HENRY'S Shorthand School
Ottawa, Ont.

THIS INSTITUTION offers a superior training and thereby ensures a more successful future. It leads all others—a fact fully established by more than 625 pupils who have left other business schools to come to it—and ranks among employers as "The School of Higher Efficiency."

It is not surprising then that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should definitely state "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Passing of Mrs. Jas. Masterson Mourned by Sorrowing Friends

A truly christian life and a career of a devoted mother closed in Chesterville on Friday, March 31st, in the death of Mrs. James Masterson in her seventieth year.

The deceased was well known, having lived most of her life in this vicinity. Her exemplary life of kindness and charity was an edification to all who knew her, who will long cherish her memory.

The funeral on Monday morning was attended by a large number of sorrowing friends. A solemn Requiem High Mass was celebrated by Rev. J. M. Foley, pastor of St. Columban's, Cornwall, brother of the deceased, assisted by Rev. P. J. Keaney, St. Mary's, Chesterville, deacon; Rev. L E. Staley, Gananoque, subdeacon, and Rev. D. A. McPhee as master of ceremonies. Priests present were Very Rev. Duncan MacDonald, Church of the Nativity, Cornwall; Rev. D. D. McMillan, Nazareth Orphanage, Cornwall; Rev. R. A. MacDonald, Hotel Dieu Hospital, Cornwall; Rev. A. L. MacDonald, Williamstown; Rev. C. F. Gauthier, Apple Hill; Rev. A. L. Cameron, Moose Creek; Rev. H. Bougie, Crysler; Rev. E. Danis, Crysler, and Rev. R. J. Coyle, Morrisburg.

Besides a sorrowing husband, Mr. Jas. Masterson, Mrs. Masterson is survived by six children: Mrs. Joseph Lynch, of Finch; Rev. Sister Mary Ignatius, Sacred Heart Convent, Arnprior; Rev. Sister Mary Fergus, St. Carthagh's Convent, Tweed; Bernard, Hugh J., and William J., of Chesterville.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Thos. Flynn, Maurice Servage, W. Hamilton, Robert Servage, E. Moran, and Charles Kearns. Interment was in the upper cemetery.

Among the many beautiful and spiritual offerings received were the following:

Rev. A. L. Lalonde, Cornwall, high mass; Rev. J. A. Goulet, Cornwall, high mass; Mr. and Mrs. James Masterson, Montreal, solemn high mass; Rev. D. A. McPhee, two; Rev. J. A. Former Morewood Girl Passed Away in Toronto

Word was received here Monday of the death of Minnie Gillespie, wife of Sam Gillespie, merchant, of Toronto.

Deceased, who passed away at four o'clock Monday morning, was the daughter of Mrs. Lucy Gillespie and the late Wm. Gillespie. She was born at Newington 57 years ago and after living in Iroquois for a short time, made her home for over 30 years in Morewood, where her father conducted a grist mill.

She married Sam Gillespie and they have resided in Toronto for a number of years.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, mother and one brother, Clifford, all of Toronto.

Quiet Session Held Here By Winchester Twp. Council

Morewood Contest Concert Attended By Large Crowd

The fourth contest concert presented by the Women's Association of the Morewood United Church on Friday night was one of the best yet and was attended by one of the largest audiences. Each group put on an hours' programme consisting of orchestra music, guitar, quartettes, pantomimes, tableaux, dialogues, scenic readings and recitations.

Rev. Mr. McKay and Mrs. McKay and Mr. W. J. Cass, B. A., and Mrs. Cass, of Winchester, acted as judges. The points judged were humour, quality, originality and execution.

Mrs. J. W. Bogart and Mrs. W. Coulthart were captains on one side and Mrs. Henry Steen and Mrs. Calvin Gordon led the other

After much consideration by the judges, Mr. McKay finally reported in favour of Group 1. Following the concert the judges were delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. E. Loucks.

The evening's proceeds were $57.20.

Wedding Fifty Years Ago of Mr. and Mrs. Sol. Shaver

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Quart, of Winchester, were host and hostess at a dinner on Tuesday evening in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Shaver, who celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaver were married at Morewood by the late Rev. William Brown, and Mrs. Shaver was the former Miss Sarah Fetterly, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Uriah Fetterly, of Morewood.

Living at Morewood for 40 years, where Mr. Shaver was a painter and decorator, Mrs. Shaver was an active member in the women's associations of the Methodist Church, and both are widely known and have a host of friends throughout this district. They moved to Winchester 10 years ago.

Mr. Shaver takes an active interest in politics and has been for many years a member of the Conservative Association. He is an Oddfellow and a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters.

Mrs. Shaver is in her 75th year while her husband is 77.

Their three children are Mrs. J. Quart, of Winchester; Mrs. James O. McMillan, of Grantley, and Hubert, of Detroit.

Mrs. Shaver has one brother, Geo., of Yale, Michigan, and two sisters, Mrs. T. Pitts, Montevido, Minn., and Mrs. J. Carter, of Castlewood, South Dakota.

Only immediate friends of the family were present at the dinner but numerous messages of congratulations were received throughout the day.

Prevention Work Will Be Started In Dundas By Ontario Department Of Health Officials

Modern, Well-Rounded Disease Prevention Campaign Will Be Inaugurated Throughout Dundas County By Department Officials In An Effort To Stamp Out Preventable Diseases And Alleviate Much Suffering.

PROGRAMME WILL BE CARRIED TO FIVE EASTERN COUNTIES.

Treatment Of Disease Costs Citizens of Ontario the Colossal Sum of $108,000,000, While Only $3,000,000 Represents Sum Spent on Preventative Work.—Success of Effort Assured By Co-operation of Allied Health, Medical and Dental Associations.

HEALTH is the greatest asset and the most valuable possession of any human being. When it is lost, the individual is placed at a great disadvantage and is often forced to spend large sums of money in treatment. Sickness is too often the factor which determines whether a family can live comfortably or must go in debt. Disease costs the people of the Province of Ontario the enormous sum of one hundred and eight million dollars per year. While disease prevention as it applies to the individual is an important responsibility of the family physician; in order that the community might be adequately served and in order that community health interests might be properly protected, it has been found necessary to set up health organizations as part of the modern social structure. Ontario has organized along this line both provincially and municipally and in both the provincial and municipal departments, doctors, dentists, nurses, engineers and inspectors associated with these organizations are always active in discovering and combating the many factors tending to produce ill health.

Marvellous advancement has been made during the past few decades in connection with disease prevention, and some maladies which formerly exacted an immense toll in human life, have now been eliminated. This progress has been due, in a large measure, to work done in research laboratories, and is the result of a better understanding of the causative factors in connection with sickness and the means which may effectively be used to bring them under control. This knowledge gained by faithful application and persistent endeavour is, however, of very little use unless brought to those who can use it to protect themselves or to safeguard the health of those under their care.

When one considers the enormous cost involved in treating disease, he realizes that the State is justified in spending freely in the more helpful field of prevention. All recognize that it is not only better but much cheaper to prevent disease than to take care (as we must) of its unfortunate victims; and yet, in this Province, only three million dollars per year is spent on prevention. One hundred and eight million dollars for the treatment of disease and three million dollars for the prevention of disease assuredly cannot truly present a conception of the relative importance of treatment and prevention by intelligent people.

Disease prevention involves, first, education, and second, the application of knowledge so gained to the prevention of disease, the promotion of health and the correction of such defects as mitigate against physical well-being. It cannot be denied that much of the ill health prevalent in all parts of the Province is due to lack of knowledge on the part of the public. People need to be informed and frequently reminded that failure to avail themselves of modern methods for disease prevention may result in disaster.

To-day, as never before, society is prone to over-emphasize some one factor in disease prevention and neglect others of equal importance. It is extremely difficult to get people to recognize the importance of balance and to accept habits of living that will afford all-round protection. At the present time the Ontario Department of Health is making a study in an effort to evolve a programme of prevention that will meet this need. Such a well balanced programme must of necessity be of such a type that the cost will be within the means of the Province and the various municipalities.

To enable the Ontario Department of Health and various other health agencies associated with it, to study at first hand the beneficial effects accruing from a modern well-rounded disease prevention programme, a health campaign including education and a limited amount of preventive treatment will shortly be inaugurated in the five Eastern Counties of Ontario. The effort will be started in the County of Dundas and as all the health workers and social agencies of the area are giving enthusiastic support to the undertaking, its success is anticipated.

The work will be carried on under the auspices of the Ontario Department of Health with the endorsation and enthusiastic co-operation of the Ontario Medical Association, the Ontario Dental Association, the Canadian Dental Hygiene Council and leading lay organizations interested in the promotion of health. The hearty co-operation and support of all residents in the area chosen for the work is essential if the undertaking is to be fully successful.

Never manure ground for evergreens, and never place manure around the roots when planting.

The young wife was making her first attempt at cookery, and her husband came into the kitchen to watch the good work.

"The book says 'beat the white of the egg till stiff'," she said, "so I guess it must be done by now."

"Why, it isn't stiff yet," replied her husband.

"No, but I am," she said.

Russell Resident Escapes Carbon Monoxide Fumes

Russell Leader.—Mr. Andrew Walker had a narrow escape from death from carbon monoxide gas on Friday last. He was cleaning seed grain, when the exhaust pipe on the gas engine became disconnected letting the fumes remain in the building. He noticed the gas and opened the door to clear the room. Almost at once he had to adjust a belt on the upper floor where the gas had not been cleaned up, and while bending over was overcome and he fell. His foot caught and stopped his fall, leaving him hanging with his head below the densest of the fumes. His foot was held against the running belt, and his rubber worn through, the boot becoming hot enough to scorch his foot. He does not know how long before he regained his senses and pulled himself up, but he managed to do it, and after shutting off the engine proceeded to his home, where he was a couple of hours before he recovered. His leg and foot are still painful, and he is suffering from the effects of the gas. It was a very narrow escape.

Outsiders Bidding Up Prices Frustrate Farmers' Plans

Newmarket, April 2nd.—Attempts by local parties to emulate the action of American farmers in making low bids for live stock failed here on Saturday at a sheriff's sale of the stock and implements of W. Andrews of Sharon for rent arrears. Bids of two cents for hams by friends of the farmer whose property was being sold were soon run up to 37 cents by outside bidders.

Outside bidders present at the sale, which was attended by several hundred farmers, complained to police present that they had been threatened with drastic action if they attempted to raise the prices, but little trouble developed, other than warm vocal expressions between the bidders and interested parties. County Constable William Myers, William Martindale and George Stewart kept a close watch on the sale to prevent a clash between local farmers and other bidders.

Bids of $2 started the disposal of cattle and they were soon increased to as high as $45 and $74. Several of the outside bidders declared that they refrained from making offers because the prices were too high. Altogether about $1,200 was raised.

Free Driver of Automobile On Bail Of $15,000

Napanee, Ont., April 3rd.—Charged with driving while intoxicated, Ward Casselman, Sault Ste. Marie, a medical student at Queen's University, appeared before Magistrate M. P. Graham to-day and was released on bail of $15,000. Date of his preliminary hearing was not set.

Bondsmen were John F. Sowards and Dr. W. T. Connell, both of Kingston, for equal shares, and personal security of $5,000.

The charge is a sequel to an accident near here early Sunday in which Paul Putman, Ottawa, five-year medical student at Queen's, and Miss Beatrice Croft, Belleville, a graduate nurse, passengers in a car driven by Casselman, suffered fatal injuries.

George C. Young, Ottawa, another passenger, held as a material witness, was also required to supply bail of $3,000.

Longest Game On Record Toronto Eliminates Boston

Toronto, April 4th.—Toronto Maple Leafs won the longest hockey game in the history of the sport here this morning, defeating Boston Bruins 1-0 after 104 minutes and 46 seconds of overtime.

Ken Doraty, smallest player in the gruelling battle, broke up the game at 1.50 a.m., when he scored on Andy Blair's pass. A mighty throng of 14,500 largest that ever witnessed a hockey game in Canada, saw the weary gladiators battle to a finish.

The triumph qualified Leafs, defending world champions, to meet New York Rangers to-night -at -New York in the first game of the Stanley Cup series. The Leafs rushed out of the rink to a waiting special train for New York.

Through three regular 20 minute periods, then five extra 20 minute sessions, Toronto fought the Bruins to a standstill. They maintained an edge in nearly every period but were fooled by the sensational goal tending of Tiny Thompson.

Each team scored a goal that was disallowed. Alex Smith scored for Boston late in the third period, but a Leaf player was offside on the play.

King Clancy shot in the fourth overtime period and beat Thompson cleanly but the whistle had sounded before he fired.

President Frank Calder of the National League suggested the teams flip a coin after five extra periods had been played without a score. Bruins were agreeable but at the last minute the Toronto players decided to play to a finish.

They came right back with the winning goal.

The endurance record for hockey had been set last season when Springfield Indians and Boston Cubs of the Canadian-American League played 100 minutes overtime to a 2-2 tie.

Takes Pass From Blair.

Doraty, tiny right winger in his first season with Toronto, appeared fresher than any player on the ice during the last 60 minutes of the marathon. At least four times he whirled through the wobbling Bruin ranks and came face-to-face with Thompson, only to have the Boston netman outguess him every time.

But when Blair reached out at midice and picked up the puck that Eddie Shore had directed at a team mate, then cut into Boston territory, Doraty moved fast. He streaked for the goal, snatched the perfect pass Blair lined at him and blazed a low shot into the corner of the net.

There was a long delay after the fifth overtime period had been played and the crowd, tired, cramped but ready for more hockey, started to clap in unison. They heard the teams were ready to toss a coin to decide which played Rangers.

Then Bruins came back on the ice. Out came Leafs and a thunderous roar went up. Joe Primeau, who was called on in the overtime after being out of two games with an infected foot, lined up with Charlie Conacher and Harvey Jackson. Conacher got in two long shots on Thompson before Coach Dick Irvin sent out Doraty, Blair and Bob Gracie.

With Eddie Shore and the veteran Harry Oliver leading the way, Bruins fought grimly in the long-drawn-out overtime. They were never given a chance during the whole game to settle down as Toronto bored in and kept boring in.

Thompson and Lorne Chabot, Leaf goalie, stood out as heroes. A dozen times Chabot made miraculous saves to keep Boston off the score sheet. Bruins attacked spasmodically but when Shore got a power play into Leaf territory the United States division winners hammered at Chabot for minutes on end.

Earthquakes Are Predicted For St. Lawrence Valley

Severe earthquqakes in the Great Lakes region and the St. Lawrence Valley are almost certain to come, in the opinion of Prof. William Herbert Hobbs, University of Michigan geologist. Prof. Hobbs also forecasts shocks for the Lower Mississippi Valley and Southeastern States.

In an interview Saturday, Prof. Hobbs said scientists can name the places but not the times of future earthquakes. The shocks, Prof. Hobbs said, result from jolting mass movements of portions of the earth's outer shell in response to forces constantly acting within.

"Within the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence region," Prof. Hobbs explained, "earthquakes indicate a slow rise or recovery of position coming about as a result of the melting of the former continental glaciers which once covered the region. Freed from its prehistoric load of glacial ice, the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence region is rising, while the Lower Mississippi Valley is being depressed by millions of tons of silt.

Resourceful Convict Adds New Gadget To Motor

Joliet, Ill.—Imagine the embarrassment of Convict Harry Covington when a state penitentiary guard lifted the hood of the automobile which Covington uses to haul supplies about the prison grounds.

A week ago Covington offered to put the automobile in first class shape if Warden Frank Whipp would supply the materials. The warden agreed and Covington went to work.

Other inmates seemed much interested in the job Covington had done. They often stood grouped about the machine.

A guard noticed their enthusiasm. He looked under the hood and found —a miniature alcohol still bubbling merrily.

Covington went to solitary confinement, and guards went through cells searching for bottles of liquor that he had distributed.

Two Crown Witnesses Will Face Perjury Charges

As a sequel to the acquittal in Police Court at Cornwall on Monday of Vincent A. Taylor, former provincial officer, charged with selling liquor, police took into custody two Crown witnesses and charged them with perjury. The pair, Alex. O'Brien and Gerald McIntosh, were remanded for one week.

Taylor's former colleagues at provincial police headquarters in Cornwall charged him with selling liquor to O'Brien on the night of February 16th last, basing the accusation on sworn statements of O'Brien and McIntosh, made on February 17. In Police Court McIntosh and O'Brien were called as the chief witnesses for the prosecution but their stories conflicted to such an extent with their sworn statements that Magistrate J. C. Milligan could find no evidence to merit a conviction.

Crown Attorney J. G. Harkness gave instructions immediately that charges of perjury be laid against O'Brien and McIntosh. They appeared before the magistrate and were remanded to jail without being asked to plead or elect.

Taylor, who saw several years' service in the Ontario provincial police, resigned his position as constable about a year ago.

TEACHER PROTESTS WAGE CUT AND LOSES HER PUPILS

Sudbury.—Twenty-one of the 44 pupils enrolled at Wahnapitae public school, 18 miles from here, have been withdrawn from attendance by their parents as a protest against refusal of the teacher, Mrs. Edward Craig, to either resign or take a salary reduction, Mrs. L .Bushman ,secretary of the board, stated on Saturday.

Mrs. Craig's salary is $1,100 a year, and Mrs. Bushman said the teacher recently refused to consider a slash of $400.

Budget Shows Deficit of $2,952,000 Anticipated By Ontario This Year

Premier G. S. Henry Assumes Task Of Provincial Treasurer In Tabling Budget In Provincial House.

TERMED A "ONE-TAX" MEASURE

Expenditures For Year Are Slashed $3,174,000; Revenue Shows Decrease of $4,065,000.

(Special From Ontario Legislature.)

PREMIER GEO. S. HENRY assumed the rôle of provincial treasurer in presenting to the Legislature the budget statement showing the financial progress of the province during the past and the forthcoming fiscal years. While Premier Henry had only recently recovered from illness, he delivered the two-hour address with a good deal of his usual fighting spirit in showing that the province faces an anticipated deficit for the present year of $2,952,000. This figure he explained, could have been reduced by $1,000,000 had the Government desired to press the harassed farmers for interest and principal due under loans of the Agricultural Development Board. Consequently, the Premier pointed out, the Government feels they should not unduly press the man who tills the soil and are giving him a longer period in which to meet his obligations.

The budget proved to be a "one-tax" measure, the only increased tax put into force being a 10 per cent surtax on succession duties, thus leaving Ontario's taxpayers without one cent of increased or new taxation for the present year.

Expenditures for the year have been placed at $53,285,000, or a decrease of $3,174,000 from last year. Revenue for the current year is estimated at $50,333,000 or $4,065,000 less than the treasury was able to gather in 1932. Included in the deficit are two factors, namely, unemployment relief charges and debt retirement obligations, the latter having been suspended for the year, while relief costs now totalling $9,536,000 have been charged up to capital.

Heavy relief expenditures were held by the Premier to be unavoidable in these difficult times, but he offered a warm defence for the inclining public debt, claiming that the Conservative administrations of past nine years should not be charged with extragavance by the Opposition, when the debt had increased in those years only by $281,000,000 as compared with the $193,991,000 increase registered by the Drury administration in its four years of office.

Special features of the budget included discontinuance of advances to the Agricultural Development Board after these advances have reached the $50,000,000 mark, the Premier contending that the Board will soon have the interest on its loans with which to work and that unlimited advances create an unhealthy condition. The Premier also intimated the budgeting committee, which since its inception over two months ago has effected economies estimated at $14,000,000, while there will also be a re-arrangement of departmental services with a view to eliminating duplication and overlapping of all administration.

The deficit for the past year was placed at $2,060,798, which would have been turned into a surplus of $2,002,146 but for four last minute special expenditures, namely, the refund of fines to the City of Toronto, $356,890; a one-fifth write-off of the year's direct relief bill of $808,470; adjustment of the Dominion Government's 1931 old age pensions contribution, $567,120, and exchange on United States funds of $2,330,463.

Revenues in 1932 all fell below anticipated amounts with the exception of the motor vehicles permits, gasoline tax, and corporation tax, the increases in these three taxes being respectively $1,390,593 and $1,939,064. Liquor Control Board profits, fines and licenses were down $740,000 from the $10,000,000 collected in 1931, while all other departmental revenues showed decreases.

Supplementary estimates tabled by the Premier showed an advance of $1,225,000 for Hydro-Electric Power Commission purposes, the total vote of additions being $4,821,188, while to offset these additions, the Government managed to make deductions in certain main votes to the extent of $3,715,133. Had the Hydro vote not been included, deductions would have out-balanced additions and leaving no supplementary estimates. Of this vote, $830,000 is to go to the Niagara system; $55,000 to the Georgian Bay system; $55,000 to the Eastern Ontario system; $17,000 to the Thunder Bay system, and $115,000 to the Northern Ontario system. Deductions included $25,000 cut in the grant to the University of Toronto to provide in the College of Education for the training of high school assistants; a $25,000 cut in the $350,000 grant to Western University and $34,000 reduction in the appropriation for departmental examinations.

The report of the inquiry into the death of Frank Smith, alias Rosen, inmate of Burwash Industrial Farm, was tabled by Hon. Geo. H. Challies, provincial secretary, which recommends that Dr. Donald R. Gunn, medical officer at the institution, be supplanted, and also that Sergeant Vincent be removed to another institution.

In answer to numerous questions relative to bonds of the Ontario Power Service Corporation, otherwise the Abitibi canyon power development, purchased by the province through the Hydro Electric Power Commission, Premier Henry explained they could not be answered until the sale proceedings in connection with the undertaking are completed. The Premier declared it was not advisable in the public interests to give formal reply while acquisition of the bonds and court proceedings in acquiring the property are progressing. When they are concluded, the Premier declared he would have a statement to make.

Debate on the budget was resumed by F. W. Elliott (Liberal, North Bruce), H. J. Davis (Cons., East Elgin), S. C. Tweed (Lib., South Waterloo), and A. H. Acres (Cons., Carleton).

A division of the House was made on the second reading of a bill introduced by H. C. Nixon, Progressive Leader ,which sought to reduce the present session of the Legislature to four instead of five years, the amendment being to the Legislative Assembly Act. The Government was sustained by a majority of 80-18, during which three Liberals, W. E. N. Sinclair, Opposition Liberal Leader; J. A. Sangster, Glengarry, and S. C. Tweed, North Waterloo, declined to vote; while Earl Hutchinson (Labour, North Kenora) was absent when the vote was taken.

The Game and Fisheries Committee approved the present law in banning dogs in deer hunting, while they also recommended that a buck law be passed, their recommendations to be considered by the House.

Premier Henry introduced his bill to bring about redistribution in which the size of the Legislature will be reduced by 20 per cent, the present 112 seats being cut to about 90. The Premier also intimated that two cabinet portfolios will be struck off in the plan for economy which will leave the cabinet with nine instead of eleven portfolios. The bill was referred to a special committee, comprising members of all parties, to be presided over by Hon. Wm. Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests.

A special committee of the House heard evidence in the charge of Gordon Waldron, K. C., Toronto barrister, against E. J. Murphy (Cons., St. Patricks-Toronto), also a barrister, that the latter had taken a fee to introduce a bill to abolish the Optometry Board. Mr. Gordon admitted having no such evidence.

Nurse And Queen's Man Killed Second Nurse Is Injured

Kingston.—Paul Putnam, aged 26, a final year medical student at Queen's University, a son of Dr. J. H. Putnam, of 206 Rideau Terrace, Ottawa, was killed in an auto accident about five miles west of Napanee on King's Highway No. 2 about 12.20 o'clock Sunday morning. Miss Beatrice Croft, a registered nurse of 1153 West Moirs street, Belleville, suffered a fractured skull and died in the General Hospital at Belleville.

Miss Violet Avery, a registered nurse of Port Hope, is also in the General Hospital at Belleville, but her injuries, it is stated, are not of a serious nature.

Driver Arrested.

Ward Casselman, also a Queen's student, and a son of Dr. T. B. Casselman of Sault Ste. Marie, was the driver of the car, and a report from Napanee stated that he had been taken into custody on a charge of driving a car while intoxicated. He escaped injury.

Graham Young, of Ottawa, was also an occupant of the car and escaped serious injury. He is being held as a material witness.

According to information received here, the members of the party were on their way from Belleville to Kingston, and it is believed that the driver lost control of the car, which left the roadway and went into the ditch. Putnam was sitting in the rumble seat with Miss Croft, and was thrown out on to the roadway, while Miss Croft was thrown over a fence.

Edward Dowling ,a farmer living close to the scene, was awakened by the crash and came to the aid of the injured. Dr. T. M. Galbraith, of Napanee, was summoned and gave first aid. Provincial Officer F. W. Barrett, of Napanee, made an investigation. Dr. Blackwell, of Deseronto, also attended the injured.

The body of Putnam was removed to an undertaking parlour in Deseronto, and an inquest will be held. Dr. James Miller, pathologist of Queen's University, conducted a post-mortem on the body of Putnam.

High-Grade Feeding Barley Is Required For Export

A Barley Survey, published by the Empire Marketing Board (His Majesty's Stationery Office, London, price two shillings), is addressed particularly to Canadian farmers and Canadian grain exporters. It embodies the results of an investigation of the important markets for barley undertaken by Professor H. C. Grant on behalf of the Manitoba Department of Agriculture. The problem is one which particularly affects Canada as our acreage under barley has trebled since the five years before the war, and as barley has now assumed importance as a major cereal crop in the Prairie Provinces.

Professor Grant points out that the United Kingdom is over supplied with two-rowed malting barley of a quality quite superior to what can be produced under normal conditions in Canada, particularly in Western Canada. For certain purposes some six-rowed barley is required and this must be imported. At present, this is mainly supplied by importations of California Bay Brewing. Canadian plant breeders may develop a variety which will compete with the sun-ripened, 100 per cent germination, crop. At present it cannot be grown in Canada. In the meantime, British plant breeds are endeavouring to supplant California imports by developing a six-rowed barley that will grow in England and mature satisfactorily for this purpose.

Professor Grant concludes that if Canada wishes to hold her own in the barley export market, it would seem the part of wisdom to forget about growing small quantities of malting barley for export and specialize on the production of high-grade feeding barley. The new grades provide an opportunity to compete successfully with other countries selling on fair average quality basis.

All grain feed for poultry should be ground as finely as possible.

"Do you like dogs?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "But not as much as cats. Dogs are affectionate and true, but cats are purring and treacherous and, therefore, so far as I have been able to observe, more human."

Sliver In Foot Since 1931 Is Removed By Dr. Locke

Marvellus Skill Is Manifested In Yet Another Line of Healing By Removal of Sliver Four Iinches Long From Boy's Foot.

(The Williamsburg Times.)

Last week witnessed the conclusion of one of the most unique and amazing treatments which could be thought of. And the conclusion of this treatment changed the whole outlook on life of a boy and all his family.

On August 19th, 1931, William Loney, a boy of 12, was sliding down from a stack at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Loney, Edwards, Ont. The boy used a board for the means of descent. And got a lot of slivers in his body by doing so.

One of these slivers had gone in between his toes and all home efforts to locate and remove it rated. Two doctors, one of them a specialist, were tried. They knew that some foreign matter was in the foot but failed to locate it or remove it. The boy was all this time and always until last week in great pain. He was laid up a lot and when able to go around he had to use crutches. His foot was terribly swollen and ached all the time.

Ottawa was visited and X-rays taken. No evidence was obtained from these photographs. Operations were tried but all failed in effect.

On December 2nd, 1931, another doctor was tried and he worked on the lad for one year. No good was done.

On December 13th, 1932, Mrs. Loney brought her son to Dr. Locke. She came with hope as she had heard much of the skill of Dr. Locke.

The lad's foot was looked at and Dr. Locke said that a sliver was certainly there. And he instructed Mrs. Loney how to treat her son for the ejection of this sliver. Read his instructions.

"Get about two yards of inch-and-a-half wide garter elastic. Draw it tightly around his leg above the knee at least six inches round. Leave it on for 20 hours out of every 24. If there is anything in there it will come out."

Home went mother and son. The elastic was procured and applied. Patiently and consistently were the instructions of Dr. Locke followed. There was no let-up in the procedure. Pain or swelling failed to interrupt the routine of the treatment prescribed by Dr. Locke.

On March 15th, 1933, the sliver came out by the sole of the foot. It made its own way forth blunt end first. This sliver had six open holes to choose for exit. These holes had been made by doctors for exploring and for drainage. But the sliver had its own course. No help was required or given in removal.

When the boy was here this week he was walking well and the holes in his foot were healing. The crutches were laid aside soon after the sliver came out and the boy gained in every way.

Now, at last, the sliver. It was rather a good example of its kind. The length of it was four inches and the thickness one-quarter of an inch. It was just like a four-inch portion of a lead pencil. More like a fence post than a sliver.

Mrs. Loney and William came back to report to Dr. Locke, and to settle the bill. Dr. Locke looked pleased when told the sliver had come out. When the mother offered to pay him, he said,

"You have paid plenty already. I did nothing much. Forget it."

Thus closes another incident in the life of "Our Doctor," but such incidents live on in the lives of others and bring hope to sufferers who need healing.

IN MEMORIAN.

Bailey—In loving memory of my dear mother, Mrs. B. Bailey, who who passed away on April 1st, 1924.

—Daughter, Laura.

IN MEMORIAM.

Servage—In loving memory of Mrs. Herbert Servage, who departed this life April 1st, 1929.

On one bright and sunny April morn
In her home so calm and still,
Came the message through their house,
"Ethel's dying. Hush, be still."

Yes, 'tis true love could not hold her
Ere the dawn of that sad day
When we each had gathered round her,
Ethel passed from earth away.

Now our hearts are sad and lonely,
How we miss her none can tell,
But we know she's free from trouble
For He doeth all things well.

Now she waits in yonder mansion,
Waits to welcome each one home.
May we each be there to greet her
When our call to Heaven shall come.

—Sadly missed by father, mother, sisters and brothers.

Stock poisoning from local larkspurs is reported on farms west of Edmonton, Alta.

Agriculture provides roughly one-half of Canada's national export trade, the most important items being grain and grain products, cheese, live stock and live stock products (principally meat and hides), potatoes and apples.

There is no such thing as a typical Canadian farm, the soil and climate of the Dominion producing a wide variety of prevailing regional types of farming.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McConnell and Miss Muriel were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Merton Collins, Osnabruck Centre, on Friday.

Mrs. C. F. Dafoe is at present visiting her sister, Mrs. A. McDonald, of Moulinette.

The social evening held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wereley under the auspices of Gallingertown W. A., was a decided success. A short programme of songs, readings and recitations was given and an old-fashioned spelling match was enjoyed by all.

Mr. Frank Dafoe and son Keith spent Friday in Lunenburg.

Recent visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McConnell were Mr. and Mrs. A. Fickes and son Ellis, Jimmy and Roy Lascelles, of Newington.

Miss Della Wells spent the week end with Miss Luella Neil, Gallingertown.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dafoe were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gallinger, Gallingertown, on Monday evening.

"Your office is as hot as an oven," said a client to his lawyer.

"So it ought to be. I make my bread here."

Aunt: "Bobby, you have been good all day to-day, so you may wish for something for yourself."

Bobby: "Then I wish to be allowed to be naughty to-morrow."

Mother was trying to arrange a marriage between her daughter and the wealthy young bachelor.

"Helen," she said to the daughter, "if Harold asks you to-night to be his wife, tell him to speak to me."

Helen nodded and then asked: "And if he doesn't ask me?"

"In that case," said the mother, "I shall speak to him."

Shortening Of Campaign Sets New 'Plane Problem

Chief concern of the provincial election office in connection with the 28-day campaign, which the Henry Government plans to adopt in Ontario, has to do with aeroplanes and their hire for the transportation, in and out of otherwise inaccessible electoral districts, of returning officers and ballot boxes.

Up in the Patricia country the present 41-day campaign has not been found any too long, it is reported, and there have been cases, in the 1929 election, for instance, where returning officers, snowbound, and actually lost with their dog teams, did not get out with their ballots until some time after the victorious party had been declared and had commenced a new lease of life at Queen's Park. In one or two situations 'planes were use, and they, too, were hard pressed, it is said, to make civilization on time.

It Will Be Fun Building Up.

There's a lot of fun ahead!

No matter how much good has come to us as foolish individuals in this process of being deflated, we haven't enjoyed it.

Now we have reasonable basis for some kind of upward turn—not just around the corner, but straight ahead and mighty hard pushing and pulling at that.

But there's the chance for more smiles. Invoices should be marked up instead of down. We'll be looking back—not to talk about how high prices were in 1920 or 1929, but how low prices were in 1933 and 'how much better things are now."

We'll be more able. We'll possess more good common sense. We'll have more realization that the primary means of working out our various destinies will be in our own actions and our own good judgment.

We'll be on firm ground—not kidding ourselves. And we'll have the satisfaction—Yes, the fun—of building up!

NOT SO IN THE U. S.

Mr. J. S. Woodsworth, M. P., states that "the pre-depression form of government" has definitely passed from the picture. The leader of the C. C. F. apparently thinks that the people of Canada are prepared to abandon their conservatism and resort to new political gods. The example of the United States, recently shown in the presidential elections, is not in accord with his beliefs. There the more than forty million voters came out in force and put Communists, Socialists and such minorities at the very bottom of the list. And that was at a time when depression was presumed to be at its worst.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

Ontario Brands 42 Per Cent Of Canada's Graded Beef.

February sales of government graded beef amounted to more than 2,299,000 pounds, according to Dominion Government figures. It is interesting to note that of this total, approximately forty-two per cent was branded in this Province.

Export Cattle On New Footing.

The United Kingdom agreement as now ratified ,puts Canadian cattle exporters on an equal footing with her competitors in the British market, for the first time in 37 years. The segregation of store cattle from fat cattle moving on export is no longer required. Fat and store cattle are allowed to move freely to inland points with the understanding that female cattle must be of a quality and type satisfactory to the British Ministry of Agriculture. Cheek branding is no longer required; the period of isolation has been reduced to one clear day, and a veterinary officer is no longer required to accompany the cattle on the ocean voyage. These concessions by the British Ministry of Agriculture are part of a bi-lateral agreement arrived at by the respective governments at the Imperial Economic Conference, and under which Canada recognizes the London Quarantine Station, according to conditions laid down in the agreement.

Grafting Compounds.

Further results of experiments with grafting compounds at O. A. C. are given as follows: Creosote or tar roofing compounds—These have killed all the scions and stubs where they were used; Tree Seal—This is much too expensive compared with home-made liquid wax and was a failure with the cleft graft; Latex or Liquid Rubber—This leaves the finest appearing wood and the most healthy, clean callus of any material used, but is expensive and would be dangerous to use for any grafting purpose, because of the difficulty in seeing when a complete coverage of the cut surfaces has been obtained; Paraffin Waxes—Ordinary paraffin wax becomes hard too quickly and cracks off too soon to have any value as a grafting compound; Parapin Wax costs about 25c a pound or around $2 00 a gallon. It gives first-class results in take of scions and is entirely satisfactory as a grafting compound. It is more difficult to apply than ordinary liquid wax as a number of coats are required in order to give the necessary thickness to withstand the melting effect of the summer sun. This material has not proved enough better than the standard wax to warrant its use in preference.

Wound dressings will be discussed in a succeeding issue.

Champion Canadian Clover.

Canadian Red Clover seed is well received in the British Market, where it has demonstrated its superiority to clovers from other countries. A leading Scottish seed firm which gives particular attention to the securing and distribution of the best strains of clover crops describes Canadian Red Clover, which is offered as an early strain of Broad-leaved Red, as extremely hardy and invariably giving the best results in trials at the West of Scotland College. In the firm's catalogue is a striking illustration showing plots of various strains of clover grown for comparison. In this the growth and hardiness of the Canadian type is noticeably better than that of the English and remarkably superior to the Polish and Chilean varieties.

Late Seed Deliveries.

In recent years deliveries of seed from wholesale houses to retail dealers began, for the most part, in February. This year, however, seed and feed inspectors report that up to March 1st very little seed was to be found in the retail trade

This condition is to be accounted for by the present uncertainty in business and the lack of buying power among farmers ,and hence an unusual caution exercised by seed dealers in buying supplies.

Seed this season will therefore be in the possession of retailers for a shorter period than usual and consequently there will not be as favourable an opportunity for thorough inspection as in former years. It is also to be expected that there will be an increased tendency for farmers to trade in seed among themselves and in so doing it ought not to be overlooked that all seed sold for seeding purposes in Canada is required to be sold on grade.

For the purpose of grading, samples of seed are forwarded to the nearest District Office of the Dominion Seed Branch. Three samples are graded free for any individual or firm in any one year.

Wool Growers Annual.

Much of the present success of the wool growers organization is due to the splendid reputation built up in the past fifteen years, stated Hon. T. L. Kennedy at the recent annual meeting of the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers in Toronto. The Minister of Agriculture congratulated the management on their progress and expressed the hope that the experience being gained to-day would stand the concern in good stead in the better times ahead.

Delegates from every part of Canada reported no liquidation in the sheep business. The trend was rather in the opposite direction, they said. It was reported that a much higher per centage of wool was being made up on the farm or in small local mills. The first of the three-year marketing contracts which are now due for renewal are coming in satisfactorily, it was reported, with cancellations negligible.

President Robert McEwen, of London, Ontario, reported that wool stocks from 1933 have been remarkably well cleaned up there being no burdensome carry-overs in this respect or in stockmen's supplies. While prices had been low, still the shipper to the co-operative had been paid 15 to 25 per cent above prevailing market quotations. The bulk of the clip had been sold in Great Britain and Canada. Everything was in readiness for the new crop of wool, said Col. McEwen.

After allowing for a dividend of five per cent ,substantial depreciation on buildings and equipment, building fund reserve and paying all accounts, a surplus of over $5,000 was announced by General Manager G. E. O'Brien, and this he said, by an organization which was not trying to create a surplus but simply to give growers the highest possible price for their wool.

Weekly Crop Report.

Dufferin County potato growers are much interested in the treating of seed potatoes and spraying to prevent blight, since the ravages of late blight in fields not well cared for and the fairly remunerative price of 50c per bag for commercial potatoes have impressed them with the value of these treatments.

In Peel County the representative has placed over 100 farm hands with farmers this year already, wages running from $5 to $10 a month until seeding, then $15 to $20 for the summer months for single, experienced farm hands.

Improved hog prices are encouraging to farmers in Western Ontario and elsewhere in the province. There is a tendency now for farmers to hold their hogs until well finished as the extra dollar or so per head which has come as a result of the price increase is a great encouragement to the live-stock man. Seed oats are being sought in Middlesex County at from 40 to 60 cents per bushel, depending on quality. Apple growers there are showing more than ordinary interest in preparations for spraying, with special attention to the control of the apple maggot.

Haldimand reports that the loss of fall wheat will be heavy in that district. That county also has a marked shortage of seed oats and seed barley.

Prince Edward County reports a large shipment of hogs at $5.00 per cwt.

York County farmers are optimistic about the fall wheat crop despite the fact that most fields show very brown. A good demand is noted in Frontenac for small pigs, which are selling from $5.00 to $6.00 a pair. It is doubtful if there will be seed enough to meet the demand in Renfrew, as some varieties have already been cleaned up. Most of the seed-cleaning plants there are operating to capacity with some running nights.

SEED CORN FOR 1933.

SOME CONCERN has been felt relative to this spring's supply of seed corn of domestic production. It is believed ,however, that the amount of suitable seed available may be sufficient to meet the usual demand if necessary care is exercised in putting on the market only the best of the crop for seed.

It is admitted that part of the 1932 corn crop in south-western Ontario was harvested under conditions unfavourable for seed production and that a large percentage of fields did not mature sufficiently to produce corn of seed quality. At the present time the average moisture content of last year's corn is thought to be 17 or 18 per cent. Late harvested corn, that which was not safely in the cribs before the heavy rains of early November, would be even higher in moisture and consequently of low germination.

On the other hand dealers state that while Ontario corn of the 1932 crop is lower in general quality than was the corn of 1931, there is plenty that will grade well over the requirements for No. 1 seed. Added to this, there is a certain carry-over of seed crn from the excellent crop of 1931, corn of which, with rechecking of germination, will probably be suitable for seed.

Prompt and vigourous germination is a prime requisite in all kinds of seed. This is particularly essential in corn, and since much of last year's corn crop is known to be unsuitable for seed purposes, seed dealers purchasing corn for resale and farmers puchasing for use on their own farms, should exercise great care in their selection of seed.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

By Etta Bitta Pye

RAISINS IN FOOD.

Fruits come—fruits go—but raisins, fortunately, go on for ever. We use them in so many ways in late times—for there is marked versatility in this fruit that is so rich in iron and other health contributions, and which holds the affections of people in general so unwaveringly.

Here are just a few dishes which make excellent use of raisins, though they fall very far short of suggesting the scope of this most useful of the dried fruits. Do not overlook the fact that there are several types of raisins from which you can choose the one best suited for the dish you may have in mind. Just this change in the kind of raisin you use will in itself bring about quite a change in the nature of the product you make with them.

Raisin Shortcake.

3 cups raisins.
3 cups water
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon butter

Boil raisins, water and lemon rind about 3 minutes. Meantime mix sugar with cornstarch, moisten with a little raisin juice, and add to raisins. Stir constantly until mixture boils and is clear, about a minute. Add lemon juice, butter, and keep hot. Serve on rich, hot baking powder biscuits with a garnish of whipped cream.

Raisin Angel Food.

9 egg whites (1 cup)
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
1¼ cups sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup seedless raisins

Boil raisins five minutes and drain. Sift sugar twice; sift flour four times. Beat egg whites until stiff with salt and cream of tartar. Fold in sugar gradually, then flour and vanilla. Fold in raisins. Pour into ungreased angel food pan. Bake one hour in a slow oven (250 to 300 degrees F.). Allow to stand twenty-four hours before serving.

Raisin Cup Cakes.

1 cup raisins
¼ cup butter
¾ cup sugar
1 egg
½ cup milk
1¾ cups flour
3 tablespoons baking powder
1 teaspoon lemon extract

Slice raisins or chop. Cream butter with sugar and add beaten egg. Sift flour with baking powder and add alternately with milk to creamed mixture. Mix thoroughly, add raisins, lemon extract, and blend well. Fill greased muffin tins one-half full. Bake about 20 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees F.). This will make 12 to 14 cup cakes.

Raisin Surprise.

8 slices sponge cake
½ pint whipping cream
1 cup strawberry preserves
1 cup seedless raisins
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Wash raisins in hot water and drain. Beat cream until stiff and add raisins, preserves, salt, vanilla and lemon juice. Mix thoroughly but carefully. Serve on slices of sponge cake.

Raisin Fudge Squares.

½ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
2 squares chocolate, melted
½ cup flour
1 cup raisins
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream shortening, with sugar, add beaten eggs, melted chocolate, and beat thoroughly. Add flour, raisins, vanilla, and mix well. Pour into a greased shallow pan and spread to about one-half inch in thickness. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 25 minutes. When cool spread with fudge frosting.

Church Road

(Too late for last week.)

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Swerdfeger and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Gory Millward.

Mr. and Mrs. George Prunner spent one day last week with friends at Boucks Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Henophy spent Friday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Henophy of Nudie Bush.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to Mr. Frank Wells and family in their recent bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Swerdfeger spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Mason Beckstead, Cedar Grove.

Mrs. Garnet McKenzie, Riverside; Mrs. Gory Millward and Mrs. Murray Styles spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Styles.

Miss Nellie Barkley, Glen Becker, spent a couple of days recently with Mrs. Murray Styles.

Million Dollars Each Month

In Ontario during March 42,853 men and women were paid $779,095 under the old age pensions scheme. Over the same period, in the province, 6,433 women with 19,300 children received $233,593 under the mothers' allowance system.

In the two items more than one million dollars was spent—a million dollars which comes out of the pockets of Ontario tax-payers, in the long run, no matter how the cost is shared among Dominion, province and municipalities.

These are deserving services. They enable men and women without resources to face the declining years in confidence; they help hold together families which otherwise would be separated. And they cost a million dollars a month in this province alone.

The most important manufacturing industry connected with field crops in Canada is flour milling, which dates back to the settlement at Port Royal (now Annapolis, N. S.,) in 1605.

Mistress (explaining routine to new cook): "Now, my husband always goes to his club on Wednesday evenings."

Cook: "I understand, Ma'm. So he won't want no breakfast on Thursdays."

The old commercial traveller was relating his experiences to a young man in the same business.

"And don't forget,' 'he said, "never try to sell an encyclopedia to a young bride."

"Why ever not?" asked the young man.

The older man smiled cynically.

"She always thinks her husband knows everything worth knowing."

The Way of the Whittens

VERNA WHITTEN dragged wearily along the paved walk until she came to the iron fence that marked the boundary of the Whitten property. She paused under the old maple tree to view dispassionately the "estate"—so termed in a rather grandiloquent fashion by Mme. Anatasia Whitten and her friends in a rather derisive way by the more jocose spirits of Clayton.

The iron fence badly needed repairing. The palings were red with rust, and the gate sagged hopelessly. The old-fashioned flagged walk was unable to maintain its side of the unequal contest with the weeds that protruded from between the stones. The sun-blistered steps and the warped floor of the porch seemed to shriek their need of paint ,and a few loose shingles, dislodged by the storm of the night before, added to the general unsightliness. Verna sighed. The word "estate" made her think of trim lawns and well-clipped hedges, large houses with latticed windows and shady porches—not old old-fashioned, disorderly gardens that made continual demands on the time and patience of their owners and refused to reward them with anything resembling an acceptable posy and not of ramshackle old houses in chronic need of renovation and repair.

The crunch of footsteps on the path behind her and the whang of the tightly rolled newspaper as it struck the front door called her to the situation that confronted her. She had intended to be at home ahead of the newsboy and to break the news as tactfully as possible, but as she swung open the gate Madame herself appeared, shook the newspaper open and scanned the headlines.

"H'm, so they're going to put another burden on this town to give a lot of youngsters things they can't appreciate. What nonsense!"

Verna brushed past her without comment and dropped her roll of examination papers on the hall table.

"'School board plans to purchase land for additions to buildings and playground,'" Madame continued to read, "'new wing to be added to the Lincoln School.'" She paused. "What is the matter with the building they have now? It cost quite a sum of money, I can tell you, and it looks good enough to me."

"It is rather crowded," replied her daughter-in-law gently, "as you would realize if you taught there, and besides the entire building needs renovating."

"H'm. 'Plan to remodel present building into junior high school, add a wing, purchase the square block bounded by Maple, Elm, State and Main Streets, for elementary school and recreation field.' Maple, Elm, State and Main," she repeated reflectively. "Why, Verna Whitten, that is this very block; that includes our property, the estate! Why, they can't do it!"

As Verna made no response to the assertion ,she repeated it more aggressively. "They can't do it! This has been our home since the town was settled. Do they think I am going to give it up for a lot of boys to kick a ball round it or for some noisy children to swing under my trees? Give u p my garden and this house? It would be defrauding Miles of his heritage!" Miles was her grandson, Verna's boy.

"We shall have plenty of chances to think of it and of not much else," responded Verna dryrly. "Mr. Haddon discussed the matter at teachers' meeting this afternoon. They are preparing for rallies and drives to awaken enthusiasm and inform the public in order to pass the bonds."

Madame made no comment, but carefully folded the paper and placed it with her spectacles on top of the pile of papers and clippings and documents from which she was compiling a history of the Whitten family. After supper when they were gathered round the sitting-room table, Miles with his arithmetic open before him, Verna with her stack of examination papers and Madame with the little brown notebook that contained items about the earlier Whittens in her fine Spencerian hand, the subject was reopened.

"There is no limit to the folly to which people will go,' 'Madame proclaimed as she put on her spectacles and adjusted the study lamp. "A prize of ten dollars is offered for the best composition of the school bonds by a a school pupil . The idea of trying to make political propagandists of our children! In my day a child's busines was to learn to read and write and spell and figure correctly, which is more than most of them can do at the present time."

Verna pressed her lips firmly together at the familiar tirade.

"Prominent citizen, member of the school board, offers the prize," continued Madame. "H'm. How long has David Minnis been a prominent citizen?" Then a new idea occurred to her. "Why, Verna, that explains everything! Don't you see, It's a personal matter. That explains why this block was chosen. David Minnis saw an opportunity to attack a Whitten. He selected this spot just to drive us from our home. What else could you expect of a Minnis?"

Verna hesitated. Should she reply to this absurd accusation? She realized that Madame was in no mood to admit that the block was the logical place for the new school; all that occupied her horizon was her own personal feelings in the matter and the hereditary feud between the Minnis family and the Whittens.

"No, I don't suppose you could be expected to see through such a scheme, Verna, but to me, born, bred and married a Whitten—well, it is painfully clear. But he has underestimated us. It is not the way of the Whittens to lie down when attacked."

Verna shrugged her shoulders and frowned at Miles, who, entirely forgetful of his arithmetic, was staring at his grandmother in astonishment. What was the use of discussing the matter? The easiest way was to let her talk it out if she would, and perhaps in the morning she would take a saner view. So she skillfully diverted attention to a rather obscure point in the Whitten family history, and soon Madame was engrossed in her self-imposed task of sorting and recording.

As the days went by it seemed as if there were nothing of importance in the world except school bonds, as if everything else had been subordinated to them. The children spent their busy work periods making posters and writing letters about meetings and rallies to take home to father and mother. In the teachers' meetings the subject predominated.

At home a succession of crises occurred. With the misguided enthusiasm of youth Miles had seized one of the stickers designed for automobile windshields and had ornamented the sitting-room window with it. His grandmother had torn it down with a torrent of biting words about meddlesome boys, and Verna had needed all her tact and patience to restore peace. Then the boy precipitated a storm at the dinner table by an apparently innocent question.

"What's condemning property?" he asked.

Madame turned sharply in her chair. "What are you talking about?"

"Condemning property. While I was at the store I heard Dr. Ramsay say that, if some folks wouldn't be public-spirited enough to sell at a reasonable price, they would find that the town would condemn their property, and it would serve them right."

"I always knew that Duncan Ramsay had too free a tongue, but you shouldn't stand round gaping when your elders are talking."

"I wasn't gaping," protested Miles indignantly; "I was waiting for Mr. Mallow to tie up the sugar, and he said that it was too soon to talk about condemning till the bonds were passed, if they ever were."

Madame addressed herself directly to her daughter-in-law. "Then there is some opposition? They haven't hypnotized everyone with all their clatter?"

"It is possible there may be some opposition in South Clayton," replied Verna briefly. "South Clayton wants a new school building over there, and it may not be content with merely repainting the old one."

"U'm," Madame's eyes sparkled. "David Minnis may find that it is not so easy to cajole two thirds of the people into doing what he wants."

"But Dr. Ramsay—" began Miles.

"That's enough of Dr. Ramsay." Verna disposed of the topic decidedly. Madame had the ability to goad her beyond endurance, but she was determined not to be led into argument this time, not only because she really loved the old lady and realized that her whole life was centred in Miles, "the last of the Whittens," but because she felt that she would be wasting time and energy. After some of her most strenuous arguments with the old lady she had once or twice caught a gleam in Madame's eye that made her wonder whether the old lady were not merely leading her on.

She did wish that the whole town would not hold her responsible for Madame's opinions and expect her to bring her into line. She realized that the shabby, run-down, rambling old house with half its rooms closed and everything about it in a state of decay was dearer to the old lady than outsiders knew; that fact as well as the knowledge that she could profitably rent her own modern bungalow had made her consent to bring Miles there to live after his father's death. However, she questioned the wisdom of her decision, though not for the first time, when Miles rushed into the house in great excitement one day during the latter part of the week.

"It's mine, mine!" he cried, waving the final edition of the Courier in his hand. "I did it all by myself! 'Boost for the Bonds and Build for the Boys and Girls, by Miles Whitten.'"

Madame snatched the paper from his hand and while Verna, peering over her shoulder ,skimmed the headline. "Disgusting!" she ejaculated. "I suppose he thought it was clever, trying to bribe me through my own grandson."

"It wasn't because I'm your grandson!' 'retorted Miles angrily. "That's nothing to boast of. They chose it 'cause it was the best; all of them said so, and they didn't know who wrote it till afterwards; it was just number fourteen."

Madame turned to Verna as Miles jerked from under her restraining hand and fled into the garden. "I think that Miles' manners need improvement," she said tartly; "I was never allowed to address my grandmother in such a way."

"He was excited and didn't realize how it would sound," explained Verna wearily. Then she added with asperity, "And he resented, with a certain amount of justice too, the implication that it was influence and not the merit of his work that won the prize."

"I didn't say it had no merit." Verna so seldom asserted herself that Madame was almost speechless. "How can I know before I read it? After all Miles is a Witten, and the Whittens have usually been endowed with at least the ordinary amount of brains."

Verna turned away. The same old theme! Sometimes she hated the name she bore. But in the evening as she picked up the scattered papers on the sitting-room table she smiled in amusement at the latest entry in Madame's little brown notebook: "Miles won a prize of ten dollars for a composition on a subject of public interest; cf. Miles Whitten, who in 1854 at the age of thirteen received a copy of Pilgrim's Progress for his essay on patriotism."

As the day for voting on the matter of issuing bonds drew nearer, with the result still in doubt Madame followed the reports with interest. South Clayton was the centre of the opposition, and it was with a decided feeling of dismay that Verna heard her announce her intention of going to the meeting of the South Clayton Improvement Club. That Madame could and did wield some influence in South Clayton as well as in her own group of friends was undeniable. South Clayton remembered who had organized the Red Cross Auxiliary and run the sewing machine steadily when her rheumatic fingers couldn't roll bandaging, who had managed the food kitchen in the Improvement Club during the influenza epidemic, and who had not been too tired in the evenings to help with the family mending in homes where there was sickness.

With what she hoped would pass for unconcern Verna inquired, "Do you think you ought to make the effort this evening? There is a cold north wind blowing."

Madame's heavy eyebrows met above the bridge of her nose. Then she smiled, and there was a wicked gleam in her black eyes as she replied, "North wind or no north wind, effort or no effort, I'm going."

"Then let's all go," Verna suggested. She couldn't prevent Madame's going, but she could at least be present to see what occurred.

Seated between Miles and Madame in the somewhat crowded Improvement Club hall an hour later, she wondered what there was about the Whittens that gave them an air of complete assurance. Madame's neat black bonnet had done duty for nearly three years, and she felt sure that Mile's trip to Scout Camp had caused his grandmother to decide that her coat was quite good enough for another season. Yet as she sat there she was forced to admit that Madame, who was following proceedings closely, rose above such trivial things.

Miles was restless. With increasing impatience he had squirmed from side to side on the bench as one person after another had expressed sentiments adverse to the passing of the bonds. Suddenly Verna felt him twitch her sleeve. "Don't let her," he protested in an agonized whisper.

She glanced up. Madame was on her feet and had received recognition from the chair. Verna leaned back in resignation. Miles seemed to shrivel; he was hunched forward with his face almost hidden in his cap. For him the end of the world had come. Madame was speaking. Looking past her, Verna could see the eager, interested faces of the people who counted her their friend.

"—and I ask you this. Is there one of you whom this touches as closely as it does me? Whose property is affected? Whose home is destroyed? I was born in that house, married there, and I expected to die there." Her voice quivered slightly at the words. "It is my home and that of my grandson, but if it is a question of choosing between the interests of all the children and the interests of just one, between a whole community and one family, then, then —no Whitten has ever yet stood in the path of progress, and this Whitten isn't going to be the first to do so!"

A round of hearty applause covered her somewhat hurried conclusion, and as she sank back into her place beside her slightly flustered daughter-in-law her snapping black eyes gleamed with mischief. Verna had no opportunity for comment either then or later, for following the resolution approving the bond issue the meeting adjourned, and the three got a lift home in Dr. Ramsay's automobile.

"You certainly turned the tide," he called after Madame as she hurried into the house out of the night air, leaving Verna to express their thanks.

She made no reply, but a little later as Verna turned down the reading lamp she saw a fresh entry in the little brown notebook, and as she read it her smile grew tender: "Made speech approving school bonds at South Clayton Improvement Club; c.f. Elias Whitten, 1823, who sacrificed two and a quarter acres of the home farm for the Northfild Academy."

DIAGNOSIS FROM FINGER-NAILS.

WE can not hail as a recent discovery the use of finger-nails as a key to the state of a person's health since the method was known to the ancients

Only lately, however, has a systematic investigation been made of the circumstances underlying this idea.

Upon the authority of Doctors Zoeller, Noyer and Boide Je said tout (Paris) affirms:

"The investigation embraced fully twelve hundred individuals, either ill, convalescent or healthy.

"Healthy subjects, carefully selected and endowed with vitality, have as a rule from eight to ten crescent-shaped whitish little 'moons,' the base of their finger nails—one each on the majority of nails.

"Individuals succumbing to an infectious disease may during convalescence find that these little 'moons' reappear at the base of the finger-nails and expand and increase in number.

"Among individuals usually enjoying good health, these little 'moons' at the base of the finger-nails vary according to the rise or fall of the vitality.

"Seasonal variations occur; the little crescents increase in size during the spring and show a tendency to decrease in the autumn.

"It may indeed happen that a person with ten little moons—one on each nail—will succumb to an infectious malady. Nevertheless, people usually in good health who lose their finger-nail crescents might find it well to look into the cause of such a variation."

PRE-CANCEROUS.

JUST AS LONG as the specific cause of cancer remains unknown preventive measures will be limited to the avoidance of those conditions which seem to favour the occurrence of cancer, and to the treatment of other conditions which may precede the development of cancer.

A chronic inflammatory condition appears most commonly as a predisposing cause. It arises out of the long-continued action of an irritant which may be a mechanical, a physical or a chemical agent, or be produced by some bacteria or germs.

Cancers of the mouth and adjacent parts not infrequently appear to result from mechanical irritation. Cancer of the lip occurs much more frequently in men than in women. One form of irritation of the lip is caused by the hot clay pipe with a broken stem. Inside the mouth, long-continued irritation may arise from broken teeth or poorly-fitted dentures.

Chemical irritanats affect the skin chiefly, and so there are skin cancers associated with certain occupations which favour exposure to such irritants. Physical irritants act in the same way. Before the X-rays were understood, a number of early workers in this field developed cancer as a result of over-exposure. Now that the dangers are known, the necessary precautions are taken and this danger no longer exists.

The chronic inflammatory state arising out of the presence of bacteria is the most important of the predisposing factors. When the neck of the uterus is damaged at childbirth the injury should be properly repaired. If this is not done, bacteria may keep up a chronic irritation, and it is such conditions that are found frequently to precede the development of cancer in this part of the body.

Wherever there are chronic ulcers, whether of the stomach or the skin, there is the danger that the persistent irritation may favour the occurrence of cancer. The germ of syphillis in cases that are not properly treated may act as a chronic irritant and, as such, cause cancer of the tongue and other parts.

Cancer of the breast is frequently preceded by an irregular hardness or knotty condition of the breast. Unfortunately this is usually painless and is, therefore, commonly neglected although demanding prompt attention.

It is obvious that we have it in our own power to prevent certain chronic irritations, and, by proper treatment, to have other conditions corrected. Action along these lines will be rewarded by the assurance of removal of the danger of cancer, which might have developed if care had not been taken.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will beanswered personally by letter.

Linoleum looks better and lasts longer if given an occasional rubbing with a flannel cloth dipped in kerosene. All dirt or stains will be removed in this manner.

An Old Favourite Comes Back

With the developing interest in the arrangement of flowers in the house, an old garden favourite has regained its former prestige because of its colour as well as its ease of growth, and this is the nasturtium. It is an ideal flower in bowls, the flame-coloured types in black or green bowls being favourite exhibits at flower shows. No more brilliant colour can be furnished than by this most easily grown of annuals, nor is there any annual that gives a greater supply of bloom over a longer period.

The new fragrant double yellow nasturtium, Golden Beam, has rapidly become one of the most popular of bedding plants.

The nasturtium is a plant for poor soils and revels in heat, asking only a reasonable supply of moisture in parching weather. In rich soils it is likely to develop its strength in luxuriant foliage at the expense of bloom, so do not give nasturtiums any fertilizer. It is one of the handsomest of plants for edgings and is perhaps grown best in this manner.

The flowers are mingled with the leaves in an artistic arrangement that is often imitated with excellent effect when the bloom is cut. It makes showy beds as well. It also is a climber and an excellent long trailer for window or porch boxes in city apartments, giving a supply of flowers to cut with little trouble. While it climbs if assisted, it is really a rambling plant, as it has no tendrils and is not a twiner, so the long reaching steams must be tied up.

The colourings are the same in both the tall and dwarf sorts and include velvety, almost black, crimsons through shades of scarlet and orange to brilliant yellows with some handsome rose shades and a brilliant series of blotched and flaked sorts. There are golden leaved, purple leaved and variegated sorts to add to the attractions of the plant, all with beautiful bloom.

The Lobb type is a favourite among the climbers because of the brilliancy and intensity of its colouring. Empress of India, a fiery crimson with dark foliage, is much used as a bedding plant. Seed should be sown in the open after danger of frost is over.

The Old Gardener Says:

Garden makers who are lamenting the fact that they did not plant lily bulbs last fall should not be discouraged. It is entirely possible to have an abundance of flowers this summer from bulbs planted now. Among the bulbs which can be relied upon are those of the Regal lily, the Speciosum lilies and Henry's lily, sometimes called the yellow Speciosum. All these lilies are very handsome and give a long season. The Regal lily, one of the finest of all, and very fragrant, will bloom in July, and the others mentioned some weeks later. The Speciosum lilies wind up the season in the autumn. It is important to remember that all these lilies require deep planting. The ground should be dug to a depth of ten or twelve inches and the bulbs should go almost as deep, although something will depend upon their size and the nature of the soil.

Alfalfa is able to live for thirty years or more under favourable conditions.

The loose-leaf type of lettuce is the most commonly grown but it is not as good in quality as the two types which develop heads—the Cos and the Cabbage.

Practically any wild grass will serve, in one stage or another, as food for stock.

The origination of early ripening wheats by the Dominion Department of Agriculture rolled back Canada's northern farming boundary.

It has been established by experiment that eight weeks is the maximum time asparagus can be kept in fine condition in cold storage.

Sandy: "Maggie, what da ye say? Let's get mairrit."

Maggie: "A'richt."

For some time they walked along in silence. Then Maggie, whose heart was too full for silence, exclaimed: "Why don't ye say something, Sandy?"

Sandy: "I think I hae said raither much already."

"The Joggsville Convention" Handsomely Gowned Play

Thursday evening last the Sunday School hall of the United Church was more than comfortably filled when the Ladies' Aid sponsored a play put on by the members, entitled "The Joggsville Convention," which transported the audience to the "gay nineties" when the styles in which our mothers fared forth held sway. The many fine dresses worn by the players brought back fond memories to the males of the audience of the time "When you and I were young, Maggie.' It was a happy idea when the costumes were portrayed in their forgotten beauty instead of a burlesque having been made of them. For such a large cast, about twenty-five, it was delightful to find such universally high talent in the delineation of so many different characters and the only regret was that a play presenting more opportunities for its display had not been chosen.

Between acts solos were sung by Mrs. G. Merkley and Mrs. Wesley Fulton, readings were given by Miss Harrison and Mrs. Lyle Marcellus and the male quartette of the church rendered two selections, which with the church orchestra filled out a lenghty programme.

The cast for the play included Mrs. J. Slosser, Mrs. Orval Colquhoun, Mrs. H. E. Wales, Mrs. Lloyd, Miss E. Harrion,, Mrs. Myles Merkley, Mrs. Boyd, Mrs. J. Turner, Mrs. Alf Jarvis, Mrs. L. Marcellus, Mrs. J. Helmer, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. H. Durant, Mrs. D. McKercher, Mrs. P. G. Hewitt, Mrs. W. Cameron and Mrs. D. McElheran, with the parts of two children taken by Marjorie Boyd and Clarence Marshall.

Advertising does not jerk—it pulls; it begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady; it increases day after day and year after year, until it exerts an irresistible power.

There is no power like that of continuity in advertising.

United Church Ladies Aid Honored Deceased Member

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid of Chesterville United Church held in the Sunday School room of the church yesterday afternoon was opened by singing followed by one minute of silence in remembrance of Mrs. Lily Coons, whose death occurred a short time ago, and the Lord's Prayer in unison. Mrs. Helmer read the scripture lesson, after which several reports were disposed of. The programme consisted of readings by Miss McGee and Miss Harrison and a solo by Mrs. J. Turner accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Geo. Reaburn. The meeting closed with singing and the Mizpah benediction. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge: Mrs. Orval Colquhoun, Mrs. J. C. Merkley, Mrs. Fred Merkley, Mrs. Fred Smith and Mrs. Lyle Marcellus.
