Grandmothers' Day At Women's Institute

Grandmothers of the community were guests of the Chesterville Women's Institute at their September meeting held on Wednesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Fay Shaver, presided and Mrs. Geo. Merkley was convener of the committee whose members were Mrs. Harold Durant, Mrs. Hugh Smith, Mrs. Ward Johnson and Mrs. Francis Moriarty. Roll call was answered by the members with "an interesting custom of my grandmother's day". Each guest was asked to describe her wedding dress. A trio of grandmothers, Mrs. Charles McMillan, Mrs. Percy Hewitt and Mrs. Geo. Merkley sang two delightful oldtime numbers. A talk by Mrs. L. H. Doering on the early history of Chesterville formed the remainder of the programme and much interest was centered on a table displaying articles handed down from our grandmothers' day. These included some beautiful pieces of china and a handwoven linen cloth loaned by Mrs. Percy Gilroy, a very old English Cook Book dated in 1799 loaned by Mrs. Keith Graham, an ancient family Bible belonging to Mr. R. C. Dillabough, a bellows brought from Scotland 150 years ago and some very old china which belonged to Mrs. Doering's grandmother.

Two beautiful bouquets were presented to two of the guests, one to Mrs. Jas. Wallace as the grandmother with the largest number of grandchildren and to Mrs. Will Durant, the grandmother with the grandchild living farthest away. Mrs. Durant has a grandchild in England.

A very happy part of the meeting was the presentation by Mrs. Geo. Merkley to Mrs. Annie Campderros, of a Women's Institute pin in appreciation of the fact that she is the only decendant living in Chesterville of the original Mr. Armstrong who built the first mill which was the beginning of Chesterville's existence as a village. Mrs. Campderros kindly contributed to the programme some of her recollections of earlier days in the village.

Refreshments were served by the committee in charge, and a delightful afternoon brought to a close by reciting the Institute Ode.

Tho we part, be with us still.

Rotary Hears Talk On Price Tags

Stating that all service clubs are doing the Will of God in their work, and Rotary in Chesterville as a service club should endure on that account, Rev. C. E. Armstrong of Smiths Falls gave the members and guests of the Chesterville Rotary club a most interesting talk at the regular meeting last Monday evening.

Present as guests of the club to hear Mr. Armstrong were Rev. W. E. Wright, Ralph Ouderkirk and Fred Marshall of Brockville. President L. H. Doering presided at the meeting and the speaker was introduced by Milton Phillips.

Taking as his topic, "Price Tags", the speaker listed the values of men as they appear today to anyone who examines them closely. Under false values comes money, popularity and social position. "Too much attention is paid these achievements, for the good that is derived from them," said the speaker. Under temporary values, Rev. Armstrong pointed to knowledge, that could not be classed as permanent, as witnessed by the vanished cultures of Egypt, China and the Aztecs; athletic ability, that lasted only in the newspaper headlines; health, that is a fragile thing at the best, or public ability that was solely dependant on the public acclaim to remain alive.

In his summation, Mr. Armstrong declared that the only lasting values are the absolute values such as beauty, that is everlasting, the graces of fine poetry, and the excellence of truth. Armed with the appreciation of these a man will find an innate goodness of morals, purity of mind and sincerity of purpose that will mark him as a Christian. "He will belong to both worlds then, and his immortal goal will always be to be one with God," finished the speaker.

President L. H. Doering expressed the thanks of the club.

JUNIOR PLOWMEN TO RECEIVE AWARDS OF O.A.C. SCHOLARSHIPS

To stimulate interest in the art of good plowing among the Junior Farmers of Ontario, members of the winning team in the Junior Farmer Inter-County Tractor Plowing Class at the International Plowing Match near Kingston next month will receive the most substantial prizes yet offered to junior plowmen. J. A. Carroll, Secretary-Manager of the Ontario Plowmen's Association, announces that these prizes, to take the form of a trip to the International Live Stock Exposition at Chicago, and a scholarship good for one year at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, are being provided by the British-American Oil Company to encourage Junior Farmers to cultivate the art of being good plowmen, and to stimulate competition in the inter-county event. The O.A.C. scholarship, Mr. Carroll announces, will cover all basic expenses for the year of the O.A.C. course, including cost of tuition, board and lodging and an allowance for books.

The Inter-County Class in tractor plowing provides for county teams of two boys. Each member of the winning team will receive cash awards. These 14 cash prizes have been increased substantially over last year, and total $332.00. In addition, the highest individual contestant receives the F. G. Fuller Trophy, while the James McLean Memorial goes to the winning county team.

Announcement of these magnificent prizes is expected to result in an immediate stimulus to local plowing matches at which juniors can secure good experience before taking part in the International Match. In many counties, also, coaching classes, with experienced plowmen coaching the boys, will probably be arranged. Closing date for entering teams in the Inter-County British-American Oil Class is October 6th, by which date all entries must be in the hands of J. A. Carroll, Secretary-Manager, Ontario Plowmen's Association, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

BUTTER BOOTLEGGING TO U.S. SAID AFFECTING CANADIANS

One important reason for the continuing shortage of butter and its consequent price advances in Canada is consumption of hundreds of thousands of pounds by Americans in Canada or at home, says Canadian Grocer. It is either being consumed in enormous quantities by U.S. visitors to the Dominion or it is finding its way south of the border, argues the grocery business paper.

Americans have to pay 87 to 97 cents per pound for it in the U.S., while it is selling in Canada for about 60 cents. The grocery paper points to British Columbia and to the Quebec borders as likely spots for butter bootlegging on considerable scale. Reports from Western Lake, B.C. show heavy butter buying there, and there are conflicting reports as to how much any increase in population in the area accounts for this.

One estimate reported by Canadian Grocer is that Canada has lost tens of thousands of boxes across the border. Shippers could easily make up to $8,000 per car over the Vancouver price it estimates.

BASIC STEEL INCREASES EXPECTED TO REACH CONSUMERS

It is a foregone conclusion that recent basic steel increases of $5 to $10 per ton in the United States will be followed soon by similar increases in Canada, according to Hardware and Metal & Electrical Dealer. It's just a question of when and how much, and the guesses range round $7 - $8 per ton here.

How will the secondary effects hit steel-containing products. "No overall percentage can be struck, the ultimate effect hinging as it does upon how much of the product in question is steel, how much is other material, how much workmanship goes into it."

In tools, for example, steel is a bigger cost factor in cheaper grades than in the higher priced, better engineered lines; so the top lines may absorb reasonabe steel increases, but the cheaper ones will undergo some price adjustment. In housewares, galvanized and enamelled, it's the same thing—cheaper lines may have to be adjusted because the basic material is a bigger cost determinant than the skilled workmanship that goes into it.

Everywhere, however, manufacturers tell Hardware and Metal they still aim to hold the price line where it is humanly possible.

BRITAIN IS NOW AN ATOMIC POWER

In August of this year Britain became an "atomic power" when continuous atomic energy was released for the first time in that country. This exciting news was given by Professor Cockroft, the director of the Hartwell Atom Station at the meeting of the British Association in Dundee. He said that a chain reaction of splitting uranium atoms had been established in his laboratories and already the Hartwell engine is producing enough energy to supply a large block of flats with light and power. In a month's time they will use power released by atomic fission to heat gases up to 350 degrees centigrade. He said: "With 100 tons of uranium an atomic pile of this kind could generate energy equal to 100,000 kilowatts for 20 years without fuel replacement. If we could utilise the whole energy then one ton of uranium would be the equivalent of 3,000,000 tons of coal." It was probable that an experimental power plant would be built during the next five years to obtain the first operating experience wih nuclear power generators. Advance already has been made in the application of radio active materials to scientific research, medical diagnosis and treatment, engineering and industry. The new factories starting in Dundee under the Government schemes and working on those lines will eventually employ 8,000 people.

Polite Rejoinder

Asked by the irate cop, "Where's the fire" the pretty miss replied. "Why officer, in your great big beautiful eyes."

Outside All Souls

This summer London has been enjoying the weather of Rome or Venice. Day after day of sunshine have encouraged even the most cautious of Londoners to lay aside their umbrellas and raincoats. A familiar sight has been the lunchtime crowds squatting on the semi-circular sweep of stone steps in front of All Souls' Church, Langham Place. They eat their sandwiches, gossip and watch the passing scene. It is one of the best places for the purpose in London, because the steps are like a grandstand facing the entrance to the BBC's headquarters, Broadcasting House. Everyone entering or leaving Broadcasting House has to pass the scrutiny of the lunchtime loungers on All Souls' steps, and the most interesting people in England are likely to be going in and out of the BBC's studios—Cabinet ministers, literary lions, stage and film stars, bandleaders, world-famous athletes, distinguished foreign visitors—all are likely to broadcast at some time or other. While the sunshine lasts, the steps of All Souls' provide one of the best free entertainments to be had in London.

The little church of All Souls' was badly bombed three times early in the war, twice in late 1940 and once in late 1941. Two of the raids were in December, the final one eight days before Christmas. Though the exterior seems all right, except that the tip of the spire has been deliberately sliced off for safety reasons, the interior is, alas!, wrecked. The church was always one of the quainter sights of the fashionable West End, with its curious, spiky spire atop two precise rings of pillars, the whole very classic in design Regency in taste, like the sort of beautiful and expensive silver cruet you might expect to find on the Lord Mayor's dinner table. Nash planned it to provide a terminal feature at the end of Regent Street. It was much ridiculed when it was new, a Member of Parliament stating in the House that "he would give a trifle" to have it pulled down. This was the occasion for the famous caricature of Beau Nash, spitted on his own sharp steeple, with the caption "Nashional Taste.....!!!" They were given to making that sort of pun in 1824.

TIME FOR DECISION

By George W. James
The Statesman, Bowmanville

(Article 18)

Continuing the debate on immigration, John Bracken, leader of the official opposition, brought the question down to the simple proposition of whether Canada should continue exporting food on credit to millions abroad or adopt a policy of bringing in acceptable immigrants to expand production and markets at home. For at present three Canadians out of every eight depend on world trade for a livelihood.

Trade and Humanity

We are a thinly populated land, rich in resources and food production possibilities, while thickly populated lands outside are short of food. We are trying to feed a hungry world outside and doing practically nothing to welcome fine, potential citizens to our shores and the government seems fearful of taking a lead in this matter. It is not only a matter of trade but of humanity.

National Policy

Mr. Bracken went on: "What we need is a national policy setting a goal for steady admission of selected people in a way not to conflict with domestic employment. We thus would not be so dependent on outside markets and would better serve both ourselves and the outside world." He urged the government without delay to accept the principle as stated and work out a detailed policy.

Standing Still

Other speakers of the official opposition pointed out other important factors in this question before Prime Minister King made his carefully worded statement. It was shown that in the two years following war the Canadian government was falling away behind other countries in the matter of selecting immigrants from Britain and Europe. In fact we are practically standing still while other commonwealth countries and South America are extremely active.

Government Policy

Announcing the government's immigration policy on May 1, 1946, Prime Minister King agreed with the Bracken thesis and suggested a two-phase approach to the question: (a) a short term plan to bring in as many as can be absorbed immediately; (b) a long-term plan on a selective basis. But he set no figure in either case. Even immediate entry was limited to wives and relatives and this taxed the limited inspection service overseas.

Lack Shipping Space

Mr. King declared that lack of shipping space was the continuing handicap in effecting his policy. So the most serious labor shortage in the time being. It was poor consolation for Canadian farmers faced with the whole matter was left at that for history and tens of thousands overseas anxious to come out here to work on the land. It will be told later how industry is entering into immigration in the absence of government action.

Gain for Others

Lack of shipping was challenged by the opposition. It was pointed out that other dominions, particularly Australia, were chartering whole ships and are right now getting the cream of the immigrants in Britain and Europe. It is beginning to appear that this excuse of lack of shipping is just another instance of government apathy. So it appears to limit of their physical endurance. overworked farmers almost at the The story will be continued next week.

THWARTED

By Merle Beynon

I long for the life, the cavalier role
Of a sauve and a sleek dilettante,
To live like the guy who was left with the dough
Of his miserly, doting old aunty.

I'd like to be careless a spendthrift, a rake,
To gather in blondes by the armful,
To buy up champagne and use it to chase
Some liquor that's even more harmful.

I'd like to go out to the racetrack with cash,
Give odds to the bookies who'd bet me;
And except for one thing, I'd start in right now:
I doubt if my wife would let me.

PEPPER SUPPLY

For some time there has been considerable apprehension among Canadian housewives regarding the possible necessity for the continued use of wartime substitutes for pepper. With regard to this, the Canadian Trade Commissioner at Singapore writes that there are ample supplies of various types of pepper available for immediate export from Singapore and prospective Canadian buyers can be supplied with firm offers at any time.

One by John Baer

John M. Baer, whose cartoons are familiar to the readers of Labor, is a serious-minded gentleman, but he occasionally relaxes and tells a story. Here is one:

A farmer, his wife and a load of hay reached the middle of a narrow bridge just as a plutocrat from Pittsburgh, in an auto as big as a barn, came from the other direction.

The farmer was impressed by the appearance of the plutocrat's machine and suggested to his wife that they back off the bridge. The lady wouldn't have it that way. A long debate followed.

Finally, the plutocrat from Pittsburg excaimed: "It's all right, brother. I have one back home just like her, so I'll give you the right of way."

WEED OF THE WEEK

Goldenrod

Goldenrod, with its bright yellow blooms is a very common sight in Ontario during the Autumn months. Native to Ontario, this weed grows in profusion on sod along roadsides, old pastures, and waste places. It grows from two to three feet high and has bright golden yellow flowers in dense clusters.

Although often blamed for causing hay fever, medical authorities advise us that the pollen from the Goldenrod really causes very little trouble while the real culprit is Ragweed.

Damage

The chief damage done by Goldenrod is in pasture fields where it may become so well established that the productive grasses are almost completely crowded out and the carrying capacity of these fields materially reduced. This weed is unpalatable to livestock, and its presence in hay entails much waste. In addition, along roadsides and fence lines this weed holds the snow in winter, causing blocked roads and heavy expense from snowplowing.

Control

Cut down to prevent seeding. Badly infested pasture fields should be plowed and worked, a crop or two of grain grown and then seeded back to a good pasture mixture.

Along fencelines and rough places where it is difficult to cultivate, the use of a chemical weed killer is recommended. Either a chlorate or a 2-4-D weed killer will give satisfactory results when properly applied.

Many people do not consider Goldenrod a bad weed. However, it is so commonly found choking out and taking possession of our old meadows and permanent pastures, that it behooves every citizen to take steps to eradicate it from his property.

The greatest man living may stand in need of the meanest, as much as the meanest does of him.—Fuller.

RUPTURE

Read the ollowing testimonial:

Doctors state bad rupture cured

Kemptville, Ont.,
March 17th, 1932.

J. L. Armstrong, Specialist.

Dear Sir:

I am very glad to tell you that I have been cured of that big rupture by wearing your invention.

Remember you fitted it on me in 1920. I left it off eleven years ago. I have not had it on since, and I have been shoeing horses nearly every working day during the past eleven (11) years. Some of the horses were very hard to handle. I have had doctors examine me, and they could not find any trace of the rupture. They said that I was perfectly cured. My rupture was very large and put me on my back often during the day. Trusses would not hold, they were no use to me. You may use this note if you like.

NOAH BROWN,
Blacksmith.

Chesterville And the Red Shield Appeal

In a few days citizens of Chesterville will receive a call by canvassers for the Salvation Army's Red Shield Appeal, and it is hoped that the objective will be more than subscribed for this worthy work.

There is no need to remind those who served overseas, especially on the front line, of the great work in the canteens which the Army did in supplying tea, etc., close to the front line; people at home must be aware of the quiet, sympathetic and uplifting work which the Salvation Army Lads and Lassies are doing all the time. In every walk of life, contact is made some time with the Salvation Army and the cheery "God Bless You" is extended to one and all no matter what race or creed.

A welcome to the canvasser accompanied with a donation will help along this work of the Salvation Army and bring with it a blessing of "helping others". Let Chesterville go over the top of the objective. Chairman for Chesterville, P. J. Gilroy.

Letters to The Editor

To the Record:

After attending the Legion meeting of September 23rd, I have joined the ranks of ex-Legionaires, and why.

First off, two or three men didn't win the war, and the same men won't run the Chesterville Branch of the Canadian Legion. The sooner they wise up to this fact the better our Legion will be.

If you are wondering what happened to many of our members, you have only to attend one of our meetings, and come away disgusted as I have.

They remind you of Long Beach, Calif., "Spit and Argue Club".

Our biggest headache is the Rink, where far too much money has been spent trying to make something out of nothing.

I cannot see our Legion a success until this present (the Rink) has been returned to the men who gave us this bill of expense, or else kept separate from Legion affairs, for it is killing our Legion Post.

Two years ago we started out with high hopes, with only a bare rented room for our meetings. Now after two years we have still one bare room and hardly any members left. Something has to be done or else our Legion is through.

I would like to ask all members of Chesterville Legion Post if they are really interested in making our Legion a success. Come to our next meeting and don't sit there, but speak your mind. Let's hear from every one of you guys.

When fighting had to be done you were in there. So get in there again and fight if you have to, but make our Legion a success.

Let's thresh out our troubles once and for all and get on with what we started, a good Legion Post.

Comrade S. CHAMBERS.

Girl Customer: "Does this lipstick come off easily?"

Cosmetic clerk: "Not if you put up a good fight!"

A Message To Our New Immigrants

By Lewis Milligan

The Ontario Government has started a new immigration movement for Canada, and within the next five or ten years hundreds of thousands of people may cross the Atlantic from the Old Lands and find homes in various parts of the Dominion. Up to the time of writing, about 700 migrants from England and Scotland have spanned the ocean by air to settle in Ontario. It is no exaggeration to describe this as an epic undertaking that opens a new era, not only in mass transportation in peacetime, but also perhaps as the forerunner of a world-wide migratory movement, at least within the British Commonwealth.

I notice that some of these new immigrants have been complaining that they had been misinformed about conditions in Canada; that the housing situation and the prospects for good jobs were not what they had been led to believe. I would like to say something about this, for as an immigrant from England, before the First Great War, I know from personal experience what it means to break away from one's native land. I know what it means to sell up a cherished home, sever all the dear associations of friends, and launch out upon the homeless sea with a wife and four children for a new and unknown country. I can testify that it is a heart-breaking experience, and I can fully sympathize with these latest new-comers in their fits of homesickness, which prompt them to turn round and go back.

But the quick transition by air should have relieved them of that feeling of being far removed from their old haunts and friends, for they know nothing of the long days and nights on the ocean, in which one has time to reflect and grieve over the fateful separation. They have also been greeted and treated handsomely on their arrival. When I arrived with my family at Quebec there was no one to greet us, and we started immediately on a long and trying journey to Ridgetown in Western Ontario, where a relative from the United States happened to be residing for a short time. After a week's stay, I left my family and came to Toronto alone.

I recall how I stood on the north-east corner of Yonge and Queen streets, watching the throng of people weaving to and fro, and realized that I was an utter stranger in a strange land. As I moved among that throng, I looked into the faces of the passers by, hoping there might be one that I knew. The following lines expressed my emotions:

My heart is stricken with many memories,
While listless through these busy streets I roam;
Long leagues of land and wide unfriendly seas
Severe me from my country and my home.

No face, no voice, no hand of all this throng
Greets me, full knowing those receding years;
My loose lips tremble to an exile's song;
And overflow my eyes with childish tears.

That is how I felt, and it is how many of these new immigrants must feel, in spite of the friendly official welcome accorded to them. But it is a passing phase with those who have the manliness to face the future with a good and courageous heart.

Although I had not one friend in the city, I scouted around and made acquaintances and took the first job that was offered me—at ten dollars a week. From this I graduated into a better one and brought my family to the city. We rented a flat over a store and furnished it with three spring mattresses, raised from the floor with bricks at the corners. For a table we had a large packing-case, and smaller ones for chairs. These, with a few pictures and knick-knacks salvaged from our old home, constituted our first home in Canada.

The women, because they are confined to the house, suffer more from homesickness than the men, who mingle with other people and are pre-occupied with adjusting themselves to their new environment. Many a time did I find my wife silently weeping. Yet she never gave way to despair, but brushed away her tears and made the best of things. As for the children, they were happy as the day was long, for they were not burdened with memories or the cares of re-establishment. All children are citizens of the world, and they readily adapt themselves to a new country.

The chief trouble with adult immigrants is this matter of adapting themselves to the conditions, customs and general life of Canada. I found many things which I thought I would never get used to, and was inclined to criticize, as some of these newcomers have done. But, after receiving a few well-deserved rebuffs, I resolved to get the Canadian point of view. I did not forget the things that were behind, but I kept them behind me and pressed towards the mark of becoming a good Canadian. Thus I found a new zest in life and a widening field of opportunity and service.

I have set down these few of my uncomfortable experiences as an immigrant, and have done so only at the insistent request of a friend, for the encouragement of those who are going through the first phase of settlement. Later we endured much greater hardships for several winters in the northern part of the Province, and we had many ups and downs through the succeeding years. But these experiences only spurred us on to greater effort, and we found in Canada a larger, fuller, healthier and happier life than we could ever have known in the Old Country. These new immigrants should not expect to be pampered or provided with comfortable homes and nice jobs. For these things they must work, and work hard. Canada has no place for idlers or malcontents.

Fate is a word that the devil made;
Luck is the lie of the man who shirks;
Set your hand to your proper trade,-
All things come to the man who works!

"YOUR FEET ARE KILLING YOU" WARNS 81-YEAR OLD WALKER

Caution and patience mixed with large portions of common sense is the formula for safe walking practised by 81-year old Charles Priestman, Toronto, who has walked some 62,000 miles in the past 26 years and never had an accident.

Widely known as the man who walks from Toronto to Oakville every St. Patrick's day, Mr. Priestman says the reason so many people are killed walking on our streets and highways is they are too impatient and reckless, "too anxious to save a couple of minutes that they have absolutely no use for anyway'. He deplored the common habit of leaping off street cars without looking for approaching traffic and running after street cars regardless of stop signals.

People can be taught to walk safely, Mr. Priestman believes, but it requires constant education and good example. "They must learn to make safety a habit," he says, "and those of us who are safety-minded must set an example. For instance, if I see anyone starting to dash after a street car, I take him firmly by the arm and say: 'Now, there's no hurry. I'm getting the same car, so let's get it together—in one piece'.

Referring to the fact that about twice as many pedestrians as drivers are killed in Ontario each year, Mr. Priestman points out that a pedestrian's first accident is usually his last act on earth.

Pedestrians will live longer, says this 81-year old marathoner, if they: obey traffic rules and signs; look carefully in both directions before crossing a street or highway; cross street only at intersections; walk on left side of highway well over to edge and get right off the road if it seems at all advisable. Mr. Priestman emphasizes that before attempting to cross a street, the pedestrian should look carefully to his left to make sure no vehicle is approaching, then to his right as he proceeds on his way. As he crosses he should also beware of cars that may swing around the corner across his path.

Walking is a wonderful form of exercise and a great pleasure," says Mr. Priestman who walks ten miles every day. "My advice to pedestrians is, don't be nervous or impatient. Take your time and you will get to your destination—take chances and you may not get there at all."

Stage Set For National Conference Young Farmers

This year one of the principal features of many of the Agricultural Fairs and Exhibitions in Canada has been the contests of the members of the Boys' and Girls' Farm Clubs, coordinated through the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club Work, one of the most progressive and hopeful movements for Canadian agriculture.

At the fairs and exhibitions eliminations have been held preliminary to the National Contests to be held in Toronto, November 16 to 21, as a kind of curtain raiser to the Royal Winter Fair, which will be held November 18 to November 25, in Toronto.

This year the National Contests of the Boys' and Girls' Farm Clubs will include eight projects, with a total of about 94 members in the contesting teams. The projects are:—dairy cattle, beef cattle, swine, poultry, seed grain, seed potatoes, clothing and food. The last was added this year. Last year clothing was added and it will be held again this year and the judges will have to decide on the best laundered and repaired cotton blouses, cotton dresses, costume selection, with a parade of four models dressed for a specific occasion, such as school or church. Contestants will also have to be prepared to demonstarte their ability, by exacting examples, to do hand sewing, machine sewing and pattern adjustment.

The food project will include the making up of family menus, school lunches, the ability of the contestants to prepare certain foods, selected from salads, muffins, tea biscuits, cream soups, floating island custard, and then answer some questions by the women judges known to be top bracket cooks.

The boys and girls who will make up the National Contest Teams will come from every province. After the contests they will see the sights of the Royal Winter Fair, then go on a trip to Hamilton and Niagara Falls before visiting Ottawa on November 21, where they will visit the Parliament Buildings and see other places of interest in the Capital, before leaving for their homes in the evening.

A. E. MacLaurin, General Secretary of the Boys' and Girls' Farm Clubs, says that interest in the work of the clubs was never more keen than now. Membership of the clubs is now at 41,000, an increase of more than 2,500 over 1946.

REED CANARY GRASS FOR HAY, PASTURE

Very few native grasses have found a place in Canadian cultivated hay and pasture fields. Reed Canary grass is one of the few that has been accepted and has gained rapidly in popularity during recent years.

This species is usually referred to as a lowland grass because it thrives on low land that is poorly drained and where water lies for several weeks during the spring season, says Dr. T. M. Stevenson, Dominion Agrostologist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. That it is well suited to such areas has been clearly demonstrated by tests conducted by the Division of Forage Crops. In fact tests have shown that Reed Canary grass will thrive and yield well on soils so wet that no other cultivated grass can survive. But it is not adapted only to swampy or wet areas. Tests on well drained average farm soils have demonstrated its value for both hay and pasture. In one three-year grazing test, on well drained clay soil, it yielded twenty-eight per cent more herbage than timothy; in another test it yielded eleven per cent more than timothy. On sandy land of reasonably good fertiliy and where moisture conditions were favourable it has also done well.

In feed value Reed Canary grass has proved to be quite equal to timothy when grazed and only slightly inferior when used as hay. Live stock, both cattle and sheep, find it quite palatable.

GARDEN CHATS: By Mrs. Harry Allison

Hello Neighbour: You know, I had so many things thought up to chat with you about this week, but for the last hour my head has been so filled with silo filling, dinner menus for twelve or fourteen men and so, I doubt if I can tell you about anything but ensilage. You town ladies are missing something by not having silo fillers and threshers. Those are two days at whose end the farm wife heaves a sigh of relief and says, "Well thank goodness that's over"—not that we grudge the men their meals but it is a big day for us.

Do you remember the little article in a June Record about Mrs. Lyle Marcellus' night-blooming Cereus being in flower and all the neighbours going to see it? No doubt you were like me and said, "Why all the fuss about a plant booming?" Well, last Tuesday night, I got a call to go and see the third flower in bloom, so Mrs. Allison Graham and I went to see this rare specimen of plant life. And rare it is.

We saw it as soon as we stopped the car, perched majestically on the dining table. When we opened the door, a strange fragrance, which seemed to permeate the whole atmosphere, met us. Then we went in to view the flower.

It gave me a queer feeling as if I were standing in the presence of something from a different world.

It was huge. I would judge it was about ten inches in diameter. The calyx was a rather pinkish shade each part being slender and pointing backwards. The carolla was white as were the stamens and pistol. Each petal reminded one of a snowy white feather so beautiful was the design. The stamens and pistol were unique—the stamens forming an arch over the pistol. The whole flower was indeed a thing of beauty and a pleasure to behold.

The sad part of this story is, however, that the bloom is so short-lived. Mrs. Marcellus said the bud began to open about 8 p.m. and before dawn it would be wilted. It seemed such a pity that this beautiful flower should perish so soon, after the weeks the plant had spent in its formation.

Since then a bloom on another cereus has opened for Mrs. Marcelus. This one lasted longer by being cut off and placed in water. She says she has a number of other buds which will bloom in due time. I believe there are other such plants in town too and I hope you will see them in flower. Now, California readers, can you top that for beauty and uniqueness?

Mrs. Loucks (nee Joy Dillabough) phoned me this morning to tell me her experience with geranium seeds. Apparently, hers did not do as well as mine. She reports one stalk for each seed with neither slips nor bloom, after almost a year's nurturing. That is what I call bad luck.

How did you feel this morning when you saw that Jack Frost had spoiled all your flowers? I was amazed to see the asters still intact. Evidently, they can stand a great deal of frost. Our house looks like a miniature flower show. I picked all I could find yesterday and brought them inside to try to save them a little longer. I do hate to see the end of the summer's bloom.

There is a meeting of the Horticultural Executive tomorrow night, so be watching next week for further plans.

See you then.

STAGE 48 BEGINS SUNDAY, SEPT. 28

One of the CBC's major drama shows for the coming season—"Stage 48"—is scheduled to begin a series of weekly broadcast productions on Sunday, Sept. 28, at 10.00 p.m. EST, over the CBC Trans-Canada network. A one-hour program, it will continue the popular "Stage" series which began in 1944.

The director of "Stage 48," CBC drama supervisor Andrew Allan, has announced that the first presentation in the new series will be an original play entitled "Shadow of the Tree," by Joseph Schull, contemporary Canadian playwright, poet, and short-story writer. Mr. Allan says that he has selected this "because of its timeliness and its powerful, direct effect."

"Shadow of the Tree" is the story of young people "facing the atomic age with apprehension, and with what courage they can muster."

In the cast will be Barbara Kelly as young Nora Maybury who despairs of the kind of world into which she must bring her child; John Drainie as her husband, trying to salvage his career out of postwar chaos; Nancy Graham as a wealthy girl who almost breaks up the Maybury marriage; Budd Knapp as the cynical Dr. Farrel; and Tommy Tweed as Nora's unscrupulous father-in-law.

Original music for "Stage 48" is to be composed and conducted by Lucio Agostini, one of Canada's foremost musicians.

A kitten nearly stole the show from the Beavercove when the brand new Canadian Pacific cargo liner arrived at Montreal from Liverpool on her maiden voyage. The pussy, becoming excited, overstepped the dock and fell into the harbor just as the ship was coming alongside. The kitten is shown, lower right, with eight of its nine lives still intact but very wet after longshoremen succeeded in pulling it to safety on a rope to which it clung after falling overboard. Upper picture shows Beavercove coming alongside with her sister ship, Beaverglen, in background. At lower left, Capt. B. B. Grant, master of the Beavercove, is showing George A. Walker, K.C., vice-president of the C.P.R., through the wheelhouse shortly after the maiden voyage was completed. Arrival of the Beavercove at Montreal completed restoration of the Canadian Pacific's fast London-Canada service, three other newly-constructed ships having joined the run last year. The five ships of the pre-war Canadian Pacific Beaver fleet were lost during hostilities.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! Many of us are resuming the job of packing lunch boxes now that cooler weather is here and school routine has been re-established. When the lunch box comes down off the shelf, it is also time to take stock of suitable menus. The well-planned mid-day meal for a growing child cannot be over-emphasized—likewise the one for the office worker. Some schools and factories serve soups and bevrages at moderate prices, thus eliminating the need for carrying a thermos. If this service is not available or is found to be costly, it is advisable to make use of the standard lunch box containing a thermos and fill it every day with a wholesome beverage or soup.

SANDWICH IDEAS

1. Chopped meat and gravy: Put leftover cooked meat through a food chopper and moisten with thick gravy.
2. Scrambled eggs with cottage cheese or tomato. Add 2 tbsps. cottage cheese or tomato (chopped) to 2 beaten eggs. Scramble as usual, and cool before putting in sandwich.
3. Cottage cheese: Mix equal amounts of cottage cheese and chopped spinach with a little onion.
4. Chopped prunes or peaches mixed with cream cheese and moistened with skim milk.
5. Chopped bacon and mashed, cooked kidney beans — flavoured with a little onion.
6. Peanut butter spreads: (1) Add half quantity of diced apples. (2) Add ½ mashed bananas. (3) Mix with shredded carrot.

Carrot and Barley Soup

¼ cup barley, 5 cups cold water, 1 cup diced carrots, 2 tbsps. chopped onion, salt and pepper, 3½ cups milk.

Soak barley in water overnight. Cook in same water for 45 mins. or until tender. Add carrots, onion and seasoning about 30 mins. before end of cooking time. Stir frequently, add more water if necessary. Add milk and when hot put in thermos. This makes three servings.

Mrs. S. M. says: By all means group the family around the dining room table for study and hobby work. Use a 200-watt study lamp over the table to save electricity and provide adequate light.

Mrs. J. T. says: Taking spots off a crepe dress can be done easily if cleaner is used immediately. I found that a little at a time did not leave a ring, or do it in the open air so the liquid evaporates quickly.
