Chesterville Man Drownd at Moosejaw

Through the medium of the daily papers John Fyke received the news that his brother Emmett Fyke had been drowned at Moosejaw on Sunday. From advice received it is understood that with a companion he was upset from a canoe in an attempt to change seats. The other party swam ashore and was saved. Mrs. David Hall of this place is a sister. George Fyke a brother met death when the big tank at the Condensery collapsed four years ago. Only recently Mrs. John Latta, mother of the drowned man, with her husband moved from Chesterville to Mooosejaw to make their home.

Condensery Patrons' Picnic

The picnic tendered by the Nestles Food Co. to the patrons of the Maple Leaf Condensed Milk Co. on Tuesday last bore out the policy of that company, from making the best product that can be made in any condensing factory to holding a picnic worthy of that product and of the patrons who supply the milk. The picnic was an unqualified success under the able management of Mr. Heber Hooks and his staff. Every one of the 1500 guests of the company were entertained royally by the splendid programme of sports, speech-making and refreshments and music arranged. The prizes for the events were in keeping with every detail. We record only one disappointment, the aristocratic Tamworth had been indulged too liberally on the fruits of this year's bountiful harvest and had arrived at that state of body and peace of mind that it positively refused to recognize the necessity of eluding its pursuers.

The prize winners were

Potato Race—Miss L. Swerdfeger 1st. Perfume.

Miss Evelyn Merkley—2nd. Do.

Tug of War—Ladies—Miss Evelyn Merkley's Team, 1st. 3 Boxes Candy.

Men's Tug of War—Farmers vs. Factory Employees—Won by Farmers.

50 Yard Dash—Ladies—Miss M. Grey 1st. Perfume.

Miss A. Beckstead 2nd. Box Candy.

Three Legged Race—Miss K. Masterson and Miss M. Grey 1st. Box Candy.

Miss G. Weager and K. Manley 2nd.

Boys' Cracker Eating Contest—John Blacklock 1st. Watch Fob.

Levi Sorrell, 2nd. Fountain Pen.

100 Yard Dash—Boys—Stewart McMillan 1st. Watch.

Kenneth Cramer 2nd. Gold Tie Pin.

100 Yard Dash -Men— Jack Walsh 1st. Silver Pencil.

Francis Jordan 2nd. Cuff Links.

Catching Greased Pig—Grant Pickering.

Pure Bred Holstein Calf—for Patrons only—won by William Mack with winning number 252.

Miss Merkley Showered at Nation Valley.

The young people and neighbors of this vicinity and surrounding districts met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. A Munroe one evening recently to shower Miss Ella Merkley. Miss Merkley was invited out for a car ride and on her return to Mrs. Munroe's was surprised to find her friends present to greet and congratulate her. Shortly after her arrival she was invited to the front while an address was read by Miss Evelyn Grey, immediately after she was presented with a handsome bouquet by master Dwayne Munroe.

The young people were all assembled on the lawn, an auto heavily laden with parcels was near by while streamers of crepe paper were used to make a bridal path to the bride elect. A beautiful collection of silver, cut glass, pyrex, china, linen and aluminum was presented to Miss Merkley by three small girls assisted by Miss Mary Munroe, after which Miss Merkley made a fitting reply, thanking her friends and inviting them to her new home. Ice cream and cake were then served by several young ladies. Music and games were indulged in and the evening's programme was brought to a close with Auld Lang Syne and many good wishes for the bride to be from her Valley friends and school fellows.

Captured in Cornwall, Taken to Malone

Cornwall, Sept. 14—Sheriff A. A. Edwards, of Malone, and Silas W Day, of the Treasury Department, Washington were in town on Saturday to secure Wm. Edwards, who was captured in the woods east of here a few days before, it being alledged that he was one of a party who shot Louis Sawyer at his home last Sunday night and robbed him of $575.

Edwards had been under guard in the Hotel Dieu Hospital here from Monday night, having been shot in the back by Chief Howard, of Cornwall, when he and his supposed associate, Louis Thompson escaped from the officers at a local repair shop. Edwards was captured later in the night, being weak from loss of blood. Thompson is still at large.

The American officers claim to have information that will implicate two other men in the robbery at Sawyer's.

The bullet was removed from Edwards' body on Thursday, and he was well enough to return with officers to Malone. Edwards was turned over to the Malone sheriff by Chief Howard, who accompanied him to the border.

Uncle "Jimmie"

"Some farmers," said Uncle Jimmie, "makes me think of fellows who go tearing along the state road In their high powered cars. They are getting there all right, but that is about all they are getting. It seems to me that folks ought not to be so everlastingly busy making a living that they have no time to enjoy life as they go along."

Let no one suppose from this remark that Uncle Jimmie was simply a rural philosopher. There was no better farmer in the neighborhood. His well-tilled acres, his modern barns, his cosy home were the admiration of the community. Uncle Jimmie's growing bank account was evidenc ethat he knew how to make farming pay.

Uncle Jimmie was so good a planner however, that he always had leisure to do what Pollyanna wanted to do—just to live.

One night after supper when Uncle Jimmie was spraying his roses a neighbor remarked: "My wife likes posies too, but I tell her we get more out of the land when we plant it to cabbages."

"Cabbages are all right," replied Uncle Jfmmie, "and we've got a plenty of them down in the lot, but I've felt for a good while that that old chap Mohammed was about right when he said, 'If I had two loaves of bread I would sell one and buy a hyacinth for my soul.' "

"You city folks," said Uncle Jimmie to a cousin from New York City who was spending a week at the farm, "think you're the only ones who have any music, but give me the melody of the little brook at the lower end of the orchard, of the rain drops on the roof, of the wind in the pines in front of the house. I think I'd rather hear the thrushes sing up there in the woods on the sidehill at sunset than any choir to which I ever listened."—Country Gentleman.

The teacher was teaching a kindergarten class and was making her pupils finish each sentence to show that they understood her. "The idol had eyes," she said, but it could not—"

"See" cried the children.

"It had ears but it could not—"

"Hear," was the answer.

"It had lips but it could not—"

"Speak" once more replied the children.

"It had a nose but it could not—"

"Wipe it," shouted an enthusiastic pupil.

Winning Out Against Mail-Order Houses

During the past week this section of country has been flooded with mail-order catalogues. Chris McLean has carted north from Morrisburg no less than eight thousand pounds of them which had been shipped there by express, all ready stamped and addressed to individuals within the twenty mile rate for parcel post delivery, to beat the Post Office Department out of the increased rate for delivery of parcels beyond the twenty mile zone.

Every household by this time has received one of these catalogues, where its offerings may be studied, compared and selected at leisure, morning noon or night, Sunday or week day. This can be done because sufficient information is furnished regarding each article to inform the buyer if it is the kind and quality that is wanted at a price he or she is willing to pay. Once the decision is made the article is sold and an order is sent to the city, the whole tranaction accomplished by judicious advertising.

Contrast the above with the operation of buying in many home-town stores. A prospective buyer enters with a desire to purchase, say, either a ready to-wear article or material to make such an article herself. She is asked as to her desires, but as she has not decided definitely she would like to compare the cost of the unmade goods and the ready-to-wear article from similar goods, but the salesman is there to make a sale as quickly as possible and puts all his ability into selling what he wants to sell, instead of allowing the customer to buy what she wants to buy, the net result being that the customer has not been given sufficient information to make her decision as to relative valnes, and does not buy.

Advertising in The Record is the only remedy for such a condition within many miles of Chesterville.

Newspaper advertising is simply salesmanship placed before the buying public by the means of printed words.

To sell anything the buyer must be convinced that the article offered will meet the requirements for which it is wanted at a price the buyer is willing to pay. Tell those facts truthfully, as convincingly as you can and a sale is made before the customer enters your store. It saves the time of your employees to serve more customers who will come because they know beforehand that you have what they want at a price agreeable to them.

If you have several kinds of articles or material used for the same purpose, enumerate and describe each at the same time, giving the different prices for comparison. When you stocked the different brands you did so because you knew the one kind only could not be sold to every buyer. Therefore advertise them showing that customers will have a variety to choose from.

The persistent advertiser has a great advantage over the non-advertiser because the buying public does not care who else has the article it wants as long as it knows where it can get what it wants, when it wants it, at a price that suits it.

With most buyers, advertising that does not state prices lacks in selling power. It is all well enough to say that quality is remembered after price is forgotten, but, in this matter-of-fact age, price makes the sale while quality brings the repeat order.

Don't be afraid of your competitor in quoting prices. Eatons are not afraid to send you a catalogue. Your competitor is not going to advertise you by telling his customers what your prices are. If the price you ask is the fair price he cannot undersell you and the public looks on the quoted price as fair because it knows your opposition can learn your price where it did and that you are not afraid that he should know.

When your sales force is idle, or employing themselves at tasks of their own to while away the time, you can be assured that your business needs advertising of the proper kind and needs it urgently.

You will have to pay the wages bill; it would be wise to let advertising provide the customers to keep your staff profitably employed.

Niagara Fruit Belt Swept by Wind and Hail

St. Catharines, Sept. 13—The worst wind and hail storm that has ever visited the Niagara fruit belt swept over one portion of it on Saturday afternoon and caused a total loss to some growers. The destruction took place in a narrow area of about a half mile in width and about five miles in length, west of Port Weller, along the south shore of Lake Ontario.

About four o'clock Saturday, two storms, one from the north east and the other from the south west, converged between St. Catharines and the lake, and a disturbance ensued the like of which has not been seen since the tornadoes of 1898 and 1902.

Almost complete darkness followed, causing some persons to fear the end of the world had come. Trees and telephone poles were snapped off and orchards were completely dismantled, merely the trunks of trees, whose branches a few moments earlier were bending with their weight of fruit, being left standing.

Vineyards, which were heavily laden with grapes yesterday, are to-day nothing but barren posts and wires, even the vines being stripped off. Corn fields in the path of the storm are to-day mere stalks, bereft of cobs and foliage, even the stalks in some instances being riddled with hail until they hang like ribbons. Melon patches were transformed into areas of garbage with the vines missing, while whole crops of onions were torn out of the ground.

The greatest damage appears to have been to peaches and grapes nearly all of the latter remaining uncut, while great quantities of late peaches had been unpicked.

As an example of the damage in the path of the storm, George X Walker, of Grantham, estimates his loss at $10,000.

W. S. Bunting, of Grantham, is another fruit grower who lost about $10,000 as a result of the storm.

Orchards and fields from Port Weller to a point some distance beyond Port Dalhousie, are with few exceptions, almost totally ruined.

To Build up the Town

A town is very much like an individual. To be flourishing, it must have energy and enterprise. The people in a town should remember that the individual prosperity depends to a large extent upon the character of the place in which their business is located. Every public measure should be liberally supported by all, especially the business men. At the present day there is as much competition between towns as there is among persons and business enterprises. A man seeking a location will invariably select a town that is up to the times, and is eagerly in favor of every modern improvement. A town in these modern times can't afford to be people with old fogies or antediluvian fossils who are continually kicking at every enterprise. To make a flourishing town you must believe in its future and work it, encouraging every improvement. Make a special effort to exhibit some evidence of improvement in your own work and character. Help every worthy man, every enterprise, and encourage every good man to locate here.

Food Supply Depends on Birds

Do we appreciate our birds?

The west is threatened with a grasshopper plague, while in the east the caterpillar is causing havoc among the trees.

Man, by his insatiable slaughter of the birds, has so reduced the balance of nature that the destructive insects are getting the upper hand. Dr. Tolmie, Minister of Agriculture, introducing his estimates in the House of Commons on May 24, stated that Canada's annual loss from parasites amounted to $125,000,000, and that in preparation for the expected garsshopper plague alone, there had been purchased 100,000 pounds of arsenic, 2,000 tons of bran and 50,000 gallons of molasses from which to make poisoned bait.

To overcome, or at least minimize, the caterpillar plague, various methods of attack are being adopted, chiefly that of spraying

Recently, a woodpecker was noticed at work upon a tree which was being defoliated by caterpillars. With the aid of binoculars, it was found that, in one visit to the tree, it secured twenty-four caterpillars. This bird, or another, returned at about quarter-hour intervals, each time disposing of a number of caterpillars.

Birds are the natural enemies of insects and bugs, and, without them, we could not successfully combat the pests which destroy our food supplies.

By protecting the birds we protect ourselves.

BIG SAVINGS ON CLOTHING PRICES

The new prices accompanying the recent arrivals of the latest samples and style books from The House of Hobberlin, Toronto, and from the Campbell Co. of Montreal, show a very considerable reduction in many lines.

Along with these are special prices for early orders to be made up now in the slack season.

If you are going to buy a suit this season now is the time to buy it.

You are late enough for the newest patterns and lowest prices, and just in time for a special price on the "keeping-all-hands-busy" early orders.

Chesterville 11, Smiths Falls 4

Chesterville ball team had one of those reversals of form this week that we read about in the big show, when smarting from a bad defeat at the hands of Smiths Falls C.P.R team at that place on Saturday afternoan by a score of 15 to 11, they came back at the railroad boys in a game at the the big Nestles Co. picnic on the Driving Park Tuesday afternoon and defeated them by the decisive score of 11 to 4. The game was the best seen on the local diamond this season and the first one where the breaks of the game did not have considerable influence on the final score. It was all baseball. Senecal pitched one of his best games with not more than two hits bunched off him in any innings. The support behind him was also the best that he has had. Smith and Sharkey at short and second covered a mile of territory. One of the features of the game was Smith's spectacular one-handed catch of a fly almost out in left field. Sorrell's play at first was gilt-edge all the way through. Only one error was chalked up to the out field, when Robertson lost Elliott's fly in the sun in the fourth. Coyne had the range to second much improved making the purloining of that sack a matter of careful calculation. Good judgment was shown on the base lines, resulting in only five men being stranded, one being Sharkey who was ordered back to third by the umpire when he should have scored on a blocked ball. Smith stole second with Porter watching the theft after a balk. On three occasions scores were made from second on short singles.

As is usual, the Leafs let their opponents get away from them in the first innings, when Barrie made the circuit on sacrifices after getting a life at first on a wide throw from short. In the fourth they put another over when Elliott, the first man up, succeeded in getting over while the three following were being disposed of. Kimberly, also the first man up in the fifth scored after a nice single to left. Genge was hit by Senecal but left stranded when Smith and Sharkey took care of flies by Barrie and Elmsley. Their other came in the eighth when Elmsley hammered out a safe one after Sorrell had retired Barrie, Elliott put Elmsley on third when he nailed the ball for his second hit. Haley struck out while Elliott was stealing second. Ferguson got a scratch hit scoring Elmsley, but Eiliott trying to come in from second was caught yards off the plate.

The Leafs did not score until the third when Foster made the circuit, but in the next frame nearly broke Porter's heart. Sharkey started a swatfest by slamming out a single and stealing second. Oshier fanned, then the fun began, Hamlin, Coyne, Robertson and Foster all hitting safe and scoring. Senecal fanned, while Smith brought Robertson and Foster across with a double but was left at third when Sorrell struck out. Sharkey, not satisfied with his share of the previous innings, lined out the longest hit of the day, a three-bagger to deep centre. Oshier was thown out at first. Hamlin doubled scoring Sharkey, Coyne singled bringing in Hamelin. One in the sixth and two in the seventh made the total eleven.

Strongly Assails Hydro Radials

Speaking at Damascus at a garden party held under the auspices of the U. F. O. Club, Mr. A. A. Powers, president of the United Farmers' Co-Operating Co , dealt with features of the Hydro-Radial situation, as he sees it.

Reviewing the financial position of the Province, he said that fifty-two per cent. of the present debt of Ontario is represented by assistance given to the Hydro-Electric Commission. The obligations of the Province were not, however, limited to the moneys and guarantees already given but it is expected that in the near future the Government will be called upon to supply $32,000,000 more in cash to complete the Chippawa and Nipigon and other electrical power works in process of construction.

Mr. Powers further stated that the debt of the Province is now $104,000,000, and if limited radial schemes are carried out, this debt, in ten years, will amount to $210,000,000, and if a more extensive program is undertaken, it is calculated that the debt would be still further increased by $50,000,000, or to a sum more than ten times the whole debt of the Province in 1908.

He quoted from Government bluebooks to establish these statistics. Touching at financial aspects of railways, Mr. Powers asked if this is the time to embark on radial projects, costing, as the Toronto, St. Catharines will cost, $300,000, per mile, in view of the position of electric railway systems in the United States.

In New England the electric railways are in desperate shape. The Bay State of Massachusetts, with 750 miles is in a receiver's hands. He applied to the courts for permission to abandon 317 miles of line. The Boston elevated, carrying a million passengers a day, is badly in a hole although its five cent fares have been doubled. Municipal taxation is being resorted to make up the deficits on the road. But, though some of its tunnels have cost from $2,500,000 to $6,500,000 per mile its total capital obligations works out at only $252,000 per mile for the Toronto, St. Catharines. And in 1919, with the fares raised, every dollar of earnings represented a capital investment of $5.38. According to the Murray report, heralded in the Toronto, papers as the great vindicator of the Beck radical scheme, the Toronto, St. Catharines is estimated to earn $2,500,000—an amount that no single track line in the world is earning—or only one dollar for every $8.91 that the road will cost, according to Mr. Murray.

In the State of Massachusetts the electric lines for the last reported year operated altogether with the result of a deficit of over five and a half million dollars.

Eliminating the Poor Cow

The object of cow testing is to give the dairyman accurate knowledge as to the production of milk and fat of each cow in the herd. It is readily admitted that the average cow does not produce as much milk as she is capable of giving, and many dairymen keep one or more cows that do not even pay for their keep. Cow testing shows which cows are worth keeping in the herd and gives evidence against those that should be eliminated from the herd. "The progress of cow testing," bulletin 58, Dairy and Cold Storage Series by A. H. White, B. S A. shows that many farmers rely on guess work to pick out their best cows from which to save heifer calves for the future herds. Frequently, these guesses are not correct, cows which have good conformation are not always the best producers in the herd. Dairy Records will do away with guess work, and the farmer can safely select his best cows for breeding purposes. The bulletin, "The Progress of Cow Testing" may be secured free upon application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. In addition to giving the essential objects of cow testing it outlines the details of organization and gives some of the results obtained, which shows that many farmers have increased the production of their herds from 30 to 75 per cent. and some have doubled the herd average in a few years. Wherever cow testing has been followed for a few years a decided increase in the average production of each cow will be found.

An Auto or a Bath

(Journal of Agriculture.)

The advent of the automobile into our rural districts has been startling in its rapidity. Sections of the community which a few years ago regarded a car as a millionaire's plaything today are cluttered up with Fords. The old blacksmith shop with its cherry ring of steel on steel, and its familiar arcid odor of scorching hoof is fallen upon evil days; and the mob foregathers in the big noisy garage of a rainy day, where men discuss the state of surrounding roads and the general question of tire mileage.

Yes, our rural districts are becoming motorized and in the majority of cases it has probably been good business to buy a car. But we would like to see some other necessary improvements keeping pace on our farms with the improved methods of transport.

We visited recently a prosperous rural district in the Ottawa Valley (Quebec side) and found that nearly everyone in the district had a car. Nor were these confined to the cheaper makes of cars—the bigger and more comfortable were liberally represented. Now we happen to know this district pretty well, having been born and brought up in it, and we know that although there are probably one hundred or so cars in the district, few of the farms can boast a bathroom in the house.

What we need on our farms is a better balanced system of living. And better living does not stop with a spin through the twilight after the day's work is done. It carries on through the night and all the next day—in the greater comfort of the home which is supplied with running water on tap and all that this means in the way of up-to-date toilet conveniences and a well equipped sink.

Intend to Handcuff the Germans

Secretary Emanuel Brusse, of the Finance Ministry, finds that the job of liquidating American army stocks sold to the French Government brings just one little mystery after another. When it isn't ladies' silk stockings, baby layettes or corsets stowed away among goods intended for United States warriors, it is chewing gum paraded as mustard, typewriters disguised by labels as salmon, and gloves shipped as canned tomatoes. Now he finds a quantity of regulation police handcuffs in the effects. Investigation has disclosed that the ladies' and baby goods really belonged to households within the warzone, and had been salvaged and tucked into all sorts of receptacles by United States troops, after their rightful owners had abandoned them. When some of the French women returned to their homes and found their effects missing, they accused the United States soldiers of stealing.

The inquiry has cleared all that matter, and Secretary Brusse declares the incident closed as to the source of these strange sundries. He says he must bear as best he can the troubles that will come from sale according to label. What he will do with the handcuffs, of which he says there must be 2,000,000 he cannot imagine.

Wiser to go Elsewhere

"When you get your groceries to-day," said the butcher to his wife, "don't go to that little grocer next to my shop."

"Why not?" she demanded.

"Because he sent in yesterday and borrowed a pair of my scales."

Catarrnal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reached the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the the inflamation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will destroyed for ever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

W will give One Hundred Dollars for any of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Dure Circulars free.

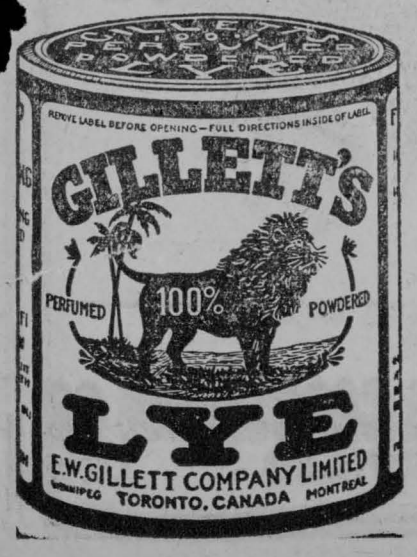
Woman and the Home

When the British Housing Board was formed, to arrange for the construction of 500,000 houses on behalf of the Government, women were included on it. In this, the Old Land was ahead of Canada, though we and our American cousins pride curselves on being much superior in providing for housing comfort. The "man-arranged" house is the common thing in this country. Only those fortunate families in a position to build houses for themselves give adequate thought to the woman's end of the plan. The result is that about every other housewife finds her working difficulties and obstacles immensely increased—simply for lack of sufficient thought for convenient arrangement.

The only part of a man's life spent about the home is in the evenings, and Saturdays, Sundays or holidays. He is little troubled by the location of the kitchen sink, or whether the cupboards are properly placed to save steps, or whether the house is a rambling conjunction of long passage-ways. The woman is supposed to put up with these inconveniences though she may anathematize them every day. The motor car has helped much to correct ideas regarding house plans, however, for it enables the family to get out, and the housework must be done in a hurry. Quick action requires step saving and time-economizing, and these in turn are possible only when the lay out of the house is advantageous. Why, for instance, should 90 per cent of the housewives have to go out on a stoop, or down steps, to put garbage in the can, when a garbage chute could easily be constructed in a kitchen wall, with a shutt-off door protecting the kitchen? Why should kitchen sinks be put in dark corners, or the obvious place for the kitchen table be on the opposte side from the sink or stove? Why should not every house have a linen chute, from up stairs to the basement? Mere man, when he designs houses, thinks only of the general proportions, and not of the tired mother's unnecessary footsteps, There are dozens of labor-saving devices and improvements that any man could install in his home, if he utilized a few spare hours a week, and these would lighten immeasurably the weary round of a woman's domestic duties.

There is no home so humble but the husband and father could, if he would, make working conditions much easier for his wife or daughter. The manufacturer who designs a factory figures carefully on economy of operations, but the same man may be utterly indifferent to the small conveniences of home. His indifference is not conscious, perhaps, but is the consequence of lack of appreciation of how much good design, and plenty of conveniences can do for his wife. Most builders now find it necessary to have built-in conveniences, such as ironboards, toaster-sockets in the walls, chutes, etc., to please the women, but the older style houses will last for decades yet, and these are the ones that thinking housewives would like to remodel.



Hounds and the Quarry

By ALEX. S. BRISCOE

(Copyright.)

From the bend of the creek came the bay of a hound—a long, deep note that held a certain quality of menace, of lust for the kill. It rolled back from the bluffs beyond where the sluggish Wakenda writhed across the timbered bottoms.

"Spade" Garvey, blundering along the winding shore of the stream, paused and listened.

Again came the mellow voice of the hound, and it was echoed by the quicker, keener yapping of another dog.

A shrill yell of encouragement was heard in the edge of the woods, and Garvey stiffened.

Now he understood! They were after him with bloodhounds.

He crashed through the underbrush, falling over logs and banging into trees as he fled. He knew nothing of the woods either by day or night, and realized he must follow the creek or lose his way.

Garvey had been given the title of the "Spade Burglar" by Shea, chief of the Bertillon department at St. Louis, because of his use of that article, in various burglaries charged to him in that city.

The thin edge can be pushed under a window-sash and the leverage provided by the long handle makes it easy to break a window-catch.

Besides, one usually can be found about the stable or yard of a residence, and this makes it unnecessary to carry a jimmy—an article which is hard to explain when found in one's possession.

In a big city Garvey was at home and could hide himself with ease when hunted; but in the country he was out of his element.

Unusual activity on the part of the police and a shortage of funds had driven him to seek new fields of endeavor a few days before, and a country post office had provided an opportunity for the exercise of his talents.

But he had been unfortunate. The safe had been opened with the facility with which the top is stripped from a tin of sardines, and the proceeds had been gratifyingly large. It was the town marshal who had caused the trouble.

This official now lay with a bullet in his shoulder, and Garvey was trying to make his way on foot to safety.

For two hours he had stumbled along, following the sinuous course of Wakenda creek; then had come the baying of dogs. Of bloodhounds he knew nothing, except that they tracked men. The distant shout had confirmed his fears. They were on his trail!

Somewhere he had heard that walking in water threw hounds off the track. He stepped into the icy creek, cursing the fact he could not swim.

Finally he could stand the chilling water no longer, and he staggered up the slippery bank.

He did not notice the creek was curving, and he virtually was running in a circle, approaching ever closer to where three men waited, straining their ears to catch each note of the dogs.

At the rail fence where the cornfields met the heavy timber little Kelsoe wriggled impatiently as the hounds worked their way slowly along the edge of the creek.

Burkett, one of his companions—a tall, raw-boned man in overalls and jumper of a farmer—leaned motionless against the fence.

The third member of the party, an undersized negro youth with long and extremely powerful arms, rolled his eyes toward Burkett and ventured an opinion.

"Good track," he said. "Old Bull talks long thataway when it smells strong."

Kelsoe said nothing. His ignorance of the ways of dogs checked his city-readiness to talk.

As Spade Garvey struggled through the woods he caught the flicker of Kelsoe's lantern between the trees. He paused abruptly. He was trapped, and his eyes roved about wildly, seeking a chance to escape. The moon peeped a moment through a rift in the clouds, revealing a dark mass of timbers jammed in the creek channel.

Garvey heard a crackling of dried leaves as the hounds, now close behind him, circled about for the trail.

He almost fell down the steep bank, and was half-way across the creek when from the edge of the water came a deep-toned bay. Garvey heard the snuffling of the dog and a rustling of leaves and dry grass.

The moon had disappeared, and Garvey strove to pierce the dark with his eyes.

Paws pattered on the logs, and an inquisitive nose sniffed at his heels. His hand fumbled for his pistol, and he kicked out wildly.

The pitiful yelp of a hound that had been hurt arose, and little Ella, the running mate of Old Bully, shrank whimpering away from the man.

The neck hair of the old fighting hound on the shore bristled, and he bounded out on the jam.

Garvey had picked up a club and swung hard as the dog sprang toward him. Old Bull was hurled into the water, and Garvey scrambled up the bank on the opposite side of the stream.

The complaining voice of Ella had reached the ears of the three beside the fence.

Limber's eyes showed an unusual amount of white in the lantern's glow as he spoke.

"Some one's hurt that dog," he said.

Burkett melted into the shadow of the trees.

Kelsoe marveled at the speed and silence of the big man's movements as he raced after him, carrying the lantern.

Ella was whimpering on the shore beside Old Bull, who was shaking the water from his back when Burkett reached the spot. Blood dripped from the older hound's nose, and the man's quiet eyes flamed.

There are persons whose dogs it is not safe to kick around.

"Get 'em, boy!" he commanded. "Go after him!"

The hound snarled—a rumbling sound of anger that came from deep within his broad chest. Quickly he snuffled his way across the log-jamb and bounded to the top of the bank.

Then he gave tongue.

It was the fierce, joyous bay of a dog running with the scent hot in his nostrils. Burkett followed him with the negro at his heels.

They were out of sight when Kelsoe toiled across the creek with the lantern.

For a quarter of a mile the chase led through the timber, the hound occasionally giving tongue. The animal was but a short distance behind Garvey; but with the wisdom of an old hound he was keeping out of reach of the man who had struck him.

It was in a bend of the creek that Garvey was cornered. Crouching behind a tree, revolver held ready, he awaited the coming of his pursuers.

Old Bull scented the man and stopped.

Throwing up his head, he gave the tree bark—the short, choppy notes that tell the hunter the quarry has been treed or run to earth.

Infuriated, Garvey threw up the pistol and fired.

There was a series of sharp yelps as Old Bull, a shoulder seared by a bullet, scurried back toward Burkett and Limber. The gentle Ella pattered out of the darkness and whined in sympathy as the old dog licked the wound.

Garvey heard the rustle of leaves, saw two figures dodging forward between the trees. One now was only a few yards away.

A tall man hurled himself forward as fire spurted from the weapon, and Garvey jumped aside to avoid the rush, again pulling the trigger of the revolver.

Ten paces away the negro whirled up the light ax and threw. The head struck Garvey in the neck and he went down, half across the still form of Burkett.

Kelsoe reached the scene as the negro recovered the ax and swung it above the unconscious burglar.

"Don't!" he called.

Limber hesitated, the weapon still poised.

"But he's done killed Massa Burkett," he argued.

"Don't!" commanded Kelsoe, grasping the handle.

For a moment they stood tense, then the taller of the two figures on the ground stirred and groaned.

The negro let go of the ax and dropped to his knees.

There were joy and relief and many other things in his cry as he lifted Burkett's head.

Limber started a fire while Kelsoe, with the ax and pistol, stood over Garvey.

Burkett, who had recovered quickly, the bullet merely having creased his skull, leaned back against a tree and knotted a handkerchief about his head.

Kelsoe took command.

"That fellow had a good reason to dodge folks or he wouldn't have used that gun," he reasoned as he fastened his belt about Garvey's arms after an examination had convinced him the man was only stunned.

While buckling the belt he noted a heavy packet in the man's breast pocket and drew it out.

There were several sheets of stamps and a bundle of registered letters.

Further investigation brought to light a handful of silver coins and pennies and a thick roll of bills. It then required no great powers of reasoning to estimate correctly the status of the prisoner.

Half an hour later a silent procession led by Burkett, his head bandaged, filed out into a road that led to town.

Behind Burkett came Garvey, bound and sullen, with Kelsoe at his heels.

In the rear walked Limber, the ax held by the middle of the handle, swinging at his side.

Old Bull and Ella, ignorant of the significance of events in the woods, trotted in front. There came to their noses an odor they recognized, and they gave tongue.

Old Bull leaped the fence and the younger hound squeezed through. A hundred yards away the hounds stopped beneath a small tree, barking in a frenzy.

Limber's racial instincts asserted themselves, and he scrambled over the barrier.

Ten minutes later he returned, carrying a creature that drew back its lips in a many-toothed grin as it strove to feign death—a 'possum.

In Garvey's thick skull a thought stirred to life. For the first time since his capture he spoke.

"Will those bloodhounds chase them things, too?" he asked.

"Say, man, them ain't bloodhounds." The negro's answer held scorn of such ignorance. "Them's coon dogs."

"Then you wasn't after me?" said Garvey.

His voice was husky.

"'Course not. We's coon-hunting."

"Well, I'll—be—" began Spade Garvey of St. Louis. But right here the English language fell down.

The Poor Married Man

As Mr. Moses Jenkins looked down at his waist-coat he discovered that it lacked a button.

"An' I ast dat wife of mine to sew it on fast last night," he said to a friend in the shop. "I doan' see how she forgot it."

"Doan' ever ast yo' wife to mend nothin'," said the friend. "I learnt a better way befo' I'd been married a yeah. When I wants anythin' mended, like a shirt fo' instance, I takes it under my arm, all mussed up like, an' opens de closet door and sings out to mah wife, 'Where's de rag-bag, honey?'"

"'What yo' wants of de rag-bag?' she asts me.

"'Oh, I kinder thought I'd throw dis away,' I tells her, an' squeezes it tighter under mah arm.

"'Let me see what yo' got dere,' she says, an' den I mutters somethin' 'bout de 'worn-out-ole thing,' while I hands it over to her.

"'Why Clarence Barker!" she'll say, when she's spread it out and looked it over in a hurry. 'I'se surprised at you'! Dis is puffeckly good. It don't need a single thing 'cept—.' An' den and dere she sets down to mend it, lookin' like I done made her a present."

Mrs. Barney Ball, Maple Ridge

On Sept. 1st, the end came peacefully after an illness extending over two weeks to Laura Ann Thompson, wife of Mr. Barney Ball of Maple Ridge, in her 67th year. The late Mrs. Ball was a woman of sterling character, sympathetic, kind, and generous, sacrificing herself in a marked degree for the comfort and welfare of those with whom she came in contact. She became a member of the Methodist Church early in life and continued in good standing throughout. She has gone from her earthly home from which eminated a most helpful influence to her heavenly home, but the memory of her will ever prove a benediction to her bereaved husband and son. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband, one son, daughter-in-law and two grand-children, three sisters and two brothers. The funeral took place on Friday Sept. 3rd, from the family residence, conducted by Rev. W. T. Brown who preached an eloquent sermon from Proverbs the 31st chapter, 28th and 29th verses. The pallbearers were Messrs. Samuel Fulton, Samuel Hurly, Frank Helmer, John Kittle, G. D. Hutt and Kenneth Hutt. The flowers as loving tokens, a pillow by father and son, and by kind friends were very profuse and beautiful. To the sorrowing husband and family is extended the sympathy of the community.

Blown to Pieces While at Work

A frightful accident occurred on Friday afternoon at Jericho, in Prince Edward County, resulting in the death of Joseph Haight, whose home was at Mount Plersant, in the same county. The victim was engaged in digging a well and was using dynamite for blasting purposes. While there was no eye-witness of the accident it is surmised that Mr. Haight dropped some dynamite, causing it to explode. The man was blown to pieces, portions of the body being picked up about the place.

A Long Distance Layer

(Experimental Farms Note.)

As a rule, hens lay two or three eggs and then miss a day. Some good hens will lay more before they take a day off and we have known individual hens to lay five and six dozen eggs and not miss a day, but a record in long distance laying without a miss has, as far as we know, been established by the Experimental Farm, Poultry Division at their Kentville, N. S. Station, where a Barred Plymouth Rock pullet laid 104 eggs in 104 days.

This Barred Rock whose leg band No. is 63, did not start to lay very early. In fact her first egg was laid on the 25th of January. She laid two eggs and missed a day, laid five eggs and missed a day, four eggs and missed a day, one egg and a miss, then two eggs, but on the 13th of February she got down to business and laid every day for the rest of the month, every day in March, every day in April, and every day in May up to the 27th when she took two days off. After this time she took an occassional day off until the 20th of June when she became broody. When she went broody her total record was 136 eggs in 147 days.

Will of People Being Outraged

A sermon delivered by Rev. Dr. A. S. Grant, secretary of the Ontario Referendum Committee, in a Toronto church last Sunday night on the subj ct of "The Church and Labor" was unique in that Dr. Grant dismissed a discussson of his subject in a coup e of sentences, and devoted the remainder of his remarks to that question in which he is most keenly interested, the liquor traffic. "All that I know about labor," he explained, "is work I have worked hard all my life. But I am privileged to represent about three-quarters of a million people of this province who have stated by their votes that they don't want liquor sold for beverage purposes in Ontario, and the will of those people is being outraged at the present time by the bringing in and use of liquor wholesale. That is the kind of democracy we are having at the present time."

The Referendum Committee secretary proceeded to answer various arguments put up by defenders of liquor. Among them he emphatically denied that the miracle performed by Christ at the marriage supper had produced an intoxicating wine from water brought to the feast. In no passage did either the Old or the New Testament give sanction to the use of intoxicating drink for beverage purposes, he claimed. As to personal liberty, he declared after ten long years on the frontier he was not inclined to any idea of that privilege, except insofar as it could be enjoyed with proper regard for the other fellow.

Dr. Grant pointed out that there was a lot of talk about those who manufactured and sold liquor, but in a self-governing country such as this these men were engaged in a legal business, and in the last analysis the responsibility lay with every enfranchised individual who gave either tacit or active sanction to the practice. Of prohibitory legislation, he remarked, "If we needed it in the war we needed it after the war. We need it all the way because the rum traffic is the greatest curse that has ever afflicted the world."

The Government he said, had given the most advanced legislation for allowing the people to express their wishes, and he urged them to avail themselves of the opportunity "You can't hide behind a shadow," he declared. "You can't escape your responsibility by saying that you have business or social interests which would suffer. I have more respect for the man who, for conscientious reasons votes against this measure than for the man who hides behind any straw or shadow."

Records for Fasting

Toronto Globe—The human body, according to medical authorities, when entirely deprived of nutriment, is ordinarily capable supporting life for little more than a week. Mr. Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, has already passed twenty-five days without food, but he seems to have prolonged his life by an occasional drink of water. The value of even a little water was shown in the disaster at the Tynewydd mine, near Perth in South Wales, in 1877, when four men and a boy who had been emtombed for ten days without food were able to walk when released. The thorough saturation of their narrow space with aqueous vapor and the presence of drain water in the cutting were their chief preservatives. At the wreck of the Medusa frigate in 1876 fifteen people survived on a raft for thirteen days without food. Various people have tried, generally for exhibition purposes, how long they could fast from food with the aid of water or some medical preparation. A man named Jacques fasted in this way at Edinburgh for thirty days in 1888 and in London for forty-two days in 1890, and again for fifty days in 1891, and an Italian named Succi for forty days in 1890.

Dr. Tanner's experiment in New York in 1880 arose out of the claim of Mollie Fancher of Brooklyn that she had lived fourteen years without food. Dr. William A. Hammond offered her $1,000 if she would refrain from food and allow herself to be watched for one month by a relay of doctors of the New York Neurological Sooiety, Tanner, at that time a practising physician in Minneapolis offered to take up the challenge, and Dr. Hammond agreed saying: "If he succeeds he will get $1,000, and if he dies I will give him a decent burial." Dr. Tanner who was fifty years of age, began his fast at noon on June 28, 1880, and finished on August 7, a total of forty days. He drank eighty ounces of water during the first two days in doses ranging from six to eight ounces each, after which in lieu of drinking he simply gargled his mouth about once an hour. He spent the time reclining on a cot or sitting in a chair. At bedtime he took a sponge bath and was rubbed down with coarse towels. During the fast his eyes became slightly dimmed, his thin, grey hair turned white, and he lost ten and a half pounds in weight. In 1888 John Zachar of Racine, Wis., went without food for fifty-three days, which is the longest fast known. His weight was reduced from one hundred and sixty pounds to ninety.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reached the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the the inflamation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will destroyed for ever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

W will give One Hundred Dollars for any of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Dure Circulars free.

Waiting For The Doctor ?

When a man lies sick, waiting for the doctor, he usually does some serious thinking.

One of the things he is likely to think about on such occasions is Life Insurance. He is more apt to realize what life insurance means for his family.

But he cannot get Life Insurance at such a time. He must get it when he is well.

If you are well today, take a policy while you can. To-morrow you may be waiting for the Doctor.

For a small deposit each year The Sun Life Assurance Co. can provide the protection far your family and at the end of fifteen or twenty years return all your deposits with profits.

Information gladly furnished on request.
