PREMIER HEPBURN RESIGNS AFTER COLOURFUL CAREER

Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, whose colorful political career and caustic comment often brought him afoul the Federal Government and at times injected him into international prominence, resigned Wednesday night as head of the Liberal Government of Ontario.

The 46-year-old party leader, in office for two terms continuously since 1934, was succeeded immediately by Attorney-General Gordon Conant.

Mr. Hepburn announced he would retain the Cabinet portfolio of provincial treasurer for a short time, after which, he said, he would retire from public life.

The new premier, Mr. Conant, is 57 years old, a former Crown Attorney in Oshawa for Ontario county, and was first elected to the legislature in 1937. He issued a formal statement saying "the entire personnel of the new government will be announced in a few days", and that "other pronouncements of plans for the future as may be considered advisable will be made shortly thereafter".

Mr. Hepburn's resignation came with the same startling suddenness that has characterized many of his political moves. Although for months there have been rumors—promptly denied by Mr. Hepburn—that the government itself would resign despite extension of its life as a wartime measure, it was only late Wednesday that swiftly spreading reports in Toronto insisted that the Premier's personal resignation was in the making.

Reporters gathered about the Premier's office, and it was shortly after 6 p.m. that Mr. Hepburn made his official prononuncement. He and Mr. Conant then left in the Premier's automobile for the Lieutenant-Governor's home.

Mr. Hepburn will retain his seat for Elgin in the Legislature while serving as Provincial Treasurer. His announced intention to retire from public life would imply his ultimate resignation from the legislature.

In his offical announcement, Mr. Hepburn gave no specific reason for his resignation beyond saying that he did not desire to seek a third term in office.

He said that a year ago, he had asked his colleagues to select a successor but he was prevailed upon to continue during the last session.

In retiring from the premiership, Mr. Hepburn leaves the personal command of a regime that for eight years provided the public with the unexpected in politics, not infrequently embellished with the Hepburn stamp of showmanship.

Mr. Hepburn has played a leading role in the early legal perplexities surrounding the lives of the Dionne quintuplets. He has bitterly challenged and defied the Federal Liberal Government of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, for whom he has stumped, and against whom he has as enthusiastically campaigned.

He has publicly berated the congress of industrial organizations for its part in the 1937 strike at the Oshawa General Motors plant. A few days ago, he stood on the same public platform with Communist Tim Buck and called for the lifting of the legal ban on the Communist party.

In January 1940, he lead his Legislature to a 44-10 vote in a resolution condemning the Federal Government for "so little effort" in Canada's war effort.

The following month, Prime Minister King announced dissolution of Parliament and his Government on March 26 was returned with a record majority.

In January 1941, Mr. Hepburn led the outspoken opposition of three provinces against consideration of the recommendations made by the Sirois Royal Commission report on Dominion-provincial relations. At an Ottawa conference, Mr. King sought implementation of the recommendations.

With at least six vacancies in the Ontario House, it is believed that Mr. Conant will proclaim a general election as soon as his Cabinet is re-organized and the party has gotten over the impact of the leader's departure.

Dr. and Mrs. I. Hilliard Safe in China

It will be good news to their many friends here to know that Dr. and Mrs. Irwin Hilliard are safe and well in China, and still carrying on their work in the face of difficulties. The following letter was received recently by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Hilliard.

Fowling, Sze., Tues., Aug 11|42

Dear Mother and Dad:

Thank you very much for your letters, which are now coming through in good time, just over a month and it is such a relief to have up to date news again and to know that you are both wel and busy. Part of the reason you are not getting more letters from us is the expense. The last time I sent a letter home, the first I had written in two months, they wanted $16.40. I only put ten dollars on it as we had been told in a letter from Chegtu. Even that is quite a lot so I hope you will pass on the news.

We are in the midst of a fairly severe epidemic of cholera in this city. Of course, I have had innoculations and so although in fairly intimate contact am running no risk. Now the Public Health Officer is sending all the very severe cholera cases to us. So far, we have not lost any in the hospital, but two have died before they got to us. Part of the reason for this epidemic of cholera is the trek of refugees and the steady stream of traffic from the occupied areas. The other reason is the local drought. We have had no rain since July 15th, and with every day over a hundred in the shade things soon get dried up and old dirty wells are called into service again and people drink cold water instead of their boiled food and tea.

I would like to tell you about our "glorious compound" but it is all drying up. I am afraid we are going to lose some of our orange trees. I hate to see a good tree die. Our three lemon trees I am having the gateman water every day, and one has six lemons, the first crop, this year.

However, there are many very encouraging sides to the work. The hospital is running very well. My Chinese colleague is one of the finest and best trained Chinese doctors I have met in Szechuan and a very helpful man to work with. Then I can see that we have made a place for the hospital in all the big concerns, the banks, the steamship companies and the government and military. Of course, in each there are some of the older men who go to their Chinese quack first, but they coming to us now before they are in quite as extreme condition that they used to be and it is a pleasure to have some say right off the bat, as it were, "Well if you say I should have it operated upon, then I will".

Agnes and Ann join in sending love to you all.

sincerely,

IRWIN

Mrs. R. G. [illegible] reader of the Lead[illegible] really enjoys reading this [illegible] nal from her home town. Writing to renew her subscription, Mrs. Purvis says in part:

"I am sending my cheque for the period ending Dec. 1944. If I should pass on before then, my heirs and assigns can enjoy The Leader.

"Incidentally, even though there are a lot of strange names (to me) in The Leader, it is like a puff of old-time lavender to me each week. I read every bit of it, and sometimes wish the folks I know there would not be so reticent about publishing what they're doing etc. Your editorial page, with its bright comments on world and home-town news, is intelligent, broad and witty. Keep up the good work.

"With best wishes, I am sincerely yours,

LOCAL BOY WINS AT KINGSTON

In a match track meet held at Kingston on Saturday last between athletes from Queen's University and the Norman Rogers Airdrome, the college team won the meet, collecting 31 points to the flyers' 22

First place in the 220 yds. dash went to Bill Gorrell, of Queens, a son of Dr. and Mrs. G. M. Gorrell of Morrisburg. Bill was also a member of the relay team from the college which lost this event to the airmen.

[illegible] The purpose of the [illegible] honour one of their former members Mrs. Graham R. Smith of Chesterville, (the former Miss Gladys Wingard) who was recently married.

After an enjoyable time spent in games, contests and music for an hour or more, the guest of honour was escorted to the centre of the group and Rev. E. C. Lacey addressed her on behalf of the Young People. He spoke of the high regard in which she was held by her friends and also expresed the regret of all at her departure. At the conclusion of the address Mrs. Wilbur Garlough on behalf of the Young People presented Mrs. Smith with a coffee table.

Mrs. Smith in her pleasing manner thanked her friends for their thoughtfulness and also for the beautiful gift, and all joined in singing "For She's A Jolly Good Fellow".

The serving of refreshments brought a pleasant evening to a close.

RESERVE ARMY NEWS

"A" Company, 2nd Battalion S. D. & G. Highlanders, held field manoeuvres on Sunday last in the vicinity of Bouck's Hill. This was the first time the Company has been together since the Summer Training Camp. It is expected that these events will be held frequently during the fall season. There was a large turn out from each of the several platoons, and all spent a pleasant and enjoyable day together. Sgt.-Cook Jerry O'Brien, who knows how to feed soldiers, looked after the messing exceptionally well. The boys had "No Complaints", which is rather unusual for the army.

The Regimental school of 'A' Company for N.C.O.'s is progressing favourably; a large number of officers, N. C. O.'s and men are taking the course. Lt. Col. W. J. Franklin, M. C., V.D., Officer Commanding the Battalion was present on Tuesday inght and lectured on various subjects. It is expected that a lecture on map reading will be given by an officer from Cornwall at an early date to be announced.

H. R. Schell has been promoted to the ranks of C. Q. M. S., and after taking a course at Kingston, in the handling of stores, will take over Company Stores. The Company has been without a Quartermaster since C.Q.M.S. H. O. Summers of Winchester, poined the R. C. A. F.

Reservists who miss parades without leave are letting themselves in for a peck of trouble. In many cases the courts are imposing fines and jail sentences for failure to attend. The Toronto Star tells of one reservist who absented himself from five parades and was fined five dollars for each offence, with an alternative of five days in jail for each. There should be a lesson in that news item for every member of the Reserve Army.

MUST SHOW CREDENTIALS

Commenting upon the reported operations in the Napanee area of an individual now serving a jail term who posed as a representative of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and obtained sums of money from a number of householders for an unnecessary and unauthorized inspection of their sewing machines, to which he made minor alterations or repairs the regional office of the Board again draws attention to the fact that every one of its representatives is required to carry properly endorsed credentials and to produce them when requested.

"Whenever a householder is approached by any individual purporting to be a representative of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, production of these credentials as identification should be requested," said a spokesman for the office. "If they are not immediately forthcoming, the householder is asked to communicate at once with the nearest office of the Board so that proper steps may be taken to deal with the impostor."

It was added that no one in the employ of the Board was at this time authorized to make inspections of sewing machines or to make charges for repairs to them, whether or not the latter are required.

BOOSTING THE WAR EFFORT

This paper and the advertisers in this space will each week for a 26 week period, boost the war effort in two special ways — first by keeping up an interest in War Savings Stamps by giving 4 stamps free each week (2 each to the persons whose names will appear in different advertisements). Simply locate your name, clip out the advertisement and present it at the Leader Office and you will receive 2 War Savings Stamps free. The second boost will be in the form of information published on this page each week taken from the official bulletins reaching this office from various government sources. These items will be about rationing, price control, unemployment insurance, etc., all of which affects our daily living, and of interest to everyone. We suggest that you clip this information out each week and file it in a scrap book for later reference.

HOT WATER NOT RATIONED

Reports have reached the regional office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board of restaurant proprietors having refused to supply customers with jugs of hot water when tea has been served them in a tea pot, the proprietors claiming that the customer thereby obtains more than his legal ration of tea.

Pointing out that hot water is not rationed, the office says that if a tea bag is in the tea pot, and the customer wishes to use hot water to dilute the brew to whatever strength his taste suggests, there can be no objection to such hot water being served and that if it is served the rationing regulations are not being violated.

PLEADS GUILTY; FINED $100

Pleading guilty in Brockville police court to a charge of having unlawfully sold or offered for sale a fishing reel at a price higher than reasonable and just, thus contravening the maximum price regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, J. Murray Dobbie, hardware merchant of that town, was fined $100 and costs of $2 by Police Magistrate G. A. Wright, who said that he could not make either the court or the Board appear ridiculous by imposing a small penalty. R. Danis, of Cornwall, represented the Department of Justice at the hearing.

It was charged by the Board that the reel, the property of Dobbie was offered for sale as a used article at $7.50 and at that time was claimed to be worth about $22. The purchaser paid 50 cents down, obtained a receipt and agreed to pay the balance in instalments. It was ascertained from an importer of fishing equipment that the reel was made in the United States, sold to importers at 47c and sold by them in turn to the retail trade at 70c. The importer, who identified the reel, said that it should sell to the public at not more than $2 when new.

In defence, R. J. Driver, K. C. entered in evidence a memorandum from a Canadian manufacturer of reels who reported that, since it was no longer possible to import such articles from the United States, they were being made in this country, but were noisier than those formerly imported. Counsel contended that the reel sold by Dobbie was of the level-winding variety and since reels of supposedly inferior type sold from $6.75, he felt that $7.50 was a fair price to ask for it. He asked for a nominal penalty, while Mr. Danis urged the Court to impose a fine of not less than $100.

Is yours one of the "hidden" names on this page. If you can find it, clip out the advertisement and bring it in. We will give you two War Savings Stamps FREE!

Rivers, trees, mountains and clouds form a picturesque backdrop for the highway to Alaska being built from Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, to Fairbanks by the U. S. Army. Here Army engineers have thrown a wooden bridge across a muddy stream, using more than 3000 logs. This permanent structure will be widened by the Public Road Administration sometime in the future. Alcan highway is scheduled to open Dec. 1.

WHAT SCIENCE IS DOING

TURPENTINE

Southern pine trees and the skill of American chemists are supplying the United States with a versatile product in which Japan once held a tight monopoly, writes Dr. C. M. A. Stine, vice-president advisory on research and development of the duPont de Nemours and Company for Science Service.

This is camphor, an important ingredient of thousands of peacetime and wartime products from liniments, unguents, stimulants and other pharmaceuticals to scuffless plastic heel covering on women's shoes, movie films (which use hundreds of thousands of pounds), military drafting instruments and motorcycle windshields.

State camphor trees of the Orient have for thousands of years been giving off their fresh and heady odor—an odor that carries for miles. Many centuries ago the natives learned to distill the camphor wood, using crude bamboo tubes to condense the snow-white crystals. These they pressed into small amulets to insure health and to serve as symbols of pagan belief. It is said that the Arabian physicians of the eleventh century appreciated the medicinal value of camphor.

German, Swiss and Italian plants were turning synthetic camphor out early in the twentieth century and a start was made on this continent in 1900. Several other efforts were also made during the first third of the century, but large-scale operations did not begin until the duPont company opened its camphor plant in 1932. Turning out close to 600,000 pounds of camphor a month, this plant now produces most of the camphor manufactured in the U. S.

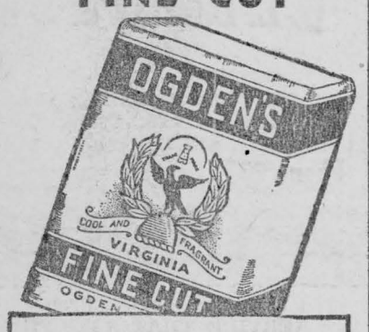

Pinene, the starting material for camphor production, is a clear, watery fluid which looks and smells much like turpentine. In fact, turpentine is 95 percent pinene, which is distilled off.

Film Shows Work Of Forestry Corps

A film, "Wood for War," made in co-operation with the Canadian Army Film Unit, is on its way from London. It shows men of the Canadian Forestry Corps at work in Scotland's forests helping to provide timber essential to Britain's war effort. All Canada is there, from East to West.

The great trees fall; they float down the Scottish rivers to her saw-mills; they become planks. The finished timber appears as bridges, pontoons, army hutments.

HOW CAN I?

Q. How can I make a substitute knob if the original comes off the lid of a kettle or pan?

A. Slip a screw through the hole, with the head on the inside of the lid, then screw a cork on the protruding end. This knob will not become hot, and it can be renewed easily when it has become spoiled.

Q. How can I make a dry shampoo?

A. Mix two ounces of cornmeal with one ounce of powdered orris root. Sprinkle this powder in the hair and then brush thoroughly.

Q. How can I chop nuts quickly?

A. Instead of chopping nuts for cakes or cookies, try placing them in a cloth and running the rolling pin over them.

Q. How can I keep the shower curtain in good condition?

A. After taking a shower, always be sure to draw the shower curtain out along the rod to dry. The air must get to it and let it dry out, in order to prevent damage to the fabric and possible mildew.

Q. How can I make a dessert with left-over rice?

A. Left-over cooked rice can be made into a delicious dessert by adding to it some chopped apples, diced pineapples, marshmallows, and whipped cream. Put into molds.

"Flying Scotsman" Maintains Schedule

Eighty years ago, in June, 1862, the first "Flying Scotsman" pulled from No. 10 platform King's Cross, London, at 10 o'clock A.M. and, with but one or two exceptions, this aristocrat among trains has left the same platform at the same time every day since then, says the Canadian National Magazine.

The story of the "Flying Scotsman" is railway history—indeed it is more, it is the railway history of five reigns. Since its first run every thing worth while in railway practice has been bestowed upon it. The original train of about six small coaches has grown through the years to the magnificent pre-war fourteen or sixteen coach luxury hotel on wheels that transformed the journey to Scotland into a most pleasant adventure.

Modern Etiquette

1. When a man and a woman are engaged to be married, isn't it permissible for them to kiss in public, and otherwise show their devotion?

2. What should one do when dummy during a bridge game? Watch the game or leave the table and walk about the room?

3. In which hand should the fork be held when conveying food to the mouth, and the knife is not required?

4. When a man is accompanying a woman who does not smoke and he knows that she does not object to his smoking, is it necessary for him to ask permission each time he wishes to smoke?

5. When a person has finished eating, isn't it helpful if he will stack the empty dishes?

ANSWERS

1. No. Such demonstrations should be reserved for their privacy. It shows very poor taste for them to display their love in public, and provokes unkind comments and criticism among their associates. 2. It is poor manners to leave the table during the progress of the game, and is much nicer to show an interest in the manner in which your partner is playing the hand. 3. The right hand. 4. Not at all; if he has already asked permission once or twice, it would be somewhat monotonous to keep repeating the request. 5. He may consider it helpful, but it is certainly not good form to do so. The dishes should remain as they are until the waiter removes them.

WHY YOU'LL HAVE BAKING SUCCESS WITH CALUMET

THESE days, no woman can afford to risk cake failures. To make sure their cakes are always gloriously light and tender—with what cake experts call "velvety-crumb"—so many women are using Calumet Double-Acting Baking Powder.

DOUBLE-ACTION SAFEGUARDS SUCCESS

With Calumet, two separate leavening actions protect your cake from start to finish. The first action takes place when you add liquid to the dry ingredients. Thousands of tiny bubbles go surging through the batter making it light and fluffy.

A second leavening action takes place in the oven. Released by heat, thousands more tiny bubbles slowly lift your cake high—and hold it there. They make rising even and steady and assure a cake that's soft as finest velvet.

TRIPLE ECONOMY TOO

Calumet is a thrifty baking powder because it gives so much for so little.

1. It costs very little to buy.
2. Most recipes call for only 1 teaspoon of Calumet to each cup of flour.
3. Its double-action is timed and balanced to assure the utmost in baking protection and perfection.

London Taxi Army In First Tryout

Home guardsmen in scores of taxicabs sped out of London to Epping Forest before dawn Oct. 4 and successfully fought off an "attack" on a convoy of trucks

It was the first tryout of the taxicab army organized by London's Home Guards, and the diligent, part-time soldiers acted with the greatest energy.

Military umpires ruled that the car-borne troops succeeded in repelling a parachute attack on the motor convoy. The idea was an adaptation of the French transport of troops from Paris to the Marne River in 1914.

A few hours later the taxis and their drivers were back at their accustomed stands.

ADVICE TO PARENTS

Let parents refrain from undermining the authority of the school teacher in the mind of the child, by ridiculing his attitudes, his way of acting or by openly criticizing him. Growing Of Rice In United States

Requires Warm Climate and Long Growing Season

Uncle Sam is calling for more rice growing, because rice is "extremely nourishing," compact to ship, and therefore suitable for soldiers. The Japs do pretty well, sometimes, on rice alone.

But expansion of rice crops will not be easy, for it is grown in only four states, practically, which have only about 1,500,000 acres of land suitable for it. The quota set for this year is 1,320,000 acres. Production in 1941 totaled 54,000,000 bushels, which at an average price of $11.85 a bushel brought a farm income of more than $64,000,000. This year's goal calls for an increase of 5,000,000 bushels, at least.

Growing rice requires an irrigation system by which the ground is kept covered with from four to six inches of water from seeding to harvest time. There must be a warm climate and a long growing season. Heavy and costly machinery is used, and a large amount of labor. The four states producing most of our rice are, in order of quantity, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas and California.

The rough rice is sent to the mill where the outer hull and the inner "bran" are removed and the kernels are polished. In most cases the polished rice is given a coat of glucose and talc, for its lustrous appearance. There were 74 mills operating last year, located almost entirely in the rice-growing sections. By-products consisting of polish, bran, poultry feed, rice flour, and hulls were worth $2,749,000 last year.

Women Join In War Against Rats

Thirty members of the Women's Land Army, who completed a fortnight's intensive training in rat destruction, have begun work against rats in the West Riding. There will hardly be a parish in the West Riding which will not be covered by these girls who will work in pairs.

A fortnight earlier these girls were hairdressers, clerks, shop assistants, and such like, and the thought of handling a rat would fill them with horror.

They have had extensive training in rat destruction by trapping, poisoning of baits and every other methods, but the poisoning method is the one they will use mostly.

THE WAR - WEEK — Con

Churchill And Roo… Confidence In Progr…

The same note of confidence in the growing strength of the United Nations, struck by Mr. Churchill in his speech at Edinburgh, was echoed a few hours later by President Roosevelt in his radio address, says the New York Times. Reminding his listeners that it is not his habit "to encourage lightly found expectations," Mr. Churchill could nevertheless acclaim such "solid and remarkable facts" as the gallant and successful defense made by the Russian armies, the miracle of production that has given the United Nations definite superiority in the air, the building of enough new ships to offset our losses on the sea. On his part, the President could report, on the basis of evidence recently acquired at first hand, that "the American people are united as never before in their determination to do a job and to do it well."

As we move forward with this job we find ourselves faced by the problem of a growing shortage of manpower, and it was to this problem that the President gave most of his time and emphasis. He is certain, and with good reason, that the country will accept a compulsory draft of manpower, if that is the best way or the only way to solve the problem; but his preference is wisely for a thorough trial of the voluntary method before that stage is reached; and, except for his belief in the necessity of lowering the draft age for actual military service — a step long favored by the Army — his recommendations point in that direction.

Change In Russia

"We shall take Stalingrad, you may depend on that." So said Adolph Hitler not long ago. Stalingrad still stands.

On June 26 the Germans launched from Kursk the great offensive which has carried them to the banks of the Volga. That was 108 days ago. But fifty-two of these vital fighting days have been used up in the siege of Stalingrad. Russian troops still hold the ruined city. If it continues to stand, the Summer campaign of the Nazis may pass into history as a gigantic failure. It has achieved spectacular gains, but not its main objectives.

Though it is too early to say definitely, there are recent indications that the German High Command has begun to recognize such a failure and is preparing to make the best of it. The fighting in Stalingrad has died down. The furious German infantry and tank assaults have ceased. They may be renewed, but for some days there have… skirmishes. … have fallen back … The Russians say th… in. North of Stalingra… mans themselves are reso… defensive trench fighting. Bro… hints, which may or may not be true, come both from Berlin and Vichy that positional warfare is about to succeed the war of movement on the Russian front.

If that is true the Germans are breaking off their offensive two months earlier than they did last year. It may mean any one of these things or some combination of them. It may mean that they wish to avoid last year's mistake of letting their field armies get caught in mid-Winter. It may signify German exhaustion. It may indicate German plans to push their campaign in the Caucasus, where fighting conditions are still tolerable, while they make ready either to strike in the West or defend themselves there.

Moscow says the Germans in Russia are worn out. There is no doubt that exhaustion is a factor in their plans. Losses in the siege of Stalingrad have been huge. An incalculable amount of material, brought up over a long line of deteriorating railways, has been burned up in battle. We do not know the full effect of British bombing on German transport and war production. It may well be that such destructive raids as those on Cologne and Essen are only now beginning to be felt on the Russian front. Whatever the actual facts may be, Stalingrad remains the signpost on the battle line. It still reads "Stop."

At the two ends of the 7,000-mile Pacific sea front Japan last week had retreated from her most advanced positions, and in the Solomons America still held the advantage. In the fog-shrouded Aleutians Japanese forces evacuated the islands of Attu and Agattu. On the mountain trails of New Guinea, Japanese jungle fighters had retired northward after a push toward Port Moresby. In the Solomons area an American task force slipped into Japanese waters, smashed hard at Japanese shipping found there, then made its getaway without loss. The full meaning of the Japanese withdrawals was not clear. They might be strategic retreats to consolidate positions elsewhere or to prepare new blows. They might be a sign that the attrition attacks delivered by United Natlons forces were having effect, that the initiative was slowly slipping from the Nipponese grasp.

… craft is na… secret, but it is … greater than the R. A. … Spitfire. On a recent raid to Oslo, Norway, four Mosquitos literally "ran away" from Focke-Wulf 190 fighters—the pride of the Luftwaffe.

A large order for Mosquitos has been placed in Canada and already tests of the first models are being made. They are flown by a British official who came from England for the purpose of making the initial tests. High ranking officers of the R. C. A. F. and government officials have witnessed their performance.

The Mosquito, according to British reports, fills a needy gap for an all-out day and night bomber offensive.

As well as its terrific speed, it is capable of flying long distances into enemy territory and fighting its way back to its base.

The nearest British base from Oslo, Norway, is, roughly 1,000 miles, which means that the Mosquito has a range of more than double that distance. Surprising news of the plane's exploits are expected to come from overseas within the next few months.

Women employed on British railways to help to replace men who have joined the Forces now number more than 50,000.

… of friendship which … been given to me."

Then again: "But in these months with the horses, only the journey has been constant. For I no longer travel to arrive. I no longer belong to lights and fires, to pleasant meal times, to books and pictures and windows curtained at night, but to woods and rivers, to fields and forests, to weather and the sky. And so for the first time, as one walking by, I have seen the neat, complete pictures of many hundred homes. I have felt their texture, breathed their atmosphere and passed."

Bear Steak

Truck Driver Amp James, en route to Madoc in a northern Frontenac district, met a bear on the road. The bear climbed a tree and James stopped his truck, climbed a tree next to the one the bear was perched in, and killed it with a single blow from a hatchet. He loaded his kill on the truck and sold bear steak at Northbrook.

ALL-BRAN'S "BETTER WAY" HAS BEEN OUR WAY FOR A LONG TIME

Says Mr. Charles Belair, Arvida, Quebec: "KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN has long been a favorite in our home. Mother used to serve it to us when we were young . . . and since my wife started making ALL-BRAN muffins three or four times a week and serving ALL-BRAN as a breakfast cereal, we have had no more use for pills or powders. ALL-BRAN keeps us regular . . . naturally." Why don't you try ALL-BRAN'S "Better Way" to correct the cause if you are troubled by constipation due to lack of the right kind of 'bulk' in your diet? But remember, ALL-BRAN doesn't work like harsh cathartics. It takes time. Eat it regularly and drink plenty of water. Get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's, in two convenient size packages, or ask for the individual serving package at restaurants. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

WAR

essive spirit, native to ns, will be reflected in the ults of the Third Victory Loan. We like to "get things done." So, we press for land action in Europe, even as we realize that such action will take a toll of lives among the boys we love - our sons, our brothers, and our husbands.

Out of that same spirit we will provide the money needed to see these boys through to Berlin and Berchtesgaden. If we cannot go with them personally through the hell of explosives, we shall see to it that they take with them all the material they need to extinguish that hell as they drive into the heart of Germany.

If, in order to buy bonds, some of us must choose between comfort and no comfort, between entertainment that costs money and entertainment that doesn't, between lots to eat and not so much to eat, between new clothes and old ones, Canadians will choose to do what is necessary to buy the bonds that bolster the boys.

PROHIBITION IS WRONG

Last week we offered in this column the suggestion that an attempt be made to urge Canadians to voluntarily reduce their consumption of alcoholic beverages rather than to use compulsion in the matter.

Since that time, we have come across some pronouncemnts on the subject of prohibition by men whose authority to make such pronouncements, cannot be questioned. They are quoted below.

"The case of intemperance is not one that has to do with alcohol, but with the one who drinks it. Prohibition was wrong because it interfered with a man's fundamental right as a free soul. Such a measure is doomed from the start and can never succeed. You cannot legislate a man into the practice of virtue.. You might legislate him into total abstinence, but then in itself, that is not a virtue. No honor is achieved by a man who does not drink just because someone has taken his drinks from him."— Claude Mussel, O.M.C., in The Companion of Saint Francis and Saint Anthony.

"There are two matters which should be brougnt to the mind of the public in respect to the strategy of the Ontario Temperance, or more correctly, Ontario Prohibition Federation. First, the clamor of this group for Prohibition of any duration comes only from a section of the Protestant Churches of the Province It is far from a unanimous demand. Second, this is not the time to divide our people on so controversial a matter, which necessitates both drastic legislation and vital means of time, energy and money. Many men, who are influential in their home communities are away serving in the forces of the Dominion. To divide our people and to make unnecessary expenditures of any kind is most deplorable when unity and wise sacrifice must be ours to win this war.. This is our immediate task—other lesser matters must wait."—Rev. H. Sullivan Cobb, B.A., B.D., Avondale Manse, Tillsonburg, Ont.

"Prohibition will work a great injury to the cause of temeprance. It is a species of intemperance within itself, for it goes beyond the bounds of reason in that it attempts to control a man's appetite by legislation, and in making crimes out of things that are not crimes. A prohibition law strikes at the very principles on which government is founded. I have always been found laboring to protect the weaker classes from the stronger, and I can never give my consent to such a law as you propose to enact. Until my tongue shall be silenced by death, I shall continue to fight for the rights of men."—Abraham Lincoln, before the Illinois State Legislature, 1840.

A LEG UP FOR HEPBURN

Premier Hepburn has a staunch supporter in the Trenton Courier-Advocate to offset the Toronto Star, the Globe 'n' Mail and the Telegram Here is a short comment in last week's Courier-Advocate: "Our prime minister is ageing. He has the biggest job of any man in Canada. He must have tremendous worries, too. But did it ever occur to you what would happen if he were to give over the helm of the ship at this time? Who is there of equal experience and stability to take his place In our personal opinion, and politics have nothing at all to do with anything we may write for this page,—there are but two big men in Canada at this time—Prime Minister King and Premier Mitchell Hepborn of Ontario."

We think we know Harry Moore, he Courier-Advocate editor, well enough to be assured that he is perfectly sincere in making the above comment. If he has any ambitions for converting enough of the electorate to think as he does, he has the biggest journalistic job he ever tackled. Just try to imagine selling this idea to the Province of Quebec, or to some of the Western provinces. It simply could not be done. In fact, it is extremely doubtful if Ontario would back him for the Dominion job. We do not expect the Courier-Advocate to agree with this however. It says in the next paragraph of its editorial:

"And we would go so far as to say that if anything should happen to our prime minister during the present crisis, Mitchell F. Hepburn would most probably be given first call to don his mantle."

Can anyone imagine Prime Minister Mackenzie King agreeing to this proposal?

—Carleton Place Canadian

It seems that the Western farmers are having considerable difficulty in using the student harvesters sent to Saskatchewan from Ontario and Quebec. Some of them have developed bronchial trouble and others, unused to farm labor, have been injured in various ways. We expected as much. The idea to us, seems assinine that a young man, because he had attended University for a short time should be able to fit in with a crew of experienced harvesters. A good number of those boys went west for the trip.

Some of these days, people who consider it the smart thing to chisel and cheat in time of war will begin to discover from the heavier and heavier penalties that are being imposed for violations of wartime regulations, that it is advisable to obey the law in every possible particular.

The man who can buy a Victory Bond, and doesn't, is sabotaging the war effort as surely, as though he had blown up a factory with a bomb, or done any of the other nefarious acts which are accomplished by pro fessional saboteurs

FRANK STEWART, Tailor,

WE'RE GOING TO NEED SO MANY THINGS WHEN THE WAR ENDS ...things that are hard to get now

Every day, almost, we find that something else is getting scarce. So often, we are told "they're not making it any more". Factories are making guns instead of ploughs, tanks instead of tractors, planes and shells instead of stoves and beds. We'll have to replace so many things when the war ends ... things we can't buy now.

MONEY INVESTED IN VICTORY BONDS

will provide the cash to buy them

TWO WAYS TO BUY VICTORY BONDS NOW

—with Cash

... in one lump sum, with money we have saved. There is no safer investment ... no better way to protect our savings.

Or—we can buy bonds and pay for them through our banks in monthly instalments. As the instalments come due the bank will charge them to our accounts.

—with Produce

Farm folk can pay for Victory Bonds in another, convenient way—by using the "PRODUCE FOR VICTORY" TICKET. By simply signing a "Victory Ticket" you can authorize those who buy produce from you to send all or part of the proceeds to the War Finance Committee to buy Victory Bonds for you. (Ask your local War Finance worker for details.)

WHAT A VICTORY BOND IS

Look at a dollar bill. A dollar bill is like a bond. It's a promise to pay to the man who has it. You get bills when you sell things and pay them out when you buy things. A Victory Bond is "a bill" intended to be saved. When you keep a $100.00 Victory Bond for a year you receive an additional $3.00. (3% interest). Buy all the Victory Bonds you can—lend money to Canada to help to win the war. Save your bonds to have money for things you'll need when the war ends.

SPORTING BLOOD

BY HARRY HARRISON KROLL

OUT ON BAIL

CHAPTER X

Hunter Dent gawped at Sherfff Anderson. "What do you mean, Sheriff—burn out the seat of my pants? What is all this, anyway?"

Anderson, grinning, unlocked the cell door. "Come along. You'll know all in good time."

Hunter followed the officer a block along the side street to the court house. In a few moments they were with Judge Elkins.

"Young man," Judge Elkins said, "you are free. Go your way."

"What—what do you mean?" Hunter gasped. "I mean, how did this happen?"

"Your bond has been posted, and until your case comes up for trial you may come and go as you please."

"But—who went on my bond, Judge Elkins?" Hunter still was dazed.

"Your bondsman wishes to remain anonymous. You are dismissed."

"Well, what do you know!" Hunter said wonderingly as he went out into the free, open sunshine. He stared all about, at the sky, the trees, the busy little city. "Looks good to me!" he muttered.

While in jail looking through his cell window at the slum section where the stick-up had been staged, an idea or two had hovered in Hunter's mind. He had thought a great deal about the questions: Why the money moving at such a time of night, where was it going, how did Junior know beforehand the route of the messenger. What was it all about, anyway? A hypothesis was growing in his mind. Maybe it was far-fetched. But he was up to his eyes in the mess, and it was up to him to do all he could to get out of it.

From the newspaper Hunter had the place where the girl, Sally Kiker, lived. He was remembering something about Sally, too. When he had first read the name it was oddly familiar to him. Then he remembered. Sally Kiker was Sam Doolittle's girl. Sam was the son of Squire Doolittle, the constable and owner of the little store out Hunter's way. Hunter and Doolittle were good friends; and it was more than likely that Sam Doolittle was the escort Sally had so far shielded. It was a lead worth following.

Hunter made his way there. Once past the bad corner the street became somewhat better and Hunter knocked at the door of a small but neat house of recent FHA vintage. Sally herself came to the door. She was a buxom girl, with a milkmaid freshness; she was the authentic thing, instead of the synthetic type that Red Ballard had been.

"Good morning. This is Hunter Dent, from the Ballard Estates. You are Miss Kiker? May I come in a few moments? I wanted to talk with you about the bank-messenger matter." He added quickly, seeing the swift hostile change that came upon her. "I happen to have been put in jail charged with that murder, Miss Kiker. I'm out on bond now. I had no more to do with that unfortunate matter than you did. I have to find out all I can about it, because my case will come up at the winter session of criminal court, and —well, you can see how it is with me." He smiled his best smile. "I know Sam Doolittle," he added. "I know his father very well."

"Well, Mr. Dent!" she smiled. "Will you come in?"

She had read about him in the paper, as he had about her. They talked of the Doolittles, father and son. "If you'll call Mr. Doolittle and ask about me I am sure you will feel free to help me. What I wanted was for you to tell me exactly what you saw the other night; better still, go with me and let us go over the ground together."

"As soon as I can change my dress," she said.

He heard her telephoning Doolittle's store. When she reappeared she was cordial. Hunter found her one of those people you seem always to have known. They walked up the street to the corner. Crossing to the east side, they stopped at a dark doorway which led into the stairs mounting to the top of the unpainted frame vacant store here.

"If I tell you who was with me you won't give me away?" she asked.

"I've already guessed it was Sam. Go ahead—I don't know, so you're safe."

"Well, the other night we were coming from the picture show uptown. This is a pretty bad part of town — you know that. We heard somebody coming along. Sam pulled me in the door here. He has a milk route and he knows what a wicked spot it is. We saw a young fellow come past. He was walking fast. He carried something under his arm. His hat was pulled down over his face, so we couldn't tell anything about him much. He had dark clothes and maybe a colored shirt. He looked clean. Sam thought he had his hand in his coat pocket as if on a gun. You know how they keep them ready. I couldn't tell, myself.

"Just as we were about to come out and start off again, here came somebody running like everything. We jerked back in here. This time I saw a good-looking young man all dressed up. Had on a silk hat and tails, and I saw the pistol in his hand. He was yelling at the one ahead to halt and stick 'em up—you know how they do those things. Then it just happened so fast you couldn't make heads nor tails of it. Shooting and yelling and when I looked out, like this—from right here," and she stood so she peered around the edge of the door facing, at an angle across the street, "I saw two other men. They seemed to come from around the corner of the pressing shop there, or maybe they could have been hiding in that stairway yonder."

"You know, though, there were two?" Hunter said.

"I'm sure," she said.

"What did they look like?"

"W-well, the street light here is so sorry I couldn't tell, very well. Besides, they were under the awning there, and you couldn't see much."

"Would you say they were just about of a size, and kind of sleek like, and maybe a little under average height?"

She nodded, adding, "And dressed in dark ,too. They looked almost dirty. But they were not. They were fixing the street, there — putting down fresh tar and gravel. There was a long plank on barrels across the street, and these kerosene flares. Well, the shooting started and I was so scared I didn't know which way was straight up. All I seem to remember was the dressed-up young man running out of sight that way," she pointed down the side street, toward the river road. "He must have had a car down there somewhere. I heard it when it went off with a big roar. And that's all I can remember. Sam and I ran. We saw the man lying in the street, where he had been shot and killed. I lost my purse in the door here, or they'd never have known I was about. Well, that's the way of it."

"What of the two men who came around the corner?"

"We never saw them any more. Not a sign. I think the shooting scared them away."

Hunter took her home, and went back uptown. He took a taxi to the hospital and was allowed to visit Junior a moment. The boy grinned at him wanly. He was still too weak to talk. As he went out on the street, Red came up in her car. She was the very person Hunter wanted to see, though he just then thought of it. He got in with her.

"Did you go my bail, Red?" he demanded.

"If you must know, and I suppose you must, it was Hank Temple's father, at the bank."

"Red, I've been over that ground down there, and I have a theory. Junior was in that crazy stick-up, all right. He was the young man in tails who started it on a bet. But the parties who changed the joke into a tragedy were not fooling. They saw a chance to pick up seventeen thousand bucks. And those two were on the inside, too. They are your friends. That is, part of the crowd that makes up your sporting cricle of pals. They wanted seventeen grand bad enough to kill somebody to get it. Only they didn't get the money."

"No, Hunter," Red said. "But I know who did, and who has it now!"

Arctic Weather In Summertime

Engineers at the Wright Aeronautical Corporation laboratories said they had created polar climate in a New Jersey test cell, designed to prepare aricraft engines for use this winter in Iceland and other "iceboxes" of the world. Working through the hot summer months in collaboration with research workers of the Standard Oil Company, the fur-clad engineers encountered a synthetic winter when they entered a cold chamber. Even at its warmest the cell was more than 100 degrees colder than the outside temperature.

Russia Ready For Sacrifices

(By Wm. Henry Chamberlin In Harper's Magazine)

Both physically and psychologically the Russians are a tough, resilient people. I was visting a Cossack vilage in the Kuban region of southeastern Russia in the autumn of 1933. It was the aftermath of a great famine. In the first house which I entered there was an old woman, her daughter and the latter's newly born baby. The daughter's brother, his wife and five children died of hunger. But this young woman herself was full of energy and will to live. She had borne a child in this terrible year. And she had gone back to work in the collective farm as soon as possible after giving birth.

The toll of death in this famine was staggering. It might have been a mortal blow to a western country with a stationary or declining birthrate. But in Russia, as in China, the progress of recovery from such a natural catastrophe as war or famine is amazingly swift.

Willing To Sacrifice

One can imagine how much this quality of toughness has been cultivated since 1914. Russia has lived through two major foreign wars, a violent social revolution, a ferocious civil war, and two disastrous famines. A people to whom death, sometimes in very horrible forms, has become so familiar would not shrink from any sacrifice in a struggle for national survival.

While the French thought of the incomparable beauties of Paris and surrendered their capital without firing a shot, the Russians were willing to throw into the melting pot of total war their first industrial achievement, the Denieprostroi dam and electric power pant, together with the westernized architecture of Leningrad and the more eastern glories of Moscow, the Kremlin, and the Church of St. Basil.

TABLE TALKS

School Lunch Box Suggestions

We hear much about nutrition these days and how essential it is for our daily menus to fill our nutritive needs. And it is equally important for mothers to see that the contents of their children's lunch boxes are also nutritious.

Since sandwiches form a main part of the school lunch, their preparation is most important.

Wholesome breads should be used for sandwiches, Graham, whole wheat, oatmeal, brown, raisin, and nut bread are excellent. Cold bran or whole wheat muffins or filled rolls are also tempting.

Fillings of the sandwiches require special preparation. Cheese, meat, eggs, nuts, dried fruits or vegetables should be put through the food chopper. Cream cheese, peanut butter and other compact substances should be thinned with cream. Ground meats, eggs, and vegetables should be moistened with a small amount of salad dressing or cream and vinegar. Succulent vegetables should be provided, if possible. Finely chopped celery, lettuce, water cress or sliced tomato may be used alone or with cottage cheese.

Jellies, jams and conserves make sweet sandwiches or a tiny jar of the fruited sweet may be tucked into the lunch box.

And please don't forget to include a thermos container of milk, and some kind of fresh fruit — such as an apple, pear, orange, banana, etc.

Care should be taken in the packing of the lunch. All foods not in containers should be wrapped separately in waxed paper before being placed in the box. The neatly wrapped articles should be placed, so far as is possible, in the order in which the food will be eaten, so that those found first may be eaten first without disturbing the remainder. The heaviest foods, however, should be placed at the bottom.

Select a lunch box that can be kept clean. Lunch boxes should be washed, scalded and aired daily. Those made of light-weight metal are best. Many atractive boxes are now made with a vacuum bottle which fits the box. These are highly desirable. A lunch box should not be air-tight, as a circulation of air prevents the mingling of odors.

Paper napkins and cups are essential lunch box accessories.

OVER-BUYING OF COAL UNFAIR TO COMMUNITY

Buying up all the coal in sight means that you deprive someone else in your community. So be patient as far as your full winter's requirements are concerned for, when the present rush is over, every householder will have some coal in his bin and dealers will be able to catch up with the demand and fill your future orders promptly. And when ordering, specify 'blue coal'. Then you'll be sure of better heat all winter—and you'll save money, too. Why not task your nearest 'blue coal' dealer for further information. Sir James Grigg, war secretary, said recently that Britain has produced a new tank which a member of Parliament said "is superior in performance to any other tank in use by another belligerent."

A lineal descendant of the Churchill tank, it now is called simply "A27 (M)."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON 43

STEPS TOWARD SOLUTION OF THE ALCOHOL PROBLEM.—Ecclesiastes 10: 17; Amos 5: 21-24; Romans 14: 19-21; 2 Corinthians 6: 17; 1 Peter 4: 1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream.—Amos 5: 24.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time.—The book of Ecclesiastes may have been written about 975 B.C. Amos prophesied about 790 to 785 B.C. The Second Epistle to the Corinthians, and the First Epistle of Peter, were both written about A.D. 60.

Place.—Ecclesiastes may have been written in the city of Jerusalem. Amos was a prophet to the northern city of Israel. The Epistle To The Romans was written from the city of Corinth. The Second Epistle to the Corinthians was probably written from the city of Phillipi. We do not know where the Apostle Peter was when he wrote his First Epistle.

Daily Righteousness

21. "I hate, I despise your feasts, and I will take no delight in your solemn assemblies. 22. Yea, though ye offer me your burnt-offerings and meal-offerings, I will not accept them; neither will I regard the peace-offerings of your fat beasts. 23. Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols. 24. But let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream." The Lord said He simply despised their feast days, and would not receive the sweet-smelling savour of their sacrifices, nor have any regard for their peace offerings. These sacrifices were all right in their place, but they were worthless if those offering them chose to live in constant disobedience to the laws of holiness. It is so easy to substitute ritual for righteousness. The ritual is soon finished, but righteousness is something that should mark every aspect of our life, every day of our life.

Abuse of Liberty

19. "So then let us follow after things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another. 20. Overthrow not for meat's sake the work of God. All things indeed are clean; howbeit it is evil for that man who eateth with offence. 21. It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth." The Apostle has been talking in this chapter about the love which Christians ought to have for one another and the fruits of such a love, namely an avoidance of judgment of others, and especially a strong determination not to do anything, even in the matter of eating and drinking, which would cause their Christian brethren to stumble. Any use of Christian liberty which disregards the damaging effect it may produce upon a weak brother is a bad use. How such eating may prove a stumbling-block is not said but we certainly can hurt others by what we drink, namely, intoxicating beverages. We have liberty for doing this, but we should not use this liberty, because in so doing, we are liable to lead a weaker brother, who looks up to us for guidance,into bondage in these things.

God's Assurance

17. "Wherefore come ye out from among them, and be ye separate, said the Lord, and touch no unclean thing; and I will receive you." This separation from the world was not to be physical and local and social, but moral and spiritual. These Corinthians were not to migrate to other cities, but to keep free from the intimacies and fellowships which might ally them with idolatry; and today Christians are to live in the world, while they are not of the world. They live among their fellow men in close relationships: yet all the while they belong to another sphere of life. But this separation does not mean loneliness or loss. It results in a divine companionship which is more than compensation for all that the world offers. Such was the promise to God's people of old, and such is the assurance made to his servants today.

1. "Forasmuch then as Christ suffered in the flesh, arm ye yourselves also with the same mind; for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin." Let us refuse the lawless strivings of self. It will need resolution and determination. But victory is sure. And though there will be no cessation in the temptation, there will be cessation in the yielding to it, which is sin. In time the bodily desires, long thwarted, will give less and less trouble.

Excess Of Wine

2. "That ye no longer should live the rest of your time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God."

Excess of wine is closely connected with abominable idolatries. Is not any use of wine excessive, unless it be taken for some very distinct purpose of health, prescribed by medical authority—and, even then, often mistakenly.

3. "For the time past may suffice to have wrought the desire of the Gentiles, and to have walked in lasciviousness, lusts, winebibbings, revellings, carousings, and abominable idolatries: 4. wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them into the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you". The attitude of worldly people wasting their lives in riotous living toward Christians who utterly spurn such orgies of iniquity is the same today as it was when the Apostle Peter wrote, 1900 years ago. A man who refuses to drink with a number of other men on a train, or in a restaurant, may often have to stand ridicule. Christian people who make it known that they do not gamble may have to be thought of as strange. We, by our salvation, have been separated from worldliness, which leads down to destruction, and know a path of righteousness, the fruit of which is a joy, and peace, and increasing strength, and unselfishness, a holiness of life, and righteousness of conduct, which the world has never known, outside of union with Jesus Christ. There will come a time when we will just have to make a definite decision in our own life, whether we are going the way the world goes, or the way the Lord leads. The wages of one is disillusionment, and death, whereas the fruit of the other is holiness, and peace, and eternal life.

Judgment Awaits

5. "Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the living and the dead." Judgment awaits men on the other side of death—the judgment seat of Christ for his servants, to adjust their rewards, and the final judgment of the ungodly: but it is also true that we are now in the presence of our Judge.

The Individual Citizen's Army

By Alan Maurice Irwin

A Weekly Column About This and That in Our Canadian Army

It is quite a few weeks now since I was urgently chided by an editor for getting too personal about the Reserve Army, but it can't have been too bad because he published the article anyway.

If you give a columnist an inch he always takes the proverbial ell, so here goes a little more about the men who are training themselves for home defence.

What brought the whole thing up was a suggestion made before the parade was dismissed the other night by the colonel that the best way to bring the regiment up to strength would be for every member to bring in one recruit. This suggestion appealed so strongly to a private soldier in one of the companies that he turned over to the battalion for recruiting purposes 500 agate lines of space which would otherwise have been devoted to advertising his own business during the month of September.

Another incident worth mentioning is the case of a private soldier who spent 14 days with us at camp. For this he drew pay at the rate of $1.20 per day and when his cheque was handed to him he borrowed a pen from his company commander and endorsed it over to the colonel with the message that there were no strings attached. In due course the Ladies' Auxiliary of our active service unit acknowledged to the soldier a contribution of $16.80 to its wool fund.

It is interesting to note that both the private soldiers referred to are Jews.

You can't help being personal about a Reserve Army which is looked upon as so personal an institution as is illustrated by the two cases I have mentioned. Both of these men are of categories that do not fit them for active service, both own their own businesses—they train in their own time and no generous employer makes them a present of two weeks' holiday in which to go to camp.

These men are not unique, in fact it is pretty safe to say that they are representative of the calibre of the soldiers of the Reserve Army as it is now constituted.

In other words, to the reserve soldier of today his unit is a personal thing, it is something to which he devotes not just the after-work hours two nights a week, 10 full Sundays in the year and 14 days at camp, but a good many minutes of fun time during the day.

He may not consciously think it, but in the back of the mind of every man who, though he may be working hard at a war job, puts in these extra hours in training for the eventuality of attack upon his homeland, there is the realization that had it not been for trained citizen soldiers, the story in Yugoslavia and Russia would have been very different.

History bears out that a country possessed of a trained citizen-soldiery in peacetime is in less danger of attack than the country which has not taken this precaution. There must have been something wrong with Hitler's intelligence service. It obviously fell down badly so far as Russia was concerned—and his own intelligence should have told him what to expect from the Yugoslavs!

A few years before the outbreak of war in 1914 a melodrama was produced in England under the title "An Englishman's Home." This play demonstrated with terrific stage effects and blood and death what happens when untrained citizens attempt to defend their homes against fully trained invaders. If the lesson of this play had been learned and peaceful peoples had been prepared undoubtedly the 1914-1919 war would have been shorter and this one might not have occurred.

It is not only for the warlike arts that we should prepare ourselves in peacetime, there are many peaceful arts that become not only virtues but stern necessities in time of war. The first of these, beyond doubt, is defence against inflation. It can the more rapidly become successful if, like military training, it has been carried on during the softer years of peace.

We were unprepared on both counts, and on both counts the Individual Citizen's Army was responsible. We found that we had more pennies in our pockets for luxuries, if we elected, or allowed to remain in office, politicians who pared down the budget by failing to provide funds for military training. Having saved those necessary tax pennies we wasted them on unnecessary frills—and now we find it hard to forego those frills.

So hard, in fact, have we found it that we have welcomed the setting up of governmental boards and commissions to compel us to discontinue our wasteful practices.

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board, one of the many wartime bodies we have created, is very much in the position of the instructors of the Reserve Army. We have placed ourselves under it just as volunteers place themselves under their sergeants and officers, and we are learning from it just as privates in the Reserve Army learn from their instructors, how to discipline ourselves so that we may become fit to meet the rigours of campaigning.

War Workers Face Problem Of Tires

Most industrial war workers are being carried to their jobs in automobiles having tires that will be worn out before next winter is over. Nearly all the rest must face the same conditions before the end of the following winter. These conclusions are derived from a survey being conducted in Massachusetts, and apply to conditions found there, but they have much more than merely regional significance. The survey is still under way, and is being conducted by the State Planning Board. Probably its findings are broadly applicable to hundreds of munitions centers throughout the country.

The percentages of tires of the war workers that are expected to remain in service each month are as follows: It is estimated that one quarter of them will be worn out and unusuable by the end of this month, that half of them will be gone by March, that less than 20 percent of them will last through next year, and that by June of 1943 only two or three percent of the tires will still survive in service. These figures are based on data covering only seven localities, but there is so much similarity in the figures for the different plants that it seems likely that they may be fairly representative of such conditions elsewhere.

Perhaps the most important conclusion at which a reader arrives after studying the situation, is that gasoline rationing can provide only an inadequate and ineffective solution for these tire problems. Retreads are needed and promptly. The data forecast a rapidly approaching war worker transportation crisis.

RADIO REPORTER

By REX FROST

He's back again . . . that pride of the youthful generation . . . that daring, trouble shooting, dare devil aviator of the airwaves . . . Jimmy Allen! So, ladies, if those youngsters of yours have an unfortunate habit of getting in your way around the kitchen just when you're preparing the supper, take them over to the radio at 6 o'clock any day Monday through Friday and you can just about bet dollars to doughnuts that from then on it will be part of the regular routine of the household. Jimmy Allen brings his thrilling and inspiring adventure stories to young Ontario through CFRB Toronto. There is just one thing. If Junior suddenly starts pestering you to get a certain brand of breakfast food, you'll quite understand that he has visions of becoming another husky, adventurous addition of Jimmy Allen himself.

Another old friend has just returned to the airwaves, that perennial star of vaudeville, screen and radio, Al Jolson. Assisted by comedian Parkyakarkus, veteran Al started a new series of variety shows over the Columbia Broadcasting System last week. Tuesday is the night, 10 o'clock the time, CFRB is included in the hook-up. Here is a show the extreme versatility of which will surely appeal to every member of the household. It has good music, a plentiful sprinkling of the absurdities and laughs of Parkyakarkus, while Al Jolson himself with his inimitable style and individual interpretation of the songs most of us know so well rounds out a presentation which as a sparkling nightcap should prepare you for happy dreams.

Since 1934 when the Lux Radio Theatre first went on the air, Monday evening has always been regarded as a highlight of radio enthusiasts of the drama. In fact this top-rating dramatic broadcast now boasts to have an average listening audience of thirty millions. Monday evenings 9 to 10 o'clock has seen an ever increasing number of radio sets in operation the continent wide, tuned to the 114 Columbia stations who carry this popular program. From now on, Monday evening will provide an even greater opportunity than before for lovers of dramatic art to indulge their preference. Immediately following the Lux Radio Theatre will follow a series of plays by the Screen Guild Players, both programmes originating in Hollywood. The sponsor, Lady Esther.

Personality of the Week

It has been said that some people succeed by what they know, others by what they do, and a few by what they are. The personality behind that friendly feminine voice you hear Monday through Friday mornings 10.30 to 10.45 over CFRB, Mrs. Aitken, succeeds on all three counts. She's slender, sparkling, vivacious, always smiling, and always has something amusing to tell. For many years Mrs. Aitken has brought to her morning listeners interesting items of home news, international affairs, current books, and happenings around town and country. But Mrs. Aitken has many interests outside of radio. Currently she is in charge of all womens' activities associated with the Victory Loan Campaign. It was Mrs. Aitken who co-ordinated, organized and supervised the Womens' Section of the Canadian National Exhibition. Most housewives know of her cooking schools, many have attended them. One thing you probably don't know is that Mrs. Aitken has long instructed a cooking school for boys, yes, boys! Just young lads gathered from the homes in a certain section of downtown Toronto. Every Wednesday evening these youngsters learn how to prepare and cook a dinner, and not only that. When the dinner has been cooked, they all sit down and enjoy it, and carry away with them not only the memory of a truly enjoyable meal, but the recipes and instructions to pass along to mother.

You can bring your hogs to market weight in five months with "Miracle" Hog Feeds—saving two months feed and care. And these hogs grade higher than with ordinary feeds. More pigs per litter. And more of the pigs reach maturity with these feeds in the dotted bags. This has been proved by rigid tests on farms.

You Can Help Decide

There is not enough power for our war industries and for our homes. . . . The use of electricity in our homes must be reduced — must take second place — if we are to keep our war plants working at full speed.

Unless you cut your power consumption by at least twenty per cent—you're not saving enough.

In sad and loving memory of a dear husband and father, Michael G. Casselman, who passed away October 27th, 1939.

Three years have passed and gone
Since one we loved so well
Was taken from our home on earth
With Jesus Christ to dwell.
The flowers we place upon his grave
May wither and decay,
But the love for him who sleeps beneath,
Shall never fade away.

Sadly missed by Mrs. Michael G. Casselman and family.
