Beckstead-Brock

An event of interest at the Church of the Holy Saviour, Waterloo, Saturday afternoon, was the wedding of Miss Audrey Olive Brock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Ralph Brock, 222 Pandora Cres., Kitchener, and Mr. Dale Fraser Beckstead, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross H. Beckstead, Williamsburg, Ont. Offiiciating was Canon J. N. H. Mills, assisted by Rev. R. L. Somers. The church was profusely decorated with white gladioli and white streamers, complemented by a background of ferns.

Wedding music was provided by St. John's Anglican Church choir.

The bride given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a Victorian gown of blush white satin. Satin rosettes edged the deep rounded neckline, inset with a net yoke. The bodice featured brief cap sleeves and the graceful skirt ended in a slight train. She wore long matching satin mitts and her finger tip veil fell softly from a visor headdress of folded satin, caught at the sides with satin rosettes. She carried a prayer book bound in white satin with shower of blue and white stephanotis and streamers.

Maid of honor was Miss June C. D. Brock, the bride's only sister. Her ice blue Victorian gown was designed with satin bodice tapering in points over the bouffant skirt of double silk net. Long satin mitts complemented the cap sleeves and her braided satin coronet headdress caught a matching blue net shoulder length veil. Her Victorian petal bouquet with cascade of stephanotis was fashioned of white gladioli, pale blue stephanotis and cornflowers and enhanced with royal blue ribbon petals.

Bridesmaids were Miss Doreen Beckstead, only sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Jean Thompson, wearing ice blue satin formal gowns designed exactly like the maid of honor's. Their headdresses were of folded satin with shoulder veils and they wore long net mittens. Blue tones predominated in their Victorian petal bouquets of stephanotis and gladioli.

All cousins of the bride were the four flower girls, Misses Colleen Ann Brock, Vivian Pann, Lynne Fox and Beryl Brock. Their dainty floor-length Victorian dresses were of pastel pink organdy and their tiny round ruffled hats of pink organdy were enhanced with blue satin ribbon They carried pale pink and white miniatures of the senior attendants' bouquets, tufted with deep rose ribbon petals.

Best man was Mr. Glen McIntosh of Williamsburg, and ushering were Mr. Robert F. Wooley of Galt and Mr. William ohn Brock, only brother of the bride.

The reception followed at the home of the bride. Receiving, her mother wore a shirred gray satin gown with matching hat, pink accessories and a corsage of butterfly roses. The bridegroom's mother, assisting, chose a dove gray crepe gown with draped skirt, purple accessories and mauve orchid corsage.

For travelling, the bride donned a delphinium blue wool suit with long jacket, spiced with blue and gold buttons, smart corded black silk hat and bag and black suede gloves and shoes. A corsage of red roses and stephanotis completed her ensemble. On their return from Vancouver. Victoria, Seattle, Banff and Calgary they will reside in Williamsburg.

Elliott-Johnston

The wedding of Eva Beatrice Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elzie Johnston of Winchester Spgs., and George Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rowatt M. Elliott, of Winchester, was solemnized at 2.30 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Wallace MacKinnon of Knox Presbyterian Church, officiated.

The home was decorated with gladioli and ferns. Miss Ruth McIntosh of Ottawa cousin of the bride, played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Lloyd Dixon of Winchester, and the best man was Gordon Elliott of Ottawa, brother of the groom.

The bride wore a floor length gown of white nylonette over brocaded satin, with fitted bodice and peplum skirt. Her fingertip veil was arranged from a coronet of lily of the valleys, and she carried a obuquet of red roses. Her ornaments were a silver locket and bracelet, the gifts of the bridegroom.

At the reception which followed, the bride's table was centered with a two-tier wedding cake and lit by tall white tapers. Serving were three cousins of the bride, Laura Johnston of Belleville, Ruth McIntosh of Ottawa and Eva Johnston of Winchester Springs. Later Mr. and Mrs. Elliott left on a motor trip to Toronto and Timmins. For tarvelling the bride wore a burgundy crepe dress with black accessories. They will reside in Winchester.

Guests from out of town included Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Elliott and Archie Rice from Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. F. Gilmour, DeKalb Jct., N. Y.; Miss Muriel Black, Morrisburg; Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Elliott, Miss Helen Elliott, Miss Norma Elliott, Miss Ella Parker and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Dixon, all of Winchester; Mr. and Mrs. Walter McIntosh, Winchester Springs.

Frank G. Hickey

His many friends here learned with deep regret of the sudden death at Chicago, on Monday of this week. Mr. Hickey had left for his home on Tuesday of last week after a visit with his brother, Arthur E. Hickey of this place, and with a sister, Mrs. G. A. Montgomery also of Morrisburg.

He was in fair health, although suffering from a heart ailment for some time, but the end came suddenly and unexpectedly.

The late Mr. Hickey was born at the family estate "Ingleside", Aultsville, and was in his 63rd year. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John S. Hickey and was educated at Morrisburg. Since attaining his majority he had lived in the United States, and had spent the past 20 years in Chicago. Lately he had been employed with the War Surplus Board there. His brother and sister in Morrisburg are the only survivors.

Upon reciving word of his sudden death, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hickey left on Tuesday for Chicago, where the funeral service will be held. Interment will be at Ingleside, Aultsville.

New Banking Hours On Saturdays

Notices are being displayed at the Bank of Montreal announcing a change in banking hours on Saturday mornings, and customers are requested to do their business from 9 to 11 o'clock, instead of from 9.30 to noon, as formerly. The change becomes effective this Saturday.

Briefly the idea behind the change is to give the bank's staff a better break on their weekend time. The old idea that bankers worked only from 10 to 3—to the envy of most people—has long been exploded. This was never true, for much remains for the banker to do after his doors are closed.

With the great burden of work on banking personnel, which developed during the war and which has carried into the peace, it has been necessary for bank staffs to work much overtime for a number of years. It is frequently the case on Saturdays, with the traditional public closing at noon, for the staff to be obliged to work on until anywhere from 1 to 3 p.m., which, to say the least, goes hard on plans for a Saturday afternoon outing, or a weekend's fishing.

Customers as a whole will be glad to see this relief for the people serving them at the bank, who will thus be helped to a little more leisure time.

Mrs. A. Whitteker

A large gathering of relatives and riends paid their last tribute of repect to the memory of Mrs. Arthur Whitteker, by attending her funeral, which was held on Saturday afternoon from her home near Williams burg to St. Peter's Lutheran Church Williamsburg.

Spending her whole life in the vicinity where she was born, Mrs. Whitteker passed away early Thursday morning at her home where she was stricken with paralysis one week previous to her death.

Mrs. Whitteker was a loving wife and mother and her quiet and kindly disposition had won for her the deep affection of a wide circle of friends who learned with sincere regret of her death.

Mrs. Whitteker, in her 66th year, was born at the Barkley homestead in the Sixth Concession of Williamsburg, a daughter of the late Herman Barkley and his wife, Martha McIntosh, her maiden name being Martha Enodia Barkley. She was one of a family of seven children, five girls and two boys. Of these one sister is deceased.

Left to mourn her death are her husband, Arthur Whitteker, two daughters, Mrs. Cecil Hanson (Ada) of Strader's Hill, and Mrs. Hubert Casselman (Alice) of Winchester Springs; four sons, Garnet and Ross at home, and Lloyd and Paul Whitteker of Williamsburg; thirteen grand children; three sisters, Mrs. Charles Whitteker (Emma) of Morrisburg; Mrs. Wm. McNair (Sarah) and Miss Ada Barkley, both of Elma; and two brothers, Isaac Barkley of Oshawa and Henry Barkley of Williamsburg.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Arthur Conrad, pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Ottawa, in the absence, through illness, of the pastor of the church, Rev. G. Innes. Rev. Mr. Conrad based his remarks from John. 11: 25, "Jesus said unto her 'I am the Resurrection and the Life' " and Revelation 4: 20 "Behold I stand at the door and knock".

During the service, Mrs. George Innes and Miss Virgie Merkley rendered a duet "Close to the Heart of God", and the hymns used were "Rock of Ages" and "Abide With Me". Miss Ethel Gordier presided at the organ. Interment was in Williams burg cemetery.

The pall bearers were Lee Casselman, Jason Whitteker, Fred Cunningham, Wm. Casselman, Wm. Empey, Cephas Smyth.

Many beautiful floral tributes surrounded the casket, a silent testimony to the love and esteem in which the deceased was held.

Dillabough-Bowman

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Morrisburg, on Monday, September 1st at 2 p.m. when Dorothy Irene, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bowman, Morrisburg, was united in marriage to Dwight Campbell, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Dillabough of Chesterville, Ontario.

The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion with beautiful summer flowers. The ceremony was solemnized by Rev. F. L. Howald, the pastor, and the wedding music was played by Mrs. F. L. Howald.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor length picture gown of white taffeta and her fingertip veil was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. She wore long lace mittens and carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath.

The bride was attenled by her sister, Miss Reatha Bowman, who chose a pale blue floor length gown and carried an arm bouquet of pink gladioli. The best man was Douglas Dillabough, brother of the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in Castleman Memorial Hall for the immediate families and close friends of the bride.

The table was centered with a 3-tier wedding cake and the hall was nicely decorated with gladioli and summer flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Dillabough left on a motor trip to Wesport and other points west, the bride travelling in a suit of pale blue gabardine with black accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Kingston, Ont.

Prior to her marriage, the bride received many beautiful wedding gifts. She was also tendered a kitchen shower by the ladies of St. Paul's Church.

THANK YOU -

The editor was pleasantly surprised this week to receive from Mr. Frank Powell, of St. Catharines, a large basket of the biggest juiciest peaches it has ever been our pleasure to sink a tooth into. The peaches are we are told, of the Vimy variety. Thanks again, Frank, they were delicious. The only thing we can think of which we would like better, is a couple of full-grown trees, bearing the same variety.

We are still quite unable to make sense of the customs regulation which requires the destruction of seized cigarettes when they might be put to excellent service in veterans' hospitals and similar institutions.

Not all the forest fires can be due to campers' or settlers' carelessness. Lightning may easily be responsible for a good many of them. And lightning is notoriously difficult to control.

Valley OF REVENGE

BY

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER III: Juanita learns that her benefactor is actually "El Caballero Rojo" (The Red Cavalier), known throughout the countryside for his good deeds for the poor, but wanted by the sheriff for taking the law into his own hands. He would not promise to return for the girl who begs to go with him but rides away alone to seek Garvin.

CHAPTER IV

And now the red-headed avenger had arrived in Paisano Valley. And as if it had been a mocking greeting to him he had been faced with evidence of more of Garvin's ruthless work as soon as his eyes had been set on the emerald rangeland.

Night had come when Michael Valdez drew his blue roan to a halt on a small rise just above the twinkling lights in a huddle of adobe dwellings. The whole town of Luna Roja, he saw at once, was built about the sprawling white Garvin place, which he recognized from Juanita's decription. The town itself was at the northern end of the valley on the edge of Canyou Rijo. From there Garvin could keep an eye on activities anywhere in the valley.

As he sat staring down at the sinister town, no one would have recognized the wandering vaquero who had first ridden into the valley that morning. Tall and straight, he sat his horse in his gaudy Spanish apparel, hat off, and with the first rays of the moon glinting on red hair where the morning sun had shown on black.

For only moments he paused to make reconnaissance. Then, with deliberation, he loosened the scarlet handkerchief from around his neck and drew up its folds over his face until only his dark eyes showed, hard and bitter.

With freshly loaded six-guns and Winchester carbine, red-headed and scarlet-maskedd, like some panoplied knight of the Middle Ages, he rode down toward the town of Luna Roja. In the moonlight a silver-decorated specter moving on the wings of the wind—one that none dared challenge.

He had not ridden into the town's main street when suddenly out of the darkness a mounted man sprang into the road. He swung his horse across the narrow trail which led into the long street, blocking it.

But El Cielo had been long and patiently trained for just such an encounter as this. With amazing suddenness the mount reared. One of Valdez' arms went out, the hand holding something that for a moment showed crimson in the faint moonlight—another great scarlet neckerchief. The neckerchief whipped about the pistol in the astounded guard's hand. It was torn from his grasp and, before he knew what was happening, the barrel of the pistol that had jumped into the red-haired man's other hand crashed against the guard's head. He slumped crazily from his saddle into the dust of the trail.

Valdez lifted his reins as he dropped the handkerchief-covered gun of the outlaw guard into his pocket, and the blue roan spurted ahead.

"Madre de Dios!" gritted El Cabellero Rojo. "Strangers must certainly get a cordial greeting in this town!"

He swung into the street and noted that at the edge of the town were the inevitable 'dobe shacks that trimmed the outskirts of all such small Western towns. Most of the houses were dark, for the peons must be up and at work by daybreak, and usually sought their beds early.

Cautiously El Caballero slowed down before the white-plastered walls of the Garvin pace. Dismounting in the blackest shadows some distance from the sprawling, pretentious dwelling in the center of its patio, he trailed El Cielo's reins and stole toward the gate facing the street.

Garvin's house and patio were completely enclosed by high walls, to which only the big gate facing the street, and a smaller one in the rear, gave entry. And the four blockhouses which Juanita had described gave the whole place the effect of a fortified castle.

From one corner blockhouse came sounds of raucous singing and the twanging of a guitar, punctuated by hoarse laughter. No one was in sight.

It looked like a good chance to slip in through the gate, for El Caballero Rojo could make out in the dim light that it had not been locked, but stood ajar a few inches. But even as his eerie, glittering figure reached it, a man leaped out to block it.

Like a silver-decorated wraith, the masked man dived at the guard. Instantly his stronger fingers found the fellow's throat and cut off his warning shout. Once more the red-headed avenger's pistol barrel cracked on bone, and once more a man sank to the ground and lay quiet.

With noiseless footsteps El Caballero slid into the patio.

Across the courtyard was Garvin's two and a half story house. A swift glance told Michael Valdez that the one-story addition at one end of the house was Garvin's office, or "bank" as the land hog preferred to call it. And a light fanning out from the one window facing the courtyard announced Raymond Garvin's presence there.

The time had come!

Michael Valdez faded into the first open doorway in sight with no more stir than would have been made by a breath of night He found himself in a long corridor, and at its end saw a light shining through a transom from the office door that opened into the corridor.

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

Everything Against This Marriage

"DEAR ANNE HIRST: We want to get married, but my boy friend hasn't any money. He has re-enlisted in the Navy. I want to follow him until he is out, and I can't see waiting three years to be with him.

"We met five months ago, and we love each other. We've had our quarrels (I have a hot temper) but we both suffered the same torture when we were apart.

"I met his family and we became close friends. But now his father has found out how he feels about me! He blew up, and said he was not to get serious with any girl because we are too young and he must make his choice. I am 18, he is 21. He chose me.

"My parents like him, but don't want us to marry now because they think I'd be too unhappy, struggling to get along. My people are well-to-do, and I've never had to know the value of money. But I can't see throwing aside something we both want, and that's each other.

"I don't want to make my parents unhappy, but how can I make them understand that we love each other and know it's right?

THEY UNDERSTAND

Your parents know you two love each other. All they are trying to do is to persuade you to wait to marry until you are ready for it.

You are not ready for marriage now. Even if there were enough money to start on, you admit you would not know how to make it go far. It takes a long, long time for a girl who has been indulged to learn how to do without those indulgences. It means practicing economy, living within a prescribed budget, sacrificing all those luxuries you have taken for granted since you were born. Now, so in love, you are certain you could manage. But you have no idea what it would mean, what it would do to your disposition, even to your love.

And you have a hot temper! You cannot help hurting even this lad you love so much. Don't you realize that an uncontrolled temper can wreck the best of marriages? If you haven't learned restraint now, how could you learn it under the pressure of daily association, plus the restrictions of a meager income?

You have committed one very foolish act. You have allowed your fiance to alienate himself from his own people. You should have been the one to support his father's objections, to realize that he is only acting for his son's permanent happiness. This boy has three years ahead of him in the Navy before he can even start his chosen career. To burden him, with a young, spoiled wife might wreck that career—and wreck this marriage first.

You see, my young friend, you only want Each Other.

You will need the help and moral support of both his family and your own, if your marriage is to succeed at all. Now show how mature you are: Break the engagement, spend the next few years learning how to be a poor man's wife (and all that means) and cooperate with those wiser ones who are giving you the only advice that good parents can honestly offer.

Marriage will be all the sweeter for waiting.

Strange as it seems, parents often do know best. If you are resentful, ask Anne Hirst (at Box A, room 421, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto) how to understand.

Just As Good As Macaroon Crumbs

When a delectable dessert you wish to make calls for crumbled macaroons and you have no macaroons, you can make it just the same. "Macaroon" crumbs are made this way: Mix one cup of dry bread crumbs—they shouldn't be too fine—with one-half cup of sugar and two teaspoonfuls of almond extract. Spread this mixture in a pan and let it brown in a slow oven. When cool, break it up into crumbs and use as you would crumbled macaroons. The difference cannot be detected in any dish in which they are used.—E. M. E. in the Christian Science Monitor.

Muscular tension is believed to be one of the major causes of light sleeping.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Should one begin a social letter with an excuse for delay in writing?

A. No; one should plunge immediately into what he has to say, and if illness has been the cause, just make casual mention of it without too many details.

Q. Who pays for the gowns worn by the bridesmaids?

A. The bridesmaids buy their own gowns, unless the bride is wealthy and asks that they wear gowns that cannot be worn again.

Q. Should the hostess try to finish eating before the guests?

A. No; the hostess should always eat slowly, so that she does not finish before her guests do.

Q. If you have been invited to the home of a friend and through oversight have not been introduced to some of the other guests, should you call this to the hostess' attention?

A. No; it is much better to save the hostess from embarrassment by joining in the conversation and laughter, and it is quite likely that you will soon be talking to everyone present.

Q. Should one leave at once when visiting a friend in a hospital and another visitor enters?

A. Yes, leave at once when another visitor or the doctor enters.

Q. When should coffee be served at an informal meal?

A. Coffee is served at the table either during or after the dessert course.

Use And Abuse Of Wealth

Proverbs 11:24-27; 16:8; Ecclesiastes 5:10-11; James 5:1-6

GOLDEN TEXT — Better is a little with righteousness than great revenues without right. — Proverbs 16:8.

On a smaller scale and in a more primitive way the Israelites of old were confronted with all the problems of character and conduct that vex and perplex the more highly organized nations of today.

Next to the problem of establishment of peace are the problems of labor—keeping people working under fair conditions and with good living standards; and of wealth—keeping the power of great wealth under control in relation to the rights and interests of all.

So many problems in these spheres remain unsolved that we are apt to fail to realize the great progress, both in relation to labor and in relation to wealth, that has been made within the memory of many now living. It is not so long since labor was regarded as a "commodity" to be bought, like any other commodity, in the cheapest market, under a competition for jobs that in times of unemployment was bitterly keen. Then came recognition of labor, and the demand for a "living wage" became so insistent that by now reference to a standard of living is a stressed factor in wage negotiations and contracts.

Similar progress has been made in enforcing recognition of the relationships and responsibilities of wealth. In the days when labor was a "commodity," wealth was largely immune from governmental control and from any sense of responsibility. The prevalent conception was that a man's wealth was his own, to do with as he pleased. Today we recognize not only that wealth has social obligations, but that society itself is a basic factor in the acquisition.

From a Christian standpoint the obligations of wealth are simple and direct. What a Christian has is not his own, but is held in stewardship, subject to the will of God. That is the ideal set forth in the New Testament, and the truer the Christian the more nearly will he attain it in the practical use of what he possesses.

Corn Root System Seven Miles Long

There's more to a field of growing corn than meets the eye, especially during these days of "corn weather time" when the cornfields put on a "Jack-and-the-beanstalk" performance.

Some scientific observations on corn's remarkable capacity to grow quickly were reported by Dr. T. A. Kiesselbach, well-known agronomist.

Corn, for example, on an average July day grows about two and a half inches every 24 hours, but if conditions are exceptionally good it will grow as much as four inches a day.

University research has shown that corn grows exactly as much during the day as at night, contrary to a general notion that it does most of its growing at night.

Corn, on the average, rises from a height of 30 inches to about 100 inches during the four week July 5 to August 5 "corn weather season," a rate of growth which is one of the greatest per day of any crop grown in the cornbelt.

During its first week above the ground the corn plant has about 15 square inches of leaves. At the end of eight weeks of growth it has 1,400 square inches of leaves, or more than enough to cover an ordinary card table.

The corn plant draws its moisture from a vast fibrous root system which when the plant reaches maturity is over seven miles long if all of them were placed end to end; and the roots run six feet below the surface.

About half of the corn plant's life is expended before it reaches the silking stage; and the other half is consumed in developing and maturing the ears.

"Ideal corn weather" should include plenty of moisture in the soil surrounding the corn plant, and hot dry weather with temperatures averaging between 90 and 100 degrees during the day.

These conclusions, Dr. Kiesselbach points out, are based on corn grown at the university's agronomy farm and are applicable to corn grown in the cornbelt states.

Comfort for Cattle

Cattle cars are becoming as comfortable, almost, as Pullmans. At any rate, they now have antifriction roller-bearing journal boxes and the latest sorts of spring underframes and air brakes, and they make it possible to cut the former travel time from range to market in half.

That is as it should be. Nothing can be too good for the gentle creatures that provide us with beef-steak, if and when we can afford it. —New York Times.

FAIRTIME HIGHLIGHTS

by Your Ful-O-Pep Reporter

The crowds at the Canadian National Exhibition this year broke records in more ways than one. As your Ful-O-Pep reporter roamed through the throngs he rapidly acquired the knack of spotting the out-of-town visitors. The non-residents of Toronto seemed much more at home in the Fair Grounds than the city folk. This isn't really surprising when one remembers that over 250 fairs and exhibitions are held every year in the small towns of Ontario. As a result, the small town and rural sightseers found their way around the Exhibition Grounds with the air of old veterans, whereas the city man in many cases had the bewildered mien of a tourist.

The Teen Town booth proved a popular rendezvous for the younger set who, on the whole, seemed more interested in the cultural exhibits than the glitter of the Midway—and glitter there was a-plenty along this popular boulevard!

The livestock was of prime interest to many of the out-of-town visitors. The competition was keen in all classes, and such top-notch entries as the Ayrshire bull, Bracheid Barr Imperial, owned by A. J. Leidman & Sons of Caledonia, provided real eye-appeal for the crowd.

The livestock men, as always, talked shop nearly twenty-four hours a day, and many bewailed the fact that Ful-O-Pep feed is not more plentiful. Your reporter did a little missionary work in this line, and pointed out the fact that the quality of this feed is not being lowered to meet the demand, and, as a result Ful-O-Pep is, at times, still a little difficult to obtain. It was also pointed out that production is being stepped up as rapidly as is possible without affecting the quality.

From the Midway to the most lavish industrial exhibit, the general public was treated to salesmanship of the highest order. Each exhibitor made a real effort to lure the public to his particular location, and, once there, to sell the prospect.

In this line, some free samples were offered as a come-on, but not nearly in the profusion of yesteryear. The adults complained about the scarcity of free samples generally, but the youngsters had a "field day" acqiring everything from paper cups to samples of soap flakes, which seemed to satisfy the young looters. Actually the soap flake samples were scarcely sufficient to properly launder a woman's small handkerchief.

The kiddies, as well as their elders, seemed to be price-conscious, and patronized such features as the Nickel Arcade where battery after battery of electric cranes operated for five cents. There the lucky youthful operator could pick up a valuable prize; failing that he was assured of a claw full of candy. The funny mirrors and magic carpet were additional "musts" on the youngsters' hit parade.

Children's Day proved to many of the concessionaires that buyer-resistance is considerably more than just a phrase. The children shopped around for the best buys, and the operators who failed to reduce prices on this eventful occasion found themselves with a scarcity of customers. In short order the youthful horde forced the neglectful concessionaires to post special Childrens' Day prices.

If what we saw at the C.N.E. is a true indication of the trend of the times, it seems certain that the buyers' market we have heard of for so long is truly just around the corner.

A Real Champion, owned by A. G. Leidman & Sons of Caledonia, drew a throng of admirers at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The Difference

Jimmy and Bobby were in beds side by side in the children's hospital, and the visiting hour had just passed.

"Ah, you big sissy!" Jimmy said. "Crying because your mummy's gone away!"

"I'm no' crying for my mummy," Bobby answered. "I'm crying because ma wee dog's died."

"Well, my granny's died," answered Jimmy, "and I'm not crying."

"Maybe you hadna your granny since she was a wee pup," Bobby sobbed out.

Electric Typewriter

A new electric typewriter is now ready for production by a company in the United States. The new machine is the result of more than 20 years of continuous research. Thousands of electric typewriters were produced in the nineteen twenties but the engineering techniques then known made the machines too expensive and too cumbersome. Their manufacture was discontinued, but research was not.

Not Done With Mirrors

The court waxed hot. "Sir," stormed the defense lawyer, "you have admitted you were seated on the right side of the passenger coach where you couldn't see an extra track. Will you please explain to this jury how you can swear the line was double-tracked?"

"Well," meekly answered the witness, "I could look across the aisle and through the coach windows. I saw a train whiz by occasionally, and took it that there was either a track under it or else this railroad had some mighty good railroaders."

Kitchener Residents, Roy Karcher and sons, Donald, Leonard and Bruce, appear highly engrossed with this tractor at the C.N.E. There appears little doubt that this exhibitor won the family vote of approval.

1948 Car Features Comfortable Interior

Silhouettes will be lower, achieved by dropping the height slightly and widening the body somewhat. Lines will be smoother, and front ends simpler except for more massive bumpers (on the rear also) to bring the eye down.

There will be a tendency to shorten body lengths a little because of compaints that cars are not fitting in garages. Much more glass will be used, so that pillars will be narrowed and blind spots eliminated, says Newsweek.

In body interiors the target is living-room comfort and atmosphere. Front seats, getting wider for ten years, will add a little more space. Air conditioning will be installed on the more expensve cars.

Mechanically, the biggest change will be elimination of the gear shift, with several companies planning to offer this feature in their '48 models. Engines will be shorter, perhaps through wider use of V-type models, the object being to cut down the length of the hood and bring front and back seats forward, cradling passengers between the two axles for a smoother ride.

Irish moss found in the waters off the North Atlantic coast is used in puddings, medicines, cosmetics and lotions.

TAKE NO CHANCES with coffee. Insist on Maxwell House. It's an extra-delicious blend of coffees that is Radiant-Roasted to develop all its extra-rich, full body.

Scores of nations invite you to see how they live and work and play. The world's finest music . . . advanced techniques of agriculture, Education and Science . . . beauty and art and industry are at the C.N.E. And there's fun, sports, fireworks and thrills for everyone in this world-famous exhibition.

Today we Live in a Greater Canada

Ours Today— the POWER of a hundred million men!

TODAY CANADA is producing far more electrical power than ever. Water power installations are 25% greater than before the war! Now they total over 10 million h.p.—furnishing energy equal to that of more than 100,000,000 workers.

Our development of that power—in which we rank second in the world—made it possible for us to become one of the most important of manufacturing countries, with vastly increased opportunities in every field of activity.

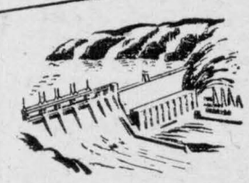

Yet our present installations, tremendous as they are, represent only 20% of our recorded resources!

With long distance transmission of electricity, water power became a dominant influence on Canadian development. The 18-mile line between St. Narcisse and Three Rivers in 1897 was the first high-transmission line in the British Empire.

After the turn of the century the advance was rapid. Greatest industrial user of electrical power was pulp and paper. Water power was the basis of its tremendous development as it became Canada's greatest peace-time industry.

With the war, aluminum became the biggest user, taking one-quarter of all electric energy generated in Canada. Greatest wartime development was mighty Shipshaw on the Saguenay, where the power generated is greater than that at Boulder Dam.

"UNSURPASSED OPPORTUNITIES"

KNOWLES BAILEY, after becoming thoroughly experienced in the wholesale tobacco business, started his own firm in a Toronto basement with one helper, twelve years ago. By his organizing ability, enthusiasm and plenty of hard work, he has built up a four-million-dollar business with 100 employees, 4 warehouses, sales offices throughout Canada and two factories.

MR. BAILEY says: "Twelve years ago I was sure there was no better place than Canada to start a business. I'm surer than ever today. Today, more than ever before, Canada offers unsurpassed opportunities for young men to turn their energy and enthusiasm into successful careers."

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

By Gwendoline P. Clarke

It is Monday and Niece Joy has just left to catch the early morning bus on the first lap of her journey to New Brunswick where she will presently be working with the V.O.N. And almost everyone says to her "Why in the name of wonder are you going to New Brunswick?" Sounds like the end of the world, doesn't it?

It is two weeks now since our niece arrived and in all that time —and for a week before—we have not had so much as one cool day. But even at that we have been fortunate as the severe storms that have struck other districts have not hit us at all. True, one storm last week was a little noisy but I haven't heard that it did any damage. No, the worst we have had to contend with has been heat and humidity — and that's plenty! In this welter of heat there was one night however when we were really cool and comfortable. That was the night we went to Niagara. Daughter and her two cousins were staying there for a couple of days and for the sake of the drive Partner, Bob and I went down to bring two of them home. Of course we stayed to see the illuminations which none of us had seen before—and which, incidentally, I don't mind if I never see again. When several lights in different colours were played on the Falls at the same time it was so artificial all it did was remind me of velvet draped over stands on a dry goods counter. But I did think it was lovely when ordinary beams of white lights were thrown over the entire Falls, it showed them up to perfection, not unnatural at all but more as if the falling water was caught in silver moonbeams.

Well, it looks as if it is Exhibition time again and from the crowds that are attending it one would think that half the people in the province were waiting at the gates to get in. Bob and niece Joy were there on the opening day and John was there Saturday night but Partner and I have not yet made up our minds whether we want to go or not. Certainly the weather will have to change before we can make the grade—anyway I guess the "Ex" will carry on all right without us. That being so there is no need to make hard work out of pleasure. Moreover from what Bob tells us a day at the "Ex" is a pretty expensive outing this year. Other years, when tired of wandering, it was always a joy and a relief to sit down quietly and listen to the band. Now the chairs are roped off and one must pay a quarter for the privilege of sitting. In fact any added attraction, other than advertising, must be paid for, and it costs two dollars to drive in with your car.

But then these extra charges are not surprising if one stops to think of all the construction work and remodelling that has been going on since the war. Remember what it costs at home to even build a new chicken-coop, then look at all the lumber that has been used for seating accommodation along the water front, to say nothing of what will be needed for the grandstand, and we can understand pretty well why the prices have jumped. Somebody has to pay and since it is the public who wants the exhibition it is naturally the public that foots the bill—but to what extent depends on the individual.

Glory be—the weather-man has just predicted cooler weather for tomorrow! I feel better already.

Missus! Missus!

The old farmer was making his will: "I leave all my brass, house and stocks to my wife," he said.

"Your wife's name?" queried the lawyer.

The farmer thought hard, but had to admit he couldn't remember.

"Well, shout upstairs as if you were calling her," suggested the lawyer.

The farmer hobbled to the door, opened it, and roared: Missus! Missus!"

That Little Beetle Can Haul Big Load

A French scientist who once set out to measure the strength of insects determined that a beetle can draw 40 times its own weight. That means, according to Coronet, that if a beetle were the size of a cart horse and its strength proportionately as great, it could haul something like 100,000 pounds.

The pyramids are only about 450 feet high, and the highest building in the world is 1,250, a little more than 200 times the height of a six-foot man, but—the termite nests of Africa are a thousand times the height of the little insects that build them. The maggot of a little black fly has been seen to jump out of a box four inches deep. If a man could jump like that, he would be able to leap to the roof of an eight-storey building without a running start. The flea does better. It can jump 200 times its own length, which for a man would be more than a thousand feet.

Surest Method

"Did you order your silverware by mail?" asked the first recent bride.

"Well," replied the other, "I sent out sixty-five wedding invitations to out-of-town relatives, if that's what you mean."

Some Good Drivers Don't Observe Rules Of Safe Driving

Who causes the majority of accidents — wild, reckless, drunken drivers? Not according to Arthur Rowan, in charge of the accident recording division of the Ontario Department of Highways, who explained that "motorists who consider themselves good drivers because they have never had an accident and assume they never will have one, contribute greatly to the volume of highway traffic accidents."

Referring to interviews he had had with hundreds of motorists involved in accidents, Mr. Rowan said that practically all considered themselves good drivers. They told him their accidents happened when they were driving in the same manner as they had time and time again without mishap. But investigation proved they were not observing the rules of safe driving.

Rather than "carelessness" which he said was a catch-all term, Mr. Rowan attributed the basic cause of most car accidents to inattention, poor judgment, and lack of understanding of the requirements of safe driving and safe walking.

He thought that one of the most important rules for safe driving was to anticipate danger in time to be prepared for it. For instance, it was a safe practise, he explained, to slow down before reaching an intersection, by taking the foot off the gas and placing it in position on the brake pedal. This reduced the "re-action time" in event of an emergency. He also advised adopting the habit of slowing down when passing parked cars, as many accidents were caused by pedestrians stepping without warning into the path of a moving vehicle. Finally, all drivers should know thoroughly and should observe at all times the traffic rules and regulations.

Record "Fall"

The Central Air Club of Soviet Russia announced that a new Soviet parachute jump record of 11,200 meters (about 36,960 feet) was establshed by Lieut. Col. V. G. Romanyuk.

The announcement said that Colonel Romanyuk, who has made 1,576 jumps, was in the air 18 minutes and 40 seconds during the drop.

Resort Tragedy Averted As 9-Year-Old Boy Rescues Friend

WINS DOW AWARD

GERARD HOGUE OF STE. ANNE DU LAC, QUE.,

saves older boy from drowning

Ste. Anne du Lac, a summer resort about 250 miles from Montreal, was the scene of a near-tragedy one day a few weeks ago. Several youngsters were enjoying a swim in Ste. Anne Lake when suddenly someone on the nearby pier shouted, pointing to one of the swimmers who was thrashing about in the water — obviously in trouble.

The gallant young rescuer sped through the water as he saw the drowning boy disappearing beneath the surface.

SWIMMER SUFFERS CRAMPS

Floundering helplessly was 16-year-old Jean-Marc Daoust, unable to swim because of severe cramps. Then, as spectators gasped, he disappeared under the surface, with one arm only staying above the water.

Young Gerard Hogue, another swimmer, sped to the drowning youth's assistance with strong, fast strokes. The victim, however, was panic-stricken . . . and it wasn't until Hogue had spent nearly all his own strength that he was able to subdue the older boy and bring him safely to shore. After 15 minutes of artificial respiration, Daoust regained consciousness.

Almost exhausted, Hogue brought the limp form of his friend to the edge of the pier. Both were helped by a spectator.

HEROISM RECOGNIZED

The gallantry and presence of mind displayed by 9-year-old Gerard Hogue of Ste. Anne du Lac, Quebec, are worthy of great praise. We are proud to honour this young hero through the presentation of The Dow Award.

THE DOW AWARD is a citation for outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $100 Canada Savings Bond. Winners are selected by the Dow Award Committee, a group of editors of leading Canadian daily newspapers.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

POP— True Rendition — By J. MILLAR WATT

Home, Sweet Home Was Never Like This—The "Train of Tomorrow" has among other innovations an observation lounge car shown here, with four different levels. It is drawn by a 2,000 horsepower Diesel engine and is air-conditioned. It was on display at the C.N.E.

Sports – And One Thing or Another

By FRANK MANN HARRIS

("A Sixbit Critic")

Complying with a public demand that would have taken a microscope of the highest power to even see, our ever-thoughtful sports impresarios have now served us mid-August football, with the thermometer topping the 90 degree mark. The results were best described by Winston Churchill in his immortal phrase about "blood, sweat and tears." The athletes provided sweat a-plenty, blood in varying quantities from bashed beezers and the like; and tears were clearly observable in the eyes of promoters vainly looking for dividend-paying crowds that failed to show up.

Our personal reaction, after a very brief look, was similar to the old one about the character whose wife coaxed him to church one morning when the minister's subject was "The Prophets of the Bible." After two hours and a half it looked as though the preacher was finally running short of wind; but, after a deep breath, he began again with "We have now dealt, first with the Major Prophets and, second, with the Minor Prophets; but now, brethren, just what place must we ascribe to the Prophet Zechariah?"

* * *

At this, the character stood up in his pew and said, "If it's all the same to the rest of the folks, the Prophet Zecariah can have MY place—I'm going home." That, briefly, is our position as regards 90-in-the shade football—only for "going" you can read "staying".

The automotive industry has long taken pride in its up-to-the-minute merchandising methods; and if imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, may feel flattered by an incident recently reported to us. Business was brisk at the little booth where the overhead sign read JUICY HAMBURGERS ONLY 5c. But when the hungry customer finally secured one of the delicacies he was surprised when the price demanded was just four times as great. "The list price is five cents," he was told in answer to his protest, "but it's a nickel extra for each of the accessories—onions, relish and mustard."

Now we must confess to a really severe shock. Two or three weeks ago Dick Irvin, of the Canadiens, came out with the breath-taking statement that a goal-tender is 50% of a hockey team; which brought a prompt rebuttal from Conn Smyth, in whose studied opinion a good center forward is an even more valuable asset to a club.

Very naturally we fully expected to see so vital a matter flare up—with judicious fanning—into a raging controversy occupying column after column of space, with reporters madly dashing here and there to secure the opinions, pro and con, of anybody ever even faintly connected with ice, from Hans Brinker to the Sixth Vice President of the Hot Shot Refrigerator Company.

But, alackaday, nobody seemed to give a hoot either way, and the whole thing was just allowed to drop. Now can it be that our sports editors no longer realize the supreme importance of hockey as a national assett, builder of character, and safeguard against the inroads of Communism? Don't they know this is no way to treat the pearls which drip from the lips of the master-minds? Or did the press agents—like the football promoters already referred to—just make a mistake in their timing?

A friend of ours recently attended a harness horse meet in Toronto—a meet at which the attendance, incidentally, would have been considered a poor one in several Ontario villages we know. Asked his opinion of the sport, to which he was a stranger, his answer was rather interesting. "It's good fun," he said, "but it's too darned honest—the favorites come down in front almost every time."

There, in a nutshell, he came close to hitting the real reason why so few people like both the Standard Bred and Thoroughbred brands of racing. Your running-horse addict, nine times out of ten, goes to the track with visions of sudden wealth, and considers any price of less than two or three to one as extremely stingy. Trotting-horse fans, on the other hand, attend primarily for the fun of the sport, and if they bet at all, are satisfied with smaller profits and more certain returns. Personally, we like both types about equally—and can go broke at either with about equal celerity.

..Reading the speeches made at the various peace parleys, one can hardly help being struck by the fact that, though the world is admittedly in a terrible condition, the spokesman invariably lays the blame on any country other than his own. They put us in mind of the old lady up in Bruce County who remarked to a neighbor, "What do you think Father Finnigan said to me at confession today? He told me that I confess the sins of every person in the parish but myself!"

TEEN-TOWN TOPICS

By BARRY MURKAR

Well, it's just about over for another year. We are referring of course to the Canadian National Exhibition that re-opened after five long years. It has been a wonderful two weeks and thousands of you out there are probably bathing your poor, aching little tootsies while you are reading this.

We won't go into detail on the "Ex." as it is all history now; but in passing we would like to suggest that many of you drop a thanks to Kate Aitken, Women's Director of the "Ex." for the swell job she did on Teen-Town, that held capacity crowds every day. The fashion shows, the radio broadcasts, the record bar and the dozen and one things they had at Teen-Town for our enjoyment all adds up to—it was the best exhibition yet.

Let's Face It

Back to school again for an other year. To many it will mean another year before university; to others it will mean no more nights on the girl friend's veranda; while to others it will be the usual big, fat headache. However school time is here, no matter how it affects you. Longer dresses are again the current style and pop will be feeling the pinch as daughter insists that she must be up-to-date. Junior, however, can still slop along in last year's togs and feel right at home. As far as we know, boy's and men's clothing has changed very little. We like to think about the first day of the new school term. Maybe because the scene depicted in our home is the same as in countless others. Mom gets down the lunch-pail and dusts it off while the kids sort out the year's text books and hand them down to someone else. Usually there is a mad scramble at the last minute and mom is near physical exhaustion by the time she finds the last pair of braces under the bed or the hair decorations tucked away in a drawer—that were purchased in July for this gala occasion. Of course there is always one consolation in the first day of school—and that is getting out early. Tuck a pear in your pocket, an apple in your hand and away you go.

Thrills

They tell us that newspaper people get tired of hearing, "you meet such interesting people." Honestly though, it's the truth. We agree the people newspaper writers meet are not always interesting but occasionally they provide a thrill. For instance, last week we had the chance to try our hand at reporting police court news for the local weekly. There were two young fellows up for armed bank robbery and only recently they had made the headlines of the dailies. We hitchhiked a ride to court with two police officers. On the way they pulled up at the county jail. They went in for a few minutes and presently came out with the robbers who were naturally handcuffed. Never-the-less it was somewhat of a thrill to ride to court with the two men who we were going to write about. Then, too, we had the pleasure a few weeks ago of hearing the famous war-correspondent, Ross Munroe speak on Russia. He doesn't believe there will be a war in our time. Following his speech, which of course was broadcast over the local airwaves, we had the pleasure of meeting him. As we shook hands, the man introducing us said to Mr. Munroe: "This young man is quite a student on foreign affairs," to which Munroe replied, "that's fine, I sure wish I had more time to study the situation." Oh brother—and all the time we were wondering where Moscow is. But that's life. Only yesterday we had a phone call from the talking-reporter, Jim Hunter. Frankly we think we'll take to this newspaper work seriously. We are beginning to find out—that you meet such interesting people.

Another Teen-Town Topics

It was interesting to learn a few days ago that there was another Teen-Town Topics column. This one we refer to, appears in one of the large dailies of Chicago and is written by a teen-age girl. She made a big hit recently, when she was the only reporter to get an interview with President Harry Truman. Why the heck couldn't we get an exclusive like that? This other Teen-Town Topics is devoted wholly to interviews with celebrities. We mentioned doing something of a similar nature in the fall.

Foreign Correspondents

You, you or you may soon receive the appointment of being official correspondent of your town for this column. You will be asked to send in news of your teen club, its members and any teen-age news of interest that hits your town. We want to fill this column with news of the various clubs, and we are appealing to you for help. When you get the appointment, will you take your pen in hand and send along the news regularly? Thanks a million.

Dogs and Cats Shun This Nicotine Spray

Ornamental plants on front porches, flowers and shrubs in the front garden, and the corner posts of porches may be protected from damage by dogs and cats by the simple use of dilute nicotine spray. The spray is harmless but its smell is very offensive to cats and dogs, even when applied so thinly that persons are unaware of its presence.

The name of the material is nicotine sulphate and may be bought at any seed or drug store. The spray is prepared by mixing one-half teaspoon of the nicotine sulphate with one gallon of water. The spray evaporates and should be renewed after rain, otherwise in good weather spraying every two weeks is sufficient. Once they have sniffed the spray, the dogs will patronize the other side of the road in their favourite rambles round the town. Sprayed on small pieces of wood, the nicotine will prevent cats from making their nightly boudoirs among the rows of the prettiest flowers in the back-garden plots.

There are three kinds of people—those who make good, those who make trouble and those who make excuses.

The schooling they receive today fits your children for the world of tomorrow. The final responsibility for their education is yours, not their teacher's. Take an intelligent interest in your children's school activities and studies . . . get to know their teachers. The parent-teacher association is one way you can help your kiddies to get the most out of school—and by taking an active part in such good work, you will be pointing out to others the way to "Good Citizenship".

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.
