?"

"Why—go through the streets loaded down that way, with such queer things."

"Oh, is that all?" Janet's laugh was carefree. "I was up in the canyon and found that beautiful manzanita; and there was no other way to get it down except to bring it. Wnat's the odds? Everyone saw what it was."

"Well," Mollie persisted. "Gladys says—and I think she's right, too—that it's not refined to be—to do—such—conspicuous things."

Janet did not answer. This time she really did not hear. The electric road up the canyon was run as economically as possible; travel over it was light, and so the motorman acted as conductor. The car had been waiting on a turnout for the up car, and the new man had taken advantage of the stop to go through and collect fares. When he came back the regular motorman resumed his instructions.

They were near the end of the canyon now, coming out into the open, where there was a sharp grade and a railway track to cross. Janet was interested. Her father had taught her to manage his electric motor car, and most of the directions were clear to her.

"Sometimes you have to wait, if the flag's up," he was saying, "and sometimes you can just slam on the juice and send her sliding! It all depends. The easiest way's to keep your crank about there." He indicated a certain point. "She takes the track best that way."

As they went bumping over the railway track, the instructor stood alert and keen beside his pupil.

"Give 'er the juice," he said. "You don't want to get rattled, ever. Just keep cool 'n' remember that the power handle turns on the juice and shuts it off; and the brake stops 'er. That's about all there is to it."

"Why don't you answer me?" Mollie demanded impatiently. She had spoken three times without getting Janet's attention.

"Why—I was listening to that man. It was so interesting to hear him tell how to run the car."

"That's just like you, Janet Hayden. You're always doing queer things. It's a wonder you did not ask him to let you try it."

"There wouldn't be any harm in that," Janet said, with a good-natured laugh.

"It doesn't look—nice. It isn't ladylike to be always wanting to know things, like any boy."

"I guess my bump of curiosity is too big. I always envy boys when I see them prowling about, finding out about all sorts of things that I'd like to know about."

"But those things aren't of any use to girls."

"You never can tell," was Janet's half-wistful reply.

Even Gladys Thornely had forgotten the episode of the manzanita when two weeks later the senior botany class had a field day up in the canyon. Botany was not her strong point and she was glad enough to have Janet's help in identifying specimens.

"I don't see the good of all this pulling things to pieces and keeping the scraps," she said disgustedly. "If Miss Hungerford would teach us the language of flowers, now, instead of their classification, there would be some sense in it."

"The language of flowers?" Janet looked puzzled.

"Yes. Every flower has its sentiment. Don't you know that? Why, the language of flowers is the language of sentiment!"

'My goodness! That isn't scientific! That's just mushy nonsense."

"Scientific! What good is science, anyway? Just look at the dirt on my gloves; Do you know what I want to be, Janet Hayden? I want to be a perfect lady and to learn all the exquisite things that make her a power in men's lives." Gladys regarded her companion with dreamy eyes.

"I guess I never would know all that," Janet said, in some awe. "I never thought about it; but I like to learn other things."

Miss Hungerford was with the class, and they put in a long afternoon following the canyon stream, filling their specimen cases, and studying doubtful specimens with their magnifying glasses. It was a happy, tired crowd of girls that at last assembled at the head of the trolley line to wait for the car home.

"How dreadful we do look!" Gladys Thornely cried in dismay, as she surveyed her companions. "Must we really go to town like this, Miss Hungerford?"

She glanced at her soiled gloves, which she had worn all the afternoon to save her hands. The other girls had taken off their gloves before beginning on their field work, and were now ready to put them on.

"Never mind, Gladys," Janet said, with a laugh. "Mine are clean, and I'd as soon go barehanded."

She held out her own gloves, which Gladys, after an instant of hesitation took.

As Gladys noticed a curious look on Miss Hungerford's face, she started to make some excuse for taking the gloves; but Janet merely answered, "Oh, that's all right!" and turned toward the car, which was approaching.

'Why didn't you bring an open car, such as we had coming up?" she asked of the motorman. "They're so much pleasanter."

"This is the regular car for this trip, miss," the man replied. "There ain't but one or two open cars on this run."

Daisy Bain, one of the younger girls, was already on the back platform, ringing the bell wildly, after the manner of an impatient conductor.

"All aboard!! Step lively, please; plenty of room up front!" she cried, as the girls filed in.

Presently the car started down the steep grade. The roadbed was rough, and the girls, who had the car to themselves, grew very merry over it before they came to the turnout.

They were a little ahead of time here, and the motorman, as usual, took advantage of the wait to come through and collect the fares. The botany class nearly filled the car, and by the time he had rung up the last ticket, the up car had passed them.

"All aboard!" Daisy cried again as the motorman returned to the front platform. "Next stop is the Great Salt Lake."

"Give you a plunge in that!" Janet called, shaking her finger. " 'Twould do you a lot of good."

The motorman loosened his brake and turned the power handle, but the car did not start. He leaned out to look overhead, and then turned the brake back again. The trolley had slopped from the wire, and he got down to adjust it.

Just what happened next no one knew. There was a sudden grating sound from the front platform; the car gave a forward leap and the handle of the brake swung around.

The next instant the car was in motion, and, looking back, the girls could see the motorman, with a white face running after it. Just as he was about to grasp the rail of the rear steps he fell, and the swiftly moving car soon left him hopelessly behind.

With a lurch that shut the rear door, the car swung from the turnout to the main track. When Miss Hungerford reached the door it was jammed hard, and would not open. Several of the girls began to scream.

"We'll all be killed. We'll all be killed!" Daisy Bain strieked.

She sprang toward the front door, but there Janet barred the way. Janet's face was pale, but her voice rang out bravely.

"Don't let them jump, Miss Hungerford!" she cried. I think I can stop it."

She was on the front platform, with Miss Hungerford beside her. Inside the car Mollie was shaking Daisy Bain to make her stop screaming. Gladys Thornely was moaning and wringing her hands. The car, gaining headway every minute, was swaying wildly now. Janet shut down the power, and she and the teacher threw themselves upon the brake.

Something was wrong. They could not set the brake; the car raced down the grade.

"We shall slow down on the upgrade," Miss Hungerford gasped, "and—" Then she gave a cry of horror.

"The train!" she shrieked.

They were nearing the crossing, and a train was coming; they could see its smoke above the cut. The guard at the crossing was already preparing to let down the gates. He waved his hand in warning, and then, seeing that something was wrong, left the gates and started toward the oncoming car. The train was in sight now down the cut.

"We shall meet them square on the track!" Miss Hungerford groaned; but through Janet's brain flashed the words of the motorman, "Slam on the juice and send 'er sliding!"

Dared she do it? Miss Hungerford was still tearing helplessly at the brake.

The girl turned on the current and the car leaped forward.

"Janet, are you mad?"

"We've got to get out of the way!" Janet shouted.

She was watching the track ahead There was a whirlwind about her ears. The car reeled and swung, and she grasped the rail before her to steady herself.

Now the roar of the locomotive sounded above the pounding of the car. The engineer had seen, and was setting his brakes. The crossing tender's horrified face flashed by; a fireman looked out, white and open-mouthed, from the cab window. The girls were hushed by the terror of the moment.

With a terrific jolting the car took the crossing. The engine towered for an instant above them. Then, with a bound, they were across. The car had kept the rails!

A little farther an up-grade began; Janet had already shut off the power again, and Miss Hungerford was working at the brake. The car gradually lost its headway, and a man who had seen what was happening, sprang to the rear platform and threw himself on the brake there.

There was a jangling noise as the wheels felt the strain, and slowly with sullen reluctance, the car came to a standstill.

The crossing tender came running up and with the other man forced the rear door open and came into the car. Two or three girls were sobbing aloud; Gladys Thornely had fainted. Out on the front platform Miss Hungerford was helping Janet, weak and frightened, to the ground.

"You wonderful, wonderful girl!" the teacher was saying; and Mollie, with white lips, whispered, "You saved all our lives."

Behind on the track the freight train had stopped, and the crew stared from car roofs and locomotive. A man climbed through, between two cars, and came staggering forward. It was the motorman, who had run a despairing race after his car. He came up, sobbing helplessly with fright and exhaustion. He examined the brake, and presently held up a small, sharp stone that had lodged in the shaft. "If the company don't put a conductor on this run now," he muttered, "there'll be a sure-enough mishap one of these days! There won't always be smart little girls around to save 'em from being murderers.

"I ain't saying anying to you now, miss," he went on to Janet; "I can't; but heaven knows I think you're a wonder!"

Pulling himself together, he resumed his post on the front platform. Fortunately for human nature there is usually something to be done when emotion becomes too great for it, and now there was the car to be run through the rest of its trip. One or two of the girls chose to walk the rest of the way home, but the others, although badly shaken, were willing to continue the journey in the car.

Gladys Thornely had come out of her faint, and as Janet, still white and trembling, sat down beside her, she looked remorsefully at the girl's bleeding hands.

"And I had your gloves!" she finally wailed. "Oh Janet! What would have become of us all if you had been like me?"

"Don't say anything!" Mollie cried, overhearing her. "Didn't I try to scold Janet for being interested in running electric cars? Janet! How could I ever have been such a fool? Do say you forgive me!!" ! !

Janet, trying hard not to shiver, laughed.

ONE GREAT CANADIAN HEN

Sydney Post-Record.

The old problem of supply and demand was satisfactorily met recently at a farm on the St. Peter's road, though perhaps in an unusual way.

Two black and white kittens only a few weeks old were evidently disposed of by motorists through the heartless system of abandoning them on the country roadside. The lights from a nearby farmhouse attracted them and they made their way to it, crying piteously and they kept it up.

The boy of the house believed the kittens were distressed because they needed mothering. Under a crate in the yard was an old broody hen that had nothing to mother. He placed the two kittens under the hen, and, contrary to anticipation, she accepted her charges with no more than the customary fussing and clucking.

The next morning a black head protruded from the feathers on either side of the hen and the kittens and the hen seemed to wonder what was so strange about the situation that it should afford such merriment to the farmer's family and their guests.

He was discussing his son and heir, whom he recently had taken into the business.

"Why, yes; he's shaping pretty well, but he has a long way to go yet before he'll have a head big enough to fill my shoes."

The absent-minded man said: "In China, dear friends, human life is regarded as of slight value. Indeed, if a wealthy Chinaman is condemned to death he can easily hire another to die for him, and I believe many poor fellows thus get their living by acting as substitutes."

MR. PEASLEE ON CAPABLE WOMEN

"SHOULDN'T you folks say," remarked Caleb Peaslee slowly, "that Albertine Coggins has reckoned herself 'bout as good as a man fur's doin' anything that come up is concerned?"

"Better'n some men," agreed Edson Nudd. "She's took care of herself since her father died, and her place is better now than 'twas then; it'll raise more. And she always pays her taxes 'fore any man in town does his."

"She painted her house herself," contributed Deacon Hyne, "and she done a better job than Sam Berry did on mine—and him a reg'lar painter, too!"

"She shingled it, too," admitted Bailey, the carpenter. "She got me in to figger on it, and then she said I wanted too much. I made it out to be two days' workin, figgerin' it long enough to be on the safe side. But she whirled in and done it in a day and a half, but she put in longer days than I would, you know. But it was a good job and a quick job—I ain't tryin' to gainsay that, you understand."

"I d'know a man in town that can plough a straighter furrow than Albertine," admitted Obed Gunney. "Come right down to it, I've never known her to tackle anything she couldn't do as well as ary man I know and some things she can better a man!"

"That's so—she can," said Caleb agreeably. "More'n than, she ain't never been what I'd call backward 'bout being as facultied as a man, Has she?" he demanded of the assembly at large.

They agreed that Albertine exacted all the credit due her for her accomplishments.

"Wal," began Mr. Peaslee, "when I tell you that Albertine's hauled in her horns and give up that she ain't as good as a man in some ways, or even as good as a boy—"Mr. Hyne snorted his disbelief, and Caleb turned his head and grinned at him. "Oh, I know you folks ain't to believe it, but it's so, jest the same!

"I drove up the back road this mornin'," he continued, "to see what had become of them heifers I had in the back paster; and comin' back I overtook young Bud Higgins, hoofin' it along with a pasteboard box under his arm, so I hauled up and asked him to get in. He sot there on the seat alongside of me, and even with the noise the wagon made over the stuns in the road I could hear a scratchin' and squeakin' goin' on inside the box, but I didn't need to have him tell me that he'd dug out a nest of field mice som'er's; but, as a matter of fact, he did tell me, and h'isted up the cover so's't I could peek in.

"Right where we swung into the highway there by Clad Burpee's," Caleb continued, "the old hoss fetched a jump that all but hove me out of the seat, and at the same minute there come a 'Gobble-gobble!' that almost made the old hoss clear himself from the wagon; and when I got so I could use my eyes a mite to see what it was all about, I made out Albertine Coggins tryin' to claw herself over that barb-wire fence and that turkey gobbler of Burpee's doin' what he could to scare the life out of her. He's as big as a dog, anyway, and most 'nough to scare a man, let alone a woman.

"I didn't need to hunch Bud to tell him to go to the rescue. He was out over the wheel box an' all, 'fore I got the hoss halted, and next I knew he'd put one hand on a post and sailed over that fence, light as a popple leaf and when he lit he laid into that turkey, cuffin' him and kickin' him 'till the critter didn't seem to know which way to go, but jest laid down and spread his wings, c'mpletely licked. In the meantime Albertine had got along to the place where Bud went over the fence, and she made out to climb onto the post, and then she jumped.

"I heard the thump she made when she hit the ground, and the same second she peeled off a yell that started me so that I all but let go of the reins. I didn't have time to see every one of the motions, they come so quick together, but I see her give her skirts a shake, and I'll bet the first jump she made she covered fifteen foot if she did an inch, and after that her tracks was ten foot apart! And not knowin' but the scare had drove her demented, I took after her.

"I come up with her after a spell and I found her settin' on a knoll, with both hands over her heart and breathin' short and hard, and then I found out what 'twas.

" 'That turkey,' she says, 'jest 'bout drove me crazy, but when I got over the fence I could have stood that, if it'd been all—but it wa'n't. I lit right in the middle of that pesky box that boy had and I see with my own eyes more'n fifty mice come out of it, and all of 'em headin' for me, so I run till I couldn't take another step to save my life,' s'she There was five mice in the box," observed Mr Peaslee in parenthesis, "for I counted 'em.

"Wal," Mr. Peaslee went on, "Albertine fetched a long breath, and then she owned up, as I said in the beginnin'. 'It helps some to brag that you're as good as a man anywheres—but it don't make it so,' she says. When you're climbin' a barb-wire fence you ain't nothin' but a woman with skirts on, no matter what you claim, and when you light right on top of a hundred mice, the slackest man alive is better'n the best-facultied woman that ever drawed breath!' And now," demanded Mr. Peaslee, "wouldn't you say she'd give in?"

"Can you get any distance with your radio?"

'Sure! Why, the neighbours for three blocks around are complaining."

Mother (treating little daughter to her first soda): "How do you like it, dear?"

Little Daughter: "It tastes just like your foot was asleep."

Ottawa Boy Scout Singers Provide Wonderful Treat

38th Ottawa Troop Delighted Local Audience With Solos, Duets and Full Choir Numbers.

The programme provided by the 38th Ottawa Troop of Boy Scout singers last Thursday evening was most delightful in every respect and those who failed to attend missed one of the finest treats offered to the Chesterville public for a long time. The boys, ranging in age from nine to eighteen years, showed remarkable capacity in their different numbers, some of which are very rarely attempted by the more experienced amateur singers Solos by the Youngest "Cub," a lad of nine years making his début, figuratively brought down the house and the audience would not be satisfied without an encore. Another of the smaller members scored a triumph with a French naval song, while the whole party left nothing but a longing for more singing when their lengthy programme came to an end.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Alfred Morris and family of Chesterville wish to sincerely thank their neighbours and friends for their most kind assistance, flowers and messages of sympathy in their bereavement.
