SIR ADAM BECK

The death of Sir Adam Beck at his home "Headley", London, Ont., on the 15th inst., removes from public life one of the most outstanding personages on this continent. He was born at Baden, Ont., on 30th June 1857, his father's family having been one of the many who emigrated from Baden in Germany in consequence of the persecution suffered at the hands of the Prussians. After passing through the primary schools at his home town his education was completed at Galt and the Rockwood Academy.

In 1878 he commenced his business career with his father in the foundry and milling business at Baden, and in 1880 he engaged in the manufacture of wood veneers and boxes at Galt, removing from thence to London in 1884 where he built up one of the most extensive manufacturing establishments in the same line, with branch factories in Hamilton, Toronto and Montreal. He was Mayor of London for several years, and was elected to represent that city in the Provincial Legislature in 1902, continuing to represent it until 1919, when he was defeated by a combination of Laborites with the political ragtag and bobtail of the community. In 23 he was again returned to the Legislature as representative of London.

Sir Adam's interest in the development and distribution of electricity began about 25 years ago when meetings of the municipal authorities were held for the purpose of devising some method of obtaining a supply of cheap electricity for the communities in Western Ontario. His outstanding talent for leadership was recognized, and he was appointed chairman of the Municipal Association then formed. In 1903 the Provincial Government appointed him a Commissioner to investigate the development and distribution of electric power from Niagara Falls.

In 1906, as Minister without portfolio in the Whitney Government he introduced in the Legislature the first power bill under which the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario was created, and the same year was appointed chairman of the new Commission.

From its inception, the Commission was fought by the power Companies who resorted to every artifice to destroy both it and the reputation of Sir Adam personally, and they have continued to do so down to the present time. It v the inordinate greed of these p ple, and their utter disregard the welfare of the municipali in which they operated, t brought about the formation of Hydro-Electric Commission in first place and Sir Adam clea saw that something had to be d if the development of the Provi industrially, and the utilization electricity in the homes of the p ple were not to be blocked ind nitely.

It is needless to refer to the most incalculable benefits wh have come to the people of Ont through the vision, ability courage of Beck, who sacrificed fortune in large measure, and health entirely, in the fight wh he was called upon to wage aga financial and political ignorance jealousy.

There is in this a lesson w should sink deeply into the he of the people of Ontario, who often apathetic and sometimes cal, when their loyalty and su should have been given in gene measure to the man who was s ficing home, friends and fo for their benefit. The memor Lady Beck should also be fresh with the deepest grati for she it was who urged hin continue the fight and never ered under any circumstances her tragic death in 1921.

Amongst the many noteable vices rendered by Sir Adam Lady Beck are included their tributions in work and money t London Sanitorium, Alexandra pital and the Nurses Homes, a which were in large measure d them, also the Springbank supply of London which replace original water works and prac ly eliminated typhoid fever w as prevalent. The London Port Stanley Electric Railway, to be one of the most efficient, equipped and operated lines on continent, was also his creation

This remarkable man had vision to forsee the benefits to derived from public works and provements, and to bring them successful completion, usually the face of public apathy, and quently when met with direct op sition which was supposed to be surmountable.

Personally, Sir Adam was stro in his friendship where it was served, which has during the l few years been observed and appr ciated by the people of this co munity—straight forward and ho orable in his dealings, and his hon life. It was his vision to round o his career by harnessing the S Lawrence for the benefit of Eas ern Ontario, but this was denied hi largely through the instrumentali of politicians.

He loved horses, and exhibit many fine animals at the shows London, Eng., New York, a throughout Ontario. At the outbre of the Great War, Sir Adam ga all his horses to the army and ver generously of his means, and al served as remount officer witho remuneration.

Ontario has lost a great son, b the work which he inaugurated w will go on. He will ever be held affectionate remembrance.

LAKES SHOW EFFECT OF WATER DIVERSION

Already there is striking evidence of the effect of the water diversion by the Chicago Drainage Canal upon the water levels of the Great Lakes and the River St. Lawrence. Reports made by the Canadian Hydrographic Office in the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and computed from hourly readings by the automatic gauges, show that the levels in Lake Superior, Lake Huron, Lake Erie, Lake Ontario, and the River St. Lawrence, during May, June and July of this year, have been lower than the average stage for the respective months of the last ten years.

In May of this year the Lake Superior level was 1.24 feet lower than the average stage of May for the last ten years; the Lake Huron level 2 feet lower; Lake Erie, 1.21 feet lower; Lake Ontario .77 foot lower, and Montreal Harbor, 1.85 feet lower. In June, the Lake Superior level was 1.09 feet lower than the June average for the last ten years; Lake Huron, 2.22 feet lower; Lake Erie, 1.48 feet lower; Lake Ontario, 1.2 feet lower, and Montreal Harbor .92 foot lower. In July, the Lake Superior level was 1.12 feet lower; Lake Huron 2.25 feet lower; Lake Erie 1.69 feet lower; Lake Ontario 1.48 feet lower, and Montreal Harbor .66 foot lower.

RENDER—SADDLEMIRE

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on August 19th at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Saddlemire, Williamsburg, when their youngest daughter, Lyla M. was united in marriage to Mr. James Gordon Render, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Render of Iroquois, Rev. Edwin Smith of Williamsburg, performing the ceremony in the presence of immediate relatives and friends. The room was decorated with ferns and flowers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, entered the room gowned in navy georgette crepe over sand-printed crepe de chine, carrying a shower bouquet of white and red roses. The wedding march was played by Miss Edith Render, sister of the groom. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace.

Immediately after the ceremony a dainty luncheon was served in the dining room, after which Mr. and Mrs. Render left on the 8 p.m. train for Brockville, enroute to Montreal

Answer: McLaughlin-Buick's precision methods are possible because of McLaughlin-Buick's great volume. It would be impossible to put such fine workmanship into McLaughlin-Buick cars for their price, if McLaughlin-Buick built but a few thousand cars a year.

Kit Kennedy

BY S. R. CROCKETT.

Kit arranged with Lilias that upon the day of the declaration of the result he would put up on a certain high fir tree, which could be seen from the windows of Kirkoswald, a black flag in token of defeat and a white if he should be victorious. But he warned her that he had no expectations. He had indeed already made preliminary arrangements to winter as "boy" at Cairnharrow. But all the same (as he consoled her) he meant to keep his promise and be a great man.

The pleasantest part of the day was in the evening, when Betty Landsborough always asked him to go out for a walk. Kit was now fifteen, tall and well grown for his age. He had had his ideas as to love and the worthiness of girls considerably sharpened by a certain Vara Kavannah (she does not come into this story) who had sojourned a while at Loch Spellanderie.

Betty always asked him which way he wanted to go, but as invariably turned up through the wood in the direction of the bothies where dwelt Rob Armour and the other three foresters of the Crae Estate.

Betty was a pretty girl, and it was pleasant enough to walk beside her, especially when she kept her hand on your shoulder—the far shoulder, and did not resent it if (for convenience of walking) your arm went round her waist.

They talked about the bursary and concerning going to college and about Greek. But Betty's eyes were always roaming to and fro, and sometimes she would answer at random. Which was strange, considering that Kit was explaining so interesting a subject as the second aorist and when it should not be used.

"Oh, here's Frank Chisholm and Archie Kinmont, and—yes, I declare, there's Rob!" she would interrupt without the least compunction.

"What do they want? They are always prowling where they are no wanted," said Kit, discontentedly. He was getting on fine, and Betty was a nice girl.

Betty patted him on the cheek and leaned a little more on his arm. Kit would have drawn apart, but Betty said, very low, "Stay where ye are. They will think ye are feared."

So Kit, blushing a little, but feeling, as well he might, strangely flattered and elated, kept his place beside the wicked and designing Mistress Elizabeth Landsborough.

Then Betty, that arch traitress and tormenting gadfly, would sit down on a cut tree, either quite at the end or close against a branch so that the flank of the position was guarded. This done she would pull Kit down on the other side, leaving Rob and his mates to find accommadation where they would. This they did, either on the dry pine needles or with their backs against the trees themselves.

After this they all looked at Betty Landsborough and Betty talked to them, playing with Kit's crisp curls meantime, or resting a dimpled chin on his shoulder and looking over it at Rob Armour.

Kit would have preferred that these amenities had been accorded him in private. But Betty differed, and Kit always made the best of things. The three young men sometimes glowered at Kit as if they could have choked him, but apparently that only made Betty fonder of him than ever.

It was curious how innocent and thoughtless Betty was. For of course it was bound to make the others, all grown-up men with beards and moustaches, very jealous. But Betty never thought of that, and took Kit with her every night when she went her walk. With her hand on Kit's shoulder, she coaxed, reproached, rallied, said daring things, and then looked modestly down after she had said them, always in case of need appealing to her protector in the sweetest and most seductive way.

"Is it no, Kit? Dinna ye think sae, Kit?"

And Kit always thought so. Then worst of all she had a way of picking up his hand and patting the back of it as they sat together, which was fitted to drive Frank Chisholm and Archie Kinmont, but especially Rob Armour, to a dancing distraction.

All three hitched in their seats as if they had been sitting on whin prickles, instead of good dry pine needles, and for half an hour their intentions towards Kit were murderous. But it was all Betty's surprising innocence.

Then they walked back as far as the end of the little loaning with Betty and her swain. They did not come any further for fear of meeting the Elder. Whereupon, taking leave of them, Betty and Kit walked sedately up the dusky little path till they came to the well by the wayside. In another moment they would be out of the shadow of the trees. Even as it was they were silhouetted against the clearness of the western sky, and it occurred to Kit that the three might be looking after them with their elbows on the topmost bar of the green gate.

But it was evident that Betty did not think so. For she always stopped here, and turning to Kit she whispered softly, "Ye can gie me a kiss if ye like, Kit!"

And Kit did so, since no better might be. It was all done in innocence, of course, for Betty could no be suspected of purposely arousin bitter or envious feelings in th breasts of those who had never don her any harm. All the same it w curious how completely Betty lost h interest in evening promenades soon as she was sure that the thr foresters had gone up to their bothi

Kit thought it his duty, towards close of these ten days of idleness bliss, to remonstrate gently with Be Landsborough.

"I dinna think they like it, Bett

Betty smiled an innocent smile, said, tenderly, "But, Kit, what that maitter to us if we like it?"

Whereupon Kit intimated that fact it did not matter.

"Weel," said Betty, with an ai finality, "I am no dry-nursin' Armour and the ither two that I o'. Certes, they are auld eneuch ugly eneuch to look after themsel

All the same Kit wished that B was not quite so innocent, and a more inclined to think of the feel of others.

Could he have listened to the versation of the three forester they went up the wood to their ba lor quarters, with the cue owls ing here and there like cats in dark green gloom, he would have tained light on several things were yet dark to him. For the w of the young men were mysterious

"She's a licht-headed, dece haverel," said Rob Armour, bitte

"But she's bonny, Rob!" sugg Frank Chisholm.

Rob groaned as he admitted i

"I'll wager she disna care a p for him. He's but a laddie ony Betty may be deceitfu', but she daft!"

It was poor comfort, but the that Archie Kinmont could minist a mind diseased.

"Aweel," said Rob, with his on the latch of the bothie door, "n it or no mean it, I ken this, tha hae nae mair to do with Betty La borough frae this day forth. N have dune wi' her!"

"That's richt, Rob," said F Chisholm, consolingly; "there's pl will be glad to tak' the contrack your hands as it stands, wi' a' d backs and allowances!"

Rob Armour slammed the doo his friends' faces. He felt tha Job had murdered his comforter would have been both a quicker a more satisfactory ending to that cient drama.

he had forwarded his report with all the figures, which were there to speak for him. Mr. Ebenezer Fleming, W. S., Secretary of the United Galloway Associations, was standing behind the table, with the Provost by his side to confer a certain flavor of official dignity on the proceedings. These were understood to be the only two who knew the true state of the poll. This seems likely, for the Provost kept wide of his wife, to whom he dared not refuse to tell anything that he was known to know.

Mrs. Mac Walter of Loch Spellanderie sat with her son in the front row. Both wore their best clothes, and John had already adopted the sedate demeanor and style of address which is most consistent with the position of a First Bursar.

Rob Grier sat beside Kit, who was telling himself that he was not anxious, that he did not want to go to Edinburgh, and that he would be happier at farm work anyway.

"I wish I had a forehammer here and something to ding the sparks oot o'," said Rob Grier; "man, I canna keep my hands still. There's something gangs 'kittle-kittle' in my loofs."

In the remote corner, paler and more worn with anxiety than any of the candidates, the "Orra Man" was hidden away.

Nevertheless, the Provost eyed him and hunted his mind for a resemblance, which of course as soon as he tried to fix it as persistently eluded him.

gripped his late opponent's hand, and the tears rose in his eyes.

"Hoots, man," said Rob Grier, "it's a' richt, and as it should be. I aye kenned that it was a' up wi' me as soon as I heard ye gang ower your Latin version as fast as a horse could trot."

By this time most of the people were on their feet to depart, but the secretary had more to say. He held up his hand for silence. "I do not wish to trouble you with the entire report, but there is one thing with which I must conclude."

"There is one name which comes next to that of Christopher Kennedy —some way behind indeed, but so far ahead of the others that the Committee of the Associtions has resolved to give that candidate a subsidiary bursary of a smaller value. The name of that candidate is Robert Grier of Garlieston."

It was now Kit's turn to shake his friend heartily by the hand, and the words came back to him with a rush.

"I declare I am gladder than aboot my ain," he said, "but ye should hae had the best yin.

The secretary read the other marks, concerning which the only notable thing was that the name of John Mac Walter came last. Then he added the very necessary rider, "If the bursar and the subsidiary successful candidate will apply to me at my office at 99 St. Andrew's Square (first floor, second door to the left), one of my clerks will pay them the moneys due them, and they can forward to me, at St. Andrew's Square, certifi- of attendance at the close of session."

Then the secretary folded up his rs in a glow at having got in a advertisement of his own im- nce and place of business in the harmless and natural way. even Writers to the Signet are an.

THE MODERNISTIC PAJAMA.

Fashion has whispered it—and who could resist such prettily styled pajamas? Many women favor them as nightwear for pullman berth or steamer cabin. Made in jumper fashion, with square-cut neck, short kimono sleeves, lower edge of jacket and trousers trimmed in striking contrast. The small front view suggests another version of the same model, which the inexperienced sewer will have no difficulty in copying. The diagram shown in the upper right corner will give an idea of the construction of the pajamas. Sizes 34, 38 and 42 inches bust. Size 36 bust requires 4¼ yards of 36-inch or 38-inch material. Price 20 cents.

Home sewing brings nice clothes within the reach of all, and to follow the mode is delightful when it can be done so easily and economically, by following the styles pictured in our new Fashion Book. A chart accompanying each pattern shows the material as it appears when cut out. Every detail is explained so that the inexperienced sewer can make without difficulty an attractive dress. Price of the book 10 cents the copy. Each copy includes one coupon good for five cents in the purchase of any pattern.

Heritage.

My mother's great-grandmother
A lass from Devon came;
Her little body is dust so long
I've night forgotten her name.

Her wistful legend only
Has stood the wrack of years,
How always at the summer's flood
Her laughter broke to tears;

She'd blunder with her baking,
Her stitches run uneven;
She'd droop above her churn and sigh,
"Ah me, it's June in Devon!"

It made a family byword
Long after she was dead;
"As fine as June in Devonshire,"
Her children's children said.

Across the world I journeyed
One year, as summer came,
And stumbled on her little heart
Who had forgotten her name.

And found beyond refuting
What made that crooked seam,
What burned the biscuits in their prime,
And spoiled the mellow cream.

O little great-grandmother,
The dream that bound your brow
Has touched my own unwitting eyes
It's June in Devon now.

How Time Flies.

It was almost time for the street car that daily carried the breadwinner and head of the Tuttle family to his office, and the morning paper was not in its customary place on the front porch.

Stamping back into the dining room, a stern look in his eye, Mr. Tuttle demanded:

"Did any of you see the morning paper?"

Everyone denied having seen it, and were busily engaged in searching for the missing paper, when the daughter, struck with a sudden inspiration, exclaimed: "Oh, I'll bet that's what I used to wrap up the fudge Bert took home last night!"

Caught, caught is the wild cuckoo
That sang among the owers;
They have prisoned him in a dark prison

Between the dawn and the dim evening
Twelve songs must he sing,

And the passing of spring.

O they have shattered the sweet April
And slain the heart of May,
Because they have stolen the wild cuckoo

And wearily sings the wild cuckoo,
Wearily sings he now,
Because his heart would cease from singing
And his throat knows not how.

NOVA SCOTIA COAL STRIKERS ACCEPT GOVERNMENT PLAN AND RESUME WORK

A despatch from Halifax says:—Signing of a six months' interim contract, withdrawal from the mining areas of the military, recommencement of work on Monday, and appointment of a commission to investigate the entire coal industry, are developments which are expected to happen in rapid succession as the result of the agreement of both the British Empire Steel Corporation and their miner employees to accept the Government's proposals for a return to work.

The appointment of the commission will probably take longer than the other developments, but Premier Rhodes said it would be done "as speedily as possible."

Wo i on the contract will start at once, when the District Board of the miners will meet corporation officials in Glace Bay. It is not anticipated that this will present any appreciable difficulty, inasmuch as the Government's settlement terms provided that the contract should have 1922 wage rates and the 1924 working agreement.

With the contract out of the way this week, Vice-President J. E. McLurg anticipates that work could be commenced in the mines on Monday. Withdrawal of 1,000 troops which were sent from Ontario, Quebec and Halifax, in the middle of June, following the New Waterford riot, is looked for very soon, and it is understood to have been discussed by the Government.

The tie-up of the province's coal industry lasted just five months, having started on March 6. Previous to that, both prior to and after the 1924 contract expired, on Jan. 15, negotiations were conducted.

Informed reviewers of the condition of the collieries following the long strike are of the opinion that work can be started on Monday in Collieries Nos. 1A, 1B, 2, 4, 5, 10, 12, 14, 16, 22 and 24. Nos. 6 and 15 are closed indefinitely from flooding; No. 11 cannot operate until the burned bankhead and equipment is replaced; No. 21 was announced to have been abandoned at the beginning of the strike; and No. 24 previously dependent on No. 11 for power, will be curtailed in operation until other arrangements are made.

These collieries are all on the south side of Sydney Harbor. On the north side maintenance work was carried on throughout the strike, and no appreciable delay is expected in starting operation. The same situation prevails in Pictou County, and maintenance work has been going on in Cumberland County for some time.

FATHER OF R. SCOTT'S VICTIM IN DIRE WANT

Jacob Maurer Has Now No Support—Murderer in Insane Asylum.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—At about the time that Russell T. Scott, his fight to dodge the gallows won, was leaving Chicago in the custody of Deputy Sheriffs for the Chester Insane Asylum, there appeared at the Detective Bureau an old work-worn man whose interest in Scott's case was next to that of Scott's family and Scott himself.

He was Jacob Maurer, the aged father of J. Maurer, the 19-year-old drug clerk, for whose murder in a hold-up Scott was sentenced to hang, escaping the death penalty twice by a margin of a few hours, and finally being found insane since his conviction.

Bitter and unforgiving, the old man recited a story of hardship and privation that has befallen his family since his boy's death in April, 1924, and then sought to recover the clothing worn by his boy the night he was slain, and which has been held by the State for evidence against Scott.

"You probably want them as keepsakes?" some one suggested, but Maurer shook his head.

"I want them," he said, "to wear myself. I've been sick, and I've been out of work because I've devoted my time to this case, and I've got to be better dressed to get a new job."

The old man explained that his daughter is now the sole support of his family, and that, in addition to being in poor health, he is unable to sleep.

"Joey," he said, and his voice broke, "always used to wake me up at 12.30 every night when he came home from work, and now I can't help waking up at that time and expecting to see him."

Scott left Chicago heavily shackled in charge of two Deputy Sheriffs.

"A last message for Chicago," he shouted as the train moved out: "Tell them I'm both sane and innocent."

Hatheway, Bank Robber, Gets 6-Year Term

A despatch from London, Ont., says:—Leslie G. Hatheway, the confessed bandit who robbed the branch of the Bank of Montreal at Thorndale on July 3 of the sum of $6,000 odd, and held the staff up at the point of a gun, later locking them in the vault, was sentenced by Deputy Police Magistrate Gladman to serve six years in the penitentiary.

Hatheway seemed surprised, and later stated that he guessed he had been given a year for every thousand he stole. His wife fainted when she heard the sentence, and a doctor had to be called. Recovering in an hour, she drove to the jail, where she had a pathetic meeting with her husband.

It is understood that there will be no appeal, and that Hatheway will be started on the serving of his sentence at once.

Hatheway signed documents waiving right to appeal. On the strength of this he will be taken to Kingston at once.

Old Song May be Omitted from Protestant Hymnal

A despatch from Seattle, Wash., says:—The next edition of the universal hymnal used by many Protestant churches will be minus one old song if certain Northwest societies have any influence. This week, at the session of a conference here of Baptist ministers, a special song service was announced. The song leader took the platform, opened the hymnal and called a number. A ripple of laughter started on the platform, which soon ran through the church.

The hymn announced was "We've Reached the Land of Corn and Wine."

Mystery Surrounds Early Morning Crash Near Chippawa—Little Girl May Die.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 9.— Lutetha, 7-year-old daughter of Mrs. Clara Morrison, this city, was probably fatally injured late to-night on Victoria Avenue, when she was struck by an automobile driven by John McGue of this city. According to witnesses, the little girl was with her mother, and stepped from behind the street car, when she was hit by the McGue car. She sustained a badly fractured skull and doctors say there is little hope for recovery. She has never regained consciousness. McGue was not held.

Running out into the road, Howard Bates, 5 years old, had his right leg broken when struck by a car driven by Thomas Defoe of this city. Mr. Defoe swerved his car almost across the road in an effort to avoid a crash, but struck the lad with a rear fender.

A big sedan driven by a Mr. Porter of St. Catharines, crashed into a tree on the Niagara Boulevard, above Chippawa, early this morning. The top of the car was completely torn off, and six occupants were badly cut with glass. After receiving attention at the hospital all but two were able to return home. Hospital authorities say they have instructions to give out no names.

A Unique Occurrence in British Railway Annals

A despatch from London says:—A bit of British railway history was made at Victoria Station here recently. At the height of the bank holiday rush a ticket taker incautiously left the gate to a platform unguarded. It happened that there was an empty train awaiting removal to another track. But on the other side of the barrier there was a crowd waiting to go to Margate. They surged through the gate, took possession of the train and refused to leave it.

Rather than disorganize the whole station service and risk a riot the company decided to send the train to Margate, after all.

VERDICT OF INSANITY IN SCOTT TRIAL

Prisoner at Once Committed to Chester Asylum—Still Faces Death Sentence.

A despatch from Chicago says:—Russell Scott has won his last fight to escape the gallows. A jury in the Court of Superior Judge Joseph B. David found him insane.

The jury reached its verdict after deliberating three hours and forty minutes. Its first ballot was reported to have been 7 to 5 for insanity and thereafter the vote gradually swung to the insanity verdict. Scott immediately was committed to the Chester Asylum for the Insane.

The jury took seven ballots.

Scott sat tensely in his chair while the jury filed into the box. He turned eagerly to the foreman when he announced to the court that a verdict was ready, and as the Bailiff passed the verdict to the Clerk, Scott's eyes followed the slip of paper that might mean life or death.

When the verdict was read Scott's mouth twitched nervously and his shifted his position in the chair. He sat motionless at the side of his attorneys while the court entered the judgment on the verdict, and then was hurried out of the room as the Bailiff adjourned the session.

Mrs. Catherine Scott, the young wife of the prisoner, leaned forward in an attitude of prayer after the verdict was read. Scott's mother, at his side, wept and embraced Scott's wife, while Thomas Scott, his aged and crippled father, received the verdict without show of emotion.

Scott, while going to the asylum as insane, still faces death on the gallows should he ever be found to have regained his sanity.

Scott, convicted of the murder of Joseph Maurer, drug clerk, was saved from death three weeks ago, six hours before he was to have been hanged, by a week's reprieve from Gov. Small.

Answer to last week's puzzle.

BOOKS SHOULD BE AUDITED AND INVESTIGATION HE

That the municipal officials after our scalp, would be putting too strongly, but it really look that way this week, when the c lector for Light, Power and Wa dropped in with a bill for pow which had once before been rend ed with an over charge, paid, a signed by the collector as hav received payment.

We believe that the collector w sincere, and that it was due to fact that he had not detached bill from his stub, that made think it had not been paid. He t us that Mr. Chalmers had deduc the over charge from the bill, so he had, but instead of refund the amount of the overcharge to we were asked to pay the amount of the corrected bill.

When questioned the colle told us that there was no way balancing his books to show whe he had received the money or n that he handed in the money lump sums from time to time w out balancing his books.

Is it not time that a general a were made, and an investiga held?

BALD SPOTS IN THE GARDEN

BY AMELIA LEAVITT HILL.

About the middle of the summer we often find that our gardens, in many ways at the height of their beauty, have sad surprises in store for us, due to the "bald spots" left by the dying down of spring and early-summer flowers.

In place of actual nothingness some departed blossoms have left behind a mass of greenery, peaceful and decorative, it is true, and satisfactory enough in effect for the average gardener. But some enterprising flower lovers aspire to introduce among this nest of verdure some suggestion of its earlier glory and, by a skillful management of flower grouping, to insure a succession of bloom throughout the entire summer.

Chief among the blossoms which leave unfortunate gaps crying aloud for filling are the spring bulbs—daffodils, hyacinths, tulips and narcissuses—which have not only ceased to bloom, but which are literally sere and yellow by July.

With the exception of the tulips, none of these is likely to be lifted, and though tulips are not lifted by many gardeners, others feel that in order to insure the best results they should be dug up after they have matured. We need not go into a discussion of the relative merits of the different methods here; the point is, in the present case, the replanting of the bald spots to the best advantage.

Most experienced gardeners make provision for midsummer's quota of greenness or bareness by the planting of a seed bed of annuals, from which flowers which have yet to bloom may be moved to beautify the desert wastes of passed spring loveliness.

SEEDLINGS THRIVE ON MOVINGS.

If you have already planted annuals throughout the garden, however, it is possible that even without such preparation you will have a supply of extra seedlings which will answer the same purpose. Most annuals thrive all the better for one or two movings, so that your efforts to keep the garden bright will accordingly benefit both plants and vacant spaces.

Petunias, balsams, marigolds—either the low-growing red-and-orange French variety or the tall yellow African marigold — prince's-feather and nicotiana are especially well adapted to such use, since they are both decorative and prolific.

If the place to be filled be sunny, portulaca will fill the void charmingly and the annual aster will provide many cheery blossoms for autumn cutting. Obviously we may note that late-blooming flowers are particularly well adapted to bald-spot use, since they provide color at a time when this is at a minimum, have ample time to become established after their installation and are too small at the time of transplanting to interfere with their dying neighbors.

In this connection cosmos may be mentioned, although this, to obtain the best results, should be transplanted while still small. The reason for the selection of annuals in filling in, apart from their almost immediate effect, is simply that they are not so deeply rooted as to interfere with the plants among which they have been placed.

When your spring plants, therefore, begin to leave you, set rows of annuals between them to carry on the bloom. If the plants which the annuals are to replace are not to be moved, the annuals may be set more thickly; but, for example, if tulips are to be lifted—which, if done at all, will be as soon as they are ripe—the newcomers must be so placed as to allow ample room for digging without becoming actively involved in the process themselves. As the foliage of the departing plant shrinks and yellows the smaller ones will increase in stature until the ultimate withering of the foliage which marks the ripening of the bulb is itself concealed by the prolific new plants.

Seed, too, may be sown in the required spots; the slight foliage of the bulb plants will not interfere with the seedlings, nor will the latter attain a size which will interfere with them until their bloom is past.

PROVIDING CONTINUOUS BLOOM.

The gorgeous Oriental poppy leaves a void which calls for decoration when its bloom is over, but care must be exercised in providing it with a neighbor. Though one of the loveliest additions to the garden, it is exceedingly temperamental, being hard to establish and, even when established, very jealous of interference. I have known these plants to be set in the same bed with the perennial coreopsis, which completely concealed the unsightly gaps left by the passing of the poppies, and the result was perfectly satisfactory; but it was obtained only at the price of ruthlessly weeding out and breaking off the coreopsis plants which ventured to trespass too near the poppies when they began to stir from their summer sleep early in September.

The iris, which remains a cool, soft mass of green long after its flowering is over, really needs no aid in adding effect to the garden, unless you are desirous of color everywhere. Its season may be considerably prolonged by the combining of the so-called German and the Japanese varieties, for the latter will take up the tale when the earlier variety is passed.

The iris may be given color by scattering throughout it clumps of phlox or, even better, by the inclusion of gladioluses. These latter will bloom ninety days after planting, and may be set out from time to time so that the season of their bloom will be prolonged. Their foliage is much like that of the iris, with which they harmonize excellently, and they may be tucked in here and there among the rhizomes wherever they are needed.

There are gardening magazines which give the names of wholesale dealers in these lovely flowers, who will supply comparatively small quantities at prices well below the usual retail rates; so that, although the scattering of gladioluses broadcast throughout the garden may sound like the wildest extravagance, it is really not a particularly expensive luxury.

When it comes to actual planting, gladiolus bulbs should be set from four to nine inches deep, according to the size of the corm or bulb, and six inches apart, and should, of course, be lifted every autumn.

The dahlia root, or "toe," is set just below the ground, and must also be lifted at the end of the season. Dahlias are set a considerable distance apart in order to permit the free development of the plant.

In transplanting seedlings, or indeed plants of larger growth which are grown from seed, a word as to the method to be used may not be amiss. The most commonly employed—and the easiest—is simply to move the plant to the desired spot, to give it a good watering and to await the result. This generally involves a complete wilting down of the plant in question and its subsequent revival after a day or two of prostration which has sapped it of vitality and impeded its growth.

If, on the other hand, you will lift the plant with a little earth about it, fill the hole which has been made for its reception with water and set the plant in it, piling in dry earth upon the water, the seedling will stand in liquid mud and will almost invariably survive without undergoing the weakening wilting and reviving process entailed by the other method.

It need hardly be said that the roots should be supplied with ample space in their new home, and should never be tightly packed together; the earth should be patted down firmly about the plant, and in the heat of summer a piece of newspaper should be laid over transplanted plants during the heat of the day to shield them from the rays of the sun.

Although such transplanting may seem to entail much extra labor, you will find some compensation in the fact that it will not be necessary to move a very large number of plants in all. It is surprising to see what large and attractive growths will result from a rather scattered planting.

Generally we sow annual seed thickly and have not sufficient hardness of heart to thin extensively, and the result is a mass of bloom born upon minute plants. If, however, you will in transplanting set your petunias, four-o'clocks, balsams and other annuals perhaps six inches apart, not only will your labors be greatly reduced but you will be surprised to see what showy and decorative growths will result.

Apart from the treatment of unavoidable bald spots in the garden it will be found that actual flowerless spaces can, by a little care, be reduced to a minimum. This is done by the simple process of keeping the flowers blooming, which is an easy task, since it consists only in preventing the formation of seed pods.

I know of cases where Canterbury bells were enjoyed well into August by merely pinching off these pods when they formed, after the passing of the flower. This does not mean the cutting off of the entire stalk with the sacrifice of some bloom, but simply the removal of the pods as they form along the stem.

Larkspurs will bloom a second time if cut back when the first bloom is over, as will phlox if the flower heads are removed as soon as they begin to fade. Pansies, so popular in the spring and so yellow and hopeless later, may be coaxed into a longer lease of life if in late July or early August the straggling stems be cut severely back.

Forget-me-nots may be kept green and fresh-looking by removal of the seed pods, but this will be at the cost of the lavish crop of self-grown "babies" which will next year more than make up for any winter mortality, and which are dearly bought at such a price.

Of course if flowers be cut profusely the seed-pod problem will not present itself so soon.

I have known of communities, where literally everyone boasted a garden, in which this fact was attested by the garden owners who, armed with scissors, went daily through their domains cutting off blooms, which were left on the ground to die because the house was already filled with flowers and there was no one in town who was not similarly well supplied.

Of course such cutting does prolong bloom, and in the case of roses adds a supplemental pruning as well, which is beneficial to the plant. When many railroads, however, offer free transportation to flowers which are traveling to hospitals or missions, it seems almost cruel to let our cutting be to so little purpose and to terminate with our own needs or those of our gardens.

Variations in Egg Quality.

Eggs when laid vary considerably in size and color, and somewhat as to shape. Size is a matter of very great importance because of the fact that eggs are sold by the dozen and not by the pound. It is generally accepted that a standard dozen eggs should weigh one and a half pounds, or an average of two ounces for each egg.

If the current price is based on two-ounce eggs, the consumer has a right to expect some reduction in the price of eggs smaller than the standard. Similarly, the producer has a right to expect a premium for eggs that are uniformly larger than the standard, provided all are equally good in other respects.

Color of egg depends, for the most part, on the breed of the hens laying them. Certain breeds lay white-shelled eggs, whereas it is equally characteristic of other breeds to lay eggs having brown shells. Of course there are to be found all gradations between the pure white egg at one extreme and the very dark brown shell at the other.

Consumers, naturally, have individual preferences with respect to shell color just as they have with respect to the color of roses or neckties or any other commodity in which color variation exists. In certain markets the preference for either white or brown shells is so general and so marked that the daily quotations for eggs show a consistent difference in price between brown and white eggs of equal size and equal interior quality.

While the casual buyer of eggs is indulging his preference as to shell color, the shrewd housewife, who knows that chemically there is no distinguishable difference in the interior quality as related to shell color, is looking for other measures of quality while making her purchases.

Don't Wait to Cull.

The annual culling season is here and care should be taken to start the elimination of the loafer hens just as soon as any of them appear. The real poultryman is no longer satisfied with one or even two cullings a year. He is finding it pays to make a culling every two weeks for a considerable period in order to get the boarders out of the way as soon after they stop laying as possible.

In making these early cullings all that is really necessary is to be able to tell a laying hen from one that is not. This can most easily be done by examining the vent, the abdomen and the spread of pelvic bones.

The vent of the non-layer, whether she be a good or a poor hen for the year, will be more or less dried and shriveled in comparison with the large, moist vent of the laying hen. If a yellow-skinned breed is being observed the return of yellow color to the vent will aid materially in picking out the vacation hens. Similarly the abdomen loses its soft, velvety condition when the hen stops laying.

The pelvic bones are always fairly well spread when a hen is laying but close up when she stops. The non-layer can easily be identified by this condition. The hen that stops laying in July is usually not much of a hen, provided she has had a fair chance and good management.

She can be culled by the three points suggested. In the later cullings more care must be exercised and hence more factors considered.

Seed Wheat.

Experiments at the O.A.C. show that for the best returns it is important to sow seed wheat which is (1) large; (2) plump; (3) well matured; (4) unbroken and (5) unsprouted.

In the average of ten years' experiments wheat sown at the College from the 26th of August to the 9th of September has been more productive than that which was sown at later dates.

Winter wheat sown on summer fallow or after clovers or alfalfa gives better results than that sown after timothy, buckwheat, etc.

Quality pays regardless of whether it is in the goods you sell or the goods you buy. The added price of quality products shows value received in the added service or satisfaction one gets from them. Quality often makes the difference between success and failure in farming.

If You Are a Blonde.

The changing of pretty, light-blond hair into that despised "dishwater" shade can easily be avoided and without the least injury to the hair. I am—well—past thirty and still have pretty, light hair.

Steep two ounces of camomile in two quarts of water until the tea is quite strong. After the last rinsing of the hair pour this tea well over and into the hair. Do not dry thoroughly with a towel, but rather let the hair dry slowly, thus gaining the full benefit of the camomile.

If the hair has been wrung well after the last rinsing the camomile solution can be bottled for use in the next washing. If you object to the faint odor which will remain for a few days, add some powdered orris root to the tea. The camomile rinse will not bleach or lighten the hair—it merely gives it the original shade.

Never use tar soap if you are blond. It will surely darken the hair. So will petrolatum, olive oil and the majority of hair tonics. I have found that a good soaking of the scalp once a month with kerosene will keep it clean and not harm the hair or its color. For the shampoo scrape some pure soap into a little water, let dissolve and pour onto the hair. Rinse well, being sure that no soap remains.

A little borax or soda can be used, but if the hair is very dry and brittle after washing discontinue their use. I wash my hair once a week and have never found it injurious. The injury in frequent washing lies mostly in using the wrong soaps or hair lotions and in improper rinsing.

If possible, always wash in soft water and dry the hair in the sun. As a general thing, blond hair looks its best when waved or curled. I roll mine up with rags, preferably cut-up old stockings, and if this is done before the hair dries after a washing, the curl will stay much longer.

Be sure the curls and waves are large and soft; frizziness is infinitely worse that straight hair. If you succumb to the bob, don't have the hair cut close to the head or shingled. That is for brunettes. A blonde will always look better with a rather long straight Buster Brown cut and the ends softly curled.

Really pretty, light hair on adults is rare and well worth preserving. Try the camomile for a year—you will be pleased with the rsult.

Doll Dishes.

On her birthday my daughter asked for a set of doll dishes big enough to eat from when her little friends came in to play. We went shopping for them in toy departments of stores and found such sets expensive. But in the house-furnishings section we bought from open-stock china better dishes at half the price.

We bought six bread-and-butter plates of a dainty flower pattern, six afterdinner cups and saucers, the smallest meat platter, an individual teapot, sugar bowl and cream pitcher. My daughter says any pieces left after doll days she is going to put away to form the nucleus of her own housekeeping dishes.

A Poppy Bouquet.

Do not deny yourself the pleasure of a beautiful bouquet of rich red poppies right in the house where you can see them. Early in the morning cut your poppies and be sure to get freshly opened ones.

Dip the tips of the stems immediately in very hot water, then arrange them in a large pitcher or crock of cold water and set them in the cellar for the day. They will droop at first but straighten up later and if they do not need to be moved about will often last two or three days.

Inches of Time.

We housewives are often held in the kitchen, watching the progress of whatever may be over the fire, waiting for things to get done. I used to chafe at these wasted moments. But I don't waste them now—not since I thought of establishing in my kitchen, on a convenient shelf, a worthwhile book to read at those times. I have read in this way a number of fine books that I could not have gotten through with otherwise. Busy women who think they have no time for reading will find that they can accomplish much in that line if they really wanted to, just by using their inches of time.—Alice A. Keen.

OUR VACATION AT HOME

BY GRACIA SHULL.

Last year we spent a most enjoyable and profitable vacation, and we never left home.

A quarter of a mile back of our farmhouse on a beautiful knoll is our large orchard, and at the foot of the slope is a brook fed by a spring as clear as crystal. In the centre of the orchard we constructed a "cook shack"; about twenty feet away we made a platform of rough boards, measuring 16 x 20 feet, and then pitched a tent over the platform. The tent was waterproofed and then painted a dull moss green to eliminate the glare.

This was our dining room and living room—whenever we could prevail upon anyone to stay inside. Meals were carried from the cookroom to the dining tent on a huge tray; only two trips were needed to carry the entire meal for the seven of us.

Wash water and water for cooking purposes were carried from the spring. We slept under the apple trees in hammocks or on cots and even on rugs on clear nights, but on damp or rainy nights the women slept on cots and pallets in the tent and the men slept in a large hay barn just at the edge of the orchard.

We closed up the house as though we were going away for a long visit and promptly forgot all about it. We took old, plain dishes—mostly tinware—plenty of cooking utensils, all of our old cotton clothes, dressed the youngsters in rompers, overalls and sunbonnets and turned them loose.

Horses were turned out to pasture, but the men had to milk eleven cows twice each day, feed and water the hogs, tend 150 hens and about 300 young chickens and other poultry.

Occasionally a little weeding in the garden was indulged in or a little wood gathered and cut for our camp, but not one stroke of unnecessary work was done.

The men went on fishing trips nearly every day. We women gathered, preserved, pickled and canned nearly 300 quarts of berries, grapes, watermelon rinds and tomatoes.

We made forty gallons of the finest apple butter from windfalls and sold the greater part at two dollars a gallon to tourists and summer camps. We made one hundred and sixty glasses of jelly and sold it at thirty cents a glass. Forty quarts of cucumber catchup we sold at fifty cents a quart, and twenty quarts we kept for home use. We made about ten gallons of tomato catchup and sold part of it, receiving twenty cents a half-pint bottle for it.

Our canning was all done in our cook shack and the men made trips to the cellar every few days to store it, but the women never went near the house during the months of July and August.

BUSY, HAPPY WEEKS.

We bought our bread and butter and eliminated pastry. We broiled fish, meat and fowl over a camp fire. We roasted wienies and we rolled whole picnic hams in clay and baked them in our camp fire. We used a long-handled toaster to broil meats, thus saving burnt fingers and faces. We did our laundry work at the brook and did not iron a single garment in two months. We wore knickers and one-piece bungalow aprons that had seen better days. The men wore tennis shoes, old colored shirts, old wash trousers or overalls. We rigged up a shower bath under a V-shaped tent of muslin. The youngsters went barefoot and mother and I wore sandals.

The fruit, berries, and so forth, were clear profit except for the sugar, vinegar and spices used in canning them, as we had never tried using windfall apples before, or berries and wild grapes, picked in fence corners.

The youngsters grew brown and strong. The horses grew sleek and fat and lazy—the men also—and I found time to make many dainty pieces of needlework for the coming Christmas box, read many good magazines and books, write letters to neglected friends and relatives and dream many happy dreams under the stars at night.

Altogether we were a busy, happy lot, and when the last week in August rolled round and we made a bonfire of our old clothes and sent the men down the hill to open up and air out the house for our homecoming, it was with real pleasure that we looked back over the happy weeks of our delightful vacation.

Curtain Tricks.

When hanging fresh curtains, remember that there are tricks to this part of housekeeping as well as any other.

If the thin ones have shrunken so they look like a little girl's skirt at the window, hunt up some old thin white material and lengthen each curtain from the top, covering this seam with a valance, set on straight or pleated, of some bright material in color harmonious to the room.

Straight curtains which have split with age may be ironed into pleating, then fastened back with cords or bands.

White net or lace curtains may be washed and starched and put on the rods wet to dry. Pull out the edges with the fingers when perfectly dry. This is most successful when there are two rods, top and bottom, as for French windows.

Don't try to fasten tie-backs with pins pressed in by the finger. Hold the pin firmly and pound it in with a hammer.

Iron net curtains and marquisette, damp from the line. It saves time and the result is as pleasing as when dampened.

Pongee curtains hold a nicer sheen when ironed quite dry.

White bone rings make an excellent lengthener for a sash curtain, serving also as insert for the rod.

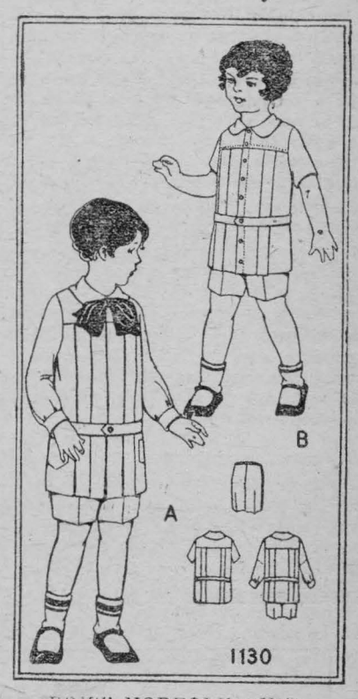

Two yards of percale, ruffled, makes a dainty, washable and gay kitchen curtain for less than fifty cents.

Don't forget the possibilities of the dye-pot for faded curtains. Color is being used more than ever and, if this is not desired, try creaming or buffing dingy white ones. Even the "tints" added to the last water give excellent results.

We take all possible pains to wash clean our pails, pans and cans, but sunshine can make them still purer and sweeter. They should be turned up in the open air every day to let the sun's rays find their way into them.

ECLIPSE FASHIONS

Exclusive Patterns by Cecil Boyce

BOYS' NORFOLK SUIT.

This type of suit will appeal to parents who dress their young sons smartly and sensibly, and is a style the young boy will wear with much pleasure. The box-plaits in the front and back fit under a yoke. The collar fits closely to the neck, and the sleeves may be long and gathered into a cuff, or short. The patch-pockets are generous in size and will hold many treasures. The trousers are straight and knee-length, with side closing. Sizes 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 6 years requires 2¾ yards of 36-inch, or 1⅞ yards of 54-inch material. Price 20c.

Our new Fashion Book contains many styles showing how to dress boys and girls. Simplicity is the rule for well-dressed children. Clothes of character and individuality for the junior folks are hard to buy, but easy to make with our patterns. A small amount of money spent on good materials, cut on simple lines, will give children the privilege of wearing adorable things. Price of the book 10 cents the copy. Each copy includes one coupon good for five cents in the purchase of any pattern.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

NEW HEALTH FOR SUFFERING WOMEN

Aching Backs and Tired Limbs Need Not be Endured.

Too many women endure suffering that casts a shadow over half her existence. Aching back, tired limbs, attacks of faintness, splitting headaches need not be a part of a woman's life. Such trials indicate plainly that the blood is thin and watery and that the sufferer needs the help of a real tonic such as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Suffering women who have used this medicine speak of it in the highest terms. Among those who have been thus helped is Mrs. Ada L. Harman, Virden, Man., who writes:—"Following the birth of a still-born child a few years ago, I had a very serious time. I was so weak for months that I could not walk across the room without a feeling of faintness. I had scarcely strength enough to stand up, and when dressing would have to sit down two or three times. My face and lips were colorless, I had no appetite, and life did not seem worth living.. A friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I got six boxes. Before they were all gone I felt improved. My appetite was returning, color was coming into my face, and I was visibly stronger. I continued taking the pills and fully regained my former good health. I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a blessing to weak women, and hope my experience will induce some other sufferer to try them."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box direct from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

When in Doubt.

"What does one do when all the rest is taken away from one, when life has grown trivial, stunted, and narrow?" This question is asked by a character in "Wages of Sin," by Lucas Malet. The answer given is: "After a time one lights a candle called Patience and guides one's footsteps by that."

Amid dreary days that is a splendid light to have, for it will shine when every other light is extinguished. It is our highest wisdom to have that lamp always clean and burning. Many a dark path and obscure turning will be revealed by Patience.

When we are in a corner or hemmed in by all manner of obstacles, we need Hope as well as Patience. To lose hope when everything seems against us is to be in the slough of despair.

Patience may become exhausted. It may be tried to its last stand; but Hope need never burn out. Sometimes it may flicker and splutter and burn low for a moment, but Faith relights it. If Faith failed, Love would do the relighting.

Look back over your past and you will discover that we are always being helped in this way. When strength is failing, Patience, Hope, Faith, or Love comes along and woos us back to health and activity. They are never far away from any of us.

However complex may be the maze, there is a way out. The exit has to be sonsidered, certainly, for it is never self-revealed. It may be you are out of the maze before you realize it. That often happens. But don't complain if in your effort to get through you come up against a barrier and find the way has a blind end. Go back cheerfully and try again. Keep up a good heart, laugh at your impossibilities, and say: "It shall be done." That is a wonderful tonic.

Don't live in a fog if you can possibly be out of it. Try your hardest to see daylight. Things have their true proportions in the light. But never complain and never blame anyone except yourself. Whilst everyone affects and influences everyone else, no one else is to blame for our mistakes.

When you are doubtful what to do, just be advised never to look down.
Look up, the sky, the stars above,
Will whisper to thee of His changeless love.

We are not just as specks on the ocean of life, drifting anywhere. We have a work to do, and we are related to a "Divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we may."

So, trust the Star of the Morning, for as certain as night follows the day that star will guide you through patience and hope to victory and joy.

Graphite in Greenland.

The world's richest deposits of graphite, sufficient for large scale mining for ten years, were recently discovered in Greenland.

EX-PRESIDENT OPENS COURSE

Chief Justice W. H. Taft, ex-President of the United States, replying to the speech of welcome at the opening of the new 6,000-yard championship golf course at the Manoir Richelieu, Murray Bay, Quebec, just prior to teeing off with a 170-yard drive. Mr. Taft complimented W. H. Coverdale, President of the Canada Steamship Lines, Limited, on his Company's enterprise in creating one of the finest golf courses in Eastern Canada, set among some of the finest scenery in that part of the Dominion.

Play Safe.

"Bet your life I don't," said the chatty drummer to the other man in the smoker. "I was in Windsor when they had that last dose of smallpox and I don't allow any child of mine to go to school until he is vaccinated. I say if a scratch on the arm will prevent a fellow getting that, why I'm for it. The day I arrived, another chap and myself bumped up against a man who was just coming down with it. When I found out about it I was a bit upset and figured that I was about ten years old when I was last vaccinated; the chap with me hadn't been done at all because his father didn't believe in it. I escaped just with the old scar. He came down about a week later and had a hard time to come through. That's enough for me—vaccination's all right.

"We commercial men—and of course it's just the same thing with my wife and kiddies, too, when they go away from home—can't afford to take a chance. I think any man is mighty foolish who walks into danger which will mean being sick for six or eight weeks' worry and anxiety, to say nothing of doctor bills, hospitals and nurses; so that's why I take a shot of typhoid vaccine every 2 years They talk of the soldiers not getting typhoid during the war (and it is true, of course), but I'm judging from my own experience. Sometimes on the road I have had to drink milk and water in places which were proved later to be real nests of typhoid and I haven't had a day's sickness, while three or four times other travellers took the fever and were off for six weeks or more; this meant that my dose of vaccine saved me in money alone six or seven hundred dollars.

"That vaccine isn't made for nothing, but the money the government spends on it (it's all free, you know) means a real service to the people."

Protection, safe and sure, may be had against diphtheria, scarlet fever, typhoid fever and smallpox. Tested products distributed free within the province by Ontario Department of Health, Spadina House, Toronto.

Minard's Liniment for Aches and Pains

Poems That Aren't True.

How many who have recited "The Wreck of the Hesperus," possibly the best-known ballad in our literature, know that the famous ship, instead of being lost with all hands, actually returned to port with no more serious damage than a broken bowsprit?

Maritime records for the year 1839 record a great storm on December 15th, when, among twenty other vessels, the Hesperus was driven into Boston harbour. so it is difficult to account for Longfellow's entry in his diary two days later:

"News of shipwrecks. Horrible. Off the coast. Twenty bodies washed ashore off Gloucester, one female being lashed to a piece of wreck." He then mentions details regarding the Hesperus, and concludes: "I must write a ballad upon this."

A couple of weeks later he makes this entry. "I have broken ground in a new field, namely, ballads, beginning with 'The Wreck of the Hesperus' on the reef of Norman's Woe, in the great storm a fortnight ago. I shall send it to some newspaper. I have a great notion of working upon the people's feelings."

An almost equally famous poem is Charles Kingsley's "Three Fishers." The story so graphically told was the result of a fit of low spirits on the part of a tired parson.

Kingsley was very keen on social reform and was regarded in his day as rather a dangerous type of clerical Socialist. Thus, when he went to preach in a West-end church he greatly offened the incumbent and did not escape a public protest. He returned to Eversley Vicarage late that night, but instead of going to bed he paced about his garden. The next morning he recited to his wife the beautiful lines: "Three fishers went sailing out into the west."

The story of the boy Felicia Hemans calls "Casabianca," who "stood on the burning deck" of the French flagship Orient and was involved in the explosion of its powder magazine in the Battle of the Nile, is not well authenticated. There may have been such a boy, but seeing that he perished with his father it is difficult to say who told the story, and it is certain that the poetess draws very largely on her sentimental imagination.

One of the most flagrant cases of a poet letting imagination ignore facts is furnished by Oliver Goldsmith, whose "Deserted Village" is one of the most beautiful poems in the language. The poet anticipated criticism in his dedication of the poem to Sir Joshua Reynolds: "I know you will object, and indeed several of our best and wisest friends concur in the opinion, that the depopulation it deplores is nowhere to be seen and the disorders it laments are only to be found in the poet's imagination."

Stories About Well-Known People

Quiet Heroism.

General Sir George Higginson, who celebrated his ninety-ninth birthday recently, was once the hero of an incident which recalls a famous episode in the life of Lord Beaconsfield.

The General was taking his wife, who was just recovering from a severe illness, to Bournemouth. At Winchester he called a porter and gave him some order. The man executed it, and then swung the door to. The General's fingers were caught in it, but he made no comment, though he must have been suffering the most excruciating pain. But not until he had arrived at his destination, and had seen his wife safely installed in her hotel, did he have his hand seen to.

Quiet heroism like this seems to be a characteristc of our race. Another good example of it was provided during the daylight raid of June 13th, 1917. The Shoreditch County Court was sitting at the time, and though bombs were falling all round, and one of them made a big hole in the ceiling, the proceedings continued.

"If we are to die, let us die as brave Englishmen should," observed Judge Cluer, and a girl who was in the witness-box declared her readiness to continue if no one fainted. Counsel then resumed his cross-examination.

The Quinine King.

"For the application of botany to the development of the raw materials of the Empire," the Society of Arts has awarded the Albert Medal for 1925 to Sir David Prain, until recently director of the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew.

The medal specially marks Sir David's work in connection with the production of that most valuable drug, quinine. By organizing the Government's cinchona plantations, which annually yield vast quantities of quinine, he has brought this drug within reach of every part of the world has thereby saved countless lives.

A Duty Performed.

Novelists as well as prophets, it appears, lack honor in their own country. At least Sir James Barrie does. In Memories and Adventures, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle tells of the tolerant but unenthusiastic attitude that Sir James' old neighbors at Kirriemuir adopted toward him.

"Kirriemuir folk could by no means understand Barrie's success and looked upon their great son as an inexplicable phenomenon. They were actually aware, however, that tourists were arriving from all parts to see the place, on account of Barrie's books.

" 'I suppose you have read them,' I said to the wife of the local hotel man.

" 'Aye, I've read them, and steep, steep, weary work it was,' said she."

A Titled Typist Now.

Week by week come announcements that one or another member of the British aristocracy has gone into the world of business. Lady Constance Howard, sister of the Countess of Carlisle, is the latest. She has turned stenographer and typist.

The First Vaccinators.

Although vaccination is indissolubly linked with the name of Jenner, there is ample evidence that it was practised by farmers and others in the rural districts of England long before his day.

It was common knowledge amongst these people that an attack of cowpox immunized the sufferer against smallpox, and it was usual for farm workers to infect themselves and their children with the former complaint to protect them against the latter.

Indeed, twenty-two years before Dr. Jenner made his first vaccination a farmer named Benamin Jesty, of Downshay, openly advocated the practice; but, not being a medical man, he was laughed at for his pains.

Japanese View Gardens on Plan of Paintings.

Japanese look upon a garden as a picture, beautifully designed and framed, much as the Occidental looks upon a painting. Professor Takutna Tono, landscape architect of Waseta University, Japan, told Seattle on a lecture tour of the United States.

"Our Japanese gardens are entirely different from gardens in any other part of the world," Mr. Tono said. "In all Western nations the garden is considered a collection of rare and beautiful plants, flowers, shrubs and trees, rather than the picture for which the Japanese strive. Japanese gardens are more naturalistic than architectural."

Ocean Rich in Minerals.

The total amount of any of the elements occurring in the entire ocean is stupendous, says "Thrift Magazine." Iodine exists in sea water only to the extent of about two parts per million, yet the entire ocean contains some 60,000,000,000 tons of iodine, valued at present prices at $540,000,000,000,000.

Bromine is also obtained in a limited way from the mother liquor left after the crystallization of salt from sea water.

A gallon of sea water contains approximately a quarter of a pound of salt, and since the average density of rock salt is 2.24 times that of water, the entire ocean, if dried up, would yield approximately four and a half cubic miles of salt.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL DURING HOT WEATHER

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery, colic and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Safe From Criticism.

"I was afraid my sermon last Sunday would annoy some of my people, but it didn't," said the vicar.

"What was your subject?" asked his friend.

" 'The Duplicity of the Average Man,' and I spoke pretty plainly."

"You couldn't tread on any corns that way. Every man considers himself above the average."

Minard's Liniment for Corns and Warts

Same Eggs.

Upton Sinclair was condemning, in Los Angeles, the extortions of the middleman.

"In pre-war days," he said, "the middleman sold us eggs for thirty cents a dozen. Now he makes us pay ninety cents a dozen. And the worst if it is"—

Mr. Sinclair gave a grim laugh.

"They're the same eggs."

Buddhas in Pearl.

Miniature Burrhas are inserted into oysters in China to make pearl Buddhas.

Wells have now to be driven to a depth of over 220 feet under London to reach water. A century ago the pressure of underground water was sufficient to bring water to the surface wherever a boring was made.

Superstitions of Alaskan Eskimo.

Alaskan Eskimos have established ideols of astronomy, says Lionel Travis, trader, who spent many years with the northern natives. They call the Great Dipper a herd of caribou spread out for mutual protection, with a long single file of leaders. The triangular stars of Cassiopeia are three stones supporting an oil lamp. The Pleiades are teams of dogs pursuing a polar bear.

The new moon is either wet or dry by its curves. If the curve is capable of holding a harpoon line wet and stormy weather is due, so Eskimo hunters remain in the igloos. Should the curve permit the lariat to slide off, the men hurry forth to seek game.

The Eskimos also maintain superstitions about eclipses and falling stars, all of which apparently control the weather, ice conditions, the abundance of game or fur bearers.

Nails Given Better Hold.

Packing cases coming from Europe have been found fastened together with tenpenny nails that have spiral flutes in the sides to afford a better grip on the wood. The grooves also decrease the likelihood of splitting the board and help in driving the nail straight.

It is usually the case that we are neither so happy nor so unhappy as we imagine ourselves.

MINARD'S "KING OF PAIN" LINIMENT

A Rejoinder.

Leonard Bacon, who was one of the best-known theologians in New England a half century ago, was attending a conference, and some assertions he made in his address were vehemently objected to by a member of the opposition. "Why," he expostulated, "I never heard of such a thing in all my life!"

"Mr. Moderator," rejoined Bacon calmly, "I can not allow my opponent's ignorance, however vast, to offset my knowledge, however small."

Nerves Gave Little Rest

Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Harrowsmith, Ontario.—"I took your medicine before my baby was born and it was a great help to me as I was very poorly until I started to take it. I just felt as though I was tired out all the time and would take weak, fainting spells. My nerves would bother me until I could get little rest, day or night. I was told by a friend to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I only took a few bottles and it helped me wonderfully. I would recommend it to any woman. I am doing what I can to publish this good medicine. I lend that little book you sent me to any one I can help. You can with the greatest of pleasure use my name in regard to the Vegetable Compound if it will serve to help others."—MRS. HARVEY MILLIGAN, R. R. No. 2, Harrowsmith, Ontario.

In a recent canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 said they had been helped by its use. This medicine is for sale by all druggists.

"THE SERVICE OF SIGHT"

OPTOMETRY
CHEAP GLASSES

"What was good enough for Father in good enough for Me."

That old idea must go. The responsibilities that the public places on the Optometrists of to-day are far greater than those of former times. People used to be satisfied to buy glasses over the counter or have their "eyes examined free" in some bargain store. To-day the public demands accuracy in every diagnosis.

So many eyes have been ruined by cheap glasses that the public has learned that price-quoted glasses and "free examinations" are only a ruse to snare the unwary and are worth just about what they are priced at.

Real eye service cannot be had for nothing, but it is the only ki that satisfies.
