Glen Robertson to boycott boxes

by Dann Rogers

GLEN ROBERTSON—The battle for Glen Robertson's post office heated up Monday afternoon when nearly 100 people said they would refuse to use green community boxes erected on the village's main street.

Canada Post installed 170 outdoor boxes last week after closing the community's small post office. The office was shut down Sept. 5 after a raid by postal officials and OPP officers armed with a search warrant. The postmaster, Lise Lanthier, was later charged with theft from the mail.

After the sudden closure, Canada Post said the office might never reopen.

Residents have organized a protest and met with Glengarry-Prescott-Russell MP Don Boudria Monday in St. Martin of Tours church hall.

After heated debate, the residents overwhelmingly endorsed a boycott of the community boxes by refusing to buy locks and to pick up their mail. Some expressed the fear mail would be delivered in any event and could be stolen during the night.

Mr. Boudria said that while he supported the idea of lobbying Canada Post, residents had to remember they were ultimately responsible for collecting their own mail.

Several other pressure tactics wer discussed at the impromptu meeting. A petition with more than 350 signatures of people demanding the re-opening of the post office was presented to Mr. Boudria.

There were also calls to keep the Alexandria post office as busy as possible, to the extent of mailing out Christmas parcels this week.

There was also a half-hearted suggestion to move and hide the community boxes. Mr. Boudria said that as an elected representative responsible for making legislation, there was no way he could condone civil disobedience.

He did promise Glen Robertson residents that he would not quit on this issue and was fully committed to the re-opening of the post office.

Mr. Boudria said he would present the residents' petition and relay complaints to Canada Post officials. If he doesn't hear anything by Friday, another meeting will be held in the church on Monday, he said.

"There is obviously a strong desire on the part of residents to have the post office re-opened, and rightly so," says Mr. Boudria.

"This is the only community in my riding that is so far away from a post office. When I spoke to Canada Post officials last week they told me they had no intention of closing the Glen Robertson post office until this unfortunate incident occurred.

"I argued with them that they were being inconsistent and they just said they were trying to cut costs at Canada Post and they would use any opportunity that arose to try and do so," he said.

"One of the main problems with Canada Post and their deficit-cutting attempts is they have no corporate plan on how to reduce the budget.

"They are making decisions without an overall plan. A coherent policy on which services should be reduced or eliminated doesn't exist.

"This sort of situation lends itself to indiscriminate cutting, but it also means they are open to influence."

He also said he was pleasantly surprised at the number of residents who turned out to voice opposition to the post office closing.

"When I was driving here Monday afternoon I expected to meet two or three people near the community boxes. I had no idea a hundred people were waiting for me in the church hall," he said.

At its Sept. 9 meeting, Lochiel Township Council passed a motion requesting the postal service be reinstated for the wellbeing and growth of the village.

Copies of the motion were sent to Mr. Boudria and Armand Guimond, manager of field services for Canada Post in Ottawa.

Seven Glen Robertson residents attended the meeting and one said property values would decline if the post office remained closed.

NO MAIL TODAY—Glengarry-Prescott-Russell MP Don Boudria peers into one of the empty community mailboxes recently installed in Glen Robertson. Mr. Boudria was in the area to explain to residents what steps should be taken to influence Canada Post to re-open the recently closed post office.

Manor to spend $25,000 on study

by Lesley Cadham

MAXVILLE — A $25,000 feasibility study which will look at improving services offered at Maxville Manor home for the aged, is expected to be completed early next year.

The study, to be carried out by Derek Crain Architect and Planner, was spurred by a report tabled in May by the Maxville Manor planning committee at an annual meeting of the corporation.

The report advised the board of directors of the direction the Manor should take in providing services to seniors over the next 20 years.

Suggestions included converting semi-private rooms to private rooms with ensuite washrooms, building additional private rooms, increasing space allotted to communal and therapy rooms, constructing an apartment building for seniors and expanding in-house services to reach senior citizens living in their own homes.

Derek Crain will be looking at the feasibility of these changes and address ways to modify existing structures to accommodate them. Maxville Manor currently sits on 12 landscaped acres.

"The feasibility study will tell us how we can go ahead and become a better corporate entity and meet the needs of senior citizens better," says Maxville Manor Administrator Craig Munro.

Mr. Munro says the Manor will continue to serve the same number of seniors—they have the capacity for 160 with the exception of the additional off-site citizens.

The report will also address the cost of renovations and an expected date of completion and Mr. Munro says it is too early to even guess at either of those factors.

Maxville Manor currently supplies walkers and wheelchairs to seniors living in their own homes. Apart from that, Meals on Wheels supplies an inexpensive home-cooked meal two or three times a week, but that's as far as existing services stretch.

In discussion over the last few years, Mr. Munro says it became clear there was a need to serve these people too.

"It was coming through loud and clear that people do want to stay in their homes longer. We've got to make sure we have the physical facilities to accommodate the necessary services," he says.

The feasibility study will look at bringing them the same services Maxville Manor residents receive, including recreational pursuits, social activities, access to the foot-care clinic and hot meals.

In addition, the study will consider the construction of an apartment building for seniors. They would live, for the most part, independently, but would have access to all amenities and could contact the nursing station if necessary.

"This is all very preliminary," says Mr. Munro.

It has not even been decided who will help pick up the tab for the renovations. The findings of the feasibility study will have to pass through three levels of government—Maxville, SD&G and Ontario—before funding is discussed.

Maxville Manor currently receives 40 per cent of its funding from the Ministry of Community and Social Services. The balance is received from clients and 11 sponsoring organizations which make up the corporation.

Maxville Manor will have a booth at the Cornwall Home and Trade Show, October 20, 21 and 22.

Police investigate eight accidents

Alexandria police investigaged eight accidents last week. Two involved injuries to young children.

On Friday six-year-old Marc Chatelaine of 15 Derby St. walked away with only minimal injuries after the bicycle he was riding was struck by a car at the intersection of Dominion and Gernish Streets.

Police report the youngster caused the accident when he turned suddenly in front of a car driven by Tony Hansen of 100 Victoria St.

Damages amounted to $75 to the front of the car and $10 to the bicycle. There were no charges.

Police say a seatbelt may have saved the life of another child in a two-car collision on Kenyon Street, Thursday.

France Hurtubise, 31, of R.R. 4, Alexandria, was driving west on Kenyon with her young daughter, Tanya, when she collided with the passenger side of a pickup truck driven by Stephen Stewart, 21 of 87 Harrison St. The police report indicates Mr. Stewart was travelling north on Harrison Street and pulled onto Kenyon before noticing the Hurtubise car approaching.

The young girl was taken to hospital by ambulance for treatment of minor injuries caused by her seatbelt and the force of the collision. Had the seatbelt not been in place, the child would have been thrown forward and possibly injured much more severely.

Mr. Stewart was charged by police with failing to yield the right of way to oncoming traffic.

Damages to Mrs. Hurtubise's 1982 Oldsmobile totalled $3,000, while damage to Mr. Stewart's 1980 GMC pickup truck amounted to $600.

A rear-end collision on Bishop Street Saturday afternoon caused $3,000 damage to two pickup trucks.

Police report Richard Picard, 26, of 111 Bishop St. brought his 1985 Nissan to a stop and was struck from behind by a 1975 Dodge driven by Alexander MacKinnon, 67, of North Lancaster. Mr. MacKinnon was charged with following too closely.

Damage estimates totalled $2,000 for the Nissan and $1,000 for the Dodge. THere were no injuries.

It was raining heavily at the time of the accident.

Another two car collision at the corner of Main and Elgin Streets caused $1,000 damage to two cars.

According to the police report, the collision occurred when a 1973 Dodge driven by Gertrude Millar, 73, of 50 Harrison St. entered Main from Harrison directly in front of a northbound 1978 Chevrolet driven by Paul Menard, 25, of 33 Victoria St.

Mrs. Millar was charged by police with failing to yield the right of way.

Damage estimates totaled $700 for the Chevrolet and $300 for the Dodge.

The five remaining accidents investigated by police involved minor damage and no injuries. There were no charges.

Daycare centre at the brink

by Lesley Cadham

Glengarry Interagency is doing everything in its power to keep Alexandria's only licensed day care centre open, says Eugene Legault, secretary-treasurer.

Action Garderie Glengarry or 1-2-3 Go, is in danger of closing because there are not enough children enrolled. Attendance since June has dropped from 17 to three.

Mr. Legault attributes the low response partly to the many relocations the centre has experienced over the last few years, but adds they lost several children who started kindergarten this month.

"The unstable condition of the day care centre is leaving some people with the feeling that until we settle down, they won't bring their children to us," he says.

The centre moved from La Fraternité to yet another interim location in Alexandria residence re-opened Wednesday after six days of moving.

Interagency has been forced to rent these temporary accommodations because it cannot find a suitable, affor-

Parents must learn to listen, to protect children from abuse

by Dann Rogers

CORNWALL—Parents have to learn to listen if they want to limit sexual abuse of their children.

"Many children don't tell their parents they have been sexually abused because they don't know if their parents will be able to handle the information," says Bob Smith, a child abuse specialist with the Children's Aid Society in Cornwall.

"If a parent explodes over a simple mistake by a child, that child will be less likely to tell his parent about something as serious as sexual abuse. Parents have to work at allowing their kids to bring them bad news, at creating a general climate of acceptance," he says.

He stresses open communication between parents and children is the best defense against child abuse. It won't stop it entirely, but the abuse can be caught more quickly.

"Sex abuse offenders are very manipulative. They will coerce, bribe and intimidate children into allowing the acts to be committed. They will tell children that bad consequences will arise if they speak to anyone about it.

"In the case of a father abusing his own child, the adult may say that if the child tells anyone, he (the father) will be sent to the electric chair," says Mr. Smith.

Mr. Smith says, because of increased media coverage of the issue, there have been more child abuse cases reported in SD&G in the past few years.

"People understand more about it now. Before, some kids thought it was only happening to them and they had no place to turn."

Children, or adults who know of a child being sexually abused, can contact the Children's Aid Society, which launched a family sexual abuse program two weeks ago.

Headed by Mr. Smith, the program will seek to provide a support group for victims of family sexual abuse.

The groups operating now are for mothers and teenage girls and are composed of 10 victims and two social workers. The groups relive events during 1 1/2 hour meetings each week for 10 weeks.

The process of encouraging a person to join the group starts after the agency receives a call from someone who thinks a child is being sexually abused. Professionals are obligated under law to report even their suspicions that a child is being sexually abused.

"The kids rarely report the case themselves. It is usually done by a confidant of the child," says Mr. Smith.

"Mothers sometimes report the cases but quite often even they don't know of it. There is a popular myth that mothers don't report cases when they know of it. In our experience we have found that is not true. Fathers who abuse their children often organize their lives so they abuse the children whenever the mothers are out at regular activities," he says.

After receiving a call about alleged sexual abuse, the agency is obliged to investigate the complaint within 24 hours.

A social worker will visit the child and if he deems the complaint valid, the police are informed and a joint investigation is undertaken.

"There are very few false alarms. In 98 per cent of the cases kids tell the truth. When children make allegations, they are true. They are much more reliable than adults, who are usually responsible for the false alarms.

The way children describe the abuse they have suffered, you know it would be impossible for them to make it up. The concepts of sexual abuse are beyond their imagination and they can usually give detailed versions using anatomically-correct dolls," says Mr. Smith.

Once sexual abuse is verified, the child and mother are eligible to enter the family sexual abuse program and a decision on safety has to be made.

If the father is willing to accept counselling and deal with his problem, the family can remain together. If not, either the father or the child is removed from the house.

Mr. Smith identifies two types of child sex abuse offenders. One is called a regressed offender. He is someone whose emotional development has stopped at an early age, at 12 years old for example.

This type of offender is stil attracted to adults, but likes children because they are non-threatening. He will usually only approach a child when he is under extreme stress.

"This type of offender can be helped through counselling," says Mr. Smith.

The second type of offender is called a pedophile. He tends to not have an active sex life and is sexually attracted to kids.

"These people don't feel any guilt and they tend to have a large number of victims. They can only be treated with chemicals which kill their sex drive," says Mr. Smith.

Charlottenburgh gets garbage grant

by Joanne Stevenson

WILLIAMSTOWN—Charlottenburgh Reeve Morgan Major announced some "good news" for the township in the form of a $20,400 grant from the Ministry of the Environment (MOE) to offset the $25,000 the municpality will spend on a consultant for its waste disposal sites.

The grant, announced during council's Sept. 9 meeting, is the result of recent meetings between the township and the Minister of the Environment.

ROAD WIDENING

Compensation to landowners for road widenings was an issue discussed during the last municipal election campaign. Council has approved recommendations put forth in a report by Administrator Jay Currier.

In instances concerning compensation where a land severance is involved, any land dedicated to the township by the owner of the retained portion will be done at the landowner's discretion and all costs associated with obtaining such land will be paid for by the municipality.

In instances of agreements with landowners strictly for road widening purposes, a standard legal agreement, entered into by means of negotiations, will be signed by the landowner and the clerk and reeve.

ROAD TOURS

The United Counties Advisory Roads Committee will be conducting its fall roads tour through Glengarry on Oct. 7. Councillor Carol Ann Ross suggested council conduct a similar tour throughout Charlottenburgh. It will be held October 15.

SALARIES

Council has approved a two per cent pay raise, retroactive to January 1986, for its office staff and department heads. These township employees had earlier been granted a two per cent increase with provision for a further three per cent based on Mr. Currier's recommendations.

LAGOONS

A letter to private septic hauler Floyd Lafave outlined the township's policy on lagoons.

"The council is not prepared to commit the township to financing a publicly owned site which may be used by contractors serving the area."

In the letter, Mr. Currier explained the township encourages the establishment of private septic waste disposal and is investigating the possibility of adopting the Purcell treatment plant to accommodate a "certain volume of septage wastes."

Hauler Don Conroy approached council with a choice of three possible lagoon sites. Because land transactions have not yet been completed, details of site location and size were sketchy.

Council approved one site in principle. THe next step involves presentation before the Planning Advisory Committee and public notification.

Mr. Conroy would only state the site selected for the lagoon "is in the eastern portion of the township," a 15-acre parcel being 1,500 feet away from the nearest residences.

WEED HARVESTING

Municipal officals from many local waterfront communities have complained about the province's decision to discontinue weed harvesting this year along the St. Lawrence and Lake St. Francis.

Mr. Currier noted unofficial reports of a possible 50 per cent grant from the Ministry of Tourism to purchase equipment for weed harvesting. The remaining 50 per cent would have to be raised by the Ministry of Natural Resources and participating municipalities.

Acquisition of such equipment would ensure annual weed harvesting. Costs to the township, estimates Mr. Currier, would be $2,000 yearly.

CENOTAPH

Township council has agreed to add the words, "Korea 1950-1953" to its cenotaph in honor of all Canadians who served with the armed forces in Korea.

ANIMAL CONTROL

Mr. Ross noted complaints about roaming dogs and cats are a "weekly occurrence."

Council will investigate the problem.

Local men to be sentenced Oct. 2

Two Alexandria men will be sentenced Oct. 2 for possession of stolen goods.

Gerry Gareau of 77 Main St. and Claude Duval of 86 Lochiel St. pleaded guilty in Alexandria Provincial Court, Thursday. The two men were jointly charged May 25 in Lochiel Township.

Sentencing was postponed to allow time for preparation of a pre-sentence report ordered by Judge Reginald Levesque.

Court was told four tires and rims, valued at $650 were stolen from vehicles on the lot of Titley Chev-Olds sales lot south of Alexandria. Police later found two tires hidden in the bush on a vacant lot.

At a later date police observed a vehicle driving to the area where the tires were found. Mr. Duval was driving while Mr. Gareau was a passenger in the vehicle. Two tires were found in the trunk and two more in the back seat.

Both men have criminal records.

dable building in the area to serve as a permanent day care centre.

The building would have to meet standards set out by the health unit and fire department. In addition, it must be zoned for an institution.

Negotiations between Glengarry Interagency and an unidentified party to obtain a permanent site did not pan out and no other location has been considered yet.

"we're not playing games. It's most unfortunate that these things happen. We could have dropped the centre several months ago, but we feel it is a worthwhile community project," says, Mr. Legault.

"There is a danger that if enrolment doesn't pick up, we'll close down.,"

"Our goal is to find a way to keep it open, not a way to shut it down."

Jailed 15 days for no permit

An RR3 Lancaster man was sentenced to 15 days in jail Thursday in Alexandria Provincial Court after pleading guilty to driving while suspended.

Daniel Gauthier, 22, was charged Aug. 29 in Lancaster Township.

Mr. Gauthier was driving a van on Concession 4 and met a police officer driving in the opposite direction. The officer recognized the accused and knew his license was suspended.

Mr. Gauthier speeded up and by the time the officer arrived, he found the van abandoned on a side road. The man had fled on foot and the following day went to the Lancaster OPP office. He told an officer he was scared at the time and didn't want to get caught driving without a license.

Computer system expanding as hospital keeps on teching

by Lesley Cadham

The advanced computer technology hiding behind the modest walls of Glengarry Memorial Hospital does not save a life everyday, but when it does it makes the high cost worthwhile, says hospital administrator Jerry Adams.

Last week, a man in critical condition was admitted to the hospital. His doctor needed the results of a blood test immediately. The patient could have died, but laboratory technician Kathryn Brunton used the two-week-old biochemical analyzer, which produced results in two minutes. The same test on the old equipment would have taken about 15 minutes.

Four years ago, the hospital joined the computer age. According to Mr. Adams, Glengarry Memorial is one of Ontario's more advanced hospitals. This month the management of a hospital in Picton will visit Alexandria to look at Glengarry Memorial Hospital's computer system.

There is about $250,000 of IBM computer equipment and Mr. Adams plans to expand the system further.

It is a centralized system, with a complete financial package including payroll, general ledger and fixed assets. Patient and personnel files are also stored in the 200 megabyte System 36 which holds the equivalent of about 40,000 typewritten single-spaced letter-sized pages and has the capacity for another 120,000 pages. There are 11 terminals int he hospital, connected to the mainframe.

Last year, the charts of 19,000 patients were entered into the system. By pressing a few buttons, patients' charts and a complete listing of current patients can be viewed on the terminal screen.

A user can also check whether a patient requires a special diet or a wheelchair for transportation and what tests have been done. At a glance, the results can be compared for diagnostic purposes.

"There is more information on patients at our fingertips," says Mr. Adams.

The system saves time and reduces the possibility of human error.

"The system is doing work 10 times faster than we did before," he says, and it is only a matter of time before all hospitals will operate with similar computer systems.

"In the financial area, we used to close our books the third week of the month. Now we're finished by the 10th," says Vivian Lenne, the hospital's business manager.

Mr. Adams expects to receive an additional personal computer, Friday. The $7,000 addition to the laboratory will also be connected to the mainframe but, unlike the others, it will be capable of operating independently, and of storing 180 megabytes of information.

Connected to other computerized laboratory testing equipment, it will store test results and communicate those to the appropriate destinations. Currently, results of lab tests must be hand carried and manually pasted onto a patient's chart. The nursing department will also be able to order lab tests without setting foot into the lab.

Every terminal has word processing capabilities, including four dictionaries for spelling verification. Once a document has been typed, the press of a button will instruct the computer to point out spelling errors.

There is high security on the system and passwords determine whether a user can access certain programs. If someone tries to get into a restricted program, management can determine who it was, says Miss Lenne.

"We have increased staff since computerization. No one is going to lose his job," says Mr. Adams.

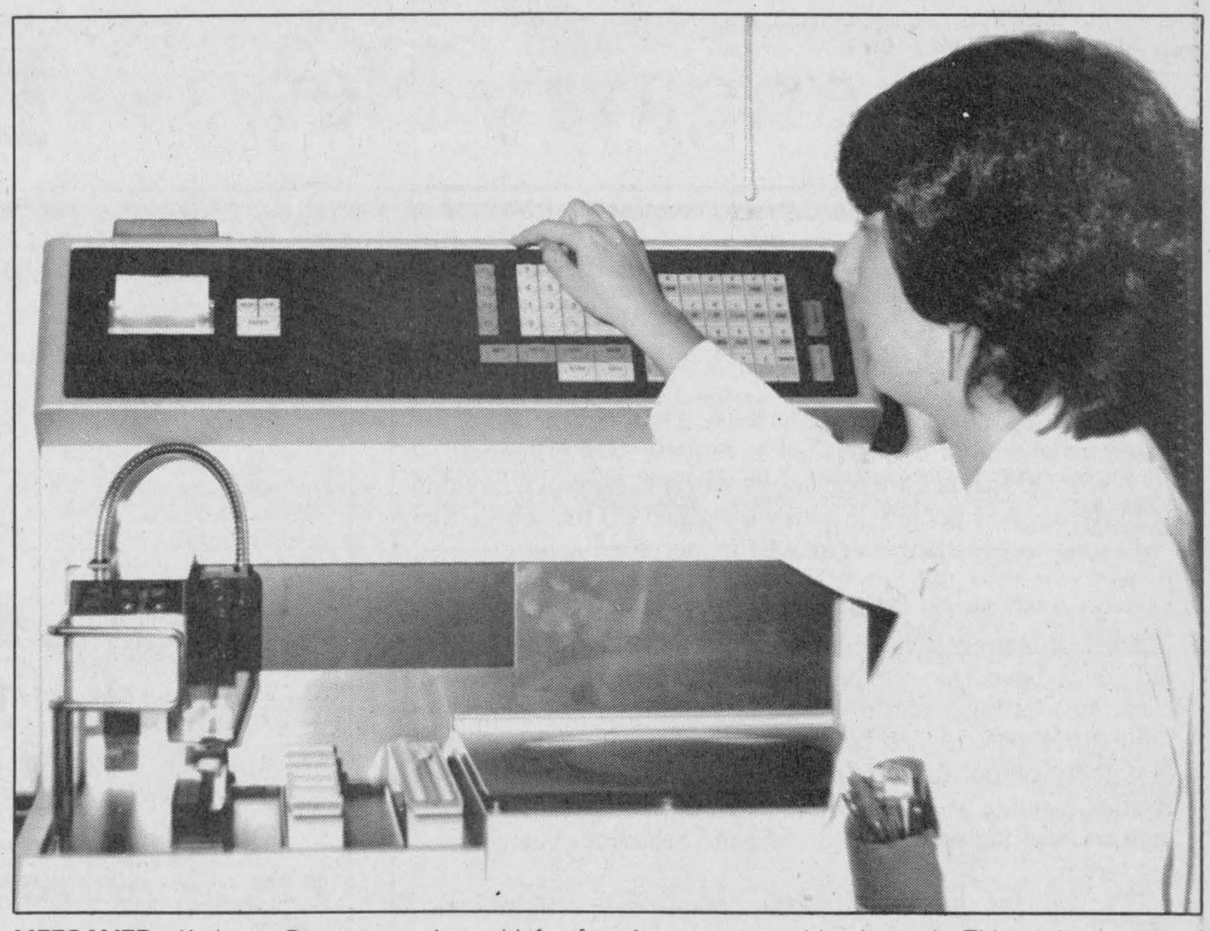
Employee numbers will eventually be less, but it will be through retirement and resignation, he says.

He adds the staff have accepted the computers and been co-operative in learning how to use them. A new generation of nurses being educated today will learn how to use the computers in school. Mr. Adams expects computer instruction will soon be a necessary part of a nurse's education.

The current system is capable of handling 800 megabytes of data. The hospital will be looking into expanding, but not immediately.

A communications line between Glengarry Memorial Hospital and the Poison Control Centre would be ideal, says Mr. Adams. It would eliminate the middle-man and a patient who has been poisoned could get prompter treatment.

"People of Alexandria should be very proud of their little hopsital, though by standards it is far from being little," says Miss Lenne.



LIFESAVER—Kathryn Brunton, acting chief of laboratory technologies at the Glengarry Memorial Hospital, programs the biochemical analyzer to perform a test on a blood sample. This equipment saved a man's life, Saturday, by producing results of a blood test in only two minutes.

Women's group provides contacts

by Lesley Cadham

Glengarry women who have a hankering for girl-talk, profound conversation, or who just need to get out of the house once in a while, can find an oasis in the Cornwall Women's Network.

Network President Marilyn Lawrie says, "The network is an organization to put women in touch with other women in order to facilitate personal, social and professional growth."

Members get together a few times each month, at luncheon or supper meetings and hold workshops, discussion groups and special events. They may listen to a guest speaker or talk with each other, sharing experiences, concerns, information and providing mutual support, if needed. The organization also provides an opportunity for women to make contacts through which they may find a client, job, role model, friend, service, commodity or alliance.

In part, the group exists to bring women out of isolation.

Glen Norman's Cathy Boesch, 29, says she joined because she felt isolated and wanted to meet other women.

"You don't come in contact with other women when you work in a male-dominated world," says Mrs. Boesch, who owns and operates Edelweiss Riding Academy.

"Women should take one day a week or one day a month to look into anything that shows them there's another side to life," she says, adding many rural women get overly involved with domestic duties.

The network welcomes any woman, no matter what her background is.

Program Chairman Susan Carmody explains, "It's not a political group nor a religious group and it's not purely social. There is a concern for humanity, not just for females, and for the dignity of people." Ms. Carmody is also a counsellor at Cornwall's Family Counselling Centre.

At 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday, the organization will hold a presentation with guest speakér Cathy Cameron, member of the Skills Bank of the Canadian Congress of Learning Opportunities for Women. Ms. Cameron was a participant in the Nairobi conference in June 1985, which marked the close of the Decade of Women, The subject of the presentation will be, "The decade of women — where we were 10 years ago, how far we've come and where we're going."

For further information, call Ms. Carmody at 932-9305.

The roll call was grandmother's maiden name. Highland dancing by Patty and Sarah McKay was enjoyed as was tap dancing by Joanne Montcalm, Kim McKay and Jennifer Lawson. A saxophone solo by Michelle Flaggerty, accompanied by her mother at the piano, was enjoyed by members.

Winners of prizes for grandmothers were Margaret Duval, Mrs. McMillan, Anita Prevost, Jean Heath, Lillian Steele and Stella Beauchamp.

Other prizes were won by Joan McKay, Mary Montcalm and Margaret Duval.

The September meeting will be convened by Leona Lafrance and Stella Beauchamp.

EDITORIALS/OPINION

Limit the strikes

Once again innocent people have been left in some jeopardy because of a labor dispute they have no way of influencing.

About 200 child care and social workers employed by the Children's Aid Society in Ottawa walked off the job on the weekend to press their demand for increased salaries.

More than 1,900 families are affected by the strike. Already, 10 of the 15 treatment centres for emotionally disturbed teenagers have been closed and about 50 disturbed youths have been sent back to their parents, to foster homes or to institutions. Recruitment and training of new adoptive and foster parents has been suspended indefinitely, as has a nursery school for toddlers who have not been developing well at home, a help program for parents, teenage after school and counselling services and child and behavior management programs.

The damage that could be inflicted on these children and their families by this strike is incalculable. It should not be tolerated for a moment.

Supervisors and support staff are managing to keep some of the services operating and the striking workers have agreed to not hamper the effort, but innocent children, many of them already disturbed, abused or abandoned, will suffer simply because the adults who control their young lives can't get along.

It would be unfair to hold one side more responsible for this crisis than the other. It takes two sides to negotiate. The employees can't be berated for abandoning the children any more than management can be blamed for using the same children as virtual hostages at the negotiating table.

What is at fault is provincial labor legislation that allows strikes in essential services. The right to strike and lockout should be abolished for essential youth workers, as it should be in health care and the schools. In its place, there should remain a fair system of binding arbitration to settle labor disputes without endangering the wellbeing of dependent innocents.

Tough words

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney has pledged his government will wage war on drug abuse, pornography, wife battering and child abuse, declaring they are undermining the economic and social fabric of the country.

He's not going to get many arguments on that kind of motherhood statement. If he could only promise an end to crime on the streets and to keep the Stanley Cup in Canada he'd be assured of another landslide victory in the next election.

It's easy to voice simple platitudes, to say what everyone is bound to agree with. It is much more difficult to take action to match the words. To date the Mulroney government has little to boast about when it comes to addressing the serious social problems of this country.

Former Justice Minister John Crosbie introduced tough legislation earlier this year to fight child pornography. It was the kind of legislation welcomed by virtually the entire population, but it was allowed to die on the order paper when the parliamentary session came to an end.

At the same time, Mr. Crosbie initiated action against pornography in general that would have outlawed the depiction of virtually every conceivable sexual activity, whether "normal" or "deviant," whatever those words mean in the 1980's. The most mild form of erotica could be declared illegal and its producers, distributors and retailers jailed under the terms of Mr. Crosbie's Orwellian legislation.

Clearly, he went far beyond simply protecting the innocent from exploitation. He was attempting to impose a Puritanical standard of morality on all Canadians, regardless of individual belief. Book burnings could not be far behind.

But it seemed like tough, decisive action and that's the image Mr. Mulroney and his advisors are determined to create for the government. It's not enough.

The Tories can bring in all the law and order legislation they want, impose ever harsher penalties for drug trafficking, wife battering and child abuse, bring back the hangman if they want, but they will still have done nothing to address the social problems that lie at the root of a large percentage of those crimes.

The Conservatives, while in opposition, berated the Liberals for doing too little for the unemployed, but have effectively done no more in their turn at bat.

The desperate, the frustrated, the lonely and abandoned of this country can thank Mr. Mulroney for nothing. He and his government stand ready to punish, but they're not ready to help.

Too many Canadians haven't had a fair shot at anything approaching a Canadian dream. With Ottawa toughening the rules and the penalties, the game will hardly be any easier.

Male house guest easier to endure than female one

A FEW THOUGHTS
Joanne Stevenson

A houseguest is an inevitable fact of life, as unavoidable as death and taxes. To be sure, houseguests, like diet drinks, babies and used cars, have good points as well as bad.

For three weeks last summer I played hostess to Tom, my brother-in-law from New Brunswick. Maritimers are to be welcomed in any home. They normally exhibit less neuroses and create less demands than most Upper Canadians.

They conclude any meal made with hamburger or fish with heartfelt deep sighs of "That was some good!"

An easygoing nature precludes the Maritime houseguest from dust hunting in nooks and crannies or checking the date you installed your latest baking soda in the fridge.

In short, my brother-in-law's visit was a pleasure.

His visit had another appealing quality. He was here on business. To work.

Not to sight-see. Not to be wined and dined nor to be waited on hand and foot.

Business houseguests leave the castle early in the morning and re-enter practically at sunset. The hostess requires no timetables, no schedule of tours. Neither are there strained conversations nor anxious hunts for something entertaining to do.

Tom, a Maritime houseguest here on business, had yet another asset. Being a male.

Memories of visits from female houseguests are checkered by crises that never arise with males.

During a dishwashing session with one H.F. (houseguesta femalia) the following consversation took place:

Me: "I never know where to put the wet dishcloth after I've used it."

HF: "Do you really want to know where the dishcloth belongs?"

Me (expecting a household hint): "Yes!"

HF: "In the washing machine!" (with a condescending sniff)

Two summers ago, my step-mother-in-law, a delightful woman, despite being the dreaded combination of a step and an in-law, thought she was a houseguest in a suburb with a civilized water and sewer system. Not knowing that water in my Green Valley home was more precious and rarer than diets that work, the doomed woman washed and rinsed single glasses and plates, squandered toilet flushes and generally exhibited no camel-like appreciation for conserving water.

We went dry in three days. She spent the remainder of her stay using moist towelettes and flushing next door. She has yet to return.

I hope she does visit again. We now live near the St. Lawrence River and I keep reassuring her neither the well nor the river will go dry.

These pitfalls are avoided with male houseguests who venture into the kitchen only by invitation and have to be paid to take a shower.

Summer has come and gone and I wish you enjoyed your invading houseguests. Remember in summertime, the living is easy, especially if your houseguest is a male Maritimer on a business trip!

Why do they keep picking on Glen Robertson

SECOND LOOK
Phil Rutherford

Why are they picking on Glen Robertson? The Glen is rather quiet, as Glengarry villages go. Folks really don't expect too much. They just want to be left alone.

But in the last three years large corporations have been lining up for the opportunity to take another service away from the village. First, the Bank of Nova Scotia shut down its subbranch there, leaving residents without financial services. Then Via Rail cancelling passenger train service, making it still harder for people to get out and do their banking.

Now, Canada Post has suddenly and without warning closed the community's post office and is considering leaving it closed permanently. There would only be outside "community" boxes, green eyesores on the village's main street. Stamps would be available from a local store, but parcels, registered mail, money orders and the like would only be available more than eight miles away in Alexandria.

To be fair, Canada Post officials had not planned on closing Glen Robertson. The local postmaster, who operated the office out of her home, resigned Sept. 5 and was subsequently charged with theft from the mail. It was an emergency situation and, temporarily at least, service had to be moved to Alexandria.

But some postal officials apparently saw in Glen Robertson's turmoil an opportunity to save the corporation some money at a time when there is tremendous political pressure on Canada Post to drastically reduce its operating deficit. Fair play didn't enter their consideration.

The same officials have revealed a total misunderstanding of the facts of life in Glen Robertson and in rural Eastern Ontario in general. They indicated the village was only 3.2 miles from the next post office in Alexandria when in fact the distance is nearly three times that figure. They didn't consider the fact that many of the village's postal customers live a further three or four miles away.

Should Glen Robertson remain closed, village and area residents will likely be further removed from full postal service than any other community in Eastern Ontario, perhaps further than any community outside Northern Ontario.

Apparently, more than 120 homes and businesses maintained boxes at the Glen Robertson post office. Still more received their mail through general delivery. And hundreds of rural residents receive their mail along Glen Robertson rural routes.

It's doubtful Alexandria's post office, small and arguably overtaxed with its current load, could handle the addition of Glen Robertson without a plant expansion and at least one additional employee. The alternative would be to allow postal service to deteriorate in both centres.

If the postal officials who are to decide Glen Robertson's future were to examine the situation closely they would likely find that maintaining a post office in the village could be less expensive than shutting it down.

Several people have already contacted Canada Post and Glengarry-Prescott-Russell MP Don Boudria to express interest in taking over the postal service in the village. The office could be located in a village store, perhaps leading to increased postal revenues because of added walk-in trade. Obviously, there is an untapped opportunity for Glen Robertson to assist the corporation in reducing its deficit, as small as that contribution might be.

Mr. Boudria, Lochiel Township Council and local residents have raised a loud protest against the threatened closure. Mr. Boudria now believes the loud clamor from the community may have convinced Canada Post that the post office must be re-instated, but now is not the time to let up. Petitions must proceed. Letters and phone calls to Canada Post and the MP will help.

Had protests been weaker, the post office would almost certainly have been abandoned for good, but by now postal officials back in Ottawa know they have a fight on their hands. They understand Glengarry determination.

They should leave well enough alone, establish a new post office and ship the green boxes back to Ottawa.

Remember the Fox

LOOK OUT
Dann Rogers

Several activities commemorating the heart and determination of one of Canada's and the world's greatest heroes are taking place this week.

Terry Fox events call to mind the dedication of a young man who drew on all his strength to concentrate on a single issue.

That issue was drawing attention to cancer research and raising money for the continuation of that necessary work.

It still seems incredible that a one-legged man could run half-way across this country and have his dream cut short by the disease he was raising money to battle.

It seems doubtful that many young healthy people could run across a province or even a town for that matter.

Young people today, so the argument goes, lack direction or a positive purpose in life. They tend to drift through life, according to that theory, and are reluctant to commit to anything.

Terry Fox made a commitment to something he believed in and that is one of the reasons young people everywhere should regard him as a hero.

He had every reason to give up on life. He had lost one leg to cancer and there was the constant fear the deadly disease would return. It did, stopping his courageous run outside Thunder Bay, and, a few short months later, it killed him.

But instead of quitting, he knuckled down and fought. How many of us if faced with the same sort of problems could rally the energy to do what he did? Probably not too many.

Terry's marathon was for hope and so is his legacy. Hope for a better tomorrow for young people who are willing to make a commitment to something they believe in.

One of the prevailing counter arguments to this assertion is that Terry Fox was driven to his extreme dedication by circumstances.

If he had not been stricken with cancer or some other crippling disease, would he have turned out like any other beer drinking, frivolous guy? We'll never know.

It's quite possible he might have, but the lesson to be drawn from that is everyone has the potential to make something of his life.

The other cue that young people should take from Terry Fox is you don't have to wait until a drastic situation arises in your life before trying to make something of it.

Intercept as many crises as possible now by applying yourself to the task of organizing your life.

If you don't have a cause of your own right now, perhaps joining a volunteer organization or taking a tour of a senior citizen home might provide a starting point.

Superstition

THAT'S LIFE
Lesley Cadham

Last week, one of our readers received a frightening letter in the mail. It told her she risked losing a lot of her money, her job and maybe her life if she didn't comply with the sender's demands.

It may sound like the writings of a deranged, perhaps homicidal maniac, but rest assured it wasn't. The threats were put forth in a chain letter, a nasty, thoughtless, unforgiveable chain letter.

I seethed as I read the contents of the envelope she had dropped off at our office, remembering only too clearly the countless occasions on which I had found one of these ridiculous letters in my mailbox. My social circles were smaller in those days, so I always knew exactly who to punch out for daring to send correspondence that made me fear for my life, or at the very least, for my piggy bank.

You see, chain letters (for those readers who have never experienced one) request that the recipient make 20 copies of the letter and mail them to 20 friends.

I didn't have the convenience of a copy machine, and usually my superstitious nature led me to do crazy things like hand writing the letter 20 times (which literally took days) and emptying my piggy bank to buy the necessary postage stamps.

With the cost of postage the way it is today, this traumatic ordeal ends up costing the victim $6.80. Did I mention the letters must be safely in the mailbox within four days?

Another bolder breed of chain letter asks the recipient to quickly send out $1 to the first six people on an attached list and he or she will receive thousands of dollars in return. What can you loose, it asks? About $13, I reply.

The letter received last week says Don Fairchild received the chain letter and, not believing, threw it away. Nine days later, he died. It doesn't mention he was probably 97 years old. And how about Constantino Dias, who received the chain letter and asked his secretary to make 20 copies and mail them out? Had I been his secretary, I would have refused. "It's not in my job description," would have been my retort.

The letter goes on to say I should send the 20 copies to friends and associates, and after a few days I will get a surprise. I've no doubt the surprise would be a sudden lack of friends and associates.

It angers me to think a poor soul with very little money, but a healthy superstition would be reduced to writing about 20 letters and taking the few pennies he or she can scrounge to buy stamps to nurture this horrendous disrespect for a person's privacy and peace of mind.

I'm not suggesting recipients of chain letters throw them away. I'm far too superstitious to make such a statement, and would never forgive myself if someone believed they had suffered misfortune because they listened to me.

A lot of extras

WORD SKETCH

Sybil Carello

Should it ever become mandatory for cigarette manufacturers to list all of the ingredients on their product, they will have to devise a very large, pop-up compendium, together with a cross-reference index explaining the properties of each.

How else can you get a 12 page list of additives to fit on those small cigarette packs?

This epic, federal list recently obtained by the Toronto Star, via the Access to Information Act, identifies volcanic ash, butane, ammonia, propane and acetone (ingredients used to make varnish), and turpentine, as just some of the many additives found in cigarettes.

Flavoring agents, such as rum, brandy, whiskey, anisette, dried fruits, honey and a medley of spices, sweeten the product, and ostensibly, help the (yecch) additives go down.

The list, however, is just a list. It points no finger at any one company.

Benson and Hedges Canada Inc., Imperial Tobacco Ltd., RJR-MacDonald Inc., and Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd., only agreed to release the previously secret list, so long as cigarette brands were not associated with the additives. Under no circumstances will trade secrets be given away. Although, how shellac can be called a trade secret, is beyond the ordinary layman's grasp. I suppose you have to be an old laboratory hand.

Still, I'm grateful such a list has finally hit the light of day. I've often wondered what happened to all that volcanic ash left behind after Mount St. Helene blew its top. And now I know why hardware stores never have rain checks on turpentine specials.

Is there anyone besides ourselves to blame for having smoked that first cigarette?

Yes. His name is Francisco Hernando de Toledo. If he were still alive, we could beat him about the head for first introducing the tobacco seed to Europe in the fifteenth century. But then, we'd also have to rough up Sir Francis Drake and Sir Walter Raleigh. As court heartthrobs and glamorous explorers, these two were responsible for popularizing the habit. Smoking and exploring became catch phrases.

Some things never change. A few hundred years later, the dangerous brooding screen image of James Dean, languidly rolling a cigarette by hand and Bette Davis, using the unfiltered tip as the ultimate prop, carried powerful messages. The print media at its blatant and subliminal best, reinforced the message over and over. Its easy to see how the song, "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," became such a hit.

Luckily, that's all behind us now. Anti-smoking campaigns have stepped up public awareness so that now smokers are considered to be both an endangered and endangering species.

And now, there is the big list to contend with. It matters that manufacturers won't tell us what lurks in individual brands. With 12 pages of additives, there's more than enough to go around.

When you've run out of paint thinner and your next-door neighbor says his cigarettes really do a swell job — well, it's time to draw the line.

No municipality will lead

by Sybil Carello

MAXVILLE—Village council has joined Kenyon Township Council in refusing to have Charlottenburgh Township become lead municipality in a joint waste management study. Roxborough Township, another member of the study group, had recommended Charlottenburgh take the lead.

Six municipalities are involved in the two-year, $100,000 government-funded study to solve area landfill problems.

While council members expressed a similar reluctance to take on the role of administrator, all felt a meeting was necessary to arrive at a collective decision.

The first phase of the study will re-evalute all existing landfill sites with emphasis on operating procedures and environment guidelines.

October 15 will be the technical turn-on-date for cablevision service in Maxville, council was told at its Sept. 9 meeting. Residents can expect to enjoy programming shortly after, said Ottawa Cablevision spokesman John Armstrong.

Some minor construction holdups were related to the village's sewer project plans. Council suggested Mr. Armstrong work with consulting engineer Brian Boyd so that underground pipes, expected to go in sometime next year, will not conflict with the path of the cable lines. The railway crossing on Main Street also posed a slight delay.

Despite these small setbacks, Mr. Armstrong told council, "Things have progressed well."

All the equipment except the power supplies are in, he added.

Part of the cablevision project involved a bonus municipal addressing system. Earlier, council had hoped to receive government funding for this, but was refused.

Council was given a map of the village with the new number system in place. Any additions or changes could be indicated directly on the map and a new copy made, they were told. A master for future reference would remain on file at the cablevision offices in Ottawa and be at the village's disposal.

Council had no objections to Mr. Armstrong's suggestion that the computer system for the communitiy program be located at the village office. Initially, Maxville and District Sportsplex was considered an ideal base, but this was ruled out in favor of a more central location on Main Street. This would be convenient for residents submitting community notes, said Mr. Armstrong.

"I think if it's used right it could be an asset for the community," he said, adding that training would be provided.

The community based program is one of 18 channels residents will be able to watch this fall.

Prospective subscribers to cablevision will be offered two free months of service as an incentive to hook up. Mr. Armstrong predicted a 60 per cent subscription the first year and up to 75 per cent the following year.

Council, along with consulting engineer, Brian Boyd, will meet with Kenyon Council Sept. 25 at 8 p.m. in the Maxville and District Sportsplex to discuss the sewer project's environmental assessment report.

The editor,
The Glengarry News:

As a former resident of Alexandria I'm writing to say how much I enjoy reading and receiving The News, here in Halifax, NS.

I would like to see more personals etc. in the paper. It is nice to read about who is visiting who, who is home and who got married. It makes me think about when I lived in town.

Every year on our vacation, my family and I come home to Glengarry to visit family and friends. Each year, it's great to play golf, visit and enjoy the beautiful scenery.

It sure makes a person appreciate what the town has and offers when you no longer live there.

Keep up the good work, and I look forward to any weekly happenings in Glengarry.

They died for flags

The editor,
The Glengarry News:

I agree 100 percent with Gordon Leonard's letter about someone stealing our flag.

Our two flags were taken about the same time from the poles at the memorial in town.

Our regiment left behind nearly 300 men fighting for those flags.

Three of them I well knew were burnt to a crisp, one of them came from Alexandria. I had the grim task of trying to identify them the next day.

I would love to see flag thieves in no man's land under fire from both sides.

One of the greatest fears a correspondent has, or should have, at least, is of getting someone's name wrong or of omitting it entirely. I suppose there are some of you who would rather the latter than to see yourselves with a new identity not of your own choosing.

Still, I hate leaving names out as I did when I mentioned those who had returned to Williamstown from a jaunt out west this summer and neglected to include Norma and Bill Cattanach. I'm sure there are others among you, too, who actually spoke to me about where you were vacationing, but as I try not to say anything which would give hints as to what houses might be empty, I store this information for "later" and then often forget all about it.

Is that what's known as "short term memory"? Whatever the term, apologies to anyone whom I might have missed.

One lady whom I just can't miss mentioning this week is Annette MacDonald who was one of the birthday celebrants honored at the recent birthday party held by the Friendly Neighborhood Club.

Although her birthday took place a few weeks back, I would like to say a special "Happy Birthday" to Nettie who was 88 years old, but who has more spunk than many a person half her age.

In all 14 members of the club celebrated birthdays in August and September, and though I can't tell you their ages (not old enough), I can give you their names: Isobel Larocque, Edmour Seguin, Daphne MacDonald, Marie Menard, Violet Lauzon, Eva Amell and Irene Duval. Those who were honored in absentia were: Delia Chretien, Maurice Lagroix (off playing bridge, no doubt), Robert Falconer, George Beaudette, Janet MacDonald and Emma Jacobs.

Euchre was played at the party with Therese Carriere and Alice Portant winning for the ladies and Hector Leblanc and Martin Van Sleeuwen for the men. Lucky door prize winners were Margaret MacLennan, Florence St. Onge, Emma Gagnon and Therese Carriere.

Therese's husband, Bruno, was also lucky winning the 50-50 along with Daphne MacDonald, Florence St. Onge, Violet Lauzon and Florida Legroulx.

Kay McDonald was the laughing recipient of the Ladies Skunk while the men's honor went to Euclid Labelle.

An open euchre will be held Septmeber 25 at 8 p.m. at St. Mary's Centre and you are all most welcome to attend.

The exercise classes with Ann Martindale are starting up again on Thurs. at 2 p.m. at the Centre. Everyone is welcome to come out and whittle away the hour hopefully into an hour-glass figure! That's not really true, men, it's for you too.

Parents of children who would like to see a dance class held in Williamstown possibly on Saturday mornings and possibly at St. Andrew's Hall are asked to contact Penny Cavell at 347-3508. If enough interest is shown, a lot of time and frazzled nerves from all that winter driving to larger centres can be spared. Think about it.

I am actually salivating as I think about this next item. Plans have been made and the date chosen for the annual fall supper at St. Mary's. It will be held at the centre on October 19. I'll have more information on times and prices later, but save the date, now.

Ladies of the Guild are asked to remember the September 24 birthday party at the Chateau Gardens in Lancaster.

Remember about this time last year when Mary Rose and Charlie Pilon celebrated an incredible 60 years of marriage? Well they've done it again, made it 61 and the family gathered at the home of Charlie and Reta Heath in order to hold their annual anniversary party. Reta reports that "many old time stories were relived during the party.

A delicious hot buffet supper was served and enjoyed by all. Everyone is looking forward to number 62!" Congratulations Mary Rose and Charlie!

Williamstown Bridge Club scores this week were as follows: 1. Isobel Quail and Ed O'Brien; 2. Isobel Larocque and Alpheda Major; 3. Daisy and Ernie Pelley.

The next open euchre will be held October 13 at 8 p.m. and everyone will be welcomed.

New members of the Glengary Community Club are always welcome.

A fall trip to Renfrew has been planned to see the fall colors and storyland, so if interested please contact Charlie Heath for details.

At their birthday party, the club honored Clarice MacPherson, Viola Lauzon and Ethel Clark. The delicious birthday cake was made by Dorothy Seguin.

Euchre winners at the party were Dorothy Seguin and Emily MacDonald; Charlie Heath and William McMath. Door prizes were won by Joyce Lalonde, and Ethel Clark, while Lone Hands went to Rena Major and Charlie Heath.

You cannot measure mentality by age. A lady was telling me her 6-year-old asked her what gay meant. Cheerful, carefree, light-hearted, explained the mother. "No it doesn't," exclaimed the child. "It means 'Got Aids Yet'? This is the same child who showed great wisdom in Bible class.

The children had to bring in eggs and among the eggs was a pale blue one. The minister was explaining that as these eggs were alike so did God create his children. Well then what happened to the blue egg, questioned the child? She was a mere four or five at the time.

Air Cadets take to the skies

by Nick M. Wolochatiuk

Members of The Royal Canadian Air Cadet Squadron 379 launched their gliders into the air at Alexandria's airfield last weekend.

The cadets acted as marshals at the access road of the airstrip. To get to the airfield's parking area, automobiles must cross the active runway. When gilders make their approach, there is no engine noise to alert motorists, so the cadets regulated traffic to ensure that all aircraft landed without interference or mishap.

Unlike powered aircraft, there is no second landing attempt. You are fully committed on your approach, and you've got to get it right.

As soon as the gilder's roll slowed to a running pace, cadets were at the teetering wingtips and others were ready at the tail. The Schweizer 2-23 gliders have only one real wheel under their bellies.

The little one that castors behind the tail looks like it was borrowed from a grocery store shopping cart. The outrigger wheel under each wingtip dangles from a loop spring, such as you would see on a large diaper pin. If the wings are level, these little wheels can't even reach the ground, thus, the need for runners to stabilize the wings at the end of the landing roll.

Then it's time for more hands on. It must be quickly manhandled off to the side of the strip, to make way for the tug aircraft that will zip in to land as soon as it has taken the other glider up to release altitude. As the cadet in charge of the passenger roster calls out the name of the next to go up, eager hands help raise the canopy and release the safety harness of the cadet who has just completed his first flight in a dual control glider.

As soon as the tug has landed, ''The Bus'', as the Schweizers are affectionately referred to, is rolled into position, at the end of 150 foot tow rope. When the rope is secured and all checks are complete, another sortie takes to the air.

The glider lifts off sooner than the plane pulling it because the glider's wing, like that of an eagle's, is more efficient at producing lift than the stubbier wing of the tug. Once the release altitude is attained, about 2,500 feet above ground, a vigorous waggle of the tug's wing tells the glider pilot to release. The tug peels off to the left, the glider to the right, ensuring a safe separation.

Gliding time is determined by availability of thermals (rising columns of warmer air), release altitude, pilot skill, efficiency of aircraft design, weight of occupants and the constraints of scheduling. There are many other cadets still on the ground, doing the many jobs that need be done, and expecting their turn to take to the skies.

When it's time to accelerate the rate of descent, the spoilers on the upper surfaces of the wing come into play. They ''spoil'' the otherwise excellent lift-generating performance of the over 40 foot long wings. Once the wheels touch down, the glider can be stopped in about the length of a hockey rink.

The pilots are products of the cadet system which involves 80 or more teenagers locally. At summer camp in Mountainview and Picton (both are airfields in Price Edward County, former satellite fields for today's CFB Trenton), pilots and instructors hone their flying skills during extensive training exercises.

When the Alexandria gliders flights are over, the Quinte Gliding Centre's ''Flying Circus'' moves on to Brockville, then Prescott, Smiths Falls, and Peterborough. The Mountainview based flight is but one of seven units that serve the Central Region of the cadets. This region covers all but northwestern Ontario and is equipped with 15 gliders and seven tow aircraft.

This flying program gives cadets the ''hands on'' contact with the aviation world. With the guidance of Canadian Armed Forces support personnel, these youngsters are given the chance to run a ''Three Ring Circus'' of aviation activities. The cadets are being introduced to possible careers in aviation, whether it be at the controls of a Lockheed C-130 Hercules transport, or as air traffic controllers, ground support personnel, or whatever direction their studies may take them.

Six men fined

Six men received fines and were placed on probation for four months in Alexandria Provincial Court, Thursday, after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Gerard Geneau, 45, of Cornwall, was fined $500. He was charged July 25 in Charlottenburgh Township, after a police officer saw his vehicle parked on the west shoulder of Hwy. 2. The accused was standing behind the vehicle with two beers in his hand.

Mr. Geneau was taken to the Cornwall Police Department for a breathalyzer test. His readings were 195 and 209 mgs. of alcohol in 100 mls. of blood.

His license was suspended for one year and he was given three months to pay the fine.

Serge Valade, 18, of RR3, Alexandria was fined $300. He was charged Aug. 31 in Lancaster Township.

The accused was southbound on Hwy. 34 when police noticed his car crossing the centre line on a couple of occasions.

He was taken to Lancaster OPP office for a breathalyzer test and had readings of 110 mgs. of alcohol in 100 mls. of blood.

His license was suspended for one year and he was given three months to pay the fine.

A 42-year-old Cornwall man was fined $500 and his license was suspended one year. Larry Gordon Smith was charged Aug. 30 in Charlottenburgh Township.

Police observed the accused driving off the road onto the shoulder while driving west on Hwy. 401.

Mr. Smith was followed by the officer for about two kilometres and he continued to weave from lane to lane. The man was taken to Lancaster OPP for a breathalyzer test and had readings of 175 and 169 mgs. of alcohol in 100 mls. of blood.

James Cameron King, 41, of RR1 Williamstown was fined $1,000 and had his license suspended for 18 months. He was charged Aug. 1 in Charlottenburgh Township.

The accused was operating a tow truck and towing a vehicle on the Glen Road near Summerstown. A police officer observed that the vehicle had defective headlights. When the officer stopped the man, he smelled alcohol. Mr. King staggered to the police cruiser.

He was taken to Lancaster OPP, where his breathalyzer readings were recorded at 240 and 245 mgs.

Richard Bissonnette, 20, of Cornwall was fined $400 and had his license suspended for one year. He was charged Aug. 29 in Charlottenburgh Township.

The accused was seen speeding on Main Street in Lancaster. An officer followed the vehicle to the westbound ramp of Hwy. 401 and tried to stop the accused. Mr. Bissonnette continued, however, and was seen weaving back and forth on the highway. The accused told the officer he didn't know he was supposed to stop. Mr. Bissonnette was taken to Lancaster OPP for a breathalyzer test and his readings were 170 mgs. in 100 mls. of blood.

David Magill, 21, of Martintown, was fined $1,200 and had his license suspended for 15 months.

Mr. Magill was charged March 4 in Charlottenburgh Township, after he was involved in a single-vehicle accident. Police were sent to the scene of the accident on the Glen Road near Summerstown. The accused had been travelling west and missed a curve. His vehicle skidded about 92 metres and rolled.

When the police arrived, two passengers were being taken away in an ambulance. Mr. Magill was at a nearby house. He had suffered cuts and was bleeding in the head area. He was unsteady on his feet and smelled of alcohol.

Mr. Magill was given one year to pay his fine.

The six drivers were placed on probation for four months and they must all attend the IMPACT program at Plantagenet at later dates.

THREE'S NO CROWD—The owners of Prophoto Lab, His & Hers Boutique and Miron Electronic-TV joined forces with Mayor J. P. Touchette, Friday afternoon, to cut the red ribbon and officially open the new location across from the Alexandria IGA. A learning experience for this instructor

SPORTS
Peter Conway

Last weekend brought us cool, crisp weather. It was typical football weather. The Canadian Football League regular-season schedule is past the half-way point and the second week of play in the National Football League concluded.

With the cooler weather comes another year of parents taking the little tots to the rink for minor hockey. Local kids have participated in the Glengarry Hockey School for the past week.

Being an instructor in the six to nine-year-old age group, I've been getting a crash course in communicating with the youngsters.

Believe me, it isn't always easy. There have been a couple of occasions when I've been very frustrated with some kids. But I guess that comes with the territory.

The kids are always eager to get on the ice. But when they are huddled around and I'm trying to explain a drill to them, there are usually a couple not listening or skating away from the group.

For some of these kids, just starting out in hockey, I'm sure they don't feel all that comfortable at times.

Just take the opening session last Thursday evening. Everything seems to be moving along nicely. I thought everyone was having fun.

Then, all of a sudden, this little guy comes up to me and informs me he doesn't want to participate anymore. He starts to cry and wants to see his mother. Could this be a sign of the opening game jitters?

After a pep talk from mom, the youth returns to the ice and gets back into the swing of things. It's enjoyable as an instructor when you tell the kids to do something and they give it their best. There are some fundamental drills that the kids have never done. They fall down a couple of times, but get back up and try harder.

It's encouraging for the kids to look up in the stands and seeing the parents cheer them on. If a youth is having a problem adjusting to a drill, mom or dad are close by for words of encouragement.

After a couple more weeks on ice, the Glengarry Hockey School will be over for another year. Hopefully, the kids will have honed their skills at the school.

Then the real hockey season begins. Teams in each age division will be organized. For the little guys and gals in the tyke, novice and peewee divisions, it's another year of looking forward to Saturday and Sunday mornings at the rink. The younger tots are usually more enthusiastic at putting on the gear, than the older ones.

It's been an enjoyable experience working with the kids at the school up to now. But I now know what some parents go through with their kids. I've got some valuable experience on how to communicate with younger kids.

It isn't always the kids that learn something at hockey schools. This is my second year at the local school and I'm still learning.

THE GLENGARRY ZOO?

The annual Men's Twilite Banquet at the Glengarry Golf and Country Club continues to have its share of surprises.

Although I arrived a few minutes late and missed it, I'm told the local golf club turned into a public zoo for a few moments Saturday night.

For the past couple of years, some members have surprised Carol St. Laurent, chief organizer of the league.

Last year they presented him with a pig, which was later sold to a twilite member in an auction. Well, they outdid themselves this year.

Wally Hope Jr., who is recuperating in the hospital from a convulsion, which occurred Saturday morning, is responsible for Carol's goodies this year.

Wally rented a mule and llama for the evening and the two animals made an appearance early Saturday night. To go along with the mule, Carol was presented a Mexican sombrero and poncho.

Well, at least Carol will keep his head warm this winter watching Junior B Glens play. Next summer, he won't get his head burnt on the links because of his sombrero.

Carol, once again, did a great job this summer with the Men's Twilite League. He made Wednesday evenings enjoyable for everyone, well almost everyone. For some like Richard Bellefeuille, Gerry Deguire and Gaudias Dumont, it got expensive at times.

But, without these three fine gentlemen each week, it might have been boring for the rest of us.

I imagine Carol will be back as twilite chairman next spring.

NO HUNTING—The Kenyon Fish and Wildlife Conservation Association has placed No Hunting signs on Lloyd Kennedy's "Lake Shore" property. In the past, poachers have disregarded hunting rules and have hunted without the permission of the property owners in the Loch Garry area. The saga of the Loch Garry Game Reserve

by Angus H. McDonell

The duck hunting season will open this Saturday, yet this year there will be no "bang-bang" by hunters' guns in the area from Kenyon Dam waters to the west boundary of Loch Garry Lake. Property holders along the shoreline have posted "no hunting" sign boards.

Immediately, the controversy erupts relative to the rights and freedom of hunters versus the property owners bordering both sides of Loch Garry Lake, the connecting Garry River waters that form a small lake and many acres of drowned land just west of the Kenyon Dam.

All that area is uniquely different to most other bodies of water in Ontario. Not only do the property holders own the land to the shoreline, they also own the land under the water. To confirm this point we will go back to day one and review a few points of relative history.

The first RC Bishop of Upper Canada, Alexander Macdonell, designated that the northern boundary, generally speaking, of what is now Lancaster and Charlottenburgh townships would separate St. Raphael's parish from the future Kenyon and Lochiel townships. He then appointed Father John McDonald a curate at St. Raphael's to care for the Catholics in the north, shall we say. Bishop Macdonell also decreed that a grist mill be built on the Garry River in the interests of the pioneer farmers. The mill was named Priest's Mill and later the hamlet became Alexandria.

In order that the Garry River water would supply the water-wheel power the first dam was built at approximately the site of the present dam at the Priest's Mill restaurant patio. We will skip other pioneer mill detail to the era when Donald A. Macdonald, grandfather of The Glengarry News owner, Eugene A. Macdonald, bought the grist mill. Due to the development of the area farmland obviously there was an increase of grain yield. According to legend Donald A. Macdonald enlarged the mill and the Kenyon Dam was built to regulate the necessary flow of water.

The new dam created the water to overflow the Garry River banks. Thus the resulting high water line on the bordering properties. Donald A. Macdonald was assigned this land. In turn the lands were assessed by Kenyon Township and taxes were paid. From that line outward the lands belonged, obviously, to the registered owners. Even the two islands in Loch Garry lake became private property.

The advent of auto travel leads to the next phase of private ownership bordering these waters. Following the turn of the century Peter Lesley an Alexandria tinsmith and hardware store operator with the permission of the "Sandy Angus" MacDonells, built a small wharf on the east side shore. According to legend he was the first to build a cottage on the Loch Garry lake island.

Another well known Alexandria sportsman, Ed Tarlton, Carriage Works paint foreman, had two boats, one near Peter Lesley's and the other moored at the Kenyon Dam.

Bishop William Andrew Macdonell and his St. Finnan's curate, Father Ewen J. Macdonald, both widely known sportsmen, with their boat frequented what became known as Lake

Hopes to start polo

by Peter Conway

GLEN NORMAN — John Denner tried the sport of polo a year ago at the Montreal Polo Club at St. Lazare, Que.

It was love at first sight. A year later, the Glen Norman resident is hoping to bring polo to Glengarry.

"Right now we're trying to get people in Glengarry interested in polo," says Denner. "I was out last year at the Montreal Polo Club on a couple of occasions and I really got interested in the sport."

Denner says starting up a local polo club is an expensive proposition.

"We're looking for people to help with financial and physical assistance. I'm trying to get a polo field going, which can be rather expensive," says Denner.

A polo field is about 15 acres in size, 11 of which is the playing area. He has the area on his own property for a field, but getting it ready for polo becomes expensive.

"You have to plant Kentucky blue grass. You plant about 40 pounds to the acre, and it costs between $2 and $3 per pound. So, it can be quite expensive," he says.

Polo games are made up of eight players, four per team. The maximum number of members of a polo club is 30 people. Denner says he would like to have at least eight members so there are enough players for a game.

"It's a really exciting sport and we'd like to have eight founding members for the club. We need approximately $5,000 to operate the first year," he says.

The most expensive area for a member would be the purchase of a horse. Denner recommends people should buy horses that have been used in polo. He recently bought a pony from Montreal Canadiens' star Larry Robinson.

Other equipment used by participants include knee pads, helmets and mallets.

Should enough interest be shown locally, Denner says officials from the Montreal Polo Club would help the new organization get off the ground and also provide technical assistance.

Glen Nevis forces final game in the men's soccer playoffs

The final battle for the Senior Men's championship between Glen Nevis and Greenfield will take place tonight in Greenfield at 8:30.

The gold of Glen Nevis forced the final game showdown with an exciting 3-2 victory over Greenfield Monday night at Lochiel. Behind 2-1 in the series and facing elimination they came out fighting.

Both teams had several early chances. Kennedy MacDonald opened the scoring for Glen Nevis when he drove an Andrew Meth rebound out of the air and into the net.

Greenfield fought back hard and evened the score when a shot by Benedict Phillips glanced in off a defender. Minutes later they missed a chance to go ahead when a quickly taken free kick danced off the crossbar.

Glen Nevis continued to press and were awarded a penalty kick when Andrew Meth was brought down inside the box just before the half. Glen Campbell was stopped on the initial shot but scored on his own rebound.

Then the rain came down. Greenfield's Big Red Machine drew even early in the second when Donny Morris skipped a short cross off his head and into the short side. Then the play went back and forth until Glen Nevis turned it on in the final 20 minutes. With only minutes to play Nathan Hoedeman played a perfect pass inside to Andrew Meth who wasted no time in blasting it high in the near side.

It was a replica of the goal that gave Greenfield the series lead in a 1-0 overtime win September 10th. Underdogs Glen Nevis dominated play but were turned back by a solid Greenfield defence. The winner came six minutes into the overtime when Frank Morris ran the ball deep into right forcing the opposing defence back. Morris then laid the ball off to Lucien Koggell who powered a drive into the net.

Local Open was heavy stuff

They grunted, groaned and glistened at the 1986 Alexandria powerlifting open held at GDHS Saturday.

The event, organized by Pattyn's Gym, drew eight lightweight and 16 heavyweight competitors. The lifters competed in three categories, the squat, bench press and dead lift.

The top local strongman was Ray Gibbs who won the 100 kg class with a total of 715 points. Gerald Theoret finished second in that weight class with a total of 650 points and Luc Theoret was third with 625 points.

In the 82.5 kg category, Michael Sabourin finished second with a total of 517.5 points behind Joe Peacock of Mississauga.

In the 90 kg category, event-organizer, Luc Leblanc of Pattyn's Gym accumulated 602.5 points and 55 year old Jim Palmer lifted a total of 357.5 pounds.

There were no Glengarry participants in the 110 kg and 125 kg categories but gentle giant John Baxter dominated the over 125 kg category with a total of 630 points.

In lightweight competition, Alain Larocque won the 56 kg category with a total of 272.5 points.

Patrick Leger was strongman in the 52 kg category with a total of 292.5 points.

In the 75 kg class, Nigel Gregory finished second with a total of 520 points.

This was the second powerlifting open hosted by Pattyn's Gym, the first being in 1984. Mr. Leblanc says he was very pleased with the way things went and that he plans to hold the meet again next year.

He also says he is seriously considering organizing a powerlifting open for women next year.

The event was well attended with upwards of 100 spectators taking in the action. Also the competition went very smoothly with no evident glitches.

Back to defend title

WILLIAMSTOWN — Three teams will be back to defend their titles this weekend in the sixth annual Char-Lan Soccerfest.

Pointe Claire (women), St. Andrews (men's A champs) and Toronto Can-Scott (men's B champs), are hoping to repeat as champions in the 24-team tournament. Twelve men's and women's clubs are entered in the two-day tournament, which gets under way Saturday morning at the Char-Lan Soccer Park.

Other local teams entered are three teams from Char-Lan, Heart of Glengarry and a senior women's squad from the Glengarry Soccer League. Teams from Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto are also participating.

Awards will be presented Sunday evening at 6 p.m., at the Charlottenburgh Recreation Centre.

The Char-Lan United men's squad defeated the Heart of Glengarry 7-1, winning the B title at a Belleville tournament over the weekend.

Char-Lan opened the tourney with a 4-2 loss to eventual A champion Belleville Hellenics. The B champs then defeated Kingston 5-4 and Osnabruck Cosmos 2-0 in semi-final action.

Saga of Loch Garry

Shore (the east side of Loch Garry lake).

This picturesque haven for wildlife and an ideal park setting motivated the hunters, especially "Father Ewen," to suggest that all this land be classed as a Wildlife Preserve and a miniature park.

World War One changed the lifestyle of everyone. Sport activities were placed on the back burner including any further discussion of a Loch Garry-Kenyon Dam Game Preserve.

About 1920 when Father Ewen was out of the army and again the rector of St. Finnan's, planning for his beloved game preserve objective was resumed. Progress was slow but gradually gained in momentum and popularity.

Finally in 1926, Wilfred Kennedy, Glengarry's federal member, was successful in drafting the legality of the Loch Garry Game Preserve. This was based on the approval of the property holders involved and the fact there was no Crown or public lands in the designated area. The boundaries were Kenyon Dam side road on the east, Loch Garry road the west, 1st Kenyon the south and 2nd Kenyon the north.

During the next score of years the deer multiplied and caber-tossing Lloyd Kennedy, certainly not given to exaggeration, recalls seeing deer herds of 20 to 40 feeding on his lakeshore properties. The fox population increased and on at least one occasion a Black Bear was sighted.

Geese and ducks, by the hundred, rested peacefully on the waters during their flights north and south, without fear of hunters' gun fire.

Then the tranquility and wildlife protection began to crumble. There was only one game warden, the popular Willie Munro, to oversee Glengarry County. Poachers disregarded deer hunting rules. Deer were shot out of season. Dog packs were another menace. Once again ducks and geese had no protection. Blinds were placed in Loch Garry without the owner's permission including Arnold and Glen Munro's island.

The extreme audacity by some hunters was the picking of a chainlock that opened a private laneway to the lakeshore. A similar chain cutting took place at Lloyd Kennedy's gate to the original lakeshore.

Evidently this total disregard of proximity shooting was more than enough to endure by the lake residents.

Once again "Father Ewen's" game preserve plan was revived. This objective became a reality on March 16, 1986, with the legal founding of the Kenyon Fish and Wildlife Conservation Association. Lorne Hall was elected president; Sandy McRae, secretary-treasurer; directors, Duncan McDonald, Duncan Morris, Rene St. Amour, Allan McPhail, John Runions, Lloyd Kennedy, Stanley Bradley and Cameron McDonald. There are an additional 80 members. All pledged to observe the no hunting bylaws.

Every bordering property holder has signed a legal document approved by the Ministry of the Attorney General, Court House, Cornwall, authorizing association representatives to post no trespassing signs for the purpose of hunting. Should an infraction occur the property holder has the right to notify the OPP which in turn invokes the Trespass of Property Act.

Pardon the pun but it is "game over" for the next five years and subject to renewal.

Optimistic camp

Alexandria Glens' Manager Claude Roy likes what he's seen so far, but he'll get a better indication this weekend when the club's training camp continues at the Glengarry Sports Palace.

The local Junior B club opened its 1986-87 camp last weekend with three on-ice sessions. This year's camp is a far cry from last year's outings as far as numbers are concerned. At the opening session a year ago only 15 players reported. This year, there has been an average of 25 to 30 players out.

"It sure has been a better camp this year," says Roy, starting his first full campaign as the club's manager. Roy took over the managerial duties midway through the season last year when Gaetan Giroux stepped down.

Roy and Coach Roch Lajoie hope to trim the camp roster following Sunday's session. They'll get an indication of how much talent they have Saturday night when they travel to Williamstown to play rival Charlottenburgh Rebels. It will be the opening exhibition games for both clubs.

Eligible veterans expected back are Leonard Seguin, Jean-Luc Menard, James Robinson, Michael Daniels, Stephen Stewart, Charlie Giroux, Andrew Meth, Stephane Gareau and goalie Claude Gallant, one of eight goalers at the camp. Daniel Brunet, who played won the stretch for the champion Charlottenburgh Rebels last spring, is also hoping to land a job.

Former Glen Norm Sauvé is back and will likely be one of two over-age skaters used by the club this season.

One player who's caught Roy's attention at the camp so far is 19-year-old Sylvain Audette. Audette, a slick centreman, is attending the University of Ottawa.

"He's been impressive so far and he's indicated he wants to play for us this season," says Roy.

Robert Lajoie will handle public relation duties for the Glens this year.

The club will tentatively play the Rebels in a return match Sept. 26 at the Glengarry Sports Palace.

Competitive camp for Rebs

WILLIAMSTOWN—After only three on-ice sessions, one thing is certain at the Charlottenburgh Rebels' training camp. There hasn't been a lack of spirit and competitiveness.

"There have been some pleasant surprises," says Rebels' president John Chafee. "There are a lot of first-year players trying out at forward positions. It has been very competitive at forward."

Rebels hopefuls opened the camp last Wednesday at the Charlottenburgh Recreation Centre. Thirty-five players started out and the training camp roster was trimmed to 25 following Sunday's session.

"We made some cuts Sunday, mostly local midget players who'll return to minor hockey," says Chafee.

It will be a rebuilding year for the Rebels. Only six veterans return from last year's championship club. Kevin Renwick, back for his fourth year, Kevin Poapst, Gary Theoret and Bruce Bergeron will be expected to carry the load. Although Chafee isn't sure at the moment who the skaters will be, two other skaters from last year's squad will suit up as over-age skaters this season.

"We will be using two over-age players this season and we have a couple of veterans in mind. But, we just aren't sure at the moment."

The club was to have practised last night (Tuesday) and tonight at the Charlottenburgh Recreation Centre. The Rebels host rival Alexandria Glens Saturday night in the opening exhibition game for both clubs. Game time is 7:45 p.m.

Goaltending is another area up in the air at the moment. But Chafee says it should be settled in the next few days.

"Whether Kevin Cameron returns is still up in the air. He's still practising with the Cornwall Royals. (OHL). We'll know his fate with the Royals in the next 10 days. If he doesn't play with the Royals, he's told us he'd come back and play with us," Chafee said.

Rookie coach Dave Hanson is looking forward to the regular season and he's enjoyed his inaugural training camp with the Rebels.

"Dave has enjoyed the camp so far and he's really looking forward to the regular season. He's handled the camp well," Chafee added.

Fate of post office finally revealed

GLEN ROBERTSON
Kathy McGrath
874-2758

Notice has finally been received from Canada Post that our post office is officially closed. Green postal boxes line the west side of Chartrand's store and residents have been asked to buy padlocks for their boxes.

A petition has been circulated by concerned residents and presently contains about 250 signatures, protesting the closure of the post office. Several residents attended last week's council meeting to advise council of their desire to house the post office.

It seems ironic that the government of this country, with one hand, is spending large sums of money attempting to keep the elderly in their own homes as long as possible and with the other hand, is removing the very services that would enable them to do so.

The loss of these services, post office, bank, train, etc., particularly affect people living in rural areas, who are forced to travel to larger communities to obtain basic services until eventually they are forced to leave their homes entirely. There are other facilities available in Glen Robertson to house the post office, the problem now is to convince Canada Post to use them.

This fall Mount Carmel House auxiliary will be holding their Harvest Tea and Sale in St. Anthony's Parish hall. The date is Saturday, October 4th from 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Convenors Lorraine Sabourin and Blanche Gauthier are planning a bake sale, a crafts booth, wearing apparel, books and optional draws. A quilt will be on sale, tea will be served and a door prize given away.

To keep in tune with the fall theme you are asked to keep fresh vegetables from your gardens and fruit from the orchard so they can be sold as produce.

Any seasonal plants to be potted and homemade preserves could be added to the display and would be much appreciated. These could be brought to the hall the day before.

As you know the Auxiliary is still in the business of raising funds for Mount Carmel House and they anticipate the Harvest Tea to be well attended. A host of workers will be only too happy to serve your needs.

There is ample room to walk about at ease and parking is no problem. The freshly decorated hall and a chance to glimpse at the new upper church may be all you need to convince you to come along. All goods on sale can be items to purchase in time for Christmas.

So keep the date in mind and bring family and friends.

Well, they're moving on up

Wettest harvesting conditions since 1972

AG REPORT
Glen J. Smith

Most parts of Western Ontario have had a relatively dry summer and early fall while in the east it has been what you might call damp! In discussing the weather with a number of famers over the past two months, most have indicated that it is the wettest harvesting conditions they have endured since 1972.

Conditions for harvesting hay and small grains have been horrendous. Some small grain is still to be harvested. The third cut of hay is good but because of the critical period of September and no available storage, this crop may be left on the field. The biggest concern at this time is the condition of the corn crop.

Fields are still very green and denting is just occurring now in most fields. The cool, wet conditions in late August and early September have not helped to bring along the maturity as we had hoped.

Many would expect that our heat units are much lower than normal but surprisingly enough by the end of August they are very close to those of last year. From the Ministry of Environment data, the heat units received at the Glen Gordon Station as of August 31, was 2,337 compared to 2,349 in the same period of 1985. At Dalhousie Mills as of August 31st, 2,221, compared to 2,244 for the same period in 1985. At the Ottawa Station heat units recorded to the end of August, 1986 were 2,405 compared to 2,420 for the same period in 1985.

The 30-year average for this period to August 31st is 2,324. The past three years we have received 375 to 450 heat units in the first three weeks of September, although I can recall much better weather conditions in the past than we are experienceing at the moment. The constant threat of frost and cool conditions is certainly creating considerable concern among corn producers.

While the heat units have been a little lower than normal, the precipitation levels have been considerably higher. Rainfall levels for the Glen Gordon station during the month of August were 95.3 millimetres compared to 41.6 millimetres for the same period during 1985. At Dalhousie Mills 136.8 millimetres were recorded as compared to 79.5 for the same period in 1985. Accumulated precipitation to the end of August at Glen Gordon was 452.4 millimetres comapred 229.5 for the same period in 1985 and at Dalhousie Mills 489.7 millimetres were recorded compared to 362.2 in 1985.

STABILIZATION FOR GRAIN PRODUCERS

All farmers who produce grain, i.e. corn, barley, winter wheat, soybeans, canola, oats or white beans, should investigate the income stabilization program for these commodities. This program started in 1985 and runs for a three-year period. The stabilization program sets support prices representing 95 per cent of the previous five-year average market price plus adjustments for changes in cash costs. The maximum Ontario support payment in any year will be the difference between the 95 per cent and 90 per cent of the five-year average market prices. The Federal stabilization program provides a support level to 90 per cent of the five-year average. To register in the Ontario program premiums must be paid on grain sales expected between September 1st and August 31st.

These premiums are put in a producer account, interest is paid on this account at the present bank rate and if a stabilization payment is triggered the premium represents a third of the contributions to this program. Thus, payouts are on the basis of $2 from the province of Ontario for each dollar paid from the grower's account. In a year where no support payment is made, the balance of your account is carried over as premiums for the following year.

It is important to note that application forms and pamphlets are available at the Agricultural Office with applications having to be returned to the Stabilization Commission by October 1. Producers who were eligible to participate in the 1985 program and who choose to enter now, will incur a penalty. Any payment declared by the commission will apply to only 80 per cent of the otherwise eligible production. It should also be noted here that a stabilization payment will be made for 1985 corn and soybean crops and possibly other grain crops as well. This program should receive your serious consideration. Do not delay, check into it now.

FEED ANALYSIS AND RATION FORMULATION

With harvesting conditions for the hay crop being so difficult, many farmers found it impossible to take the time to collect samples for analysis. With a bit of a break before the corn harvest it would be a good time to accomplish this task. I will stress again the importance of feed analysis and ration formulation for livestock producers. It will provide the greatest return for the investment of most expenditures you will make. There are a number of analysis packages through Agri-Food Laboratories including testing for neutral detergent fibre, acid detergent fibre and digestibility of haylages. The Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food has developed a computerized ration formulatiuon program which they will be offering free of charge to dairy producers (ration formulations for beef producers have been free for some time). OMAF staff will be available to assist producers in formulating rations. It is an incentive for those producers who are not now testing and having rations formulated to do so in the future. Feed testing kits and ration formulation sheets are available at the Agricultural Office.

Ontario family farm interest reduction applications are now available at the agricultural office for those who did not participate in the 1985 program. 1985 participants will be receiving their applications by mail very shortly.

EIGHTY YEARS AGO
Friday, September 14, 1906

Upwards of 2,500 paid their way into the fairgrounds here on Wednesday, the second day of the Glengarry Agricultural Society's 54th annual exhibition.—Duncan McDougald has resigned the position as Trust Officer with the Union Trust Co., Toronto, after a service of several years with that corporation. He is the last member of the staff as organized by A. W. McDougald in 1898. Mr. McDougald has gone out to the territory of Athabasca, about 200 miles north from Prince Albert, on a land hunting expedition.—Considerable alterations and improvements are now being made to Hugh Munro's commodious dwelling house on St. George Street.—Mr. Forester's new house on Bishop Street is nearing completion.

NINETY YEARS AGO
Friday, September 8, 1896

One of the most interesting and fashionable events that has taken place in this town for some time occurred on Monday morning when Miss Margaret Chisholm of this town, was united in matrimony to Edward J. MacDonald, also of this place.—The first practise of the newly organized Fire Brigade was held Saturday and proved most satisfactory. S. S. Robson, who had been nominated captain on the north side of the bridge, has resigned the position in favor of Donald J. McDonell, whose appointment was confirmed.—During the past three weeks, Wesley Hayes of Cornwall, and assistant, have been employed as scavengers by a large number of our citizens. Within a short time, Mr. Hayes will visit Vankleek Hill and other neighboring villages.

CANCER CAN BE BEATEN

Area on cycling maps

by Nick MacDonald-Wolochatiuk

WILLIAMSTOWN — This town is on the map thanks to the Ontario Cycling Association's series of seven regional maps of Ontario. Routes suitable for bicycle tourists are depicted.

This means byways that are less heavily travelled, offering attractive scenery, interesting places to visit, and basic information on campsites, bed and breakfast accommodations, hostels and places to eat are included.

Thanks to the map, Williamstown was recently visited by cyclist Jim Barrett of St. Paul, Minnesota, after leaving his home in May.

Upon arriving in Williamstown, homeward-bound, Mr. Barrett had clocked 6,352 kilometres.

En route, he spent 43 nights in his tent. All but one were in vacant fields, wilderness forests, or the lawns of friendly folk who had invited him to pitch there. Of the other stays, 10 were hostels, seven were motels, and 15 were in the homes of people who had befriended this adventurous traveller.

Something new was added to his list of shelters while in the Williamstown area: a tree house , on the "Nut Hill" property of the MacDonald-Wolochatiuk's.

Spirit Week plans are underway

TAGWI S.S.
Norma Wheeler

We've been back to school for just two weeks and already things are getting busy at Tagwi.

Our student council is led by Head Boy Marc Beehler and Head Girl Janet Baxter. The new senior treasurer is Laurie Phillips, and Christie McPhail is our secretary. Robyn McDonell is our social convenor. According to the council, sales of student cards and 1986-87 year books are going well. Our intrepid school photographer Mr. Campbell is getting some interesting pictures.

Spirit Week plans are under way. The week will run from next Monday to September 26. This is a fun week for everyone and will feature the annual Grade 9 assembly during which Tagwi meets its newest students. Special dressup days and noon hour activities will make this a very interesting week. Our first night dance of the season will be a Video dance on September 25. As well, Tagwi will once again be organizing a Dance-a-thon for UNICEF which will be held on October 31.

If you pass by the gym during noon hour or after school, you'll hear our cheerleaders getting ready for what we hope will be another successful year in athletics. On Friday, our Junior Boys Soccer team started off the season with a 4-1 win over St. Joseph's. Top Tagwi scorers were Brian and Kevin Villeneuve.

In June our Drama Club went to the Stratford Shakespearean Festival for three days. They had such a great time that they are starting to raise funds for a return trip next June. Such events as a euchre tournament, bake sales, school dances, and car washes are being planned.

Other groups such as the Reach for the Top Team, Science Quiz Team and Canada Quiz Team will be starting to prepare for the new season.

School spirit and pride well entrenched

CHAR-LAN NEWS
Joshua Harrington

"The building is a substantial brick structure of pleasing design. The grounds, consisting of three acres, include a splendid football field, basketball court and tennis court, with a large lawn in addition. A beautiful row of evergreens surrounds the whole enclosure."

Can you guess what the above refers to? Although the building has disappeared, the basketball court gone and no traces remain of the tennis court, the beautiful row of evergreens lives on. Still stuck? All right, I'll tell you. The above refers to the old Williamstown High School, ancestor of our own Char-Lan. It was located on the other side of the pines, where the playground and ball field are now.

The description of the old school was found in the school's newspaper, "The Scot", in a copy dated Dec. 22, 1911, which belongs to the Mowat family and was made available by Ruth Mowat. The newspaper is quite a slick edition, having eleven pages, printed, even and telling all sorts of interesting things about the school.

For instance, there was great pride in the fact that "the value of Library of Reference and Supplementary Reading is $300. There was apparently about $500 worth of scientific apparatus, and the school boasted, "a fine collection of minerals."

From a staff of four in 1911, to our present number of 27, that's how much our school has grown. Besides being principal, J.A. Cooke, M.A. also taught Classics and English. Maybe that was why there were prizes donated by the principal for oral reading. Contrast this with our daily uninterrupted silent reading!

Still, both building and grounds were rated number one by the high school inspector that year. I wonder if Char-Lan 75 years later would fare as well. I'm sure we would.

New principal welcomed

GDHS
Paula Wheeler

Glengarry has now begun the third week of the new school year. Many unfamiliar faces are apparent when seasoned students circulate the halls. One new face is that of our principal, Brian McKinley. Mr. McKinley like many new arrivals, is trying to master the names of both students and teachers; he believes for the next little while that is his main objective.

For any person in new surroundings the act of becoming acclimatized is only natural and our principal is no different; therefore, he will likely work at becoming more familiar with the school and the area it serves. Mr. McKinley stated that before his arrival here he had received favourable reports about GDHS and a little of the school history and issues that affect his appointment, so he can better understand the school and the community it serves.

As a long-term objective, Mr. McKinley would like to see more community involvement in the school. He believes that the school and surrounding area would certainly benefit from mutual participation and concern. The principal is interested in more adult education classes being offered at GDHS, an example of community involvement in the school.

Mr. McKinley has taught in the SD&G system for many years. His philosophy about education stresses the academics as well as work-oriented skills; however, the extra curricular activities that make school enjoyable should be an integral part of the educational system.

When asked about the rewards he had received from his profession, he stated that knowing that somehow he had contributed to a young person's success was his greatest reward. Let us hope that our new principal has many success stories at GDHS in the coming years.

Fundraiser was a great success

by Angus H. McDonell

A major project launched in 1979 by the Glengarry Historical Society and focused on Dunvegan climaxed in a pleasant, successful way last Saturday night with the fundraising concert and dance in the Osie Villeneuve arena of the Maxville and District Sports Complex.

Some seven years ago Keith MacIntosh of the Monkland-Strathmore area and with historian rank suggested that the founding Roxborough Township Hall, entitled to preservation, would be an asset to the Dunvegan Museum complex.

In keeping with our ancestors reputation of accepting challenges that appeared too formidable, a committee maintained that tradition and by careful planning, plenty of skilled leadership, hard work and generous financial help the now Ivan Grant Building will serve in reality as a Hall of Fame honoring for posterity the founding Reeves of Roxborough, Kenyon, Lochiel, Maxville and Alexandria.

However, what impressed the committee and the Glengarry Historical Society members, apart from the financial success, was the pleasant atmosphere that prevailed throughout the concert and dance. The program was headlined by Glengarry's top ranking entertainers. This would be a "Dunvegan Night" were the opening remarks by the chairman in extending a Ciad Mile Failte to a crowd upwards of 300. While introducing each number there would be in essence a tie recalled with former Dunvegan area pipers, violinists, soloists and dancers.

Thus in introducing the Glengarry Pipe Band Pipe Majors John T. MacKenzie and Andrew Buchan, they were the successors to a long gone talented Glengarry-Dunvegan pipe major, Johnny Alex Stewart. And the young pipers were reminded that there was once an old piper from Stewart's Glen, "Red" Alex Stewart.

In welcoming the MacCulloch Dancers it was noted there is a harvest of Glengarry dancers today thanks to the dedicated teaching of Rae MacCulloch now in her 32nd year of her profession. But some years ago dancers were few and far between. The Dunvegan area was no exception as we seem to recall that entertainment of our heritage had to be fulfilled by Norma MacNeil, Skye, and Jean MacLeod of McCrimmon West.

Present day old time fiddlers and concert violinists were reminded that they had capable predecessors. Like John MacQueen, Kenyon Township assessor who besides the big Assessor Roll book he always brought along his fiddle under the buggy seat. Following in the footsteps of class violinists like Donald Fletcher and Malcolm Dewar is Kelli Trottier not only known at home here but also in Kingston where she is pursuing her university studies at Queen's.

It was emphasized before the Trottier family got on stage that away back in the 1920s another Dunvegan family were known in north Glengarry, the Fletcher family. A pioneer dance band of violinists, pianist and drums.

Among other crowd pleasing numbers there was the singing of Alexandria Mayor, J.P. Touchette, and Lancaster Village Reeve, Milton MacDonald accompanied at the piano by Mrs. A.K. (Ruthanna) MacPherson. Acknowledging the development contribution of the above mentioned municipalities by our compatriots of French heritage, especially that of the first United Counties French Canadian Warden, Gerard Massie and Mayor Touchette sang Un Soleil. Then the pages of the 1890s history were leafed over recalling "Little Ireland" in the vicinity of the Grant (Malcolm) Homestead.

And neighboring Little Ireland was Fiske's Corners where Charlie Stewart was a pioneer blacksmith and a gifted Gaelic singer. Milton MacDonald sang in Gaelic and "J.P." showed his stage versatility by joining in the Gaelic chorus. Finally commemorating those from the Dunvegan area, regardless of racial origin, who paid the supreme sacrifice in two world wars, Milton MacDonald sang the Kenneth McKellar favorite, "Scottish Soldier".

At this time Sylvester MacDonald and his Clansmen roused the crowd to the dance floor with their ever popular music. The Dunvegan Ladies Auxiliary provided the traditional lunch custom. It is fitting as a closure to repeat an ancient Gaelic cliche (translated), "Give them a tune on the fiddle, a bonach and a cup-of-tea and they will all go home happy." That is exactly what happened.

Students design new village crest

MAXVILLE—Three students at St. Bernard School were awarded prizes, Friday, after winning a contest to design a new crest for the Village of Maxville.

Maxville Reeve George Currier presented each winner with a cheque for $10. They were Denise Charbonneau, 12, of Maxville, Chad McRae 9 and 12-year-old Caroline Villeneuve both of Dunvegan.

The contest started in early June. Though it was open to all Maxville schools, only St. Bernard participated. Students were asked to make a poster of a crest which reflects cultural and religious elements in the village.

Winners were selected by town council at the Sept. 9 town council meeting. It was so difficult to choose just one poster, the council bent the rules a little by choosing three, says Mr. Currier.

The new crest will be a composite of those three designs.

Town council hoped to have the credit and a lapel pin ready for Maxville's 100th anniversary in 1991.
