Mrs. Andrew Timmins Celebrates 100th Birthday

Nearly Every Citizen, As Well As Many Friends Called at the Home of Winchester's Centenarian Yesterday.

Numerous Presentations Made During The Day. All Surviving Members of Family Were Home For Happy Occasion.

Felicitated by numerous friends and honoured by civic and church authorities, Mrs. Andrew Timmins, Winchester's beloved Centenarian, celebrated the 100th anniversary of her birth at her home on Main street yesterday afternoon and evening.

It was an epochal day, not only for Mrs. Timmins, but for the citizens in general, as it was the first opportunity Winchester has had of honouring a centenarian.

As far as the writer can learn, Mrs. Timmins is the oldest lady in Dundas County, and the only one to reach the ripe old age of 100 years. Whether or not that is so, there can be no question about her life and experiences being beyond comparison even in a county whose records are replete with historic and stirring narratives. She is, in many respects, a remarkable personage with mind and body alert and her perception of people and things almost as keen as ever.

Everyone who knew her was delighted to do her honour on the occasion of her 100th birthday yesterday and were all joined in wishing "Winchester's Grand Old Lady" many more happy birthdays.

Her Early Life

When Mrs. Timmins and her husband came to the Boyne settlement, just east of Winchester in 1860, four years after their marriage, they purchased one hundred acres of land that was densely covered with virgin forest; they hewed the giant timbers and erected a 12x12 cabin; they also erected stout palisades to keep at bay the roaming wild life of the forest; later they built a substantial house and barn. They labored together zealously and methodically and in 1891 those two who had long battled for progress in a wilderness were rewarded when government officials presented them with a medal emblematic of the best-kept farm in the three United Counties. Such was the measure of the zeal, the tenacity and the indomitable courage of the eager pioneer. Mr. Timmins was also a student of municipal affairs at the Boyne and for years he served as a school trustee.

Mrs. Timmins (right) is pictured above with an old friend, Mrs. Catherine Merkley, mother of Mr. Ernest Merkley. It was taken a few years ago.

Many Stirring Episodes

Mrs. Timmins' maiden name was Rachel Suffell; her parents, George Suffell and his wife, Hannah Pearson, came to Canada from Yorkshire, England, and settled in Augusta township, near Prescott, shortly after their marriage in the little ivy-clad church at Stonegrave, England. On that Augusta township farm Mrs. Timmins was born in 1836. There she was educated amid the primitive conditions of a new land and there she was destined to witness intimately many stirring episodes, not the least of which was the abortive so-called "Fenian" invasions when hostile troops crossed from Ogdensburg with the ostensible purpose of attacking the several fortifications on the Ontario side.

Mrs. Timmins is the only surviving member of a family of 12 children. A brother, George, lived to reach the age of 95, while a sister, Hannah, and another brother, William, passed away at the ages of 70 and 69 respectively.

At Inkerman in 1856 she was married and the young couple went to a farm near Bowmanville to reside, remaining there but four years when Mrs. Timmins' native Dundas made insistent appeal and that was when she returned in 1860 to acquire the unbroken land at the Boyne. The venerable couple moved to Winchester in 1899.

In 1906 they celebrated their Golden Wedding anniversary and in 1916 their Diamond anniversary. On this occasion Mrs. Timmins was honoured by being presented with a life membership certificate by the Women's Missionary Sociey of the Methodist church.

In 1917 Mr. Timmins passed away.

The Lot of a Pioneer

Mrs. Timmins smiles wistfully when farmers refer to hardships and discomforts in these days of automobiles, radios, daily newspapers and good roads. In her earliest days on the new farm they counted themselves lucky to have even one ox; she walked six miles to church at Chesterville every Sunday, she carried one of the children, her husband carried the other, they had to traverse corduroy bush trails and sometimes the torrid wooded laneways were black with clouds of rapacious mosquitoes. On one occasion when Mrs. Timmins went berry picking, she heard the uldulations of wolves in the distance and precipitately she reached her forest cabin with the cadaverous beasts almost at her heels. To complain was to them an admission of defeat.

Very little money was circulating in those formative days; the system of barter and exchange was in vogue everywhere in the new land and about the only commodity that would actually demand money was potash made from the burning of timber. Almost universally potash making was the chief industry.

Shear, Card and Spin

Mrs. Timmins doesn't think hard work ever shortened the days of anyone. Her philosophy for a long life is plenty of work and peace of mind. She is convinced that these will be the lot of anyone who consistently observes the laws of God and man. She worked hard in her youth, she could shear a sheep, could card and spin; no person ever thought of purchasing clothes or floor coverings in her day. They were all processed at home, right from the sheep's back.

The unusual little lady has the distinction of having lived long before railways came into being in this country, when a reaping hook and flail were the chief agricultural implements, before the world had yet recovered from the Napoleonic conflicts, even before there was a union in Upper and Lower Canada preceding Lord Sydenham's appointment as Governor of Canada, which was then comprised mainly of Quebec. Thus she has been a resident of the St. Lawrence counties almost from the genesis of settlement and she enjoys the unique distinction of having lived under five British sovereigns.

A Marvelous Transition

She marvels at the transition during her lifetime. In her early days there was absolutely no means of gleaning the news over long periods; there were neither trains, telegraph nor telephone and newspapers were unheard of in those sylvan avenues amid lofty pines. She wonders constantly at the march of scientific progress, at the evolution of the radio, talking pictures, the automobile, the modern highways and wireless telephony. But she isn't convinced that all of this constant rush for speed and supremacy makes for greater happiness than was her portion under conditions where people had to live by their own wits and initiative.

Full Happy Life

Winchester's lovable lady is happy as she passes the century mark of her life. She has always been a profound church worker and attendant, first in the Methodist Church and later in the United Church. She was at both services on Easter Sunday, has still a firm step, good memory, and excellent hearing and is obviously grateful for it all. She is happy in having given to the world a splendid family of 11 children and raising an adopted daughter, Mrs. John Dayle, of Red Deer, Alta. Of her own children three survive: Stanley, of Calgary; Henry, of Toronto, and Chester, of Winchester. She has 27 grand children and 14 great grand children, and needless to say, is proud of them all.

Unveiled Tablet

In 1925 when Church Union became a reality, Mrs. Timmins was chosen as being the most appropriate person to unveil the tablet which has been placed on the west side of the local United Church.

A few years ago when the Hon. Geo. H. Challies, Provincial Secretary for Ontario, was officiating at the opening of the newly paved highway in Winchester, it was Mrs. Timmins who handed him the scissors with which to cut the ribbon. Later Mr. Challies presented Mrs. Timmins with the same scissors as a souvenir of the occasion, and does she still cherish them? Just ask her!

Honoured By Council

Yesterday afternoon a large number of business men and other citizens of the village accompanied members of the municipal council to the home of Mrs. Timmins and tendered her a civic reception.

Those present on the platform were Reeve T. O. Keyes, Ex-reeve Aaron Sweet; Rev. W. S. Atchison, E. M. Shaver, Clerk; and Councillors Christie, Sherwood, Bessin and Bailey. The students of the Public and High Schools were present in a body, under the direction of the various members of the teaching staffs.

Mr. Chester Timmins led in the singing of "O Canada," after which Reeve Keyes delivered the following address:

Citizens of Winchester Community, and Friends:—

We are gathered together here to celebrate an event, the first of its kind in the history of Winchester, and in fact very rare in Canada, namely, "The One Hundredth Birthday Anniversary," of one of our much beloved and respected citizens, Mrs. Rachel Timmins, Our Grand Old Lady, who has lived here in Winchester and vicinity for 36,522 days, and judging from her present wonderful vigor and vitality, we have every right to expect and hope that the Good Master whom she has served so faithfully throughout these long years, will not call her Home for some years to come.

Now let us review in brief a little of her family history. Her parents, Mr. George Suffell and Hannah Pearson, natives of Yorkshire, England, were married in Stonegrave Church, Yorkshire, and later migrated to Canada and took up Government land in the township of Augusta, and on this farm just north of Prescott, Rachel was born on April 22nd, 1836.

At the age of 20 she was married to Andrew Timmins, by the late Rev. J. W. Sills of Inkerman. For four years after their marriage they lived in the township of Manvers, north of Bowmanville, coming back to Inkerman in 1861, and later they bought 100 acres of forest land just east of Winchester, at the Boyne, for $75. Clearing the land for the first log house 12 by 12 feet, the farm was developed, and buildings erected and improved. Later a beautiful brick house was erected. The virgin forest was converted into a beautiful farm site, and in 1891 they were awarded the Government trophy—a silver medal given for the best-kept farm in the three United Counties of Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry.

Oxen were used on the clearing of this land, and much of the wood was converted into potash, which was the only farm product in those days which could be sold for cash, all other produce was bartered for groceries. Mrs. Timmins was an expert carder and spinner of wool from which she made clothes for the family, and materials for the beds, and floors of the home.

In 1899 this grand old couple, after many years of hard labor, retired from the farm at the Boyne and took up residence in Winchester.

Mr. Andrew Timmins passed to his reward on July 23, 1917, at the good old age of 85, and Winchester township lost one of its most prominent citizens, who always took a very active part in the development of rural community life, and was greatly loved and respected by all.

Mrs. Timmins is the mother of 11 children—eight boys and three girls, and one adopted daughter. Of the sons—Chester of Winchester, Henry of Toronto and Stanley of Calgary, are living, while the adopted daughter, Mrs. John Dale, resides at Red Deer, Alberta. What a pleasure this old lady derives in looking upon her 27 grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren.

This lovable old lady thinks that the modern inventions are wonderful, such as the motor car, aeroplane, tractor, radio, electric lights, electric stove, electric washing machines, electric irons,

Dairy Instructor Gives Exhibition

SHOWS FINE POINTS OF CHEESE-MAKING

The finer points of manufacturing cheese were demonstrated at the Ault Creamery on Friday last, when George Barr, provincial dairy instructor, gave an exhibition of cheese-making, by taking over the day's supply of milk and personally making it up into cheese. He was assisted by George I. Martin, the local dairy instructor; W. J. Cobey, instructor for the Morrisburg district, and F. Doole, the Kemptville instructor.

There were over 40 cheesemakers present for the demonstration, also W. J. Stewart, president of the Dundas Cheese Patrons' Association, and other men interested in the cheese industry.

During the day, six colored cheese were made, and as each process was started, Mr. Barr took time out to explain to the other makers just the proper things to do in order that the cheese would be of the highest grade when completed. In the first instance, he told the makers and factory owners to urge upon their patrons, the necessity of delivering good quality milk to the factories and to pay strict attention to cleanliness. These were absolutely necessary for the starting point in manufacturing good cheese, Mr. Barr said. He also informed those present that, in his opinion, the government would give the farmers a bonus of one cent per pound of cheese manufactured. Last year the bonus was 1 1-2 cents, he said, but the government was not cutting the bonus out entirely.

In the evening, Mr. Martin, the dairy instructor for this district, tendered his makers a complimentary banquet at the Hotel Winchester. This was followed by a short program of speeches from the different instructors present at the demonstration during the afternoon.

Mr. W. J. Stewart, head of the Dundas Cheese Patrons' Association, announced that in all probability the newly organized cheese bobard would commence operations next week.

THE LATE GEO. A. OUDERKIRK

Hundreds of citizens from Chesterville and the surrounding district were present at the United Church, Chesterville, on Tuesday last, to pay final tribute to the memory of George A. Ouderkirk, prominent resident of that place, who died suddenly on Saturday last in the Cornwall General Hospital, following a serious operation.

The impressive service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. R. C. Tait, assisted by Rev. Geo. Extence, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. Mr. P. Hewitt, church organist, presided at the console. During the service a male quartette composed of Messrs. O. L. King, A. E. Bolster, A. J. Forward and D. G. Hutt, rendered a beautiful number.

The pall bearers were Messrs. W. J. McConnell, Geo. Gillard, Henry Sauve, Thos. Allen, Frank Nesbitt and Henry I. Johnston. Interment was made at Maple Ridge cemetery.

He was the son of the late Isaiah Ouderkirk, living on the farm where he was born. About 20 years ago he married the former Miss Bertha Irving, who survives, in addition to his mother, Mrs. Edward VanDusen, of Chesterville; two brothers, John, of Edmonton; Robert, of Chesterville, and one sister, Mrs. Carmen Empey, Cornwall.

Prominent in the municipality which he served as a councillor for seven years, ending his final term at the close of 1935, his death came as a shock to a wide circle of friends in this district. He was a director of the Chesterville and district Agricultural Society; a member of the Chesterville L.O.L. and one of the outstanding young farmers of the district.

The Family DOCTOR

DESTRUCTIVENESS OF MENTAL EMOTIONS

In these days, when everybody seems to have "colon trouble," a short talk on the subject appears to me very timely. I want you, not only to read, but to heed this, for it may concern you in particular.

Any form of profound emotion, as anger, fright, grief, and such like, exert a most decided effect on the colon, or large intestine. I have noticed that heavy brain workers are almost always troubled with that bane of healthy bodies—constipation. Any excess of effort on the part of the brain subtracts from the necessary nerve forces of the involuntary system, and to the detriment in health of the individual concerned. And I am sure that those placid natures among men and women—who take life temperately—who are not impulsive, irritable or quarrelsome, invariably have the best-working elementary-canals. I could mention many cases in proof.

I know of one man who cured his constipation—a severe form—by studiously avoiding his habit of fault-finding, and his was one of the most perfect cures I have witnessed. For years he had been a persistent "grouch." He could not argue on any question without insulting his opponent by his own anger. He said he "became so mean his family could hardly live with him." His physician told him the clogged bowel was the cause of his nerve trouble. A capable neurologist told him—and proved it—that his habit of growling produced the constipation! He simply quit being mean, and got well.

Here is something worth thinking about, worth trying, since the trial involves no expense in time or money. If you are overworking the mental energy in any direction, stop it, and work temperately; and as for foolish mental outbreaks, stop them anyway. We know that mental emotion affects the bowel profoundly. Now see if you can go about it intelligently and cure yourself.

TEMPLE DEDICATED

With upwards of 500 members present, representing many lodges in Eastern Ontario and points in Western Quebec and with A. J. Aderson, of Toronto, grand master, of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, presiding, Smiths Falls' new Masonic Temple was on Wednesday night dedicated for use by St. Francis and Osiris Lodges A.F. and A.M. The various chairs during the dedication services were filled with officers representing the Grand Lodge.

WHY QUIT WORKING?

In these days of unemployment it is apparent that many people regard work as merely a means of earning wages. Where are you more likely to see a broken doorstep or an untidy yard than around the home of the unemployed who is on relief and whose time is his own? Life is still "more than meat and the body than raiment." If folks would work for work's sake and for the benefit it would bring to themselves and to their neighbors, it would do them good and also help improve general conditions. A man who employs himself diligently is a better man and will be better equipped in training and outlook to obtain and hold a job. Some folk during seasons of unemployment have kept themselves busy improving their home surroundings and have maintained an activity of mind and body that in many cases has found a way out for them from their difficulties. Even the man who hasn't a job can work and profit by it. Again, if he has a mind for reading, the opportunity is there to improve himself. Practically every community today has a well-equipped public library. —St. Mary's Journal-Argus.

FIT MUST TAKE ANY FARM JOBS

Premier Hepburn recently renewed last year's campaign to get physically fit relief recipients on farm jobs. The Premier stated that the edict of last year, barring single men from the hostels if they refused farm work, will be repeated. The drive will be extended, he intimated, to get married men at work, and the Premier promised their standing and that of their families on the relief rolls would not be prejudiced.

"We are starting immediately an advertising campaign to place farm workers through our employment bureaus," the Premier said. "If we find there are any shirkers we'll empty the hostels as we did last year, order a medical examination of all the men, and those who are fit but refuse farm jobs will be barred from the hostels and relief."

Restrictions on the use of dogs in deer hunting are to be relaxed. The new provisions will permit two hunters to use a dog and the number of dogs permitted for larger parties will be increased.

The committee learned also that the ordinary $1 gun license will not be sufficient to permit the use of a high power rifle during the big game season. If any hunter carries such a gun he must have a big game license.—Exchange.

CORNWALL CHANGES DAYLIGHT SAVING

Cornwall will have daylight saving time for a period of five months this summer to correspond with the usual period observed by larger cities in the Dominion, city council decided at a recent meeting. Fast time will commence April 26 and will end September 26. Last week, council decided on June, July and August, only, as the fast time months, but industries in the city objected so strenuously that the resolution was rescinded and the five-month period adopted.

NOT GENUINE

The little group of country folk had been watching th band play for several minutes. They had never seen a trombone before, and the player of that instrument received particular attention. Finally, one farmhand nudged another with his elbow.

"Come on," he said, "it's a fake. He don't swaller it every time."—Pearson's

If you have two Christian names, but are known to your friends by only one, then the government must also be made cognizant of the fact. On the income tax returns which are due on April 30 a person must give his or her name in full and underline the Christian name that is used most frequently.

AN EXAMPLE

In a recent address King Edward presented effectively what he had to say in 15 minutes. If our long-winded legislators and other voluminous speakers would follow this fine example it would be a great relief to a long-suffering public.

FINCH MOTOR DEALER ATTACKED IN TORONTO

W. J. Brownlee, automobile dealer and undertaker of Finch, was beaten about the head and robbed Friday night last in Toronto by an unknown assailant to whom he had just offered assistance. Surprised in his attack by a passerby, the thug got only one dollar and some small change although Mr. Brownlee had $60 on his person.

Mr. Brownlee had gone to Windsor on Thursday for the purpose of bringing back a shipment of automobiles. On the return trip Friday, he and his assistants had stopped at a Toronto hotel and had parked the cars in a nearby lot for the night. Mr. Brownlee's men had retired and about 11.30 o'clock he left the hotel to make a final inspection of the cars before he himself retired. While on the lot he was approached by a man who asked him if he could spare enough money for a meal. As Mr. Brownlee was withdrawing his hand from his pocket to give the money to the man, he was knocked to the ground and beaten.

A passerby noticed the thug rifling Mr. Brownlee's pockets and ran to his assistance. As he came near the scene he saw three men take to their heels and run.

Mr. Brownlee was bleeding badly about the face and head and was taken to a hospital.

After spending the night at the hospital, Mr. Brownlee was released. He stated that because of the timely interruption, the thief had not looked in his pocket in which there was nearly $60.

ADOPT NEW METHOD OF SELECTING CANDIDATES

By a standing vote of 102 to 43, members of the Carleton County Conservative Association decided at a general meeting in the town hall, Richmond, on Friday afternoon last, to change the method of selecting candidates for the riding.

The new system as outlined in a report of a special committee which was appointed at the annual meeting in June to go into the matter is one in which every member of the organization in the county will be able to cast a ballot for the candidate he favors. Meetings will be held in each polling sub-division where paid up members of the association will cast a ballot for the candidate in the order of his or her choice and in turn the ballots will be counted and the successful candidate announced.

The new section of the constitution regarding selection of candidates reads as follows:

(1) The selection of the party candidate shall be by ballot of all members of the association in good standing, 30 days before the date appointed for such selection. All candidates must have written nominations signed by at least ten members of the association and ,filed with the association secretary at least 20 days before the date of such selection.

(2) Not less than three days previous to the choice of a candidate, public meetings shall be held under the control and direction of the association, where all nominees shall be given the opportunity of addressing the members of the association.

(3) At the time for the choice of a candidate, meetings shall be held in each polling sub-division where the paid up members of the association shall select their choice for candidate in their own poll. At this meeting the officers in charge of the poll shall distribute association ballots one to each qualified member and each member shall then vote for all candidates in the order of his or her choice."

GORDON TAYLOR RECEIVES CALL

Knox Presbyterian Church at Kincardine, Ont., has extended an invitation to Mr. Gordon Taylor, son of Mr. C. F. R. Taylor, of Carleton Place, to become their minister, a congregation that has only had seven pastors in 86 years. Gordon is not yet a licentiate of the Church, being a member of the 1936 graduating class of the Montreal Presbyterian College, but holds two scholarships from the College and McGill and will likely graduate this week, when he will be in a position to give a decision and the call will go before Presbytery. Gordon is a clever scholar and an able preacher and has a bright future before him.

The Press republishes the above item from the Carleton Place Herald, as Rev. Mr. Taylor acted as the pastor of the Mountain Presbyterian Church during the summer of 1935.

Every woman will feel proud of the fact that in celebrating its one hundredth anniversary this year, Wesleyan College at Macon, Georgia, is honoring its first graduate, Catherine E. Navy during the World War and Naval Representative of the United States at the Allied Peace Conference in Paris in 1918. When Mrs. Benson was an undergraduate it cost $50 a year for tuition and $15 a month for board, high prices, perhaps in those early days, but extremely low in comparison with the cost of a college education today.

HINTS FOR THE HOME

Curtain Weights

Curtains can be prevented from blowing out of the window and becoming soiled by using lead dress-weights. These weights can be covered with material the same color as the curtains, then slipped into the bottom hem of the curtains. Using about five weights in each hem will make the curtain hang evenly.

Molding Butter

Butter will not stick to the mold if the mold is scalded, then rubbed thoroughly with salt and allowed to cool in cold water.

Electric Washer

Don't put too much water in the electric washer. It not only produces excessive splashing, but the results will not be as efficient.

New Tinware

Rub the new tin vessel thoroughly with lard, then heat it in the oven before using it, and it will never rust.

RECIPES

Sweet Milk Griddle Cakes

1 quart flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons shortening, 1 egg, 2 tablespoons molasses, 1 pint milk.

Mix and sift dry ingredients; beat egg, and milk and molasses, pour slowly on first mixture; beat well. Add melted shortening. Cook at once on hot, well greased griddle. Serve with Maple, caramel or brown sugar syrup.

Pancakes

1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 egg, 1 cup milk.

A pancake should not be very thick, but perhaps it may require a little more flour. Fry in butter in a hot frying pan.

Corn Fritters

Rub flour smooth in butter and add to the hot mixture with the minced egg, which has been hard boiled, then add pepper and minced parsley. Boil up once and serve on rounds of toast.

Dressing for Fried Fish, Oysters or Cutlets

Soda biscuits, seasoning, eggs. Roll biscuits (if a bottle is used for this it will be found to roll the biscuits as fine as flour), add seasoning, pepper and salt for fish and oysters; for cutlets, thyme, sweet marjoram and summer savory, beat eggs, dip oysters or any fry in them, roll in seasoned cracker crumbs, and fry in butter or lard.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAN WILL BE LESS RIGID

Major revisions in the Ontario high school curriculum to provide adequate training for students not desiring university education, were outlined by Duncan McArthur, Deputy Minister of Education, to the College and Secondary Department of the O. E. A. recently

Features of the report, compiled by Ontario department officials and high school Principals, are substantial increases in English, social study and shop periods. Languages, mathematics and science are to be curtailed. Results over a period of years have shown the amount of time spent teaching Latin and French has, in the majority of cases, been to no avail, Dr. Mc Arthur stated.

Divide at Second Year

"Our efforts have been directed toward providing a course of study that would equip the student who desires to enter the business or manual field of endeavour. The present rigid course is not best for the diversified elements who leave the high school at the end of the lower or middle grades."

Under the tentative change, which, if adopted, will be in operation within two years, the first-year students will all be given a common course, regardless of what are their ambitions. "During the second year the diversion starts," the Minister continued. "It is at this time that the student should be encouraged to express his ambitions and the teacher advise the parents on the advisability of such a training.

"I suggest that if 50 per cent. of the lower class pupils were eliminated from your classes, we would see infinitely better results from the minority who succeed in academic vocations.

"We have received several friendly complaints from the University of Toronto of the inadequate preparation for higher education, evident in numbers of high school graduates." He believed this criticism to be justified, particularly in science and physics, and warned the large gatherings of delegates that the university courses might be curtailed if a general improvement in high school products was not effected.

Geography Essential

"The line of demarcation between history and geography during the first year will be almost invisible," he declared, adding that a greater study of geography would be required. This course, he thought, was essential, as it was the cement of all sciences.

A slow, but gradual transition from pure mathematics to algebra and geography is another feature, with more intimate relation between all courses. Under the new system four subjects will be compulsory, and after the first year, four are optional, these to be selected by the student. This will complete the general course at the end of Grade X, when the student is awarded a certificate if his work has been satisfactory.

The Deputy Minister expressed doubt as to the wisdom of retaining Latin in many high school courses, as it is not needed in future activities. "Until the university dispenses with the Latin requirement, it will always be necessary to compel high school students to take the course. Quality of the mind should be the primary consideration, not proficiency in Latin," he said.

At least 60 per cent. of Latin teachers in high schools have no right to be in charge of classes, he contended, realizing, however, that they are handicapped by students not suitable for Latin training.

"Again we come to the same old question of selecting the right material. Any method that will separate those students not fit to take Latin from those suitable, would assist the Ontario Educational System materially. Latin is not dead as far as education is concerned, but we must give teachers the right type of student, and not clutter the classroom with the unsatisfactory ones."

Waste of Time.

Teaching of French for a two-year period, he considered, was largely a "waste of time." After they leave most of them never hear a word of that language in their community.

Dr. McArthur made it clear they were not attempting to replace the vocational school, where a purely manual training is taught. He felt a variety of technique should be introduced into high high schools, thus starting the breakdown of the barrier between high and technical institutions. He deplored the lack of good English literature in most homes, depriving the student of the opportunity to read. Possible establishment of school libraries to repair this fault was intimated, by the speaker, who declared the average vocabulary of a high school student was extremely low. In conclusion, he said the sole aim of the report was to create a standard of taste to distinguish between that which is bad and that which is good.

Conservatives Select Convention Delegates

SAYS HEPBURN MISSED ON ALL BUT ONE PLEDGE

Berating Ontario Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn for "the extravagant administration of his government," Arthur Ellis, K.C., M.L.A., for West Ottawa, declared the only pre-election promise the Liberal party had fulfilled since taking office was a private one to Roman Catholic supporters to extend further rights to the separate school system in the province.

Mr. Ellis was the principal speaker at a complimentary banquet given by the Grenville-Dundas Liberal-Conservative Association in honor of A. C. Casselman, M.P., and Hon. George H. Challies, M.L.A., representatives, respectively, of that constituency in the federal and provincial legislatures. Other speakers were the guests of honor and Hon. H. A. Stewart, K.C., former Dominion cabinet minister in the Bennett government.

Conservative party supporters from all sections of the county braved cold weather and drizzling rain to attend the banquet, which was preceded by a meeting of the organization at which representatives were chosen to represent the riding at the Ontario Conservative convention at Toronto on May 28, when a new provincial leader will be chosen.

Vigorously Opposed

Changes in the assessment act, which automatically increased the taxes paid for the support of the separate schools, had been vigorously opposed by the Conservative Opposition at Toronto asserted Mr. Ellis. He charged that prior to the provincial election in 1934 Mr. Hepburn gave certain assurances to the Roman Catholic electors that the act would be changed. "Catholics, as a result, had strenuously participated in the election," said Mr. Ellis.

Regretting the raising of a religious issue on the floor of the Ontario Legislature, Mr. Ellis voiced complete disapproval of M. J. Quinn, president of the Catholic Ratepayers' Association of Ontario, for an address made by him at Oshawa some time ago. Separate schools hitherto had been receiving all they were entitled to under the British North America Act, said Mr. Ellis, and while the member for Ottawa admitted nothing could prevent the legislature from granting further rights, establishment of the precedent was altogether unwarranted. He cited Ottawa as an example, claiming public school supporters there would have to contribute some $50,000 more to compensate for the altered division of taxes under the changes in the act.

It was most unnappy for the province that the question had been thrust into the political arena, Mr. Ellis said, and he feared that the religious question might develop into a racial dispute. It was a disturbing thought for him that such a cleavage should arrive between the people of the province and it was "most unfortunate that this should be the only election promise Mr. Hepburn had fulfilled."

Recalls U.F.O. Rule.

After paying striking tribute to Mr. Challies as one of the most informed men on questions concerning the Ontario Hydro system, and to Mr. Casselman for his splendid capabilities, Mr. Ellis proceeded with his broadside against the Ontario government and its administration since coming into power. Recalling the provincial election of 1919 when the United Farmers of Ontario party swept into power by an overwhelming majority, Mr. Ellis contended that there had been no better example of gross mismanagement than that shown by the Drury government.

In 1934, while the province was still paying for the 1919 mistake, the West Ottawa M.L.A. continued, the Ontario electors thought a change for the better would occur if the Conservative government was defeated. Premier Hepburn had given promises of every description, the promises varying according to the audiences to whom he spoke.

The Ontario premier had not fulfilled his promise of reducing taxation, capital indebtedness and corporation taxes, Mr. Ellis said. He had not nor would he ever decrease the tax on gasoline, but he had increased corporation and succession taxes as well as levied an amusement tax which had aroused a storm of protest, declared the speaker.

Institution of the provincial income tax would result in the ruination of industrial capitalism in the province, would force industries to move to Quebec where taxes were lower, and meant the payment of $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 by Ontario residents. While the government promised to reimburse the the municipalities, who will no longer collect an income tax, Mr. Ellis foresaw the time when these very municipalities would receive nothing to compensate them for their loss.

Chiding Mr. Hepburn for his promises of a balanced budget, the speaker said he had no faith in the premier's announcement that the province would have a surplus of $597,000 at the end of of the next fiscal year. "He might just as well have said he would have a surplus of $5,000,000," said Mr. Ellis.

Direct relief, termed the most iniquitous scheme ever heard of, and the government's repudiation of the power contracts resulting in the credit of the province being adversely affected also came in for consideration by Mr. Ellis. Ontario would face an appalling situation if money rates were suddenly to go on the upgrade, he concluded.

Mr. Ellis, who was accompanied here by S. Rupert Broadfoot, K.C., was introduced by J. F. Sanderson, ex-M.L.A. for Grenville-Dundas.

Predicting a time when Eastern Ontario would be the centre of concentrated industrial activity because of its power and transportation advantages, Hon. Mr. Stewart foresaw bright political futures for the constituency's representatives to the Houses of Parliament. He favored democratic rule wherein electors had the privilege of changing government in preference to the rule prevailing in Russia, Italy and Germany. Democracies had a right to make mistakes, and he humorously agreed that the people of Ontario and the Dominion had made mistakes in the last two elections. His question, "Wouldn't it be an awful thing if we couldn't change the government at Toronto?" evoked considerable applause. Conservative members at Toronto had demonstrated considerable courage and ability in opposition, the former minister said, and he lauded the efforts of Mr. Ellis, "a front ranker when the next change in governments takes place"

Mr. Stewart condemned existence of more than two political parties. "There is a danger in Canada that we are going to split up into too many factions," he said. Too many parties did not make for aggressive government. Mr. Stewart concluded with an attack on the United States-Canada trade pact recently consummated.

"British traditions in the Ontario House as they prevailed under Whitney and Ferguson and Henry are gone," asserted Mr. Challies as he arose amidst an outburst of applause. He deprecated Mr. Hepburn's tactics in the House and regretted that the premier had no sense of dignity. "He sits there and wisecracks while the lobbies cheer." He had been forced, he said, at times to throw away the cloak of respectability and throw fire at fire. Mr. Challies said he appreciated the honor his fellow citizens were conferring upon him, and promised to serve as faithfully in the future as in the past.

Mr. Casselman expressed his appreciation of his recent appointment as chief Conservative whip at Ottawa and thanked the gathering for its fine tribute to Mr. Challies and himself. It had given him extreme pleasure to represent the historical riding of Grenville-Dundas in the House, and he too promised continued sincere effort on behalf of the constituency.

Dr. P. Walker of Prescott presided. The toast to the guests of honor was proposed by Dr. R. J. Patterson of Kemptville, while the toast to the ladies was moved by W. B. Merrill and responded to by Miss Lillian Connell of Spencerville.

Delegates to the convention at Toronto chosen were Mrs. M. Storey, of Kemptville; Miss D. Gillespie, Morrisburg; Miss E. Vincent, Spencerville; J. F. Sanderson, Oxford Station; Douglas Begg, South Mountain; James Lennox, Brinston; J. W. Ault, Winchester; F. Milligan, Iroquois; James Robinson, Augusta; Andy Gray, Prescott; Dr. R. J. Patterson, Kemptville, and Howard Nesbitt, Winchester Springs. Alternates selected were J. H. Errett, Merrickville; J. F. Ault, Morrisburg; G. Langstaff, Kemptville; W. E. Vincent, Spencerville; J. F. Casselman, Morrisburg; James Armstrong, Cardinal; James Safford, Iroquois; Carl Riley, Shanly; Harry Foster, Iroquois; Alex Clark, Brinston, and J. A. Gilmour, Spencerville.

QUEEN VICTORIA SHOCKED SUBJECTS BY RAILWAY JOURNEY

When Queen Victoria, in June, 1842, made her first journey by train from Slough to Paddington, and declared that she had enjoyed it, wide circles in Britain sustained a serious shock. Men and women shook their heads, observes a writer in Pearson's Weekly.

According to contemporary records Queen Victoria "accomplished the journey free from dust and crowd and heat, and was quite charmed with it."

The Queen's favorite coachman insisted upon accompanying the engine-driver in order to see that nothing was done to endanger her safety. When he descended upon the foot plate at Paddington station, reliable observers say he resembled a disheveled negro minstrel more than a servant in Royal livery.

A question was afterwards asked in the House of Commons by an M.P. who "thought that her Majesty's person should not be subjected to the hazards of railway travel." An answer was given stating that two carriages had been interposed between the engine and the carriage occupied by the queen, to obviate the risk of collision.

In those days many notable people strongly opposed the new mode of travel. The Duke of Cumberland, for instance, in the House of Lords, voted against a bill for a new railway because "it would be very disturbing to the Eaton boys." He added that "passengers would be shaken to death in these devil's carriages and all for what."—Perth Courier.

MUST HAVE MATRICULATION TO GET COMMISSION

New regulations regarding appointments of commissions and promotions for non-commissioned officers are published in district militia orders.

The regulations include the new requirement of junior matriculation or its equivalent for all officers of the militia, as announced some time ago.

The new regulations read:

The new regulations regarding non-commissioned ranks read:

To be eligible for promotion to any of the foregoing ranks, a non-commissioned officer must have served for at least one year in the rank of sergeant in such arm or service."

ASTONISHED

"Uncle," he said, after his grandfather had left the room, "how old is grandpa?"

"I couldn't tell you," answered his uncle, "without looking it up in the family bible."

"My word!" gasped the child, "is he old enough to be mentioned in the good Bible?"—Tit-Bits.

TEACHING THE PRINCIPLES OF SAFETY

Much may be said in favour of the system recently adopted by the Kitchener schools to give consistent instruction on the prevention of highway and traffic accidents to the pupils. A Director of Safety has been appointed, and it is his duty to see that children are given proper guidance in connection with traffic regulations, and safety rules.

The Toronto Globe heartily endorses the scheme, as should every thinking citizen in the province, in a recent editorial. It says:

"The systematic teaching of children along the lines of "safety first" must produce results. Warnings by parents may be disregarded by heedless youth, but when a school official, speaking with authority, impresses the danger his young hearers are subject to, and tells them how they may be avoided, it is a different matter. Then instruction becomes part of the school course, and will be impressed on the plastic mind of youth. It will have a place with the multiplication table, the spelling of words and the primary rules of correct speech.

"Of their own volition, teachers throughout the Province are doing good work in the cause of safety, and have been of great assistance to organized bodies which, year in and year out, have been trying to educate the public to be careful. All this effort must be having some effect, though it is difficult to ascertain how much. The promotion of caution against danger will be greatly simplified if there is growing up a generation in whose minds this spirit of caution has been instilled in the schoolroom by methodical instruction."

THE ART OF DANCING

According to reports, a certain clergyman in Owen Sound stated, in a recent address, that he would sooner send his daughter to a beverage room than to a dance in the Collegiate. It is his privilege to make such a choice, but we feel safe in saying that the average man or woman would prefer the dance. An interesting point is that the minister did not see the dances he censored so strongly.

What the reverend gentleman expected to accomplish by such a tirade is beyond us, for it may be assumed that the young people who participated in the dance, will continue to do so at every possible opportunity—and why shouldn't they?

The Picton Times, commenting editorially on the question, in a recent issue, summed up the situation very thoroughly, so far as we are concerned, when it says:

"The reverend gentleman treads on very thin ice when he estimates that all the girls and women who dance are flirting with the devil and have a loose trait in their characters. He shows a pitiful lack of confidence in womanhood and many a son, husband and father will take issue with him. There is a quality of mind to be considered and the type of mind that sees evil in everything is responsible for any evil that may be present."

BEAUTIFYING THE CEMETERY

With the arrival of Spring weather, it is natural that the thoughts of many people should turn to small plots of ground in the neighbouring cemetery. In a few short weeks the leaves will once more be on the trees, flowers will be in bloom and Nature will assume its summer dress. Why not plan on beautifying the resting place of loved ones who are buried in the cemetery, and in that way show some thoughtfulness of those who have passed on.

An effort has been made during recent years to beautify the cemeteries throughout this district. In order to accomplish much, however, the plot holders must co-operate fully, with the Cemetery Board. A few flowers, shrubs or potted plants will do much to give your plot, and consequently the entire cemetery, an appearance of beauty. Why not make such plans now?

EDITORIAL NOTES

Rumour has it that the Provincial Government will station a highway Traffic Officer in Winchester in the near future. Such being the case, his duties will probably include the work of patrolling Highway 31 from Morrisburg to Ottawa, now that the stretch of road from the Carleton boundary north is included in the King's Highway system.

While Highway 31 has been comparatively free from serious motor accidents during recent years, the presence of a motorcycle constable would no doubt act as an effective check on the drivers of one-eyed automobiles and speed demons who drive recklessly along the stretches of pavement in this district, with little thought for the safety of others or themselves.

The Daylight Saving nuisance will be with us again on Sunday next, when the clocks in most of the larger centres will be advanced one hour.

No satisfactory arrangement will ever be reached in this connection until the the idea of Daylight Saving is either dropped entirely or a uniform law passed governing the entire province.

Locally, the citizens in general seem to be quite satisfied with Standard Time and it will no doubt continue to remain so.

It is astonishing the number of people who will endeavour to save a few seconds by cutting across a lawn during this season of the year.

Such an individual apparently has no regard for the feelings of those who have spent hours of labour in an effort to beautify their surroundings. Grass, at this time, is very easily trampled under in the soft earth and this fact should be borne in mind by all. Keep to the sidewalks and in this way, aid in making Winchester attractive during the coming months.

Mrs. Andrew Timmins Celebrates Birthday

the movies, etc., but her long life of hard work with the meagre inventions of that day has made her incapable of adapting these labor-saving devices to a luxurious life which she so much deserves, so she is still content and insistent to carry on in her own old way in doing much of her own house work. But her welfare is in the efficient hands of her grand-daughter, Mrs. Mabel Allison, who lives with her.

On Easter Sunday she walked to church twice. Although her eyesight is failing, her hearing is still comparably good, and she has a keen memory and recalls with ease the events of her pioneer days. She, with her husband, were staunch supporters of the Old Methodist church, and she has been a constant attendant at the United church. On the occasion of her diamond wedding anniversary she was presented with a Life Membership in the Women's Missionary Society in recognition of her years of service to the Society. Much more could be told about this wonderful old lady, but it will be carried down in history, that she was one of the most loved and respected citizens of Winchester township."

Presentation Made

At the conclusion of the address, Mrs. Timmins was escorted to the platform by her two sons, Stanley of Calgary, and Chester of Winchester, amid the applause of the audience.

Mr. Keyes then called the gathering to order, and proceeded with the following address to the guest of honour:

Winchester, Ontario, April 22, 1936.

Dear Grandma Timmins:—

We, your friends of Winchester, are assembled here at your home to-day to pay tribute of love and respect to you upon your One Hundredth Birthday Anniversary.

We have seen all of your old generation pass away, and you alone remain. Surely kind Providence has a purpose in prolonging your days beyond the allotted time, that we may have your living example of moral integrity and righteous living, which accumulating for years has made you the richest person in Winchester, for a good name is more valuable than great wealth.

As a wife, your love and respect for your husband made a happy and harmonious home.

As a mother, your self-sacrificing devotion to your family enshrined you in the hearts of each member of the family.

As a citizen, your good example and broad charity reached all, and its influence will live on and on forever.

As a Christian worker in the Church, you have added many stars to your crown which the Righteous Judge will bestow upon you when it pleases Him to call you to your Everlasting Home.

And now, Dear Friend, the Village Council acting on behalf of the Citizens of Winchester, ask you to accept this little token of our love and esteem, and may this Word of Truth (Bible) continue to be a Light to brighten your pathway to your glorious Home awaiting you beyond.

Signed by members of the Village Council on behalf of the Citizens of Winchester, Ontario, T. O. Keyes, Reeve; Ernie Christie, Hy. Bessin, Dr. Sherwood, T. A. Bailey, Councillors; Ed. Shaver, Clerk

The presentation was made by Councillor E. J. Christie.

The chairman then called upon Rev. W. S. Atchison, who spoke briefly on the influence of Mrs. Timmins' life in the church in this community. Short speeches were also delivered by Messrs A. Sweet and Rev. J. A. Waddell, of Western United Church, Ottawa.

Mr. Keyes next called Messrs. E. J. Spinks and H. G. Graham to the platform and presented them with souvenir medals forwarded to the Public and High Schools by Mr. J. A. Peart, of Winchester, England, as a further gesture of good-will. Both expressed their appreciation, on behalf of the students, to the donor.

Unveils Flag

After the presentation ceremony ,the reeve continued his address to Mrs. Timmins and those assembled by saying:

"In October last year, Winchester was honored by a short visit of Mr. J. A. Peart, one of a party of leading Educationists from England, who were touring Canada.

Mr. Peart's home is in Winchester, England, and he was very much pleased to discover and visit his City's namesake village here in Canada.

In appreciation of his visit here, and to extend the mutual felicitations between his home City and its namesake, here in Canada, he proposed after his return home, that his City make a suitable presentation to Winchester, Ontario, Acting upon this suggestion, the Mayor and Mayoress of Winchester, England, (Mr. and Mrs. Arthur T. Edmonds), Mr. J. A. Peart, Director of Education; The Winchester Branch of the English Speaking Union, and the 16th Hants Lone Girl Guides, made a replica of their City Flag and forwarded it to the Reeve of Winchester, Ontario, Mr. T. O. Keyes, and it arrived a few days ago. Along with the flag the Mayor sent the good wishes of the citizens of Winchester, England, and cordial greetings and the hope that our Village will be blessed with happiness and prosperity. He hoped that the new flag would find a place on our Village Hall and be unfurled upon every Civic occasion.

Upon behalf of the citizens of Winchester, I accept with great thanks this wonderful gift from the donors at Winchester, England, and I know that the mutual good will between the Winchesters will expand, and that our Village will reciprocate in some tangible way to show their deep appreciation of this beautiful gift, and thank them again for their kind good wishes.

And now, for the first time, let this flag be unfurled to the breezes of Canada.

It is quite fitting that we call upon our oldest citizen of Winchester to unveil this flag. Our Dear Old Grand Lady, Mrs. Timmins, will release the flag, after which we will all join in singing "God Save the King."

* * * *

The flag, which will be treasured by residents of this place through succeeding generations, has a background of coronation red, upon which is encrusted the crest of the ancient City of Winchester. It measures 8 feet by 12 feet and is made of durable material, that should withstand the strong Canadian winds for many years to come.

Was At Home To Friends

During the afternoon and evening Mrs. Timmins held open house and was visited by over two hundred friends, not only from Winchester, but from distant points. The aged lady was assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. Henry Timmins, of Toronto, and Mrs. Chester Timmins, of Winchester, while the following grandchildren served lunch: Lily Timmins Howie and Kathleen Timmins Ward, of Toronto; Carrie Timmins Gardner of Philadelphia, Penn.; Anna Timmins MacInnis, of Iroquois; and Helen Timmins, of Winchester.

An event which delighted Mrs. Timmins on this memorable occasion was the baptizing of her great grand-daughter, Helen Beach MacInnis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ewart MacInnis, of Iroquois. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John A. Waddell, of Ottawa, assisted by Rev. W. S. Atchison. Grandparents on both sides of the child's family were present, in addition to the great grandmother.

Another event which greatly pleased the centenarian was the presentation of a beautiful hymnary, made by Mrs. W. S. Atchison and Mrs. George Earle during the afternoon.

Noted among those who visited Mrs. Timmins' home yesterday were Mr. Dawson Beattie, Winchester's eldest gentleman; George H. Challies, M.L.A., and Mr. J. G. Challies, of Morrisburg.

Honoured by United Congregation

At 7.30 in the evening, Mrs. Timmins was escorted to the United church, where she was honoured by members of that congregation. Rev. W. S. Atchis presided, while greetings were brought from other congregations by Rev. W. D. Turner, Rev. H. Wood, Rev. D. W. Summers and Rev. John MacKay, of Ottawa.

Mr. Aaron Sweet, representing the United Church of Canada, extended congratulations on behalf of that organization, while messages from Rev. J. H. Miller, of Huntingdon, Que., and Rev. J. K. Curtis, of Delaware, Ont., two former pastors, were read to Mrs. Timmins by Mr. N. W. Beach.

The following address was then read and presented to the guest of honour by Mr. J. D. Stewart:

* * * *

Mrs. Andrew Timmins,
Winchester, Ontario.

Dear Mrs. Timmins:—

On the occasion of this One Hundredth Anniversary of your birthday, an event very few people have the opportunity of celebrating, The United Church of Canada, Winchester, Ont., desire to extend to you their most hearty congratulations and sincere good wishes.

When one arrives at the age of three score and ten, it is usually considered that any additional years are beyond the expectation of life; but when the time extends to the century mark, the one attaining that goal is Divinely favored. Therefore the local inhabitants take particular joy in commemorating your anniversary.

We have occasionally, in this locality, taken pride in assisting married couples to celebrate their "Golden Wedding." Thirty years ago we had the great privilege of assisting you to celebrate a similar event; ten years later we attended your Diamond Wedding, and now twenty years later still, we celebrate that very rare experience of any human being, the One Hundredth Anniversary of your birthday. You are much stronger and more active now than when you started on this eventful journey, so we have great hopes for your future.

During your long life, nearly all of which was lived in this vicinity, many changes have taken place. You began your married life in the primeval forest; your well earned night's rest, soothed by the song of the whip-poor-will, or disturbed by the howling of the wolves. You have seen the forests and log-cabins disappear and the well tilled fields and stately mansions take their place; the rough trails through the woods, turned into paved highways, as smooth as the waters of a placid lake. The aspect of the country has changed; the comforts and conveniences of life have increased. Your circle of friends, relatives and acquaintances have changed, perhaps many times during the century. All of your own brothers and sisters, eleven in number, as well as your husband and eight of your own children, have passed to the "Great Beyond," but we rejoice that kind Providence has spared your life and granted you health of body and mental alertness, even at the century of life.

Your Church life has been an inspiration to us all. When you lived on the farm, you did not hesitate to carry your child and walk four or six miles through the woods, along a rough trail, or over a corduroy road, in order that you might attend Divine worship. Today with eight cylinder automobiles and paved highways, many find it an arduous task, and the regularity of your attendance at the services, even at your advanced age, is an example that should be emulated by many of less years.

"Grow old along with me,
The best is yet to be:—
The last of life for which the first was made.
Our times are in His hand,
Who saith, "A whole I planned
Youth shows but half, trust God, see all, be not afraid."
—Robert Browning.

We take pride and pleasure in extending to you our hearty congratulations and trust that you may long be spared to grace our Church and Community with your presence.

We esteem it a great privilege on this occasion to present to you this "plaque" in commemoration of this happy and exceedingly rare event.

We pray that God's richest blessings may be yours, and again we wish you many more years of health and happiness.

Signed on behalf of the Winchester Congregation, Winchester, Ont., April 22nd, 1936.

Plaque Unveiled

During the evening a plaque, which will receive a place of honour in the local United Church, was unveiled by Mrs. Timmins' great grand-daughter, Miss Luella Allison. The inscription reads: "In honour of the 100th Anniversary of Rachel Timmins, wife of the late Andrew Timmins, born April 22nd, 1836. A life-long member of the church."

Mrs. Timmins greatly appreciated this action on the part of her church friends. With tears of joy streaming down her cheeks, she expressed her thanks, concluding her remarks with a prayer, during which she said: "Throughout my long life the Lord has sustained me. He has always helped me and my trust is in Him."

Many Flowers

On behalf of the W. M. S., Mrs. Timmins was presented with a basket of beautiful flowers by Mrs. J. W. Ault. Other flowers were received from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Timmins and family, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Timmins, Calgary; Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Timmins and Helen, of Winchester; Mrs. G. McEwen and Miss Norma Maxwell, of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Gardner, of Philadelphia, Penn.; Miss Emma Gardner and pupils of Room B, Winchester Public School.

All surviving members of Mrs. Timmins' family were home for the occasion and over 200 guests registered in the "Centennial Birthday Book," which will be placed among this dear old lady's most cherished possessions.

Note: This historical sketch on the life of Mrs. Timmins and reports of events which took place at the celebration of her 100th anniversary, were compiled by W. F. Workman, senior member of the Press Staff. Much of the material used in the historical sketch was published in last Saturday's Ottawa Evening Citizen, but was supplied to that paper by our writer.

MEN RESCUED FROM MINE

At 11.47 p.m. E. S. T., yesterday daring Nova Scotian miners brought Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding to the surface, after the two men had been imprisoned by a cave-in of rock in the Moose River gold mine, Halifax county, N. S., since Easter Sunday. A third member of the party, Herman R. Magill, also of Toronto, died of hunger and exposure on Monday last.

When brought to the surface, the men were said to be in good condition. They were at once rushed to an emergency hospital.

DUNDAS-GRENVILLE PRESBYTERY MEETS

The spring meeting of the presbytery of Dundas-Grenville was held in St. Paul's United church, Prescott, on Wednesday, April 15th. Rev. T. Knowles of Iroquois presided and representatives both ministers and laymen, from all charges in the presbytery, were present.

The following were elected as commissioners to the general council to be held in Ottawa in September: Ministerial representative, Rev. T. Knowles; alternate, Rev. Donald Morrison, Hallville; lay commissioner, A. Nash of Morrisburg; alternate, Charles Patton.

The presbytery gave permission to sell the United Church property in Maitland to the Women's Institute.

During the dinner hour, served by the Women's Association, an address on matters pertaining to the missionary and maintenance fund was given by Dr. William Munroe, secretary of the Montreal conference.

At the afternoon session, the committee on evangelism and social service noted with approval the emphasis on evangelism which was taken place throughout the presbytery. Rev. Mr. Atchison and Mr. Beach, both of Winchester, spoke of effective services held there.

Rev. D. N. Coburn, Prescott, reported on the establishment of a salary equalization fund. This is a general fund, administered through the general council, which will be used to augment the salaries of these ministers who did not receive the minimum salary as set by the home mission board.

Presbytery went over five per cent. increase in givings to missionary and maintenance fund and a thank-offering was taken to commemorate the tenth anniversary of Union. Rev. H. L. Morrison spoke of unparalleled opportunity in India; 70,000,000 people are forsaking Hinduism and seeking a spiritual home.

Rev. J. D. McRae, chairman of conference settlement committee, urged congregations to maintain the standards of ministerial support and not to retrogress.

The annual meeting of conference will be held in St. James United church, Montreal, from June 1 to June 5. Dr. Lynn Harold Hough will be the speaker. Dr. Roberts, moderator of the church, and other outstanding leaders will be present.

The presbytery pledged its support to an entertainment, May 1, in Merrickville, in aid of Union church, to pay off mortgage.

The evening session was devoted to a discussion on the settlement of ministers with Rev. R. W. Armstrong, chairman of the committee, presiding.

INKERMAN

Late Mrs. Frank Barriger

An old and highly respected resident of this place passed away on Monday, April 13th, in the person of Mrs. Frank Barriger. The deceased, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Coons, was born in Matilda eighty-eight years ago. She was the daughter of Richard Coons and his wife, Eliza Ann Steed. Hr husband predeceased her some five years ago. She leaves to mourn the loss of a loving mother, three daughters and one son, Mrs. D. Brandmire, with whom she resided, Mrs. A. Kirker and Mrs. Sam Marquette, all of Inkerman, and Mr. Reuben Barriger of South Mountain; three sisters, Mrs. McGinnis and Miss Julia Coons of Iroquois, and Mrs. Olive Bilow of Oregon, U. S. A.; and two brothers, Messrs. Robert and John Coons of California, besides twelve grandchildren and seventeen great-grandchildren. One daughter, Mrs. John Bailey, had passed to the Great Beyond on Aug. 10th, 1916.

The late Mrs. Barriger had been confined to her bed for the past nineteen months but bore her suffering with Christian fortitude and still could say "Thy will be done." The funeral service was held on Wednesday, the 15th, from her late residence to the United Church of which she had been a life long member, thence to the Knight cemetery there to await a glad re-union on the Resurrection Morning. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. R. C. McConnell, and was largely attended.

Y. P. S. Take Evening Service

The service on Sunday evening, April 19th, in the United Church was taken by the Young People's Society and the guest speaker was Miss Florence Waddell, of Hainsville, Ont. Following the opening exercise, the president, Mr. Stanley Rennick, led in prayer. "After the hymn "All Hail the Power of Jesus' name," was sung, the responsive reading of Psalm 124 was read by Mrs. Dalton Timmins and Romans 12th chapter was given by Mr. Geo. Suffell, after which "He Keeps on Loving Us Still," was very beautifully rendered by the choir with Miss Ena Armstrong at the organ. Prayer was then offered by Miss Nellie Baldwin, Miss Grace Corry, Messrs. George Casselman and George Stevens. "O Master Let Me Walk With Thee," was then sung, and fitted in very perfectly with Miss Waddell's address on "Christians Building a New World." She said: "Man cannot live by bread alone, but must feed our souls as well." To do this we must learn to think right and live right, and she threw out the challenge, "What would Jesus think and do if he were a Canadian." Her message was much enjoyed by all and will long be remembered by all who heard it. Messrs. F. G. Hutt and T. J. Keyes then led in prayer. Hymn "Jesus took my Burdens," was then sung by the male members of the choir. The closing hymn, "Faith of our Fathers," brought this very interesting service to a close after which the Benediction was pronounced by the Rev. R. C. McConnell.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Rev Charles E. Dunn

Jesus Looks at Wealth and Poverty
Lesson for April 26th. Luke 16:19-31.
Golden Text: Proverbs 22:2.

Note the sharp contrasts in the vivid parable chosen for our lesson. We see the over-privileged Dives, satiated with luxury, over against the forlorn, despised Lazarus, consigned to degradation. No doubt the former was buried with costly pomp and ceremony while the latter's body was interred in the potter's field in the spirit of the old song: "Rattle his bones over the stones, he's but a pauper whom nobody owns." And then in the world after death the two men are again separated, this time by that yawning chasm between heaven and hell.

Rev. Chas. E. Dunn

Consider what a reversal of judgment is here so graphically portrayed. On earth Dives was master, a highly honored figure. But in the celestial realm he found himself in a terrible prison from which there was no escape. Crying out for comfort and release he was blocked in his hope of escape by the severe reply of Abraham. Here we find an illustration of the Master's searching warning that "many who are now first will be last, and the last, first."

What was the trouble with Dives? He is not pictured as a drunkard or an adulterer. He probably gained his wealth rightfully in keeping with the Ten Commandments. His sin was plainly that of omission. In his selfish inhumanity he left undone what he should have done. How strongly Jesus condemns this sin of neglect! The foolish virgins who forgot the oil for their lamps, the man who failed to invest his talent, the candidates for salvation at the Last Judgment who had not been charitable to those in need, all fell under the sharp edge of his stern rebuke.

And what of Lazarus? The sympathies of Jesus are all with him. There is a note of protest here against the social chasm separating the rich from the poor. And we find also a reminder of the gentleness and mercy of Jesus toward the unfortunate.

TO AID FARMERS WHO WERE HIT BY HAIL DAMAGE

Following a conference arranged by Mr. A. H. Acres, M.L.A. for Carleton, with the minister of agriculture, the Hon. Duncan Marshall, in Toronto last week, attended by the deputy minister of agriculture, J. B. Fairbairn; R. S. Duncan, director of agricultural representatives service; J. D. Smith, director of crops branch, and W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative, definite arrangements have been made for a certain amount of assistance to be extended to the farmers of Nepean and Gloucester who were hailed out last July and as a consequence are handicapped in the matter of seed for this spring. Hon. David Croll, minister of relief, is co-operating with the department of agriculture in supplying the funds which will be loaned to the farmers with the administration of it being handled by the department of agriculture through the office of the local agricultural representative.

Details of the method of handling this problem have just been announced by W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative for Carleton county, and any farmer who is unable to make other arrangements for the procuring of seed may make personal application to Mr. Cockburn, at 295 Albert street, Ottawa, up to Wednesday April 22, at 5 o'clock. All applications will be investigated and applicants advised immediately after that as to what assistance they can secure. As no cash is being advanced, order forms will then be issued for their various requirements to all applicants furnishing a note for the total credit advance, the same to bear interest at five per cent., and maturing Dec. 1st.

It is understood that the total amount of credit extended to any individual will not exceed in the neighbourhood of $75. Special consideration will perhaps be given to commercial gardeners who would not come in the above class. It is understood that this assistance will apply only for the purchase of oats, barley, wheat, peas, grass seed, and field corn. Arrangements are being made for the collection of these notes to be made through a local bank.

Carmen Guest and A. E. Morris were in conference with Mr. Cockburn when details of the plan for assistance of storm sufferers were studied.

PROMENADE DECK

by Ishbel Ross

SYNOPSIS: . . . A luxurious five-month cruise around the world aboard the "Marenia" brings together a group of passengers for adventures, romantic, entertaining . . . and tragic. . . . Like in "Grand Hotel" these passengers offer a study in human actions and reactions which unconsciously bare their souls. . . . These characters are aboard the ship: Macduff, dour Scotchman, single, of middle age; Miss Mudge, school teacher, spending the savings of 20 years; Angela, faithful wife of Lovat, gigolo; Dick Charlton, first officer; Clare, a person of experience; Joan, a dissipated flapper; Jenny, run-away wife, and Peter; Captain Baring, master of the ship . . . and his soul. . . . NOW, GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Tenth Instalment

They dined together, Angela in the highest spirits. Her wit flashed at the tip of her tongue; her laughter rang like the thin chiming of bells.

"You're very bright tonight," Macduff told her.

"Yes. I've had news from home today."

"Oh, that's it!" His manner was dashed. "It must have been cheerful."

She laughed behind her champagne glass. "It was something I didn't expect," she said.

They strolled out of the dining room and took two 'rickshaws to Jade Street. At last they went into the tiniest and blackest of all the shops, and a wrinkled old Chinese came forward to ask in a squeaky voice, what they wanted. She explained that she wanted a jade bracelet, very rare, very choice. The man studied her with attention; then he closed his shutters and bolted his door.

"I show you something very rare, missie," he said, moving majestically through the small square of the shop. He pried at the drawer of a lacquer chest, which sprang open and revealed an inner compartment. Angela fancied she caught a gleam in the whites of his eyes. His fingers moved mysteriously at the back of the chest, pressing on secret springs till he reached a long black case. From its velvet folds, which seemed to hold the dust and dead odor of centuries, he drew out a bracelet and suspended it with a clash before her eyes.

"Ah!" she exclaimed, in admiration. "That's it!"

Macduff was impressed. He took the bracelet in his hand and passed it through his fingers, bluntly, without the caressing fondness of the Chinese. Five carved Buddhas of dark jade were strung together on an intricate silver chain. An eloquent bracelet, a bracelet one would remember. She could not have dreamed of a better choice. The merchant named his price. It was absurdly high and twice the value of the trinket. She did not care. "I want it," she said to Macduff, "and I won't haggle at all."

"Are you glad to be homeward bound?" Macduff enquired. She did not answer.

"Angela, I asked you a question."

"I know, Macduff. Forgive me, but I'm wondering whether I'm glad or not."

"What happened, Angela? I know that something hit you hard."

"How clever of you!"

"I thought you'd be glad to get back to your husband and home."

"I'm not going back to my husband." She spoke as calmly as if she were flicking a speck of dust from her clothes.

Macduff looked at her suddenly and dropped his pipe from his mouth. "You're not going back to your husband?" he repeated, stupidly.

"No. He doesn't want me back. He wants a divorce."

"And you're going to give it to him?" His voice rose from its deep rumble to a peak of surprise.

"Why not? You see, he's fallen in love with a girl of seventeen, and youth must be served."

"Well, I'm damned!" Gently he touched the back of her idle hand. "I'm double damned! The swine!"

"Hush, Macduff." Her fingers covered his lips.

"The bracelet, then? I'm sure it had something to do with your news."

"Yes," said Angela, simply. "Lovat wanted the bracelet for the girl he loves."

"Angela, you're a fool!" said Macduff, suddenly.

"Yes, I'm afraid I am, a miserable fool. But let's move on.

It was one of the red-letter days in Miss Mudge's life. When they were back on the Marenia, she looked up Mr. Charlton, feeling that her pleasure was something she must share with him.

"I wonder if I shall be able to settle down when I get home," she was saying. "I've always thought it better to feel planted in one spot."

"I shouldn't suspect that from knowing you, Miss Mudge."

His voice was teasing, but it passed over her like a caressing wind.

"Why not?"

"I can't believe you'd bang the door shut on adventure. If you were that sort, you wouldn't have come on this trip around the world."

"I think you're discovering things about me that I didn't know myself. But, you see, there hasn't been much chance for me to do anything but stay put."

She leaned against his sleeve, her quaint, small face thrust up into his. Dick feared that she wanted to be kissed, that she wanted very badly to be kissed by him, yet did not know it. He held her hand and felt it burning in his cool clasp. Miss Mudge caught fire under his touch until all of a sudden he was holding her, shaking, in his arms. O God! he thought. Though he hated tears, he was moved by the desperate note of hysteria in her voice. She shuddered and clung to him. He was shocked by the fervor of her embrace.

"I'm so ashamed!" she murmured into his ear.

"Ah, don't say that. It's stupid for a woman to be ashamed of her feelings. They're really the most charming thing about her."

"But I wouldn't do this in Ohonto," Miss Mudge went on. "I

"Ah!" she exclaimed in admiration. "That's it!"

"You must forget about Ohonto. wouldn't be so abandoned."

Dick laughed.

You're very far from there now, and you must know by this time that there's a broader, freer world than that."

Miss Mudge listened, entranced. Perhaps it was true. His words sank sweetly into her consciousness. Suddenly she buried her face in his collar.

"Mr. Charlton!" she mumbled.

"My dear!" said Dick, catching her in a firm and sustaining grip and laughing at himself for a fool. He turned her face up, dripping with tears. He saw her drenched eyes and the eager, tremulous curve of her lips. Bending over, he kissed her so slowly and thoroughly that she fainted against his chest. With a quick surge of concern he put her back in her chair and bent over her, wondering what he could do to revive her, but he saw that her hysteria had been wiped out in a deadly wave of inertia.

After a while she got up and scuttled along deck without a word—a ridiculous figure, with ridiculous skirts, flying towards the companionway. She had called him Mr Charlton, even when he had kissed her! Dick wiped the sweat from his brow. Never again! He regretted everything that had happened, everything from the very beginning. This had been different from all his other experiences; it left him with a self-disgust. He was strangely touched thinking of Miss Mudge's lonely pillow.

The Marenia was steaming across the Pacific with her homeward-bound pennant flying from the mast. Captain Baring was having a cocktail party in his quarters.

Miss Mudge was talking to Dick Charlton. Her sparrow face was aglow, and she was drawing on a cigarette in the ridiculous, inadequate way she had. The chief officer seemed to be rather embarrassed for once in his life. The Foster girl, who had been drinking cocktail after cocktail with her attention fastened on him, was reeling over in their direction now. Her expression was glassy and determined. Angela saw her step between them and catch Miss Mudge by the shoulder. Heavens! Was she going to make a scene? She was drunk enough for anything. Suddenly Joan's voice rose, strident and hysterical, over the babel of tongues, arresting the attention of everyone in the room. Miss Mudge was blinking at her, not knowing what it was all about. Joan, a blazing fury of red locks and dishevelment, was bending over her and shouting things that made Angela's heart stand still.

"You think Dick loves you, you poor little simp!" she cried. "Well, you're mistaken. He loves me. Do you understand? He loves me. He's laughing at you. Yes, I saw him kiss you on the deck at Yokohama, after you had thrown yourself into his arms. I saw you faint, you silly little crow. You didn't see me in the beach chair, did you? Why did you ever leave Ohonto, or wherever it is you come from? Why did you ever think you could come around the world and behave like anyone else? Don't you know you're a sketch? Take a look at yourself!"

Joan threw back her head and laughed. Dick tried to intervene, but she pushed him off and took firmer hold of Miss Mudge, on whose face a slow realization was dawning.

"You think because Dick dances with you that he's in love with you and not with me. Well, he's laughing at you up his sleeve. Everybody knows he's making fun of you, but you're too simple to know it. He knows you're forty-three and never had another man in your life." ('Stop her, stop her, some one;' Angela was murmuring through pale lips, but everyone seemed to be rooted to the spot.) "He knows you say your prayers at night and help to support the missions. He knows you're a Dry who's cheating, a silly little school-teacher trying to be a sport, smoking cigarettes, painting your face like a harlot, swigging at a drink—yes, and no doubt sleeping with him, too."

"Stop it, Joan! You're mad."

Dick was towering over her in ashen fury. He caught her by the arms. She pulled herself free and slapped his face.

"Don't speak to me! I haven't finished with her yet. She wears cotton nightgowns with necks like this. (Joan gestured from shoulder to chin.) She sleeps with curlers in her hair. I've seen her, on her way to the bath. Won't wear her glasses, for fear they might spoil her appearance. Bumps into chairs. Falls over tables. Chatters, chatters, chatters, to everyone who will listen to her. All about Ohonto and the wonderful children she teaches. 'Swonderful! Thinks the world is full of glamour. . . . Oh, I've heard her by the hour. Loses her money at Monte Carlo. Thinks Dick's Sir Galahad. Ha! Why is Dick good to her? Dick's good to her because everyone on the boat knows she's used up her savings and can't go ashore. Dick's sorry for her. Dick's mad with me. . . . Little schoolteachers should stay at home and keep their pennies in their cotton stockings. . . . Shouldn't be a nuisance to grown-ups. . . . Shouldn't think that a Spanish shawl will make them fit to kiss. . . . Poor little Miss Mudge." . . .

"You think he's in love with you and not with me!"

Everyone tried not to look at Miss Mudge. At first her cheeks had burned. Now they were ghastly pale, except for the dots of rouge, high up on her cheeks, that made her look like a wax model. Once she had raised her hand to protest. Then it had fallen limply. What was the use? Captain Baring stood as if he were carved in rock. He regarded a drunken woman as the final debasement of human nature. Hell of a mess for Charlton to get into! His favorite officer, and he wasn't a fool with women, either. He'd have to haul him over the coals, though it probably wasn't his fault at all. Dick had been cold to more attractive women than Miss Mudge. The captain knew all about him. But a scene like this—before passengers! It wouldn't do.

The chief officer had turned his back and was hastily swallowing a drink. Angela and Macduff stood in appalled silence. No one knew what tack to take, but Miss Mudge herself took hold of the situation. Ignoring them all, she put her arm around Joan's drooping shoulders and said in a clear, high voice: "Come on, you foolish child. Come down with me."

Sir Douglas Haig, the Scottish commander of the British Army, used to tell of a Scot who bored his English friends by boasting about Scotland.

"Why did you leave Scotland?" a Londoner asked, "since you liked the place so much?"

The Scot chuckled and said: "You see, it was like this: In Scotland everybody was as clever as I was—but here, I'm getting along verra weel."—Christian Science Monitor.

SHOOT DOGS ON SIGHT

Having received numerous complaints from all sections of the Cornwall district, Game Overseer Royal Baker has issued a warning to dog owners that their animals will be shot on sight if caught in the act of running deer. Overseer Baker said that deer are unusually numerous throughout Stormont and Dundas this year, and are to be found in considerable numbers within a few miles of Cornwall. Farmers have seen many deer being pursued and attacked by hounds.

SOME HANDICAP

In a small church a child was brought forward to be baptized. The young minister, taking the little one in his arms said: "Beloved hearers, no one can fortell the future of this little child. He may grow up to be a great leader like J. H. Thomas or a great business man like Henry Ford, and it is possible he might become Prime Minister of England."

Turning to the mother, he inquired: "What is the name of the child?"

"Mary Ann," was the reply.

BRUCE BARTON Says:

★ . . . Political Speeches Useless

I am curious to know how many of my readers are afflicted in the same curious manner as I am as a result of listening to a public speech. Here are a couple of illustrations:

A group of Big Shot executives held a convention in an eastern city and for three days addressed fiery speeches to each other, and presumably to the public, in denunciation of almost everything. Compelled to suffer through the entire session, I started out in somewhat general agreement with the speakers. On the second day I found myself cooling and on the third day in almost complete disagreement with their views.

Shortly thereafter I was compelled to suffer for my sins by having to listen to two speeches from the other side. Both gentlemen labored earnestly to win us and belabored vigorously all those who differed with them. When they had finished speaking I was right back where I had started.

Now both sets of speakers were making perspiring efforts to strengthen their causes and both succeeded, so far as I was concerned, in doing the very opposite. Their positions would have been stronger had they never talked at all.

These experiences confirmed a doubt long held by me that rarely if ever does a political speech do any good. I once asked my father if he had ever known of any man who was persuaded to change his views by listening to a public address.

He answered: "Yes, it happened once. When I was a preacher in a small town in Ohio there were two old fellows, one a confirmed Methodist and the other a violent Baptist. They agreed to a debate. As a result of it the Methodist converted the Baptist and the Baptist converted the Methodist. Each died in the opposite faith."

As for the foolishness of speeching, and political speeching in particular, I suspect that father, too, had his doubts.

★ . . . . . Work That Goes On

My good friend Roy Chapin, head of the Hudson Motor Car Company, died recently at the too early age of fifty-seven. Back in the early '20's, when he looked like a rosy-faced boy, he was president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. I was chatting with him at the annual dinner of the Chamber, and he told me this story:

"I left the University of Michigan at the end of my sophomore year and got a job with R. E. Olds, who was working on his first little one-cylinder Oldsmobile. One day we started out for a trial spin and had travelled only a few blocks when something happened and the car stopped.

"Mr. Olds said: 'You sit here while I go around the corner where there's a chap who runs a bicycle repair shop. I think he can fix us up.' A moment later Mr. Olds returned with an alert mechanic who promptly got down on his back, wiggled under the machine, made the repair, wiggled out, brushed himself off, and accepted a quarter with thanks.

"That man was Henry Ford."

This is the kind of story we used to tell each other in this country, with much pride. In those days each one of us thought in his heart that he himself might be rich some day. Or, if not he, then his son or his grandson. We thought it was the glory of America that in one generation a hard working young fellow could rise from overalls to the command of a great institution.

The current philosophy seems to be that any man who has arisen to the command of a great institution must, ipso facto, be wrong. This is just a passing phase, one of those brief intervals that afflict a nation from time to time. This will pass and the work of the builders like Roy Chapin will go on.

Nancy Hart's HOME NEWS

All the gay colors and exotic designs of chintz are incorporated in a new American fabric patterned after the Chinese inspirations. It is washable, color-fast and pre-shrunk, making it ideal for bright summer dresses, sun-suits, bathing ensembles, and gardening and beach hats.

The phrases "golden" and "silvery tones" have long been stock descriptions used by poets and critics to describe beauty in music. Now, it appears, science and art have co-operated to add a new term to the musical writer's dictionary—"platinum tones." Such, at any rate, is one of the possible results of the introduction by Georges Barrere, world famous flutist, of a solid platinum flute. Made at a cost of $3,000, this instrument is said by musicians and scientists who have heard it to possess tonal qualities superior to those of any other flute ever made.

Experiments at one of the leading universities have shown that potato juice is as rich in vitamins as tomato juice. Peppers, horseradish, parsnips, turnip greens are more powerful sources of vitamin C than orange juice; and cabbage, cress, peas and turnips have about the same amount of the vitamin as orange juice. New methods of estimating the strength of the vitamin content in fruits and vegetables have been discovered. It used to take thirty days with a guinea pig, but now less than an hour is needed.

Household Hint: A small piece of butter added to the water in which vegetables are to be cooked will prevent them from boiling over.

MARRIED FOR LOVE

"Yes, Jack Brown was a splendid fellow,
But married for love, you know;
I remember the girl very well—
Sweet littl Kitty Duffau.
Pretty, and loving, and good,
And bright as a fairy elf,
I was very much tempted, indeed,
To marry little Kitty myself.

"But her friends were all of them poor,
And Kitty had not a cent;
And I knew I shoud never be
With "love in a cottage" content.
So Jack was the lucky wooer,
Or unlucky—anyway
You can see how shabby his coat,
And his hair is turning gray.

"But I'm told he thinks himself rich,
With Kitty and homely joys,
A cot far away out of town,
Full of noisy girls and boys.
Poor Jack, I'm sorry, and all that,
But of course, he very well knew
That fellows who marry for love
Must drink of the liquor they brew."

And the handsome Augustus smiled.
His coat was in perfect style,
And women still spoke of his grace,
And gave him their sweetest smile.
But he thought that night of Jack Brown
And said: "I am growing old;
I think I must really marry
Some beautiful girl with gold."

Years passed, and the bachelor grew
Tiresome, and stupid, and old;
He had not been able to find
The beautiful girl with gold.
Alone with his fancies he dwelt,
Alone in the crowded town,
Till one day he suddenly met,
The friend of his youth, Jack Brown.

"Why Gus!" "Why Jack!" what a meeting!
Jack was so happy and gay;
The bachelor sighed for content
As he followed his friend away
To the cot far out of town,
Set deep in the orchard trees,
Scnted with lilies and roses,
Cooled with the ocean breeze.

"Why Jack, what a beautiful place.
What did it cost?" "Oh, it grew.
There were only three rooms at first,
Then soon the three were too few.
So we added a room now and then;
And oft in the evening hours,
Kitty, the children and I
Planted the trees and the flowers.

"And they grew as the children grew,
(Jack, Harry and Grace and Belle)"
"And where are the youngsters now?"
"All happy and doing well.
Jack went to Spain for our house—
His road is level and clear—
And Harry's a lawyer in town,
Making three thousand a year.

"And Grace and Belle are well married,
They married for love, as is best;
But often our birdies come back
To visit the dear home nest.
So my sweet wife Kitty and I
From labor and care may cease;
We have enough, and age can bring
Nothing but love and peace."

But over and over again
The bachelor thought that night,
"Home, and wife and children!
Jack Brown was, after all, right.
Oh! if in the days of my youth
I had honestly loved and wed!
For now I'm old and there's no one cares
Whether I'm living or dead."

The best rules to form a young man are, to talk little, to hear much, to reflect alone upon what has passed in company, to distrust one's own opinions and value others' that deserve it.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—By JOHN HIX

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

The strange and undescriptive name by which the famous gambling resort of Monte Carlo is officially known was not given to it by mistake or inadvertence—it was a deliberate attempt on the part of the founder to cloak his institution in an inoffensive name. At first it was called simply "Bathing Society of the Sea of Monaco," but later the owner expanded his name to make it even more strange. It was called "The Association of Sea-Bathing and Strangers' Club of Monaco."

Behind this strange name and other strange rules and regulations of the gambling resort lies the attempt to correct mistakes that ruined Francois Blanc's gambling place in Bavaria. Blanc who founded Monte Carlo's "sea-bathing and Strangers" resort began his gambling institutions in and near Paris. Police there would not let him alone, so he moved to Bavaria where he established a successful place in 1843.

He made the mistake here, however, of letting local citizens play. Several family fortunes in the immediate vicinity were ruined by losses in Blanc's place, and public feeling ran so high that he was forced to re-establish himself elsewhere. When he finally settled at Monaco he made it a point to keep th people contented with his enterprise. He arranged for lightened tax burdens, gave the town beautiful churches, and most important of all he refused to let any residents of Monaco gamble at his casino. As a further cloak of innocence, he adopted the strange name the gambing resort bears.

THE FARMER FEEDS 'EM ALL

The politician talks and talks,
The actor plays his part;
The soldier glitters on parade,
The goldsmith plies his art.
The scientist pursues his germ
O'er the terrestrial ball,
The sailor navigates his ship,
But the farmer feeds them all.

The preacher pounds his pulpit desk,
Brokers read their lengthy tape;
The tailor cuts and sews his cloth
To fit the human shape.
The dame of fashion, dressed in silks,
Goes forth to dine or call,
Or drive, or dance, or promenade;
But the farmer feeds them all.

The workman wields his shiny tools,
The merchant shows his wares;
The aeronaut above the clouds
A dizzy journey dares.
But art and science soon would fade,
And commerce dead would fall,
If the farmer ceased to reap and sow,
But the farmer feeds them all.

SPRING SONG

Make me over, mother April,
When the sap begins to stir!
When thy flowery hand delivers
All the mountain-prisoned rivers,
And thy great heart beats and quivers
To revive the days that were,
Make me over, mother April,
When the sap begins to stir.

Set me in the urge and tide-drift
Of the streaming hosts a-wing!
Breasts of scarlet, throat of yellow,
Rancous challenge, wooings mellow—
Every migrant is my fellow,
Making northward with the spring
Loose me in the urge and tide-drift
Of the streaming hosts a-wing!

Only make me over, April,
When the sap begins to stir!
Make me man or make me woman,
Make me oaf or ape or human,
Cup or flower or cone of fir,
Make me anything but neuter
When the sap begins to stir!
—Bliss Carman.

THE TWO ROADS

I got a glimpse of the road to success,
But the end was nowhere in sight.
There were hills in the road,
And crooks in the road,
And the way wasn't overly bright.
There were places all light and sunny
And places quite dark and rough;
I got a gimpse of the road to success,
One glimpse, and that was enough.

The road led up a tortuous hill,
Success must have been at the top;
But the bogs in the road,
And the logs on the road,
So many places to drop.
And the travellers so worn with striving
And tramping their neighbour down
Oh, I got a glimpse of the road to success
And the terrible cost of renown.

I got a glimpse of the road to Christ,
That "straight and narrow way,'
There was joy to be seen "at the end of the road,"
And the end was brighter than day;
And the travellers along that highway
Were helping their neighbour along.
Oh, I got a glimpse of the road to Christ,
And my heart was filled with song.

SIXTEEN AND SIXTY

O, grandma sits in her oaken chair,
And in flies Bessie with tangled hair;
"I'm going to be married, oh, grandmamma!
I'm going to be married! Ha! ha! ha! ha!"

O, grandma smooths out her apron string;
"Do you know, my dear, 'tis a solemn thing?"
"'Tis a solemner not to, grandmamma;
I'm going to be married! Ha! ha! ha! ha!"

Then grandma looks through her sixty years,
And sums up a woman's hopes and fears
Six of 'em living, and two of 'em dead;
Grandpa helpless and tied to his bed.

Nowhere to live when the house burned down;
Years of fighting with old Mother Brown
Stockings to darn and bread to bake,
Dishes to wash and dresses to make.

But then the music of pattering feet,
Grandpa's kisses, so fond and sweet—
Song and prattle the livelong day,
Joy and kisses and love away.

O, grandma smooths out her apron string,
And gazes down at her wedding ring,
And still she smiles as she drops a tear;
"'Tis solemner not to. Yes, my dear."

OPPORTUNITY

They do me wrong who say I come no more
When once I knock, and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door
And bid you wake, and rise to fight and win.

Weep not for prescious chances passed away,
Wail not for golden ages on the wane;
Each night I burn the records of the day,
At sunrise every soul is born again.

Laugh like a boy at pleasures that have sped,
To vanished joys be blind, and deaf, and dumb;
My judgments seal the dead past with the dead,
But never bind a moment yet to come.

Though deep in mire, wring not your hands and weep,
I lend my arm to all who say "I can;"
No shamfaced outcast ever sunk so deep
But he might rise, and be again a man.
—Walter Malone.

DON'T SLAM THE GATE

Now, Harry, pray don't laught at me,
But when you go so late
I wish you would be careful, dear,
To never slam that gate.

For Lottie listens every night,
And so does teasing Kate,
To tell me next day what o'clock
They heard you slam the gate.

'Twas nearly ten last night, you know,
But now 'tis very late—
(We've talked about so many things);
O, do not slam the gate.

For all the neighbours hearing it,
Will say our future fate
We've been discussing so I beg
You will not slam the gate.

For though it is all very true,
I wish that they would wait,
To canvass our affairs—until—
Well—pray don't slam the gate.

At least not now; but by and by,
When in "our home" I wait
Your coming, I shall always like
To hear you slam the gate.

TO OWN THE EARTH

It is said that the father of the debonair young foreign secretary of Great Britain, Sir Anthony Eden, once gave his son this advice: "Walk as if you had bought the earth." Whether or not those words were in any way influential in bringing about the romantic course of events that have so far shaped Sir Anthony's life is impossible to say. Or just what Sir William meant to convey by them. If one may presume to criticize the remarks of so great a person as Sir William Eden, it might be said that it is superfluous for any person to walk as if he had bought the earth, because it was always his. It ought to be the privilege of every man, woman or child to walk as if he owned it, or his own particular share of it. Very good advice would be for him to walk that way, anyhow, and to do what he can to make it possible for every individual to enjoy his share of it.

Man has a rich heritage, and one that does not require any false bravado to provide him with a sense of dignity. It is a tragedy that he does not always avail himself of his rightful inheritance. He has inherited the earth with all its wealth of productiveness and spiritual possibility, a heritage which never fails to yield fresh secrets and riches to the intelligent searcher. For the person who takes advantage of the opportunities offered him through a consciousness of spiritual if not of actual possession of the earth, there cannot fail to be rich rewards. The material part of the possession is not the most valuable; sunshine, rain, storm, clean air, grass, birds, flowers, blue water and all the pulsing beauty of the great out-of-doors—this is his for the taking. It is a part of his heritage.

The thought that one owns the earth in this way is comforting, as well as disturbing. Comforting because it gives a sense of being a joint owner of the rest of mankind of an invaluable possession, a possession with unlimited possibilities and yielding surprising revelations. Disturbing, because it startles one into a sense of great responsibility, that of treating the heritage with proper awe and respect and of making the most of it.

Acting as if one had bought the earth leads to an over-bearing officiousness that is far removed from the serious, thoughful bearing of the young man who received that arrogant advice. But acting as if one owned the earth in the real sense of the word leads to a development of true poise, to a dignity of perfect balance that will not betray our heritage, that of the earth with its wealth of material and of spiritual gifts.—Ganaoque Reporter.

Just think how many people were denied a horse and buggy in the old days because nobody had thought of this $1.00 down idea.

ALL CAN HAVE WINDOW BOX GARDENS

When you instal an outdoor window box it immediately becomes a part of the house, and should conform to its architectural design and color scheme.

For this reason it is well to construct your own window box, and it is not difficult to do.

Window box gardening is a recreation and delight which everyone can enjoy, whether he lives in the smokiest city, or the roomiest suburb. They are grown to be seen from both the inside or the outside of the house, and there is such a variety of subjects available that almost any location (except extremely shady ones) is suitable.

The box itself should be of the same color as the building, or as its trim and the flowers shoud be of a contrasting color which is harmonious. For a red brick house, white flowers and plenty of green foliage would be attractive. For a house in which yellow is the prevailing tone, blue flowers should be used. These are only suggestions, since the taste of the owner will control, of course.

The flowers must grow well, if the box is to give pleasure; and rich soil is most important, because there is so little of it. The soil should be what florists call good potting soil—a sandy loam well enriched. Holes drilled into the bottom of the box and covered with broken pieces of pottery will serve for drainage.

The best window-box flowers are those which bear flowers freely and continuously. In these respects the petunia has no superior. All types are long bloomers, the large-flowered single and double, the small flowered singles, the dwarfs and the balcony types. The new fragrant double nasturtiums are fine window box material, and some of them are of the trailing habit.

It is possible to have a window box filled with morning glories, and it is hard to imagine a more beautiful decoration than their tapestry of green leaves and glorious blue flowers. They like a south exposure.—Gananoque Reporter.

FINCH FARMER BRUTALLY BEATEN

Slugged and choked into unconsciousness by one or more thugs who broke into his home on the outskirts of the village of Finch on Saturday night last, John Dougall Cameron, 67-year-old farmer of the district is in a serious condition at the home of neighbors. When he recovered consciousness he walked nearly half a mile to the home of Dr. G. J. MacLeod, Finch, for aid, and then told police that he had been robbed after he was beaten. Sgt. R. P. Labelle and Constable E. Rose of Cornwall were notified and are investigating.

According to the story told police by Mr. Cameron, who is very deaf, he returned home about seven o'clock on Saturday night with the evening mail from the post office. He went to bed and woke some time later to see a light flashing in his bedroom window. Thinking it might be the car lights of his brother, D. Cameron, of Ottawa, who sometimes drives down to see him, he arose and looked out the window but could see no automobile. He went back to sleep and was later awakened by some one choking him. He struggled and the last thing he remembered was repeated blows on the head.

When Mr. Cameron recovered consciousness he found that the house had been ransacked and his clothes were scattered all over the house. He dressed and walked to the office of Dr. MacLeod.

Severe Cuts

Residents of the town saw him on the main street and assisted him to the doctor's office. The doctor was not home and his friends called Dr. Formley of Crysler and Miss Bertha Johnson, district nurse. Mr. Cameron had been struck forcibly sveral times on the head and there were several severe cuts that required stitches. It is not believed that the skull is fractured. Following medical attention, Mr. Cameron was taken to the home of Donald J. MacMillan, a neighbor.

Sgt. Labelle, in checking up on the attack of Mr. Cameron, found that entrance to his home had been made by taking off an outside and inside cellar window, and the thief or thieves had made their way upstairs to his bedroom. D. Cameron, a brother from Ottawa, arrived on Sunday morning and found his brother's small supply of money where it had been hidden for safety. He told police that his brother had complained several times recently of being robbed, but that this was the first time that he had been attacked.

In an effort to clear up the case, police are searching the district for all suspicious characters.

100 CLUB ENTERTAINS FARMERS

There was a fair attendance at the annual "Farmers' Night" program held in the town hall on Friday night last, and sponsored by the 100 Club. The president, Centurian W. J. Stewart, presided. The guest speaker for the occasion was Mr. J. C. Shearer, principal of Kemptville Agricultural School. He was introduced by Mr. Gordon Young, Inspector of Public Schools for Grenville. Mr. Shearer spoke on "Agricultural Education," pointing out that it was just as necessary for young men and women who desired to remain on the farm to receive an education along agricultural lines, as it was for professional men to be educated for their professions.

The program opened with selections by an orchestra, composed of Arthur St. Louis, Harold Helmer and Dwight Jones, followed by a welcome song, rendered by members of the 100 Club. Centurian Chester Timmins led in community singing with Miss Helen Timmins presiding at the piano.

Votes of appreciation to the 100 Club and the guest speaker were moved by Mr. F. F. Davidson and Centurian John McCormick respectively.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL NEWS

Service will be held in St. Peter's Church, South Mountain, next Sunday evening at 7.30 p.m.

There will be a celebration of Holy Communion in St. Matthias' Church next Sunday morning at 8.30 a.m. Sunday School at 2.30 p.m.

Next week the Synod of the Diocese of Ottawa will meet for its annual session at Lauder Hall. The sermon at the opening service on Tuesday evening in Christ Church Cathedral will be preached by the Right Rev. John Lyons, Bishop of Ontario.

Mr. Nathaniel Holmes, of Queen's Univrsity, has arrived home to spend the summer months with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Holmes. He was accompanied by Mr. Allan Balsam, of Bowmanville and Mr. Leslie Jackson, of Sarnia, who remained for a couple of days.

THE UNITED CHURCH

A much larger congregation than usual partook of the Communion service on Sunday morning. This was very impressively conducted by Rev. W. S. Atchison, who also received 56 new members into the church, revealing the worthwhileness of the recent evangelistic meetings. The 23rd Psalm was sung by the choir with Miss Alice Singleton taking a solo part. The pastor spoke from Luke 22:20 on the Covenant being God and man, giving some essentials of Covenants. The New Covenant in Christ was ratified by His blood.

At the Sunday School session, Mr. Fred Marshall, of Chesterville, who is the Township President of the S. S. Association, gave an interesting address to the boys and girls about investing their lives in the service of Jesus, and keeping in contact with the Sunday School and the Church.

Phil. 4:22 was the evening text on which the pastor spoke of being Christian in spite of all opposition. If we are going to live a triumphant Christian life we must places less emphasis on the externals of life and more upon inner reserve. The hostilities of life are not the greatest enemies to our spiritual welfare. Face the difficulties and be victorious through Christ who strengtheneth us, was the closing thought.

COUNTIES' COUNCIL CALLED TO DISCUSS $200,000 HOSPITAL

Losing no time in taking definite action in connection with the proposed construction of a tubercular sanatorium for the counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, the United Counties' council will meet at Cornwall on April 29, when the matter of constructing the hospital will be decided. The meeting of council is a special one and Warden Arthur Flynn, of Morrisburg, has announced that the sanatorium subject will be the only matter discussed at the session.

Some months ago, a special committee was appointd by council to secure all information concerning the hospital. Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, Hon. J. A. Faulkner, M.D., minister of health, cabinet ministers and officials at Toronto, were interviewed with the result that the government favorably considered the project and granted $85,000 towards the construction of a suitable sanatorium to serve the three counties.

The committee has thoroughly considered the project and will give a definite report at the council meeting on the type of building that would best fit conditions in this district. A proposed plan of the sanatorium will also be submitted.
