TWO INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Two men suffered painful injuries and a third escaped with a severe shaking up when an auto in which they were riding was overturned by a log placed across the road. The accident happened on a branch road out of Morewood. All three men are residents of Morewood.

Roy King, the most seriously hurt, is still confined to his bed. In addition to painful injuries to his back he suffered a broken nose, while a rib of the top of the car pierced his cheek, necessitating five stitches. The owner and driver of the car, George Steacy, was pinned under the machine and was painfully bruised about the legs. Lorne King escaped with a shaking up.

BOY SHOT AT IROQUOIS

While two boys of about 14 years of age were, as they thought, having some fun with a gun on Saturday afternoon, one was shot through the groin when his companion dropped the 22 rifle they were using on the ground, causing it to go off. Dominique Sisty, the boy who was hurt, immediately ran to the office of Dr. David Johnston, College Street, his companion following. The shot had gone into the groin and straight through the leg, just missing an artery.

The Doctor dressed it and took the boy home where he is resting comfortably. The boys were shooting at a mark on the river bank south of the Beach grist mill, when the accident happened. The father of the injured boy, Frank Sisty, runs a market garden west of Iroquois.

MR. JOHN GARLOUGH

There passed away at his home in Williamsburg on Sunday, October 23rd, a highly respected citizen in the person of Mr John Garlough. The late Mr. Garlough was in the 74th year of his age, and had spent all his life in Williamsburg, and in those years he gained the respect of a large number of people, many of whom were present at the funeral service on Tuesday afternoon as a last mark of respect to his memory. The chief mourners were his brother, Mr. Peter Garlough, his nephew Mr. Allan Garlough, and neices Mrs. Annie Price of Brockville, Mrs. Geo. Stata and Miss Ida Garlough of Williamsburg, also a number of other neices and nephews. The funeral service was conducted at home by Rev. Hugh Whitteker, of Bridgewater, Nova Scotia and following the service burial was made in Williamsburg cemetery.

ANNUAL W. M. S. CONVENTION

The second annual Convention of the W.M.S. of the United Church Dundas Presbyterial was held in Spencerville United Church Thursday, October 20th, 1927. The church was filled for the opening session. Mrs. Merrill, President, occupied the chair. Mrs. Johnston of Spencerville welcomed the delegates and on behalf of the delegates Mrs. C. Hyndman of Hallville replied.

Excellent papers on the subject "Through the Eyes of Youth" were read by the Misses Lennox, Cleland, Kingston and Sullivan, and the "Challenge to Youth" was given by Miss Jessie Smith of Hallville.

The Value of System and Organization" was dealt with by Mrs. R. Peterson, Mrs. J. S. Bass, Mrs. T. Coleman, Mrs. W. A. Brown and Miss I K. Farlinger. Discussion on these papers was led by Mrs. W. Coulthart.

A short Memorial Service was conducted by Mrs. E. Lawson, Morrisburg.

At the P.M. Session interesting papers on "Why the Cupboard was Bare" were given by Mesdames Munharvey, Russell and Ault. Discussion on these was led by Mrs. R. E. Newman of Chesterville.

Mrs. W. H. Henderson, President of Branch gave a report of the Board meeting in Toronto and Miss Mathewson of Heckston very ably conducted the "Questionnaire". The "Quiet Moments" in charge of Mrs. R. C. Stafford closed the P. M. Session.

Rev. C. K. Mathewson, Chairman of Presbytery, presided at the evening session. Interesting addresses were given by Miss McKim of All Peoples' Mission, Ottawa and Mrs. R. B. McAmmond of "Fow Chow, China. Miss McKim said the Immigrants coming to our shores will be either as leaven or as dynamite. It is for us to decide. Mrs. McAmmond gave us a word-picture of the Missionary Compound in Fow Chow and took us on an imaginary trip with the Missionary through the city..

The worship periods for the day were conducted by Mrs. Newman and Mrs. Mills of Crystal Rock Mrs. Sloan of Ventnor and Miss G. Faulkner of Morewood. Mrs. Harvey Fairbairn of Spencerville presided at the organ throughout the convention. The special musical numbers by Mrs. Tripp, Miss Faulkner and the Spencerville Sextette added much to the success of the Convention.

A pleasing feature of the evening was a Pageant under the direction of Mrs. C. D. Perrin and Miss Ethel Pratt of Prescott, with Miss Ida Elliott presiding at the organ. The Pageant entitled "Miss Canada's Reception" was composed of Miss Canada, Britannia and representatives in costume from each of the allied nations. The National Anthem of each country were sung as the representatives appeared the Japanese National Anthem being sung in both Japanese and English. The Pageant closed with the appearance of a "Pleader", appealing to the audience on behalf of Missions. Three young men dressed as Uncle Sam, John Bull and Johnny Canuck represented U. S.A., England and Canada, while another young man acted as announcer.

Delegates to branch meeting to be held in Sherbrooke, Que., in 1928 are as follows: Mrs. Morrison, Huliert; Mrs. I. Cross, Chesterville; Mrs Webb Johnston, Miss Burney, Ventnor, and Miss Pearl McIntyre, Mountain.

The next Presbyterial is to be held in Prescott in the Spring of 1928.

MORRISBURG UNITED CHURCH HONORED

On Sunday night, October 23rd, Morrisburg United Church was packed to its utmost capacity, the overflow using the entrance and the lecure room beneath the church. This large audience had congregated in anticipation of hearing the choir of fifty voices from St. James United Church, Ottawa, and realization, in this case, proved better than anticipation. It is saying a lot for the Ottawa Choir; that they held their immense audience in silent and rapt attention from the beginning of the service to the end.

Too much praise cannot be accorded the leader of the Choir, Mr H B. Bailey for the manner in which they were trained. To his highly cultured temperament, his gracious and charming personality, his unfailing knowledge of human nature, and his musical ability, all of which combine to make him an extremely popular and successful director, is acclaimed the success of this choir. He was, indeed, an artist in directing and his choir responded to every gesture as he lead them through the different degrees of tempo and expression in the various anthems.

From the moment the choir made their silent stand before the beginning of each anthem until its final note was sung, each number was a masterpiece. All parts were perfectly balanced, making a complete and beautiful harmony. All of the anthems were particularly difficult to render, some being sung in six and eight parts. One remarkable outstanding feature, showing the perfection of the rendition of the anthems, was the manner in which all voices could take the soft as well as loud parts and keep perfect enunciation throughout. It is impossible to find adequate words to tell the appreciation of the audience for the opportunity of hearing a choir trained as this one is, they having carried off the shield for two consecutive years at the Eisteddfed held in Ottawa for being the best trained choir.

It would be unwise to try to select the best soloist of the evening's chorals, for there could be no doubt to the large audience that each artist was heart and soul in his or her songs, and they were executed with feeling, expression and artistry which bespoke of individuality, personality and careful training.

As an accompanist, Mrs. W. B. Armstrong gave sympathetic support and displayed her mastery of the art and of her instrument, the piano. Her beautiful accompaniment played with feeling, soul and in perfect accord and harmony with the singers, stamp her as an artist of rank. She acquitted herself artistically and left nothing to be desired in the manner of assistance and support to the singers.

Crusaders' Ruins Reveal a Story

Excavators Find Evidence of Luxurious Life at the Old Castle of Montfort in Palestine—Some of the Relics Uncovered by Them

Evidence of luxurious life in which the twelfth century Crusaders were indulging in Palestine at the time of their final defeat by the Saracens has at last been gathered in conclusive form by the excavations at the old castle of Montfort, near Tyre, made on behalf of the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York.

For more than six centuries, from its fall in 1271 until 1926, Montfort Castle was left undisturbed, and when excavations were finally undertaken it was only in the hope the specimens of crusading armor might be discovered. Most of the castle was in ruins. The woodwork as was found by W. L. Calver, the field director, had been burned by the Saracens; many of the walls had fallen and little was unearthed that could be added to the museum's collection of armor. What the findings did show was that the complaint of William, Archbishop of Tyre, the medieval historian, had been correct; the Crusaders had not been on a perpetual pilgrimage and at times must have enjoyed almost as much comfort as did their contemporaries in Western Europe.

William had noted, about the middle of the twelfth century, that the kingdom of the West in the East was beginning to tremble. He thought it was because the invaders in the East had forsaken God and were in turn being forsaken by Him; that the princes of the West were no longer giving themselves up wholly to the crusade.

A peace party, which saw no need for continuous warfare, was, in fact, springing up under the leadership of Raymond of Tripoli. The laxity of the Eastern sun had begun to affect the knights, who desired also, perhaps, to pursue art and literature—which could not very well be done in the midst of battle. They made their castles, churches and monasteries as much like those at home as they could, and settled down to peaceful activity or inactivity.

TRAINING FOR KNIGHTHOOD.

Songs and history show life there to have been not unlike that of the West. The young knight, as a potential ruler, spent his early years at his fathers castle, learning to hunt, hawk and ride, then was sent to the castle of a king for further training. When he had finished his courtly training he returned to the family castle. There was, it is true, a certain amount of fighting to be done, but the pastimes of the period were many — tournaments, hunting and games; in the evenings the singing of the minstrels.

This appears to have been the state of affairs at the time the Saracens were gathering their forces for attack. When Bibars, a relentless foe of the Franks, became Sultan in 1260, he took up with fresh vigor the campaign against the Crusaders. Wherever he went he burned and pillaged. Although Montfort Castle withstood one siege, it eventually fell.

The site, according to Dr. Bashford Dean, curator of arms and armor of the Metropolitan Museum, proved an excellent one for the castle's medieval occupants. Montfort was reared on an abrupt shoulder of a hill, jutting out between the arms of the Wady Kurn. This was about 600 feet above the water. The hill was precipitous on its western side, sloping by easy stages on the eastern. It was about six miles from the sea, half way between Acre and Tyre, and near it a road passed along toward the Sea of Galilee.

ONCE A ROMAN FORTRESS.

The history of the region is not altogether known but, judging from Roman coins and bits of marble sculpture, the site had been fortified in the days of the empire, possibly before that. The castle was built at the beginning of the thirteenth century. In 1229 the lords of Mandelee were in possession and the same year ceded Montfort to Herman de Salza, Grand Master of the Order of the Hospital of Our Lady of the Teutons, who, using the German equivalent, Starkenberg, made the fortification the general headquarters of the Order in Palestine. In 1266 the new Sultan Bibars attacked the castle, but was repulsed. In 1271 he again attacked, this time probably by tunneling under the western end, and was successful. He seems to have broken all the engines of war, or to have taken them away. The excavators found only pieces.

The climate of Palestine is far from favorable for the preservation of iron objects, and this explains why, as regards armor, the excavations were not a greater success. What colored glass windows there were at the time of Bibars were presumably broken by him. Other glassware must have been smashed either by the invader or by the crumbling of the walls; paintings were eaten by decay. But from such fragments as remain Dr. Dean draws the conclusion that the knights of Montfort were living on a high material level.

Glass is apt to be as good evidence of their luxury as any, for armies on the march or accustomed to the rigors of warfare are not usually well provided with it. In Montfort pieces of glass and fragments of ornaments were found.

WELL EQUIPPED WITH BOTTLES.

There were heaps of numerous bottles and flasks, showing the shape to have been somewhat similar to the modern wine flask, the bottom rising a little within the cavity. In some cases the flasks were oval in outline, the necks sometimes short, sometimes long. In a few examples the neck had been made to resemble a string of beads. In one chamber several small bottles were discovered together, along with a mortar, still in its upright position. These, it is said, may denote the one-time existence there of a medieval drug store.

Among the other interesting glass objects were fragments of lamp hangers. These were formed of small lumps of cobalt blue glass and presumably were once affixed to a bowl of transparent glass. The blue lump had been made into a wide hook, to which chains or cords could be attached. The number of these hangers indicates a more or less general use. The most important lamp was a hanging one, shattered but retaining its form. It is transparent above, blue below, and bears on several zones a calligraphic gold inscription in Arabic. This is now in the museum at Acre.

Traces of stained glass windows were found in two of the chambers and in the chapel. According to Dr. Dean, not only was "colorless" glass used, but also green, blue and corn-colored. The pieces show the glass to have been painted in grisaille, with bands and interlaced foliation, as well as human figures. A small fragment of a human head done in white glass grisaille is at present in the Metropolitan Museum.

FINELY CARVED MARKERS

Two blocks apparently of lithographic limestone were picked up in the one chamber of the castle whose roof had not fallen in. Both blocks were chiseled in intaglio—perhaps with the very chisels found in an armor compartment—and both evidently served as molds into which some material, such as leather, could be pressed. The better artistically of the two blocks, retained by the Department of Antiquities of the Government of Palestine, measures seven by eleven by three inches, and was carved on the wide side with a heraldic shield and fleur de lis. The shield bore an eagle, and was evidently the badge of the German Rittecorden. The second, a triangular stone, roughly four by nine by two inches, represents on its main face two fishes, symbols of early Christianity. The other faces have curved and straight designs, possibly to be used for the printing of belts, holders, carriers or similar objects. It is now in the Metropolitan.

In the same room with the two matrices was found evidence suggesting that the decorations produced included paintings. This evidence was a small piece of a wooden panel, covered on one side with canvas and gesso, on which are still to be seen traces of the portrayal of human figures.

STONE WORK WAS MADE ORNATE.

The sculptured stone work of the castle, with its scrolls, bossets, foliation, and an occasional grotesque head also show the desire of the knights for beautiful surroundings. A number of pillar sections, bearing polychrome decorations, and arch ribs painted with transverse bands, were brought to light by the excavators.

Outside the castle proper a so-called "mill arouses further speculation as to the life of the inhabitants.

It stands 600 feet north of the main buildings, and along the bank of the Wady Kurn, a ruin measuring almost 150 feet in length. Many features of the castle are repeated in it. There are chambers with groined arches, delicate capitals and ornamental keystones. The whole building is divided into sections which, from the character of the rooms, might well have been used to house pilgrims.

As far as the recent excavators could tell, there was no great outer ring wall extending around all the buildings, though in the midst of such formidable enemies a wall of some kind would seem to have been needed. Instead there may have been merely a mound surmounted by a palisade and enclosed by a ditch.

As has been said, the armor finds were disappointing; yet they suffice to throw further light on an obscure subject. The pieces found range from arrows, spear-heads and jazerant scales to the "cannon balls" which, scattered through the rooms near the chapel, bear mute testimony to the fact that stained glass windows formed a target.

All in all, the excavations did not do so much to enrich museums as they did to add to what was hitherto known about the Crusaders. Montfort housed men who demanded the best luxuries and comforts the age afforded. In 1270 they must still have been worthy warriors, however, since Montfort resisted the enemy once before it fell.

A photographer says that most politicians are good sitters.. Unfortunately they are seldom photographed in their characteristic attitude sitting on the fence.

All education does to-day is to develop the memory at the expense of the imagination.—Own Johnson.

Fortune Telling

Skill in Character Reading Helps the Gypsy Girl Tell Your Fortune

"It is all memorized," said a gypsy fortune-teller the other day in explaining her method to a newspaper woman. "It is handed down by word of mouth from generation to generation. All that we learn to acquire is the ability to detect characteristics, mannerisms, of all types of people." Unbending still more, she added, "I said you were nervous. I could tell that from the way your hand twitched when I held it. You also chewed your lips, a sure indication of great nervousness. I saw your wedding ring. It shines with newness. And you are young. You could not have been married long." Lapsing into broken English she spoke of the gipsies, who have about 3,000 fortune-telling booths in this country. "People think we wild. We not wild. We save money and buy property. We rich people, but, like to do this." As the writer tells us, "a swarm of gipsies have established themselves in booths along the coast-wise boardwalks," where "few pleasure-seekers resist the call: 'Tell your past, present, and future for fifty cents? Tell your fortune?' " Published in the New York Times, the article informs us:

Usually the booths are clean. The gipsies have the proud appearance of having recently been bathed and combed; the fingers that lightly hold the hand of the client are well cared for. A pot of ice-water stands on the table across which meet the hands of customer and fortune-teller. The gipsy woman dips her fingers into the pot before going through the motions of reading the lines in a hand at which she glances intermittently.

She allows the hand to rest gently within her own while her glance roves over the clothes, the jewelry, or coiffure of her customers.

Leaning against the outside supports of the booth, which is sheltered from the sun by cheap drapery hung low in the front, stand usually two squat men of dark complexion.. They are the husbands, the winter support of the wives who are their summer support. Their fierce mustachios twirling skyward, their thick hands, their hot black eyes, all aid in forming a picture that reeks of bohemia, a free life and an easy one.

Is it love of adventure that attaches these people to their way of life? Gipsy women scorn the idea, we are told. Said one:

"We own our country home in this town, a long, high, frame house with fourteen light, airy rooms. We American gipsies, we do not roam about the country. We are not like Brazilian gipsies who live in dirty wagons or cars and have no place to call home. in winter we live in New York, on Delancey Street, and send our children to school. They must be educated American children. We live in houses. We are good American gipsies, citizens."

"How many camps are there in this country?" the fortune-teller was asked.

"Oh, I can not say how many gipsy camps there are. Gipsies are divided. There are Brazilian, American, and Roumanian gipsies in this country. Some have their kings still," she said, "but American gipsies have only ene boss. He is Washington, the President. We are not dirty. We try to be good Americans.

"We do not steal, we respectable. We will send our babies to college when they grow up—not be dummy, like mother—father."

Then came the fortune-telling:

"For fifty cents I tell you one hand," the gipsy woman said.. "For dollar I read both hands. You want know all or half?" Only half a fortune was wanted.

"You are very nervous," she droned. "You have been married only a short while. You are in danger of losing your husband to a blonde or brunette, both of whom are also jealous and envy you your good job. Beware of eating too much meat. You understand, understand?" The reading was peppered with her queries: "Understand, understand? Tell the truth, am I right Understand?"

She took up her droning. "You will come into some money soon, you will be very happy. You have had some trouble, little trouble with your husband. You will have more trouble. Watch your temper. . You will take a long journey. You are goodhearted, you do things for everybody, nobody does things for you. You extravagant, you spend money foolish. You buy much clothes; your husband no like, understand? You going have two children, you be very happy, you live sixty-five years. Good luck, make a wish."

When the newspaper woman asked if such predictions as the one about the "blonde or brunette" were not likely to make trouble—

The gipsy shook her head with a wise air. "Oh, no, that only makes love bigger and better. When you are in danger of losing something precious you hold it more dear. I took a chance on believing that you held a job;most modern girls work. And for every girl with a job there are dozens of blondes and brunettes who would like to have that job, so that was a safe statement.

She thought the others fully as safe, and explained:

"The warning to beware of too much meat is always good.

"Every one gets some money. No matter how far away from the time I told your fortune, you would always say I predicted it. Of course, you will be happy; no one unhappy all the time. It is safe to tell any person that they will have trouble, that they must watch their tempers.

"Every one takes journeys, at some time or other. No person thinks his heart is mean, or that he is stingy, or that he doesn't do things for people. A customer always believes that he does things for everybody, but nobody does anything for him..

"It flatters a customer to be told that she is extravagant, that she is well dressed. I took a chance in saying that your husband did not like you to be a spendthrift. Every young married couple has its lover's quarrels, no matter how trivial, and they are always called troubles."

"But what about your prediction of two children and a life of sixty-five years?" the customer asked. The gipsy shrugged her shoulders. .

"Who knows? It makes the fortune nicer!"

Gipsies may stick to fortune-telling "because they like it," but it does not appear that they wholly enjoy being gipsies, for the gipsy woman said, half questioning, half pleading, "I do not look gypsy, I look American?" Finally, as if telling her people's fortune, she remarked: "Some day we all be good American citizens with educated children; then nobody think we gipsies."

A High Flyer.

"I hear Mr. Lark is quite a sport."

"Well, he's a high-flier."

INTERNATIONAL PLOWING MATCH AT LANGSTAFF

Lovers of the straight furrow congregated at the Toronto Municipal Farm recently when the annual International Plowing Match was held under government auspices. Ideal conditions marked the opening day. At Left George Lawson, King P.O., director of the York Plowmen's Association and treasurer of the King and Vaughan Plowmen's Association for 21 years. Now is the Time For Mushrooms

A delicious sauce to be poured over broiled or baked mushrooms may be made by putting the peeled, broken mushroom stalks to simmer in beef juice extracted from round steak just heated.

Mushroom Consomme

Put three-fourths of a pound of fresh mushrooms in a stewpan with one cupful of water, a little salt and papper, one tablespoon of butter and three gratings of nutmeg. Cook over the fire for twenty-five minutes, then press through a coarse sieve. Scald four cups of sweet milk, and when it reaches the boiling point add to it two tablespoons of sifted flour and one tablespoon of butter creamed together. When the mixture thickens add the mushrooms. Just before taking from the stove to serve add one-half cup of sweet cream. Serve with crisp wafers. Four or five servings.

Mushroom and Veal Loaf

Chop two pounds of cold roast veal very fine, mince one dozen olives and one dozen large mushrooms. Mix all together in a bowl and season it with salt, pepper and onion juice. Have ready one cup of strained gravy or stock and wet the mixture with it. Unless the gravy is quite thick it is well to add one-third package of gelatin. The mixture should not be too soft. Pack in greased mold and set in a pan of boiling water. Put in the oven and cook an hour. When cold and set turn out. Six to eight servings.

Another Loaf

One pound mushrooms, peeled, cut fine, one-half pound fresh pork, two pounds veal, one cup bread crumbs, one-fourth cup milk, juice and rind of one lemon, three eggs, two tablespoons butter, juice of half onion, salt and pepper to taste and a rash of mace.

Put the veal and pork through a meat chopper, soften the bread crumbs in milk, add the seasoning, half of the mushrooms and the beaten eggs.

Shape in an oblong loaf and place in a shallow pan; dredge with flour. Lay several thin slices of bacon on top of the loaf and pour a little water in the baking pan. Bake forty minutes. Baste the loaf frequently with the juice in the pan. Serves eight persons.

Thicken the sauce with butter, season well and add the remainder of the mushrooms, which have been cooked separately, and pour around the loaf on a serving platter.

Macaroni and Mushrooms

Have prepared one-fourth pound of cooked macaroni, drained. Melt one tablespoonful of butter and cook one-half cup or more of mushrooms, broken, and sprinkled with one teaspoon of lemon juice. Cook gently for five minutes and sprinkle over two tablespoons of flour and stir. Add one and one-fourth cups of milk and stir until the mixture boils. Add two tablespoons of butter, salt and pepper to taste; then add the macaroni and reheat over hot water. Turn into a hot serving dish, sprinkle with cheese and serve as soon as the cheese is melted. Four servings.

Mushrooms and Crabmeat

This is after the Spanish way of serving this delicious dish. (It may be made in a chafing dish.) Cook until brown two tablespoons of butter with one spoon of minced pepper (green or red), one-half teaspoon of minced onion and one tablespoon of tomato catsup. To a cream sauce add the pepper mixture with half cup of crabmeat and the same amount of mushrooms that have been cooked in butter. Four servings.

Baked Mushrooms

Peel, wash and drain mushroms. Place them in a buttered dish or baking pan. Season to taste with salt, pepper, lemon juice and minced parsley. Cook in a moderate over fifteen minutes, basting occasionally with butter; arrange on a hot serving dish and pour the gravy over them. Serve with parsley cream sauce made as follows: Scald one cup of thick cream, add one tablespoon of minced parsley, two tablespoons of butter, a dash of cayenne pepper, salt to taste, one tablespoon of thick white sauce and two tablespoon of lemon juice. Reheat over hot water. Four servings.

Mushrooms and Oysters

Peel the caps of fresh mushrooms and saute in butter, then place in a small shallow pan buttered, cap side up. Place on each a large oyster, sprinkle with salt, pepper and bits of butter. Hold each oyster and mushrooms together with a little wooden pick. Bake in a hot oven until the oysters are plump. Remove to small plates and around each pour Bechamel sauce. This is made as follows: Cook one and one-half cups of chicken stock with one slice each of onion and carrot, a bit of bay leaf and parsley and six peppercorns; cook twenty minutes. Strained, there should be one cup. Melt one-fourth cup of butter, add one-fourth cup of flour, stir until well blended and add the stock with salt, pepper and a dash of cayenne pepper. Beat one egg yolk slightly, add to the sauce with a few drops of strong beef extract.

The spell of fine weather experienced of late is due no doubt to the fact that the majority of weather experts are now away on their holidays.

So far as I remember, nobody ever asked whether the bathing beauty could swim.—Henry Ruggles.

DEBILITY DUE TO INDIGESTION

Perfect Digestion Comes Through Rich, Red Blood.

There can be no perfect digestion unless you have rich, red blood. This is scientifically true. It is also true that there is no tonic for the stomach that is not a tonic for every other part of the body. The way, then, to tone up the stomach is to tone up the blood.

The many so-called stomach remedies merely try to digest your food for you. How much better it is to tone up the stomach so that it will do its own work as nature intended. There is no pleasure in eating predigested food. Tone up your stomach and your appetite and digestion will soon be normal.

If your digestion is weak and your blood thin you need the help of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to enrich the blood and restore strength. In addition use care in the selection of your food and your stomach trouble will soon pass away. Mr. Gordon Dundas, Peterboro, Ont., tells as follows what this medicine did for him. . He says: "Something over a year ago I was a gasoline salesman when I was taken sick. I felt miserable and lost twelve pounds in weight. I did not sleep well and could not eat as I could scarcely retain anything in my stomach. I went to a local doctor who told me the fumes of the gas had got into my system. He gave me some medicine and told me I had better go to the country for a change of air. I did so, but I still felt listless and groggy, and had no ambition. . On the advice of a friend I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had not been taking the pills long before I was beginning to rest better, and to eat fairly well. I kept on taking the pills until at the end of the seventh box I knew I did not need any more, as I had gained the weight I had lost, slept well and could eat anything. I have since had splendid health and cannot say too much in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cts. a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Napoleon's Elba Villa Falling into Ruin

The villa built by Napoleon, on the Island of Elba, in which he had probably intended to spend his declining years, is falling into decay. It was at one time the property of Anatole Demidoff, a Russian Prince, who purchased it from the Bonaparte family. Near by, the Prince built a museum in which costly paintings and sculptures were interspersed among many relics of the "Little Corporal." A collection of Sevres porcelain in the museum was said to be the finest in the world.

In 1872 Anatole Demidoff died and his nephew, Prince Paul, sold the contents of the museum at auction, including a tooth of the Emperor's, extracted when he was a child, and a lock of his hair taken from his head after his death at St. Helena.

Signor Gray, a Fascist member of the Italian Parliament, recently paid a visit to Elba. He viewed the condition of the historic villa with surprise, and has decided, it is said, to bring the matter before Mussolini. Il Duce at one time referred to Elba as "ferruginous and Napoleonic." It is no longer the former, because all of the iron mines have been exhausted. And only prompt aid, it is reported, can prevent the latter attribute's becoming likewise inapplicable.

A Province-Wide Campaign To Prevent Motor Accidents

Highway Safety Committee Takes Spectacular Steps to Make for Greater "Traffic Consciousness" — Laws and Regulations to be Rigidly Enforced

An interesting campaign has commenced in Ontario with the idea of lessening appreciably the number of motor car accidents. While a concentrated effort in accident prevention began on October 7 to last for a couple of weeks, the plan is to continue the work permanently in the hope that Ontario's streets and highways will be more safe for both motorists and pedestrians.

A serious problem has arisen in Ontario because of the sudden increase in the number of motor vehicles. At present nearly 400,000 cars are owned in the province. Even with this number the question of accident prevention would be of considerable proportions, but at certain times the number of visiting motor cars equals the number owned. Several counts last summer established this fact so that Ontario has to deal with nearly 800,000 individual motor drivers. The chances are that this number will be exceeded during the touring season of 1928.

Form Special Committee

To the end that accidents may be greatly lessened, a Highway Safety Committee has been formed. The executive of this committee has as its chairman the Ontario Minister of Highways, Hon. George S. Henry and the other members are W. G. Robertson, Secretary of the Ontario Motor League; J. F. H. Wyse, Secretary of the Ontario Safety League; S. J. Dickson, Chief of Police, Toronto; T. Marshall, Secretary of the Ontario Board of Trade; J. P. Bickell, Registrar of Motor Vehicles; and R. M. Smith, Acting Deputy Minister of Highways. Co-operating is an advisory committee comprising all editors, heads of municipal governments, police chiefs, presidents of boards of trade, automobile clubs and service clubs.

The executive have held a number of meetings during which every phase of the situation was discussed. The views of all experts were canvassed and finally boiled down to the conclusion that motor car accidents can be prevented by the exercise of common sense and courtesy. It was felt that the province had sufficient laws and regulations affecting motors. The next step was to impress the individual driver with a sene of his or her responsibility. It was ascertained that many drivers with years of experience had failed to realize the great increase in traffic, while the motor car had become so common that new drivers had not appreciated its dangers. In other words an effort had to be made to get the public "traffic conscious." Coming to concrete cases it was found that most accidents, the human element being excluded, arose from defective brakes, defective steering gear and glaring headlights. Of these, defective brakes provided by far the most common source of accidents.

"Traffic Consciousness"

It was determined first to arouse this traffic consciousness in the public by a publicity campaign And this campaign was to be backed up by a rigid enforcement of laws and regulations. Co-operation was readily secured throughout the province on the part of the police, heads of municipal governments, and the traffic patrol officers.

Striking advertisements calling attention to the need of more care in accident prevention are appearing in most papers throughout Ontario. Posters are hung in every garage and filling station and stickers with the words "I'm for Care and Courtesy, Are YOU?" have been sent to every filling station and garage to be pasted in the lower right hand corner of windshields. Half a million of these stickers have already been sent out. Information was supplied to practically every newspaper so that the editors might call attention to what was being atempted. This information was used in many ways in the newspapers. The radio stations and motion picture houses also co-operated. Prominent men and experts on safety gave talks over the radio, the first one being given by Hon. Mr. Henry. Billboards are also used, so that nothing has been overlooked to arouse what officials call "traffic consciousness."

In the meantime officials of the Ontario Department of Highways are doing all in their power to suppress reckless driving, and those drivers who cut into traffic. It is planned to weed out such drivers by cancelling their licenses. Of course no mercy is being shown those who attempt to drive while under the influence of liquor. Drivers who suffer from any physical or mental infirmity that makes them a menace on the highway will also be refused licenses.

During September 54 convictions were registered for intoxication when in charge of motor cars. The penalties imposed varied from seven to thirty days, while every driver so convicted had his license to operate and his motor vehicle permit suspended. They could not drive and their cars were tied up. During the same month 68 motor vehicle permits were suspended for reckless driving and these drivers were prohibited from driving any car for periods ranging from three days to two years.

British Pedestrian Carries Motor Horn

London.—The Japanese police injunction to motorists to "tootle with vigor" in warning of their approach now has been emulated by a pedestrian in Southampton. A citizen who dislikes what Lord Dewar called "surviving by leaps and bounds" has fastened a small but strident motor horn to his walking stick and sounds it when about to cross a street.

The disconcerted motorists—hearing the warning but not seeing a motor—invariably pull up while the pedestrian calmly crosses the road.

Terrible Backache

Hamilton, Ont.—"After my baby was born I had terrible backache and headaches. I could not do my work and felt tired from the first minute I got up. But worst of all were the pains in my sides when I moved about. I had to sit or lie down for a while afterwards. I could keep my house in order, but many things had to go undone at the time, because of my ailments. I was told by a neighbor to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as she said it would build me up. I was relieved before I had taken the first we bought and have not had any trouble like it since."—Mrs. T. MRS. ISOBEL McCRIMMON

(Ottawa Evening Journal)

Mrs. Isobel McCrimmon, mother of Rev. John R. McCrimmon, pastor of Bethany United Church at Almonte died suddenly at her home in that town Saturday morning.

She was 92 years of age and had been in good health until three weeks ago, when she fell and fractured her hip. Apparently she was on the road to recovery when she collapsed Saturday morning from a heart attack.

Mrs. McCrimmon who was formerly Isobel Fraser, was born at Glengarry Ont., but lived most of her life at Vankleek Hill. With her son she moved to Almonte 18 months ago. Her husband, Roderick McCrimmon died 26 years ago.

A funeral service was held at Almonte on Sunday afternoon which was attended by members of the district clergy and many friends Among the clergy who took part in the service were Rev. Jas. Blanchard, Trinity United Church; Rev. Mr. Sample Smiths Falls, Rev. Wm. McCracken, and Rev. J. M. Rutherford of the Presbyterian Churches. Burial took place at Vankleek Hill.

COLQUHOUN YOUNG LADY SHOWERED

A miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Aden Durant on Friday evening, October 22nd in honor of their daughter, Beatrice.

Games and music made the evening very enjoyable for about sixty-five young people. At 11.30 the gathering was called to order and five young people had a mock marriage which was much fun for everyone. After this the bride-to-be was asked to come forward and an address was read by Mrs. Bernice Barclay and at the proper moment the Misses Dora Hanson and Verna McLean carried in a lovely decorated basket well filled with beautiful gifts of Chinaware, Silverware, Aluminum, Linen, Etc. Following is the address:

"Dear Beatrice:

We're here because we heard those approaching wedding bells ringing very loudly in your direction. Soon you will be stepping forth from the maiden beauties of life's morning to a larger and nobler career.

Before you enter that untrodden path, we gather round you and wish you and him whom you will call "husband", long life and joy and peace.

You, Beatrice, will soon be leaving behind all the sweet associates of your glad young days; but you take wth you into your larger life of wedded womanhood the very best wishes of us all.

From this happy time we look out on your life and hope it may be radiant and serene.

We herewith present to you these slight tokens in regard and esteem we have for you, and trust as you daily use many of them, they will bring to your memory this happy time and many others in the by-gone days.

Signed on behalf of the crowd,
Vera A. McLean.
Dora J. Hanson.

Miss Durant thanked them all very kindly for their gifts and invited them all to visit her in the near future at her new home.

All joined in singing "For she's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Refreshments were served by the young ladies and the party broke up in the wee' sma' hours of the morning.

I'll tell you why I'm going to buy a Westinghouse

"Those new Westinghouse Sets are great! I was over at Bill's last night to hear the radio he's been talking so much about. Oh boy, its some set. There's as much difference between it and an ordinary set as there is between this car and my old bus.

"When you think it over, it's just what you'd expect from Westinghouse. They were the poineers of both Alternating Current and Radio so you'd expect them to build the most advanced models operating on the lighting circuit.

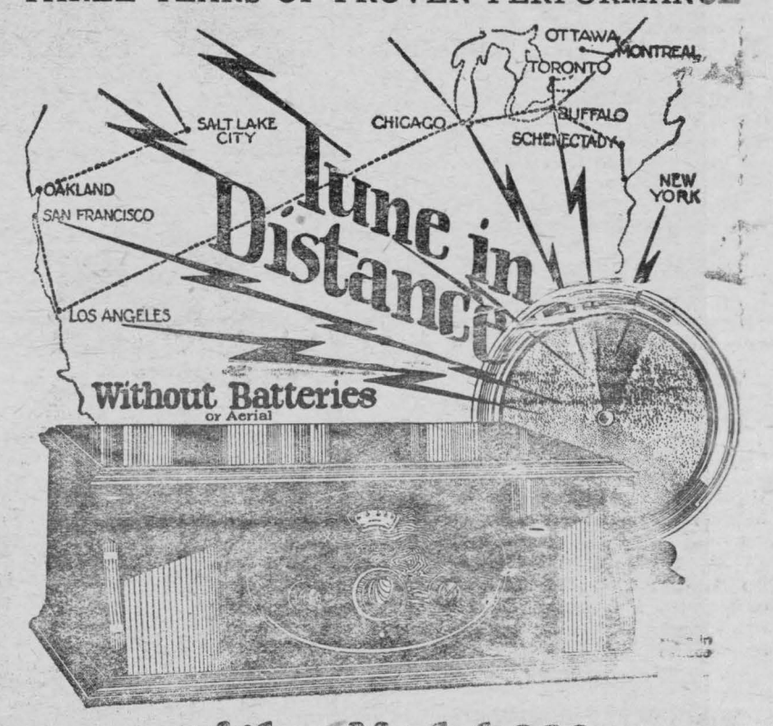

"And another thing, Westinghouse have selected the most competent radio merchants in town as Westinghouse Dealers."

We will gladly demonstrate the 1928 Westinghouse models and explain the many improvements that make them better.

All at Sea

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Death strikes Garrett Folsom while bathing at Ocean Town, N.J. After being perfunctarily examined by a doctor, the body is brought to the Hotel Majusaca, where an inquiry is starter.

Folsom's bathing companions had been Roger Neville, Mrs. Helen Barnaby and Carmelita Valdon. It is established that Folsom, just before his death, had been standing next to Ned Barron, known as the copper king.

Then the startling announcement is made that Folsom had been stabbed to death in the water. Ross, his valet, is questioned, as are Barron and his wife, but no light is shed on the mystery.

Anastasia Folsom, eccentric and masterful sister of the dead man, arrives and takes command. At the inquest it is established that the death weapon was a pichaq, an Oriental knife, and that it and its scabbard had been purchased on the boardwalk.

It is also established that Croydon Sears is a fancier of curious knives. Anastasia engages Titus Riggs to work on the case. He asks permission to go through the dead man's effects.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Anastasia Folsom was not at all unkindly, but she was straightforward and direct of speech and her eyes flashed with a sort of veiled warning.

"Your father bought several daggers at that auction?"

"Two, madam," said Robin, quietly.

"What for?"

"As he stated at the inquest, to add to his collection."

"Yes, I heard him. Why did he go out late, on a stormy night, to buy daggers for his collection?"

"Because that was the night on which the auction was held. Mr. Meeker also bought daggers at that sale."

"I know that. But Mr. Meeker was not acquainted with my brother. Your father was."

"I don't think he was, Miss Folsom, though I am not sure. But, even so, he had a perfect right to buy antique curios if he chose."

"Oh, yes, a perfect right. That is, if he bought them for antique curios. But if he bought them for use as deadly weapons, his right is not so unquestionable."

Robin had had about all he could stand.

Naturally courteous, he hesitated to speak sternly to a woman; yet he felt the time had come.

Tite Riggs was watching him closely; so was Pelton.

Neville and the two women with him had taken chairs nearby, and were curiously listening to this dialogue.

Anastasia Folsom was regarding Robin Sears with an eager gaze that held in it not so much of enmity as inquiry, almost as if she hoped for some plausible and satisfactory explanation.

But Robin was at the end of his rope. The words "deadly weapons had so roused his ire that he felt a direct response was called for.

"Miss Folsom," he said, "my father did buy those daggers for his collection. But your insinuation is too definite to be ignored, and I think I must ask you to cross to the other side of the deck and say to him what you have said to me."

"I shall be very glad to do so," Anastasia said, rising at once. "Come with me, Dan. And you, too, Mr. Riggs. No one else."

And led by Robin, white-faced and flashing-eyed, they crossed to where Croydon Sears sat reading a newspaper.

"Dad," Robin said, "will you put down your paper, please?"

"Surely," said Sears, rising as Miss Folsom drew near.

She spoke at once.

"I am here to ask you, Mr. Sears," she began, "about the daggers you bought at the auction last Thursday night."

"Yes, Miss Folsom; what about them?"

Croydon Sears was what is often called a gentleman of the old school. He had a fine old-fashioned courtesy, and though not an old man, he showed a polite deference in conversation not generally seen in to-day's social intercourse.

"You bought two, that were among the finer specimens of the lot, I understand."

"You have been correctly informed; I did."

"Then you left the sale room, in company with Mr. Meeker?"

"Yes, I did."

"Then where did you go?"

"I walked a bit on the boardwalk."

"Up or down?"

"Oh, both ways. Just a stroll back and forth. Then home to my hotel."

"Not going into the sale room again?"

"No, Miss Folsom."

The quiet tone carried an impression of veracity and composure, but a close observer might have seen a slight quiver of Sears' lips, a slight throbbing of a pulse in his cheek, and a nervous movement of his hands.

At any rate, his son saw these things and marveled, for he knew they meant his father was disturbed in some way, and he failed to connect it with Miss Folsom's catechizing.

"Mr. Sears," the insistent lady went on, "I have no reason to suspect you of any complicity in my brother's death. I have no motive to attribute to you, no evidence to point your way, and no clue that suggests you. But I am investigating every possible avenue of inquiry, and so, since you can have no object in refusing to answer, I ask you where you were in the ocean at the time my brother met his death."

Croydon Sears looked at her calmly.

"My dear madam," he said, "I am truly sorry for you. I know how anxious you are to learn the slayer of your brother, and I am glad to be of any help I can. I do not resent your questions, for I know they are the desperate efforts of an anguished heart. As to my position in the ocean that morning, I can only say I was bathing in the midst of a crowd of people a long distance away from the spot where your brother met his death. As many near me can testify, I was standing near the next rope, fully fifty feet away from the rope at which Mr. Folsom was standing. It would therefore have been impossible for me to commit that crime, even if it had been one of my daggers which was used—and, as you know, it was not mine."

At that moment, Ned Barron, in search of his friend, Croydon Sears, came up to the group.

Seeing the earnest discussion in progress, he paused, uncertain whether to interrupt.

Then he gathered a few words that told him of Miss Folsom's attitude toward Sears, and catching sight of Robin's anxious face, he stepped forward.

"Can I help?" he said, pleasantly. "Is this another inquest?"

"No, Ned," Sears said soberly, "but you may as well corroborate my statement that I was fifty feet or more away down the beach from Mr. Folsom at the time he was stabbed with the dagger."

"Why—er—were you? Yes, so you were."

Clearly Ned Barron had no recollection of Sears' whereabouts at the moment in question, but he was quite evidently willing and anxious to assist his friend, and ready to back up his word.

"You remember, then," Miss Folsom said quickly, "that Mr. Sears was some distance up the beach when my brother fell under the water?"

"Yes, yes—I remember perfectly."

"By the next rope, up the beach—that is, north," went on the inexorable voice, and staring into her face, almost as if hypnotized, Barron repeated, "Yes, up the beach—north."

"No, Ned," Sears said, " I was down the beach, toward the south. I fear your observation was not at its best."

"I AM HERE TO ASK YOU, MR. SEARS," SHE BEGAN, "ABOUT THE DAGGERS YOU BOUGHT AT AUCTION LAST THURSDAY NIGHT."

"I think your corroboration is worthless," Miss Folsom said, contemptuously.

"And I think we are on the verge of a revelation," said Dan Pelton, taking up the gauntlet. "Mr. Sears, I am here to help my aunt in her endeavors to find the man who stabbed my uncle. Like her, I have no reason to suspect you of any hand in the crime. But I am ready to say that your answers to her questions just now have not been very satisfactory, and your friend's backing up, though nobly attempted, fell down badly."

"Let me in on this," said Tite Riggs, in his suave fashion. "I make no doubt, Mr. Sears, that you can prove an alibi, and do not let that phrase frighten you. Any innocent person can prove an alibi; it is the guilty man who makes up one that he can't prove. Now, will you tell us who were near you, as you were in the ocean at a point say, about fifty feet away from Mr. Folsom, to the south?"

"Why, yes, certainly. Let me see, there was—it's strange, but I can't for the moment think of anyone I know. You see, I know so few people down here, and my son had just left me to swim far out into the breakers, with—"

"Yes, with whom?"

"I should prefer to leave the lady's name out of it, but it was his fiancee."

"That's all right," said Miss Folsom, impatiently; "we're not concerned with Mr. Robin Sears or the girl he's engaged to. It's Mr. Croydon Sears who interests me, and I want someone who will verify his statement that he was not near my brother when he died. Surely that is not too much to ask, when I am so deeply concerned in my quest for the truth."

"No, Miss Folsom, that is not too much to ask," and Tite Riggs' lips shut tight together, a habit of his when much perplexed. "But, of course, Mr. Sears, you can satisfy the lady's requirement. There must have been someone about whom you knew. Or some one you can describe, even if you are unaware of his name."

"Oh, yes," cried Croydon Sears, at that. "I distinctly remember a man in a bright green bathing suit. Shirt and trunks, both of bright, grass green. It struck me as unusual, and so I noticed it."

A MODISH FROCK

There is nothing smarter than the coat dress for daytime wear, and the style pictured here has most slenderizing lines. An inverted plait at each seam provides for the necessary fulness, and the clever arrangement of the collar is new. There is a set-in pocket at the right side, and the sleeves are dart-fitted or loose. Buttons are sewn in groups at the left side and are the only adornment on this chic frock. No. 1667 is in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Size 38 requires 3⅝ yards 39-inch, or 3 yards 54-inch material. Price 20 cents the pattern.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Cariboo Road Toll is To Be Abolished

Victoria, B.C.—Abolition of tolls on the Cariboo Road, the only toll road in British Columbia, was forecast at the public works department here. It is expected the Legislature at its next session will arrange for the elimination of the present charges in the spring. This will affect thousands of American as well as Canadian motorists who are planning to cover the new route along the Fraser river canyon in 1928.

Some 7000 cars traveled the road during the present year, a total up to the expectations of the Government, but considerably below the estimates of automobile and tourist organizations. Tolls will be lifted from the road on Nov. 1 for the winter, but no attempt will be made to keep the road open during the entire winter season, when gravel slides are sure to block it in places. In the spring the highway will be made ready for use well in advance of the tourist season.

Girl Midshipman Tells Adventures

Served for More Than a Year on Small Trading Ships in the South Seas

Cannibal Sought her Hand

Says She Refused Chief, But That He Gave Her a Coral Island in the Fijis

After an adventurous trip of more than a year in the South Seas, spent mostly on small trading steamships as a midshipman, Miss Viola Irene Cooper has just returned to New York. Last week at her home, 65 West Sixtyeighth Street, Miss Cooper, who is still in the twenties, told of her adventures in far corners of the earth and the rough-and-tumble life at sea as a "middy," the only woman in the crew.

One of her most thrilling experiences, she said, was a proposal of marriage from a former cannibal chief. This happened at the island of Malekulo during a two months' cruising trip among the islands of the New Hebrides. The chief she described as about 45 and very good-looking.

"He proposed to me," said Miss Cooper, "just like an American would buy a good piece of roast beef. But I smilingly refused his offer, and he seemed very much surprised and disappointed. To show me how much he admired me, I guess, the chief presented an island in the Fijis, five miles square, having coral and cocoanut palms to me. When I asked him what I should send him in return, when I got back home, he asked for a Prince Albert coat, a silk hat and a pair of yellow spats. I suppose he had seen a photograph of one of the European monarchs."

Tired of Routine Here.

Miss Cooper explained she had made the trip purely in the spirit of adventure after becoming tired out with the routine in New York of typewriting and stenography and other secretarial work, and being of a literary turn of mind, she was putting her experiences in manuscript form, and was hoping some day to have them published under the title of "Windpamming in Fiji."

She sailed from Vancouver in 1926 with a fellow-voyager, Miss Jean Schoen, on the French bark Bougainville, first christened Himalaya, later known as the Star of Peru, a three-masted vessel that has been sailing the high seas for sixty-three years, and known as a "jinxless ship."

The two girls were signed as midshipmen, studying navigation, and the rest of the crew was made of Frenchmen and South Sea Islanders.. Captain Lem Chateauvieu was in command of the bark, which was on her last voyage to a port in New Caledonia, there to rust away her last days as a warehouse barge.

Crews Always Courteous.

"Miss Schoen and I spent sixty days on the windjammer, and when she was turned into a warehouse in the New Hebrides that did not end our careers as seamen. My succeeding months of service were on a small trading steamer in the New Hebrides, the St. Michel, then on the St. Andre, another small French steamer, on a trip to Australia, when I was the only woman on board with a crew of fifty persons of many nationalities, and, lastly, on the Commandant Destremeau, that brought me to San Francisco.

"I was never troubled while at sea by any of the crew. . They were always most courteous to me. I carried just one small trunkful of clothes and when I arrived in New Hebrides I cast my dresses aside, bought goods from the traders and made my own. I also carried a typewriter and a revolver.

While we were anchored in the St. Michel in the South Sea Islands, during our two months' stay there, Miss Schoen slept on a mattress on the dining table, on account of the rats in the cabin. "While in the New Hebrides we had about fifteen earthquakes a day, and we could feel the ship shaking and the ashes from the two active volcanos on the islands in our faces. Once the French traders in the port sought refuge on our ship.

"I have eaten most everything in a crew's diet. I ate shark's fins, snails, sea snakes, flying fox, aform of bat, which is delicious, and in the Fijis I enjoyed the wonderful fruits. There we had mangoes, pawpaws, yams and taro."

Miss Cooper said that Miss Schoen left her in the New Hebrides for a trip to New ealand and was returning to New York by way of Europe. On the island of Malekulo, she said, she visited a Mrs. Boyd, a Presbyterian missionary, who had been there twenty-six years, and her husband, who had been there thirty-two years.. Mrs. Boyd said she had not seen a white woman, before the arrival of herself and Miss Schoen, for a year.

Always Familiar.

"Is she familiar with professional men?"

"Always, my dear."

One time on the Texas frontier a man came into a camp riding an old mule.

"How much for the mule?" asked a bystander.

"Jist a hundred dollars," answered the rider.

"I'll give you five dollars," said the other.

The rider stopped short, as if in amazement, and then slowly dismounted.

"Stranger," said he, "I ain't a-goin' to let a little matter of ninety-five dollars stand between me and a mule trade. The mule's yourn."

FORESTRY AVIATOR KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

The Plane An Old Model Developed Engine Trouble While Attempting to Reach River to Land

PILOT KILLED—OBSERVER INJURED

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—Pilot Jeff Fitchie, 30, of the Ontario Air Force, died, and Assistant Pilot Alan S. Grant, 23, is at death's door, as a result of an accident in the Michigan Soo at noon to-day, when their plane crashed 500 feet to earth in an old grass pasture. Fitchie was badly broken up, one of his feet being wrenched off at the ankle, both legs and skull fractured, with other injuries sufficient to cause death. Grant was badly crushed about the chest. The machine is a total wreck.

Engine trouble developed as the plane was circling over the Sault.

It appeared as though Fitchie was attempting to make the river to land. As he settled above the field and saw that a crash was imminent, he circled, and just before the crash righted the plane to a 45 degree angle to avoid a nose dive. The nose of the plane plunged into the soft earth, and as it slid along at terrific speed struck a plow-ridge and piled up.

A MASS OF WRECKAGE.

The fuselage and pilot and observer cockpits were telescoped. One wing flew to one side, while the other was crushed to bits under the weight of the engine. Among the mass of wreckage, with the danger of fire imminent, were the two airmen, unconscious, their bodies crushed.

It was believed to be due to the handling of the plane by Pilot Fitchie that both men did not die on the spot. The motor went "dead." Instead of losing presence of mind, Fitchie coasted on his wings and when he saw that a crash was unavoidable, selected the hayfield, where he hoped by coasting to make the fall as gentle as possible.

A nose dive would have set the plane afire, it is believed. One gasoline tank, the indicator showed, was nearly full. The other was nearly empty. The needles were pointing to the tank content at the time of the crash. The force of the fall crushed the tanks, and the contents of both were spilled. Guy wires, bits of cloth, steel supports, engine parts, fuselage and the motor were piled up in one heap. One wing was practically intact, indicating that when the plane struck the ridge it lurched, turned on its side, and ground the other wing beneath.

PLANE AN EARLY MODEL.

Fitchie was declared to be an expert pilot, and Grant was assistant pilot. Fitchie came from Ireland but a few weeks ago to accept a position on the staff. The plane they were driving was one of the early ones used in Ontario forest patrol work. It was similar to that driven by "Duke" Schiller, of overseas flying fame.

The accident marks the first serious crash in the history of the Ontario division.

Neither Fitchie nor Grant is married.

DROWNING CLAIMS FIVE OVER WEEK END

Three Toronto Youths Perish When Launch Burns—Two Sand Lake Young Men are Missing

With the father and frother of the trio awaiting their safe arrival on shore three young Toronto men lost their lives in a week-end tragedy when the launch in which they were sailing from Sturgeon Bay to Victoria Harbor took fire and burned until it sank.

The affair was practically witnessed by Mr. Davis, Sr., who stood on the shore with his 12-year-old son, Joe, awaiting the arrival of the launch in order that he might motor its three occupants back to Toronto. While the small craft was still a half-mile off shore smoke was seen to arise from it by Wesley Ball, the son of a local baker. Ball immediately took his own launch and put out into the bay, but by the time that he arrived where the ill-fated launch had been, there was only a cap, a sweater, some oars, and other small wreckage floating about the surface. The time of the fatality was about 10.30 o'clock Saturday morning.

The victims were:

Frank Mason, 30 years of age, married, a steamfitter, employed by Claude Davis, of 45 Sellers avenue.

Fred Davis, 16 years of age, a plumber, employed by his father, Claude Davis, of 45 Sellers avenue.

Leonard Terry, 20 years of age, a steamfitter's apprentice, also employed by Mr. Davis, and living at 239 Arlington avenue.

SAND LAKE TRAGEDY.

Scotia Junction, Oct. 23.—All day yesterday and today settlers of the Sand Lake district have been dragging Sand Lake for the bodies of two natives of that community, Stanley Cook, aged 27, and Charles McCann, aged 21, who are believed to have been drowned while fishing on Friday morning.

Shansi Troops Falling Back

Retreat Continues After the Failure of Drive on Chinese Capital

Peking.—The success of the Northern troops in reoccupying Kalgan, north of Peking, as confirmed from foreign sources, has restored the position of the war front to virtually that of three weks ago, when hostilities broke out with the drive on Peking of a great Shansi army.

Although the war front has been restored, the northerners have succeeded in gaining the initiative on all sectors, have badly weakened the Shansi power of resistance and have gained in addition the important railroad centre of Shihchiachwang also known as Chentow, whence they will be able either to launch an invasion of Shansi or easily prevent a further flank menace in case Marshal Chang Tsolin, the Manchurian War Lord, decides to occupy the province of Honan.

Shang Chen, the defeated Shansi general on the northern front, continued his retreat after abandoning Kalgan which had been captured less than two weeks ago. The Manchurian forces made an unopposed entry into the city, whereupon the residents, who for the past 10 days have been displaying the Nationalist banner, ran up the five-barred Republican flag.

Gen. Chang Tsung-chang, commander of the Shantung troops of the northern alliance, has ocupied the towns of Kweiteh and Kaocheng-Ho in eastern Honan and apparently is not being opposed by Feng Yuhsiang, whose troops are proceeding westward along the Lunghai Railway, concentrating at Chengchow and Honanfu further to the southwest.

It is believed here that Fen intends to withdraw his forces across the Province of Honan westward to Shensi through the Tungkwan pass whence he came out five months ago at the time that the northern troops met with reverses in Honan.

Despite continued reports of guerrilla raiding by Shansi parties in the vicinity of Peking, no confirmation can be had of the presence of hostile troops near the northern capital, and foreign military experts now believe that the threat to Peking has been ended.

Jugoslavia Press Lays Blame on Italy

Assassination of Minister Aimed at Balkan Unity

Belgrade.—The assassination of the Albanian Minister to Prague, who at the same time was Minister to Belgrade, has created a painful impression here, especially after the recent outrages by the Bulgarian comitadjis, and it is considered as a new attempt against the consolidation of the Balkans.

The entire press lays the blame for the crime on Rome, and stresses the fact that Tsena Bey was an advocate for friendly relations between Albania and Jugoslavia and an enemy to the Italophil policy of Ahmed Bey Zogu.

The daily paper, Vreme, writes that the Bulgarian Macedonian committee and the Italophil regime of Zogu against the great idea of the Balkans for the Balkan people and the rapprochement of the Balkan nations, but the idea, it says, must win in the end. The recent assassination of the Serbian, General Kovatchevitch, by the Bulgarian comitadjis and the shooting of Tsena Bey cannot destroy this saving idea.

British Start Flight to East

Four Planes Embark on Service Trip of 11 Months to India and Australia

London.—Four flying boats left from Plymouth on a Far Eastern cruise.

London.—The flight from Plymouth of four Southampton flying boats is regarded as the most ambitious service flight which has yet been attempted. Their approximate dates are as follows:

Leave England Oct. 17, arrive Karachi November; leave Karachi January, arrive Calcutta February; arrive Singapore March; leave Singapore May, arrive North Australia June; arrive Melbourne July; leave Melbourne August; leave Australia September, arrive Singapore, September.

They will then remain at Singapore for a time, and probably undertake a further tour in Far Eastern waters. The boats will be under command of Group Captain H. M. Cave-Browne-Cave, D.S.O.

The route from Plymouth will be via Hourtin (near Bordeaux) overland to the Mediterranean seaplane base, at Berre, down the Italian coast, calling at Naples and Brindisi, via Suda Bay to Alexandretta, across the Syrian desert which involves a land flight of 150 miles, to the Persian Gulf and Karachi.

They will then coast round India and Ceylon to Calcutta, thence to Akyab, Rangoon, Singapore and the Dutch East India Islands to Australia.

Sofia to Apply Martial Law With Firmness

Bulgarian Cabinet in Special Session—Action to Be Taken Against Raids

Sofia.—The Prime Minister, Andrei Liaptcheff, has formally opened the special session of the National Assembly called to confirm the Cabinet's decision to introduce martial law in Petrich and Kustendil, districts inhabited largely by Bulgarian Macedonians and reputed to be the centre of activity of the Macedonian revolutionary organization which has recently admitted the commission of many outrages in South Serbia.

At the close of Saturday's meeting, which lasted only 15 minutes, Mr. Liaptcheff assembled the government representatives who comprise 170 out of the 270 members of Parliament and announced that the Government has the will and the power to deal with all elements disposed to disturb the peace.

Atanas Bouroff, the Foreign Minister, described the development and events of the last 10 days, emphasized the necessity for preventing all complications, declared that the Bulgarian Government neither approved nor supported the terroristic activity in neighboring states and expressed the Government's determination to apply martial law firmly but without resorting to brutal measures.

Parliamentary debates on the bill approving and introducing martial law will begin next Tuesday.

Count Jacques De Lesseps Now Given Up as Lost

Son-in-Law of Late Sir William Mackenzie Noted Railway Magnet Lost in Air Plane Accident in Lower St. Lawrence

Quebec, Que.—With the finding of the baragraph of the hydroplane in which Count DeLesseps and his mechanic, Chinchinoff, started out on a flight from Gaspe to Val Brilliant, and failed to reach their destination, it has been definitely established that the plane crashed at 4.01 p.m. on Tuesday, three hours after the fliers left Gaspe. Aviation experts state that the baragraph would stop immediately the machine was submerged.

Despite the combined efforts of Provincial and Federal Government searching parties over the week-end, no trace has been found of the two missing men. A hydroplane surveyed the district without result.

Any hope which existed that the men would be found alive has been abandoned. It was pointed out that most of the small boats which would have been in the vicinity where the plane fell have since touched port and that there was no probability that the fliers had been picked up.

Count De Lesseps was well known in Toronto and Kirkfield. He was the son of the builder of the Suez Canal and a fearless fiier. One of the first to take up aviation, he was invaluable to France during the war, but being an ardent Royalist did not receive all the recognition his bravery merited.

His wife, formerly Grace Mackenzie, daughter of Sir William Mackenzie, the late railway magnate, and two sons survive him.

85,000 U.S. Tourists Entered at Windsor

Only Five Per Cent. Asked About Liquor Permits, Says Report

Detroit, Mich.—During the summer months, following repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act, more than 85,000 automobile tourists from the United States visited interior Ontario via the Detroit-Essex route alone, according to statiscis compiled by the Essex County Automobile Club.

The club, which has charge of issuance of automobile touring permits to aliens passing into the interior of the province through Windsor, estimates "conservatively" that these tourists spent more than $2,000,000. The automobile tourists are estimated to have numbered less than a tenth of the total non-touring aliens who visited Windsor only.

The interesting observation that a majority of the tourists tabulated were attracted to the province by its scenic beauties is made by the organization in its report made public recently.

"Only five per cent. of the visitors asked how liquor permits were obtained, and about one per cent. actually bought beer or whisky in Windsor before starting out on their trips," the report asserts.

The statistics showed Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Kentucky lead in the number of automobile tourists, in the order named. There were a number of visitors registered from Alaska.

Prince Has Busy Time on Bournemouth Visit

H.R.H. During Five Hours Attended 19 Different Ceremonies

Bournemouth, Eng.—The Prince of Wales is accustomed to hustling, but he had to extend himself during a five-hour visit to this south coast resort recently in order to fit into the plant of the townsfolk, who had made him he leading figure in 19 different ceremonies.

The chief ceremony was the opening of a new wing of Boscome Hospital.

The Prince smiled, bowed and "speeched" his way through the ceremonies, and was cheered by throngs of townsfolk, as well as people from the outlying districts who had journeyed here in buses.

"What is it that these young Communists are really after?" asks a critic. We suggest Reddy money.

River Fog Takes Toll of One Ship

Other Victim of Collision Proceeds to Its Destination

Quebec, Que.—With Lauzon, Que., as its destination, the French freight-Union proceeded slowly up the St. Lawrence River after colliding with and sinking the Italian grain-carrier Volcano. The vessel will be examined at the Lauzon dry dock and necessary repairs will be made there before the ship again proceeds to Montreal, its original destination.

The Italian freighter "Operosita," which went aground at Cock Point, near Father Point, while en route from Boston to Montreal in ballast to take a cargo of grain at the latter port, was freed from her position and was last reported anchored off Father Point. The extent of the damage to the ship, if any, was not stated.

Spray Compound Fatal to Family

Mistaken for Flour and Used in Gravy—Poisons Whole Family

Peterboro.—Mr. and Mrs. Marshal Sweet and their son, Robert, of Rawdon Township, are seriously ill in Nicholls Hospital here, suffering from poisoning, having mistaken arsenate of lime for flour.

Last July Mr. Sweet bought some arsenate of lime, which he later put in the pantry. Shortly afterward Mrs. Sweet made some gravy. All ate some of it and were suddenly taken ill. The rest of the gravy was thrown out. The dog and chickens ate it. The chickens all died and the dog became ill. A doctor was summoned and a nurse was called.

A neighbor who was called to help solved the mystery of the sickness when she found the lime in the pantry.

Mrs. Sweet is lying helpless, having no use of her legs or one arm. Mr. Sweet's feet are numb and he sits in a chair, while their son Robert is in a critical condition and may not recover. They were all removed to the hospital on Monday after confinement for many weeks to their home.

Bold Bank Bandits Cleverly Clean Teller's Cage

Toronto Again Scene of Hold-up Men's Activities—Staff Saved Vaults Contents

$6,900 TAKEN

In one of the most sensational raids in the history of Toronto—three armed robbers swept into the branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Ossington avenue and Dundas streets, shortly after ten o'clock Thursday morning, held up the bank staff of three and stole $6,900 from the teller's cage.

They escaped in a car parked just outside the bank, making a clean getaway after coming in contact with several pursuers and forcing them to give up the chase.

In the rush to get away, the robber who cleaned out the teller's money boxes in his cage overlooked eight thousand dollars.

Entering the bank, the three men rushed in, flashing their guns and shouting "stick them up." They caught Manager A. J. Anderson in his office, then forced Charles J. Roblin, teller, from his cage in the centre of the bank, and with these two men grabbed Andrew Johnston, accountant, sitting on his stool next to the teller's cage, and drove the three men into the vault in the southeast corner of the east end of the bank.

In the vault, one bank robber cocked the trigger of his revolver and slammed the door of the outer vault. But as the men were being herded into the vault one had prudently turned the outer combination on the door, locking the bolts so they could not be locked in.

The last bank robbery was the Bank of Toronto, King and Bathurst streets, April 21, this year, when $17,841 was stolen by three armed men. The men were never caught.

Spain Agitated

Miners Strike Assumes Serious Aspect When Troops Intervene

Paris.—Disorder arising in the miners' strike in Northern Spain has culminated in several bloody clashes between troops and the strikers, according to messages received here.

An attempt to turn the strike into a widespread political movement against the Rivera dictatorship has brought about a serious situation, the reports state. Anarchist "pistoleros" persist in concentrating their forces in the disturbed Balboa mining district despite the fact that Government regiments repeatedly have fired on massed groups of disaffected workmen, who replied by hurling bombs and hand grenades.

Casualties have occurred, but no estimate of their number has been obtained because of censorship.

Thorns On The Tariff

Baltimore Sun: Since the conditions which govern France are not greatly dissimilar from those governing other European nations, and since there is in each of them a natural and inevitable antagonism against our economic supremacy—and our manner of exercising it—it is not far-fetched to think that the next few years may see other nations seeking to turn the screws on our great foreign trade, as France has done. Ultimately, therefore, we may be driven to a policy of discriminations, like that of France, or to a conciliatory policy of tariff moderation toward all countries.

Busy on Great Lakes

Port Arthur, Ontario.—The rush of grain from the Prairie Provinces to the head of the Great Lakes is now in full swing. In one day recently 1,450 cars of wheat were received at the elevators at Port Arthur and Fort William. Every available boat is now in commission and as soon as it is loaded is leaving for Montreal and other ports where the grain is transshipped for British and European markets.

Rain Hampers Hunt for Suspect

No Trace Found of Man Wanted in Connection With Northern Murder

Cochrane, Ont.—Archie Bochenko, a laborer of Russian birth, is sought by the Provincial Police of this district organized into a squad under Inspector Ward of the Criminal Investigation Department of Toronto, and Sergeant Frank Gardiner, of Cobalt, in connection with the murder of Nester Bielik, whose dead body was found lying beside his buggy in the yard of his farm on concession 1 of Lamarche township on Monday morning of this week. Bochenko has been employed by Bielik in the capacity of a hired man at various intervals during the past 4 or 5 years. About a week ago he is said to have disappeared, but the police believe that he again visited Bielik's house the day before Bielik's body was discovered.

A missing rifle, said to correspond with the calibre of the bullet which caused Bielik's death, is believed will form an important clue in the identification of the murderer. The rifle is said to have been in Bielik's possession within the past two weeks, but a search of the house has failed to reveal traces of the weapon at the present time. As usual, there are a great many rumors, one of which suggests that for some time Bochenko has been dissatisfied with Bielik's conduct, particularly in the matter of wages. Today a squad of seven Provincial officers are making a canvass of the neighborhood in an attempt to find traces of the missing man.

An interesting fact in connection with the murdered man was the intention to be married within two weeks. Bielik was married once before, but some time ago became separated from his wife, who is now said to be living in Montreal. Police investigations have revealed the fact that Bielik was preparing to take unto himself another helpmate when he was removed.

Cobalt, Ont.—Greatly hampered in their efforts by the sodden condition of the countryside, the Provincial Police were without trace of their man, according to reports at district headquarters here. Inspector Moore stated that a message from Sergeant Frank Gardner told of the police having to wade through a mass of mud in some parts of the district, which is flat and marshy and which has been visited by frequent rains lately.

According to the inspector's latest information, Bochenko's movements preceding the death of Bielik have not been definitely cleared up, and no one in the region of the slaying appears to have seen him for some days prior to the finding of Bielik's dead body. Police officers are covering the district adjacent to Cochrane, and are enquiring at the different colonies of foreign born residents located in the area tributary to that town.

Bob Cook is Given Penitentiary Term

Will Also Receive Thirty Lashes for Serious Offence Against Girl

Orangeville, Ont.—Before his Lordship Mr. Justice Logie at the Fall Assizes here, Bob Cook was sentenced on charges of serious offences against 13-year-old Henrietta McCullough, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McCullough of Amaranth. On one charge the prisoner was sentenced to a term of ten years in Portsmouth Penitentiary, and to receive 30 lashes; and a concurrent term of two years was added on the other charge. The sentence is to date from March 3 last, when Cook was arrested.

The prisoner has been the terror of this district for the past 18 years. He is now 51 years of age, and since his removal to Toronto six months ago has aged in appearance, and lost considerable weight.
