HENRY'S Shorthand School Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Mr. Chas Parker, Maple Ridge Died in Civic Hospital

The community was surprised to hear of the passing of Charlie Parker of Maple Ridge, on Saturday last, when his death occurred in the Civic hospital, Ottawa. It was thought that he was progressing towards recovery. He leaves a sister, Miss Hattie, at home, another sister,, Mrs. Joseph Alford, and one brother, John, of Cass Bridge. His pastor, Rev. J. A. Waddell, conducted the funeral service at the family home, Maple Ridge, on Tuesday at 1.30 p.m.

Morewood United W.M.S.

On March the 26th, the Auxiliary convened at the home of Mrs. J. W. Smith with 19 members present, Mrs. Armstrong, the president, presided and conducted the opening exercises assisted by Mrs. A. Dillabough and Mrs. R. H. Swerdfeger. Mrs. W. Coulthart read a leaflet which emphasized the need of twelve more workers in Japan after which Mrs. Orrin Dillabough led in prayer. Mrs. Allan Swerdfeger rendered a solo.

The minutes and business then followed. The correspondence was read, including a letter from Mrs. Earle re the Presbyterial to be held on May 6 or 7 in Merrickville.

The Thankoffering will be held on Easter Sunday night, when the envelopes will be placed on the plate.

Mrs. Geo. Bogart extended an invitation for the next meeting to be held at her home. The response to the roll call will be the word "open" or "obey."

Programme committee for the next meeting is Mrs. C. Gordon and Mrs. W. Coulthart. Plans were made for the bale to be sent in June, of which Mrs. C. Gordon is convenor. After singing a hymn Mrs. A. B. Allison gave a talk on the fifth chapter of the Study Book, emphasizing that the personal contact with our missionaries was the strongest influence in convincing the Japanese of the merits of Christianity.

Mrs. A. W. Reveler presided at the piano, and the meetig was closed with hymn 617.

Another Ayrshire Club Formed at Winchester

A group of Ayrshire breeders met in the Winchester Hotel, Winchester, on Monday, March 30, 1931. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the recommendation made recently by the executive committee of the Eastern Ontario Ayrshire Breeders' Club that five disrict Ayrshire breeders' clubs be formed within the area covered by the Eastern Ontario Ayrshire Breeders' Club and that one such club be formed by breederes in the counties of Dundas and Grenville.

Geo. T. Dixon, Winchester, acted as chairman, and those present included Wilbur M. Garlough and Iden Merkley, of Williamsburg; Samuel Kittle, Howard Kittle, H. Merkley and C. B. Jamieson, of Winchester; Walter R. George and Willis VanAllen, Mountain.

Jas. A. Simpson, Agricultural Representative, Morrisburg; Frank Napier and David Hunter, respectively secretary and fieldman, of the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association were also present and addressed the meeting.

It was subsequently decided to form the Dundas-Grenville Ayrshire Breeders' Club and the following were appointed as the provisional board of directors:

C. B. Jamieson, Winchester; James Deeks, Williamsburg; S. D. Thorpe, South Mountain; Geo. T. Dixon, Winchester; Howard Kittle, Chesterville; George Gillespie, Ventnor; H. H. Graham, Kemptville; O. L. Carson, Domville, and H. M. Lee, Kemptville.

The follower were subsequently appointed: Hon. Pres.—Principal W. J. Bell, Kemptville; Pres.—Geo. T. Dixon, Vice-Pres.—George Gillespie, Secretary, Jas. A. Simpson, Treasurer—Howard Kittle.

Executive committee—The president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, H. H. Graham and C. B. Jamieson.

It was decided that a basket field day be held during the third week of June at the farm of Geo. T. Dixon, Winchester, but that the final date of same be left up to the executive committee.

Rumsey Armstrong, Inkerman, Passed Unexpectedly

Quite unexpectedly death came to Mr. Armstrong, aged fifty-eight years, on Saturday last, at his home near Inkerman, where he was a prosperous farmer. He had been at his work as usual the previous day. Besides his wife, formerly Miss Annie Suffel, of Mountain, he is survived by a family of sons and daughters. Rev. Townsend conducted the funeral service in Inkerman United church on Monday at 1.30 p.m.

Mrs. E. Flora, Winchester, Passed Away In Toronto

One who had been a resident of Winchester the greater part of her life and had conducted a very successful grocery business there for many years, in the person of Mrs. Electa Flora, was called home last Sunday at 9.30 a.m. Three weeks previous, she went to Toronto to visit her son and daughter, little thinking of the manner of her return. The following Tuesday she was taken ill and operated on for appendicitis in Wellesley hospital, Toronto. It was a serious operation at her age, sixty-four years, but hopes were held out for her recovery and she was gradually improving when pleuro-pneumonia developed last Saturday morning and her family was hastily summoned.

She had been a devoted, ambitious mother, and her family has shown its appreciation in living up to her expectations, and by doing everything possible to keep her with them, but human means proved of no avail.

Her husband passed on six years and a half ago. There are left four sons, Leon, of the Civil Service, Ottawa; Dr. Walter, of Ottawa: Harry, of Winchester; Dr. Fred, of Toronto, and one daughter, Marguerite, nurse-in-training in the Toronto General hospital.

Mrs. Flora will be greatly missed, not only in her home, but in the church and the community, where she assisted in every good work. Her deeds of charity were done quietly, and the sick and the poor will miss her loving ministrations.

Her remains were brought to Winchester on the early train Monday morning and taken to her late home on Main street. There they were viewed by hundreds of sympathizing friends. On Wednesday, at 2 p.m., fitting tribute was shown when the Winchester United church was filled to capacity with standing room at a premium for her funeral service, which was conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. A. Waddell, who gave a comforting message from John xvii : 4. He was assisted in the service by Rev. Turner of St. Paul's and Rev. D. W. Summers of the Wesleyan church.

Mr. Harry McKercher, of Toronto, sang "He Knows, My Father Knows."

The floral offerings were more numerous than any ever seen in Winchester on a similar occasion. All places of business were closed during the funeral hour as a tribute of respect to the departed. Interment was made in the family plot at Maple Ridge.

Junior Hockeyists Banqueted By Women's Institute

Last Thursday evening the Women's Institute did splendid honour to the officers and players of Chesterville's Junior hockey club when they were entertained to dinner in the Library Hall, which presented a very bright appearance for the occasion as the tables groaned with the good things provided by the members of the Institute, and the High school orchestra rendering a choice programme.

After the menu had been amply discussed, Mr. David Allison, president of the Junior hockey club, presided, as he called on Revs. R. E. Newman, A. H. Sproule, and G. O. Davies, Reeve W. H. Casselman, Messrs. Thos. Flynn, Arnold Lynch and G. C. Lacey for a few remarks, all of whom complimented the players on the wonderfully successful season they had had and congratulated them on having attained to the position of representatives of interscholastic hockey in Eastern Ontario in the provincial play-off in Toronto. Mr. Allison was thanked by the others for the great interest he had taken in the Junior team and through whose assistance it had come to be one of the outstanding teams of this part of Ontario. Mr. Arnold Lynch, speaking for the boys, assured all that each had done his part faithfully and well for the honour of the home town and that the boys were deeply grateful for the assistance given them.

Mrs. Bronskill presided at the piano when all joined in community singing.

Mrs. Andrew W. Summers Died at Winchester

After a lingering illness and much suffering borne patiently, Mary Jane Johnston, wife of Andrew W. Summers, of Winchester, passed to her reward last Monday evening, March 30th, in her 84th year.

Besides her husband there are left three sons: Rev. D. W., of Winchester Wesleyan church; also, Ward and John, who are engaged in the baking business in Winchester; and two daughters, Miss Minnie, at home, and Mrs. Alvin Deeks, of Westboro.

Her funeral will be held this afternoon in Winchester Wesleyan church.

Chesterville United W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the United church was held in the Sunday school rooms Wednesday afternoon, April 1, with the president, Mrs. Duncan McElheran, in the chair. The meeting opened with singing, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison, Mrs. George Hummel reading the Scripture lesson.

After the regular business was transacted and the different reports given, there was a short programme, consisting of a piano solo by Miss Helen Hamilton, an Easter thought by Miss Helen Moad, a solo by Miss Addie Campderros, accompanied by Miss Helen Hamilton, after which the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Refreshments were served by the committee in charge, Mrs. Fred Smith, Mrs. Newman, Mrs. Hummel, Mrs. Ward Johnston and Mrs. Basil Rowe.

A Nice Pair of Heifers

A pair of two-year-old Holstein heifers, both sired by Patricia King Hartog, and bred and owned by Mr. Thos. Allen, Chesterville, have just been qualified in the R. O. P., one in milk 294 days and the other 293 days. The one heifer, Patricia Rooker Hartog, gave in her lactation period 10,218 lbs. milk containing 461.25 lbs. butter, giving her an average test of 3.61 per cent fat. The other heifer, DeKol Pauline Hartog, finished her year with 10,292 lbs milk containing 450 lbs. butter, giving her an average test of 3.50 per cent fat. Both heifers were milked twice daily.

Junior Hockey Team Thankful for Support

On behalf of the Junior Hockey Club executive and players, I wish to express through the press our sincere appreciation of the splended response to the appeal for funds to enable the hockey team to go to Toronto to represent Eastern Ontario in the provincial finals of the E. O. S. S. A. competition. Throughout the past season, whether in High school or the C. O. V. L. hockey activities, our local team established a unique record and brought honour not only to themselves but to their home town, which feels justly proud of their efforts.

That further publicity was made possible through the radio broadcast of the game between Windsor–Walkerville Technical School and the local High School team was due to the kindness and thoughtfulness of Mr. O. L. King, local Nestlé's manager, who arranged with his Toronto office to provide a treat, not only for Chesterville listeners-in, but, for the boys themselves, by way of entertainment for them while in Toronto. For such an interest, we feel deeply grateful to Mr. King and the Toronto officials of the Nestlé's Company.—D. Allison, President, Junior Hockey Club.

"Not yet. Father hasn't expressed his opinion yet, and mother is waiting to contradict him."

HOTBEDS FOR STARTING EARLY PLANTS

THE HOTBED should be located in a sunny exposure, preferably on the south side of a building. Fresh horse manure is the most satisfactory heating material. This is left in a pile for five days, when it is forked over evenly, a layer at a time, shaking it out well and tramping it. This is continued until the desired height is reached, usually two feet, and the pile is made two feet wider and longer than the frame. The frame is placed on the manure, and banked on both sides.

The frame is usually made to support three sashes, 3 feet by 6 feet in size, or to carry 18 lights of 10 inch by 12 inch glass. The frame is usually of 2-inch plank, 13 inches high at the back and 8 inches at the front. The sloping end pieces are spiked to these, and three cross pieces of 2 inch by 3 inch lumber are spiked from back to front, level with the top of the plank, to carry the sashes. If flats are to be used, two inches of cinders are usually placed over the manure to set the flats on. The sashes are set on, and after a few days a rather violent heating will take place, when the bed should be ventilated to allow the gases to escape. When the temperature of the bed falls to about 80 degrees it can be used for seeding, or holding of flats. If flats are not used soil to the depth of 4 to 5 inches is used. The hotbed can be used to better advantage with flats, and less soil is needed. The flats can be taken inside to be transplanted and may be shifted to cold frames as desired, and their place taken by other plants requiring more heat. The most convenient flat is 12 inches by 22 inches and 3 inches deep. The end pieces are of ⅝-inch lumber 12 inches long, and the two side and bottom pieces are of ¼-inch lumber 22 inches long and 3 inches wide. If properly care for, these flats will last for many years.

Careful watching during bright days is necessary as the space in the hotbed is small and the temperature may quickly run up and cause injury to the plants. Ample ventilation, by shoving the sashes back a few inches is necessary. With the bottom heat a low temperature on top is not a disadvantage, although cold winds blowing on the seedlings may cause injury. During very frosty nights a blanket or old carpet should be placed over the frame. This is rarely necessary, however.

The watering should be carefully done, keeping the soil moist and not wet. Excess moisture and high temperature favour the development of damping-off fungi. It is wise to water about noon so that the surface of the soil will dry out before night, and the air in the bed contain less moisture. High temperature and moist air may cause considerable loss.

The cold frame is the same as the frame for a hotbed, but is placed on the ground and has no bottom heat. It is wise after danger from frost to place plants in a cold frame for a week to ten days to harden up before setting them to the open.

Health Service

Prepared by the Canadian Medical Association.

APPENDICITIS IN CHILDREN

Appendicitis, or inflammation of the appendix, is a comparatively common disease. It is not generally known that appendicitis is a serious and not infrequently fatal condition, nor is it understood that the disease may and does occur among children.

Evidence of both these statements is shown by the fact that 1300 or more deaths occur each year in Canada from this disease, and of this number, over one-third were those of children under fifteen years of age.

There are certain diseases, such as typhoid fever, which may be prevented by sanitary measures to safeguard water, milk and food supplies. Other diseases, such as smallpox and diphtheria, are prevented by raising the individual's resistance to the disease by means of vaccination and immunization.

In certain diseases, of which appendicitis is a striking example, serious and fatal results can only be prevented by securing the right treatment and applying it early.

Proper early treatment has a great deal to offer, but it is, of course, without value unless it is applied. The physician cannot help those who do not come to him for his advice.

Unfortunately, the price of delay is frequently death. Delay in securing treatment, which allows the condition to progress until the appendix ruptures very often means the death of a child despite all efforts made later to save him.

When appendicitis occurs there is pain and usually nausea and vomiting. Older children describe the pain as cramp-like, and generally they feel it in the centre of the abdomen. Younger children cry as if in pain, and they seem not to feel the discomfort in any particular spot or part of the abdomen.

Unfortunately, many parents and others who are responsible for the care of children believe that there is one right and proper way to treat a pain in the stomach, and that is by giving a dose of castor oil or some other purgative. When a part is inflamed, nature puts that part at rest. The purgative sets the digestive tract in motion just at a time when it should be at rest. A pain in the abdomen should not be treated with purgatives.

To the parent, it may seem that we are exaggerating the possible dangers of pain in the abdomen. Certainly, every stomach-ache is not appendicitis. However, unless abdominal pain is always regarded as being serious, cases of appendicitis will go untreated and we, in Canada, will continue to record each year, about five hundred deaths from appendicitis, practically all of which may be traced to procrastination and the use of purgatives in the presence of abdominal pain.

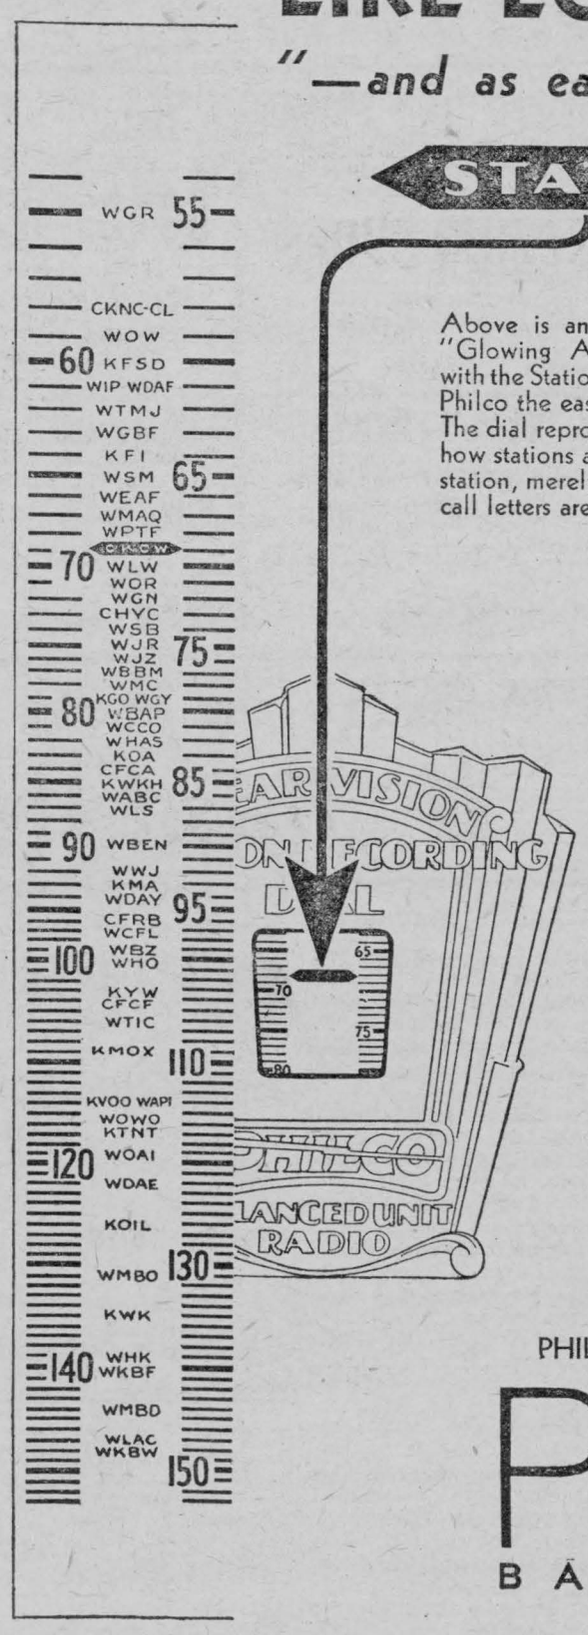

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 14 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

11-Tube PHILCO

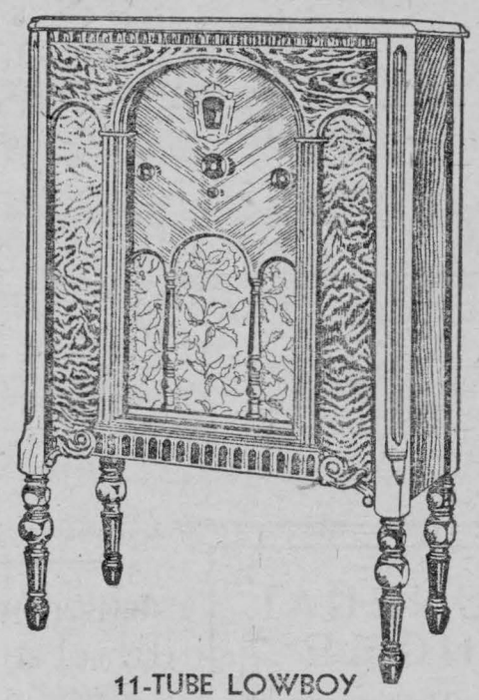

SUPERHETERODYNE-PLUS

"BRINGS THEM IN LIKE LOCALS"

"—and as easy to locate"

11-TUBE LOWBOY

An exquisite open-faced cabinet of American black walnut, figured butt walnut, and Oriental wood. American Gobelin tapestry over speaker. Inside is the wonderful new 11-tube Philco Superheterodyne-Plus receiver with Tone Control, Automatic Volume Control which HOLDS programs against fading; Station Recording Dial for easy tuning, and built-in Electro-Dynamic Speaker.....less tubes $180.25

AN enthusiastic Philco owner sent us a duplicate of the dial of his 11-tube Philco (reproduced herewith) with the remark—"The stations shown represent only a few of those I have logged, the majority of them being stations one would be least likely to receive consistently on an ordinary set from my location." He continues—"Not only does my Philco bring in the most distant of these stations like locals, but because of the 'Glowing Arrow' system of tuning, I never have the slightest difficulty in tuning instantly to any station I have logged."

The extraordinary power, and super-sensitivity of the Philco renders you independent of network programs—brings you broadcasts the ordinary set owner never hears, and brings them with a clarity and fidelity of tone startling in its realism.

Ottawa Fire Fighters Trapped In City Hall

Ottawa, Wednesday.—Trapped for almost two hours in the capital's burning city hall, three firemen were released at 1.30 oclock this morning from their coverings of débris. Only conscious, they were rushed to hospitals, where the extent of their injuries other fire-fighters. Previously, four other fire-fiighters had been pulled from the burning structure with only minor injuries.

Caught when falling wreckage from the top storey of the old stone building crashed to the basement, the fire-fighters were unable to make their way to safety. Another fireman managed to reach a window and was pulled out.

Fighting off policemen who sought to stay him, Father J. L. Bergevin, Ottawa University Professor, ran through a window into the ruins seeking the men. He called to them, searched through several rooms, calling that he was a priest. He then stood in the ruins and, considering the men were dead, gave them the last rites of the Church.

Starting in the engineering department on the top floor of the four-storey building shortly after nine o'clock to-night, the fire several times was thought under control, only to burst out again. After midnight it was still burning briskly while thousands of Ottawa citizens, grouped in the adjacent Confederation square, looked on. The roof had dropped through from the top floor to the first and second storeys on the south side and it was thought little will be left of the historic old pile.

The firemen it is thought, were fighting the blaze from the Board of Control chamber on the second floor when the heavy stone and sheet metal of the roof crashed through, carrying them through the first floor and into the basement. One of the men landed near a window, crawled to it, and was helped out by his follow workers. Screaming that he wanted to go back and help his brother firemen he was carried away.

Tiniest Canadian Has Chesterville Relatives

Princess Caretta, in private life Cora Pansy Shay, claims to be the tiniest Canadian woman in existence, and certainly measures up (or down) to the dimensions she claims for herself. She is forty years of age, 30 inches in height, weighs 40 pounds and wears, besides other raiment of pygmy size, baby shoes size five and one-half.

Princess Caretta is stopping in Montreal for several days before going to Halifax, N. S., where she will exhibit in a fair in May. She said she is the only abnormal child in a family of nine children with normal parents. Her mother lived to the age of 75 years and was five feet seven inches in height and her father was 93 at the time of his death several years ago, and was six feet tall. She was born in Huntsville, Ontario, in 1891 and weighed six pounds at birth, she said.

She is bright and clever and has toured over the greater part of North America exhibiting in county fairs and circuses. She does not smoke nor drink and said she had been examined by many specialists who had failed to find the cause for her small stature. She has compiled an album of newspaper clippings and a article appearing in a recent newspaper aroused her to claim the Canadian championship for the smallest woman in existence for herself. The clipping referred to the death of Mrs. Louisa Johnson, of Roseville, Ont., who was styled "the tiniest living Canadian." Her measurements were 36 inches in height, weight 60 pounds and age 82 at the time of her death last Saturday in Woodstock, Ont.

Princess Caretta is leaving with her manager, A. C. McArthur, for Halifax shortly, and will tour Australia before returning to Montreal.

Was Pioneer Baby At Fitzroy Harbor

Kingston, March 31.—Miss Elizabeth McCarthy, who lives in Cleveland, is looking forward to her 102nd birthday in September. She was the first white baby born at Fitzroy Harbor, on the Ottawa River, where there were only two white families among the Indians.

A few months after her birth, the family moved to Carleton Place. There were no roads, only thick forest. They chose the natural road of the Little Mississippi river, bought a birch bark canoe and sailed the babe down the river. She attended school in a little log cabin at Carleton Place. Children sat on wooden benches and "spoke when they were spoken to" by a man teacher in a long black coat. "We learned definitions and long poems," she says, and she launched into verse about an Egyptian mummy that she learned about ninety years ago.

"Looking back over a hundred years seems so short, and it's been so sweet. I want all of life that I can have. If I could choose I'd rather be a schoolgirl again than anything else," Miss McCarthy says.

A man never realizes his wife's superiority until he attempts to put a crying baby to sleep.

A Week in the Legislature

DECLARING the Ontario Hydro Commission is following the principle laid down by Sir Adam Beck of purchasing power outside the province, Hon. J. R. Cooke, Minister of Power in the Henry Government, in winding up the budget debate for the Goverment, made a spirited reply to Hydro critics. In a vote on the Tweed amendment which criticized the government for not removing certain taxation, the Henry government had its budget approved by the overwhelming vote of 81–18.

In his address, that lasted for an hour and a half, Hon. Mr. Cooke declared the Ontario Government stands irrevocably committed and will loyally observe every single pledge, great or small, in regard to Hydro ever given to the municipalities of the province.

Contracts for purchase of power with private interests, Hon. Mr. Cooke told the House, had been mentioned in a letter written by Sir Adam Beck in 1923 and 1924, in negotiating with Montreal Engineering Company for a supply of power from the the Ottawa River at $15 per h.p., and the reason given for this was that then neither development of the St. Lawrence or on the Ottawa would be concluded for some years.

"It is not true we have departed from the principles of Sir Adam Beck," declared Mr. Cooke, who added he was more concerned with the problem of supplying power than with the prospectus of promoters.

Hon. Mr. Cooke pointed out the vast increase in both customers and the amount of power distributed, while the rural districts have an investment of $15,000,000 in Hydro and a paid-up equity in this figure of $9,000,000, and they are to-day building new line at the rate of six miles a day which increases to 10 to 12 in summer. Total reserves of the commission in the sinking fund, he said, are $10,675,000, while the capital investment was $262,000.000. There are 7,125 miles of rural power lines as compared with 507 in 1923, while rural users had increased from 3,200 to 49,000.

CREATION of an advisory board of three members which will establish a system of industrial school operation comparable to the Borstal system in England is contained in legislation introduced by Hon. W. Martin, Minister of Welfare, which also provides power to search the family history and background of all juveniles committed to any court in Ontario. A qualified psychiatrist is to be appointed to study every child.

STRONG OPPOSITION to the proposed abolition of the use of dogs in hunting was stressed before the Game and Fish Committee, in which several members spoke urging the committee to approve the policy of continuing use of dogs by huntsmen. They argued that it is the wolves and not the dogs that are destroying the deer, and said they would hesitate to enter the bush should dogs be abolished.

A proposed amendment to the fish and game laws is to be introduced to safeguard the rights of both anglers and commercial fisherman which will make it unlawful for any one to purchase, sell or barter pickerel, pike or lake trout except under authority of the commercial license. Complaints from anglers in the Georgian Bay district were made that commercial fishermen were depleting those waters.

A GRANT of $5,000,000 for development work in Northern Ontario was approved by the House, following a discussion of problems of that section of the province by Hon. Wm. Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, who intimated that a system of travelling auditors will be instituted in connection with continuing this work. This auditor will tour the ten engineering districts to check all expenditures made by the department.

Over a period of eighteen years, Hon. Mr. Finlayson explained to the House, there had been $50,000,000 spent in this development, and there had been one charge proven of irregularity in connection with these expenditures. Two huge undertakings are provided for in the fund. These are the building of the Ferguson and Trans-Canada highways, while a route for the latter will require considerable study as to whether the northern route or the southerly shore route should be adopted.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY, Minister of Agriculture, expressed pleasure at the decision of the British Government in not changing the cattle freight regulations which would have made export of cattle from Canada more expensive to the shipper.

"It will encourage the export of cattle from England, as Ontario cattle exporters were much perturbed over the situation as an increase in the space per head would have made export almost prohibitive," said Col. Kennedy.

PREMIER HENRY, in explaining an amendment to the Highway Traffic Act, dealt with the section on hitch-hikers. The section prohibits any one soliciting a lift while on the travelled section of the highway. Premier Henry observed it is directed at the professional hitch-hiker who is causing a menace on the highway by getting out on the road and practically forcing motorists to stop and give him a lift.

"We seek to discourage standing in traffic and holding up that traffic and thereby creating a danger to motorists travelling along the highway," said Premier Henry, who added a Guelph student had complained it might prevent him reaching his home to visit his girl when he is travelling without funds. Premier Henry added that it was not intended to interfere with such cases.

Morewood Ladies' Aid Honours Departing Member

On Tuesday evening, March 24th, the members of the Ladies' Aid of Morewood called on Mrs. Coby prior to her departure for Morrisburg where with her husband, W. J. Cobey, intends making her home. Mrs. Cobey was presented with a handsome blanket. The address which accompanied the presentation read as follows:—

Dear Mrs. Cobey,—

We, the members of the Ladies' Aid have gathered here this evening on this a rather sad occasion as it is to say farewell to one of our members. We hope that it is only for a short time as we sincerely hope that your home will not be so far away but that you can visit us occasionally. You will be greatly missed as a member of our socicty as you were always ready to lend a helping hand whenever it was needed and also do your part in anyway possible. You have held offices in this society for quite a few years and very ably filled them in every way so that what is our loss will be some one else's gain wherever your home may be. Our very best wishes will go with you and our prayer is that God's blessing may be with you and yours. As a token of our appreciation for the work you have so nobly done, we would ask you to accept this remembrance from this society.

Signed on behalf of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid—Mrs. C. Marcellus, Pres.; Mrs. A. Nimmo, Sec.; Miss Lill Feeley, Treas.

IN MEMORIAM

Servage—In loving memory of our dear sister, Mrs. Herbert Servage, who fell asleep in Jesus April 1st, 1929.

This is the day of sad remembrance
Of a sad and bitter call,
When one we loved was taken away
By a short and sudden call.

To-day brings back sad memories
Of that sad and bitter day
That was cast upon our household
Just two years ago to-day.

Sleep on, dear Sister, your troubles are o'er,
Your willing hands will toil no more.
When days are dark and friends are few,
Dear Sister, how we long for you.

We think we see you still in life,
Though two long years have passed,
But in our memory still you live
And will, until the last.
Ever remembered by her brothers and sisters.

Mrs. John Wagner, of Gallingertown, has returned home after spending a week with her daughter, Mrs. Shaler Heagle.

Mrs. Fred C. Gallinger and sons, Claire, Clifford and Hurbert, of Gallingertown, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Weagant and Mr. A. W. Weagant.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rupert, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McMillan, of Finch called on Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cunningham on Sunday.

The roads through here are all good for cars now. Mostly every one who has a sugar bush has it tapped and a fair amount of syrup is being made.

Mr. Reginald Gallinger has left for Watertown. N. Y., after spending the winter with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herb Gallinger.

Mrs. Carmie Froats and sons Lawrence and Clayton, of Gallingertown, spent a day this week with Mr. and Mrs. Shaler Heagle.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Collins called on Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cunningham on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Merton O'Shaughnessy and baby Reta, of Hoasic, spent a day this week with Mrs. Gertrude Weagant and son Robert.

AN APPRECIATION

I wish to thank the Hartford Insurance Company, for their promptness and satisfactory settlement and payment of my severe loss by windstorm of March 8th to my barn building.

Also to Mr. James Clement, their representative, for his care and pains taken in my behalf.

—VINCENT COYNE.

Single Comb White Leghorns

Large White Birds.

Large White Eggs

Do you know that there is as much profit in 180 twenty-four ounce eggs as there is in 300 twenty ounce eggs? Think this over before placing your order for chicks this year. Our Leghorns are large birds and lay a large chalk white egg. Our males are again from eggs direct from Hollywood Poultry Farm, Seattle, Washington, from hens with records of over 240 eggs in one year.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

Good Market Birds

Good Egg Production

Our Rocks this year are again mated to males from the Kemptville School Farm from hens with trap nest records of from 210 eggs up.

Now is the time to decide the number of chicks you will start this year. Our incubators are running at full capacity. We already have orders on our books for thousands of chicks but can as yet supply chicks for any week in April or May. Following are our prices which are $2.00 per hundred lower than previous years.

Up to and Including	April 8th	April 15th and April 23nd	April 29th and May 6th	May 13th and May 20th	May 30th and June 3rd

When Ottawa Is Losing

Evidently Ottawa hockey fans are not the good losers good sportsmanship is expected to produce from the following clipping in a report of the Elmwood–Primrose game in the capital last Friday night.

"Something better than 9,000 fans an all-time Ottawa record for an amateur hockey game, turned out to root for their hopefuls, but stayed to cheer for Elmwoods. But a part of that same crowd who gave the Winnipeggers cheer upon cheer for their brilliant stick-handling, showered the ice with an assortment of vegetables and eggs in the final chapter of the game for no other reason than that the local team was losing. When the game finished the Elmwood goalie had back of his cage a pile of potatoes, cabbages and carrots large enough to open a vegetable business.

"Play was held up when a young storm of eggs and potatoes were heaved on to the ice from the standing room section of the arena. An egg of doubtful age struck Rice-Jones on the back of the hand.

"From the first face-off Sharp netted after taking up the puck when it was checked from Miller but the play was offside and another deluge of vegetables greeted the referee's decision that it was no goal."

A BUSINESS BOOSTER

VARIOUS IDEAS to stimulate business have been advanced by many persons and organizations throughout the country, but a novel one has been undertaken by the young men's division of the Calgary Board of Trade, by which a credit of $125,000 will be released in that city. The scheme calls for the issuing of cheques for $10 each by 500 business men of that city. These cheques will be marked by the banks and will then be used to pay debts to that amount. The receiver of the cheque is asked to pass on the cheque again in payment of a debt. By this means it is hoped that the cheques will be turned over at least once a day for the 25 business days of the month. This would bring into circulation approximately $125,000. If all the men live up to their agreement this scheme should prove a business booster for that city.

STRICT LAW ENFORCEMENT

ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1930 of the provincial police department, tabled by Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General, shows increased activity in the number of prosecutions throughout the province, although this is explained by the additional number of motor cycle patrol officers added to the department. Total prosecutions under all acts was 14,592, an increase of 1,406 over the previous year, while prosecutions under the Criminal Code, exclusive of the Liquor Control Act numbered 8,079, an increase of 1,386.

Commenting on the enforcement of the Liquor Control Act, Major-General Victor Williams, Commissioner of Police, observes that one of the chief difficulties is the home brew beer problem and the influx of American alcohol. There were 6,515 prosecutions for violations of the act, in which 5,550 were convictions, 595 dismissals, and 1,120 committals. Value of beer and spirits seized was $96,618. There were 86 automobiles confiscated under the act, and seven motor trucks valued at $32,600. Major crime included 21 cases of murder, being one less than in 1929; 17 of manslaughter as compared with 28 in the previous year, while suicides totalled 83, the same number as in 1929.

WHEN BISCUITS ARE GOOD PUDDINGS ARE EASY

By Etta Bitta Pye

MAKING good biscuits is an accomplishment in itself. But many a successful biscuit-maker is hiding her light under a bushel, even so far as her own vision is concerned. She may not realize that anyone who can toss up a pan of good biscuits either the fluffy, light kind, or the richer sort, has a whole bag of additional tricks in her possession.

Biscuit dough is really a basis for ever so many delicious things. Starting with a plain baking powder biscuit mixture as a foundation, we can turn it at a touch into a richer tea biscuit, fruited, filled, fancified, as we please.

Glorified Dough.

We can make luscious little fruited rolls or very small and with layers of cheese adding savour. We can glorify the dough a bit, and the result will be a shortcake! I am going to have a lot to say on the subject of shortcake before very long; it will seem no time now before you will be hearing the cry "Berry ripe," and seeing our own home-grown berries, sun ripened and full of flavour, beckoning from every fruit stall. Shortcake should really know no season. We have any amount of canned fruits that are suitable for shortcake use and there are the dried fruits, too.

Steamed or Baked.

Dumplings! What are they, but biscuit dough with its shortening cut away down? Dough dropped by spoonfuls or shaped like the mothering biscuits, and cooked under the lid with our stews and pot pies. Puddings can be made by laying a pat of biscuit dough over any kind of fruit and baking it—or press sections of apple or pear, dusted with sugar and spice, into the top of a pan of dough. Add a sauce—and what more could you wish for? So

"Here's to biscuits!"

Let everyone master their making, and find how much the whole field of cooking seems broadened by the knowledge.

Standard Biscuit Dough.

2 cups flour,
½ teaspoon salt,
4 teaspoons baking powder
.2 tablespoons shortening
¾ cup milk
or ⅝ cup evaporated milk with ⅜cup of water

The ingredients, you will observe, are simple. To vary the biscuit dough all up and down the scale, it is the shortening proportion that we change more often than anything else. The method of mixing holds much of the secret of the biscuit's success. The shortening and milk must be cold, the mixing must be done quickly with as little handling as possible. The biscuits may be mixed before they are wanted, and popped into the oven to bake at the last moment, if the dough is kept very cold.

Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt. Measure the substitute shortening. Toss it into the mixing bowl and cut it through the flour, etc., with a knife. This is far better than rubbing it in with the finger tips, which are bound to heat and soften it.

When the mixture is quite granular, add the milk, also cutting it in with the knife. As soon as all are well mixed, you can turn the dough out on a lightly-floured board or paper, pat it down or roll it into an inch-thick cake, and cut out the biscuits with a floured cutter. Place on a greased pan and bake in a hot oven 12 to 15 minutes, until delicately browned.

If you want a very rich biscuit, increase the shortening up to 4 tablespoons, and you may also add an egg if you like, allowing 2 tablespoons less milk.

Fancy Tea Biscuits.

Make a fancy biscuit from your plain baking powder biscuit dough by adding a little extra shortening (up to 4 tablespoonfuls usually) and unchanged ingredients. Then if you like to add fruit (cut up raisins or dates, currants or finely chopped peel), flour lightly before adding to the mixture. The egg is nice in tea biscuit—if you use it beat in and add to the milk.

Fancy Rolls.

Quick fruit rolls that will be a change from yeast buns, are prepared by making dough as usual, and adding 2 tablespoons sugar; roll it out to only quarter-inch thickness. Spread it with soft butter and any fruit you like—currant, chopped raisins, dates, figs, peel; add a sprinkling of cinnamon; or instead of fruit, sprinkle the butter with granulated sugar and cinnamon. Roll the dough like a jelly roll, then cut in slices about ¾-inch thick. Place these a little apart on a greased pan, and bake. Dust with spiced brown sugar while very hot.

A titled lady was once canvassing for votes at a parliamentary election and stopped at a house, the door of which was opened by a burly woman, who eyed her none too graciously.

"May I ask," said the lady sweetly, "to what party your husband belongs?"

"Certainly!" answered the woman, "I'm the party to whom 'e belongs and well 'e knows it!"

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Farmers in sandy districts are now engaged in plowing. Frost left the ground early this spring owing to the aridity of the soil. In many sections it is now in good condition for working and early seeding of oats and barley is expected as a result.

Ontario's Celery Market

Capture for Ontario growers of the celery market in this province which for years the United States has been supplying, is the aim behind negotiations conducted by the Department with growers of the Thedford district. The suggestion has been made that a cold storage plant be established at Thedford. Celery requires a special system of refrigeration and cooling which is not available at present and which would raise the standard of the product to enable it to compete on the open market. Investigation is proceeding in regard to the possibilities in this direction.

Cow-Testing In Peel

Interest in cow-testing work in Peel County is keen. Results for 1930 of the Peel County Cow Association were presented at a recent meeting. The twenty best cows averaged 12,557 pounds of milk and 445 pounds of butterfat, whereas the twenty poorest cows only averaged 5,267 pounds of milk and 210 pounds of butterfat. It is felt that the culling of low producers would alleviate the surplus milk problem in Toronto. Over 100 cows were entered during February in the cow-testing work, which brings the total number being tested monthly for milk and butterfat production to nearly 900 cows at Brampton.

British Market for Barley

Steps to secure markets for Ontario barley in Britain are being taken by Hon. T. L. Kennedy in conjunction with federal authorities. Recent investigations have shown that British brewers and malters annually purchase about 21 million bushels of barley from California. This barley is especially suited for making beer. A variety of bright, hard, six-rowed barley, developed at the O. A. C., is now being grown here and is equally as good. Ontario growers could produce 100 million bushels of this barley every year if there was a market for it. California barley has been bringing 76 cents a bushel on the English grain exchanges, while cost of shipping is 15.40 cents a bushel. Ontario could ship at about the same cost. California farmers have been receiving 53.6 cents for their barley at San Francisco, while Ontario farmers receive less than 40 cents. British brewing interests are reported to be willing to give the Ontario product a trial, but want to be assured of a sufficiently steady supply to meet their needs.

Buy Quality Seed

"As never before in the history of farming should care be exercised in the purchase of seeds for planting this spring," is the advice of one well-known authority, who adds that it is doubly important to make sure that purchases have been government-tested as a result of last year's drought and the reduced supply of high quality stock. He warns against buying bargain seeds where price alone is the only description given, because reliable seedsmen do not aprove of advertisements where seeds are offered at stipulated prices without any indication as to their quality or origin. It would actually be cheaper to buy the best the market affords than to take the poorest as a gift, he concludes.

Potato and Seed Show

The Potato and Seed Show held at Shelburne recently proved a very successful and instructive event. The classes were filled with good quality products, with Dooley Potatoes and Alaska Oats an outstanding feature. A programme of lectures was given, the speakers including Prof. W. J. Squirrell, of the O. A. C., and Mr. J. A. Carroll, director of the Department's Crops and Markets Branch. The latter emphasized the success of grading farm products in Canada. The quality of eggs, potatoes, and hogs had undoubtedly been improved. Canadians were now eating 30 dozens of eggs per capita, while England eats only 11 dozen per capita.

Barley vs. Corn

Recent declines in the prices of farm products have been far more serious in grains than in live stock and this decline was greater proportionately in barley than in wheat. The situation presents an opportunity to farmers, feeders and poultrymen who have been accustomed to depend upon imported corn. Barley for general feeding purposes is equal to corn in value.

In spite of this fact, there was imported into Canada during three months last fall 3,250,000 bushels of corn while there was available in storage elevators 30,000,000 bushels of high-quality Canadian barley selling at less than half the price of the imported feed.

Scores of experiments in Canada have demonstrated the value of barley as a carbohydrate feed.

Barley is particularly suitable for producing an excellent quality of bacon and may form the bulk of the ration for hogs. In addition, it can be profitably fed to dairy cattle, beef cattle and poultry.

It is pointed out by an authority that the extensive use of barley for feeding purposes will not only improve the economic position of the Dominion but will also result in lowered production costs to farmer and poultryman.

W. A. Ross, of the Vineland Station recommends that if the present spell of fine weather continues, oil spraying should be commenced in pear orchards immediately or at least as soon as it is possible to get on the land with a spraying machine. No oil spraying should be done if the temperature is near, at or below freezing.

Fertilizer on Tomatoes

Five field tests with tomatoes were conducted last summer by the Department of Chemistry of the O. A. C., in various localities, medium to light loam soils being chosen. Good preparation was given to the soil and an average application of 750 lbs. of fertilizer was made at the time the healthy, vigorous stock was set out in the spring.

The five tests showed an average yield of 174.2 bushels per acre where 750 lbs. of fertilizer was applied. The unfertilized section averaged 54.9 bushels per acre, giving a gross gain from fertilizing of 119.3 bushels. The cash cost of the fertilizer was $39 per ton, hence an application of 750 lbs. represents an investment of $14.60. Valuing the increase in tomato yield at 50c per bushel, the gross return was $59.60. Investment in fertilizers was $14.60, hence the net return was $45 per acre, or the tomato growers made over three for one on their investment in fertilizers. Fertilizers used in these tests were 2-12-6, 0-14-6, 3-10-5, and 4-8-10.

To Encourage Use of Lime

In order to encourage the greater use of lime in agriculture in Ontario, particularly in those sections where a soil corrective is required to stimulate more economical production of farm crops, Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture announced a policy of assistance in the matter of reduced freight rates on agricultural limestone.

The C. N. R. and C. P. R. Companies have agreed to reduce the present tariff on pulverized limestone to be used by farmers to the amount of 25 per cent and the Provincial and Federal Departments of Agriculture in co-operation will grant further subventions to the combined amount of one-half the remaining freight rate with a maximum of $1.00 per ton. On limestone screenings that now enjoy special freight rates the two governments will grant subventions amounting to one-half the freight rate with a maximum of $1.00 per ton.

In order to take advantage of this assistance, purchasers must order at least a minimum carload of thirty tons. Where this minimum amount is more than is required by individual farmers they will be encouraged to group their orders in order to take advantage of the tariff reductions.

This undertaking is under the direction of the Crops Co-operation and Markets Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto. Inquiries for further information may be addressed to that department or to your local agricultural representative.

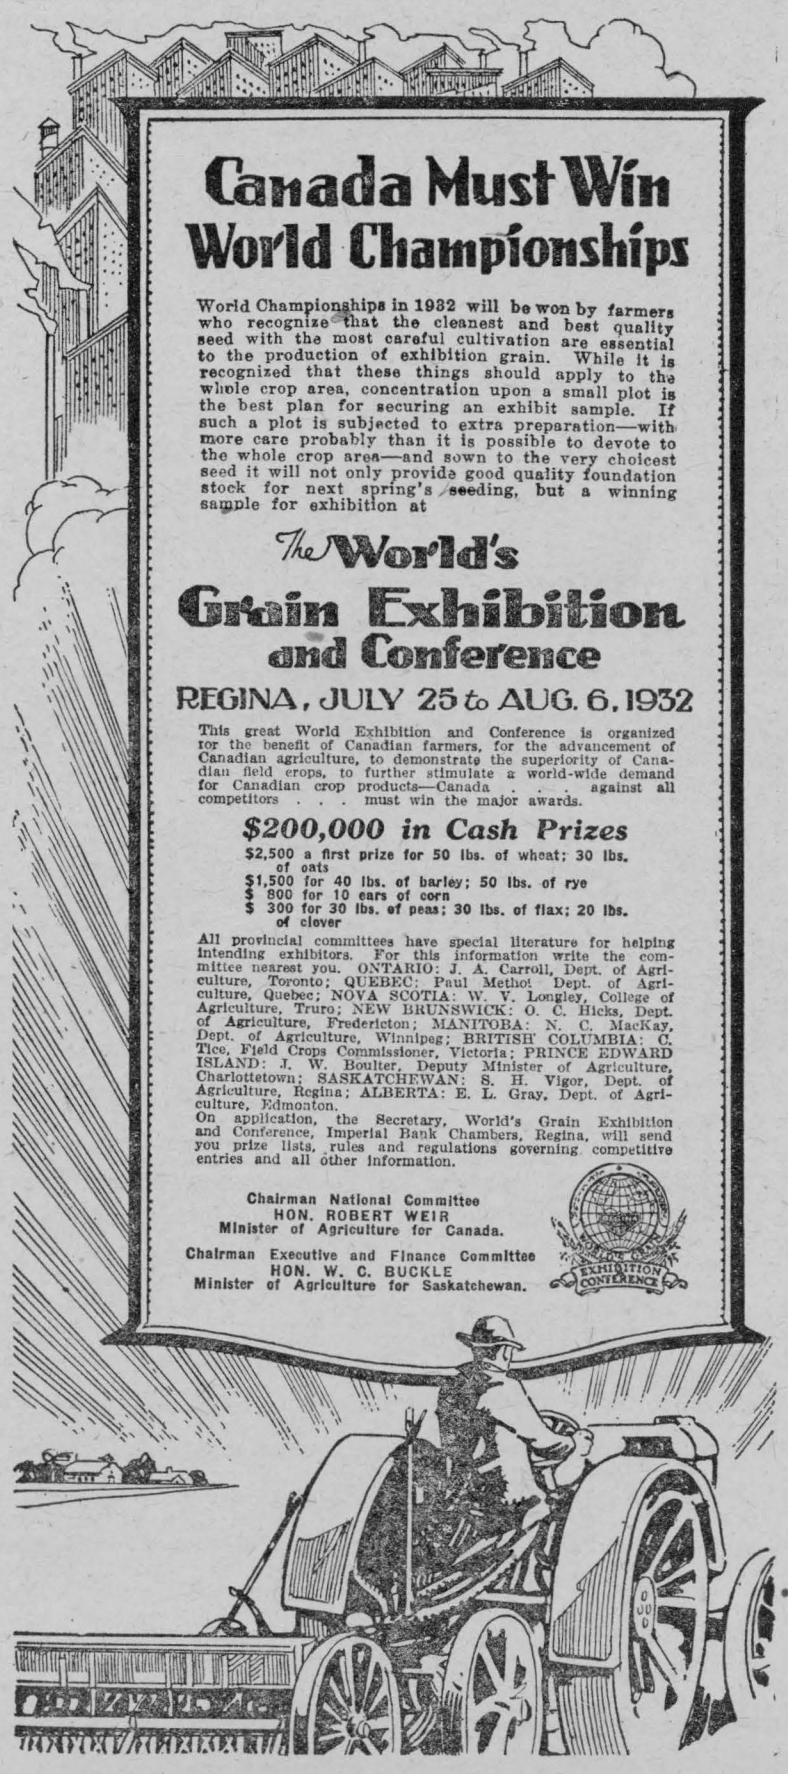

Twelve Out of Thirteen Children Played the Game

Delisle, Sask.—Canada has produced many a hockey team contributed by members of one family. But the Bentley family, of this town, lays claim to the blue ribbon for producing more hockey players—both men and women—than any town on this continent—which means the hockey world .

Many will recall the famous Cook septette of which Carl Cook was the coach. The family came from Southampton, Bruce county, the county that produced Mickey MacKay, Barney Stanley, Hal Winkler, Kenny McKenzie, and other scintillating stars in past professioal hockey ranks.

But the Cooks, as a family, are outnumbered by the Bentley. They were 13 in the Bentley family. Six brothers are playing hockey today and the six sisters were hockey players before they were married. The brothers and sisters used to have real games—six boys on the one side with the six sisters furnishing the opposition. The girls played real hockey, too, taking their bumps with the same nonchalance as did their brothers.

Rory and Jack are now with the Drumheller Miners, star Alberta aggregation of hockeyists; there are two younger brothers with budding reputations in hockey circles, while next to them are two- younger still, who show promises of developing into stars in the not too distant future.

THE BURTIS AFFAIR

AS I was starting for school on the opening day of the term my brother Dan came up from the back pasture with the news that three early lambs were missing. There was nothing for it except for me to put up my books and dinner pail and to help him search for them.

When the report of the missing lambs reached father's ears, he said that probably it was "dogs' work." But he was mistaken, for, although we searched all that day and part of the next, we found no trace of the lambs. In one corner of the pasture there was a swamp with "spring holes" that were reputed to be bottomless, and the likeliest supposition was that the lambs had ventured too far and, as Dan expressed it, "gone clean under."

That was how it came about that I entered Miss Cross's school that term on Wednesday morning instead of on Monday morning. So when I got my first glimpse of Sidney Kelly, all of the other boys were fairly well acquainted with him.

"Say, who's the new chap?" I asked Elmer Haldeman, who sat beside me.

"That's Miss Cross's cousin, or second cousin, or something," Elmer whispered. "He's going to fetch her, and go to school here as long as she boards at home. He's a queer little jigger. Kelly's his name—Sid Kelly." A few minutes later he added. "He says that somebody STOLE your lambs. We got to talking about it yesterday noon. He says there's lots of such work through the country. Miss Cross shut him up. She told him he'd better not guess at things he didn't know for sure."

Sidney Kelly, when I got to know him, proved to be a "queer little jigger" indeed, but that was hardly any wonder when you consider the life he had led. He had been left an orphan when he was nine or ten years old, and Alvin Cross had "taken" him on the strength of a distant relationship and with a shrewd presumption that he could make him "pay his keep." No one ever seemed disposed to question that Mr. Cross didn't succeed in his project, for the boy worked like a slave the year round, except during a very few weeks in the winter, when school kept. Indeed, people said that Alison Cross, who taught our school, was the only one of the Cross family who treated him with anything like kindness and consideration; and certainly Sidney's devotion to her seemed to bear out that belief.

"If she just whistled for Sid," Elmer Haldeman said to me one day, "he'd come on the jump—if he was forty miles off."

Sidney was an odd-looking boy in his baggy, ill-fitting clothes; he was dark complexioned, with deep-set black eyes; and he walked with a limp—the result, he said, of a "hurt" he had had when he was a small child. But the queerest thing about him was his "notions."

One of those notions was that our three lambs had been stolen. He kept harping on that string almost every day; after giving his reasons and citing other cases of petty theft here and there, he would hint mysteriously that he knew more of the perpetrators than he cared to tell.

"Some folks in this town can drive swell rigs and hold their heads up straight as a cob," he declared one day; "but they'd be took down a peg or two, I can tell you, if it was to come out what kind of tricks they've been up to."

Of course we had no idea whom Sidney meant, for he always evaded a direct question on the subject. But one night a young man driving a spirited horse and a stylish carriage, drove up to the door, and Miss Cross, looking rosily embarrassed, omitted the last two spelling lessons and went away with him.

"Must be that's the fellow that drives the swell rig, Sid, and holds his head up so straight," said Elmer, with a chuckle. "You ought to tell Miss Cross to ask him where—"

Elmer was cut short at that point, for Sidney flew at him like a tiger and flung him off the desk where he had been sitting. A bottle of ink went over, and I don't know what further damage would have resulted if the boy's fit of anger had not passed as quickly as it had come.

"I didn't mean to do that," he said contritely as he helped Elmer to get up. "You just kind of took me by s'prise. That's — that's Joe Burtis, They live next house but one to Uncle Alvin."

"Teacher's got a beau,
And his na-ame is Joe," sang little Bobby Lewis, and the whole school room burst into a roar of laughter.

"I guess likely Joe was on this road and thought Alison didn't have any way to get home," Sidney explained apologetically; but that raised as hearty a laugh as Bobby Lewis's rhyme, and Sidney slipped out of the door.

"I'll try not to take that wild Indian by s'prise again," Elmer declared, ruefully rubbing his bruised elbow as we walked home together. "Funny how he acted, wasn't it? I guess he don't like that Joe Burtis much."

"That's who he's driving at," I replied. "You see if it isn't."

A week or so later Sidney confided to me the name of the persons he suspected. I had guessed right. He could not say when his distrust of the Burtises had begun to take definite shape. To all appearances they were respectable farmers. They had made only a small payment on the farm that they had bought near Alvin Cross's; they had let it be understood, however, that that was not because they lacked means, but because their money was temporarily tied up in investments. The most that Sidney could say was that the newcomers acted "offish," and that one day when he went there on an errand Warren Burtis, Joe's father, had padlocked the barn door in his face.

Wondering why the man had done that, the boy had watched the place from his chamber window by night, and on three or four occasions had seen lights in the yard and buildings at untimely hours. Resolving to watch at closer range, he had several times crawled out of his window and made his way across the fields to the Burtis place; but the lights had always seemed to be gone before he arrived there.

At first Sidney's sole motive had been idle curiosity, but early in the fall Joe Burtis had begun to show rather more than a neighbourly interest in Alison Cross, and that had made the boy more determined than ever to carry on his investigations.

He had begun to haunt the Burtis premises by night, and twice he had found the barn lighted at unseemly hours; but no crack or crevice had yielded him a view of what was going on inside.

About that time some petty thefts in an adjoining township, which were reported in the local newspapers, had begun to give some point to his suspicion. Sidney had at once pushed his investigation still harder. He had borrowed old newspapers from the hotel clerk in the village, and had got much information on the subject by listening to farmers in the store. Naturally, he had been keenly interested in the disappearance of our lambs.

On an icy morning in February, after Sidney had left school that winter, he was sent with the team to Frank Tanner's blacksmith shop well down on the road between Hexton and Oliver's Mills. There, as he waited his turn, he overheard a conversation at the forge that filled him with excitement.

"'Tain't the first time things have been lifted round these parts," a grizzly-bearded man was saying. "I had three hams and a shoulder walk out of my smokehouse 'bout a month ago. Jim Morrison' my girl Hannah's man, missed quite a lot of corn and oats last fall. That wool last night was the biggest haul, though. Wool's high this year."

"Something else would be high, if I knew who took it!" said a ruddy-faced young farmer. "I wish I could get my eye on it. I'd know it in Chiny, because nine out of the seventeen were tied up with candlewicking. We run out of twine, and I had a whole boxful of that stuff I bought at Ramsay's auction las' spring."

That was the most definite clue Sidney had had to work on yet. The fleeces of wool that were bound up with the candlewicking could be readily identified, and they had been stolen only the night before.

About midnight Sidney stole out of his room, with his stub of tallow candle and a half dozen matches. But his high hopes were soon dashed. Every door of the Burtis barn was securely padlocked! Somehow he felt absolutely certain that behind those doors was the evidence that would convict the Burtises and that would save Alison from an unfortunate marriage. But he would have to wait his chance.

His chance came sooner than he expected. Late the next afternoon Mrs. Cross sent him to a neighbour's with a knuckle of dried beef and two dozen winter eggs to be exchanged for leaf lard. As he passed the Burtis place he saw from the road that a rear door in the basement of the barn stood ajar.

With scarcely a moment's hesitation he crept hastily down the slope, slipped into the building and concealed himself behind a heap of oat straw. Scarcely had he hidden himself, however, when he heard a tramp of heavy boots, and a moment later someone slammed the door and snapped the padlock. Terribly frightened, he lay there trembling for a full hour; he imagined that the Burtises had seen him slip into the building, and that they were planning to do some dreadful thing to him. But as time passed and nothing happended Sidney breathed easier. It was too dark now to explore the building, and he lay down on the straw and tried to sleep. Although he dozed once or twice, he slept little, and the night seemed endless to him. When dawn came at last, he crept out of his hiding place, went up the basement stairs and began to move about the barn.

During the night he had heard sheep bleating somewhere overhead, but he made the circuit of the barn and stables twice without finding them. At last, however, as he moved round some shocks of corn fodder in a corner of the barn floor, he noticed a small door. Behind it was a long narrow, tunnel-like pen, built in under one end of the big haymow. This pen was empty, but in another at the opposite side he counted, as well as he could in the darkness, twelve or thirteen sheep and lambs. There was of course no proof that they were stolen, but a heap of fresh pelts in a little alcove of the basement, behind several barrels of wood ashes, looked suspicious.

The search for the fleeces of wool was long and baffling, and Sidney more than once decided that they were not there. But at last his patience was rewarded. In the centre of a high scaffold, apparently packed to the roof with bundles of unthreshed oats, he found the seventeen fleeces, and no little difficulty, he determined beyond dispute that nine of them were tied with cotton candlewicking. He was so greatly excited by his discovery that he narrowly missed a bad fall from the ladder in getting down.

Scarcely had he reached the floor when he heard footsteps, and he had barely time to scuttle into a sheltered corner, when three men entered through a trap from the basement.

From behind the shocks of fodder that concealed the door of the empty pen under the mow Sidney watched Warren Burtis, Joe Burtis and a rough-looking, red-headed man whom he had never seen, slaughter nine of the sheep and lambs from the other pen.

Although the sight turned him sick and faint, he kept his mind on his work, and picked up not a little damaging information from the conversation of the three men. The dressed carcasses were to be taken that night to Faxon, a large town about twenty miles away, and Sidney overheard the name of the dealer to whom they had been sold.

One or another of the men was in the barn all through the day, and not until the red-headed man had driven off after dark with the carcasses, and the Burtises had left the barn for the night did Sidney dare to move from his hiding place.

He tried one door after another, but found them all locked fast. The reaction after the nervous strain of the day had set him shivering, and the lack of food was telling upon him. He felt weak and faint. He had tried to swallow some of the raw eggs in his basket, but they had gone quite against his stomach; he hacked off a piece of the beef with his knife and munched it greedily; but the meat was salt, and, as he had no means of quenching his thirst, he was soon suffering miserably. His throat was so dry that more than once he nervously imagined he never could swallow again.

Of the last few hours of his imprisonment Sidney was never able to give any connected account. Hunger, cold and excitement must have made him half delirious. He remembered tossing about from side to side on the straw in the basement, thinking that he could not live very long; from time to time he would creep around to try the doors, and then crawl back again, with chattering teeth and aching limbs, to the straw.

Toward morning he opened his eyes, and lay staring at a square light above him, which slowly resolved it had entered the barn with a lantern. had enter the barn with a lantern. Feeling a breath of cold air on his face he rose and sidled along the wall. He found that the door by which he had entered two days before had been opened. Slipping out noiselessly, he ran at full speed, until he dropped from sheer exhaustion.

When Sidney came to himself it had grown quite light. Oddly enough, he had taken a direction away from home instead of toward it, and was already more than a mile on the road to Hexton. That agreed with his plan, however, for he had decided to give his information to an officer of the law rather than to Uncle Alvin Cross, who, he was inclined to believe, would treat it lightly and thus cause unnecessary delay.

That was a wise decision, for Alvin Cross was in no mood to listen to the boy. When Sidney had failed to return home, his uncle had at first believed that the lad had run away. Later, however, he had begun to worry especially when Alison, who had searched everywhere for Sidney, spoke out her mind in regard to the treatment that her family had given him. Mr. Cross would have been in no temper to listen to so wild a tale as Sidney had to tell.

Indeed, if John Henry Stimson, justice of the peace for the township of Hexton, had not been a man of discernment, Sidney might not have got a hearing even from him; for when he arrived at the justice's house early that Saturday morning he was utterly disreputable in appearance and confused and incoherent in speech. Not until he was revived by coffee and toast from the Stimson breakfast table could he make his story plain.

Mr. Stimson sent at once for John Conroy, the young farmer who had lost the wool several nights before, and who lived nearby. On the strength of the information given by Sidney, Warren and Joseph Burtis were taken into custody before night fall. The older Burtis kept up a defiant attitude, but the younger, when brought face to face with the evidence that Sidney had collected, broke down. His disclosures astounded the court.

It seemed that for some years past the Burtises had played the respectable for a gang of thieves who plied their craft on a modest scale in New England and New York. If an arrest was made, or suspicion became too strong, the Burtis family moved, and was soon followed by certain other families, who systematically scattered themselves over a pretty wide extent of country, and who were soon in active co-operation again. Their last field of industry had been on the New Hampshire side of the Connecticut Valley. It was generally believed that their success in avoiding the law was owing to their keeping widely apart, so that too many thefts did not occur in any one neighbourhood.

Joe Burtis refused to give the names of the other persons connected with the enterprise; those others probably realized how unsafe the publicity that the case had attracted would make it for them to continue their operations, and disbanded.

Sidney figured so largely in the affair and was so much praised for his astuteness and perserverence that Alvin Cross, perhaps in deference to what people said, perhaps moved by real appreciation of the boy's cleverness, turned over a new leaf in his treatment of the lad. Sidney attended school the whole term the following winter, and later Alison sent him for a year to the high school at Hexton.

My brother Dan saw him recently in Chicago, where Sidney is a reporter on one of the big newspapers.

"A queer little jigger" he is still, Dan declares, but one of the keenest men in his profession. He generally gets what he goes after.

Walked Out of Jail

Superior, Wis., March 31.—A man who held against his shoulder a 3-year-old girl who said "Bye-bye" walked leisurely by a jail guard who held open the door for him last night. Today authorities in Douglas county were searching everywhere for C. W. "Red" Haggerty, 32, St. Paul, who escaped while being held in default of $20,000 bond pending hearing on a narcotic charge.

A man, a woman and the little girl had applied earlier for admission to speak to Haggerty. In a few minutes the man left, then the woman.

Meanwhile, guards at the jail were changed, and, although Haggerty had been pointed out earlier to Jailer William Moe, he did not recognize the prisoner as he calmly walked by with the small child.

Baby Born In Airplane

The Pas. Man., March 30.—In true story book fashion Mr. Stork, 1931 model and gasoline propelled, arrived here yesterday from the north country carrying a bouncing baby boy.

Receiving an emergency call from Mile 214, Flight Lieut. A. L. McPhee, of the R. C. A. F., took to the air in his cabin monoplane and three hours later was winging his way back to The Pas with Mrs. Alex Miller as his passenger. Fifteen minutes after leaving Mile 214 on the return journey Baby Miller made his appearance at a height of four thousand feet.

Both mother and son are reported as doing nicely today.

Dollar Down Dandies.

This country is filled with dollar down dandies—people who are buying a radio, an automobile, an electric refrigerator, and a dozen other things at "a dollar down and a dollar when the collector catches them in."

Let us be thankful that some enterprising Indian Prince does not think of selling his surplus elephants here on the "dollar down" plan. Think of trying to sell an unemployment apple to a fair lady accompanied by her pet elephant.

Alice: "Your brother proposed to me during the service in church Sunday."

Jane: "You mustn't mind him. He often talks in his sleep."

"I'll take a trip around the globe," said the gold fish.

AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE

Before placing Insurance on your car, get particulars of the new plan, where you are allowed a reduction of 20 per cent from the recent reduced rates. Discount applicable to Public Liability, Property Damage and Collision Damage.

DRIVE in SAFETY

with an Automobile Insurance Policy to protect you against the hazards of Fire, Theft, Collision, Property Damage and Public Liability.

Every Automobile Owner in Ontario should know about the new Financial Responsibility Law effective since September 1st. The new law makes necessary the abi lity to pay for damage.

In its general application, it requires that the motorist responsible for damage to person or property of others MUST PAY either personally or through insurance OR BE BARRED FROM THE ROAD.

The sensible thing to do is to carry Automobile Liability and Property Damage Insurance. It is better to have this insurance and not need it, than to need it and not have it.

IN MEMORIAM

Servage—In sad and loving memory of our dear daughter, Mrs Herbert Servage, who fell asleep in Jesus April 1st, 1929.

"Thy will be done" seems hard to say
When one we loved has passed away.
Some day, perhaps, we'll understand
When we meet again in a better land.

The years may wipe out many things
But this they wipe out never
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.

Some day, some time, our eyes shall see
The face we loved so well;
Some day our hands will slaps in hers
And never say farewell.

Sadly missed by father and mother.
