Strike's Over! For a while it wasn't necessary to own a water-proof watch to have a "dry time."

A rousing rally Friday in Winchester was staged by the Grenville-Dundas Liberal Association. Featured speakers were Mark Salmon, the candidate, and George McIlraith, MP for Ottawa West. Nearly 600 people turned out to applaud the speakers and pay witness to enlivened Liberal interest in the riding. Pictured here on the platform are Mark Salmon, his wife Shirley, Mr McIlraith and association president R. H. Armstrong.—Record Photo.

Big Turnout Expected At Byelection Polls Monday, Sept. 29th

Election fever is just about at the highest it will reach for some time in the riding of Grenville-Dundas. The local organizations are going all-out to see that everything is done that can be done to assure a good crowd at the polls on Monday next.

Chesterville voters turned out 72% strong on March 31 to give their majority to the Conservative candidate, the late A. Clair Casselman. By polls, the vote in 9A, north of the river and west of Main, went 137 Conservative, 27 Liberal and 2 Socred. In the other Main St. poll, south of the river and west, the count was 95 Conservative, 75 Liberal and 3 Socred. East of Main up and down the line it read 141, Conservative, 55 Liberal and 3 Socred.

Chesterville village last time had 746 names on the voters' lists. Of these 206 did not vote.

The total vote rose in 1958 over 1957 election by nearly five points. In the June 10th election the total of voters in the riding came to 14,571, or 66%, out of a possible 22,060. In less than a year the interest rose and by March 31st out of 22,103 voters possible, 15,737 cast their ballots or 71.17%. Chesterville village turnout was just a fraction better than the riding average.

Quite a difference was apparent between the candidates' votes. Col Casselman polled his largest majority March 31 with 62.2% of the vote. He received 10,793; Arthur Casselman, the Liberal candidate, 4,340, or 27.5%, and Mr James also ran at 473, which works out at .3%.

ENGAGEMENT

Mr and Mrs Melvin MacMillan wish to announce the engagement of their only daughter, Shirley Olive, to Dwayne Edward Gillard, son of Mr and Mrs Edward Gillard, Finch. Marriage to take place October 11 at Winchester Presbyterian Church.

BEER AGAIN!

As we put this issue to bed, the radio is anonuncing the end of the beer handlers' strike in Ontario. The word is that the tremendous Sahara of thirst developed in the past seven weeks is about to be quenched.

One word of warning: When beer is back in the district hotels, it would be wise to remember that alcohol and gasoline do not mix. There is apt to be a great temptation to overindulge after the dry spell. If that happens, let someone else drive home. It just might mean your driver's permit.

McIlraith Speaks for Salmon at Winch'st'r Rally Lashes Out at "Gov't Irresponsibility, Waste"

Mark Salmon, speaking at a political rally for Liberals Friday night, declared a half century of one-party representation for the riding was a bad thing. He said the present campaign is a contest for recognition against lethargy. The candidate decried the value of a riding being "in bondage to one family and one party."

Liberals turned out nearly 600 strong last Friday night in Winchester arena. Along with candidate Salmon they heard George McIlraith, MP for Ottawa West. Association president R. H. Armstrong, of Morrisburg, was chairman of the meeting.

Guts Needed

The Liberal candidate felt it was partly the fault of Liberal stalwarts that the party always ran second in the riding. He called for a little more intestinal fortitude in making their voices heard.

Mr Salmon concluded his address by appealing to the voters to not turn the riding representation into a political dynasty for one family by heritage.

South Grenville High School District girls' band entertained the crowd and the 39 brightly and lightly clad girls made an instant hit.

George Elliott introduced Mr McIlraith. He was thanked by Mrs Lillian Allison who also made a plea for a women's organization meeting.

George McIlraith

The MP from Ottawa West was pointed in his remarks about the Diefenbaker government. He felt that "at present there is irresponsibility of spending and management in government. It has built up the largest peacetime deficit ever." Mr McIlraith said that the deficit should read closer to a thousand millions rather than six hundred.

The speaker pleased his Liberal hearers with a briefing on what he considered some of the faults of the present government. They included the cry that the rights of parliament are being transgressed in many ways. He called attention to confusion that exists on occasion between ministers and their reports and what the prime minister says. He noted that the South Saskatchewan dam project was pushed through parliament without a chance to debate a bill because of the form in which it was presented. He noted wryly that Mr Diefenbaker felt it necessary to tap into the House audio system with an office speaker without consulting parliament.

Mr McIlraith covered several more fields of government endeavour which included trade policies, more on the budget, national defence. He concluded with an appeal to the voters to elect Mark Salmon to the House of Commons.

Another Election

Monday will end the suspense throughout the riding. After the ballots have been counted the loser will lick his or her wounds and the winner will be exceedingly pleased.

It has been quite a long time since political interest has been as high here. During the past couple of months remarks about the byelection have been just as common as ones about the weather.

The remarks have had much more meaning too; whether a person was inclined politically one way or another, he usually had a forceful opinion. The spark of the matter has been the candidature of Mrs Casselman, who won the nomination for the Conservatives after a cliff-hanging contest against Wm. Gorrell, of Morrisburg, and three others.

The Liberals, ambling along wearing a burden of continuous defeats and getting a little weaker all the time, suddenly got a shot of plasma, flipped their tails in the air and took off. They whooped up a rousing nomination meeting and with Mark Salmon as candidate lit out after the seat of Grenville-Dundas as if it was the resting place of the Holy Grail.

The party associations have been using all methods of advertising to get the word to the faithful and the unfaithful. The newspapers of the riding, seven of them, have had a big hand in carrying the messages. They have been reporting meetings nearly every week, and editorially there is little doubt most of them have been quite aware an election is coming up.

Come Monday, September 29, the whole matter will come to a head. Then will be the time to find out whether the words of political wisdom have made any noticeable effect on the voters of the constituency. It will also be the time to see whether a good lively issue and campaign will have any different effect on the voters of the riding.

In any event, don't forget to vote!

No Time Off In 1870

Scott Young in his Globe and Mail column printed a copy of one employer's office rules for the year 1870. Office workers of that time weren't much concerned with wheedling coffee breaks from their bosses!

OFFICE RULES

1. Employees will daily sweep floors, dust the furniture and shelves.
2. Each day, fill lamps, clean chimneys and trim wicks. Wash windows once a week.
3. Each clerk will bring in a bucket of water and a scuttle of coal for the day's business.
4. Make your pens carefully. You may whittle nibs to your individual taste.
5. The office will open at 7 a.m. and close at 8 p.m. daily, except on the Sabbath, on which day it will remain closed. Each employee is expected to spend the Sabbath by attending church and contributing liberally to the Cause of the Lord.
6. Men employees will be given an evening off each week for courting purposes, or two evenings a week if they go regularly to church.
7. After an employee has spent his hours of labour in the office he should spend the time reading the Bible and other good books.
8. An employee who smokes cigars, uses liquor in any form, gets shaved in a barber shop or frequents pool and public halls, will give me good reason to suspect his worth, intentions, integrity and honesty.
9. The employee who has performed his labours faithfully and without fault for a period of five years and who has been thrifty and attentive to his religious duties will be given an increase of five cents per day, provided a just return in profit from business permits it.—

ANCIENT CURRENCY

There was a time in the early history of the human race, and even in the pioneer days of our country, when everything from fish to cattle was used for money. Imagine the complications this would cause in today's society.

Many of our present-day words relating to money or property can be traced to the use of cattle as currency. "Pecuniary," for example, comes from the Latin word "pecus" meaning herds, and "chattel" is a direct derivative of the word "cattle." To determine one's wealth, cattle were counted by the head. From this practice cattle soon became known as "capitale," from which we derive our word "capital."

Our word for "fee" comes from feoh, as cattle were called in the days when they were the chief means of making payments. Feoh was used so widely that it came to stand for all charges made to citizens by professional and public men. Later the term became our present-day fee, which represents all kinds of charges for services—professional and otherwise. A Harvard student, who afterwards became president of the college, settled his bill with an old cow in 1649.

A cattle ranch was the earliest bank. Cattle were deposited and withdrawn instead of money in ancient Egypt in 3900 B.C. People were given receipts for cattle deposited and things could be purchased simply by turning over the receipts which served as money—possibly the first time in world history that paper currency was used.

ABUNDANT LIFE

THERE IS HEALING FOR THE INCURABLE

"There is no such thing as an incurable disease—and no one need die in pain. . . There is no such thing as an 'easy' or 'difficult' case of healing in Christ's name."

These are the words of an eminent physician, Dr. Christopher Woodward, who is combining spiritual healing with his practice of medicine and producing spectacular results.

My own work as a minister of the gospel who prays for the healing of the sick has brought me to the same conclusion: No disease is hopeless—none is incurable.

Mrs. D. H., from Denver, Colorado, related this story some time ago before our television cameras. At that time, she was holding in her hand two X rays made of her 11-year-old son who had been pronounced incurable with a strange bone disease.

"My son began having aches and pains in his back and hips.

"My doctor looked at the X ray. He showed us where the bone in the socket of the hip had begun to deteriorate. Then, sadly shaking his head, he said, 'I'm very sorry to tell you that before he is in his late teens he will be a hopeless cripple. The bone is wasting away; there is no cure for this disease.'

"What shock and emotion tore through me! Then—I saw much pity mirrored in the physician for my child. Suddenly I felt a strange power rise up in me, and I said within myself, 'No! No, my son, you will never be a cripple! I won't let you. As long as there is a living God you will never be a cripple.'

"Strange as it may seem, immediately all my fear and distress left me. I felt tremendously strong.

"Daily I asked God to help. During those days, faith rose higher and higher in my heart.

"One day I felt that I should have my son X-rayed again although only four months had passed since the first X ray. The doctor said, 'It is a little too soon to be able to tell much, but I will check for you.'

"First he tested him by stretching his legs and giving him various exercises. Each time he asked if it hurt. The boy answered, 'No.'

"The doctor muttered, 'There is something strange here. Let's see what the X ray says.'

"As soon as the X-ray film was dry, it was flashed upon a large screen. 'Why,' the doctor exclaimed, 'the cavity had disappeared. New bone has grown in its place!"

"'Yes,' I answered, 'something has happened,' and I pointed toward the screen. 'Doctor, the Lord has healed my child.'

"That was two years ago. My son is going to school and has not had one minute's trouble since that time. I am very thankful."

I saw this boy a few days ago. He is perfectly healthy and walks normally. I remind you again—there is nothing incurable with the Lord.

FRENDLEE FARM CHATS

By Lillian Allison

The telephone connections that night were so bad I could hardly understand a word the man said. Eventually I figured it out. He wanted me to go to speak at a women's meeting at Algonquin church which was celebrating its 100th anniversary. I repeated everything he said so there would be no mistake.

Algonquin is a little hamlet the size of Dunbar and is approximately twelve miles northwest of Prescott. I had been through it once but couldn't remember seeing the church before when we drove up to it Friday afternoon. It is a small, country church built of stone and plastered over. The stone above the door said it had been built in 1858—a long time ago. It is by no means the most attractive church in this area.

Next the back but separate from it is the church hall. It is a rural school type of building covered with clapboards and needing a coat of paint. To be honest, I wasn't very impressed.

The meeting, apparently, was being held in the hall for the ladies were arriving with food. We parked the car and followed them to the door.

Seldom have I received such a surprise. On the inside the hall was a picture. The first thing I saw was a glistening, new, beige, tile floor. There were beige plastic drapes, green curtains on the stage and flowers everywhere. Small tables were set up with dainty cloths and flowers. Solid gold candles decked the head table with its silver services. I peeked through the open door into a kitchen at the side of the hall. It was convenient and attractive. And everything was so sparkling clean I could have eaten off the floor.

"Is the church open," I asked the minister when we met him. "I'd love to see a church 100 years old." So he volunteered a conducted tour.

The inside of the church was delightful. It was old, of course. The original pews were there. The V-joint panelling on the lower walls. The old pulpit. And miles of stove pipes stretched from box stoves at the back to the chimney at the front.

The original coloured glass windows were a picture. They had been re-leaded at a tremendous cost and sparkled in the sunlight like jewels. The young minister pointed proudly to a new electric organ which the people had bought for the anniversary celebrations. I stood quietly and looked, conscious that this attractive, little church was one with a history—a long history by Canadian standards.

"I suppose you've been busy with your anniversary this week," I said as we sat at the tea table with the minister and one of the local ladies. And they told us of the events during the week.

Rather than take guests home for dinner on Sunday the congregation had served dinner in the hall to a big crowd. They had given lunch to visiting singers and clergy after the Sunday night service.

Monday evening there had been a banquet for 150 guests. Tuesday night there had been a children's party with games and films and refreshments for fifty or sixty youngsters. On Wednesday night they had had a service of praise with lunch for visiting dignitaries. And Friday afternoon was the ladies' meeting with tables set for seventy-five or more. That afternoon several of the church ladies came in costume worn by their ancestors a hundred years ago and added much to the atmosphere of the occasion.

The congregation had prepared historical booklets with pictures and stories telling the history of the church. They had bought dozens of lovely cake plates with pictures of the church on them to sell as souvenirs. Then had planned for months and worked for weeks to make their 100th anniversary a memorable occasion.

"How many families do you have in this church?" I asked the minister after he had explained the events of the week.

"Oh, I think about fifteen active families," he replied. The lady across the table agreed.

And I thought as long as there are churches where fifteen families are willing to undertake and carry out a program like that we don't need to worry too much about the future of the Christian church. It is anything but dead, let me assure you.

The annual Black and White Show staged by Dundas County Holstein breeders in connection with Mountain Fair was not only a large show but a high quality show as well. A total of 134 head were shown by 23 different exhibitors.

Basil Dawley, Winchester, was the premier exhibitor with Harold Merkley, Chesterville, runner-up while the premier breeder honours went to the Estate of W. J. and Allison Fawcett, Winchester, with Harold Merkley again being runner-up.

Judge Sam Rathwell, Navan, found his Grand Champion female in the dry aged cow class. She is the "Excellent" cow Chesterlea Lochinvar Olive shown by Harold W. Merkley. A big cow with great capacity, she was also selected as the best uddered female of the show.

A new exhibitor, John S. Thompson, Brinston, showed the Reserve Grand Champion female winning this award on his first prize aged cow in milk, Eva Voyageur C., a very smooth individual. Mr Thompson also had the second prize dry aged cow.

Willola Royal High Society, shown by Ralph Fawcett, Winchester, repeated her win of last year by taking the Junior Championship award. She stood first in the Junior Yearling Heifer class this year. The Reserve Junior Championship went to Willola Royal Jill Cory, shown by the Estate of W. J. Fawcett, in the Senior Heifer calf class. The Reserve Junior Champion is a very smooth, sharp. well-balanced individual while the Junior Champion is equally as smooth with a very deep, long rib and particularly smooth on top.

Spring Farm Reflector, jointly owned by Allison Fawcett, Winchester, and J. M. Fraser, of Streetsville, headed the two-year-old bull class and then went on to the Senior and Grand Championships. Standing next to him in class and following through to the Reserve Senior and Reserve Grand Championships was General Dijax Dude owned jointly by Basil Dawley, Winchester, and E. Davidson, Winchester. The Grand Champion has developed well from last year when he was Junior Champion at this show. He has a square level rump, very smooth tail setting and is well balanced throughout. Reserve Grand Champion is a very sharp dairy-like bull.

Willola Sir Royal, the winning Senior Yearling bull for Sherwood Coons, Inkerman, and Ailison Fawcett, was named Junior Champion with the Reserve Junior award going to Wincrest Inspiration, the top Junior Yearling bull shown by Basil Dawley and Jeremiah Summers, of Winchester. The Junior Champion is well grown for his age, deep and moves on a good set of legs while the Reserve Junior Champion shows exceptionally good balance and carries a smooth level rump.

Harold W. Merkley won the Senior Get-of-Sire and Progeny of Dam classes while the Estate of W. J. Fawcett showed the winning Junior Get-of-Sire and the first prize Junior Herd was exhibited by Allison Fawcett. Haroll Merkley also won the Dam and Daughter class.

Other first prize winners were Johannes Byoclass and Sons with the winning bull calf; Lorne Henderson, Brinston, the first prize four-year-old in milk; J. Dwight Dawley, Winchester, the first prize dry two-year-old and Etsate of W. J. Fawcett, first Junior heifer calf.

BACK SEAT DRIVER?

A motorist who collided with a cow on a cocntry road near Les Sables Dolonne, France, looked back a second later to see the cow on the back seat.

Thrown into the air by the impact, the cow had crashed through the car's canvas roof.

The top of the car had to be removed to free the cow, which was uninjured.

United Presbytery Urges Total Abstinence

Dundas-Grenville Presbytery of the United Church of Canada held its fall meeting in Ventnor United Church. Rev W. B. F. Corkum, the chairman of Presbytery, welcomed the delegates and introduced the president of Montreal and Ottawa Conference, the Rev Perley C. Lewis, of Cornwall.

Rev E. B. Bugden reported that six camps had been held at the Rideau Hill campsite during the summer with 350 campers and 50 leaders in attendance. Mr Allan VanAllan reported that $1,230 had been received in donations for the camp.

Plans were made to hold conferences on "Christianity and Our Daily Work" in Winchester United Church on September 30 and in Spencerville United Church on October 1.

Rev M. B. Jose, reporting for the committee on Evangelism and Social Service, declared that the rate of alcoholism in Ontario was showing a steady increase year by year and that the increasing use of alcoholic beverages is a threat to the safety and highest welfare of families and young people and to all who drive on roads and highways.

The Presbytery urged that all ministers and sessions of pastoral charges give their support to the United Church's program of voluntary total abstinence through personal example and bold witnessing inside and outside of the church.

MARK SALMON

On Your Ballot

On the 29th of September, the people of Grenville-Dundas will, by their vote, hire a new servant to handle the affairs of the riding at Ottawa.

For the first time in many years, Grenville-Dundas looks forward to Election Day, with keen and hopeful anticipation that the voters will throw off the yoke of bondage that has shackled them to a one-man, one-family, one-party rule.

Some reactionary Conservatives openly proclaimed that Grenville-Dundas should have been conceded, by acclamation, to the Conservative candidate.

This is the language of Dictators.

It is well for the riding of Grenville-Dundas that there will be a vigorous and determined effort to exercise its basic right to go to the polls.

The entire nation is paying attention to Grenville-Dundas, for the first time in many years.

Before you cast your ballot, consider the claims put forward by both parties in favour of their respective candidate.

The Liberal candidate invited his Conservative opponent to hold a joint open meeting, at which the public could draw first-hand conclusions. The invitation was declined. The claims of both parties are therefore set forth here.

THE CONSERVATIVES CLAIM

In an elaborate and expensive pamphlet, the Conservatives make some claims that invite careful consideration.

It is claimed that their candidate has wide, intimate association with the people of Grenville-Dundas and knows how to get things done on their behalf. This statement would have been much more convincing if it could give evidence that any Conservative candidate had ever done anything outstanding for the people of Grenville-Dundas.

It is claimed that the Conservative candidate was raised and has lived all her life in an atmosphere of Federal politics and that she understands the responsibilities of the office, for which she asks your help.

The best answer to that statement, of course, is merely to call it calculated humbug, designed to fool any unthinking voter.

The claim is made that the Conservative candidate is widely respected. We agree with that, on personal considerations.

Finally, it is claimed that she is an enthusiastic supporter of Prime Minister Diefenbaker. If that is true, then the Conservative candidate is a very long-suffering person.

By his absence from Grenville-Dundas, only a few miles away, the Prime Minister has forgotten every Conservative in the riding and has deserted his candidate who supports him with enthusiasm.

Just how much help can the people of the riding expect from such a leader, if they elect his candidate?

"Carry on good government with Jean Casselman," invites the pamphlet. The fact is that, like any back-bench member in a party with an overwhelming majority, Jean Casselman would be lucky to even get a chance to speak, let alone carry on good government.

THE LIBERALS CLAIM

Mark Salmon, the Liberal candidate, was raised and schooled in this area.

Mark Salmon is a veteran service man, from this area.

Mark Salmon, from a humble beginning, built a successful business in this area. He has already served his home town in the Municipal Government, in which he has climbed to the highest office.

Above all, Mark Salmon loves Grenville-Dundas and can be counted on to battle valiantly to win for his riding the rightful recognition that Grenville-Dundas deserves.

All of Canada is Watching the Results of the Forthcoming By-election with More Than Usual Interest

It would be difficult to find, in any riding, any candidate with greater qualifications to earn your vote and your support.

THE GREAT QUESTION IS: Does this riding desire to perpetuate the control of government machinery of the riding in the hands of one family? Or start fresh with a new, energetic, capable candidate who knows how to get action.

On September 29th You Will be asked to MARK SALMON ON YOUR BALLOT

Says Hospital Plan "Better Deal"

Premier Frost says private and semi-private patients may get a better deal after the Ontario hospital plan goes into effect on January 1.

Mr Frost said the all-inclusive public ward rate in general hospitals may rise to between $16 and $19 a day from the present rate of $7 and $9 which covered only room and meals.

"The hospitals will be charging more realistic rates but the semi-private and private patients, who have been paying premium cost for hospital care to carry the public ward patients, may find things more to their advantage."

A spokesman for the Ontario Hospital Commission said the semi-private rate will likely be $20 a day and private room between $27 and $30.

The public ward rate, to be set shortly by the commission on the basis of budgets submitted to them by hospitals, is expected to be about $17.

Cameron–Dillabough

Amid a setting of beautiful baskets of gladioli and other seasonal flowers, Miss Greta Marlene Dillabough, daughter of Mr and Mrs Reynold W. Dillabough, Avonmore, became the bride of Daryl Allan Cameron, son of Mr and Mrs John A. Cameron, also of Avonmore. The ceremony, which was held at the home of the bride's parents, was solemnized by Rev W. A. Douglas, B.A., minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in a floor-length gown of imported Chantilly lace, featuring iridescent sequins on a Sabrina neckline and a front panel of matching lace and net extending into a small train. An elbow-length veil was attached to a halo of iridescent sequins. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.

The maid of honour, Miss Lois Ferguson, wore a ballerina-length gown of aqua-nylon chiffon. Her corsage was made up of white carnations.

Miss Sharon Carruthers, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She was gowned in pink nylon chiffon. She carried a basket of pretty white flowers.

Best man was Bernard Robertson, of Avonmore.

Wedding music was played by Mrs Alex McColl, pianist.

The bride's mother wore a rose lace dress with navy accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The mother of the groom wore a black embroidered nylon dress with pink accesories and a corsage of pink carnations.

The wedding reception was held at McDonell's Inn, Cornwall. Guests included those from Massena, Malone, Toronto and Cornwall.

Later the happy young couple left on a motor trip to Niagara Falls and northern New York. For travelling Mrs Cameron chose a beige fitted dress, brown feathered hat, alligator shoes and purse. Her corsage was composed of cymbidiums.

Mr and Mrs Cameron will reside in Ottawa.

Prior to her wedding the bride-elect was honoured at a shower, attended by a large number of neighbours and friends and held in the Avonmore Public School. She was the recipient of many lovely gifts.

WASN'T HER DAY

A woman driver had more than her share of car troubles the other day.

She made three trips to the Alexandria, La., police station. First, she reported she had been given a parking ticket, although she had not been parked for the time allotted on the parking meter.

Second, she reported the theft of several articles from her car.

Then she made the third trip to apologize for the first two trips.

She had driven to the station the first two times in a car that wasn't hers, although her key fitted.

Federation Sponsors Junior Delegate

Baden Renwick, Mountain, has been selected to represent Dundas County on the Ontario Junior Farmers United Nations tour, September 28 - October 4.

The Dundas delegate will be sponsored by the Dundas Federation of Agriculture as an award for outstanding work in 4-H Club activities.

Mr Renwick, who is 22 years old, is now club leader of the Winchester 4-H Tractor Club. During his career as a 4-H member, he was five times a project winner and took part in Grain, Tractor and Calf Club projects.

Forty-two delegates, each representing a different county in Ontario, will leave by bus from Galt on September 28. From Galt the delegation will travel to Pennsylvania via Niagara Falls and from thence to Washington, D.C.

After a day touring Washington the Junior Farmers group will visit the University of Maryland and Beltsville Experimental Station.

New York City is the final area to be visited and here two days will be spent visiting points of interest, including the Empire State Building and the United Nations Organization.

Leader of the tour is Herb Norry, associate agricultural representative, Peterborough, and chaperon, Mrs Robin Jeffrey, Home Economist, Brockville.

SLIGHT DIFFERENCE

Joyce Williams walked into a Cardiff, Wales, butcher shop and offered to bless the boss' money.

Butcher Vincent Richards handed the gypsy girl £100.

She made mystic signs over it and said: "There will be 10 times more after this."

But when the gypsy left, a court was told the other day, the butcher found there was £24 less.

Gypsy Joyce was jailed for six months for stealing the cash.

PLANE PASSENGERS SEE SUN RISE IN WEST

Passengers on a polar flight from Amsterdam to Vancouver witnessed the weird spectacle of the sun rising in the west and setting in the east.

The pilot of the Canadian Pacific Airlines' jet-prop airliner described the spectacle this way: "The sun appeared to stand still, and as the aircraft outpaced it over the rim of the world, we saw the sun appear to travel in the wrong direction."

The passengers saw the solar system appear topsy-turvy from their 30,000 foot-high grandstand seat.

The captain said the flight from Amsterdam was started in darkness. "But at the zenith of our 5,000-mile path, we were flying along the 75-degree-north latitcde, or about 900 miles from the North Pole," he said.

"nI this area," he went on, "the speed of the sun's rays on the earth's surfaee is about 300 miles an hour—in contrast to the speed at the equator, which is about 1,000 miles an hour. As a result, our 400-miles-an-hour aircraft literally caught up with the sun, and it appeared to rise in the west.

"As the plane sped past the sun," said the captain, "the sky grew darker—we left the sun behind, and so it set in the east.

"Over Edmonton we were in almost complete darkness, over the Rockies it got lighter and in Vancouver, it was dawning—the sun caught up with us again, and started to rise in the east," he said.

NEW LOOK

A credit firm in Spain, tired of hiring platoons of duns who barely earned their keep, has had a brainwave.

It now dresses its collectors in suits of flaming red and gives them orders to play me-and-my-shadow to procrastinating debtors. When the debtor leaves for work he finds a red man waiting to step along with him.

At night he has similar company home. If the debt dodger drops into a wineshop to soothe his nerves and ponder countermeasures, the red man joins him. It's the same if he goes shopping or visiting.

With only about a week to go before the big International Plowing Match gets under way at Crysler, preparations are reaching a high pitch. A final committee meeting this week in Berwick found everything in tip top shape. Tents are going up now on the Clouthier farm, and exhibit space is at such a premium, a third mile of displays had to be arranged for. The committee is hoping arrangements can be made to have Tuesday declared Public School Day. Brucellosis Incidence Low in Dundas

The blood testing of cattle for brucellosis in Dundas County, which is now nearing completion, has revealed a remarkably low incidence of the disease. According to figures released by Dr J. E. Nesbitt, Health of Animals Branch, Department of Agriculture, Brockville, on September 15, from a cattle population of 28,342 only 66 positive reactors and 154 questionable animals have been found. Questionable animals are subject to a retest.

Blood samples have been drawn from 14,040 cattle, or approximately half of the total population. Calves under eight months of age and vaccinated animals under 36 months of age are not subject to blood testing.

Because of the volume of work in testing the cattle and the number of veterinarians employed over a wide area, a few herds may not yet be tested.

Cattle owners whose herds have been missed are asked to contact Dr Nesbitt at Brockville or E. K. Pearson, agricultural representative, Morrisburg, so that the area can be completed as promptly as possible.

Good news has been recently received with regard to compensation payable to owners of positive reactors. The maximum amount of compensation payable on quality animals has been raised from $40 to $70 for grade cattle and from the former maximum of $100 on purebreds to a maximum of $140.

It is understood that the compensation increase will be retroactive on positive reactors found in the current brucellosis testing program.

Former Finance Minister Speaks at Liberal Rally
Liberal Candidate Mark Salmon Addresses Gathering

The national debt for Canada will increase by $200 per capita within the next year as a result of the policies of the Diefenbaker Government, former finance minister Walter Harris told a Liberal rally at Spencerville Friday.

Speaking on behalf of Mark Salmon, Liberal candidate in the Grenville-Dundas by-election on September 29, Mr Harris said the present government was running into an economic vacuum by not having a major project to introduce with completion of the St. Lawrence Seaway to ease the unemployment situation.

The speaker also told his audience that unemployment would be up 33 percent this Winter, and the Diefenbaker Government was admitting this possibility by their imposition of immigration restraints. To the group of New Canadians present, Mr Harris, as a former minister of immigration and citizenship, accused the government of discrimination by refusing to extend social benefits to them as soon as they obtained citizenship status.

"These discriminations must be removed before they can sincerely consider a bill of rights," he stated amid applause. He also accused the present administration of an indecisive foreign policy that would only lead the nation into lower esteem in international affairs. Preceding Mr Harris on the platform the candidate, Mark Salmon, stated the Conservatives were admitting uneasiness about the by-election's outcome by their increased activity within the past fortnight.

He cited recent appearances of cabinet ministers, an unprecedented bombardment of literature through the mails, and other tactics.

Charging that Mrs Casselman, the Conservative candidate, had turned down an invitation to debate the issues in Prescott on the day of official nominations, the outspoken Liberal nominee said: "If their candidate can't get up on her feet to address her own constituents, what can you expect of her in Ottawa?" He also accused gangs of hoodlums of going about the riding destroying Liberal posters, and inferred that it was a part of the political intrigue which had dominated the riding for so long.

R. H. Armstrong, of Morrisburg, president of the Dundas-Grenville Liberal Association, chaired the meeting. Mr Harris was introduced by Mossman Dubrule, of Prescott, and thanked by Abraham Couperus, a New Canadian from Holland who came to Canada at the time the speaker was Minister of Education.

MANY TALENTS

Mrs Gladys Hooper, of Pass Lake, near Porth Arthur, could be called a Jill-of-all-trades.

She is the mail carrier for the Pass Uake area, a garbage collector and baker for the local campers' association. She is a member of the school board and other local organilations.

Mrs Hooper says she has slowed down lately. Two years ago she also looked after chickens, cows and pigs.

Her husband works for the Department of Highways. They have seven children, of whom two are still looked after at home.

In wartime she worked as a rivet passer in a British Columbia shipyard. She has also driven heavy trucks on road construction, has worked on a carnival midway and once hiked 15 miles into bush camps in midwinter to sell socks she had knitted.

LAZIEST FISH

The laziest fish in the sea must be the sucker. Although it is a strong swimmer, it prefers to be pulled along by other fish or by turtles, or even small vessels.

The sucker grows to a length of about two to three feet. On the top of its head is an oval disc which, when pressed against the underside of a fish or boat, can create a strong vacuum with a very firm grip. Thus it attaches itself to its host to lead it to a meal. Then it makes brief sorties to gobble up the fragments of food and returns to attach itself again.

A sucker will often fasten itself to a lugger and use it as host for weeks, darting out from under the hull to scavenge scraps thrown overboard.

...so both are borrowing from a bank

When borrowing is sound business practice, it is a simple, straightforward process to arrange a loan from a chartered bank.

Every day, in every part of Canada, the chartered banks are lending money to farmers, fishermen, producers, manufacturers, processors and other commercial customers, large and small...to meet payrolls, buy raw materials, market goods and meet a multitude of financial needs.

A bank manager is constantly on the lookout for opportunities to make such loans —that's his job. Bank loans are an essential part of the process that provides the goods and services that make life better for all Canadians.

THE CHARTERED BANKS SERVING YOUR COMMUNITY

Railway Tunnels

About 21 trains pass Bill Southworth's mountain quarters daily, but they don't bother this veteran of 30 years with the Canadian Pacific Railway.

He is chief engineer of the railway's fan house at the west portal of the five-mile long Connaught Tunnel, ending near the tiny community of Glacier, half way between Golden and Revelstoke, B.C., in the Selkirk range of the Rocky Mountains.

In his charge are two 13-foot fans which clear the tunnel of smoke and gas after trains pass. Bill can blow up a wind of gale proportions by simply flicking the switch on a four-cylinder, 500-horsepower diesed engine.

The fans were originally set up to disperse smoke sent up by steam engines puffing through the tunnel, under 5,840-foot Mount Macdonald. The advent of the diesel engine on the CPR's trans-continental line has eliminated the accumulation of smoke. But the fans keep turning to ventilate the tunnel.

A strong blast by the railway's wind-makers still is necessary for westbound trains, which must work up a one-per-cent grade inside the tunnel. Eastbound trains ride the downhill grade and do not emit fumes to the same extent.

The tunnel is the longest in Canada. Named after the Duke of Connaught, then Governor-General, it was opened in 1916. The shaft was bored through Mount Macdonald so that trains would not have to puff over Rogers Pass. The original railway route over the pass now is being used as the bed of the new Trans-Canada Highway.

The Connaught is one of three large tunnels on the CPR line through the mountains. The two spiral tunnels in the Kicking Horse Pass near Field were opened in 1908 and have a combined length of 6,176 feet.

Burrowing under Cathedral Mountain and Mount Ogden, the tracks pass over, or under, themselves inside the mountains to gain or lose 48 and 45 feet by each circle of the elongated "figure eight."

Together with the Connaught Tunnel, the spiral tunnels have become a major tourist attraction for the railway.

Ventilation isn't the only problem met by railwaymen in the tunnels.

Mr Southworth says the Connaught Tunnel must be patrolled daily to ensure the roadbed and walls are in good condition and that no animals have wandered in. Bear, deer and domestic livestock have been found inside. A forest warden's horse once strayed inside and almost galopped over a tunnel patrolman when it heard a train approach.

Maintenance is a major job. For the last four years, workmen have been re-lining the spiral tunnels with reinforced concrete.

The large number of trains moving on the line make the work slow and difficult. Scaffolds must be removed and the track cleared before trains pass. About 30 men have been working on the project from May to October each year. The job is expected to take 10 years to complete.

TREASURE HUNT WESTERN STYLE

Alberta, like the Maritimes, has its buried treasure.

In Alberta's case, the treasure consists of kegs of rum and three cannons, buried 150 years ago on the banks of the North Saskatchewan River near Rocky Mountain House, 100 miles southwest of Edmonton.

Hudson's Bay Company files show that the kegs and guns were buried in 1806 by traders, warned of an Indian raid, before they fled to safety down river to Edmonton.

The company was among the first to search for the treasure. It sent out parties to recover the guns but failed to find them.

Since then the search for the rum has continued. In recent years the search has been taken over by summer tourists.

Some tourists simply ask about the location and dig in likely-looking places. Others write to the Hudson's Bay Company asking for copies of old maps of the trading post and take their bearings from them.

The records show that the cannon and rum were certainly buried near the fort, burned in the raid.

However, residents now feel that when the new fort was built it may have been located on a different site. Another possibility voiced is that the early maps were not accurate.

Glues Differ

Casein glue is more resistant to moisture than animal glue. Plastic resin glue is even more resistant to moisture. But only a glue marked "waterproof" on the container can be used for outdoor purposes.

Coots, marsh birds related to cranes, pat the water with their feet to aid their rise in the air.

"ABSTRACT" PAINTING HAD THEM FOOLED

Ever since a display of British abstract paintings was exhibited in Auckland, N.Z., a similar picture has hung in the councillors' room at the town hall.

Members of the council discussed it casually from time to time. Some thought it sheer rubbish, other explained that insight and understanding were necessary to appreciate modern art. None challenged the right of the picture to hang there as typical of current trends.

Two months later the secret leaked out. The "painting" was done by P. T. Curran, a car salesman and member of the city council.

"I was under the house one day and as I opened several paint tins I dropped the lids onto an old painting lying there," he explained. "It took me fully five minutes."

Curran smuggled his work of art into the councillors' room and listened gravely to occasional discussions of it.

Now that they know the author of the hoax, councillors are undecided about the painting's future.

"Just as intelligible as any of the paintings in the exhibition by British artists," says one. "It should be sent to England as representative of New Zealand art."

"Leave it here," says another. "This painting is symbolic—an artist's impression of the confusion that exists in the minds of most city councillors."

SLIGHTLY USED

Edwin Ludlow, of Chaumont, N.Y., got back his automobile recently 12 years after it was stolen. Two fishermen found the car at the bottom of Chaumont River.

IRON LACK FOUND IN SOME SOILS

Although iron deficiency in plants grown in high lime soils can be counteracted to some extent by supplying additional iron in various forms, a relatively new approach (involving a chemical preparation known as Versenol) has shown considerable promise as a remedy in recent tests at the Morden Experimental Farm, Canada Department of Agriculture.

W. A. Cumming, of the Morden Farm, says this chemical reconverts the iron present in the soil back into a form that can be used by the growing plant. Versenol appears to be of special value in greenhouse work on potted plants.

Symptoms of iron deficiency are common in members of the rose family and in some species of plants outside this family where soils are high in lime. This condition is known as lime-induced chlorosis. Actually there is sufficient iron in the soil but the excess lime changes it into a form which cannot be utilized by the plants.

Apples, plums, roses and the amur maple are especially susceptible. Under moderate conditions this deficiency turns the foliage yellow and in extreme cases the foliage presents a burnt appearance. During abnormally wet seasons chlorosis becomes more evident due to an upward movement of the lime salts in the soil. Moderate iron starvation will reduce yields considerably and, if severe, plants may be killed completely.

Some plant varieties appear to tolerate a shortage of iron better than others. This opened up the possibility of developing tolerant varieties so investigations of this nature on apple root stocks were started at Morden, Manitoba.

They Light Their Own Way

Nature, for mysterious reasons, has equipped a host of animals and plants with their own tiny lanterns.

There are the fireflies that scatter living sparks about gardens and damp meadows on summer nights. Strange fish carry torches on their bellies and sides. There are bacteria that shine on decaying meat, and a species of umbrella-shaped fungus that turns itself into a reasonable facsimile of a small night lamp.

Some 40 orders of animals and two groups of plants—bacteria and fungi—have luminous members.

Most torch-bearers live in the sea. They range in size from squid to one-celled organisms that sparkle like millions of minute flashlights about the hulls of moving ships. Luminous creatures swarm in such profusion at times that the sea's murky depths resemble the night sky on the 24th of May.

This phenomenon of self-lighting is called bioluminescence. It occurs through the interaction of a chemical known as luciferin and the enzyme luciferase. The light is the most economical possible because it doesn't cost the creature any loss of heat.

But it does leave a lot of unanswered questions in scientists' minds. Are the lights lures? Protection? Signals of recognition for a species? Invitations to romance?

Possibly each creature has its own private, instictive reason.

The sea's commonest living lantern doesn't mate, for instance. It simply divides. This is the one-celled protozoan, Notiluca miliaris, that sparkles in the wake of ships and in waves breaking on shore. It is largely responsible for the so-called phosphorescence of the sea.

The famed New Zealand glowworm uses its light to attract food. This larva of a small fly attaches itself to the roof of a damp cavern, weaves a web, and suspends from it a thread beaded with sticky mucus. Its blinking light lures midges. They get tangled in the glowworm's fishing line and are eaten at leisure.

Some fish seem to use their equipment as an actual means of illumination. Among the most remarkable is the firefly fish of the Banda Islands in Indonesia. Under each eye the fish has a pocket packed with luminous bacteria. The pockets shine like the twin headlights of a car.

The bacteria give constant light. But the fish has a clever way of cutting it off—a black fold that pulls over the pocket like an eyelid.

Fireflies, which produce their own cold light in abdominal organs, apparently are trying to get dates. Each species is believed to have a code. Sometimes fireflies flash in unison. The chorus may start when a female answers a male's light. Other males start flashing, and in turn other females in the area feel romantic. Soon the males are flashing together in response to a chorus of female flashing.

The fire worm of Bermuda has a built-in clock. The worms spend their lives on the ocean floor, but rise to the surface in mating season during certain months of the year and put on a brilliant display. Curiously, the worms swarm only after a full moon and at approximately 55 minutes after sunset.

SQUASH—FOR VEGETABLE OR FOR PIE

ONE OF THE NICEST fall vegetables is squash. I am thinking of acorn squash, but hubbard squash is equally good. And there are so many ways of fixing acorn squash that it can serve as the vegetable for dinner or as the main dish for supper.

Glazed Acorn Squash

Wash and cut two or three acorn squash in rings; remove the seeds. Arrange slices in a casserole. Season with salt and pepper. Add enough water to prevent burning. Cover and bake in 350 degree oven about 45 minutes. Cream ¼ cup butter with ½ cup brown sugar. Remove squash from oven and spread slices with sugar mixture. Return to oven and bake uncovered 15 minutes longer.

Frozen Hubbard Squash

Squash freezes very well but must be cooked first. I think hubbard squash is better for this than acorn but if you have a quantity of acorn sqcash in your garden and can't use them all fresh they can be frozen in the same way.

Cut the squash in handy size pieces. Remove seeds and either boil or steam till tender or cook in pressure cooker at 15 pounds pressure for 12 minutes. Drain and allow to cool somewhat. Remove pulp from rind. Place in a bowl and mash. Allow to cool thoroughly. I always leave it in the refrigerator over night to be sure it is thoroughly chilled. Pack in freezer containers and place in deep freeze.

When preparing the squash for cooking you may peel it before cooking if you wish. I always think the other way is quicker.

Squash Pie

- 1 cup cooked squash or pumpkin
- ¾ cup brown sugar
- ½ tsp. salt
- ½ tsp. ginger
- 1 tsp. cinnamon
- ½ tsp. cloves
- 2 beaten eggs
- 1 cup milk

Combine pumpkin or squash, sugar, salt and spices. Add eggs and milk; blend. Pour in pastry lined pie pan. Bake in a hot oven 10 minutes, then about 45 minutes in a moderate oven.

Baked Stuffed Squash

This makes a good supper dish. Wash acorn squash. Cut in halves. Allow one half for each serving. Remove seeds. Arrange halves in a shallow baking dish. Fill squash with your favourite hamburg mixture or use bulk sausage instead of the hamburg. Pour a little water around the squash to prevent burning and bake in a moderate oven one hour. If your dish has a cover it is a good plan to cover the squash for the first half hour to prevent drying out too much. Cook uncovered to brown the last half hour. If you do not have a cover use a sheet of aluminum foil as a cover.

GREENWICH MEAN TIME NOT FROM GREENWICH

You don't go to Greenwich to peer at the eight quartz clocks that determine Greenwich mean time—the basis for time throughout the world. You travel instead to the grounds of a 15th-century castle behind a placid moat.

This is Hurstonmonceux on the rolling Susser countryside in England. The Royal Greenwich Observatory has been brought there piece by piece.

A modern building near the castle is the home of Greenwich time. In its cellar are eight small rooms, all securely locked.

Faceless clocks, looking somethink like the inside of a hi-fi set, beat out the 86,400 seconds that make a day.

Actually, these clocks merely reflect the earth's rotation. For the earth itself is the world's only real clock.

Astronomers here check a hundred or more stars regularly. For man's purposes these stars are constant and the time it takes the Greenwich meridian to pass under each star determines — by definition, so to speak—what is 24 hours, or one day.

The quartz clocks must keep their 24 hours the same as the duration of one earth rotation. They are regularly checked to see if the 86,400 impulses are completed in exactly the same time as the earth takes to make a turn.

In less complicated days before the lights and the atmospheric polution of the London area made things difficult for astronomers, the Royal Greenwich Observatory was in Greenwich, 45 miles down the Thames. That's were Charles II established it in 1675.

Hurstonmonceux is 15 or more miles east of the zero meridian, or one minute 20.091 seconds east in time. Longitude has been based on this meridian since 1884, and time all over the world figured in relation to Greenwich time.

The correction - is always 1 : 20.091.

The new observatory is approached on a winding woodland road. Suddenly a castle looms up. It was built in 1440 and has been carefully restored, as headquarters and residence for the astronomers. The admiralty runs the observatory.

Faulkner–Thompson

Morewood United Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday, September 20, at 3 p.m., when Marlene Gale Thompson and Jack Mildren Faulkner were united in marriage. The bride is the daughter of Mr and Mrs Earl Thompson, Crysler, and the groom is the son of Mr and Mrs Emmerson Faulkner, Winchester.

Piccardy and white gladioli and fern were used to decorate the church for the double-ring ceremony which was performed by Rev Donald Gordon. Mrs Mac Thompson was organist and the soloist was Miss Elaine Crump, niece of the groom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Kay Thompson, as maid of honour, and Miss Faye Faulkner, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid.

Hector Carruthers, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man and ushers were Donald Mattice, cousin of the groom, and Garnet Thompson, brother of the bride.

For her marriage the bride wore a floor-length gown of white nylon tulle and Chantilly lace over satin fashioned with a fitted lace bodice, topped by a matching jacket with long lily-point sleeves adorned with rhinestones and seed pearls. Inserts of lace encircled the bouffant skirt. A matching headdress of nylon tulle, trimmed with iridescent sequins and seed pearls, held her fingertip veil of silk illusion.

The cascade bridal bouquet was of red Bettertime roses, white carnations and stephanotis.

The maid of honour and bridesmaid wore identical dresses of aqua and shrimp nylon chiffon with matching headdresses and shoes. They carried aqua, coral and white carnations.

The bride's mother wore a powder blue lace-over-taffeta chemise dress with matching accessories in blue and black. She wore a corsage of white and pink carnations. The groom's mother wore a chocolate brown dress of lace over taffeta with green and brown accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations.

Following a reception held in the church hall, the happy couple left on a motor trip to Niagara Falls and the United States.

For travelling the bride wore a beige and brown chemise dress with matching three-quarter-length duster and Parisian brown accessories. Yellow and bronze 'mums made up her corsage.

Out-of-town guests were from Ottawa, Toronto, Chesterville, Winchester, Cornwall, Newington and Kingston.

SMOOTH OPERATORS

Two men walked into a fashionable Toronto fur salon the other day. tipped their hats, scooped up $30,000 in fur coats and walked out. No one tried to stop them.

"It's one of the smoothest thefts we've ever heard of," said a veteran policeman.
