MEETS TRAGIC DEATH AS CAR PLUNGES INTO CANAL

The people of the communities of Williamsburg and Morrisburg were shocked when it became known on Saturday morning that the body of the young man drowned in the canal a short distance east of Cardinal, was that of Bruce Wingard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wingard of Williamsburg. An ex-student of the Morrisburg Collegiate Institute, Bruce had many friends throughout this district whose heart-felt sympathy was immediately extended to the surviving members of the family.

Bruce, for some unknown reason, was driving on No. 2 Highway, when his car left the road on a curve where there is an opening in the guard rail, and plunged into the canal at 5 o'clock a.m., when Bruce apparently fell asleep.

The plunge was witnessed by the occupant of an American car who followed at a short distance, and the accident was immediately reported to Mr. D. H. Weir, Superintendent of Canals, Morrisburg, under whose instructions the work of removing the car from the canal proceeded, immediately upon arrival of Traffic Officers Eugene Rose of Morrisburg, and Carl Johns of Cardinal, and Dr. C. F. McPherson, County Coroner for Grenville.

The body was found in the front seat of the car when it was hoisted on to the S. S. Knowlton shortly after ten o'clock. The car was located by a film of oil on the surface of the water.

The only witness of the fatality saw the car leave the curve and catch the canal bank at a 45 degree angle which it went along for over 200 feet. Leaving the top of the bank at the same angle, the car hurtled through the air for 150 ft., landing on a stone copping 35 feet below. The car then bounced about 400 feet and plunged into the water of the canal. After the crash a man's hat came to the surface of the water. Debris of the car was scattered along the copping of the canal. There were no marks of brakes being applied.

The car was almost a total wreck and Bruce is believed to have suffered a fractured skull in the crash. No inquest will be held.

The funeral of the late Bruce Wingard took place on Monday afternoon from his parents' residence to Williamsburg United Church, and was very largely attended by friends who joined with relatives in paying final tribute to his memory. The service was conducted by Rev. C. A. Adey, who based his discourse from 2nd Timothy, 1st Chap. verse 10. Rev. C. R. Cronmiller, pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Williamsburg. The church choir led in the singing of the hymns, and during the service very effectively rendered "Does Jesus Care."

Bruce was in his 21st year and was born near Williamsburg, a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wingard. He attended Morrisburg Collegiate Institute for a couple of years and upon leaving school was engaged on his father's farm. He was a member of the Young Peoples' League and a faithful member of Williamsburg United Church, and very seldom missed the church services. He will be greatly missed in the home circle and by his many friends and associates.

Besides his parents, he is survived by his sister, Miss Gladys Wingard, at home, and his brother, Mr. Ross Wingard of Williamsburg.

Interment took place in the family plot in Williamsburg cemetery.

Honorary pall bearers were: Eric Barclay and Dwight Casselman.

Active pall bearers were Gerald Norval, Parker Locke, Francis Carr, Carl Casselman, Keith Saddlemire and Garth Stacey.

Included among a profusion of beautiful floral tributes received were pieces from Young Peoples' League of Williamsburg United Church and Morrisburg Collegiate Institute.

A host of friends in this community join in expressing sincere sympathy to the family in their bereavement.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. B. Wingard and family desire to express their sincere gratitude to all who, out of love and sympathy, assisted so materially at their sad loss, also for floral offerings presented.

These kindnesses shall not soon be forgotten.

LOCAL BUILDING DAMAGED BY FIRE

Fire, which broke out following a blast in the attic of the business building on Main Street, Monday evening, owned by Mr. Arthur Merkley, and formerly occupied by the Brewery Warehouse, caused damage estimated at $2000 before it was brought under control. So sudden was the outburst of flame and smoke, that for a time the whole business square, adjoining the Merkley building was threatened. Had a strong west wind been blowing it is doubtful if the limited fire-fighting equipment could have controlled the flames, and it is probably due to the splendid work on the part of the local firemen that the fire was confined to one building. Following the explosion which occurred about 7.30 p.m., bricks flew from the top of the walls to the street below, several people narrowly escaping injury. The roof and ceiling were completely destroyed, while a living apartment over Lloyd's Market, as well as the market itself were damaged largely by water.

Adjoining business places, including Wm. Weegar's Tobacco and Confectionery Store removed explosives and perishable goods from their store and for more than an hour, traffic on Main Street, which forms a part of Provincial Highway no. 2, was diverted to side streets, while three stretches of hose played upon the burning building.

The building is centrally located in the main business section of Morrisburg, and has been recently occupied by Mr. Frank Stewart, Tailor, the Brewery Warehouse, and Mr. Lloyd Barkley's Meat Market as well as a number of diferent occupants in the apartment.

The total loss is covered by insurance and already the work of repairing the building has begun.

JAIL GOVERNOR SHOT TO DEATH MONEY MISSING

With two bullet wounds in the left chest, the body of Ralph A. Cook, governor of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry counties jail, Cornwall was found in the garage behind his home about three o'clock Sunday morning.

Whether it was suicide or foul play is being thoroughly investigated by police. Possibility of murder was heightened by two suspicious facts: that a wallet containing $200 he was said to be carrying was missing; and that the lethal weapon, a new .22 calibre rifle, had been filed to obliterate all identification marks. On the other hand, Chief of Police Fred Seymour said that business worry presented a possible motive for suicide.

It is believed that death occurred between 11 p.m. Saturday night and 2 a.m. Sunday morning.

Rifle Under Heels

The rifle was found under Mr. Cook's heels, almost clear of the body but its position, pllice believe, would not affect a suicide theory. It was of the single shot type.

Post mortem examination disclosed that one bullet had pierced the heart the other missing the heart by a small margin. Both bullets took a slight downward course and were found lodged in the right side having crossed the body.

Mr. Cook was last seen alive at 11 o'clock Saturday night when he left his home to put his automobile away for the night. Members of the family in the Cook home, 100 feet from the garage, jail officers and prisoners in the nearby jail told police they did not hear shots.

There were no signs of a struggle as far as police could ascertain. Members of the family found the body when they became alarmed at Governor Cook's prolonged absence.

The rifle barrel was 20 inches, Experiments showed it could have been fired by the 57-year old jail governor. There appeared to be no powder burns on the clothes, but this type of rifle requires very little powder, and only a microscopic examination would tell definitely.

Dr. C. A. Stewart, coroner, stated an inquest would be held. The date has not yet been set.

According to information police received from members of the family Governor Cook had been on vacation for the past two weeks and was not expected to report for duty at the jail until Tuesday morning. During the holiday he had been occupied with business at a farm he owned in Osnabruck township, of which he was a native, and a garage at Farran's Point.

Early last evening he returned to Cornwall from Farran's Point, where he had spent the day. He conversed with his son, Dalton, who operates a candy and book shop on Pitt street. After buying a weekly newspaper he went to his home. At that time, he appeared to be in exceedingly good spirits.

HEARD CAR START

In his home, he read the newspaper, until the news broadcast at eleven o'clock, after which he told members of the family he was going to put the car into the garage. He left the house shortly after eleven o'clock and members of the family heard him start his car preparatory to running it into the garage. When he did not return to the house immediately, it was believed he had walked up the street to talk with friends or had gone into the jail.

However, at 2.30 members of the family became worried and a daughter, Grace Cook, instituted a search for her father. Dalton Cook joined in the search when his sister called at his home, and about three o'clock the son and daughter found their

Synopsis

The story opens with a scene in an American music hall. "MYSTICUS", a British artiste with a great gift for stage "magic," has finished his turn.

In his dressing-room he finds awaiting him his young brother, who is endeavouring to escape from a racket in which he has got himself involved. Mysticus offers to take him home to England, but the conversation is interrupted by the entry of three men, who, producing pistols, demand that the younger man come away with them. He refuses and the older brother intervenes, with the result that both are shot and left for dead.

Several years elapse, and the scene is changed to an old house, Owl's Croft, on the East Coast of England. It has been bequeathed by an eccentric man to his nephew, FRANK DIGBY, who, on taking possession of the neglected place, is almost scared out of his wits by what seem to be psychic happenings.

Digby enlists the help of MAXTON HUNTER, who has a reputation for private investigation, and the two take up residence at Owl's Croft, where they are attended by an elderly couple, MR. and MRS. BARLOW. The couple are unsatisfactory, but Digby finds that other servants he engages refuse to stay.

On the first evening of Hunter's stay in the house there are unaccountable noises and ringing of bells, and uncanny things happen to an ancient picture of a priest. Presently, footsteps are heard outside the library.

CHAPTER VI

The Call Of The Hound

"Now you are here, Cranston, stay with us for dinner — well, that is, perhaps I give it an unduly phonetic name — but I mean, we're about to eat, after a long and tiring journey from town."

The strange old man accepted Digby's invitation and Mrs. Barlow slipped away to her kitchen.

After a few common-place remarks to the visitor, Hunter turned so that he might command a view of the picture.

Covertly he had already investigated it and he observed the strange fact that the horrible crimson line of gleaming moisture around the neck of the man in the picture was fading.

This, Hunter reflected, was a subject for investigation when alone. Digby led the way back into the lounge-hall and Mrs. Barlow produced tea, and announced that a meal of greater substance would be ready at dinner-time. Hunter purposely steered the conversation away from the gruesome subject of the picture.

"Do you live far away, Mr. Cranston?" asked Hunter.

"You can almost see my place. A few minutes' walk.

His Coat Was Dry

The answer gave Hunter further food for conjecture, for the man's coat was dry. His hat, too, was innocent of any moisture. The quaint old green umbrella leaning against his chair, furled. Yet outside a drenching rain swept the countryside.

"A queer place, Mr. Hunter, is the Owl's Croft!" Cranston smiled as he spoke, and pulled his fingers until the joints cracked aloud.

"A queer place indeed! That is why I am so attached to it. My good friend, Digby is going to allow me to imbibe its psychic atmosphere to the full."

"I should explain," chimed in Digby, "that Mr. Cranston is a medium — a spiritualistic medium."

"Really, that's certainly interesting. Professionally, may I ask, or otherwise?"

"Quite privately, Mr. Hunter. I use the inborn faculty for my own ends, and that of my friends who are interested. Do you believe in spiritualism."

"I'm decidedly interested." Hunter smiled, "but can go no further!"

The flickering fire-light played very strange tricks with the gargoyle-like face of Cranston and his voice dropped to a low vibrant whisper.

A simple phrase, but unconsciously the atmosphere in that darkened hall tensed and Hunter accepted the flash challenged from Cranston's glaring eyes.

"Mr. Hunter," he leaned forward, pointing a lean fore-finger, "take my advice and do not dabble in matters of the occult. Here and now, all around us, unseen by you, but seen by me, by reason of my priceless gift, are spirits, moving and walking, and having their being in our very midst!"

"Mad perhaps," mentally assessed Hunter, "but artful certainly." "Very interesting, I am sure," he added out loud. "After all, Mr. Cranston, that may be only a theory and not a fact."

"Is it a fact that by your side I see an old man?"

No Subject For Fun

Cranston's lean finger craned forward, and with his right arm extended, pointed to a spot between Hunter and Digby.

"Really," politely returned Hunter, sipping his tea. "I've been telling Digby here that his place needs brightening. Now, if you could convenietnly see a nice prepossessing young lady."

"This is not a subject for fun," Digby interrupted "Our good friend, Mr. Cranston, is a keen believer in these matters, and we who do not understand must not scoff!"

"If I could see for myself —" commenced Hunter.

"Wait—you shall," interrupted Mr. Cranston. "The hour and the place are ripe. Why not now?"

"As you say, sir, why not now?" agreed Hunter.

"Oh, but I say!" began Digby, but instantly the behaviour of the mediumistic Cranston stopped him.

"Silence!" he commanded in a hollow, booming voice. "You know, Digby, of my powers. Pray keep silence; for there is much in the air tonight that must be explained. Somehow, I do feel that our friend here is vitally concerned. Do not touch or disturb me whilst I am in trance!"

The two men stared in his direction. At his gaunt figure sitting rigidly erect in a high-backed chair, his lean and bony fingers gripping its arms. The darkness had increased, and now they could discern the man by reason of the flickering fire-light.

Hunter stood with his back to the glow in order that the maximum amount of light should fall on this mediumistic man. He watched every movement carefully.

The fellow distorted his features with twitchings and mouthings, all of which Hunter decided were theatrical by-play.

The fire temporarily died down and the black shadows of the old hall had leapt out from lurking corners.

CHAPTER VII

Cranston's voice began in a low monotonous rumble, muttered meaningless phrases came from his lips.

"Master — master — I await." A pause during which the silence was only broken by the swishing of the rain and wind at the windows.

"Back, back aeons agone, yet I am passing — passing —"

The voice trailed off into a whisper, and by the dim light they saw that the medium's head had fallen forward. His chin was buried deeply in his chest.

Hunter involuntarily made a movement, but even as he did so, a shudder shook the lanky form in the chair. Mr. Cranston sat bolt upright again as though vested with a new-found vigour.

"Who calls?" The voice with which he spoke was assuredly not the cracked and rasping tones of Cranston, but the clear, well-modulated voice of a man in vigorous health.

"It's another man," whispered Digby.

"Hush," cautioned Hunter beneath his breath.

Howling Of A Dog

The figure in the chair craned its head stiffly and appeared to be listening, straining to hear something above the noise of the gale.

"This night must not pass without the re-visitation of those who took a part in the mighty scenes of old. The passing of time is as of nought. The things there are which may never die; scenes there be which shall never cease to be enacted. Imperishable, they live through the ages."

How to Cook VEGETABLES

Modern dietary standards demand vegetables and still more vegetables, stressing always the vitamins, minerals, and bulk which they provide, and the particular merits of leafy greens. Granting that vegetables are a daily essential, a housewife appreciates them for still another reason —for the variety they contribute to her meals. They bring something fresh and seasonal to her table every day.

Of particular importance in serving vegetables is their cooking. Even the finest vegetables may be made utterly tasteless and unappetizing by poor cooking — usually overcooking or else slow cooking. Their natural colour and fresh flavour must be preserved to get the best value and one of first rules to achieve this is to cook them the shortest time possible — only till tender.

Here are some attractive vegetable recipes which will add variety to your meals.

Carrots Au Gratin

2 cups cooked diced carrots
1 tablespoon minced onion
1-3 cup grated cheese
¼ teaspoon paprika
Cream sauce

Make cream sauce by using 1½ cups milk, 2 tablespoons butter, and 2 tablespoons flour. Cook until thick. To this add the cheese, onion and paprika, and finally the diced carrots. Mix well, place in a buttered baking dish and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven for 25 minutes.

Baked Stuffed Onions

Select large onions. Peel and then remove core with apple corer. Fill the cavity with seasoned bread crumbs. Bake until tender.

Cauliflower A La Parmesan

1 head cauliflower, cooked
1 cup white sauce
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup buttered bread crumbs

Place cauliflower in greased casserole. Pour white sauce over cauliflower and sprinkle with cheese and bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 30 minutes, or until the crumbs are delicately browned. This serves 6. Canadian cheese may be substituted for Parmesan cheese, if desired.

Glazed Onions

1 pound (30) small white onions
4 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons sugar

Peel onions and cook in large amount of boiling water salted until just tender. Drain and dry on cheesecloth. Melt butter in saucepan; add sugar. Then add onions and cook over low flame, shaking frequently until onions are glazed. Serves 6.

Baked Mushrooms

1 pound large fresh mushrooms
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
2 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons cream

Wash mushrooms and place in casserole. Season with salt and pepper. Dot with butter. Add cream, cover, and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 30 to 40 minutes, or until tender. Serves 4.

Spinach Ring

2¼ cups cooked spinach, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
Dash of marjoram
1 teaspoon scraped onion
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons melted butter

Cook spinach (½ peck) only until tender. Drain and chop. Add seasonings, eggs and butter, and mix very thoroughly. Turn into a well-greased ring mold. Place in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 30 minutes, or until firm. Turn from mold and serve with Mushroom Sauce. Individual molds may be used. Serves 4.

Mushroom Sauce

½ pound fresh mushrooms
3 cups water
½ teaspoon salt
tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
Dash of pepper

Wash mushrooms well. Slice lengthwise through cap and stem. Cook in water 30 minutes, over medium fire. Add salt. Drain liquor and measure 1½ cups. Melt butter, add flour, and blend well. Add mushroom liquor (1½ cups) and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add mushrooms and pepper and cook five minutes longer. Serve with above spinach dish. This sauce may also be used to serve with chicken, veal, egg and other vegetable dishes. Makes 2 cups sauce. If desired, chicken broth or cream may be substituted for ½ cup mushroom stock.

"Equal Rights" Has A Real Meaning

Married Worker Teaches Husband To Cook, Mend, Darn And Sew

DURHAM, Eng. — Defending the right of married women to continue at work, Mrs. Rose Farrant, 26, clerk in the same London factory which employs her husband, told a meeting here of a 50-50 arrangement which gives here equal opportunities with her husband.

She taught him to cook, mend, darn and sew. "By this arrangement we both have opportunities for attending meetings in the evening and taking part in other activities."

Mrs. Farrant said she only wanted to work until they had enough money for her comfortably to retire and have eight children.

Lay Awake In Agony With Neuritis

Kruschen Salts Brought Lasting Relief

Ordinary headaches are bad enough, but they are as nothing compared to the awful pains of neuritis in the head, says this woman. Read how Kruschen completely banished the pain:—

"I had neuritis in the head and right arm. I suffered untold agony with my head, and I dare not think what might have happened had it continued. Everybody knows what a headache is like, but it is as nothing compared with the awful pain of neuritis in the head. I spent sleepless nights tossing with pain. I began taking Kruschen Salts, and after some months of the treatment I have effected lasting relief."—(Mrs.) L.M.

Neuritis, like rheumatism and sciatica, frequently has its roots in intestinal stasis (delay)—the unsuspected accumulation in the system of harmful waste matter, which leads to the formation of excess uric acid.

Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts have the power of dissolving uric acid crystals. Other ingredients of Kruschen assist Nature to expel these dissolved crystals through the natural channels.

Need More Women In Our Parliament

Senator Cairine Wilson Voices Views

More women are needed in Canada's Parliament, Senator Cairine R. Wilson, first Canadian woman senator, said in an interview at Vancouver last week.

Mrs. Wilson, Liberal senator from Ottawa, said women in Canada and Great Britain had contributed so much to social reforms in the past ten years that their position in public life could no longer be disputed.

Interested In Social Feform

"Women undoubtedly have devoted more attention to social reform than men," she said. "In Great Britain especially they have achieved many much-needed improvements in housing and maternity welfare—very often in the face of much unjustifiable opposition."

"In Canada women have been responsible for obtaining mother's allowance in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec."

Senator Wilson has one women colleague in the Upper House—Senator Iva Fallis, Conservative, of Peterborough, and there are two women in the House of Commons. They are Miss Agnes Macphail (U.F.O.-Lab., Grey-Bruce), and Mrs. Martha Black (Ind., Cons., Yukon).

Quintuplets Like Dentist's Chair

All Have Perfect Teeth, Examination Shows

CALLANDER, Ont. — The Dionne quintuplets, who struggled to get into the dentist's chair all at once, were told by three specialists that nothing was wrong with the 100 teeth which the girls share evenly.

Dr. Arnold D. Mason, dean of the University of Toronto's Dental College, said that the children had "unusually beautiful" teeth. Neither he, Dr. Charles Corrigan of the University, nor W. G. Thomson, of Hamilton, Ont., could find a sign of decay.

Have Eaten Right Food

They had no suggestions for Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, physician to the five, about a change of diet, finding that the food which the children were eating had developed their teeth perfectly.

The dentists took impressions of their teeth, which will be kept for records.

As the dentists first pronounced Yvonne's teeth perfect, Emilie, Annette, Marie and Cecile rushed to take her place in the chair. Yvonne was reluctant to leave and it was only with the help of the nurses that the specialists could prevent all five climbing into the chair at once.

Cardinal Deplores Current Fashions

Calls Women's Garb "Silly And Pagan"

William Cardinal O'Connell, dean of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in the United States, last week at Boston spoke against modern fashions, dances and songs, and charged that some persons were making "millions in the corruption of our young people".

In a sermon at a communion mass of the New England Province Federation of Catholic College Clubs at Holy Cross Cathedral, he described modern fashions as "silly and pagan".

"If fashions have set out to make women ridiculous, they are certainly succeeding," he said. "In all our silly dances and perfectly stupid music—where is the art in it? Dance halls are perverting our young men and women. People today make millions in the corruption of our young people."

Cardinal O'Connell urged his listeners to make their protests heard and to stand by their standards, resisting the "corruption all about us".

Albania Holds Mass Nuptials

150 Couples Wed In Honor Of King Zog's Marriage

TIRANA, Albania. — Lucky couples numbering 150 were united in mass weddings throughout the kingdom in honor of King Zog's wedding to the Countess Geraldine Apponyi of Hungary.

Fifty were married at the sovereign's expense and 100 at the expense of various municipalities. They were selected by local authorities.

A large crowd gathered to witness the ceremony at the Tirana City Hall where 14 couples were married. The couples were formed in line and marched through the streets singing native songs.

Gifts And Festivities

Coins and stamps bearing portraits of the king and countess were put into circulation while various towns christened streets "Queen Geraldine".

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON VII
TESTING DISCIPLESHIP BY SERVICE.—Mark 10:17-31

GOLDEN TEXT—Come, follow me. Mark 10:21.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time.—Late February or early March, A.D., 30.

Place.—Peraea, the portion of Palestine on the eastern side of the Jordan, opposite Galilee.

This fascinating story of the rich young ruler is also found in Matt. 19:16-22 and Luke 18:18-23. There is hardly anything in all the Gospels more gripping, more penetrating, with a lesson more important, than the meeting of Jesus with this young man.

17. And as he was going forth into the way. Of course this refers to Jesus, who is last mentioned by name in verse 14. There ran one to him. Matthew tells us that this person was both young and wealthy, and Luke tells us that he was a ruler in Israel, which, while in this place it could hardly mean that he was a member of the Sanhedrin, probably implies that he was one high in authority in some local synagogue. This person had much to his advantage—youth, power, and wealth. This man also was one of high character, as we discover in reading the story. And kneeled to him, and asked him, Good Teacher, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life? To begin with, this man was not satisfied with what he had—his possessions, his authority, all the power and vigor and joy of youth, which he certainly possessed, were not meeting the deepest need of his heart, and he knew it. In fact, he did not possess the great thing—eternal life, by which is meant not only life that continues throughout all the eternities, but life which satisfies, which is always deep and rich and abundant, life that really comes from God, life that bestows perfect peace and abounding joy, life that grows more wonderful with every passing day. What he wanted was what all men in their better moments have longed for down through all the ages.

Something To Be Done

In the second place, we note that this man felt that there was something that he should do, some great task he should undertake, to obtain that which his heart most longed for.

In the third place, we must not fail to observe the true humility of this man.

18. And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? none is good save one, even God. When the young ruler called Jesus "good" and asked what "good thing" he should do to gain life, the question was in what sense he meant "good." The question of Jesus was asked to bring home to the ruler the meaning of this word. To show what Jesus means, he points out that greatness in the true sense can be predicated only by God. So far is this from denying the Godhead of Jesus that it actually asserts it for him. The man is thus led to look at Jesus in a new way, that indeed Jesus may be God, essentially one with God as his Son.

Duty To One's Neighbour

19. Thou knowest the commandments. Do not kill, Do not commit adultery, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Do not defraud, Honor thy father and mother. Having declared that only God himself was good, the Lord Jesus now points the young man to God's commandments, which, coming from God, are often called "good" in the Old Testament and were given for our good. The Lord cites only the commandments which regulate man's duty to his neighbor, probably because they admit of a relatively simple application to the conduct of life.

20. And he said unto him, Teacher, all these things have I observed from my youth. The young man expected Jesus to make a great deliverance that would throw the needed light upon his own darkened soul.

21. And Jesus looking upon him, Loved him. And said unto him, One thing thou lackest. The verb here translated "lackest" is the same as that translated in Rom. 3:23, "fall short of the glory of God." Jesus knew and knows the human heart perfectly. He knew what this man needed without speculation or further questions; and when he finally diagnosed his case, the diagnosis could be absolutely depended upon. Go, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, follow me. Jesus does not tell all men who follow him to sell their possessions. What he is getting at is the one thing which this man has set up in his heart as an idol, the one thing that he thinks e hmust have, and that is, in this young man's case, his wealth. Now, no one can have eternal life when he puts his hope and trust in anything that belong to this earth, whether it be material things, a person, or an ideal. It should be a person, or an ideal. Eternal life can neither be had by giving up anything or everything on this earth.

No Sacrifice Wanted

22. But his countenance fell at the saying, and he went away sorrowful. The verb here translated "his countenance fell" is used of the saddening of either the face of nature or the human face. The answer did not exasperate, but it gave him pain, which was visible on his countenance. For he was one that had great possessions. This man wanted something better than he had, but he was not prepared to make any sacrifice to get it. If Christ could accept such, millions of people would join the church at once. He wanted God, but not at the cost of his gold; he wanted life, but not at the expense of luxury.

23. And Jesus looked round about, and saith unto his disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God! This young man was undoubtedly prepared to do much and to meet Jesus half-way, but he was not ready to go the whole way and to put all at the service of Christ.

24. And the disciples were amazed at his words. Then, as now, there was an established relation in which wealth enabled its possessor to come to the front and occupy the more prominent position. But Jesus answereth again, and saith unto them, Children, how hard it is for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God! 25. It is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. Jesus meant an actual gnat and an actual camel, so here camel and needle's eye are actual. Jesus means that it is impossible for a rich man who trusts in riches to go into the kingdom.

26. And they were astonished exceedingly, saying unto him, Then who can be saved?

27. Jesus looking upon them saith, With men it is impossible, but not with God: for all things are possible with God. What Jesus meant was that God would be able so to change a man's heart by the movement of the Holy Spirit, by the sacrifice which the Lord Jesus Christ was soon to offer, that, however great the man's wealth might be, his heart would not be resting in his wealth; but he would love God with all of his heart, with all of his mind, with all of his strength; and thus in spite of all of his wealth he would be saved.

28. Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee. From their position the question was inevitable. Instead of adding to their worldly goods this association had diminished it. They had borne everything for him. What return would be in his greatness make them?

29. Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or mother, or father, or children, or lands, for my sake, and for the gospel's sake. 30, But he shall releive a hundredfold now in this time houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life. When one gives up a life of sin and lives for Christ, he has a clearer mind, and a stronger body, and a peace in his heart he never knew before, and a wisdom that comes down from above, all of which will enable hin to do in his life what he could not so successfully do previously.

There is a higher meaning to our Lord's words also. One house gone, but one hundred doors open. One brother in the flesh lost; but a thousand brethren in the spirit, whose love is deeper and whose kinship is profounder, gained.

31. But many that are first shall be last; and the last first. Many who are first here in this life, even in religious matters, in church affairs, because of great gifts, or congenial personality, or because of self-seeking, will in the kingdom of God he last, i.e., they will have a minor place; whereas many who now are in oblivion, whose names are not even known, will, because of the purity of their lives, the absoluteness of their love for Christ, be given first place in the kingdom where love and sincerity and holiness will be the virtues by which men will be judged by the King himself.

Industrial Accidents Down But Traffic Toll Increases

Safety Convention Is Told That Streets Are More Dangerous Than Factories; Industry Is Pointing Way for Reduction of Auto Accidents

Industry can point the way in accident prevention and a way must be pointed to stop the wholesale slaughter automobile traffic is piling up to greater heights every year, Louis Blake Duff, of Welland, declared last week in Toronto at the annual convention of the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations of Ontario.

Accidents in industry have been steadily declining, he emphasized, while automobile deaths are increasing to an appalling extent. Industry has been so successful in its accident prevention work that a man is safer today in the midst of whirling wheels and speeding machinery than he is in his home or en route between his home and the factory where he works.

Home Is Very Dangerous

Home is one of the most dangerous places, Mr. Duff said, because a slippery rug, a bathtub or a chair that is not where the sitter thinks it is are greater hazards than electricity or disease. Accidents in the home are responsible for 35 per cent. of all deaths, the automobile causes 24 per cent. and industry is responsible for only 17 per cent.

"What shall it profit," he asked, "to save a man in the shop or save him in his home if he is to go out and get killed on the highway or kill someone else?"

Last year automobiles killed 766 people in Ontario, as many men, women and children as make up an average incorporated village, the speaker pointed out. The army of injured and maimed mounted to 12,092. If the automobile has any "luck" this week-end, Mr. Duff said, it will kill five persons and injure 40 in Ontario.

One of Largest Jobs

"The job of accident prevention is one of the largest jobs we have in Canada. There is only one better field on this earth for activities of this kind, for Canada ranks second only to the United States in mortality from accidental causes," he declared.

How Canada Wars On Forest Fires

OTTAWA. — Constant experiments and research on the part of forest authorities in Canada during the last twenty years have brought about great advances in the development of equipment and technique for detecting and controlling forest fires. The use of the airplane for fire patrol and transportation, the development of light portable fire pumps and linen fire hose, light-weight radio apparatus for communication, hand spray pumps, and miscellaneous equipment are a few of the results.

Locate Fire First

In fighting a forest fire, the most important thing is to locate it as soon as possible after it has started. In an up-to-date forest administration high towers of wood or steel, usually with a cabin on top, are erected at suitable points. When a fire is spotted by the look-out man, he takes a bearing on the smoke by means of a special instrument called a fire-finder and telephones this bearing to headquarters. If two or more bearings can be had in this manner from other lookouts, they are laid out on the map at headquarters, and the point where all such bearings intersect is the location of the fire.

Decrease In Area

When a fire is located, it is important to get fire-fighters to the scene as quickly as possible. The means of transport for men and equipment may be by motor truck, power boat, airplane, canoe, or on foot, depending on the region and terrain. If the fire is small, or if there is no water available, it is controlled by removing all inflammable material down to the mineral soil in a strip around the fire. The fire is prevented from crossing this cleared strip, and burns itself out. If a source of water supply is available, gasoline fire pumps and long lines of fire hose are used, much as in a city fire. The men also use hand spray pumps fed from water bags or tanks carried on their backs.

Reflecting the efficiency of Canada's forest fire protection organizations, statistics compiled by the Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa, show a decrease of about 60 per cent. in the area of merchantable timber burned per fire during the period 1918-1937.

Power of Pen

One's pen is a very precarious thing to depend on for a living, but relying on it is a great adventure, according to Leslie Gordon Barnard, president of the Canadian Author's Association.

In a world that is sharpening its sword, it is a good thing for the writer to sharpen his pen, that he may have some saving stimulus against indignation over the world's behaviour, he told the Canadian Women's Press Club, at Montreal.

"Never Too Serious"

Mr. Barnard described "moments in the life of a writer." Among these "moments" he said, were the stories "that come as gifts from the subconscious;" periods of hard work and discouragement; when the job is done; when the cheque or acceptance comes, and seeing the story actually between the two covers of the book.

The power of the pen and of the press mattered tremendously, declared Mr. Barnard, and "we must never take ourselves too seriously and become ponderous." Two essentials in writing, he found, were distinction and vitality.

Must Indicate Proper Weight

Bunches of Asparagus and Rhubarb Come Under New Regulations

In bunching asparagus and rhubarb merchants are required this year by new government regulations to put them up in bundles of specified weight.

Asparagus must be put up in eight ounce or 16 ounce bunches. A little leeway of one ounce is allowed for shrinkage after they are bundled at these weights. They must not weigh less than seven or 14 ounces respectively when sold. But when they are put up they must weight the eight and 16 ounces specified.

And Baskets of Potatoes

Formerly retailers could put them up in any sized bundles with the result that customers could not tell what value they were getting.

Forced rhubarb can only be offered for sale in bunches from 16 to 17 ounces in weight when packed and not less than 15 ounces per bunch when offered for sale.

It is also required by the regulations covering fruit and vegetables that potatoes can only be sold by weight. A basket of potatoes must weigh ten pounds for six quarts and 18 pounds for 11 quarts.

Stolen Pictures "White Elephant"

They're Too Valuable to be Marketed by Thieves Anywhere In the World

LONDON.—The sensational theft of £100,000 ($500,000) worth of Old Masters from Chilham castle was no nearer solution this week.

Police inquiries yielded no developments. An art expert termed the robbery a "white elephant picture theft," saying: "There is no available market for the pictures anywhere in the world. They are too famous to be sold or to be enjoyed by a secret buyer."

He predicted they would remain hidden in the hope they could be returned to the owner, Sir Edmund Davis, art collector and mining company director, for ransom.

One Was a Rembrandt

The robbers entered Sir Edmund's castle in Kent County by cutting a pane from a window. They cut from their frames five celebrated paintings of which the most noted was Rembrandt's portrait of his first wife, "Saskia At Her Toilet."

Two paintings by Gainsborough, "Lady Clarges" and "Pitt," "The Earl of Suffolk" by Sir Joshua Reynols, and "Man With Dog" by Van Dyke, Flemish painter, completed the loot.

Fully Insured

A special watch was set up to prevent the pictures from being smuggled out of England.

Detectives were inclined to think the paintings might have been carried away in an airplane. One guest at the castle recalled being disturbed by a droning noise "like an aeroplane" the morning of the robbery.

Sir Edmund said he was not worrying, as the pictures were fully insured, "not only against all risks but even against there being any dispute over the insurance claim."

Canine Is Tried On Murder Charge

Idaho, a dog which appeared in court in New York on a charge of drowning a small boy in a canal, has six months of a "jail" term still to serve.

Although acquitted of wilful murder at his trial in August, 1936, Idaho was sentenced by Justice of the Peace Homer Benedict to 787 days' confinement.

The sentence provided that he should not be allowed to leave his owner's yard.

Your Handwriting Shows What Talent You Possess

By LAWRENCE HIBBERT
(Graphologist and Psychologist)

Are you discontented in the work you are doing? Do you feel that you are a square peg in a round hole; tied down to work that is distasteful to you?

If you are, you are but one of a vast number of people, for one of the most frequent queries that is put to me in the host of letters I receive is: "Can you tell from my handwriting whether I have any talent? I would like to get into work that is more congenial and better-paid."

Handwriting analysis plays an important part in bringing relief to a lot of people. Because your handwriting DOES show what talent you have. It may be only a latent talent that needs much developing before it can be put to practical use, but it is there. And if you can but realise it, you can set to work to elaborate on it and realise your destiny.

Some time ago a young man living in Northern Ontario wrote to me. He was a grocery assistant, earning a beggardly pittance. He was naturally dissatisfied. Could I give him any advice about possibilities of improving himself?

His handwriting showed two things plainly. He had musical talent, but had not cultivated it to any extent. And he lacked self-confidence.

I told him frankly that he needed firstly to develop more self-assurance, and then to cultivate his musical talent. Without the one the second would be no use to him for he would lack the confidence to impress others with his talent.

It was a considerable time before I heard from him again, but when he did write it was to tell me that he was in Chicago and earning a fairly good living in an orchestra.

As he says himself, without a handwriting analysis, he probably would have been struggling along in a village store.

Do YOU wish to know what talent you possess? Would you like to know how to make the most of your own abilities? Have you any friends whose real characters you would like to know? Send fairly long specimens of writing, and with EACH specimen enclose 10c to help defray cost of handling. Enclose with Stamped addressed envelope to: Lawrence Hibbert, Room 421, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto, Ont. All letters are confidential.

Ghandi Says His Days Are Ending

BOMBAY.—M. K. Gandhi has predicted his early death.

"My days are numbered," the 69-year-old nationalist leader wrote in the newspaper Harijan.

"For the first time in 50 years I find myself in the slough of despondency. All about me is darkness; I am praying for lights . . . I have detected in me a flaw which is unworthy of a votary of truth."

JAIL GOVERNOR SHOT

father lying dead upon the floor of the garage,. The body was between the automobile and a small pile of lumber against the outer wall.

EXTRA CARTRIDGES FOUND

The wounds were clean and there was very little blood. The rifle had not been purchased in Cornwall during the past month or two, or Mr. Cook had not purchased cartridges from Cornwall merchants. In addition to the two empty shells, police found three extra cartridges for the rifle about ten feet from the body. The cartridges were wrapped in a piece of newspaper.

The jail governor was known to have been in the habit of carrying large sums of money upon his person a pocket of his suit was turned inside out when the body was found but members of the family said this was not the pocket in which Cook carried his money. The wallet said to be missing was believed to have contained approximately $200.

ACTIVE IN POLITICS

Mr. Cook was born at Archer, Osnabruck township, 57 years ago, a son of Mr. and Mrs. David Cook. He farmed in Osnabruck until his appointment as jail governor in October, 1934. Mr. Cook was actively connected with politics and for 12 years served in Osnabruck township council as councillor, deputy reeve and reeve. He resigned as reeve when he was appointed governor of the jail.

Surviving are his wife, two sons Garnet of Toronto, and Dalton, Cornwall; and three daughters, Mrs Floyd Bouck, Riverside, Mrs. Cecil Bolton, South Mountain, and Miss Grace Cook, Cornwall.

Failing in their efforts to trace the purchase of the .22 calibre rifle shots from which were fatal to Ralph A. Cook, governor of the counties' jail Cornwall, early Sunday morning, police renewed their investigations with added vigor in hope of clearing up the mystery surrounding Cook's death.

Although a strong motive for suicide has been revealed, certain facts of the case lead to the possibility of foul play and police are overlooking nothing in their efforts towards a solution of the fatality. Under the direction of Police Chief Fred Seymour and Sgt. Cory Moore, they scoured the district west and east of Cornwall in hope of locating the dealer from whom the rifle was purchased, but without success. Similar trips will be made until every merchant in the district who sells firearms has been called on. The fact that all identifying marks on the rifle were obliterated by a file, makes the tracing of the rifle all the more difficult.

No Prints Found

No fingerprints of importance were found on the rifle by fingerprint experts at the Royal Canadian Police fingerprint bureau, Ottawa, and this was disappointing, as it was felt that possible fingerprints would lead to a quick solution of the fatality.

The rifle was brought back to Cornwall with Chief Seymour, announced his intention of trying to bring out the serial number and the name of its maker by means of acid. Acid has been found very helpful in bringing out defaced numbers on bicycles at local police headquarters and Chief Seymour feels that something might result from its use on the rifle.

While police covering the district have been primarily concerned in locating where the rifle was purchased they have also questioned numerous people whom Cook called on Saturday in the hope of finding the file he purchased at a Cornwall hardware store Saturday morning.

MONEY ALSO SOUGHT

Another angle of the case which is considered very important is the fact that a reported sum of $200., said to have been on Cook's body at the time of his death is missing. The wallet containing only two $1 bills was found about 100 feet from the garage in which Cook's body was discovered.

" We will have to work all the harder in view of the fact that tthere were no fingerprints on the rifle," Chief Seymour commented Chief Masonic Lodge attended the funeral ing the investigation into Cook's death, appears confident that something will turn up within the next few days which will solve the case.

Chief's Request

Chief Seymour issued a request for voluntary information in connection with any sales or purchases of .22 rifles. "If any person knows of any one purchasing or selling a rifle of this description, we would be glad if they would contact the Cornwall police department", Chief Seymour declared.

Attended by grieving members of the family and relatives, as well as many friends from Cornwall and district, the funeral of the former jail governor was held from his residence on Tuesday afternoon to St. Paul's church cemetery, Aultsville. Rev. J. E. Lindsay, rector of Trinity Memorial Church, Cornwall conducted the service. Members of Farran's Point Masonic Lodg attended the funeral in a body.

WAS MAN CREATED IMMORTAL

(Part One)

Regarding that "tombstone affair" as recorded in your issue of May 6th. Many questions arise as "Does death end all?" "Where are the dead?" "Was man created immortal?".

Quoting from Present Truth No. 34. "He who would seek to know of man's destiny must inevitably turn to the record of his beginnings in the Book of God. Here only can we secure a true conception of the first appearance of life on this planet. The Bible says that man was created by God. "God said Let us make man in Our image, after Our likeness; and let him have dominion over all the earth. So God created man in His own image, in the image of God created him." Gen. 1:26,27. The bible also pictures man as perfect and upright when he was placed upon this earth, with no bent toward evil. A perfect and beautiful home was given him, and he and his companion had everything before them to make for happiness. Provision was also made to perpetuate his life in his Eden home for the tree of life was planted in the garden that he might partake of it freely and live for ever. Only one restriction was placed upon the conduct of man. He was forbidden to eat of the fruit of a certain tree in the garden that God planted; in fact, he was forbidden even to touch it. And the penalty was death; "In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." Gen. 2:17. Into this scene of peace and loveliness came an intruder. By subtle argument and insinuation he persuaded the sinless pair to do what they had been expressly forbidden by their Creator to do. Eat the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil.

Trial and condemnation came swift upon the heels of disobedience. The Lord soon came down to question the conscience-stricken pair. After a very short conversation, in which the sinners tried to lay the blame for their mistake on some one else, God passed judgement upon them.

Unto the woman He said, "I will greatly multiply the sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow shalt thou bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee.

And unto Adam He said, "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it was thou taken for dust thou art, and unto dust shall thou return. Gen. 3:16-19.The record of the penalty imposed for disobedience is clear and unequivocal: "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Equally clear is the record of experience. We read: "All the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years and he died." "All thedays of Seth were nine hundred and twelve years: and he died. " "All the years of Enos were nine hundred and five years: and he died." And we can very appropriately end the story of man's life with the words, 'and he died.' For with two exceptions, death has been the lot of every one who has lived on this earth. But in spite of the facts of history and the evidence of the senses. men have chosen to believe that man does not really die at death. They choose to believe the words of satan to Eve in the garden "Ye shall not surely die." And to make it seem reasonable that a man does not die when his breath ceases and he is buried the doctrine of the natural immortality of the soul was brought forward: in other words, that at death only the body dies: that the soul is freed from the cumbering shell of the flesh, and soars away to its eternal reward or punishment, as the case may be. But a clear understanding of the creation of man in the beginning, and the use of the word 'soul' in the Bible, will preclude the belief that the man's soul goes to its reward at the cessation of earthly life.

Turn again to the record of creation: "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Gen. 2:7. The lifeless form of man as God made him was nothing but material until the breath of life from the Creator was given. Then he became a living soul. Material form plus the breath of life equals a living soul. When breath is gone, life is gone.

That this must be the intent of the language of the Scripture we can be sure, for we read of man, "His breath goes forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146:4. There is no conciousness apart from a combination of breath and body. There is no separate entity. No one is willing to admit that animals have immortal souls, yet they have received the same breath of life that was given to man. Speaking of the destruction of life at the time of the flood, the Bible says, "The waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth, and the mountains were covered and all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth; and every man: all in whose nostrils was the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land, died."

THE STORY OF EYESTRAIN

Other methods are resorted to in an effort to make the eyes do their work at the near point but unless the eyes are examined and fitted with proper glasses, damage is likely to be done to these sensitive organs; and very often this damage does not appear until too late.

At the first sympton of strain or difficulty in reading, have a thorough examination made of the visual function and thus do your part in preserving this priceless possession, your sight.

The same law . . .

Clubs form a valuable part of our social structure.

They encourage co-operation and mutual understanding. They promote activities that benefit our social life.

Many of these clubs are granted authority by the Liquor Control Board to serve beer to their members.

To many of them, especially Veteran and Labour Clubs, this provides useful assistance in improving the accommodation in their premises and increasing the scope of their good work.

The opportunity which these clubs provide for relaxation is provided also in hotel beverage rooms to those not fortunate enough to be members of a club—but to whom relaxation is as essential.

The same law provides for both.

The present law permitting Veterans' Clubs to sell beer to their members has been of great assistance in maintaining suitable club rooms and has enabled them to expand their efforts to assist ex-service men and overcome their economic difficulties and physical handicaps. In the past the bootlegger received a large part of this revenue, which now is used in the interests of groups of patriotic citizens bound together by their service for their King and Country. Veterans' Clubs are a great asset to any community as they stand as veritable Gibraltars of patriotism in the midst of unsettled conditions and foreign "isms."

News Parade

Commentary on the
Highlights of the Week's News . . . By Elizabeth Eedy

DEMOCRACY ON THE SPOT: Instead of planning to march in and take over Czechoslovakia wholesale, at a single "coup", as he did Austria, Adolf Hitler is in the present case using other methods which are calculated either to cause Czechoslovakia to blow up from the inside, or to give Hitler reason for coming to the "aid" of the German minority inside "Central Europe's bulwark of democracy."

The campaign being waged is a cruel affair. Here in one of Europe's happiest, best run, most efficient countries, internal dissension is being stirred up, brother turned against brother. Konrad Henlein, leader of the Sudeten Germans, a party in the Czech parliament, takes his orders direct from Hitler, makes most unreasonable and uncalled-for demands on the Premier of his own country, insists that Czechoslovakia abandon democracy and become part of the "true Fatherland, Greater Germany." It is predicted that early in June, Henlein will demand that the Germans in Czechoslovakia be permitted a plebiscite, expressing whether they desire to remain where they are or join Greater Germany. About that time, or even a little sooner, the crisis is likely to come to a head.

(How would we Canadians like it should the French Government stir up all sorts of trouble in Quebec and cause our French-Canadians to demand a plebiscite: "Shall we stay with Canada or become part of France?")

Czechoslovakia has allies, pledged to come to her aid—France and Russia. But now France is tied up in the new Anglo-French military alliance which does not guarantee Britain's help should France choose to aid Czechoslovakia. In fact, Britain is already telling the Czech Premier that his concessions to Germany are not good enough, that he must give in to Hitler still further.

Czechoslovakia is in an intolerably difficult situation. Democracy has never in the history of modern times been put on so bad a spot.

* * * *

SPEED AT CROSSINGS: A statistical survey made by the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Provincial Government reveals that most accidents in Ontario occur at intersections when experienced drivers are at the wheels of cars, in good condition, in broad daylight. Too much speed is said to be responsible—a speed greater than the traffic or road conditions warrant. Nuff said.

* * * *

HIGHWAY TO ALASKA: Being pushed at this time by the Government of the United States and the Government of British Columbia is a proposed "five-nation" highway to Alaska, from Mexico, through the U. S., British Columbia and the Yukon territory. Premier Pattullo, of British Columbia, was in Washington last month conferring on the matter, and now the U. S. House of Representatives has passed and sent to the Senate a bill authorizing the President to appoint a five-man Commission which would negotiate with representatives of the Dominion Government.

The building of such a highway would open up a whole new territory for tourist development in Canada and tap untold sources of revenue (which we badly need). Incidentally its value as a "military road" is self-apparent.

* * * *

AFRICAN OPENING: Italy is eyeing South Africa as a possible field for new trade developments. Prospects there are indeed inviting from the Italian point of view. Sale of coffee, cement and other goods from Italian East Africa to the Union of South Africa would pay for the purchase of South African meat for consumption in Ethiopia, and for raw materials to be used by Italian industries at home.

* * * *

WHAT CAROL'S AFTER: Dictator King Carol of Rumania is working up to something down there in his corner of Europe. After all resistance at home has been crushed (of the peasants, of the "Iron Guard"), observers tell us that he is likely to make a go for Hungary, swallow it up, with the connivance of Poland, eventually create a Baltic-Black Sea axis favorable to the schemes of Hitler's Germany.

John Gunther's "Inside Europe" informs us that Rumania is a country rich, rich in natural resources whose finances are bled white by mismanagement of funds, and political graft. Just now the government owes France a great deal of money.

BLOWS TO PRESTIGE: Hon. H. H. Stevens, Reconstructionist member in the House of Commons, declares that Dominion prestige and Dominion credit have been dealt severe blows during the past year. Referring to the Dominion Government bond issue which went on the London market three months ago and hung fire for a week or ten days, he declares that the defaulting of Moosejaw on some bonds just previously, was responsible, together with the loss in credit of certain of our provinces. Each new default places an even heavier burden on the Dominion, detracts from Canadian credit.

May Make Park Of Huge Marsh

Would Turn Swamp Land Near Orangeville Into Game Sanctuary

The Luther Marsh, near Orangeville, a vast stretch of 10,000 acres, may be transformed from a wet, desolate area into a provincial park and game sanctuary, if plans of leading citizens and organizations are adopted by the government.

The marsh is regarded as the most important locality in the watershed of the Grand River from the standpoint of water conservation.

Ten Miles Long

Recently a proposal to turn it into a provincial park was made by the federation of naturalists. The marsh is 10 miles long and in some places two miles wide. It straddles the town line between East and West Luther for approximately six miles. It contains peat to a depth of 15 feet.

Japanese Offensive Collapsing

SHANGHAI.—Chinese sent word this week-end that the second Japanese offensive in Southern Shantung Province, pivotal front of the war, was on the verge of collapse.

Crushing of the first drive last month was the most disastrous defeat of a modern Japanese army.

Now, Chinese declared they are ready to send 800,000 troops against the reinforced Japanese legions which, they say, are wearied to exhaustion and again running short of munitions.

Pump-Priming in Britain

LONDON.—Britain already is laying plans for future pump-priming, Sir Kingsley Wood, Minister of Health, revealed last week when speaking at a luncheon celebrating the Manchester centenary.

Twenty-Two Million Bees Are Imported

Huge shipment Will Weigh 22½ Tons; Hitch-Hiking Bees Join In Big Parade.

EDMONTON. — Approximately 22,500,000 Italian bees along with a few hundred thousand hitch-hikers will emigrate to Alberta this spring. The Italian bees, which will settle down in various parts of the province, are the type most highly favored by bee-keepers through North America because of their hardiness and neat housekeeping. They come to Alberta from California.

S. O. Hillerud, Alberta's chief apiarist, estimates the 22,500,000 bees will weigh about 22 1-2 tons. The hitchhikers of course, will make the total immigration higher than that.

In Screened Cages

When the bees start out from California, Mr. Hillerud said, they are packed in screened cages. The queens and the drones and the workers all get the same class of transportation.

As the trucks, their heat carefully regulated en route, travel along, hundreds of thousands of the hitchhiking bees fasten themselves to the sides of the cages. The ones inside feed them just as generously as they feed themselves.

"The hitchhikers are not even necessarily of the same race as the bees inside the screens — they get feed anyway," Mr. Hillerud said.

Italians were not introduced to America until 50 or 60 years ago. Before that the most popular genius was the German black bee. But in one year 50,000 colonies of black bees in New York state were wiped out by a disease which seldom hits the Italians because the Italians are better housekeepers.

Canada's Flax Industry Gains In Importance

Growers Expect Increase in Business As Canada Receives More Consideration on European Markets——Prices Have Risen the Past Few Years.

In 1915 flax fire sold for 90 cents a pound and the price of fibre flax seed was $3.00 a bushel. The high price of fibre was directly due to the excessive war-time demands at that time. In the period from 1917 to 1918 the price of fibre flax reached an all-time high, going from 90 cents to $1.25 a pound. In sympathy with this sensational increase the price of fibre flax seed jumped from $5.00 to $9.00 a bushel.

Flattened Out After War

After the war (1914-18), the price of fibre dropped to an all-time low of 15 cents a pound and the seed prices tumbled from $9.00 to $2.00 a bushel. During the interval of the 1927 to 1937 period the price of fibre flax seed rose from $2.00 to $6.25 a bushel. This encouraging rise in price level was in no small way due to the introduction of pedigreed varieties of fibre flax. These special varieties were imported from the North of Ireland through the co-operation of the Ministry of Agriculture in Ireland and the Fibre Division of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Ont.

However, from 1935 to 1937 flax fibre prices have slowly risen to about 18 cents a pound for the best grade and quality. The introduction of mechanical flax pullers and turbine scutching machines by the Dominion Government in 1937 has lent new stimulus to Canadian flax production. The flax acreage has advanced from a little over 6,000 acres in 1923 to 7,900 in 1937, with a further increase of 2,000 acres expected in 1938.

Less Competition

Future prospects for fibre development in Canada are encouraging, because Canada may secure more consideration on the European markets. Russia is exporting less and less fibre each year to Ireland on account of the fact that she requires a much larger amount for her own spinning factories which she has been developing these past few years. In addition to this, Canadian flax growers are better organized to handle the expected increase in business than they have ever been, also Scottish and Irish buyers are beginning to look to Canada for a large portion of their future supplies.

The BOOK SHELF

By ELIZABETH EEDY

"Here Are My Lectures And Stories" — By Stephen Leacock.

"A year ago," says Mr. Leacock, spoofingly, "I retired from college lecturing, at the urgent request of the college trustees, who were very grim about it. Now, at the request of innumerable friends all over the country, I am retiring from lecturing on the public platform as a humorist." Here in one book are the funny speeches and some other miscellaneous items from the lunacy of Leacock, Canada's premier humorist.

Elsewhere Mr. Leacock has spoken of his excruciating experiences while lecturing; here you get the lectures themselves, and quite a feast they make for those who have followed his written word for lo, these many years. The lectures are more serious, at least in spots, than some of us had been imagining. "How Soon Can We Start The Next War?" for instance, turns out to be a timely oration full of sound sense, amounting almost to one of those talks for serious listeners-in on the radio.

Lunatic But Happy

Our lecturer is happiest, perhaps, in his talks to college audiences, such as "Recovery After Graduation, or Looking Back on College," in which he mulls delightfully over the dear old campus scenes, gayly misquotes Shakespeare.

"What I Don't Know About the Drama" and three lectures on "Frenzied Fiction," give Mr. Leacock lots of leeway to give us scraps of burlesque.

You can't tell exactly how Mr. Leacock feels about life at this point, of course. In the final piece in his lecture volume he's a trifle pessimistic about retired professors who think they are going to complete their great masterpieces now that the hustle and bustle is o'er. Here is his last word on that: "When people say to me, "You'll be able now to finish your book on the History of Political Theory," I answer, 'To hell with it'."

They used to refer to the Indian as the "Vanishing American," but the figures refute the theory entirely. The Indian, far from vanishing, is increasing in numbers, in Canada at any rate, so the picturesque and pathetic title no longer holds.

Indian population figures in this Dominion have varied somewhat in the last few years. The Red Man did, indeed, appear to be declining numerically in 1924, when a census showed that the Indians of Canada numbered only 104,000, as compared with 110,000 in 1907. But latest returns issued by the Department of Mines and Resources show that there are now approximately 114,000 Indians resident in this country.—Brantford Expositor.

The King of Terrors, when Hector and Lysander faced him, was a gentleman in comparison with the shapes in which peril, death, and suffering will overhang every Englishman's home. The bomb will rain alike on the just and the unjust, the stalwart and the coward. Tenderness of nerve or conscience will gain no exemption. One and all, we shall be faced by a menace deeper than has ever darkened the page of history. If it be true that 'all that a man hath will he give for his life,' the instinct of self-preservation has never been aroused by a such a summons."—London Observer.

Ghost Frequents Drinking Pool

So Irish Believe; Several Say They Saw Man Dead Three Centuries

DUNSRIM, County Monaghan, Ireland. — Ghost of a 17th century planter who evicted a poor widow and her eight children from their Dunsrim farm is haunting a drinking pool near here.

That's the story local residents tell, anyway, and they back it up with vivid descriptions.

Reflection Of His Eyes

The planter, says legend, was thrown from his horse and found one night after sunset with his neck broken. The ghost is said to appear after sunset near the spot where the evicted woman and her eight children were found dead in the snow.

John Francis Smith said he saw "the tall figure of a man, dressed in old-fashioned clothes," as he walked home. The figure knelt at the pool to quench his thirst. "As I watched, spell-bound," said Smith, "I could see the reflection of his eyes in the clear water: They were like two large red coals."

Suddenly the figure disappeared and Smith, who had stood in a trance, began to run. He said as he ran he heard the sound of spurred boots.

Patrick Connolly and Miss Ellie Reilly also claim to have seen the ghost. Legend has it the figure still haunts the district to frighten people out of their lands.

Canadians Keep Talkative Title

Are Still World's Champion Talkers By Telephone And Otherwise

Canadians are the most talkative people in the world and they are getting even more so.

Apart altogether from the wordy briefs presented to Royal Commissions and the 4,000,000 to 6,000,000 words spoken in the House of Commons each session, telephone statistics award loquacious laurels to Canadians.

Telephone conversations per capita during 1935 in Canada numbered 210.8 compared with 197 in the United States, 173.9 in Denmark and 152.2 in Sweden, the next highest countries. Still on the increase, Canadian calls were 222 a person in 1936, latest year reported.

222 Calls Per Person

Birthplace of the telephone, discovered by Alexander Graham Bell in 1876, Canada retains the lead in Empire advancement of this instrument in establishing the longest direct wire voice path of 2,2000 miles between Toronto and Calgary, Alta.

Canada stands fifth in world comparison with 1,266,228 telephones installed, showing approximately 10 per cent. of her population benefits by telephonic communication. The United States is the only country showing a larger number of telephones installed per capita.

Although it is impossible to determine whether men or women are the greater users of the telephone, men use the long distance service more frequently during business hours.

Believed to be more than 22,000,000 years old, a tooth of an unknown sea animal was found in Ragusa, Sicily, by Richard Hunter, who displayed it recently while visiting Johannesburg, South Africa.

Glued His Books To House Walls

Babies and contractors — they are all one to the income tax collector.

An elderly man reported in his income tax form that his wife had a new baby. Aha! said the income department, we must look into this. So they did, and his wife had and they had to give him exemption, according to Hugh D. Patterson, collector for Toronto.

Contractors Razed It

There was another man who had accounting trouble. He wrote in to the department that he was in a quandary on account of contractors. Desiring above all to keep his business in order and ever before his eye he had kept his books by noting up his cash and sales on a piece of paper which he had glued to the wall of his shop.

Desiring to make some changes in his shop he had in contractors, and, before he could say "income tax," the contractors snatched his wall away with his "books" still glued to it.

The income tax department made him promise, Mr. Patterson said, to "keep proper books".

Common Moth Is A Dread Enemy

The Pest Should Be Asphyxiated Before It Lays Eggs And Ruins Your Wardrobe.

Of the 10,000 odd insect pests said to infest the North American continent, the common clothes moth is perhaps best known and most reviled. Yet the moth is, except as an accessory after the fact, rather an innocent creature. It has no predatory instincts, lives but a little while, and eats nothing because it is physically incapable of doing so.

The female of the species is only more deadly than the male because of its habit of laying eggs every day of its one or two weeks of life. It is at the larva stage of life that the moth species devours those things of animal origin on which it finds itself. Thus it eats wool, silk, feathers and hair, grows by what it feeds on and emerges into the chrysalis stage, at last taking wing after it has cast off its case.

Before The Eggs Are Laid

To cut the moth off in its prime one must begin before it starts laying eggs, but since it does this on the first day of its short life, being precocious, there is little time to lose.

There are several ways of battling the moth species other than clapping one's hands at it. These ways are all chemical. You can either repel Mother Moth, asphyxiate her, or put her or her progeny into a lethal chamber.

The modern moth repellent differs much from the Victorian moth ball which was composed of coal tar naphthalene of varying purity, and was only very little less anathema to most humans than to Mother Moth. Nowadays an aromatic organic chemical, which is easily volatilized and readily aired from the goods, in sufficient concentration, actually asphyxiates the pest. It is, however, quite harmless to humans.

Fumigation Often Needed

For things such as furniture, drapes, rugs, etc., the moth can best be thwarted by treatment of the material with a chemical which does not suit the dietary fads of the larva. Whenever infestation with moth eggs is suspected ordinary repellents are of little value, and the safest treatment is fumigation with a highly lethal gas. This can only be carried out by properly equipped fumigators or dry-cleaners—and most up-to-date dry-cleaning establishments now offer a combined cleaning, fumigation and storage service.

Worm Drill

If you flash a strong light at night on to a lawn you may see it writhing with emergent worms. Give one tap to the ground and every worm will make two staccato movements, as if at a sergeant's word of command, and within three or four seconds the whole community will have vanished . . . .

Their sense of vibration is as acute as the hearing of the thrush that devours them.

HAVE YOU HEARD

Friday the Thirteenth of May

Only once in 1938 comes Friday the 13th.

So frightened are the American people at the specter of the figure "13" that one of the largest hotel systems in the United States found it necessary to abolish room 13. And yet the proof is strong that this hated numeral is one of the luckiest in all the arithmetic of life.

Woodrow Wilson had such faith in 13 that he would be elected president because his name had 13 letters in it, and the number had always brought him success.

For many years Woodrow Wilson wore a scarf pin a miniature of the great seal of the United States. Why? Simply because 13 stood out all over it—13 stars, 13 stripes, 13 arrows, 13 olives, 13 letters in the motto, "E Pluribus Unum."

Columbus first sighted the islands off the coast of North America on Friday, and he left Europe on Friday; left the West Indies for the return trip to Spain on Friday; arrived at Palos Friday, March 13th; returned to land for the first time on the actual American continent, Friday, November 22, 1493; discovered Cuba, Friday June 13, 1494, and S. America, Friday, August 3rd.

So might the lucky history of 13 run on indefinitely. Throw fear to the winds. Engage berth 13 for a trip on Friday the 13th and if it costs $13.13 for the journey, be glad —that it doesn't cost more!

Experts Declare Environment Is More Important

Than Heredity, In The Development of a Child's Intellect

There is no correlation between the intelligence of children and their parents; and the influence of environment determines growth or decline of children's intellectual development, according to the report of a 15-year study of children by Dr. Harold Skeels and Dr. Beth Wellman, of the Iowa University Child Welfare Station.

Dr. Skeels, psychologist for the Iowa State Board of Control, has discovered that underprivileged children, taken from inadequate environment and placed in foster homes, respond to love, interest and comfort by remarkable intellectual gains.

Duller In Poor Surroundings

He finds no correlation between the intelligence of true parents and their children, but notes the longer small boys and girls remain in poor surroundings, the duller they become. He points out that if these children are removed early enough to foster homes they have a good chance to reach normal or superior mental achievement.

Dr. Wellman has recorded that higher intelligence levels are the rule rather than exception following the stimulating atmosphere of nursery schools. Significantly, during summer vacations at home, without the incentive of school and influence of companionship, children show little or no development.

The Best Type of School

Miss Wellman studied the later progress of many boys and girls who received careful and sympathetic early training and discovered those transferred to progressive institutions of this type continued to gain in intelligence, while those who entered less progressive schools lost considerable ground.

"Children thrive best," Dr. Wellman concludes, "in schools where they are taught to think for themselves instead of obeying blindly. They do best in groups with children with capabilities as great or better than their own."

Where Big Game Comes To Town

It apparently isn't necessary nowadays to go into the jungle to obtain big-game "bags." The big game obligingly comes into the cities.

In Abercorn, capital of Northern Rhodesia, a motorist driving along the main street jammed on his brakes — and then accelerated hurriedly —when he saw a leopard standing near the pavement, a few yards from the Government House and the shopping centre. The capital has been suffering lately from the activities of leopards in the vicinity of the town. Shortly after the motorist's experience a leopard, believed to be the one he saw, was trapped and killed.

A sum of $25 is paid to anyone who kills a leopard.

At Sylhet, Assam, a tiger walked into a tea garden. The tiger fancied a worker, who retaliated with a spade.

He wasn't very successful, and was badly mauled before other workers killed the tiger with picks and spades.

Yarn Made From Wool and Flax

Opens Up Many New Commercial Possibilities

The production of yarns and fabrics from a mixture of flax and wool has been engaging the attention of the staff of the Textile Department of the University at Leeds, England, for some months past. As a result, considerable commercial possibilities are visualized, especially in producing novelty dress materials which will be cheap and yet of good appearance.

Low-Cost Processes

The cheapness is due to the production by low-cost processes of a flax fibre that readily blends with wool. The fibre is also said to be suitable for blending with mungo, in place of cotton, giving increased tensile strength. The fibre has characteristics similar to cotton, and patterned fabrics are readily obtained in the blend.

Higher Fabric Yield

Instead of the retting process of treating the flax, which occupies a period of weeks, the fibre is produced by an acqua-mechanical process which takes only a few hours. In addition, it is said to produce a higher fabric yield, which makes for its cheapness.

A director of the Lancashire firm of textile machinery makers and a Canadian textile engineer have invented the processes, and their experiments in producing flax fibre have stretched over a period of four years. A Lancashire firm of textile machinery makers, which has developed machinery for producing the flax fibre, controls the processes.

DWARF FLOWERS

In the smaller types of easily grown flowers are alyssum, white and dainty and useful for edging. These will grow in partial shade and make excellent edging plants. Portulaca is a spreading plant with bright yellow, red and pink wax-like flowers. It thrives in bright sunshine and dry soil. Nasturtiums, marigolds, calendulas and petunias will complete a good garden of easily-grown annual-flowers. These are all useful for edging beds or walks.

CULTIVATION

During the early part of the season a little cultivation every week will help plants along wonderfully. The purpose is two-fold. Unsightly weeds are killed and valuable moisture is conserved. Growth is hurried along. Later on as the flowers or vegetables develop, it will not be necessary to cultivate so often. Sometimes a mulch of short straw or grass clippings is used to retain moisture during the summer. This mulch is simply spread over the ground between the plants. It keeps the underlying soil moist, open and free from weeds.

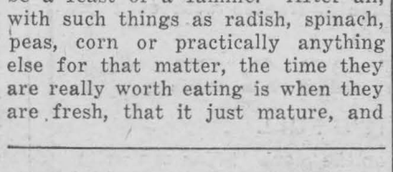

SPREAD OUT VEGETABLES

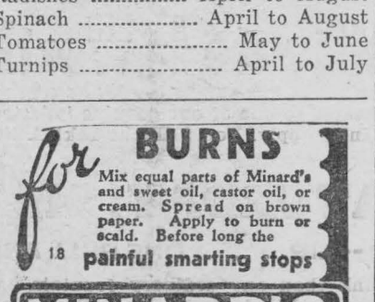

Several sowings of each vegetable are advised. Otherwise all mature at the same time and then there will be a feast or a famine. After all, with such things as radish, spinach, peas, corn or practically anything else for that matter, the time they are really worth eating is when they are fresh, that it just mature, and taken right out of the garden. They must be quickly grown and used immediately when they have reached the proper size. These vegetables will deteriorate whether they are left in storage or ripening in the vegetable rows. To avoid this sort of thing, the good gardener has his vegetables coming along continuously, a few feet of lettuce and baby carrots and beets ready for the table all season.

BEVERAGE ROOMS MUST GO

(Contributed.)

In the Report of the Ontario Synod of the Anglican Church meeting in Kingston this week, the following statement appears:

"In his annual charge at the morning session, Bishop Lyons told the Synod that Ontario's beverage rooms are casting a blight upon the promise of youth and are a menace to the virility of our nation."

He described the present day beverage room as a "modernized bar," asserting that it was an attempt to cover the sale and use of spirituous liquors with a "cloak of respectability." "The liquor question must be recognized as one of our major social problems . . . The beverage room must go in the interests of society."

DUNDAS LOOP WILL OPERATE AGAIN

The annual reorganization meeting of the Dundas County Softball League was held in th eWinchester town hall with the retiring president, Melvin Scott of Winchester, presiding. The treasurer's report, which was presented by the secretary-treasurer, Randall Wylie, showed a balance of $17.16, after all expenses had been met.

The election for the 1938 slate of officers took place and resulted as follows: Honorary president, Geo. H. Challies, M.L.A., president, Geo I. Martin, Mountain; secretary-treasurer, Glenn Kerford, Hallville; club representatives: Chesterville, Jack Fulton; South Mountain, Lorne Armstrong; Inkerman, Lloyd Laporte; Hallville, Lester Brown; Winchester, Herbert Watson.

The same set of rules and regulations that governed the operation of the league last year was adopted for the coming year. It was decided to open the schedule the latter part of May and the new executive was authorized to prepare a schedule for the season, with each team playing two sets of home and home games. Competition will be for the George H. Challies Cup, which is emblematic of the league championship. It was won by the Hallville Club last year.

Chesterville, Hallville and Winchester have definitely entered teams for the 1938 competition and Inkerman and South Mountain have expressed their intentions of doing so.
