An Apology.

A commotion was caused in the Chesterville sugar market last week directly after the appearance of The Record carrying an announcement that Fulton Bros. were retailing granulated sugar at $6.25 per hundred. This was an error for which we must plead guilty as the price should have read $6.75 and we apologize to the consumers for raising their expectations of much cheaper sugar only to be disappointed. Advertising in The Record brings quick results.

Showing Dundas Route's Advantages

In an endeavor to show the Ottawa City Council and Board of Control that the most desirable route for the proposed highway from Ottawa to the St. Lawrence River is from that city to Morrisburg through the centre of Dundas county they are today being taken over that ground in automobiles, and it is believed when once they thoroughly know the advantages in its favor that their support will be given to the project. Mr. O. D. Casselman went to Ottawa last night to take a number of the party in his car.

Spent Birthday In The Trenches.

Pte. H. Ernest Carter, billeted "Somewhere in Belgium," writes the following letter to his mother, Mrs. L. N. Carter, 73 Hopewell avenue, Ottawa. Pte. Carter was wounded on May 25th and spent two months in the hospital. The letter reads as follows:

"After being wounded on May 25th and spending two months in the hospital and convalescent home in France, on my return to the battle field, I was just in time to join the first battalion and go in the trenches. I spent my birthday, Aug. 12th in the trenches and I was a little anxious that day as there were four of our men killed on their birthday. However I came out alright, trusting in God. He does answer our prayers, though distance separates us, my dear mother, God brings us so close together, I can hear you praying for me every night just as though I were by your side.

A shell was thrown near our trench the other day. Fortunately it did not burst, so we could examine it. The date on it was 1905. We are all in the very best of spirits. Never before have we been so well equipped to do our duty as we are today. We have everything, we need for the first time, since we came into the battlefield. This is the first time we have been able to say this and we feel confident now we are going to win. I shall return to you a nobler better boy than I ever was before."

Don't Miss the C. H. S. Field Day.

Remember that the Chesterville High School will hold its annual Field Day tomorrow afternoon at the Driving Park and it is sure to be an interesting time. There will be about $25.00 in prizes and Public School Fair.

The third annual fair in connection with the garden work of the public school will be held upon the school grounds on Saturday, Oct. 2.

The main principles regulating the event remain the same as last year, viz:—

1 Pupils may show exhibits from home gardens only.

2 Any other article shown must be child's own work. A complete prize list is furnished each child.

3 The judges usually complete their work in the forenoon, after which all articles not offered for sale must be quickly removed. The sale will begin at 2 o'clock p.m.

Owing to the numerous demands made upon our citizens at present, no personal canvas will be made. We shall, however, be pleased to receive any assistance that may be voluntarily offered.

The proceeds of the sale will be given as first payment on a Balopticon for slide and opaque projection to be used in the assembly room on Friday afternoons and such other times as may be deemed necessary in the teaching of Geography, History, current events etc.

The value of such a piece of furniture cannot be over estimated, and it is to be hoped the children will receive liberal assistance in their undertaking.

Ottawa, Ont.

On the May Civil Service Examination, this year, we passed more stenographic candidates than the other local business colleges combined.

It is a common occurrence for Henry-trained students to get 100% in Shorthand 100% in Typewriting, and 95% in Composition.

These subjects being the most difficult on this examination, our record of FIRST, SECOND and FOURTH places for the whole of Canada, is at once explained.

During the past two years, more than 235 students have come to us from other local business colleges.

Does it not prove that we have a superior school?

(Morrisburg Leader)

A very pretty Autumn wedding took place on Wednesday evening September 8th, 1915, at 7 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, Williamsburg, when Miss Verna, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Whitaker, was united in marriage to Mr. Hugh L. McIntosh eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. McIntosh of the same place. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Maurer, pastor of the Lutheran Church and took place in the drawing-room under a beautiful wedding bell of white plume asters placed in an arch of evergreens with white ribbon trimmings. The fair young bride, who was given away by her father looked very charming in her gown of white duchess mousseline silk, the bodice tastefully trimmed with princess chiffon lace and edged with seed pearls the skirt being tastefully draped with a flounce of the same. She wore a long bridal veil with orange blossoms arranged in Parisian effect and carried a bouquet of white spanish asters and orange blossoms entwined with ivy leaves. The wedding march was gracefully rendered by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Alfred Casselman of Berwick. The groom's gift to the bride was a solitaire diamond, and to the pianist a gold crescent brooch set with pearls. The bride's gift to the groom was a raised band initial ring. After congratulations Rev. Maurer accompanied by the bridal party wended their way to the dining room where the tables were decorated with cut flowers and ferns, and a bountiful wedding dinner was partaken of by all. After the dinner the bride donned her tailored suit of Belgian blue over a blouse of hand embroidered lace, wearing a fascinating little hat with military mount to match, and left with her husband by auto to take the 10.10 o'clock train for a trip through Western Ontario, returning via Buffalo and Niagara Falls, about the end of September to reside in Williamsburg. The young couple received many beautiful and costly presents showing the esteem in which they are held by their many friends who all join in wishing them many years of wedded bliss.

A very pretty wedding took place on Sept. 8th, when Miss Winnifred Cunliffe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Cunliffe, Cambridge St. Medicine Hat, was united in marriage to Mr. W. Morley Henderson, manager of the Carlyle Dairy Co., formerly of Calgary.

The bride looked exceedingly attractive as she entered the drawing room with her father and took position beneath a beautiful wedding bell of white and pink flowers. Margaret Cunliffe, Man., played the organ and the bride was given away by her cousin, Miss M. Current. The ceremony was a beautiful one and the wedding

The pretty home was bright with a profusion of sweet peas, carnations and smilax with ferns. The ladies assisting during the evening were the Misses Publo, Kennedy, Mary Wagstaff, Barker and Mrs. Finch and Miss Mable Cunliffe, sisters of the bride. The bridegroom's gifts were a beautiful gold wrist watch to the bride, a cameo ring to the bridesmaid, pearl brooch to Miss Margaret Cunliffe and cufflinks to the groomsmen.

Mr. and Mrs. Henderson will leave on the evening train for Lagan, the bride wearing a becoming dark blue cloth suit in military style and black and white hat. On their return the young couple will take up residence in Suite 10, Diana Court.

The Advantages Of Sing Sing

On the person of a robber arrested in New York was found an interesting letter from a friend in Sing Sing, which read as follows:—

"But, hey, Walt, why worry? I want to tell you it is much easier here than you think. Baseball every day. Swimming the same. We have two hours every day for swimming, and we can talk and yell all we want. We can talk in the shop. We have movies every night during the winter and on Saturdays and Sundays during the hot weather. We can write all the letters we want. I don't know of anything you can send me. We can buy things cheaper here than you or people who are not here in jail. Sing Sing is not such a bad place, after all."

And to think that with all these advantages the inmates do not have to pay board like the law-abiding outside prison walls!

Home-made Seed Tester

In the exhibit of the Ottawa Experimental Farm at the fair there was a good idea in the shape of a corn seed tester which can be made by any person. A layer of sawdust is placed in a box and a cotton cloth placed over it, and on this cloth the grains of corn desired to be tested are laid. Another layer of sawdust is then placed over the corn and at the end of seven days this may be removed and if the corn has not germinated in that time it is of no use for seed purposes.

"On the Field of Honor."

The publishers of The Family Herald and Weekly Star, Montreal, are making a strong bid for that beautiful picture, full of pathos entitled "On the Field of Honor." It is assumed the publishers of the Family Herald have in mind using it as a presentation plate. If that is so there is a great treat in store for readers of The Family Herald and Weekly Star this autumn. In past years The Family Herald of Montreal has been noted not only for the wonderful excellence of that journal but for many beautiful pictures it has presented to its readers. The Family Herald has a name for succeeding in anything it undertakes, and we feel sure if it is humanly possible to secure "On the Field of Honor" that the publishers will succeed in getting it. "On the Field of Honor" is attracting widespread attention in Europe.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

OVERLAND

No Public Building So Far Hit By Zepps, Except One Church. A Statement On The Air Raids.

London, Sept. 18.—An official description of some of the effects of the last Zeppelin raid upon the London district, written by an impartial observer at the request of the home secretary, Sir John Simon, was issued last night for publication as follows:

"While it is absolutely necessary in the interest of public safety to maintain the rule that no unauthorized account shall appear the real character of the outrages will be better understood from a collection of incidents, each verified on the spot and vouched for by the authorities as accurate. The home secretary takes this opportunity of stating explicitly that the total casualties resulting from these air raids have been correctly stated in all cases. The information is based upon an exhaustive inquiry by the police.

"In a letter some months ago First Lord of the Admiralty Balfour set forth the reasons which prevented the government from disclosing the exact localities in which damage has been done in the various Zeppelin raids. These reasons remain valid and there is no intention of departing from the rule adopted to prevent information becoming available for the enemy, either in regard to the routes taken or the places and buildings on which bombs were dropped.

"The experience in the raids last week combined with German official reports demonstrate that commanders of German aircraft often are grossly in error as to their movements and they have no means of estimating the effect of their promiscuous bombardments materially or morally.

"In every case where damage has been caused it was private property which suffered and in most cases this has been of the small residential kind. Almost all the unfortunate people who have been killed not only were non-combatants but non-combatants of a class who hitherto, in the honorable practice of civilized warfare, have been exempt from attack—women, children, small shopkeepers, working men—the sacrifice of whose lives serves no military purpose either morally or materially.

"The folly and futility of the raids last week may well be imagined when it is remembered that the London district, taken for convenience as the area administered by the metropolitan police is just short of 700 square miles in area. It was by hastily dropping at random in the dark explosive and incendiary materials somewhere on this enormous surface that the enemy professed to have accomplished an important military purpose.

"The fact is that no public institutions of any kind was hit, nor was any power station or arsenal. No damage was done affecting the use of any building connected directly or indirectly with the conduct of the war.

"It is true that two hospitals narrowly escaped damage but it is only fair, to say that the officers of an army which 3 "In another part of the area over which the airship passed there is a big block of workmen's dwellings, which are crowded day and night with children. A bomb dropped on the roof. Directly under the roof was a little flat in which four children were asleep. After being put to bed two of them got up secretly to make tea in an adjoining room. The bed they left is now a mass of charred and blackened sheets, with the mattress torn to pieces. They escaped by a miracle, but in a small bedroom next door the other two children were killed instantly.

"These buildings are strong and the bomb did not penetrate far. You hardly can notice the damage to the roof if you pass in the street. That was all that was happening when the captain of the German aircraft professed to think he was visiting ducks and vitally damaging the part of London.

"At another place an incendiary bomb dropped through the roof of a stable and fired a motor car into which it fell. The stable man, and his wife, in spite of the fire which immediately became serious, set out to rescue eleven horses which were in the stable. They were carefully taken out and turned loose on the street.

A dog which kept guard over the premises also was rescued as was a caged bird kept on the first floor above the fire, although while bringing it down stairs the stableman's wife was blown off her feet by the explosion of a bomb which fell into a neighboring courtyard. The only casualty in this case was a bantam rooster. In such a case as the last the futility of the enemy's attack was merely ridiculous; in other cases it was tragic.

"Somewhere in London's suburbs there is a little block of houses almost by itself divided into small flats. On the ground floor there were sleeping a widow her eighteen-year-old daughter and a young man lodger. On the first floor there was a family of three children, two of them girls, and on the second floor a working man, his wife, four girls and one boy. A bomb dropped squarely on the roof. As the laborer and his wife who were on the second floor, described it, the whole partition wall beside their bed gave way and disappeared. The man shoved his wife into the centre of the room and went to find the children. Two of them who slept in a room under the spot where the bomb fell vanished with the room and everything in it. Their bodies were found two days later under the debris. Of the others, a boy of eight ran for safety to a staircase which had been blown away and in the dark fell into the hole where his sisters' bodies were buried in the ruins.

"The bodies of two of the occupants of the first floor subsequently were recovered but the worst effects of the bomb were felt on the ground floor. Part of the body of the man who occupied it was found 150 yards away.

"A bomb which dropped in a street below in the front of a shop but spent its main force on a passing motor bus on which twenty persons were riding, including the driver and conductor. Nine of them were killed and 11 injured. The driver had both legs blown off and died

Woman Rat Killer.

A most peculiar profession is that of Miss Gertrude Heitler, of New York, who has made the killing of rats her life work. She is probably the only woman in the world engaged in this occupation for a livelihood.

Miss Heitler is in charge of a crew of men who kill rats under her orders. They are employed by various steamship companies to search their ships when they reach port and to exterminate all rodents before they again sail.

There are no rat traps, poisons, nor modern nor ancient inventions used in the slaughter directed by the girl rat-catcher. A kind of food is concocted of ingredients that only Miss Heitler knows. The bait is so tempting that it will draw rats from all over a building or ship. Miss Heitler or her employes await their approach and grab the rodents when they come to feed, either killing them with their bare hands or a club or strap. Sometimes an iron rod is used.

No member of the rodent family can resist the bait that is placed for him. In a very short space of time the entire ship may be cleared. No other effective means has as yet been found.

The food with which the rats are captured is manufactured in a little laboratory occupied by Miss Heitler on Broome Street. Here she lives with scores of rodents, ferrets, rabbits, guinea pigs and pigeons. They all seem quite happy together, and do not interfere with any other activities in the lair.

Miss Heitler is a woman of about 30 years of age, with dark hair and a serious expression. She is dressed in a simple, dark dress and a high collar. She is standing in a room that appears to be a laboratory or a workshop. There are various objects on the table in front of her, including what looks like a small cage or container. She is looking down at the objects with a focused expression.

get is that they must be killed. She is the daughter of William A. Heitler, who until his death a short time ago was in charge of the rat-catching crew now directed by his daughter. Many hotels, ships and dwellings that depended upon him to keep them free from rats now accept the services of his daughter.

Gertrude Heitler was raised in an atmosphere of rats. From her earliest recollection she heard discussed the tempting viands for the capture of rats. She has always known the odor of cooking rat biscuit or the boiling of pottage. Jennings first concocted the food that is now used. It was, however, perfected by Heitler, who added a new ingredient.

During his years of labor Heitler killed nearly 500,000 rats. It was his proud boast that more than two-thirds of that number he killed with his bare hands, and that he had never used a trap nor a drop of poison. Thus far his daughter has a record almost as good as his own, and she keeps the account of each day's work on a carefully arranged score card.

The wharf rat is a savage little creature. It bites and scratches more violently than any other kind of rodent. Its injury often results in blood poison or death, but Miss Heitler has the animals under her control. In all of her work she is Trench Escapades.

A Thornton Health doctor, who is at the front, writes:

We have just had a couple of days of almost tropical rain. It came down in sheets, a perfect deluge, accompanied by an almost incessant muttering of thunder at times. The worst part about this was that it drowned the noise of approaching shells, and one missed the familiar warning to take cover.

As the water began to accumulate in the trenches the men rolled up their trousers, but when it reached their knees they took them off. When it got deeper and their shirts began to get wet they took them off too—that is those who had vests. . . . I'm trying to think of something original to wear to-morrow. I have a bathing costume that I bought while temporarily at a French seaside town, but I shouldn't like to appear snobbish.

The senior captain is a doctor. He has outrun the best in performing prodigies of valor. Having added the Heidelberg M. D. to his other diplomas, he knows German well enough to be able to detect the locality from which the speaker comes, and has been very useful to the General Staff in finding out the nature of the troops opposed to us.

Many times he has crept out after dark, and, crawling on his stomach under the barbed wire entanglements, has reached the German trenches and lain under their parapet, listening to their speech. Once he was discovered, but he hurled a couple of bombs into their trench to give them something else to think about, and then regained our lines in safety.

The last time he went out as he lay under their parapet, a German, lighting his pipe, casually put his pocket-book for a moment on the edge of the trench. The fighting doctor stretched out his hand, took it, and crept away. Inside there were some very important printed instructions to German troops, and for this he has just been awarded the Military Cross. He has asked me to go with him next time, but I might tear my coat on the barbed wire, so I don't think I will.

Yesterday a board appeared in front of the German parapet with "Warsaw is taken" written on it. As soon as it was dark, out went the youngest sub. and brought back the board in triumph. This is a mere dangerous feat than even it appears to be, for those boards are often traps with a bomb attachment fixed on, or a trip wire turning on a light and a machine gun trained on the spot. These are the men, the Territorials, who have fought our battles for the last six months.

The Teaching of Agriculture and What it Signifies.

This year, at the Ontario Agricultural College, 76 public school teachers and 28 high school science teachers learned in the atmosphere of the farm, how to make the activities of rural life a basis of intellectual training for the pupils in country schools.

In past years, only about one-third of those who took the first half of the course came back to complete the second year; this year fifty per cent have returned.

Why more do not conclude the course and secure their certificates is hard to decide. Perhaps it is that on their return home, filled with enthusiasm, they meet with apathy or even with opposition, and fail to carry out what they thought they could accomplish. Perhaps the teacher is himself to blame for this. He allows the impression to be conveyed to the parent that he is going to teach the child things about farming that the parent does not understand, instead of directing the child to seek from the parent and bring to the lesson the useful and practical aspects of the subject. On the one hand antagonism is aroused; on the other, a feeling of sympathy and understanding might be created.

The apathy and opposition that exist are no doubt due in the main to a failure to understand the movement and to appreciate its significance. Where opposition exists, it is based seemingly on the assumption that agriculture is farming, and that farming consists of the proper performance of certain manual operations which the farmer is better qualified to teach his son than the schoolmaster.

Ask parents whether they desire their children to leave the farm, and their reply, generally speaking, will be decidedly in the negative. They have watched with much heart-burning their sons and daughters being drawn to city pursuits, but they have not been brought to realize that in agricultural teaching they have a means under their control that might if properly employed accomplish much to influence their children's inclinations in the other direction.

If the people on the farms can be brought to realize what agricultural teaching stands for, they will demand it. They will require that the child be inclined towards the land by being taught through the things which he comes daily into contact with.

strongest appeal, nevertheless the movement presents an opportunity for the teaching of agriculture that has not been fully appreciated. The children's interest has been aroused, the material is there, and they are in the right mood to be instructed. Proper direction is all that is required to make the movement one of much greater value than it will be otherwise.

It is largely this hope of financial reward that has led so many country-bred young people to turn their faces to the city, and has obscured their vision to the fact that the things that count for real happiness are to be had more readily in the country.

If we are to regard the farm merely as a factory for the manufacture of food, then let us do away with individual ownership, and organize farming as a great industrial enterprise for producing cheap and abundant food, leaving those who till the soil to fall into a condition of serfdom. We believe that the farm and the farm home stands for something far more important than this in the life of the nation. It stands for the true welfare of the people. It is the real basis for happy, useful and vigorous manhood and womanhood; it is the true home of liberty and equality; it is, in short, the only real basis of a stable civilization; the race that is rooted to the soil shall endure.

Every boy and girl that is retained to the farm is a real gain to the race. Every new-comer who is induced to go on the land, and there to found a home, is of far greater value than one who becomes a mere cog in the industrial machinery of a city.

Is it the purpose to develop in this country a race possessing the qualities that rural life alone can confer, or are these finer things to be sacrificed to the acquirement of wealth? Is the welfare of the race to be paramount, or are we more concerned in building vast fortunes or in helping others to build them?

If the movement from the land is governed by financial considerations chiefly, then the application of trained intelligence to the business of farming will make it easier to secure a competence from the soil. The first step in that direction is to adopt a system of teaching that will direct the child's attention to and interest him in the things of the country.

To-day, men's minds are being stirred as never before; new aspects and new purposes in life are being discerned. They are beginning to realize, perhaps, that there are things better worth living for and striving for than money and the luxuries and diversions that money secures. The opportunity calls loudly to the teacher, and to all who aspire to rural leadership, to make clear the realities of life—to show that the greatest good will not be found in acquiring wealth, but rather, for country people, in the sane and wholesome activities of country life. Let them make clear what agricultural teaching signifies in the welfare and happiness of the community, and secure for the future a more hearty

A CHEF AND A CHAUFFEUR

Story of the Newly Rich.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

When the Doolans fell heir to Uncle Peter Doolan's accumulated millions they gave away the modest grocery business in Sunset and sped to New York, prepared to storm the citadel of society. Once there, established in a luxuriously appointed mansion, they promptly lost their identity as the Doolan family and became known as the "Peter Paul Doolands."

"If it wasn't for Cherry, here, we never could have done it," sighed Mrs. Dooland, looking affectionately at her daughter.

"Done what, mother?" Cherry asked sharply. She was a slender, fair girl with an apple blossom complexion, dark blue Irish eyes, long black curling lashes and dusky hair.

"This!" Mrs. Dooland waved a fat white hand, sparkling with precious stones. "Society!"

Cherry dropped to her knees beside her mother's chair.

"Mother," she said tensely, "we are not really in 'society,' as you call it. We have a few friends as rich and lonely and out of place as ourselves, and so we cling together, but we are all unhappy! Let us go back to Sunset!"

"Cherry, stop! Give up all this?" Mrs. Dooland's voice was horror smitten.

"It's deadly dull," drooped Cherry.

"Dull! What's the child wanting?" grieved Mrs. Dooland, forgetting her newly acquired accent. "You, with your fine clothes, automobiles and the-aters and dancing and all! What would your poor father say?"

He would confess that he was tired of the glitter and emptiness. I know he would rather be back in Sunset, even in the old grocery store with his cronies around him and"—

"Be still, child," interrupted her mother harshly.

"And you, too, mother. I know you miss the old neighborhood life and the village meetings and"—

"Hush, Cherry!" broke in Mrs. Dooland in a panicky tone. "The very idea of my giving up all this—for the kitchen!"

"But you wouldn't have to work any more. We could build a nice house and have servants"—

A tap at the door interrupted Cherry's coaxing. A servant stood there, a very smart parlor maid, of whom the Doolands were rather in awe.

"Excuse me, ma'am, but there's a person to see about an advertisement," she said.

Mrs. Dooland looked puzzled. Then her face cleared.

"Oh, yes. I told Peter to advertise for a chef and a new chauffeur. That Frenchman was so reckless I couldn't stand him. Send him up, Mary."

Mary vanished, and Mrs. Dooland turned to Cherry, who was standing by the window looking dreamily out at the passing show on the avenue.

"See here, Cherry Dooland!" hissed her mother through set teeth. "If your homesickness is due to your pinching that good for nothing Jimmy Dooland's nothing but a clerk in the pharmacy, why"—

A tap at the door, and Mary brought a tall young man, who bowed as Mrs. Dooland looked at him and surveyed him

VIOLENT ATTACKS OF DYSPEPSIA

Suffered Tortures Until She Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

St. JEAN DE MATHA, Jan. 27th, 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been made well by "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered so much that at last I would not dare to eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives" and after taking them I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was well. I quickly regained my lost weight—and now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am fully recovered, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives."

your requirements should be. This is his office address."

"Thank you, madam."

"If Mr. Dooland is not satisfied that you can drive our car you might return here, James. Perhaps you can cook better than you can drive."

"Yes, madam, thank you," said James, and he respectfully withdrew.

"Cherry, what did you think of him?"

Cherry came from the window, her eyes shining, an odd look in her lovely face.

"Of the chauffeur—or the chef?" she asked, dimpling with smiles.

"Both!" said Mrs. Dooland and laughed. "It is like old times to see you smile like that, Cherry, child. Are you so unhappy?" she asked wistfully.

"Not at all," assured Cherry, kissing her mother on both cheeks.

"If you want you can go back to Sunset tomorrow. You can board at Mrs. Flood's for awhile, and maybe"—

"I'm not going, mother. I wouldn't go for the world!" she ended emphatically.

"Not even—even to see Jimmy Lee?"

"I wouldn't go to Sunset to see Jimmy Lee—now," assured Cherry with dancing eyes, and Mrs. Dooland was satisfied that the budding romance was indeed blighted.

At dinner that night Peter Paul Dooland looked across the cozy round table at his wife.

"I hired that young feller for chauffeur," he said abruptly.

"If you hadn't I should have hired him to cook. He could do either," laughed Mrs. Dooland.

"So you liked this James?" mused Dooland; then, suddenly, to Cherry he added, "What did you think of him, honey?"

"She never even saw him. Stood looking out the window all the time," cut in Mrs. Dooland.

Cherry smiled vaguely and changed the subject. She knew that the servants were secretly laughing at them for making so much of this business of hiring a chef or a chauffeur. Cherry hated these superior servants, and a fierce loyalty to her parents prompted her to be especially tender with them that evening.

"You are more like Cherry Doolan of Sunset days," said Peter Paul, stroking her dark hair.

"I love Cherry Doolan, and I hate Charlotte Dooland," smiled Cherry.

A silence brooded over the three Doolands, who before the millions came had been happy Doolands. At last Peter Paul roused himself.

"I had a letter from Finch to-day," says the business man, looking at his watch.

"It lacks

of vehicles, to stop abruptly at the traffic officer's whistle.

Cherry was pale, perhaps with fear, but her eyes shone.

"Would you like to change to a taxi, mother?" she asked.

"Yes. Tell James to stop at Buffam's."

Cherry picked up the tube. "Buffam's, James," she ordered.

The limousine drew up at the curb, and James opened the door.

"I will meet you at the Plaza for lunch, mother," and before Mrs. Dooland could recover her breath the limousine shot away up the avenue.

"The park, James," said Cherry.

When they reached the park, passing a soda fountain, Cherry called a halt.

"A cherry phosphate," she said to the chauffeur.

"Yes, Miss Dooland." He touched his cap and walked a few hundred yards toward a tiny confectionery store.

When he returned he carried a brimming glass of dark red liquid.

"Thank you, Jimmy," she said, smiling at him over the glass.

"James, if you please, Miss Dooland," he said, and his lips were white.

"Miss Dooland, if you please, Jimmy," she mocked him.

For awhile he was silent, gazing at her with his heart in his eyes.

"Why did you do it, Jimmy?" whispered Cherry.

"You know! I wanted to come, and then—your father sent for me."

"Father? Then he knows?" breathed Cherry.

"Yes. I was glad to be near you, although I did not expect to be recognized by your fashionable friends. It wasn't that hope, Cherry—I mean Miss Dooland."

"Dooland! Pooh!" Cherry snapped her fingers. "I am Cherry Doolan and will be until"— She paused.

"And will be until"— he prompted.

"Until I'm not!" she flashed back.

"Jimmy Lee, that white linen coat you wore in the drug store was vastly more becoming than this one!"

"Ah, Cherry, you really mean it?" he asked eagerly.

Cherry held out the glass.

"Taste it, Jimmy," she commanded, but first she touched the brim with her own lips. "Taste it, Jimmy."

He took glass and little hand in his and tasted the bitter concoction.

"It's nectar," he murmured.

"The same old Jimmy," she whispered, and tears were in her eyes.

That night at dinner the Doolands had a guest, one whose presence caused a titter of amusement among the servants.

It was James, the chauffeur, who appeared to be equally popular with Cherry's parents.

After dinner, while they sat in the cozy library, Mary, the parlor maid, brought a telegram.

Open mouthed with surprise, Peter Paul Dooland read it aloud. It was from his lawyers in San Francisco:

"Just learned your Uncle Peter's son, reported dead, is alive. Arrived from Australia today. Claims entire fortune. Accept sympathy. Come at once."

The Doolands stared at one another and then at Jimmy Lee.

"Thank God," they said in unison and thus the Doolands gave back to the Doolands their old happy, common place life.

INDIANS AND THE WAR.

Ven-Archdeacon Renison Tells of Their Views and Feelings.

Some interesting stories of the views of the northern Indians regard the present war, as gathered by Ven-Archdeacon about 'Kitchieoogew George' (King George) and the great war," said Dr. Renison. "We found an intense feeling of patriotism among the Indians. They deeply appreciate the fairness, good faith, and generosity which the Canadian Governments have always shown towards them. The worldwide economic depression has affected the fur market and the Indians are, of course, feeling the loss of that source of revenue."

"As one chief pointed out in an eloquent speech, the Indian is much more blest than his poor white brother when money is scarce, for moose are running over the swamps of the north country in unprecedented numbers, and rabbits and fish are plentiful. Again this chief pointed out that the Indian was favored in not having to make the supreme sacrifice of sending his sons to die for their country."

"Strange to say," Dr. Renison remarked, "owing perhaps to the fact that they have not depended on flour and pork, but have lived more the life of their ancestors, sickness has been much less than in former years. The Eskimos at Whale River are suffering somewhat from a decrease in the number of reindeer in recent years, but the Government has made ample provision for every emergency which may happen. Irresponsible travelers in the north country, who know nothing of the conditions of life there and the inevitable hazards of nomad existence, very often bring weird tales of starvation and Government neglect, but these stories are quite unjustifiable. As Dominion Constable Dehaitre, who was a member of our party, remarked, if white men lived as these northern Indians live and had the same respect for law, the police of the country would have to seek new avocations."

Dates of Cutting Wheat.

The dates for cutting fall wheat in Ontario show a variation of three weeks from year to year, as shown by a record kept since 1888 by a farmer near Galt. The present year is somewhat later than the average.

There Is No Ground For Any Criticism of Finance
Minister's Action.

WHEN Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, floated his $45,000,000 loan recently in New York a section of the Canadian press criticized it very strongly, claiming that the interest rate was too high, the issuing price too low, and the whole loan in other respects a mistake. Against these critics Hon. Mr. White ably defended himself.

Trustworthy Opinions.

The editor of The Kingston Standard about this time took the trouble to write to some of the leading financiers and financial institutions in the United States requesting an opinion on Mr. White's loan, and the replies received in every case were extremely flattering to Mr. White, all admitting that the loan was a very successful

No Other Colony of Britain
Could Have Done Nearly So Well.

Very Fortunate Indeed.

Mr. J. Seibert, Jr., President and Editor of The New York Commercial and Financial Chronicle, one of the greatest financial publications in the country, wrote:

"Dear Sir,—The Canadian Government must be considered as having been very fortunate in the terms it obtained for the new $45,000,000 loan. The most convincing testimony that the terms were the very best that could be got is furnished by the course of prices for the loan. The $25,000,000 one-year notes were offered to the public at 160 and interest and are to-day quoted at 99 13-16 @ 99 15-16, while the two-year notes were offered at 99 1/2 and interest and are quoted at 99 3/4 bid and 100 asked. With reference to the new British Government issue, it is not by any means certain that the rate will remain permanently at 4 1/2 per cent. The new issue is now quoted at a discount, and the Government has bound itself that if future issues shall be at a higher rate the holders of the present issue shall have the right to exchange their holdings and get the same rate.

Mr. Geo. F. Baker, Vice-President of the First National Bank, New York, writes:

"Dear Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 14th we would call your attention to the fact that we were one of the issuing houses for the $45,000,000 Dominion of Canada loan recently placed in the United States. This fact alone would seem to answer your questions as to whether in our judgment there could be any proper criticism.

"Very truly yours,

"GEO. F. BAKER,

"Vice-Pres. First National Bank."

Childish Talk.

W. P. Hamilton, editor of the Wall Street Journal, writes as follows:

"Dear Sir,—Your letter followed me on my summer vacation or I should have taken the matter up sooner. I was surprised to see that some of the Canadian papers were discontented with the terms of the $45,000,000 government loan floated here. As a matter of fact, Canada made a better bargain than to order between 2,000 and 3,000 heavy guns of different calibres in the Dominion, delivery to be made within two years. The question is whether Canadian manufacturers could handle the order as they have handled the orders placed here for shells. The War Office requirements were laid before the meeting by General Mahan, the expert who came over with Mr. D. A. Thomas. His proposition was that the different parts of the guns be manufactured in the Dominion, and the assembling done at some central point.

The whole question was finally referred to the following committee for a report to the Government: Sir John Gibson, Chairman; Members of the Shell Committee, Messrs. Frederic Nicholls (Toronto), W. D. Robb (Grand Trunk Railway), Hector McInnes (Halifax), F. L. Wanklyn (C. P. R.), Sir Lyman Jones, Sir William Mackenzie, Senator Edwards, Mr. R. W. A Four-footed Spy.

Wounded Canadians in hospital at Cardiff tell a story of how a nest of spies was discovered in Northern France. Somewhere near the billets and firing line there stood a coffee house inhabited by five people, including a boy. The troops on their way to the trenches used to call for refreshments, and the occupants consequently had exceptional opportunities of obtaining valuable information and always had a fairly good idea of the strength of the forces holding the section of the trenches.

The Germans in that part seemed to be well-informed of what was going on in front of them. Regiments arriving unexpectedly and without even the knowledge of the regiments in the trenches were halted by name by the Germans. The coffee house was suspected, but continual search revealed nothing.

Once a soldier heard a conversation in German, but again a fresh search revealed nothing. At length the boy gave away the secret, and it was discovered that a dog had been used to carry messages to the German trenches. The Canadians had often seen it wandering about the trenches and had petted it unsuspectingly.

Messages were carried underneath a false coating of fur ingeniously wrapped round the dog. Now dogs found wandering near the trenches are immediately shot.

Opportunity in Russia.

Russian banks are interested greatly in Canada's determination to enter the Russian market, according to a further report received by the Department of Trade and Commerce from Mr. C. F. Just, special Canadian Trade Commissioner. Mr. Just gives an extended list of articles which could be made the basis of a large trade between this country and Russia. He again emphasizes the desirability of the establishment of agencies in Russia, especially in regard to the trade in agricultural and other machinery, the United States manufacturers having erected works which, when in full working order, will take care of one-sixth of the total annual requirement of the country. Russia needs the light type of agricultural machinery, and the trade, says the commissioner, is capable of being greatly increased.

Gladiolus Bulbs.

After the first heavy frost, or when the foliage begins to turn brown, the gladiolus bulbs should be taken up and spread out loosely in some cool, airy place free from frost for ten days or two weeks to ripen, after which cut off the tops near the crown and store the bulbs in a frost-proof cellar until Spring. Many growers cut off the roots and remove the small bulblets from the base of the bulb in the Fall. If it is intended to plant these bulblets it is advisable to leave them until Spring, as they are less liable to lose vitality when attached to the parent bulb than when stored by themselves.

If it is desired to increase or even to retain a stock of the better varieties, these bulblets from the desired sorts should be saved and planted each Spring, as the old bulbs of many of the named kinds do not produce good flowers and soon run out. For some reason not yet quite understood some varieties produce a much larger quantity of bulblets than others; some produce a hundredfold and some fourfold. Hence the reason for the difference in the cost of some of the named sorts.

These bulblets may be planted in any out-of-the-way place provided the soil is good, and they may receive a fair amount of sunshine. Keep well cultivated between the rows and never suffer from this
