LAST GREAT TRIUMPH OF ARMED FORCE

Chesterville and District Celebrated Last Night

Chesterville and District celebrated final victory with a parade, programme of speeches, music and dancing last night with a large crowd taking part. Even Tojo was presenttied to a trailer and towed by a truck later to be "disintegrated" on the Post Office Square.

The function commenced with a parade headed by a colour party and the veterans of this war lead by the Municipal Council; then followed the Citizens' Band, Canadian Legion members with their colour party; High School Cadets, Members of Chesterville Platoon, SD&G Highrs. (R), Nursing Sisters, Red Cross workers, and the school children with an effigy of Tojo, bringing up the rear.

The parade formed up on the United Church lawn. and went north on Main Street, east to King street, over the bridge, up Victoria stret to the Public School, down Church street, then back over the bridge to King Street where the programme was held.

Colour Party Leads

The colour party was in charge of Cpl. Frank Devau, Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa (MG), the colours being borne by Cpl. Ken Giles and Pte. Cecil Plantz. Sigmn. Don Dwyer, RCN, and WO Ted Fawcett. RCAF, formed the guard with fixed bayonets.

Reeve Geo. H. Barkley opened the programme, calling for one minute's silence in memory of those who had died answering the call to duty; the Last Post was sounded by Bandsmen Arnold Hogoboam: after the playing of "God Save The King" by the band, brief addresses were given by Rev. W. E. Wright and Flt. Lt. P. S. Boyd; O. L. King led community singing which ended with "O Canada," and the Reeve closed the programme, inviting the crowd to remain for the dancing—"all for free."

King street was packed solidly from the Post Office Square to the corner by Allison and Gillard's store, and was reminiscent of Old Home week with friends meeting and forming into groups to chat. Old time dancing was enjoyed on the street, and the Community Hall was crowded to dance to the second orchestra.

Tributes to Services

Rev. Mr. Wright paid a tribute to the fallen and the wounded of this war, and to the workers at home who helped to make the victory over aggression possible. Those returning home, some broken in mind and body will not ask for pity, but a continuance of the loyalty that carried us through six years of war so that the years to come may be lived in continued peace. To our Heavenly Father, asserted Mr. Wright, is owed the deepest thanks for bringing the nations from the brink of despair to a shining victory.

Appeals for Memorial

A stirring appeal for a living memorial to the dead of both wars and the veteran was made by Flt. Lt. P. S. Boyd so that the responsibility to the coming generation may be discharged properly. Chesterville is in need of an institution to help the young people, he said, to assist in the wholesome development of body and mind. He pleaded for a rededication to plan and execute a lasting live memorial to those who went out and fought so well beside the other nations.

Words cannot express the deep debt owed to these young men and women, nor repay them for their splendid victorious fight, but least of all we can say fervently, "Well done; we thank you."

Ernest Summers, president of the Winchester Branch, Canadian Legion, was responsible for a representation of the post including the colour party and several members.

The Rotary Bingo planned for Saturday night was set up and added to the fun of the evening.

Weather conditions were almost ideal, following a gale in the early morning hours. There was a chill in the air reminding one that fall is approaching and a bright moon shone on a happy, quietly jubilant crowd, celebrating the beginning of another era of peace.

REEVE CALLS MEETING.

When the surrender of Japan was announced at 7:00 p.m., Tuesday, Reeve Geo. H. Barkley called a meeting of the Village Council and asked the Board of Directors of the Rotary Club to meet with them to plan a celebration to mark the end of the World War. Other citizens also attended and in a short time plans were mapped out and put into action for Wednesday evening's show.

Walter J. Carr was named chairman of the meeting, with J. A. Morris, as secretary. After a motion by P. S. Boyd and Thos. Barnes that the function should consist of a parade of Veterans of both wars, Reserve, Cadets, Nursing Sisters and Emergency Nurses, Red Cross and school children, all headed by the Citizens' Band, with the programme and dancing to be held on King street, the following were named to look after arrangements: Reeve Barkley, programme, in conjunction with Rev. W. E. Wright, Rev. P. J. Keaney, and Rev. E. A. Martineau; P. S. Boyd and J. A. Morris, the parade; S. Morris, Band; R. J. Barrie, arrangements to fence off and clean King Street, between the Post Office square and Allison & Gillard's store.

Commence Survey of Nation To Settle Dispute Over Dam

A survey of the Nation River watershed which was requested at the Annual meeting of Zone 5 of the Ontario Conservation and Reforestation Association, held in Kemptville this summer, has been started.

Due to the recent trouble over the Nestle's dam here in Chesterville, A. H. Richardson, Chief Conservation engineer of the Department of Planning and Development, thought it advisable to start the survey here, so that the contentious question, whether or not the dam affects the water level of the South Branch at Hulbert, can be settled this fall. Two engineers appeared in town over the week-end and are hard at work taking levels, with instructions to survey the river as far west as Spencerville. In the course of a couple of weeks, when the survey should be completed, Mr. Richardson, accompanied by a hydraulic engineer is planning to come to Chesterville for an afternoon meeting with men interested in the survey. In the evening a general meeting, which is to include the 14-man committee of the entire watershed, is scheduled to be held in Brinston, when the result of the survey will be made known.

Due to the lack of sufficient personnell, this will be the extent of the survey for this year. Next year a survey of the entire River system will be made. On completion of the survey the department will be able to advise the municipalities affected, just what measures will have to be taken to stop the lowering of the water-level in this section of Eastern Ontario. Possibly low-lying land will have to be bought up and reforested, small dams put in to hold back water and some ditches filled. The cost may be high but, if Eastern Ontario is to continue being a successful farming section, the expense will be necessary.

Rev. R. C. Tait Addresses Old Friends at Rotary

Returning to visit the club he helped to father eight years ago, Rev. R. C. Tait of Plymouth United Church, Sherbrooke, was guest speaker of the Chesterville Rotary Club on Tuesday evening and the members were treated to a splendid talk as Mr. Tait told of the beauties of Sherbrooke, his new home, and of the visit to the Sherbrooke Rotary Club of the International President, Thos. Warren, of Wolverhampton, England.

Guests of the club were Lieut. Don Fulton, RCN; Flt. Lt. Harold Williamson, RCAF; Sigmn. Don Dwyer, RCN; Arthur Bogg, of Ottawa, and Rotarian Verne Lowen of Weston.

Vice-President Leon Marcellus, chairman of the salvage drive, told the club of plans for the Community Service committee to make personal calls on all households to canvass for waste paper. The Board of Directors was called to meet at the home of Leon Marcellus on Tuesday evening. Thos. Barnes volunteered to take over the arrangements for the next Bingo games.

Introduced by P. S. Boyd, who described Mr. Tait as "one of the Rotarians I know best, and one of the best Rotarians I know," the speaker said his love for Chesterville Rotary is very keen, and he is maintaining his connection with the organization through kind arrangements of the local club.

Sherbrooke was described as a gem in a beautiful setting, where from every hilltop, ravishing views are obtained of the valleys of the Magog and St. Francis rivers. It was in such a location, the Sherbrooke Country Club entertained the President of Rotary International and 300 guests a couple of weeks ago.

Mr. Tait said that the two-fold message Thos. Warren is striving to put across duing his year as International President is: He asks Rotarians to take a fatherly interest in the children whose fathers—and mothers—have been killed in this war. This has been Mr. Warren's hobby since the end of World War 1, and 2, to do everything within their power to make war impossible.

CrowdGathersFollowing Jap Surrender Tuesday

Immediately following the announcement over the radio of Japan's acceptance of the Potsdam Declaration, the bells of Trinity United, St. Mary's and Holy Trinity churches pealed forth, and the whistle at Nestle's was blown till, as it seemed, the boilers had given up all their steam. Impromptu parades were formed and citizens gathered in groups about the Post Office Square hoping to see some fun.

However, there was little doing, except that Shy Harper's truck carried an overload of youngsters who cheered themselves hoarse as they covered every street in town. Near midnight the Fire Department decided a rehearsal was in order and after a large bonfire was set alight on the square the fire whistle was sounded and the hose reels were brought into action. Unfortunately before the water was turned off more than the bonfire was soaked—from the hoses.

Beverage rooms were closed and eating places, so there was nowhere to go but home. But those possessing some gas and rubber on their tires continued to drive about the town until the early hours of Wednesday morning sounding their horns in an accompaniment to small choruses that continued to keep their celebration alive.

PLANNING NEW JAIL SYSTEM

Ontario people generally are neither interested nor proud of their county jails and indeed only cognizant of them when desperate criminals, temporarily detained awaiting removal to a place of trial, break out of their cells and regain the freedom of the wide open spaces. Many of the county jails are manned by elderly men, competent enough to look after the few drunks and vagrants who seek asylum within their walls in cold weather, but not possessed of any disciplinary qualifications. In fact, for months at a time many of these grim structures are untenanted. A complete overhaul of the penal system in this province is being considered which would provide for the elimination of the existing 37 county and city jails and their replacement by ten or twelve modern industrial farms. At an expenditure of from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 the Government hopes to accomplish the following: Proper segration of prisoners, industrial farms which will provide useful occupations for inmates, an adequate system of medical and psychiatric treatment with special emphasis on alcoholics, a school for the training of prison officials to be attached to one of the new industrial farms. The 27 county jails and the Toronto and Hamilton jails would serve as lock-ups under the plan now being studied. Burwash, Guelph and Mimico institutions would be integrated into the master plan. In the opinion of Provincial Secretary Dunbar, the great drawback of the present jail system is its lack of useful work for the prisoners. Another is the inability to segregate prisoners. He says, "We have to use our reformatories now for repeaters and those who can be reformed. With a dozen industrial farms replacing the present jail system which is completely outdated, we will be able to segregate prisoners. We will be able to catch delinquents in the early stages and do something constructive about it.

SPECIAL COURSES FOR SOCIAL WORK

The growth and need of social service has led to the reorganization of the University School of Social Work with a view of mending the "bad old things" recognized as a legacy of the depression years. The reorganized school plans a Research Institute major functions of which will include making special studies and surveys designed to meet immediate needs such as housing. Besides providing facilities for training students in research, the institute will make basic studies on problems of the social services which may lead to important contributions in theory. Medical and psychiatric social work are specialties which up to now have been neglected. Recreation and group work is another field in which special training will be available. There are only about 750 qualified workers in Canada, while the ever-growing number of social work positions is at least four or more times that number. The seven schools across the country graduate not more than 150 a year. To augment the slim ranks of trained workers an emergency summer "short course" now is in progress and probably will be repeated next year. This is part of a national scheme and is being financed by the Federal Department of Labor's war training funds in schools in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, and Vancouver. The 60 students taking the 10-week course as "case aides" or "group work and recreation aides" have their fees paid and receive maintenance allowances on condition that they take positions with social agencies which are co-operating with wartime bodies. For example, much of the work of the Dependents' Allowance Board is channelled through welfare and children's aid societies.

MUCH WORK WAITING MANPOWER

In the adjustment period following the end of the war, Ontario is prepared to embark on a program of employment as quickly as materials and manpower become available according to Premier Drew. He declares that this province has a most extensive program. He instances a $50,000,000 hydro-electric rural extension plan over the next five years which would give 85 percent of farms electric power, a "very extensive highway development program which ties also into development of tourist areas, extension of forestry services and expansion of insect infestation research, opening of agricultural schools in specific areas and a major program of public works generally. The role of the Department of Planning and Development is a co-ordination one, and for many months officials of this department have been busily engaged in conferring with municipal authorities and advising them on their postwar plans.

"PRODUCTION FOR USE AND NOT FOR PROFIT"

By R. J. Deachman.

J. B. Priestley champion of a different age, or is it a new age said a few days ago: "We should have production for use instead of for profit."

Nobody has yet described this peculiar animal. We read about the humming birds of Brazil, the kangaroos of Australia, the many varieties of fish beneath the tropic seas, but there must be an enormous number of people who haven't the slightest idea of production for use and not for profit, and strange to say the least informed, are those who talk the most about it.

Things are produced because they have a use. If they have no use what would be the object of producing them. What is meant by these makers of phrases?

Ah, I know, some people want fancy "hair-do's," costume jewelry and ornamentation of dress. What do people seek in this world—pleasure and enjoyment, and if people do not get it out of these things why do they pay for them? They are therefor, so far as the wearers are concerned, purchased for use, Mr. Priestley to the contrary notwithstanding.

When people are well dressed they are more efficient. If you want to hire a good stenographer pick one who wears her clothes as if she were proud of them. "Careless of dress—careless of words" is a general rule. Where now, in this age, would we find a woman who wears clothes merely for use, solely as a cover for nakedness, merely to shut out both cold and heat?

What is generally considered as profit constitutes payment for the use of buildings, machines and equipment employed in the production of goods. Here is a vacant lot, a building is erected, machinery is installed, production begins. A part of the selling price represents payment for the use of machines. Under socialism the same thing will happen—the consumer will pay, in the price of the things he buys, for the use of the machines which produced them. The socialist does not want to do this but he will have to do it nevertheless.

You may be a very efficient employer. There may be no bottle-necks in your business, employer-employee relations harmonious. health conditions satisfactory. You pay your workers more, they earn more. Profit, in this case, may come as payment so that they produce more with less effort. What guarantee has Mr. Priestley that this quality will be enhanced when incentive ceases?

What reason is there to believe that we would, in that way, get greater value for our dollar? If not, then production for use may mean that the consumers of the nation will give more, get less. Profit is a measuring stick, an incident of good service. Profit provides evidence that the man who runs the business knows what he is doing. Will those who speak so frequently of production for use, and not for profit, tell us just how much extra they expect to get for their dollars under the new system? Are they sure that under these conditions they will have more dollars? There's the problem in a nutshell.

Hand Power Preferred

The uses to which our soldiers on the battle front put the gifts we send them are sometimes more important than we suspect. Witness the letter a Negro lad serving in the South Pacific jungles wrote to his sweetheart down in Alabama.

After thanking the young lady for the electric razor she had sent him the soldier pleaded:

"Mandy, please, when you send me another razor, send me the old-fashioned kind, big and plain and sharp. I ain't got no time to hunt up no electric socket when them old Japs attacks me."

The Future Belongs to Those Who Prepare For It

By R. G. Knox, Professor of Animal Husbandry, Ontario Agricultural College.

It will be admitted that the achievements of the Ontario farmer, like those of his fellow farmers in other Provinces, during war years have exceeded all expectations. He has contributed to the supply of food for the people in the armed services, for the workers on the home front; has made a very worthy contribution to the food requirements of the United Kingdom; and is now doing his utmost to help prove the sincerity of the statement made by the Allies that when the people of Europe were liberated from beneath the heels of the Hun they would be fed better than they were under Nazi rule. All of this has been and is being accomplished under the handicap of limited manpower and a restricted supply of farm equipment.

Of this great volume of food of agricultural origin, the livestock producer has contributed the major portion. What with the sale of livestock and livestock products, Ontario livestock men can be given credit for approximately three-quarters of the revenue coming onto the farms in Ontario during 1944, when the cash income reached an all-time high. This increased production has automatically involved an increased use of livestock feeds, concentrates, grains, roughages, forage crops, pasture crops, milling by-products, and so on, so much so that there have been times when the demand for concentrates, protein-rich feeds and minerals exceeded the immediately available supply; but seldom has there been any serious shortage of the coarse grains which are used in the basal rations for Ontario live stock. The Ontario farmer, it is believed, has learned that economical production of livestock and live-stock products, is associated with the feeding of balanced rations, and that the supplementing of protein-rich by-products, minerals and vitamins makes for the more profitable use of home-grown grains, roughages, succulent feeds and forage crops that may be produced on the farm.

The dairy cattle man has been afforded an opportunity as never before to correlate grain feeding with pasture management and with milk production. He appreciates the relationship between grain mixtures and quality of hay in a better way than he did before. The hog man of today is more conscious of the value of course grains supplemented with proteins, minerals and vitamins in the production of a hog that will yield a Grade A carcass than he ever was before. The same can be said to be true of our beef cattle and sheep men and our poultry profitably to merchandise in volume the grains which are grown in Canada through the dairy cow, the bacon hog, the steer and poultry.

It has been clearly demonstrated that Canadian-grown grains can be used advantageously in the production of a quality product and, in anticipation of post-war markets, it becomes more obvious every day that if our Canadian products are to be sufficiently acceptable on a world market as to command a profitable price, these products must be of first quality. Furthermore, while in answer to the call the Ontario livestock man has demonstrated his potential power of production of considerable volume it is presumed to suggest that, in preparing to cater to profitable postwar markets, quality and continuity of supply should take precedence over quantity, and so there must needs be a continuity of supply of grains for feeding purposes. Seasonal production does not lend itself to continuity of supply of livestock products, and this possibly has particular reference to bacon, poultry and dairy products.

One reads with considerable concern about the depletion of fertility on Ontario farms and about the extent of soil erosion. Because of these alarming conditions, plans are being laid for the making of extensive soil surveys and soil testing, with the obvious objective of enabling more intelligent soil treatment. While artificial fertilizers can and do have a very important place in the production of crops, there still continues to be a first and foremost place for barnyard manure not simply straw that has been tramped down, but manure from livestock that has been fed grains, manure that is rich in plant nutrients as a result.

Mention has been made as to the imperative necessity to produce a quality product, and it has been stated that there has been sufficient demonstration that this can be done, but it can only be accomplished when our Canadian grains are fed to animals that have been bred for a specific purpose. Regardless of how well balanced a ration may be, it is not possible to produce a hog that will yield an A carcass if he is not of bacon type and conformation and at a proper weight when marketed, nor is it possible to have him ready for market at an age when the flesh will be sweet and tender, and at the same time have a desirable amount of back fat. It is not possible to realize a profitable return from a dairy cow that is not of dairy type as a result of a breeding program involving the use of desirable sires. It is not possible to produce a quality steer or lamb unless he has been bred for that purpose. It is not economically sound, nor will it ever be, to attempt to market our Canadian-grown grains through inferior live stock, and at this very time, because of the overseas demand for meat and meat products, there is afforded an opportunity to livestock men to profitably market inferior breeding stock. If it is disposed of at prevailing prices, and our efforts are concentrated on our better livestock, it presents an opportunity for our live-stock men, by helping other people who are hungry at the moment and who deserve food to help themselves with respect to profitable post-war livestock production. This is the time to dispose of the boarders, the undesirable breeders and otherwise unprofitable livestock. With further reference to a future livestock production program, this is the time to cull to the point where an investment in a good herd sire would be justified, when available at a non-inflated price and in this connection the application of good livestock management costs money.

No doubt there are many farmers who to-day are laying plans for future activities when it is expected that there will be available the necessary help, equipment and material to carry out these plans. Such plans involve expenditure, and it therefore would appear to be good business practice to take advantage of the opportunity to invest present surplus revenue in Victory Bonds, with the knowledge that this capital will be available when needed.

Lesson in Basic English

A Navy lieutenant at a South Sea island station undertook to give an old native a lesson in basic English. He pointed at a Marine and said "man." The native dutifully repeated "man."

That gave the volunteer teacher a thrill. He went on and pointed to a palm. "Tree", he announced. The native echoed, "tree". That certainly was progress.

Just then a plane roared overhead. The lieutenant thought he'd give the native the first chance this time. "What," he asked, pointing upward.

"I'm not sure," said the native, as he stood up and squinted at the plane overhead. "It looks like a PB 2Y, but it might be a B-24."

S.S. No. 4, Finch, is Fourth In Schoolground Improvement

Peterboro County has additional evidence of interest and proficiency in school ground improvement in the award of the J. E. Carter Trophy to S. S. No. 4 Harvey (Sandy Lake) with 95 points, in the 1944-45 Provincial Competition, conducted by the Ontario Horticultural Association.

Other trophy winners, tied for second place, are:

S. S. No. 3 Seymour, Northumberland County—86 points (Hon. P. M. Dewan Trophy); S. S. No. 2 Hagarty, Renfrew County, South—86 points (Ont. Hort. Ass'n. Trophy).

In announcing the results, the Association Secretary, J. A. Carroll, Toronto, expressed gratification on increasing interest in this annual programme feature, which this year included 270 schools, an increase of over 100%, in 15 local contests widely distributed from Bruce to Glengarry and Muskoka to Lambton. Mr. Carroll also congratulated Inspectors of rural schools, and those working with them, on the marked improvement in appearance of school grounds across the Province.

The judge, John F. Clark, Toronto commented: "This was the keenest competition I have been asked to score, and No. 4 Harvey the most finished entry we have seen in a Provincial contest. The second place has been difficult to decide, in that 2 schools are so closely matched it would be a pity to place either in 3rd position."

Soldiers Praise Sir Harold

Word that Field Marshal Sir Harold Alexander has been named the new Governor-General of Canada undoubtedly will be greeted by many Canadian soldiers with enthusiasm.

Anything but the spectacular type and not given to verbal extravagance Sir Harold has gained high regard through sheer ability and unswervinf devotion to the task in hand. The men who served under him, thousands of them Canadians, respected and trusted his leadership. He may not have had the personal touch of other commanders—he is truly a shy man—but there was never any doubt that lives entrusted in his care would not be expended unnecessarily. This, in itself, is the cue to a soldier's faith in his commander.

It is not necessary to review the brilliant military record of Canada's new Governor-General. In this war, the stamp on his skill has been placed on operations from Dunkirk, through North Africa, Sicily and Italy to the final defeat of the German forces in Southern Europe. The publicity accompanying his efforts has tended to be as reserved as Sir Harold himself for his personality is not colorful, his expressions anything but flamboyant.

Probably the closest he ever came to administering a well-deserved pat to his own straight back was at a press conference in Rome when war correspondents literally proded him into stating: "Possibly when this war is over, history will record this (the Italy) campaign as one of the most brilliant ever executed."

The men who served in that campaign and knew of the obstacles which had been overcome, the difficulties of terrain, of supply, of maintaining the battle when the bulk of supplies and reinforcements were being funnelled to the Second Front, knew there was no "possibly" about it. Sir Harold had been brilliant in his leadership, his planning and his execution.

For their new Governor-General, Canadians have a great soldier and a great man.—J.D.M.

This from an English paper:

"Well what are gladiators?"

HYDRO
RURAL SERVICE . . . WHEN?

To the Hydro,
Dear Sir,
I am writing to ask when am I going to get electricity brought to my farm. You've had my application for some time and I was told that it had been approved. The Hydro wires pass my farm. Why then is nothing done about it?
Please let me know if this matter has slipped your mind, or do I get electricity?
Yours truly,
John Rxxxxx
R.R. No. 6, xxxxx, Ontario

TO the writer of this letter and several thousand others who are in the same position, your Hydro can definitely say that your application for service certainly has not "slipped our mind." Everything that can be done is being done to serve as many new customers as soon as possible.

Even though many regulations have been relaxed, and the war in Europe is over, there is little, if any, sign of improvement in the shortage of labour and materials. The shortage of only one of the many parts needed to complete a service results in a delay. The labour and materials available are being used with extreme care and planning to serve as many new rural customers as quickly as possible.

To those applicants in areas where Hydro lines are still to be constructed, Hydro service will be made available as the supply of labour and materials improves. Already sufficient applications have been received which will require the construction of over 2,000 miles of line that cannot be undertaken in 1945. However, your Hydro is making every effort to complete by the end of 1945 all applications made in 1944 that have been officially approved by letter.

Your Hydro has done and is doing everything possible to extend electricity to essential rural services. The Hydro rural service that you are waiting for will be completed just as soon as the labour and material situation permits.

PTE HARRY CASSIDY RETURNS.
Pte Harry Cassidy, well-known Chesterville barber before signing up for Active Service in the early days of the war, is spending a few days in town visiting his mother, having arrived in Williamsburg at the week-end. Pte Cassidy served with the P. P.C.I.I. in the Sicily campaign and while going to that theatre aboard a crowded troop transport saw two ships blown to the bottom by torpedoes. After being wounded he was transferred to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regt. following a sojourn in England, and later saw action in Holland when the First Division was sent there from Italy. Just before VE Day he was in the fighting for the bridge at Appeldoorn which was blown by the Germans as Harry's company was about to cross.

Free Delivery of Honey Required in 15-Mile Zone

There is a new requirement in the WPTB order covering honey. Producers of honey are required to give free delivery of honey within 15 miles. For the purpose of this order, Canada is divided into two zones, zone 2 comprising British Columbia, the Maritimes and Northern and Eastern Quebec. All the rest of Canada is included in zone 1. The ceiling price for No. 1 white honey sold to consumers in one-pound containers (other than glass) is 23 cents per lb. Prices in zone 2 are slightly higher; and for grades other than No. 1 in both zones they are slightly lower. Specific ceiling prices are designated for honey sold to the trade by the case, sales to consumers in containers, and honey sold in bulk.

Scarcity of Modern Facilities Shown in Canadian Home Survey

Canadian farm women are handicapped at every turn in their struggle to keep their families and homes clean.

They lack properly equipped bathroom, bathtubs, built-in laundry tubs and washing machines high on the list of things they would most like to have.

These findings result from a poll of Canadian medium and low-cost homes, revealing a sad shortage of sanitary facilities in Canadian rural homes. Lever Brothers Limited, who conducted the survey, said findings are being given to government and other housing authorities as developed.

Key to household cleaning problem the survey indicates, lies in providing more running water and especially hot running water.

The survey was confined to farms of 200 acres or less. It is estimated that 70% of all Canadian farmers are in this class.

Connected with the running water shortage is the report that nearly half the village homes and three-quarters of the farm homes are without flush toilets.

Reason for the accent on bathroom equipment in future plans lies in the discovery that only one farmhouse in four has a regular bathtub. In cities and towns, where prevalence of plumbing might be expected to show a different picture, almost one family in five is still without a bathtub.

The laundry picture is also challenging. Only 21% of urban homes. 6 percent in villages and 2 percent on farms are equipped with stationary or built-in laundry tubs. Number of tubs of any kind with drains is just a point or two higher. That means the majority of Canadian women in all sections of the country do the weekly wash in tubs just like their grandmothers had.

Washing machines are in better supply. Almost seven-tenths of city and town families have them and a slightly greater number in villages. Farms lead with 76%, though naturally the scarcity of electric power results in a much higher priority of hand operated machines. Gasoline drives the washing machines in 11% of farm homes.

That few farm people who are without washing machines have separate wringers seems indicated by the figures showing one home in every five without one. Even at that rate wringers are more plentiful on farms than in villages or cities where they are absent from one home in every four.

Nearly all women have irons, and the number of electric irons is roughly in ratio to the availability of power. But husbands have fallen down in supplying ironing boards. 17% of city-town women, 11 percent in villages and 26 percent on farms have to do their ironing on the kitchen table-top.

Chinese Market Gardener Given Surprise Assistance

A Chinese market gardener, working alone and against difficulties on a five acre farm in the Holland Marsh area, received a very pleasant surprise when a party of about 45 farm service camp boys called on him unexpectedly and spent a whole evening cleaning up the weeds on his vegetable crops without payment. The Chinaman had no equipment except a hoe, and his farm had become very weedy. The boys noticed this, and decided to do their good deed. So one evening recently, after supper, they lined up in cadet formation shouldered their hoes, and marched to the Chinese gardener's place. As they passed the home of the chairman of the district growers' committee, he was sitting on the verandah, so they gave him a smart "eyes' right" salute.

On their arrival at the Chinaman's garden, they found him panic-stricken. He tried to stop them entering his property, protesting that he had no money. The boys firmly took him off to one side, and with hoes flying, did a commando job on his weed-infested gardens. Before dusk fell, they had cleaned every weed from between three and four acres of his crops of weeds, and as they formed up and marched away, they left behind a grinning and happy Chinese gardener who had benefited from their tangible expression of their desire to be of service.

Value of Herd Sire

The success or failure of any cattle breeder is largely determined by the bulls used. This does not mean that the owner of a few registered cows of medium quality should scour the country for a $1,000 bull, but if improvement is to be affected the bull must be superior to the cows says E. Van Nice, Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, Sask. By proper organization in most districts, artificial insemination offers the owners of small herds services of high class bulls which they could not afford to purchase. In the meantime many owners of good herds, large and small, will be purchasing bulls which may either improve or damage their herds.

If there is any sort of yard stick by which to determine the price a breeder can afford to pay for a herd sire, it is the number and general type of the cows to be bred. A real good bull will sire a calf worth more than a calf from the same cow by a medium or poor bull (and many registered bulls are of the latter class). The difference in value of such a calf at 12 or 18 months may easily be $50 in an average pure bred herd and in special herds $100 or more.

However, 20 calves at a $50 difference means that the good bull has made for his owner $1,000 more than the inferior bull could have done. Double the number of calves for a 40 cow herd and multiply by the number of years service the bull gives and the value of the sire soars to great heights. Perhaps a $300 bull would improve certain small herds while in other cases larger herds of excellent cows may demand the use of the best bulls available, with the price a secondary consideration. It should also be noted that the price may not indicate the value of a bull for some of the most famous bulls have been bought at comparatively low figures. The late James Douglas paid $710 for the Shorthorn bull Browndale and later refused $7,000 for him.

As the price does not always indicate the value of the bull and as so much depends upon a wise selection, an inexperienced breeder might do well to solicit the help of two or three honest friends qualified to assist in selecting a herd sire.

Farms for Veterans

There may have been a time when farming was a haphazard sort of business, operated by rule-of-thumb, but that's certainly not the case in 1945. And it is certainly not the case when it comes to the Veterans' Land Act. This important part of the machinery of rehabilitation is functioning at the present time, and will continue to function, with the clear purpose of seeing that the men who elect to turn from war to agriculture are the men who can make a success of it.

There was criticism voiced at the way this aspect was handled after the last war. This disappointment arose from the haste in establishing a large number of veterans on the land within 18 months of the end of the war. In this period, 19,000 men were placed on the land. It was also stated that some of the veterans of 1914-18 got land that was poorly suited to agriculture. And there was also the fact that men were placed on the land who were temperamentallly unsuited to the life. You have to have an aptitude for farming, just as you have to have an aptitude for being a doctor, a lawyer or a bookkeeper. You have to have the knack, and the skill for it.

Another advantage of the present land settlement scheme is the fact that this time there is a trained settlement staff. This was not the case after the last war.

Re-establishment of the veteran of this war is putting stress on the angle of vocational guidance. Look before you leap is the advice given by counsellors when the man discusses the problem of farming with them. They tell him what he'll be up against, they find out whether he's really going to like the life, and whether his wife will like the life The advantages and disadvantages of farm life are underlined, and the veteran is asked to see the picture in its true perspective.

The government will help the veteran to finance land, buildings, stock and equipment up to $6,000. The maximum amount that can be expended for livestock and equipment is $1,200. The veteran makes a down payment of 10 percent of the cost of the land and buildings in instalments which may be extended up to 25 years. The rate of interest on this is 3½ percent. The government absorbs the balance of the cost which is approximately 24 percent. In addition, if he has complied with the terms of the contract for 10 years the money which he obtained for equipment and livestock becomes an outright grant. After 10 years, or after the veteran has paid all his instalments, whichever is the longer period, the veteran is given the deed to the property.

But the government's interest in the veteran goes past the purely financial aspect of the situation. Personal counselling helps the man to know the type of farming he likes best—whether it be in wheat, fruit, livestock or any of the other phases of agriculture.

There is no intention of extending financial aid to veterans for establishment on land that is unsuitable for settlement purposes and the administrators of the Act are working in close co-operation with the federal and provincial departments of agriculture and Canadian agricultural schools in pursuance of this policy.

And loneliness, that bugbear of land settlement, is also receiving attention. It is the intention of those in charge to see that the veterans settle in communities that are well established, and where there is a reasonable standard of social services established.

The Longest-Lived Radio Family

The everyday affairs of one ordinary British family drew, during the European war years, and held, the interest and effection of people in many parts of the world. And still holds it. So that "Front Line Family", radio's longest-run daily serial, though no longer in the front line, continues to give BBC overseas listeners an intimate glimpse of the day by-day doings of "The Robinson Family". The programme celebrated its 1000th performance a month or two back.

This family was created by Alan Melville, in 1941. He and E. L. Bushnell (the latter "on loan" from the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation), dining in a restaurant during one of the Luftwaffe's onslaughts on London, divided their time between sitting at and diving under the table. In between bombs they discussed the concern felt throughout the Empire as to what was happening in Britain, how the average family was getting along. From this the two evolved a British middle class family whose hopes and anxieties and daily difficulties would be typical of British family life in wartime—the family Robinson. Father, from Yorkshire, Mother from Scotland, but both so long resident in London that, like their children, they feel themselves a part of it.

Melville wrote and produced the 15-minute daily episode of the Family-Robinson saga for the first 200 days of its microphone existence. He continued to write the script with John Richmond as producer, until he joined the RAF. Long before then, the fortunes of Mr. Robinson, "builder's merchant in a small way" by day and a member of the Home Guard at night; his wife who besides running the home was working at a Services Canteen in the evenings; their elder son, Dick, a full-time member of the National Fire Service, the younger Andy, in the RAF: and their only daughter, Kay, working in a munition factory, and likewise their neighbours, had won for themselves friends not only in all the countries of the Empire but in others also.

Melville, a bachelor and an only child himself, had invented a family so convincingly life-like that other families thousands of miles away, wrote letters to "Dear Mr. and Mrs. Robinson." Some sympathised with them in their problems, other critised their children's behaviour and offered advice, a few brought invitations to the family to "come and stay with us after the war".

Among the most remarkable compliments to this programme have been letters from people in enemy and enemy-occupied countries who risked the death sentence to tune in to the Robinsons.

Here is one from two American women who were interned in Italy:—"You are no doubt continuously being sent tons of fan mail. Seldom however, have you received, I feel, one more curious than this from two American ladies who, as enemy aliens in an enemy land, risked the death penalty for over four years in order to listen to 'Front Line Family'; who, even when bombs were falling and artillery shells whistling overhead, never missed a single instalment until the Germans blew up the city's entire light plant and there simply wasn't any more radio to listen to. It is difficult to tell you what the Robinson's have meant to me and my daughter during all this tragic time during which we as prisoners ourselves have lived through not only the horrors of war at close range, but revolutions and civil war as well. Your delightful English voices have indeed spelt for us peace and contentment even when you told of quite different things."

From liberated Normandy and Belgium similar letters have come.

So real has the family become to thousands of listeners that when Mrs. Robinson was ill once the BBC actually received telegrams threatening them with dire penalties if they let her die. Because of her fondness for "a nice cup of tea" many wellwishers have sent her little gifts of tea and sugar and other small presents.

In the early days of the war there was no lack of dramatic material for the serialised life of the five people who became known as "The Blitz Robinson Family", of the girl and the soldier who are to marry into it, and of the sixty or seventy other characters who come into contact with the family. With quieter times, their domestic life, their various training activities and war jobs and their limited amusements presented another view of wartime Britain.

Now despite Peace on one of the fronts, the Robinsons' doings still interest people on the other side of the world.

FOOD CONTAMINATED IN NUMEROUS WAYS

In connection with Mayor Robert Saunders' campaign for clean restaurants and sanitary handling of food in Toronto's eating places, it is interesting to note that the United States Public Health Service in 1943 issued a booklet entitled "From Hand to Mouth"—a story of food, flies, fingers and such.

The booklet—a message to owners and employees of eating establishment—reveals that "food poisoning" is rarely caused by eating food that has been poisoned. Rather, most cases of food poisoning are really food infections caused by germs. Someone handling the food or working in the kitchen manages to transfer the disease-germs to the "eats."

Food can be contaminated by unwashed hands, underdone meats, sores and boils on the persons of handlers, flies, dishes and silverware handled by a "carrier," sneezing, coughing and spitting. Milk, milk products and water, polluted at the source, may carry dangerous disease germs. Rats, flies and roaches also carry germs. When they feed, they pass the germs on.

Germs on food can cause typhoid fever, amebic dysentery, bacillary dysentery, septic sore throat, scarlet fever and diphtheria.

Improperly processed home-canned foods can cause botulism. Also, it is possible to contract trichinosis, a muscular disease, through the eating of partially cooked pork.

It is emphasized that food prepared for customers must first of all be clean, wholesome, free from spoilage and safe for human consumption. All perishable foods should be stored in a refrigerator at or below 50 deg. F.; all pork products should be thoroughly cooked.

Pastries should come from approved sources if they are not baked on the premises. Custard-filled pies and pastries such as eclairs, cream puffs and cream pies must be kept under cover and refrigerated at all times.

Germs are especially attracted to milk and eggs. All milk and milk products should come from approved sources and pasteurized products should be used wherever possible. Unless a special sanitary type of bulk dispenser is used, all fluid milk must be served in containers in which it is received.

Proper storage of food, drinks, containers, utensils, glassware, dishes and silverware is highly important. Also, says the booklet, there is no excuse for dirty dishes, glassware, silver, pots and pans and other cooking utensils. Proper scraping and plenty of hot water, proper washing and rinsing, and sanitary handling are the "musts" where dishwashing is concerned.

Here are 13 rules for food handlers

1. Use plenty of soap and hot water.
2. Keep your body and clothes clean.
3. Wash your hands after visiting the toilet.
4. Stay at home when you are sick.
5. Don't cough, spit, sneeze, or smoke near food or dishes.
6. Keep your fingers out of food and clean utensils.
7. Use only clean, wholesome food.
8. Beware of poisons.
9. Store all foods in clean, dry place.
10. Keep all perishables in the refrigerator.
11. Allow no dirty utensils or equipment to touch food.
12. Protect foods from flies, rats, roaches and other vermin.
13. Keep the premises spotless.

Hello Homemakers! Watch out or you'll cheat your family when you prepare garden vegetables for dinner. Maybe you have been tossing out the very parts that are best for you and yours, or losing precious health-boosters in the saucepan.

We have learned a lot about vegetable cookery from the scientists. Open pan-frying destroys the valusalt and pepper, 1 tbsp. grated onion, 2 chopped cooked eggs.

Soak red cabbage in salted water for 15 mins. Quarter, core, and cook until tender. Drain thoroughly and chop coarsely. Add remaining ingredients and combine well. Make very hot in a double boiler for serving.

GLEAMING SOULS

By Sir Henry Taylor

Such souls
Whose sudden visitations daze the world,
Vanish like lightning, but they leave behind
A voice that in the distance far away
Wakens the slumbering ages.

Morality without religion is a pleasant place to live in until the heavens grow dark and the storms begin to beat.—J. B. Shaw.
