Johnston Ouderkirk Injured Sunday In Unusual Accident

Sunday morning two horse-drawn vehicles were in a mix-up causing serious injury to Johnston E. Ouderkirk, a well-known farmer living a mile and a half south of Chesterville, who sustained several broken ribs and other injuries.

Ernest Dillabough with a team attached to a milk wagon was returning from Nestle's plant after having delivered his day's milk. On South street nearly opposite the reforestration plot the pole and whiffletrees became detached from the wagon frightened the horses which ran away. On the wagon with his father was Mr. Dillabough's young son, who was thrown to the road when the wagon careened along out of control. Ahead of the runaway horses going in the same direction was Johnston Ouderkirk driving a single horse attached to a milk rig. Being slightly hard of hearing Mr. Ouderkirk did not hear the approaching runaway horses until they swung one to either side of his milk rig, hurled him to the road and smashed his rig.

On being taken to his home, Mr. Ouderkirk was found to have sffuered several broken ribs and wounds about the head requiring many stitches.

Public Library Board Hope to Re-open Within Four Weeks

After having been adjourned on account of illness and inclement weather a meeting was held in the library last evening by the board in an endeavor to get things in running order as quickly as possible and make the use of facilities now offered available to every resident of the village.

Since the inaugural meeting when re-organization was effected a great deal of work has been done by a committee of the lady members of the board, in thoroughly going over the books on hand, classifying them into their proper divisions and making a new list of the books. Many of the older books have been found to be in very bad condition and many of them will be discarded. Those of interest and merit will be re-ordered and made available as soon as possible.

In gathering up the loose ends of the old library it is found that a very considerable number of books taken out by members before the change over to the new Board, are still in the hands of those who took them out. This is indicated by the records on the file cards turned over to the new Board. It is very urgently desired that all such volumes should be returned without delay. To facilitate the return of the books it has been arranged they may be left at the Record Office during business hours any day of the week. If you are a village resident with the welfare of the new library at heart you will not hesitate in returning these books. Each resident is now part owner of the library which will be conducted for the benefit of the whole community.

A tentative date has been set for the re-opening about the middle of next month, when it is expected a goodly number of new books will be added to the shelves and further additions will be made regularly. Chesterville deserves a good library and the Board would appreciate suggestions from any one desiring certain books, all of which will receive attention.

Flood Waters Higher In Nation Than For Years

Until the week-end it seemed almost, that there was not going to be much flood in the Nation this season, with the snow disappearing so gradually between frosty nights when the run-off was very gradual. The water is now rushing through Chesterville almost the full flow within very few inches of the top of the retaining wall at the south bank. We are fortunate locally. Upstream there is much submerged acreage as well as beyond the village down stream. At Crysler the flood is high and the village has been cut in half as far as communication of one side with the other is concerned.

At Cass Bridge Highway 31 has been impassable for some time. Tractors were used for some time drawing cars and trucks through the flood water from either side until a bus seemed to find the going too hazardous and traffic was re-routed by way of Highway 43 through Chesterville to cross the Nation through this village.

There appears this morning to be a slight fall in the height of the water with the worst of the flood having passed this point.

Former United Counties Warden J. R. McLachlan Dies

Mr. McLachlan, who was 70 years old, served as warden of the counties in 1937 and following his term of office was appointed business manager of St. Lawrence Sanatorium. He held this post until 1940 when ill health forced him to retire. He served as reeve of Lancaster village for three years in the early 20's and from 1927 to 1937. During this period he was a member of United Counties' council.

BEEFSTEAK AND MUSHROOMS

The first reaction to unrationed meat will be . . . hurrah, now I can have beefsteak and mushrooms . . . a juicy roast of beef with Yorkshire pudding . . . pot roasts with browned potatoes . . . a stew that will knock Aunt Lucy for a loop . . . and a big bone for the dog.

This story of good things to eat applies only to Canada and in this land of such bountiful supplies it is hard for us to realize that Britain's quota of meat is a bare one shilling and tuppence worth (about 25c) per person per week, yet and with the hard winter they've been having, and now the terrible floods, their resistance must be almost at the breaking point. The marvel is that they can still carry on with a burden almost too much for any one nation to endure—and say very little about it, at that.

A good meat dinner after a hard day often saves not only a man's health but his morale, as well as that of his wife and growing children. So when you buy your first Sunday roast of unrationed meat, please remember that over there in Britain, as well as in Europe, they are still looking westward to us for most of their meat supplies, so buy only what you actually need.

This week—on March 27th to be exact—consumer meat rationing went into the limbo of discarded war emergency measures, but price control over all meat will continue, with meatless days retained in all public eating places. Regulations governing slaughter permits along with quotas will be continued.

Tuesday and Fridays will be retained as meatless days in all public eating places also, as the great savings in meat consumption made possible through these measures have constituted an important contribution to Canada's meat exports to the United Kingdom and other needy areas.

One of the main reasons for discontinuing the meat ration at this time is because of the difficulty in holding experienced technical staff to continue with such widespread supervision as meat rationing calls for. The Wartime Prices and Trade Board staff is thinning out and those remaining are needed to enforce and supervise other rationed goods, that are deemed necessary for some time to come.

So that a fair share of meat supplies will be assured to all Canadians from Coast to Coast the Board—in collaboration with the Meat Board—will continue to supervise the distribution of meat. They are also asking all housewives to keep on with meatless days in the home and other meat saving measures they've been practising in order to help hold the meat consumption at present levels so that our overseas shipments will not fall short.

Conserving meat for hungry people overseas is just another way of sharing our bread . . . no loaf is ever so sweet as the one we share.

POTATO FOOD VALUES

The best way to serve food values in potatoes is to cook them in their skins. Of the choice between boiling them or baking them, boiling conserves more vitamins. Even if potatoes are to be served parsleyed, mashed, creamed, hash-browned, or in salad, start them on their way boiled in their skins.

When raw potatoes are called for in a scallop or soup, keep the peelings thin, and peel the potatoes just before cooking. If allowed to soak, the potatoes lose some of their nutritional value. On occasions when they have to be peeled ahead of cooking time, put them in salted water. Serve them quick-cooked and steaming hot. The longer potatoes stand exposed to the air, the more vitamin C they lose. Left-overs should be covered and kept in a cold place until they are to be used.

THE HORSE RESPONDS TO GOOD TREATMENT

There are similarities between horse and tractor power. Both need a thorough overhauling in preparation for heavy work in the Spring, and both need a gradual breaking in to heavy work, says J. G. Stothart, Division of Animal Husbandry, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

With the horse it is its general condition, feet, possibly teeth, and the harness, that will need attention. It is possible on the general farm to keep the horses in good condition on light regular work during the winter, but when horses are not worked, some thought should be given to getting them ready for the heavy work in Spring. About two weeks to a month before heavy work starts the feed should be increased. It should be increased gradually to put on some extra flesh as well as tone the horse up generally.

While the horse is regarded as a dumb animal, actually it is not dumb at all. It responds tremendously to care and consideration. It should be handled and groomed regularly. Much of the winter coat can be removed by constant grooming and if this is done sweating too much when heavy work starts will be avoided. To improve the pulling power and often avoid later lameness the horse's feet should be trimmed. If a horse does not put on weight with food feed and light work, it is possible that his teeth are not right. If this is so, the teeth should be filled so that the horse will get the best advantages from the feed.

In addition to overhauling the harness by washing, mending and oiling, it is important that harness be properly fitted. Nothing hinders the best performance of a horse more than an ill-fitting collar. It should be neither too big nor too small, but such that will allow an even distribution of the pull on the shoulders. For the first few days of heavy work the condition of the shoulders should be watched carefully and the face of the collar should be kept clean to avoid grinding dirt into the shoulders. Loss of time through breaks and injury to the horse can often be avoided by the proper care and fitting of the harness.

These chicks are an accumulation of chick orders cancelled on account of the feed scare.
Feed scarcity is a temporary situation caused by a shortage of box cars to bring feed from the West. Navigation will open in April and we should see the end of feed shortages by May. We will guarantee feed until June from our own feed store for all chicks purchased from us. Ceiling prices on eggs are removed and eggs should go high in the fall months. We can take orders for May and June chicks in White Leghorns, Barred Rock and Leghorn-Rock Cross.

Not Him

This from Scotland: Little Angus was given a new 10-shilling note for his birthday. Going to the local chemist, he had the note changed into sixpences and shillings. Then he went across the street to the grocer and received a 10-shilling note for the change.

He repeated this several times. Finally his father called him to account for his strange behavior, and Angus explained:

"Well, sooner or later somebody is going to make a mistake, and it's not going to be me."

Some Tale

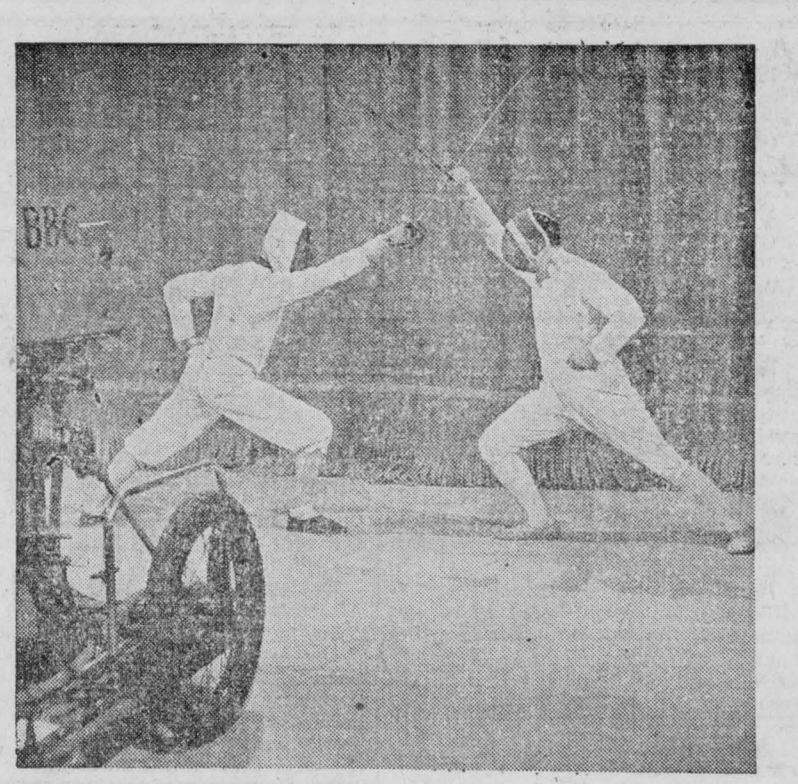

They were just a pair of care-free lads flying a kite with a fine long tail in a vacant lot. Passersby gazed coldly at the woman obviously their mother, who descended on them with shrill cries of:

"Get that thing down! Haul it down this minute."

"Go on," somebody shouted, "let them have their fun."

The mother stabbed a hand toward the blue sky:

"That kite tail," she wailed. "It's my nylons."

AGREES WITH NATION VALLEY CORRESPONDENT

To The Record:

I was so pleased with the piece I saw in your paper that we got last week that I could not help making some sort of reply. The piece which I refer to was in the Nation Valley news, about the way the ration was handled. It sure made me feel good to think someone else felt just like I do about that sort of thing. Feeding the bees and fooling the farmers to go to town for extra sugar and tea.

The one who wrote it said, "It was a laugh." Well, I wonder who the laugh was on. I know we just turned and walked out never to go again. The old saying "If a bee stings you, the first time it is his fault, but if he stings you the second time, that is your fault." Well, that thing never stings us again.

Hope you and yours are well and we sure enjoy your paper.

KEEP EGGS CLEAN

Cleaning eggs is not a substitute for clean eggs. No type of cleaning can do a satisfactory job on stained or very dirty eggs. Any type of cleaning removes to some extent the protective coating of the shell and hastens deterioration of quality. The surface of an egg is slightly moist when it is laid. Clean nest material is the only way to prevent staining.

In the laying house no dirty litter should be allowed, and frequent collection of eggs avoids dirt caused by birds walking over or soiling other eggs already in the nest. The point is to keep eggs clean and avoid the necessity and labour in cleaning them. Canada has attained a notable reputation on the British market for clean eggs.

Some Chicken

The landlady glanced round the table at her 12 hungry boarders before starting to carve the rather sad looking chicken.

In rapid succession she asked each which part of the fowl he preferred Ten of them decided on legs.

The carver dropped her knife with a clatter on the dish.

"What do you imagine this is?" she said, sarcastically, pointing to the chicken. "A centipede, or what?"

"Oh, no," replied the boarder who had been served. "Judging by the piece of neck I've got, I should imagine it was a giraffe."

When I Win The Sweepstakes

By R. J. Deachman

One night my son who lives in Montreal gave me a call: "Anything new", he remarked, "I haven't heard from you for a few days, how's everything?"

Now I knew that he had a ticket on the Irish Sweep and it had been run a few days before, so I remarked by way of reply: "You didn't get a horse?"

"No," he said, "I didn't, but I got my money's worth ($2.50), dreaming about it—dreaming what I would do with the money and Dad I did a mighty fine job spending it."

Years ago I had a ticket on the same show and I too did some dreaming. I lived in the Township of Howick in the County of Huron, three miles from the little village of Gorrie. All that country in the old days was one great forest, mostly hardwood, maple and elm, mountainous trees they were. The pioners who hewed homes out of that wilderness were robust men of mighty valor. There are few like them today. Where now could you find men who, with the tools these men used, would face the problem of clearing a farm in conditions such as then existed.

In the years as they passed I pondered these things in my mind. When I had this ticket I dreamed that I would win the "Sweep", that I would have $100,000, with the $100,000 I would buy back the old farm, plant it in trees, return it to forest, a replica, so far as I could make it, of what it once was. Here too the trees were mostly maple and elm along the higher levels, basswood, with here and there a butternut in the lower areas. "Haw" trees grew in the beaver meadow close to the creek. How georgeous they were in May! In the fence corners when I knew it there were a few clumps of wild plum and choke-cherry trees. We robbed them every year and broke the branches.

When I had it all planted and the trees growing I would donate it to the Township of Howick to be maintained as a permanent forest, as a memorial to the men who, in a lifetime accomplished the impossible, cleared the land, built homes and barns, lived to change a wilderness into a great farming area. They were proof of what could be done by honest toil, a thing which today there is a tendency to despise. There are easier ways of getting rich now, at least we think there are. I wonder if there are better ways of making a life?

How long would it take for these planted trees to grow into a forest as it was in the days of my father? I dont' know. It seems to me that 100 years would do the trick. It's a short space of time in the life of a people. Once the trees started to grow and their purpose became visible it would become a living monument which would help us remember at least one of the great things well worth remembering.

So the dream remains, I have still to win the "Sweep." I have in imagination planted a great many farms like that. I have visioned them in the West on areas where now there is nothing but sand. I have planned them in imagination along the banks of streams. I have wondered if there were trees growing in other countries which would be more suitable than the ones we now have in the West. There they would serve a different purpose. Here in Ontario we should have them in every county, perhaps in every township, a forest memorial of fifty acres or even a hundred—a living tribute to the greatness of the men who made the nation.

EAT YOUR AGE

Declaring that food needs vary with age, nutritionists at Ottawa insist that as we "get up in years" meals should be simple and consist of easily digested food.

In advanced years, protein requirement is reduced. Only a small amount of tissue-building material is needed for body repair. Physical processes and activity slow down, so caloric need from food is less.

While the same basic food rules apply at all ages, the form and quantity of meals for the elders differs from those required by younger people. In the twilight of life, meals should be smaller, if more frequent, and consist of warm food, easily chewed.

Summer Feeding Of Dairy Cows

(Experimental Farm News)

One of the many factors which influence economical milk production is the summer feeding of dairy cows. This includes not only good pasture management, including proper seed mixtures and fertilization, so that a plentiful supply of pasture is available throughout the season, but the proper handling of cows in order that the best use is made of the pasture provided, says Dr. C. D. Mackenzie, Division of Animal Husbandry, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The problem with many dairymen is how best to take care of the surplus flush pasture growth in the spring and early summer and what to do in the hot, dry summer months. Different methods are available, such as the use of permanent pasture annual pasture crops, the use of aftermath, rotation of pastures and the feeding of supplementary feeds, such as ensilage or green crops.

Information obtained last year on the handling of the dairy herd at the Central Experimental Farm, provides some interesting results. Pasture was provided in the regular crop rotation as a second year hay field of 37 acres.In the early season 15 acres were fenced off with an electric fence and an early cut of hay was taken off this area. The remaining 25 acres carried 47 cows to July 20th. They then received the 15 acres of aftermath from the area reserved for hay. Later they received another 19 acres of aftermath following the first cut of first-year hay, on an adjoining field. This latter aftermath consisted of a very rank growth of legumes and bloating was feared, but by feeding supplementary corn silage and grain at the rate of one pound for every four pounds of milk over thirty pounds, bloating was avoided. Still later they received another 28 acres of aftermath following a second cutting of hay. This series of aftermath areas, together with the original pasture area, which had many opportunities to recuperate, carried 1½ cows per acre, with the hay areas yielding an avarege of 2½ tons per acre in addition. Fresh green grazing was provided throughout the season, one of the best grazing seasons experienced for some time, with the result that production was kept up to an average of 36 pounds of milk per cow per day throughout the whole season.

Planning to make complete use of the early lush growth of pasture herbage, reserving any areas not needed for early pasture for an early hay crop will provide good aftermath later when it is usually badly needed.

Thankful

There was an old rabbit that lived in Briar Creek. He had lived there for years and years. No one knew how old he really was. One day some young rabbit reporters came to interview him. The interview ran something like this:

"Mr. Rabbit, how old are you?"

"Oh, I'm very old," the rabbit replied.

Do you know why you have outlived your friends?" asked the bunny reporter. "Do you do anything unusual?"

"Well, I always take a bath in beer. You might call that unusual," the old one said.

"Goodness, please tell us why you always take a bath in beer," asked the first reporter very quickly.

"Well, it gives me a few more hops."

Health Necessity Is Proper Sleep

Shakespeare must have had a good night's rest when he wrote: "Sleep that knits up the ravelled sleeve of care."

Doctors confirm the immortal bard's observation—for sleep is vital to health. It restores energy, rests the muscles and eyes, and tones the blood vessels.

Some people seem to get along with as little as five or six hours' sleep a night . . . but most of us feel better after a sleep of eight hours' duration. If you have a feeling of always being tired, it may not be due to lack of sleep. The family doctor should be consulted as something may be wrong with your health.

Try to relax first—then sleep will usually follow. You might like to try these rules.

1. Start taking it easy half an hour before retiring. (Play some game, plan an excursion for the week-end write a letter to a friend. Take a hot drink—hot milk or cocoa, for example).
2. If you like to read in bed, choose non-fiction or a "hard" book. Something that will bore you to sleep.
3. Rest your mind by thinking of pleasant things—some happy incident during the day,—some enjoyable incident of your childhood—anything to make your mind calm and serene.
4. To quieten the body, get rid of heavy pressure. (Lighten weight of covers and clothes if they are oppressive.)
5. Take a tepid bath without a rubdown. As the body becomes warmed in bed it becomes more and more comfortable. If during the night one becomes sleepless, throw back the covers until body becomes slightly cooled. Then when the covers are pulled up again, the body once more sinks into coziness.)
6. Relax the muscles completely.
7. Be sure your sleeping room is ventilated properly.

Conservation of Deer

Conservation of deer is best accomplished by including a judicious amount of regulated hunting in the programme. This the conclusion which the U. S. Forest Service has reached according to Mr. Swift of that service as stated in an address to the officers of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, in which he described wildlife management in the U.S. National Forests. Whitetailed deer constitute six milion of the estimated seven million big game animals on the reserves.

At one time deer were so scarce in many areas that it was necessary to bring in breeding stock. Closed seasons and other conservation measures enabled the herds in Pisgah and Kyeback reserves to reach such numbers that they overstocked the range; and killed the plants that supplied their food. When this stage was reached, the deer died by thousands in the winter. It has been found that when the range is so destroyed by overgrazing it requires a generation to bring it back.

How do they know when the range is being overgrazed? By watching the food supply. Forest plants are classified into three classes thus:

(1) Good browse - Oak, white cedar, dogwood, red maple, yew, tulip, alfalfa leaves and fresh grass.

(2) Secondary - Deer will eat hickory, basswood, etc. these more or less - Most tree species including hard maple, beech, hickory, basswood, etc.

(3) Starvation - When these are being eaten, the range has been overgrazed, and it is too late to save them from starvation - Norway (red) pine, Jack pine, white spruce, alder, rhododendron, dry hay, dry grass.

Just as grazing cattle create a "cow-line" in a pastured wood-lot, deer, when plentiful enough, will kill seedlings of most of the desirable tree species and browse as high as they can reach to make a similar line. Hunting is the only means by which numbers can be kept down in these reserves so the required number of licenses to keep down the population is calculated each year.

A knowledge of the deer population is desirable for management purposes. One method of estimating the population is by study of the browsing conditions; another is by means of a "Game Bag Census". The Ontario Department of Lands and Forests wishes to get information from both these sorces, and would like interested people to report on local conditions. A form, "Game Bag Census" is available to hunters from the Game Warden, or the Department of Lands and Forests, Kemptville Ontario.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN

Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers!

You probably have one member in your family who thinks there is no dessert in the world like apple crisp. He is not far wrong, particularly if you use the following recipe and take enough cream from the top of the milk bottle to whip and place on the dessert just before serving. Be sure to add to the cream, besides a little brown sugar, a pinch of nutmeg. (You will likely have to explain to the family that the specks of nutmeg are not dirt, but they will forget about this when they taste it.)

APPLE CRISP

1|3 cup oatmeal, ¼ cup sugar, ⅛ tsp. soda, ⅛ tsp. baking powder, ½ cup whole wheat flour, ⅛ tsp. salt, ¼ cup fat (preferably good quality vegetable fat).

Place sliced apples in shallow baking dish and place in moderate oven until apples become soft. Then lightly spread the above mixture, which has been combined in the order given and is of a crumbly consistency, over the apples. Place in oven and leave until the crust is delicately browned. Serve hot with whipped cream or rich milk. This dessert may be successfully made substituting rhubarb, prunes or fresh peaches for the apples. If you do not happen to have oatmeal in the house, we have found that the whole wheat alone is almost as nice.

And let us celebrate with a few dates using them in a good old-fashioned steamed pudding. Nothing is more popular with the men and here is a recipe utilizing rolled oats:

STEAMED DATE PUDDING

1 cup flour, 1 tsp. baking soda, 1|3 tsp. cinnamon, ½ tsp. salt, ½ tsp. allspice, 1|6 tsp. ginger, ½ cup rolled oats, ½ cup pitted chopped dates, ¾ cup raisins, ¼ cup milk, 1 egg, 4 tbsps. melted fat.

Combine dry ingredients. Add milk and beaten egg, then melted fat. Place in well greased bowl and cover tightly with wax paper. Steam for two hours. Serve with brown sugar sauce.

Our muffins and desserts take on a new significance when whole wheat flour or oatmeal is used in place of white flour. And here again we add vitamins and minerals galore which cannot be stored in the body and hence need regular replenishing.

WHOLE WHEAT MUFFINS

1¼ cup whole wheat flour, 4 tbsps. sugar, 3½ tsps. baking powder, ½ tsp. salt, 1 egg, 1 cup milk, 3 tbsps. melted fat.

Sift flour, baking powder and add sugar. Beat egg, add milk and melted fat and pour into a well made in the centre of the dry ingredients. Stir only until damp and place in muffin tins. Bake in electric oven at 400 degrees, 20 minutes.

OATMEAL DROP COOKIES

¾ cup fat, 1 cup brown sugar, 3 eggs, 2 cups flour, 2 cups oatmeal, 1½ tsps. cinnamon, 1½ tsps. allspice, 1½ tsps. salt, 1 1|3 cup raisins, ½ cup sour milk, 1½ tsps. baking soda.

Cream fat, add sugar and cream well. Add eggs and beat. Sift dry ingredients. Add raisins. Add alternately with milk to first mixture. Drop on greased cookie sheet and bake in electric oven at 375 degrees until golden brown.

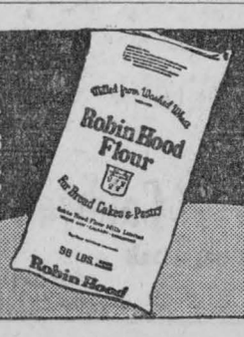

TAKE A TIP

Rules for Good Tea Biscuits

1. Use acurate tested recipes.
2. Read the entire recipe and visualize each step.
3. Use quality ingredients. They are the most economical in the long run.
4. Prepare pans before starting to work. Dust lightly with flour.
5. Preheat oven ten minutes before you need to bake. If you are not sure of oven control place a piece of unglazed white paper in the preheated oven and if it browns in half a minute it is the hot temperature needed—otherwise use 425 degrees.
6. Use level measurements for all ingredients, be systematic and accurate and results will not vary.
7. Sift flour before measuring, then measure amount recipe requires. Sift again with the baking powder and other dry ingredients to blend them evenly.
8. Handle quickly and lightly and only enough to give the dough a smooth appearance. As little flour as possible should be dusted on bake board. Dough is then patted and rolled lightly to even thickness. Use a floured cutter to press out biscuits.
9. Place baking pan in the centre of the middle shelf. Two pans should be placed so that there is a space around them.
