HENRY'S Shorthand School Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Anniversary Services at Elma

The annual anniversary services at Elma United church held last Sunday attracted large congregtions both morning and evening when Rev. J. A. Waddell, of Winchester, was the special preacher. Monday evening a concert in the church proved a most enjoyable affair with special numbers by the choir of the church, Chesterville Oddfellows' Quartette and Mr. P. C. Colquhoun, readings by Miss Harrison and addresses by Revs. H. Bench, R E. Newman, and A. M. Russell, the latter congratulaing the congregation on the splendid response to the special appeal. The pastor, Rev. W. A. Morrison, presided. Proceeds of the special offering and concert amounted to $261.

T. J. Hamilton, Finch

Thomas J. Hamilton, for 20 years manager of the Finch office of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, died at his home in Finch late Sunday afternoon after a long illness. He was 68 years of age and for close to half a century had lived in Finch.

A former member of the town council, Mr. Hamilton was a member of the school board. During his residence in the community he had been active in several enterprises and up to a few years ago operated a general store. He was a member of St. Luke's Presbyterian church.

Mr. Hamilton was unmarried. Surviving are four sisters, Mrs. A. T. Morrow, of Maxville; Mrs. H. Woods, of Ottawa; and Misses Elizabeth and Grace Hamilton, of Finch. Two brothers who also survive live in Western Canada.

The funeral was held from his late home Tuesday afternoon to St. Luke's Presbyterian church for service at one o'clock, interment being made in Beechwood cemetery, Ottawa.

Mrs. Reveler Honored Organist Forty Years

Last Sunday at the morning service in Morewood United church, Mrs. A. W. Reveler, of Cannamore, who has been organist in the former Methodist church and the United church for a period of almost forty years, was presented with a very handsome Bible and an appreciative address by the congregation, following her resignation on account of ill health.

The following address was read by the pastor, Rev. R. W. Armstrong, and the presentation made by Mr. J. Wesley Smith, Clerk of Session:—

Dear Mrs. Reveler,

On the occasion of your retirement from your position as organist, we, the congregation of Morewood United church, desire to express to you our appreciation of your faithful and competent service in this capacity. First in the former Methodist church and later in this church, you have led the service of praise in the respective sanctuaries for a period of almost forty years.

The value of the many services led by you during these years is known only to God, but in this community and scattered near and far, there are multitudes who can testify to the help and blessings that have come into their lives through your ministry of music and song. These ministrations have brought comfort to the sorrowing, joy to the afflicted, rest to the weary, peace to the distressed, strength to the tempted, faith to the doubting, light to the perplexed, courage to the depressed, and inspiration to the toilers in life's vineyard.

No words of ours can fittingly portray the value or adequately express our appreciation of such a service which has been so cheerfully and gratuitously given. Heaven alone will reveal its value and bestow a fitting reward.

We present you with this copy of the Holy Scriptures as a fitting symbol of your faithulness and devotion. As you read the story of unselfish service contained therein you can rest assured that the spirit underlying it is approximated by something in your own soul so manifestly revealed to us by your long years of unselfish service.

Signed on behalf of the congregat Morewood, Ont., November 17, 1929.—R. W. Armstrong, Pastor; J. W. Smith, Clerk of Session.

Blue Geese Came Back

Birds will return year after year to sanctuary for food and protection, Jack Miner, famous naturalist, of Kingsville, claims, and he had proof of his assertion.

Last spring a pair of blue geese visited the bird sanctuary maintained there by Mr. Miner. They were banded and guarded and after recuperation resumed their journey north.

Monday six blue geese dropped down to the pond and Mr. Miner found they included the two old geese that visited the sanctuary in the the spring and four young the adults had reared during the summer.

Irwin Hilliard, K.C. Morrisburg, Receives Appointment

Irwin Hilliard, K. C., of Morrisburg, has been appointed assistant master of the Supreme Court in Toronto, it has been announced. Mr. Hilliard was Conservative member for Dundas in the Ontario Legislature from 1914 to 1919 and is widely known for his association with the late Sir James P. Whitney, whose campaign manager he was for 25 years, and whose seat in the Legislature he occupied following the death of the Conservative leader.

Mr. Hilliard was born in Osnabruck, Stormont county, February 2, 1863, and received his early education in Morrisbug. In the office of Sir James P. Whitney he studied law from 1880 to 1882 and following graduation from Osgoode Hall returned to Morrisburg where he practiced law until the present time. He was appointed King's Counselor in 1912.

He is a member of the Morrisburg Town Council and has been connected with numerous public bodies in the town.

The new assistant master is married and has five children, three of whom live in Toronto. They are Dr. Marion Hilliard, Miss Helen Hilliard and Irwin Hilliard, Jr. The latter two are students at the University of Toronto.

Mr. Hilliard will take up his duties in Toronto on November 26 and will reside there permanently.

Senior Hockey Outlook

Just what is going to develop in the Intermediate hockey group is somewhat hard to forecast. It is almost a foregone conclusion that the league of last season will not carry on this year. Up west Perth and Smiths Falls want to break away from the Rideau as constituted last season and form a loop with Carleton Place and Brockville. To this arrangement Chesterville will likely have no protest as the western teams were poor gate attractions at this end. At Cornwall there is considerable talk of a second team being formed and a franchise sought in the Central Ottawa League. Hockey is said to be badly split up in Cornwall and unless harmony can be restored it does not look good for a strong team in the Factory Town this winter. A five-club league in the Central Ottawa with the old standbys, Russell, Finch, and Chesterville again on the same loop, any new comers can count on a stiff fight before a winner is declared. While they would all probably sooner see the Colts back intact from last season a second team in Cornwall might add interest to a long schedule.

Smiths Falls Out Of Central Group

At a well attended meeting of the Smiths Falls Hockey Club held there last evening it was unanimously decided that the team drop out of the Central Ottawa Valley group in which it played last year.

This decision came upon the heels of a discussion regarding the formation of a new hockey loop to include teams from Smiths Falls, Brockville, Perth and possibly Gananoque.

Rumors of the formation of this new formation have been breezing about the entire district for the past few weeks and it would now seem likely that such a league will be organized. Smiths Falls has taken the first decisive step in announcing its intention of withdrawing from the Central Ottawa group.

Miss McArthur, Winchester

On Tuesday morning of this week, there passed away in Winchester one who was well known in Chesterville, in the person of Miss Christie McArthur. She had been in poor health since last winter and was tenderly cared for by her sister, Janet, who resided with her. She was a faithful member of the Baptist church. Her funeral will be held this afternoon at her late residence at 1.30, after which interment will be made in the family plot at Ormond.

Chesterville Car Damaged In Three-Car Smash

Tuesday morning last as W. O. Dixon with Rave Allison and Fred Dixon with Dave Allison and Fred Bolster were proceeding to Ottawa they were the innocent victims of an unfortunate smash on Highway 31 on the brow of Gloucester Hill. The Chesterville car was following a car driven by a Metcalfe man in such a wobbly manner that he monopolized practically the whole width of the road. Dixon was apprehensive of being run into if he attempted passing and remained in the rear. At the brow of the hill a car from Ottawa was met by the Metcalfe car into which it crashed, striking the Ottawa car about the rear wheels, turning it towards the left hand side of the road and, the driver losing control, the car skidded along the icy surface and crashed into Dixon who could not bring his car to a stop in time to avoid it. The Ottawa and Metcalfe cars were very much damaged but fortunately no serious injuries were received by any of the occupants.

Junior Hockeyists Re-organize

Last night a meeting was held for the purpose of re-organizing the Junior hockey club when a goodly number turned out and the following officers were elected:

Hon. Pres.—Eric Casselman.
Pres.—David Allison.
Vice-Pres.—James McAvoy.
Sec.-Treas.—Arnold Lynch.
Coach and Manager—Ralph Hummel.
Ass't Coach—Thos. Flynn.
League Representatives — P. S. Boyd and Ralph Hummel.

The league meeting will be held one week from to-night after which a better line will be had as to the prospects of a good junior series for the season.

Finch Accident Victim Buried

The funeral of Frank E. Dixon was held from the residence of his father, Mr. Wm. B. Dixon, on Wednesday afternoon to Emmanuel Church, Newington. Almost 70 cars followed the cortege and a great number were unable to obtain admittance to the church. The service was conducted by his pastor, assisted by Rev. A. D. Sutherland, of Avonmore, and Rev. H. W. Carr, of North Lunenburg. During the service Mrs. A. C. Jardine and Mr. Willis Waldroff rendered the selection, "Sometime we'll understand." The pallbearers were Jerry McEwan, Roy McEwan, Donald Dingwall, John Busn, Albert Mullen, Lina Hill, all fellow Orangemen of which the deceased was a member.

Friends who attended the funeral from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Jake Rombough and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Rombough, Mr. Will Sled, Ottawa; Mrs. Wm. Johnson and son, Chesterville! Mrs. Thomas Sanderson, Mrs. S. M. Wood, Mrs. Rodney Silmser, of Cornwall, and a great number of other friends.

The sorrow caused at his passing was expessed in the large number of floral offerings, including the following: pillow from Father and Mother, Verna and Maggie; wreaths, from Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Hawn and family, Stormont Lodge, L.O.B.A 234, Newington L.O.L 948; sprays from Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hawn and family, Ford Vera, and Ray Dixon, the Dixon Institute, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Levern, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Zeran, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Rombough and family.

Why Take the Risk?

Durham Chronicle.—It is a mystery to us why some people take so many chances with the law. They seem to persistently and systematically transgress and then when they are caught often try the old stunt of "keeping their name out of the paper." In breaking the law we do not mean the petty little things on which we may slip from time to time: what we are referring to is the flouting of the law for things which, if convicted, there is nothing for it but the serving of a heavy penalty. Taken altogether, the law is pretty decent with the citizen who tries to do the right thing.

Reception at Beckstead

A very pleasant evening was spent at Beckstead on Nov. 5th, when about one hundred and twenty friends and neighbors gathered to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Arnold McMartin. The evening was spent in games. At about half past ten the party was called to order and Mr. Fred Beckstead read the following address to Mr. and Mrs. McMartin and Messrs. Reginald Barkley and Lawrence Whitteker made the presentation which consisted of a living-room table, a tray of silverware,and silver butter dish:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. McMartin,

Mr. McMartin responded by a few words in which he thanked those present and all joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Lamb Consumption Increases

The consumption of lamb and mutton in Canada is evidently rapidly increasing. During the year ending with last March, upwards of 40,000 more sheep and lambs were slaughtered in inspected packing houses than during the previous year. This statement, which appears in the Report of the Veterinary Director General for the past fiscal year, is accompanied by the less favourable statement that there was a decrease in the numbers of cattle and hogs slaughtered at these abattoirs.

According to Dr. Robert Barnes, the Chief of the Meat and Canned Foods Division, the packers are making increased efforts to improve the quality of the products they turn out. These institutions looking to the development of the home market are manufacturing more and more of the finished and prepared meats ready for the table.

According to the report, which is published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, there were slaughtered at fifty inspected establishments during the year under review 1,008,835 cattle, 649,994 sheep and 2,453,704 hogs. Besides a few head of goats almost 200,000 head of poultry were also given inspection within the Meat and Canned Foods Division of the Health of Animals Branch.

Hotel Employee's Wife Ill

Mrs. Dee was a happy little wife and mother who went about her housework singing and taking care of her little two-year-old girl. Soon for some reason, she began to droop and lose weight. Such a deep cough came that it pained her lungs continually. Her husband was anxious about her, but as he had to work long hours in a big hotel, he could not nurse her or help very much. The doctor said she needed the greatest care if she was to get well again, and for Mrs. Dee this seemed an utter impossibility.

But no—there was help at hand. She was admitted to the kindly care and skilful medical attention of the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives at Weston. In three months' time she increased in weight from 98 pounds to 122 pounds, which was a splendid gain indeed, and she soon went home to a very happy little family.

Funds are needed by this hospital for such work, and your subscription will be gratefully received by W. A. Charlton and A. E. Ames, at 223 College Street, Toronto 2.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Substitute Feeds.

Certain by-products and miscellaneous feeds are now receiving increasing attention in reducing the cost of milk production. Pumpkins afford a good supplement for fall or early winter feeding but their nutritive value is not nearly as high as corn silage. It is a safe practice to feed cull potatoes to cows providing they are not fed too heavily. Apple pomace silage, the by-product of cider and vinegar manufacture, is now being used safely and profitably by many dairymen.

Here and There.

Some interesting extracts from the last reports of the agricultural representatives in the different counties are presented herewith:

Wellington—A total of $20,000 in cash was paid for geese at the Arthur Thanksgiving Fair. The price ranged from 21 to 25 cents per pound. We expect about 150 tons of chicken in fine crate-fed condition for the Christmas market. Some of this should bring 35c a pound.

Manitoulin—The subject of turkeys is now everywhere discussed. Whereas we used to think 16 and 17 pounds good weight for young gobblers, they now run 20 to 25 pounds. Local stores are offering 40c per pound for dressed turkey. The bulk of the crop, however, will be shipped alive.

Algoma—Good 2-year-old steers netted the farmers from $66 to $70 per head according to size. Lambs from $9 to $10.50 per head.

Brant—Small quantities of red clover being marketed at $8 per bushel cleaned.

Dufferin—Digging turnips has been completed. The crop is below average in yield and quality.

Dundas—A great deal of ditching has been done and is being done. The dry weather this fall has been particularly adaptable for drainage work.

Durham—Some of our larger poultry farms are getting 60 and better per dozen for eggs.

Kent—A decided drop in the number of cattle to be fed appears probable. Hay was a splendid crop, but barley and oats were light and the general feeling seems to that it is rather speculative to feed cattle with present high prices of grain.

Lambton—Sugar beets are of a large size and more free from disease than they have been for the past two years.

Dr. Christie, president of the O. A. C., states that a total of 1985 students, including those in the short courses, will have attended the college during the current year.

School Fair Climax.

As a climax to all School Fair work in Renfrew county, championship public speaking, singing and harmonica contests were held recently. Winners in these contests from each of the school fairs were eligible to compete. Silver trophies were awarded to the winners and medals to each of the contestants. The competition proved very keen and the program was heard by an audience of 400.

Ontario beekeepers should appreciate the fact that the finest and most completely equipped Department of Apiculture in America is at their disposal at the O. A. C.

Clean Spray Outfits.

W. G. Evans, practical spraying expert in the Department of Botany, O. A. C., emphatically recommends that all spray outfits be cleaned up before being put away for the season. if the best results are to be obtained next year. They should be carefully overhauled, the tank being filled with water to soften the spray residue and after a soak of several days, the machine should be started and the water forced through the pump and hose so that any collection of spray material will be carried away. As the water leaves the gun it should be used to wash down the exterior parts of the machine. After emptying the tank the drain plugs should be removed and the engine run for a few minutes. It is important, also, to see that the different parts of the pump are protected with a coating of oil to prevent rust.

—o—

In a contest for agricultural representatives. Mr. H. L. Trueman, the representative for Grenville county, was awarded first place for the soundest soil improvement program adapted to the requirements of his county. The award entitled him to a free trip to the American Society of Agronomy meetings held in Chicago, Nov. 13 to 15.

British Apple Market.

Fruit growers will be pleased to learn from the report of Andrew Fulton, overseas representative of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, that the British market for Canadian apples has been most satisfactory for October, due chiefly to the light offering of transatlantic apples. "Ontario apples have been of exceedingly high quality with correspondingly satisfactory prices," remarks Mr. Fulton. Ontario red apples were well competed for and some excellent McIntosh Reds sold at good prices. However, in a cable on Nov. 9th, Mr. Fulton announced that Ontario apples were falling off somewhat on the English market. The cause was attributed to a large number of off-condition apples from all sources. British apples were plentiful. It is expected that the demand for red apples will be very high before Christmas and shippers are warned to go easy on Greenings and Starks before that time.

Ontario apple growers should give closer attention to packing, especially in securing a tight pack for the British market. Recent arrivals overseas have shown an excessive quantity of slacks amounting in some cases to over fifty per cent of the shipment.

—o—

The horseshoes that were laid aside when the Ford replaced Old Dobbin are being resurrected all over the country, for horseshoe pitching is spreading like an epidemic. Widespread interest is already being exhibited in the contests that will be staged in connection with the Royal Winter Fair.

Warm Water a Benefit.

Good feeders have long recognized the value of liberal quantities of water to all classes of live stock. Hogs do better and are more thrifty and cows undoubtedly give more milk when they are watered freely. Experimental station tests have established beyond a doubt the value of warm water for stock during winter weather. In an actual test with fall pigs, the use of automatic heated waterers saved $1 a pig in feed costs. A cow producing five gallons of milk a day will drink 20 gallons of water. If she is compelled to drink that much ice water, her energy is required to heat it to body temperature and her production suffers.

An Expensive Secret.

As an example of the correspondence which reaches the Ontario Department of Agriculture, the following is of interest:

"Being so many cases of chicken stealing throughout the province set me thinking and I tumbled to an idea which I honestly believe would be in nearly every case a sure and final tracing of the ones who are doing the work.

"It would need government assistance and control, also the co-operation of all poultry dealers or certain compulsory registration of all poultry handled.

"I am too busy to do anything to this myself, but rather than keep it secret (if it could be made a benefit to the province) I would make my plans known for $500."

"Mr. Dawson, managing editor of the Ontario Farmer, referred me to you. I await your reply with thanks."

Needless to say, the Department is not paying large sums for "secrets" of this or any other nature.

Good Top.

The largest yields of winter wheat have been obtained in the experiments at Guelph in those years in which winter wheat entered the winter in good condition with a strong, uniform growth. This is an excellent suggestion for sowing winter wheat at the right time in autumn.

Mrs. Higgs was in a bad temper. For the third morning in succession the whistling of the milk boy had awakened her. This time she was determined to have no more of it. She hurriedly rose and rushed to open the window. "Stop that noise!" she shouted. "Don't you know it is very rude to whistle when you're calling at a lady's house?" The boy looked surprised. "The master told me to whistle," he said. "Told you to whistle?" "Yes, ma'am. He said if ever we sold you anything we'd have to whistle for the money."

Inside Information.

A highly inebriated man once boarded an English railway tram and finally spied a vacant seat. Stumbling toward it, he asked the other occupant to move along, a request which was reluctantly granted. The man then said:

"Say, aren't you the lord chief justice?"

Receiving no answer, he waited a few minutes and repeated the question, to which the man replied in the affirmative with much reserve.

"Say, Mr. Justice, you think you know everything, but I know something you don't know. My wife is your wife's washerwoman, and I am wearing one of your undershirts.

Scotch to the End.

Miles: "Well, old Gene MacDonough remained Scotch to the last breath."

Plyes: "What do you mean?"

Miles: "When he felt a heart attack coming on he managed to fall in front of a passing auto, so the insurance company would have to pay his wife double indemnity."

EUGENE McMILLAN, Prop

Early History of Chesterville and District

Compiled and written by Miss Harrison for the Women's Institute in an endeavor to bring local history up-to-date and have it permanently recorded. The Record is glad to be of service in this laudable endeavor.

The first milliner here was Mary Kitchen, the house is still standing next Howard Fulton's. It is one of the oldest houses here, a former tenant being Wm. Scott, tailor.

Robert Buist made furniture and coffins for years later selling to Arza Garrow. James and William Smith were shoemakers on the north side of the river and John Flynn on the south side. Francis Shirkey and Elisha Smith were tanners and Joseph Merkley a cooper, Joseph street was named after him. Samuel Dillabough was a carpenter and lived where Jas. Masterson lives now. Later Joseph Fisher bought the place and ran a wheelwright shop for many years. Josiah Hanes had a blacksmith shop north of it but moved to Dunbar.. I forgot to mention Patrick Kirby, a merchant.

The first school inspectors were Mr. Kerr, father of Mrs. R. H. Rose and Edward Kerr, and Mr. Ferguson who built Dr. Brown's house.

John Merkley was bailiff at the time and lived at the corner of Mill and College streets.

The first taverns were the Willard House, opposite the mill, a Mr. Ouderkirk was proprietor at one time. Ginley House, opposite the Public school; Joe Johnson's (now McCloskey House), and on the North side, Stallmayer's opposite W. B. Lawson's and later owned by Matthew Flynn. Mr. Flynn was well known as a violinist and for his New Years Balls. No sandwiches and coffee then but a real set down supper. Mrs. Flynn and her help would prepare for days and everything had to be done just right.

Wm. Harrison had a blacksmith shop at the corner of College and Church streets and boarded at Ginley's Father Meade, who said mass here every three weeks, also stayed at Ginley's. Another early blacksmith was Hugh McLeod and later Jim Millar had a wheelwright and blacksmith shop where the Anglican church now stands, employing several men. Later he moved to the south side where Dr. Brown lived. Matthew Rae had the first cabinet shop where the Bank of Nova Scotia is.

At first there were no mail carriers. Sometimes men going to West Williamsburg, as Morrisburg was then called, would call and bring back any mail for their neighbors but, according to a paper given by Miss Farlinger at the Women's Institute, lots of mail was never called for and after a certain time was destroyed. The first mail carriers from here went on horseback. Some of the [illegible]es were: Wm. Casselman, Jacob [illegible]art, Wm. Smith, Wm. Cash. In 1845 we got our first post office and the name of our village was changed to Winchester. The mail carriers came from Morrisburg three times a week to Winchester, then to West Winchester which was once called Bates' Corners, after the man on whose farm the village was built. Mr. George Sharkey remembers Wm. Cash well, he often got his brother to carry the mail to West Winchester as he had got a few glasses too many and could not make it. They returned by the same route the next day. The weight of the mail would not hinder the horses' progress as the letters were few and a very small number took a newspaper. Among the names of subscribers were Wm. Munroe, John Fetterly, and Andrew Summers from the Summers Settlement. Sometimes two families took one on shares. I heard of one case where they did and the women had a certain place and time to meet and pass the paper on and have a little gossip. They seemed to know all that was going on in the neighborhood. Some would say they read "them black art books." They thought that was where they got their information. Later we had a daily mail carried by Warren Henderson. He would arrive here before noon, then to West Winchester and Morrisburg by way of Winchester Springs. To show how long they were getting news, it was weeks after Queen Victoria's coronation before it was read here to the crowd by Matthias Cook. Philip Merkley has a very old Bible which once belonged to him.

C. T. Casselman was instrumental in getting the first telegraph line here. The people furnished the poles and he looked after the placing of them. The company found it confusing having Winchester, West Winchester and North Winchester. Chester Casselman circulated a petition to have the name changed to Chesterville and, although Winchester is the name of a Cathedral city in England, Chesterville looks very well in print or on a letter.

There was not always a school here. The pupils from the north side went to the Fetterly school and on the south side to one on the Munroe farm. The first school in the village was held in the town hall, a partition being run through it. The teachers were Sarah Ferguson and Patrick Jordan. A little story here:—Mr. Jordan was to speak at a teachers' convention held in Winchester. Larry had taken him up and was watching proceedings. When the young men saw him go up they were nudging each other and wondering what he could do. He traced the progress of education from the beginning and did it well. Before he was through the nudgers sat with eyes and mouth both open, they got a surprise. There is still beautiful penmanship through the country that he did. Our first school house is still standing but camouflaged into a brick house. Some say it was moved from the headline. That soon got too small as there were large families in those days. A two-storey brick one was built and later a frame and now our fine Public school with four teachers.

"Dad" Drives the Cannon Ball

My Daddy drives the engine of the Cannon Ball Express, that screeches down the right o' way like somethin' in distress. An' nightly, as he skims along, he waves to Mom an' me, an' now and then the whistle toots. That's "Love from Dad," you see.

My mother says a little prayer each night when Dad goes by. She asks the Lord to keep him safe from danger; so do I. She kisses me an' hugs me tight; then tells me to undress and dream of Dad on Number 10, the Cannon Ball Express.

The father of the boy across the street works in a store. An' Willie Brown's a baker's son; he's livin' just next door. The daddies of the other kids are mostly business men. But none of 'em can drive a train like Dad on Number 10.

The kids all say the train some day is sure to bust the track an' take my Dad away from me an' never bring him back. But mother says she's sure the Lord will always guard and bless my brave old grimy Dad, who drives the Cannon Ball express.

Considerate of the Sergeant.

Stable Sergeant: "D'ja ever ride a horse before?"

Rookie: "No."

Sergeant: "Ah! Here's just the animal for you. He has never been ridden. You can start out together."

On the first day of the second semester in school, the little boys took their seats and waited until the teacher came down among them to get their names. The first one to whom she came replied that his name was Si.

"No," the teacher corrected, "you mustn't say Si, say Silas."

Next she came to one who said his name was Tom. "Thomas," she corrected.

"And, now, little boy," she inquired of a lad in the end row, "what is your name?"

There was a bit of squirming. "Jackass," responded the lad.

The Cost of Rearing Dairy Heifers

Fifty dollars may be regarded as a high price to pay for a yearling heifer, but if she has been reared this far in a manner to give her proper development this price is little enough. Indeed, when the costs are all taken into consideration there is no profit in selling a twelve months old heifer at fifty dollars. Records were kept of the cost of feed consumed by six heifers of Ayrshire, Holstein and Shorthorn breeding, from birth to one year of age.

They were fed whole milk valued at forty dollars per ton until from three to four weeks of age when this was gradually changed to skim milk valued at four dollars a ton. A fat substitute valued at seventy dollars a ton was added to the skim milk. This was fed until the calves were three months of age. It was composed of one part flax seed and four parts of crushed oats with the hulls sifted out. When the calves got older one part of crushed oats was replaced by corn meal. Each calf was fed from one quarter to one pound of this fat substitute per day, the amount varying according to age and condition of the calf. The coarser foods consisting of hay and roots were fed from the time the calves were able to use them. After the milk and milk substitute were discontinued in the liquid form the calves were fed a dry mixture consisting of three parts bran, two parts crushed oats, one part oilcake, and one part brewers' grains. The aim in feeding was to keep the calves growing steadily.

In the account of this experiment which appears in the report of the Superintendent, Fredricton Experimental Station, for last year, published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, it is shown that reared in this way the calves weighed an average of 633 pounds per head and that the year's growth had been produced at a cost of $46.04 for feed.

Had Made His Million

"Well, I've made my million in the market and I'm through. It goes into bonds." These were the words of one of the most daring speculators in the history of the Toronto Stock Exchange, made quite a few years ago. This man, working for a salary of $20 a week, had, by sheer force of intellect and nerve, amassed a fortune. Very often powers of intellect are not gravely involved in making a million dollars. This speculator never bought on tips or hunches, but in consequence of an exhaustive study and brilliant analysis of listed securities. He would study a company's report with a grasp and penetration of Napoleon planning a campaign. He knew when certain stocks were low and in the natural order of events due for an advance, and what were high and ripe for a fall.

This knowledge, and the courage to bet on his judgment, made him a leader in the local market, and eventually a rich man while still young. He had set $1,000,000 as an objective, for he was a man of fine tastes and knew that there were more important things in the world than making money. This sum within his grasp, he ceased speculating, turned his money into high-grade securities, bought a comfortable home for his father and established a fund whose interest would keep them in comfort, and bought a ticket for England, which he had never visited. He planned to spend some delightful weeks in Wessex, following the footsteps of Tess, Bathsheba and others of Hardy's characters.

Unfortunately he was booked to sail from New York. Waiting over a day for his boat, he dropped into the stock exchanged, where he was at first amused, then astonished, then enraged to find one of his favorite stocks being sold at a ridiculous price. He felt it as a personal affront which he should avenge. Immediately he telephoned his brokers in Toronto, and once more invaded the market. He cancelled his passage to England, expecting in a few days to rectify New York's erroneous conception of values. In a few weeks he returned to Toronto broke. His million had melted away. He has yet to see Europe, and what he knows about Wessex he continues to derive from Hardy's novelss. We do not know precisely what moral is to be derived from this story, and as a rule we refrain from telling a story that has no moral. However, it may console some readers less brilliant than the man of whom we write, and who lost less than he. So we close with Kipling, "And I hope you like my song, because it's true."

Cream Market Barred Canada

The united States senate approved a finance committee amendment to the tariff bill to increase the duty on fresh and sour cream from 30 to 56 and 6-10ths cents a gallon. The house bill carried a duty of 48 cents.

If the impost of 56.6 cents on cream becomes law in the United States, Canada will be shut out of that market. This was the comment made by Dr. J. H. Grisdale, deputy minister of agriculture, when apprised that this figure had been approved by the United States senate.

"The only hope," he said, "is that the House of Representatives and the Senate will never reach an agreement and that these duties will never come into force."

Bigger Output from Canadian Farms Urged

Toronto November 20.—Increased home consumption is devouring Canada's export trade in many farm products. This warning was sounded here tonight by Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, who declared in an address at the coast-to-coast dinner of the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair, that there was no alternative for Canadian agriculture than to go strongly forward, more particularly in the production of such food commodities as are "peculiarly adapted to a young and growing country like ours."

Tonight's banquet, given by the Minister of Agriculture on behalf of the Canadian Department of Agriculture, gave expression, in menu and addresses, to the spirit of co-operation from all Canada that has built up the Winter Fair.

The diners tasted of the products of Canadian soil and Canadian waters from every province. Outstanding, perhaps, were British Columbia strawberries, kept by special process and transported to the banquet tables from the Pacific coast.

In his plea for a true spirit of Canadianism as opposed to provincialism, Right Hon. George P. Graham, member of the Canadian Senate, replying to the toast "Canada," suggested uniformity of school text-books throughout the Dominion, and approved an independent external policy in the matter of tariffs.

Representatives of Departments of Agriculture from each province responded to Mr. Motherwell's toast to the provinces. Each speaker lauded the Winter Fair as a commendable effort of co-operation, and spoke briefly of conditions in his respective province.

"If Canada continues to expand and consume at the rate she is doing," said Mr. Motherwell, "it will be only a comparatively short time until we are off the export markets for practically all major farm products except wheat and other cereals, flour fruit, canned vegetables, etc., unless production is speeded up proportionately to and beyond home consumption requirements."

The lack of increased production to offset the greater domestic consumption was noted by the Minister in bacon, eggs, cheese, butter, lamb poultry, and beef, and that, he added, "despite the fact that these food requirements are nearly all being produced in Canada in larger quantities than at any previous period."

This condition is the outgrowth of "quite unexpected though quite natural results" of the standardization and grading system of export farm products, said Mr .Motherwell. "While quality was expected to be increased by selling on a graded basis, it was not anticipated that home consumption of our livestock products would be so enormously increased also." Canada's recent industrial development, increased population, and increased ability to [illegible] were pointed out by Mr. Motherwell, however, as having doubtlessly contributed to this increased home consumption.

Dr. Wallace Gunn, formerly of Avonmore and Finch, representing the Department of Agriculture of British Columbia, told of the building up of the livestock industry in his province with the assistance of the Empire Market Board.

Speed And Accidents

Worcester Telegram — Doubtless many motorists will challenge the accuracy of the manager of the Worcester Safety Council when he says that the direct cause of nine out of ten accidents is speed, but Mr. Hill has been studying traffic conditions for several years, first as police chief and more recently as safety campaigner. It will be a surprising set of facts and figures to show that he is in error in concentrating on the question of speed. Slowly moving cars rarely crash into anything.

Of course speed is a relative thing. A rate of speed which would endanger nobody on a broad, straight, uncrowded stretch of road would be a menace to both motorists and pedestrians at a complicated and congested intersection It might be supposed that motorists would properly adjust their their speed to the conditions. The majority of them can be depended upon to do that. But a number of them fail to do it. The result is the death toll which is not being decreased despite all the talk about the need of care.

Just what will be done about speed remains to be seen. Motorists, even the most careful ones don't like the idea of any general and sweeping restrictions. But can the speed evil be checked without further limiting to some degree the liberties of all drivers?

Ontario Potatoes Bidding For Popularity

A new idea in the marketing of potatoes will be tried out on the Ontario public by the provincial department of agriculture at the Royal Winter fair.

Instead of the time-honored brown 90-pound bag that once was the sole standard of potato commerce, the lowly spud will make its bow in neat cardboard cartons and small white cloth bgs. Bags and cartons both are designed to hold only 15 pounds, that is, a peck.

All this is not to be dismissed simply as an indication that the humble tuber, like so many other products, is reaching for the high hat. It is a change, say departmental officials, that must be made to bring the potato industry up to date.

Once upon a time the farmer grew his potatoes, chucked them holu-bolus into the big bags, and sold them by the bag to the consumer. But to-day, experts say, the public wants graded potatoes. And furthermore, where mother had a big cellar in which to store her winter's supply every fall, the modern housewife, living in an apartment, has no cellar at all. Or perhaps she is reducing, doesn't serve potatoes so often, and wants only the high-grade article and that in small quantities.

With the new idea in marketing, the grade is stamped on the bag or carton. And the potatoes must be well-graded, for a bad one will show up easily in such a small quantity. So the dealer wants only high-class potatoes and the farmer must grow them.

That is where the department of agriculture comes in. For years it has been urging Ontario farmers to grow better potatoes and grade them. The result has been a growing demand for Ontario potatoes, and dealers who once stocked only the potatoes of other provinces have been compelled to keep the Ontario product.

But if the new idea goes across—and department officials have every reason to believe it will—the incentive for farmers to produce high-class graded potatoes will be increased The Ontario potato-growing industry, after many lean years, will come back with a bang, officials are sure.

"Hello! I'm buying a washing machine for my wife as a birthday present."

"That will be a surprise, eh?"

"Yes, quite! She's expecting a new car."

Why They Have Kings In England

Labor, Washington, D.C. — People who wonder why they still have kings in England may get some light on the question by reading the story of the banquet in London Saturday evening to the holders of the Victoria Cross.

The Prince of Wales was host. Only 467 holders of the "V. C." are alive today—a fact which shows how desperate must be the valor which is required to win such an award—and 321 of these were present.

On one side of the Prince was a viscount, Lord Gort, and on the other a chauffeur, Sergeant Burnham.

There were stevedores, noblemen, school teachers, ranchers, generals, privates; there were millionaires and there were men who had to borrow the money to come to the meeting.

One man flew there from India. One Canadian V. C. heard the news from a broadcasting station, and without waiting to say goodbye to his family, drove 100 miles to the station, caught the train with minutes to spare, and reached London the afternoon of the banquet.

All sat down as equals in the Royal gallery of the House of Lords, with the heir to the throne at the head table.

"I probably feel as uncomfortable as you do," said the Prince to his guests. "It isn't our national habit to invite men to dinner to tell them how brave they are.

"But I will assume that whatever small deed of arms, as the knights of old used to call it, stands to the credit of each one of you was committed or perpetrated from motives of self-preservation, or because you happened to notice that someone on the staff was watching and admiring you.

"I suggest this, because every V. C. I have ever talked to always dishes up some explanation of this sort to account for his peculiar conduct."

It would be hard to improve that speech, and it is easy to understand how the man who made it is popular with all classes.

The British have found a way to make the royal family useful, and the royal family has had the wit to accept the job, without, in the slightest degree, interfering with the processes of democracy.

British Device Makes Flying Safer

A brief reference to the Handley-Page slotted wing for airplanes, printed in the papers a few days ago, has evoked a more detailed explanation of the purpose of the device from a member of the Toronto Flying Club. This gentleman was impelled to give this explanation by his belief that accurate information concerning such an invention 'tends to help the people of Canada to become air-minded." Certainly, knowledge of the effectiveness of the mechanism that a British engineer devised to lessen the risks of flying does tend to increase public confidence in the airplane as a means of transportation.

The member of the Toronto Flying Club explains in his letter that the Handley-Page slot was designed to prevent spinning or loss of lateral control of an airplane while at a stalling speed. The device enables the pilot to land the plane safely at extremely low speeds rather than at high speeds. The slotted wing, says the writer of the letter, does not help a plane to stay up with the engine barely turning over. Any plane, he asserts, will stay up with the engine shut off, provided flying speed is maintained by gliding. The member of the Toronto Flying Club points out that there was danger, if a plane was stalled or lost its flying speed, that lateral control of it would become impossible and a fatal spin would occur. The slotted wing is designed to eliminate this danger.

The gentleman who gives this explanation also offers some evidence of the practical utility of the device. He says that recently in England an airplane was landed in a public park in a field only fifty yards long and completely surrounded by trees. This was done without injury to either machine or pilot. Service machines of the Royal Air Force have been completely equipped with Handley-Page slots and since then, among those machines, there has not been one fatal "stall-spin" crash.

Wins Much-Prized Trophy

Judges of the annual fishing contests at French River, Nipigon and Devil's Gap (Lake of the Woods) Bungalow Camps have announced through A. O. Seymour, general tourist agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, winners of the trophies for the past season at the camps. Outstanding among these is W. H. Graf, of New York, who tied with Frank S. Slosson, of Chicago, for the French River trophy, each with a 30-lb. muscalonge. Winners' name and weight of catch are inscribed on the permanent trophy, the latter being a finely mounted specimen of the fish which is the subject of the competition. Lay-out shows Paul Cameron, otherwise known as Chief Bimbatow Wahwashkaiche (Running Deer) Head guide of the Nipigon Camp, exhibiting the mounted speckled trout which is the subject of the contest there; and also W. H. Graf, winner of the muscalonge trophy at French River this year; with his 30-lb. capture.

Are Men Sanitary?

"Men are queer ducks," remarked the flapper as she leaped from one pair of step-ins to another.

"They change their collars once a day, change their shirts when dirty, change their underclothing when their wives sneak the soiled ones and deposit them in the clothes basket, but wear their trousers forever.

"They tell us about our foolish clothing; how we are ruining our health; what fools we women be; but wear the same pair of trousers for six months or a year, and often for two or three years, with no more cleansing than may be secured from a clothes brush and an occasional hot-steam pressing.

"Imagine sweating in underclothing for a year—and then you'll catch a vision of the sanitary condition of the vaunted male. Or visit a tailor when he is pressing the Saturday night offerings, and use your nose instead of your imagination.

"Oh, yes! Men are sanitary. The old-style trouser is good enough for dad. It's us who are the crazy ones . . . .or is it?"

Margie's Wish.

Margie would embarrass her mother every time she called on a friend by asking for something to eat. She was threatened with punishment if she ever did it again.

The next time they called on that friend, just before lunch time, Margie piped up:

"Mrs. Smith ,are you hungry?"

"No, Margie," answered the hostess. "I'm not hungry."

"Well, said Margie," with a sigh, "I wish I was you."

"I want to be excused," said the worried looking juryman, addressing the judge. "I owe a man $25 and as he is leaving town today I want to catch him before he goes."

"You are excused," returned the judge in icy tones. "I don't want anybody on the jury who can lie like that."

—o—

Recruit—Well, what's the matter? Didn't I do all right in the parade?

Top Sergeant (sweetly)—Sure you did all right! Didn't you win it by half a yard?

One of life's funniest mysteries is why a wife, whose husband is about as pleasant as an earthquake to have around, will lie awake half the night worrying because she is afraid some other woman is going to walk off with him.

Presentation at Orchardside

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Earl O'Shaughnessy gathered at his home on Monday evening where a very social time was spent. About eleven o'clock a very dainty lunch was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. O'Shaughnessy and family were called to the floor when Miss Grace Cunningham read the following address, and Mrs. Geo. Elliott made the presentation of a purse:—

Dear Mr. and Mrs. O'Shaughnessy and family,—

We, your friends and neighbors, have met here this evening to enjoy your hospitality once more before your departure to your new home. Although living here but a few years, by your genial and kindly manner you have endeared yourselves to all, and we congratulate ourselves that while you are going to another home you are not leaving us entirely and we hope to still continue our pleasant times with you all.

But we feel as if we cannot let this occasion pass without showing you in some way our esteem, so we ask you to accept this purse and hope you may have many happy and prosperous years ahead of you in your new home.

—Mrs. Geo. Elliott, Mrs. Grant Beckstead.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy on behalf of his wife and family made a very appropriate reply thanking their friends for their handsome gift and inviting them all to come and see them in their new home.

Winter Cost of Pork Production

Experimental Farms Note.)

Is it an economical proposition to feed hogs for pork production during the winter months? This question, which many farmers are debating, is one that cannot be answered definitely by "yes" or "no." Many factors enter into such a proposition and it is the writer's purpose to present some of the data collected at the Dominion Experimental Farm, Nappan, N.S., which have a bearing on this question. This is a season of the year when, as a rule, more time can be utilized in caring for the stock and there is usually considerable rough feed such as cull apples, potatoes and roots than can be profitably marketed as pork. From observations at this Farm, it is questionable whether all feeds can be purchased and the feeder still produce pork at a profit. It is profitable, however, to feed a reasonable number, such as will consume the rough feeds available and also the home grown grains, such as oats and barley.

It has been found that early fall pigs, farrowed not later than September 15 will make quicker gains than those farrowed at a later date. Winter fed hogs will not, as a rule, make as rapid gains as those fed during the summer months ,the average at this Farm during the past six years being 0.93 pounds per day, as compared with 1.11 pounds during the summer. The feed cost per pound gain is relatively higher, 9 cents against 8.11 cents. A supply of green feed in some form is essential to profitable gains. This may be in the form of cull apples, potatoes, turnips or mangels. In a feeding test conducted in 1925-26, feeding 1.5 pounds of potatoes per pig per day resulted in a lower cost per pound gain to the extent of three-quarters of a cent per pound. The test conducted in 1928-29 comparing cooked vs. uncooked mangels and turnips, showed that either of these roots fed uncooked gave as good gains as when cooked and also produced a better bacon type hog than where no green feed was fed.

The following points may well be kept in mind by those considering the question:

Two litters per year per sow will reduce the cost at weaning by almost one-half.

Early fall pigs are more profitable feeders than those farrowed late in the season.

A supply of green feed is necessary for maximum gains.

Dry sleeping quarters and exercise are essential to prevent crippling during the cold weather.

Animal protein supplied in skim-milk, fish meal or tankage, is necessary.

A mixture of feeds such as crushed oats and middlings, or shorts, to start, adding crushed barley after three months of age, increasing this gradually to 50 per cent of the meal mixture during the last month of the feeding period, should give economical results.

Old-Time Fiddlers

There are no fiddlers nowadays—only violinists. And mere violinists do not know anything about the sort of entertainment the old-time fiddler provided in his day. Before the advent of the gramaphone and the radio he was in a sense the wandering minstrel of the countryside. Every district had its fiddler, and no social gathering was complete without him. No fiddler, no dancing. Memory takes one back to the merry dance in the great kitchen—or perhaps in the barn, all swept and tidied up for the occasion. Everything went well enough, though a bit dull, until the fiddler arrived with his prize instrument under his arm. Perhaps he was the next neighbor, but really accomplished performers often came farther than that. There was little delay in getting the event under way. Of course there was tuning up and the preliminary scraping; and then came "The Wind that Shakes the Barley," "The Soldier's Joy," "Money Musk," "The Irish Washerwoman," "The Highland Fling," "The Flower of Edinboro," and all the rollicking old favorites that kept the merry dancers in constant activity for the rest of the night. None of this innocent enjoyment of an earlier time would have been possible without the old-time fiddler—therefore he was a personage in the community. And he had fine musical talent. Mostly he played "by ear" and notes meant little to him, but he had in his soul the spirit of music, and an amazing memory for tunes. Now he is heard only on rare occasions.
