Caring for your lawn in an environmentally friendly way

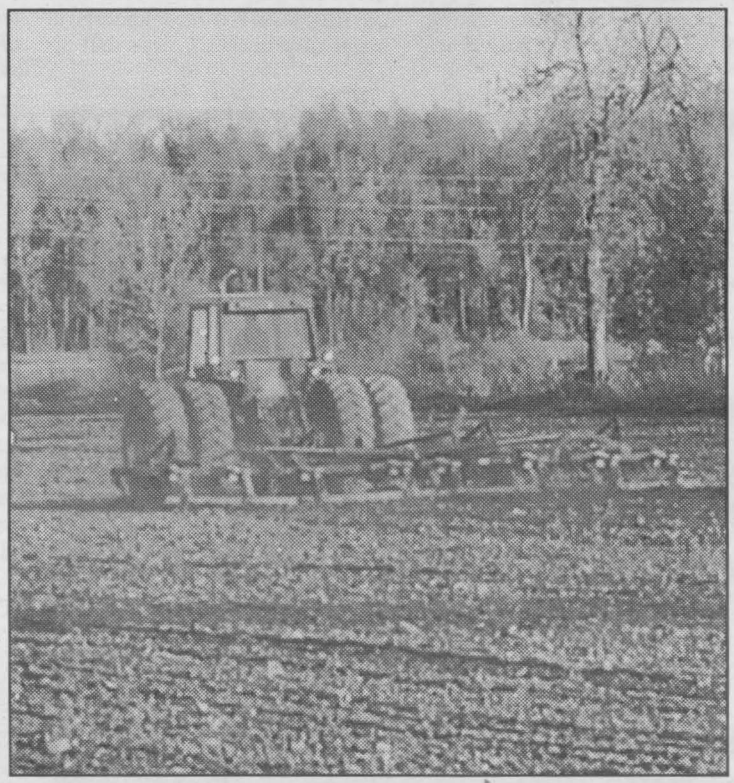

Picture a healthy green lawn: perfect for lounging, great for cookouts and playing games with the kids and grandkids, a real asset to your home. But did you know that your lawn - and how you care for it - can also benefit the environment.

Healthy grass provides a home for insects and worms that provide a rich feeding ground for birds. Thick grass prevents soil erosion, filters contaminants from rainwater and absorbs many types of airborne pollutants. Grass is also highly efficient at converting carbon dioxide to oxygen, a process that helps clean the air. Caring for your lawn properly can both enhance its appearance, improve its health, and support its benefits to the environment.

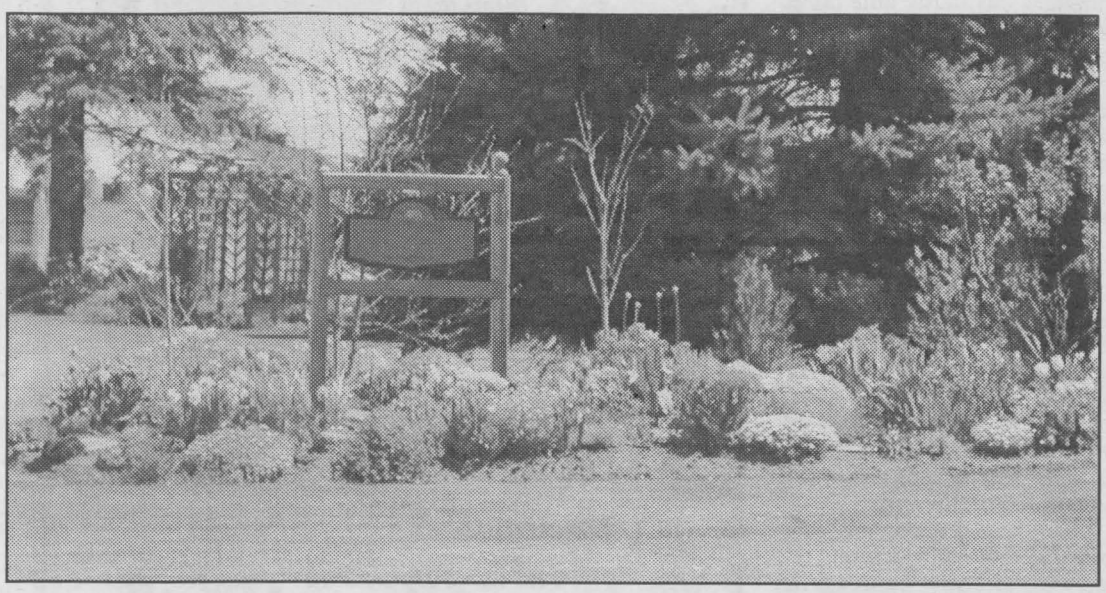

You don't have to be an expert to grow a healthy lawn. The secret is to work with nature. This means creating conditions for grass to thrive so that it can resist damage from weeds, disease, and insect pests. Organic or regular fertilizers can offer an answer. A well fertilized lawn can do two things: (1) keep weeds at bay by fleshing out turf and leaving less open spaces for weed seeds to germinate, plus (2) it tolerates better the presence of destructive lawn insects, such as grubs or chinch bugs. Keep your lawn healthy by feeding it well, and you won't need to use pesticides as frequently.

It means setting realistic goals for your lawn, whether you do the work yourself or use a professional lawn care service. And if you choose to use pesticides, it means using them with care and with strict attention to the manufacturers' instructions on the label so as to get the most benefit and reduce any risks.

Caring for your lawn in an environmentally sensible way can have a bigger impact than you might think. Your lawn is only a small piece of land, but all the lawns across the country cover a lot of territory. That means that you and your lawn care activities, in collaboration with everyone else's, can make a difference to the environment. That's why taking care of the environment begins in our own backyards.

Creative Gardens

Bonnie Richmire has a green thumb... there is no doubt about that. Coupled with a creativity that allows her to transform a garden plot into a colourful masterpiece, she does a lovely job. Her talent is evident as the splashes of colour blend and then tease they eye of the beholder. Watch for the tiny touches throughout the yard. A lot of hardwork goes into making her efforts look so marvellously beautiful.

Dandelions: A good crop

We dig them.
We jab at them.
We spray them.
We do everything under the sun that we think or have been told will eradicate them from our lawns.

Then we go to the local grocery and buy fresh vegetables that do not have nearly as much nutritional value as these dandelions we work so ardently to get rid of.

In order to enjoy the lowly dandelion you have to be quick on the pull and ready when they are. You have to harvest them before they flower because the plants become too bitter.

If you are not fast enough there are some stores that have them available, especially ethnic green grocers. Some major supermarkets also have them for sale.

Naturally the best are those you pluck from your own lawns and fields. The best part is that they are free for the picking. The only care is that you stay away from areas where dogs frequent for like yellow snow, and where pesticides have been used.. you do not want tainted dandelions!

A web site can fill you in on information on a variety of weeds that are good to eat...www.edibleweeds.com. Peter Gail of Cleveland Ohio is working to popularize the lowly dandelion. Ronna Mogelon has written Wild in the Kitchen, a book featuring edible weeds in a diversified group of recipes.

Did you know that dandelions are the most nutritious vegetable known. In fact Popeye may want to rethink his diet of spinach to raise his level of energy and strength! In addition to trace minerals, dandelions contain more beta carotene than carrots, more potassium than bananas, more lecithin than soybeans, more iron than spinach and loads of vitamin A,C,E,thiamin and riboflavin, calcium, phosphorous and magnesium...likely because they shoot

Spring on the farm at Upper Canada Village

"Spring of the Farm", as it was over a century ago, is alive at Upper Canada Village, now until June 5, 2002. Not only can visitors learn about all aspects of spring life on a 19th century farm, but they will also have the opportunity to see "in action" the recently designated "Nation Horse of Canada" the Canadian Horse.

Sheep shearing demonstrations will be taking place at Loucks Farm from June 1 to 5. Visitors will be able to test their ability at hand shearing some of the Village's own Leicester Sheep, a poular breed during the 1860s. Mr. Loucks will be on hand to shear about three sheep per day, between 10:30am to 12:00 noon and 1:00pm to 1:30 pm. The fleece will be delivered to the water-powered Woolen Mill on site, where it will undergo a series of processing steps that include washing, picking, spinning and weaving. Visitors can also see domestic spinning back at Loucks Farm, and learn the secrets of dyeing wool using natural ingrediants at McDiarmid House. Authentic wool batts, yarn and quality blankets woven at the Woolen Mill will be for sale at the Village Store.

With Spring also comes the attention to gardening and planting crops in the fields. Visitors will witness everything from the cutting and preparation of potatoes in Loucks barn to the horse-drawn harrowing of fields and planting of wheat, oats and corn.

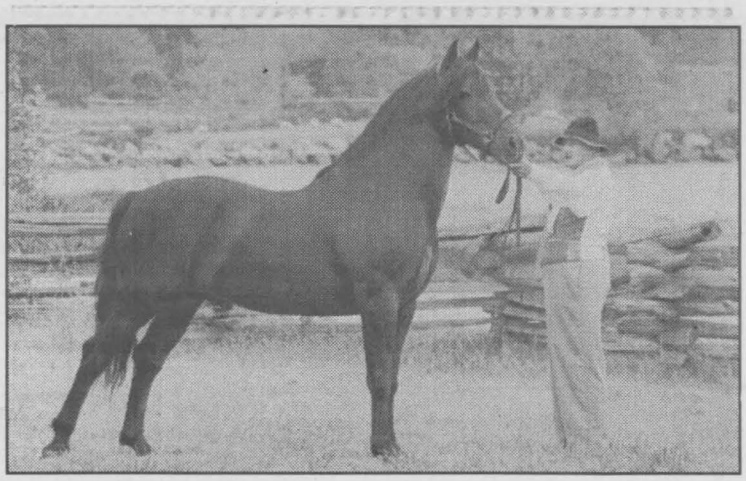

With so many different types of fences throughout the Village, there are always some in neeed of repair after the harsh winter months. Visitors who stop to witness this activity may discover that behind each fence is an interesting story about its purpose and role in the community. The spring tasks don't end in the fields. Other activities such as the old-fashioned art of candle making will be demonstrated at various times on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Much of the work on Upper Canada Farms is dependant on several heritage breeds of livestock found on site. Of special interest this year is the Canadian Horse. Earlier this spring, the Canadian Horse breed was officially recognized by the Federal Government as the National Horse of Canada. This sturdy little horse has played an important role in Canadian history since its arrival in New France in 1665 from the stables of Louis XIV. It has acclimatized itself to harsh Canadian conditions, evolving into a breed that is strong for its size, is well-tempered, resilient and determined.

"Upper Canada Village is home to 18 Canadian Horses", says Dave Dobbie, Acting Manager of Upper Canada Village. "We are proud of our horses, and encourage visitors to come out and see or themselves the fine qualities and contributions to the early settlement of Canada attributed to the Canadian Horse, that have helped earn this breed National recognition today."

Visitors interested in any particular activity during "Spring on the Farm" at Upper Canada Village are encouraged to call ahead for times of specific demonstrations.

In order for patrons to take advantage of the numerous other events happening in 2002, the Village is once again offering its Passports to the Past, where you can receive unlimited visitation for less than the price of coming twice! For a free Upper Canada Village Heritage Park Visitor's Guide, or to order a Passport to the Past, call 1-800-437-2233 (543-4328 locally) or visit our web site at www.uppercanadavillage.com.

A beautiful Animal

A proud and magnificent animal, the Canadian is a delightful horse, always up to the task at hand, they are a nice sized animal to work with too. This lovely poses for the judges at the Annual Fall Fair held at Upper Canada Village each year. A multipurpose horse, they were bred here in the early 1800s and anyone today would be proud to own one.

Avoid back and muscle injury by gardening the right way

Raking, hoeing, lifting, digging, kneeling, planting - almost enough activity to qualify for an international medal competition. Gardening may not be an Olympic sport, but it is strenuous physical activity and merits the same attention to avoid back and muscle pain and injury. When you get out the rake, the shovel or the trowel, keep these tips in mind.

Do the "scissors" when you rake: Stand with your right leg forward and your left leg back while you rake. Switch every few minutes. This will keep you from bending and twisting your way into a sore back.

Change hands frequently: Changing hands when raking and hoeing prevents muscle strain on one side of the body. Try to stand as straight as possible with your head upright.

Use long-handled tools: Long-handled tools let you avoid bending forward and sideways as you work which can cause you to strain your neck or lower back.

Lift properly: Face the object you plan to lift, bend your knees, and draw the load close to your body. Use the muscle power of your legs to lift. Don't lift heavy objects above your waist.

Kneel to weed and plant: Constant bending and squatting can put strain on your back, neck and leg muscles. You can buy special kneepads and mats that make kneeling on the ground more comfortable.

And finally, like all good athletes, drink plenty of fluids throughout your workday. Cool down at the end of your garden workout by doing some stretches or take a short walk around the block. For more information on how to avoid, manage and treat back pain, contact the Ontario Chiropractic Association 905-629-8211 or 1-877-327-2273, or visit the web site at www.chiropractic.on.ca.

The only way to stay cool

The current movement to entertaining at home for many people.

Backyard swimming pools-

A father and son are sitting at the edge of their backyard pool one summer night looking up at the stars. Home for the summer, the young college student wants his dad's advice on the career path he should choose.

It's a peaceful, relaxing setting that helps both of them open up and get to know each other better. Memories are made during these times. Without the distractions of the TV, the telephone, and the dishwasher inside, a family can unwind around the pool and talk about what's important in their life.

It's summertime and you've taken a week off work. You're sitting by the pool when your wife comes outside to join you. She suggests having lunch by the pool and maybe a refreshing dip afterwards. Sounds divine. This is a special time for both of you. You've both been working a lot of late nights recently and you haven't had a lot of quality time to spend together. Now you have the chance to make up for it by throwing a couple of inflatable loungers into the pool so both of you can lie back and hold hands as you gently float on the water, looking at the blue sky above. "Just another day in paradise" you both whisper in unison. Memories are made of these quiet times together.

Pools are Alluring

Why are swimming pools so alluring? They bring family and friends together and become the focal point in the home for a variety of activities that everyone enjoys. Social events such as spontaneous get-togethers around the pool or outdoor cookouts and barbecues on weekends or simply relaxing by the pool with the family, are just some of the reasons why swimming pools are replacing other forms of activities that bring family and friends together. And don't forget that midnight swim on a very warm evening with nothing on but the pool light. Memories are made of this.

- create memories for life

PI) the swimming pool industry's trade association, a backyard swimming pool costs less than a second car and will add value to your home. Above-ground pools that can be installed by yourself or by a professional will start at $2,000 and range up to $8,000 depending on the decking and landscaping selections.

The inground type of swimming pool is available in two types of structures. The first structure is the steel walled, vinyl liner variety that will average in the range of $15,000-$20,000 with a variety of equipment and decking. The second structure type is of concrete or gunite that will start around $20,000-$25,000 and go up based on the features that you choose to include.

Pools are a Backyard Water Feature

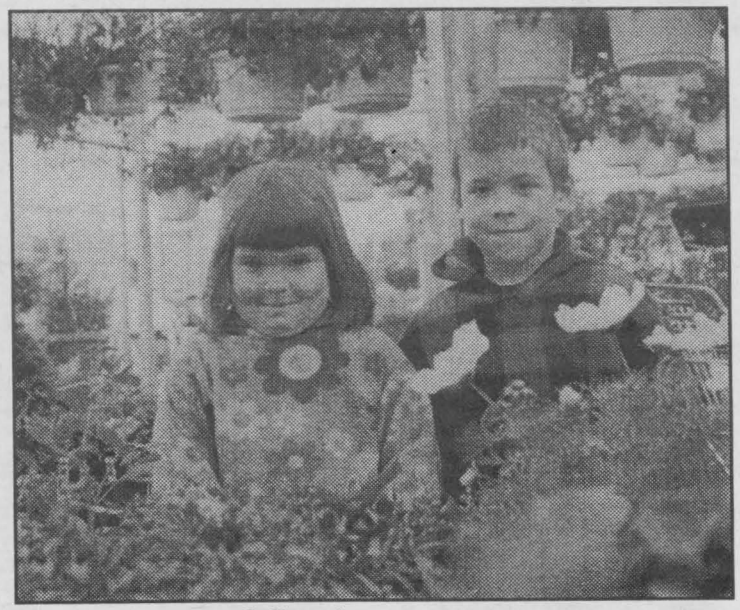

Unlike the swimming pool designs of just twenty years ago that consisted of squares, rectangles and kidneys, today, swimming pools resemble natural ponds, exotic lagoons and mountain lakes. They are stunning water features complete with waterfalls, fountains and exotic lighting all designed to capture the character of the owner.

Making a work of art out of a pool is not restricted to the high priced pool. Designers say that many homeowners are choosing conventional shaped pools in both vinyl and granite, but are selecting designer touches to enhance the look. These touches include such concepts as free form curves, cascading water features and landscape design.

No matter what you choose in the way of a backyard swimming pool, it will enhance your life and build those memories that will be so important to you.

Nominations for Rural Excellence Awards

The Foundation for Rural Living is accepting nominations for its fourth annual Awards for Rural Excellence. Proud sponsors of the 2002 Awards program are Pioneer, a DuPont company and founding sponsor, the Co-operators and the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

In keeping with the Foundations' mandate to stimulate community investment and foster sustainable growth in rural communities, the Awards of rural Excellence were initiated in 1999. These Awards recognize and celebrate communities, organizations and groups who through programs, projects and initiatives act on their vision of a better rural Ontario. Contribution to community and a view towards enhancing and sustaining the future are the cornerstones of the awards criteria.

"These Awards are a great way to bring attention to the tremendous work and innovation in our rural communities. Advancing the rural sector is a top priority for our province and our nation," says Michelle Quintyn, Executive Director of the Foundation for Rural Living. "Celebrating success is critical to the health of a community. Pride and inspiration serve to motivate further positive action." Gary Davison, Chair of the Foundation anticipates the number of nominations to grow again this year. "We hope to have even more nominations this year as we continue to recognize rural Ontario's outstanding initiatives," says Mr Davison.

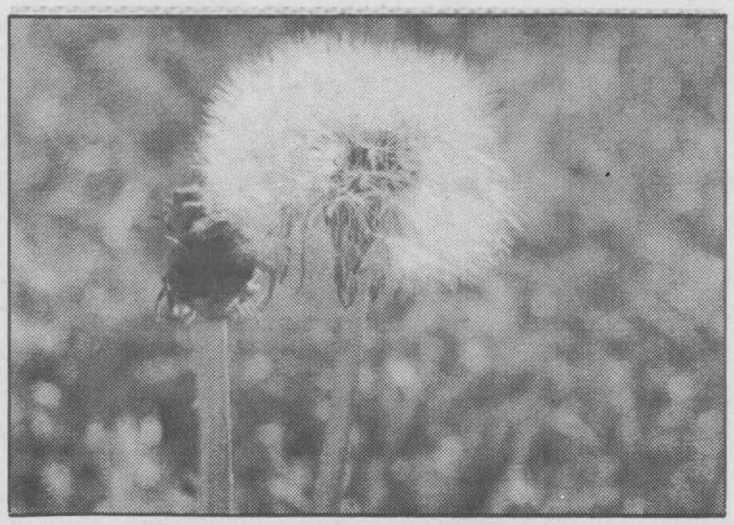

There are seven Award categories:

* Outstanding Partnership with Business
* Economic Development
* Rural Youth Achievement
* Excellence in Formal Co-operative Models
* Outstanding Philanthropic Action
* Outstanding Volunteerism and or Partnership in the Voluntary Sector
* Excellence in Community Leadership

The efforts being recognized with each award must take place in rural Ontario. "Rural" includes communities with a population under 50,000. Amalgamated municipalities of small towns where the population may exceed 50,000 are also eligible. An independent selection committee, made up of practitioners in each of the ward category fields, will review the nomination based on a set of determined criteria and make recommendations to the Foundation.

"The process to select the Awards is a useful way to have an initiative reviewed by a third party team of qualified peers," says Ms Quintyn. "The expertise and dedication of our review teams ensure a fair and thorough review of each nomination.

Nomination forms must be postmarked no later than July 31, 2002. Nomination forms are available from the Foundation for Rural Living, 1 Stone Road, Guelph, Ontario, at 519-826-4126 or on the web at www.frl.on.ca.
