THE PUBLIC LIBRARY— AND A SUGGESTION

When listening in on a discussion of the Chesterville Public Library the other day, we heard the suggestion made that if the subscriptions going from town to the Book-of-the-Month Club were placed at the disposal of the Library Board, Chesterville would soon have an outstanding library.

Here is a public service which perhaps has not suggested itself to a number of our citizens which could be easily followed out with much credit to themselves and vast benefit to the reading public of the community.

There are no doubt many real lovers of books, those who like to own books and keep them after reading, while there are a great many people who care nothing about possession once a book is read. The latter are the lenders of the community, and in the lending care not a whit whether return is made or not. To these we would suggest when you have read your newest book donate it to the Public Library and thus make it available to all the members. Such a service might be recognized by the keeping of an honour roll of all such public-spirited citizens and the publication of it at a given time each year.

Givers of an amount equal to the Book - of - the - Month subscription should be allowed the privilege of selection of several books to be added to the library, which would give latitude for personal likes and dislikes.

Thomas Foley, of Goldfield, Succumbed to Heart Disease

Well-Known Farmer Lived All His Life on Homestead Where He Was Born in 1869.

Following a serious illness of a month with an affection of the heart, though he had not enjoyed the best of health for a year, Thomas Foley, one of the most highly esteemed residents of the Goldfield district, Finch township, died at his home Tuesday night. His pastor, Rev. J. H. Bougie, was with him when the end came.

Mr. Foley was born on the Foley homestead, lot 3 and 4 in the second concession of Finch township, March 29, 1869, a son of Thomas Foley. He spent his entire life on the farm where he was born. Though a quiet man, devoted to his wife and family, in his younger day he took a keen interest in sport. A man of sterling quality, he was honest in all dealings with his fellow men, and enjoyed the respect and esteem of all with whom he came in contact.

Besides his wife, the former Catherine Barry, of Williamsburg, he leaves seven sons and five daughters—John and Leonard Foley, Bourlemaque, Que.; James Foley, of the Royal Air Force, Trenton; William, Bernard, Thomas and Francis Foley, at home; Mrs. James Gavin and Mrs. James Fryer, of Tarrytown, N.Y.; Mrs. James Ryan, of Albany, N.Y.; Miss Anna Foley, teacher, of Deloro, Ont., and Miss Sarah Foley, of the Civil Service, Ottawa.

DIONNE QUINTS MAY BE SEEN TWO HOURS EACH DAY

So many thousands are eager to see the Dionne quintuplets as they near their third birthday on Friday that Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe has decided to lengthen the periods they appear each day before the public.

The babies now play before the public for two half-hour periods each day, and yesterday Mrs. Oliva Dionne, their 27-year-old mother, dropped in to receive an enthusiastic reception from her daughters. They ran to her arms and kissed her, and then each hugged Ernest and Daniel, two of their brothers, and Pauline, their sister who is only 11 months older than they are.

So that as many as possible may see the youngsters, Dr. Dafoe has decided that after June 15th the public will be received from 9.30 to 10.30 in the morning and from 2.30 to 3.30 in the afternoon. At present the quints may be seen from 9.30 to 10 and from 2.30 to 3. All times are eastern standard.

LOCAL SOFTBALLERS LOSE FIRST GAME TO HALLVILLE

In the first game in the new scherule of the Dundas County Softball league at Hallville, Friday night, the home team was victorious over Chesterville in a hotly contested game by a score of 7 to 6. One of the highlights of the game was a homer by Ab. Cross of the locals with two on. To-morrow evening the Winchester team will make its appearance in Chesterville in the opening of the season on the local diamond.

POOR SEEDING WEATHER.

With a slight rise in temperature during the week end, conditions have improved for the growth of the crops already seeded, but it will be many days yet under good conditions before many a low-lying field is seeded in this district. While a wet May is regarded ideal for the hay crop, full benefit will not be received from the acreage this year following much winter killing of new seeding. Gardens are also very backward with many in the village getting their first working during the week.

ARCHBISHOP ROPER TO VISIT.

His Grace, Archbishop J. C. Roper, of Ottawa, will be visiting the parish of Winchester on Sunday next to administer the Sacrament of Confirmation at the service in the evening. He will preach at the service of Holy Communion at 10.30 a.m. in Holy Trinity church, Chesterville.

Elderly Cornwall Woman Injured in Car Accident

Miss H. Kyle, 70, Has Hip Badly Injured When Brother-in-law's Car Plunges Into Deep Ditch.

Suffering severe hip injuries when the car in which she was riding left the highway and plunged into a deep ditch near Aultsville on the evening of Victoria Day, Miss H. Kyle, 70, of 321 Cumberland street, Cornwall, was taken by ambulance to a hospital in that city after receiving medical aid from Dr. Brown, of Aultsville.

Miss Kyle was riding with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. James Murray, of Cornwall, when Mr. Murray swung out in meeting an approaching car. The front wheels of the car caught in the long grass along the shoulder of the road and the car crashed into the ditch.

The machine was damaged to some extent, while both Mr. and Mrs. Murray escaped injuries. Traffic Officer Eugene Rose, of Morrisburg, investigated.

Mothers and Coronation Theme of May Meeting Held at Home of Mrs. K. Woods, Thursday.

The Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's church met at the home of Mrs. K. K. Wood on Thursday afternoon last for the May meeting with the president in charge. The president's opening words were an explanation that the service was in two parts, the first being dedicated to our mothers, our mothers who are still here with us and to the mothers who have gone to sit around the great white throne, as May was the month when services were held in memory of mothers.

The opening hymn was 708, "Happy the Home Where God is There." Deuteronomy vi:1-13 was chosen as the Bible reading, and Mrs. Jay Bailey led in prayer. A paper, "Our Mothers," was read by Miss Jamieson, followed by hymn 139, "O Lord of Heaven, and Earth, and Sea." The mothers' service was closed by Mrs. J. A. Munro reading a poem entitled "A Hymn For the Household."

The second part of the meeting was the Coronation Service requested to be used at the May meeting. It opened with the National Anthem and a short reading by the president from the Glad Tidings, Mrs. Wood taking the thanksgiving prayer. The secretary, Mrs. J. A. Munro, read the April minutes, these being adopted as read. The roll call followed with the members answering with a verse of scripture containing the word "Mary," visitors answering with a scripture verse with the word "King." The mission study paper on India was given by Mrs. Bigelow. Mrs. Black took the prayer for His Majesty the King, and Mrs. Brownell the prayer for Her Majesty the Queen. The Coronation hymn, "All on the Appointed Day in Isreal's Ancient Land," was sung, taken from I Samuel x:24. The auxiliary members took the prayer for the Royal Family in unison.

The treasurer, Mrs. Jay Bailey, reported and the several secretaries. The leaders and presidents of groups and the Mission Band reported on the mission bales being prepared.

At this time Miss Jamieson introduced and presented the president of the new McKay-Douglas Home Helpers Group, Mrs. Lorne Marcellus. Mrs. Marcellus acknowledged the introduction and her group was affiliated with the W.M.S. Great things are hoped for this new girls' group, were the closing words to Mrs. Marcellus and the auxiliary by Miss Jamieson.

Mrs. Carman McIntosh gave a very fine Bible study paper, "The Crowning of the King," taken from II Kings xi:12. The service was closed by the members repeating the prayer for Empire and church in unison and singing in conclusion the Doxology. Mrs. Wood was assisted by the members of the McKay-Douglas group in the serving of a very dainty and delicious lunch.

W. M. Society President Honoured by Members

On Thursday afternoon last at the home of Mrs. K. Wood, at the conclusion of the combined Mothers' and Coronation service, Mrs. J. A. Munro acting as mistress of ceremonies for the auxiliary's impromptu programme asked the president, Miss Helen Jamieson, to stand while Mrs. Munro reading the following appropriate address bespeaking the minds of all the auxiliary members and the many visiting ladies of the congregation for Miss Jamieson's nine years of service as president of the Missionary society.

To Miss Helen Jamieson.

Dear President, — As this May of 1937 is a month of crowning ceremonies not only in the Royal Family but as the old-time custom of crowning the "May Queen," so as to-day is the usual day of our meeting and also very close to the day which commemorates the day of your nativity, we felt we could not find a more opportune time to bring to you our felicitations and good wishes that you may see many more years of health and happines. As leader of our own W. M. S., where you have seen years of service, you have proven to be a leader to whom a real talent of leadership has been given, and right royally have you exercised this same talent and we trust that your efficient labour has been a real source of blessing to you, and may some of the precious seed you have sown fall on fallow ground so that rich may your harvest be.

It has been said many times that each of our members are disappointed if they miss one meeting. Now why is this? The answer comes readily. It is in our leader. She who prepares such interesting programmes and having at her disposal a keen versatility of the work to be covered, brings each member into the circle of action—this is her way of instruction and of binding together our own members until we feel almost as a family group. We feel that our small auxiliary is indeed blessed with such a leader — a leader for whom we have esteem and loving respect in our own meetings and of whom we are justly proud in the meetings of Presbyterial.

Now we ask you to accept this Bible which carries with it our deep appreciation of your splendid work and as in days of yore may its blessed truths ever lead you on to deeper and richer service.

Time may mute our voices,
But memories will return,
Thoughts to cheer you onward
On to your heavenly home,
Where, after all life's service,
His heavenly smile will bless
And welcome each way-worn traveller
To aeons of eternal rest.
So may his smile brighten
The checkered path by you to be trod
Till you get home to the city
Whose builder and maker is God.

Affectionately, Auxiliary of W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Chesterville.

The presentation of an exceptionally fine, self-pronouncing, illustrated Holy Bible bound in leather, engraved in gold and containing a Bible encyclopedia, was in charge of Mrs. Wood. Miss Jamieson, who was completely taken by surprise, was nearly overcome, but after a moment's hesitation rallied to the occasion and thanked the members for this evidence of thoughtfulness and affection and in their choice of so useful and fitting and admirable a gift.

Miss Jamieson spoke at length with feeling and emotion and among her closing words she said she would consider this Bble a precious gift and cherish it as a token of love from women she had worked among many years but intimately the past nine as president.

At Mrs. Munro's invitation, Mrs. Preston McIntosh, sectional president, brought greetings. She spoke highly of the Chesterville auxiliary and its president who is also an officer of the Presbyterial.

Mrs. Geo. Brownell, president of Dunbar auxiliary, and for many years a member and Life Member of the Chesterville auxiliary, spoke fittingly of her associations with the branch and of the president with whom she had been friends of many years' standing.

Mrs. Tom Johnston brought suitable greetings from Winchester Springs auxiliary.

Mrs. Myles Marcellus, of Dunbar, a former member and a Life Member of St. Andrew's auxiliary, spoke of her pleasant former associations.

Rev. Mr. Extence spoke on behalf of the church.

Mrs. R. J. Barrie spoke on behalf of herself and the group's sincere repect for their president.

After extending her personal good wishes, Mrs. Munro asked the ladies to stand as they sang "Blest Be The Tie That Binds."

Tourist's Car Crashes Rail On Canal Near Iroquois

Four tourists from the United States had a narrow escape from serious injury when the car in which they were driving crashed through a guard rail on Highway No. 2, a mile and a quarter west of Iroquois, on Tuesday morning and skidded more than 100 feet to within three feet of the canal.

Driver of the car was Myrtal C. Rosenquist, of Blue Island, Ill., and in the car were his wife, Mrs. Maud Rosenquist; his mother-in-law, Mrs. Delia Heckler, 75 years of age, and Miss Frances Ernest. Mrs. Heckler suffered two fractured ribs and the others were uninjured. The car was considerably damaged.

Mr. Rosenquist told police he had fallen asleep while driving.

MOTORISTS!

. . . in all your driving

Try Courtesy

every inch of the way

EACH successive year has seen motor traffic greatly increased. With this increase there has come, unfortunately, an increase in traffic accidents.

It is the duty of those responsible for the regulation of the traffic, and of every individual who operates a motor vehicle, to do everything possible to reduce these ever-mounting and alarming accident figures.

The Government and my department have taken every precaution within our means to make motoring safe. We have built wider highways, have painted traffic lines on the pavements, have erected signs at every curve, intersection and railway crossing, have continuously patrolled the roads with uniformed police and in many other ways have striven earnestly to reduce traffic accidents.

And you, Mr. and Mrs. Motorist, truck-driver and motorcyclist! Have you done everything you possibly can to prevent accidents that may kill you and your family or some other persons to whom life is also sweet?

If you will just remember to Try Courtesy in all your thinking and driving in a motor vehicle you will have made your greatest possible contribution to the reduction of motor vehicle accidents.

Please remember there will be more traffic than ever this season and there will be more accidents and deaths, too, (and that may include you) unless there is more Courtesy shown by every motorist towards every other motorist.

So, again, I beg of you to "Try Courtesy" every inch of the way this season. Do that and you will get safely to where you are going and safely back again.

AN ALL-BLUE BRIDE.

The marriage of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Warfield, from all accounts, is going to be quite a colourful affair, the latter being reported as having her hair made a blue shade to match her gown. The ceremony will be a two-ring affair, but it is dollars to doughnuts that if the late P. T. Barnum were handling the show it would be nothing less than the popular three-ring variety.

It doesn't cost to advertise in The Record. It Pays.

Ontario Farmer of 75 Years Visits Big City First Time

Hamilton. — Thomas Schell, of Kilworthy, near Gravenhurst, "came to town" this week and it was a real event in his life, for the veteran resident of Northern Ontario had never seen street cars, tall buildings or rows of houses until he made the trip. His wife had seen city life and told him about it, but not until this week did Mr. Schell, who is 75 years of age, have a real "close-up" of urban hustle and bustle. He was so fascinated with it all that he expressed amazement that there could be such a contrast between life in quiet settlements of the North and populated centres, although the distance which separated them was not very great.

Mr. Schell was born in Kilworthy, which is 12 miles from Gravenhurst and situated on a blind sideroad that leads to his cabin home. He has eight daughters and four sons, and all have settled in the same district, so Mr. and Mrs. Schell and their descendants predominate in population of the place.

"TRY COURTESY" CAMPAIGN GEARED TO HIGHER SPEEDS

Sounding a strong warning that the heavy traffic increase on Ontario highways expected this summer will inevitably result in more traffic accidents and deaths unless every motor vehicle operator exercises constant care in driving, Hon. T. B. McQuesten Ontario highways minister, has announced that this week his department is launching, for a second year, a newspaper campaign urging every one of Ontario's 700,000 drivers to "Try Courtesy."

"The steady increase in motor traffic," Mr. McQuesten declared, "presents a vital challenge to every user of our streets and highways to aid in checking and reducing the horrible toll of lives which motor traffic costs us each year."

Modern motoring, he pointed out, is geared higher than ever before and this influence of speedy travel is geared higher than ever beforeja steadily increasing. "Every resource of science has been applied to make this faster pace a safe one. Shatterproof glass, improved four-wheel brakes, wider and smoother highways, more effective day and night road markers, new designs and construction in tires, better lighting equipment on automobiles and streets—all these factors have made their contribution to safer motoring.

"But no scientific factor," Mr. McQuesten insisted, "no matter how efficient or fool-proof, can ever have the slightest chance of success unless the simplest and most fundamental of human relations is applied. This element can be expressed in many different ways. It can be called 'consideration for others' or 'do as you would be done by.'

"In our newspaper campaign this year, we are urging drivers to 'try courtesy.' The dictionary says courtesy is 'politeness of manners, combined with kindness,' and we believe the sincere application of this simple idea by every driver in Ontario can eliminate death and destruction from our streets and highways and make them safe and useful servants of mankind they should be."

DRY CELL BATTERIES.

Interesting Facts About Our Dominion of Canada.

IT makes an old-timer rub his eyes and wonder if he has been dreaming to be told that 17½ million dry battery cells were produced in Canada last year. Their use is increasing by over a million each year.

The farmer is the chief support of this industry, although the dry cell is to be found everywhere. The battery sets for radio are mostly for rural use. The increased activity in mining accounts for a large part of the increase also.

Then there are the flashlights. Flashlights are replacing the old-fashioned oil lantern on the farm. Motorists and campers find them handy and even the policeman who long ago used to carry a bull's eye lantern affixed to his belt is now equipped with a flashlight in his pocket. The old toy lanterns which Santa Claus used to give the enterprising boy are gone and the reindeers bring flashlights out of the north instead. They are to be found everywhere. Eight million of them were made in Canada last year.

Science Looks Into The Sleeping Business

* * * *

—By—

J. V. McAREE.

JUST what sleep is, science is unable to say, and we doubt that we shall be able to clarify things for science in what follows. Yet the subject interests us greatly. We suppose that we sleep on an average of ten hours a night beginning between 8 and 9 o'clock. Of course we wake up sometime before we get up, and cannot say just how long the interval is; but one thing we are sure of and that is that we get plenty of sleep. If we do not our column is apt to suffer from it the next day. But we find now that soon after we wake we are ready to get up. We remember when the hardest duty any member of the family had was to get us out of bed in the morning. The next hardest was to get us to bed at night. So far as we are concerned we would rather go without sleep for twenty-four hours than take two or three or even four hours. We cannot sleep in the day time; but we have a friend, Mr. Christie, who after enjoying a sound night's rest can rise, eat his breakfast and return to bed for a refreshing slumber of four or five hours. After lunch he can drop off again until the pangs of hunger rouse him for dinner. Then he can retire to bed and really go to town.

Uneasy Sleepers

However, let us get to a more general consideration of the matter. which we are able to do because of some recently published observations of Dr. Donald A. Laird, Professor of Psychology at Colgate University. He has come to the conclusion that half the people in the United States do not get enough sleep. He has found that the average sleeper changes his position every five minutes through the night. If he changes half as often or four times as often he gets the same amount of rest, but not the same quality. His sleep does not refresh him so much. That explains why on Monday the average man is not feeling quite as fit as on the other days of the week. The fact is that the Sunday changes the ordinary routine. It breaks into a habit, and anything that does this is not likely to promote sounder sleep. Another prolific source of disturbed or shallow slumber is hunger pangs. If a man remains up until about midnight and has eaten nothing since 7 o'clock he is likely to be sleepless. Therefore, a light meal which will induce blood to flow to the stomach for digestive processes will tend to drain the brain, and this promotes sleep.

Old Superstition

A warm bath will help. So will a position in which the head is exposed to cold air while the body is covered. Dr. Laird has also the theory that the colour of a bedroom has something to do with proper sleep. Blues and green promote sleep, but reds and yellows cause wakefulness. In our own experience we have found that after the light is out and we get into bed it is difficult to discern the hues of wallpaper. The old superstition that one should not sleep on the heart is revealed for just another old superstition. Our Debunker, who used to be a feature of the Mail and Empire, called attention to the fact that as a matter of fact the heart is not on the left side at all but almost exactly in the middle of the chest. And it does not matter which side one falls asleep on, for one is certain to change to the other side in a few minutes, and keep shifting back and forth the rest of the night.

Too Much Sleep

Another expert quoted in the Literary Digest, Dr. Boigey, said that one should remain in bed for twenty minutes after waking up. It requires this length of time for the body circulation, slowed during sleep, to return to normal. Still another scientist, Dr. Lindlahr, says that people can sleep too much. He believes that mental sluggishness is due to this practice. He says that people who require alarm clocks to waken then at the time they are supposed to waken normally are sleeping too much. Some of them are not fully awake for a couple of hours. Some others are never really awake, which makes it bad. We do not know whether anybody ever slept as long as Rip Van Winkle, who is supposed to have been clothed in slothful slumber for twenty years. But there lives in Worksop, Eng., a healthy looking lamp lighter named Arthur Draby who hasn't slept for twenty years. He says he never feels tired and has no intention of ever going to bed. We're here to tell him he's missed something. We might mention that the general belief in Thomas Edison's sleeplessness is a myth.

Masters of Sleeping Art

It is true that he often slept only three or four hours a night. But he had the ability to go to sleep whenever he felt like it. When he was pursuing some elusive problem he might remain steadily at work for a couple of days and nights on end. At the end of that time he might go to sleep for eighteen hours. He was also an expert napper. Robert H. Davis, American magazine editor, has odd sleeping habits. He retires at 9 o'clock and rises at 1. Then he works until 3 or 4, retires again, and rises at 7. It is said that Georges Clemenceau had the same gift. Through the war, Lloyd George trained himself to sleep for a quarter of an hour or so, and would be greatly refreshed. This habit was largely responsible for the fact that he emerged at the end of the struggle with unimpaired health, and to-day is as vigourous physically as any man who never had a worry nor a thought in his life.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

A SEA SCOUT FLEET ON LAKE ONTARIO.

Lake Ontario will this summer see a fleet under the Boy Scout flag. The Sea Scouts of Toronto, through the good offices of Commodore T. K. SCOUT LEADER'S INDIAN PLAY.

A new venture in Boy Scout entertainment, an original musical play, "The Flight of an Arrow," was put on successfully by the 10th Wychwood Scout Troop and Cub Pack at Vaughan Road Collegiate, Toronto. The story was the work of Scoutmaster Fred Tighe and the musical arrangement by Mr. W. H. Watson. The play concerns an Indian princess, a missionary's daughter kidnapped in childhood, and the search for her by a young Mounty whose parents had been murdered by Indians when he was a boy.

WORLD SCOUT JAMBOREE STAMPS.

Special postage stamps of three denominations have been issued by the Netherlands government in honour of the Fifth World Jamboree of Boy Scouts to be held in Holland from July 31st to August 13th next. A 1½ cent depicts a Dutch Boy Scout badge on a light green background, the six-sent stamp depicts a drummer against a background of flags of different nations, calling the Scouts of the world together, and the 12½-cent stamp portrays the head and shoulders of a curly-headed Dutch Scout with arm outstretched in salute to the youth of the world. The stamps bear the legend "Nederland-Wereld Jamboree, 1937."

HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

MISSED TUBERCULOSIS.

PEOPLE may have tuberculosis and not know it. In other words, tuberculosis is often missed. Among the patients who are admitted to Sanitariums for tuberculosis there are always a good many who are what the doctors call "advanced" cases. What does that mean? Generally they have had tuberculosis a long time, but it had not been noticed. It had been missed.

It should not have been missed. But it was, and still is, in spite of all our work.

The late Doctor D. A. Stewart, one of the best authorities in Canada on tuberculosis, said that one hundred middle-aged men who had tubedculosis were studied and it was found that on an average they had had the disease for eight years before they thought they were sick enough to go to the doctor.

They should have known sooner.

Either the man has felt tired — tired all the time, tired when he wakened in the morning and tired all day, or else he has seemed to have lost energy and vim and initiative. He has not been able to "get into the game" as he used to do.

Or else he has lost the good colour he used to have. He used to be sunburned in summer, but this summer he has been pale. His good red blood which used to give him the colour in his cheeks, is not a red or as good as it used to be.

Or else he has lost weight. His weight was about right last year, but he has lost five or ten pounds since then.

He has had a little short cough in the mornings. He thinks it is just an irritation in his throat. Not at all. A cough that has lasted more than a month is a danger signal.

Spitting of blood—even a very little — even a trace — is not an early sign at all. It is an urgent sign and so is pain in the chest.

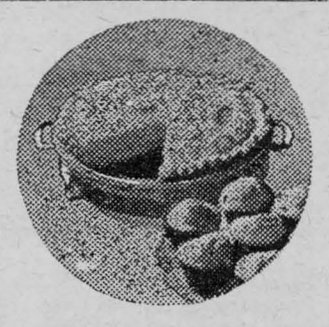

The safest procedure is to have a periodical medical examination every year, including an X-ray chest film. If this be properly done, tuberculosis is not likely to be missed.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Woman: "I'm not prejudiced at all. I'm going with a perfectly open and unbiased mind to listen to what I'm convinced is pure rubbish!"

Little Eric's uncle came to stay with the boy's family, and Eric had to give up his bed to make room for him. One morning at breakfast uncle remarked: "I must thank the thoughtful person who put the glass of water by my bed. "I found it very refreshing when I woke up during the night.

"Oh!" cried Eric, "have you swallowed my tadpoles an' everything?"

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

MISS HELEN LACEY, B.H.Sc.

YES, WE SHALL HAVE BANANAS.

WHERE do we get bananas? They have them in large bunches hanging in the fruit store windows and as far as actual experience goes, that is about all most of us know about bananas.

They grow on plants which when mature are as large as truees. The trunks are not woody like our trees, but juicy, and are made of leaf sheaves wrapped tightly around each other. These leaves are very large and palm-like. The plants have from 18 to 20 leaves all growing from what is known as the rhizome, the only woody part of the plant.

The plant grows from nine to ten months before the flower bud appears, and each plant bears only one bunch of bananas.

The bunches of bananas are picked while green and are allowed to ripen artificially. They must be kept in a cool place while ripening as during that time they produce a lot of heat.

BANANA ICE CREAM.

30 marshmallows
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¾ cup boiling water
1 cup mashed bananas
1½ cups cream

Melt the marshmallows in boiling water. Add the banana pulp and lemon juice. When quite cold and slightly thickened, combine with the cream which has been whipped. Freeze without stirring.

BANANA CREAM PIE.

1 cup hot milk
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 bananas

Scald milk. Add the cornstarch, sugar and salt together and add hot milk slowly. Cook over hot water until there is no taste of raw starch. Beat egg yolks and add first mixture to them slowly, stirring constantly to prevent eggs from cooking in lumps. Cool and add vanilla.

Slice the bananas into the baked crust and pour on the cream filling. Top with meringue made from two egg-whites and two tablespoons of powdered sugar. Brown in a slow oven.

FRUIT SALAD WITH BANANAS.

1 banana
½ lb. malaga grapes
1 dozen walnuts
Lettuce
Salad dressing

Peel the oranges and cut sections free of the white membrane with a sharp knife. Peel and scrape bananas, using a silver knife. Cut in cubes. Break nuts in pieces. Mix all together. Chill and when ready to serve pile lighty in lettuce leaves. Garnish with salad dressing and a few leaves of mint.

Variations may be made in this salad to suit the individual taste.

BANANA AND CHEESE SANDWICHES

1 cup cream cheese
¼ cup cream
2 bananas
¼ cup mayonnaise

Mash bananas to a pulp and mix well with the cheese, cream and mayonnaise. Spread between buttered slices of brown bread.

BANANA AND APRICOT SALAD.

For individual salads, place three halves of canned apricot on a lettuce leaf. On these pile diced bananas mixed with chopped walnuts and whipped cream. Garnish with small pieces of maraschino cherry and serve with whipped cream dressing.

One large banana contains approximately 100 calories, five of which are from protein, six from fat and 89 from carbohydrate.

* * * *

Bananas should always be scraped before slicing, and should always be sliced with a silver knife as it will help to prevent them from becoming dark in colour.

* * * *

Do not peel or slice bananas until ready to serve as they become dark on standing.

* * * *

Cold boiled rice served with sliced bananas, sugar and cream makes a nutritious and tasty dessert for the children and for grown-ups as well.

* * * *

Bananas are easier to digest when fully ripened, as during the ripening process part of the starch is changed to sugar.

The Adaptability of Anthony

EVERYONE up one side of Linden Avenue and down the other knew little Mrs. Clayton, and perhaps some of them knew "Anthony Junior" even better than his mother. At the age of a year and a month he was plump and placid, with a composure of manner remarkable to behold.

"He will go to anyone," his adoring mother often remarked.

On one such occasion a neighbour was heard to sigh significantly. But that was after Anthony Junior had "gone" to her three afternoons in the same week—a fact that offered some slight justification for her state of mind. . .

Mrs. Clayton had never shouldered much responsibility in her sunny ramble through life until it had been thrust upon her, as it were, in the guise of Anthony Clayton, and later, Anthony Junior; and because she was an extremely lovable and popular young person, her friends interfered, unconsciously of course, with the progress of her education by being quite willing to relieve her of domestic burdens.

That explains why Mrs. Clayton's nearest neighbour, Mrs. Gray, was not surprised one morning in June when, glancing out of her kitchen window, she saw Mrs. Clayton running across the lawn. Under the little woman's arm was a bundle that upon a nearer view proved to be the unprotesting form of Anthony Junior.

Mrs. Gray snatched a towel from the rack and dried her capable hands just in time to receive the baby into them and adjust him expertly to a position of normal comfort while she listened to the rather incoherent explanations of his mother.

"She phoned me to meet her at at Tyndall's. I thought she wasn't coming till next week — I've got to catch that train—"

Mrs. Clayton peered at the clock and drew a breath of relief. "Your clock is always right—I don't know what is the matter with ours. We have three, and they all keep different time—well, as I was explaining, it is Dorothea Miller. Professor Miller, you know. You've heard me speak of her."

Mrs. Gray nodded. "That very intellectual person you knew in college. Wrote something or other, didn't she?

"Yes, indeed!" said Mrs. Clayton enthusiastically. "She's most extraordinary. She goes in for psychology and all that sort of thing—environment, child culture, and I don't know what all. I've got her book on 'Infantile Intellect,' and it's just full of wonderful ideas on training a child's mind. I'd understand it better if Anthony Junior didn't keep me so busy. Well, she promised to stop over with me when she came up from Florida, and I'm just crazy to have her see my baby. I hate to ask you to keep him, but I don't know what else to do. She only telephoned half an hour ago and of course I can't take him. I'll be back as soon as I can this afternoon and bring her to stay over Sunday."

"Go right along," said Mrs. Gray, with a laugh. "Everything will be all right, and if you want that train you had better hurry."

"Is this Mrs. Gray?" sad the voice of Mr. Gray's stenographer. "Mr. Gray wishes you to come in at once to sign some papers."

Mrs. Gray gasped.

"It's about that real estate," the stenographer went on; "it has to be settled to-day and your signature is necessary. Mr. Gray wants you to be here by noon, if possible."

The receivers clicked simultaneously, and Mrs. Gray sank into a chair to gaze at Anthony, who promptly ceased his tour of the living room on all fours and sat back beaming at her.

Anthony gurgled reassuringly while Mrs. Gray racked her brain. At last she rose to her feet, and announced:

"I am going to take you over to the Wellses. I'll just leave a note for your mamma, so she will know where you are. Is that all right, sonny?"

Anthony sputtered a joyful affirmative, and only a very short time passed before Mrs. Gray had written the note and pinned it to the screen door of the back porch, given her guest his very early and very simple luncheon, and was on her way to the Wellses' bungalow, a few doors below her own.

Mrs. Wells' trim and smiling little maid-of-all-work answered the summons of the doorbell. "Mrs. Wells is out for the day. ma'am."

"O my!" gasped Mrs. Gray, and turned to go. Then, remembering that Mrs. Clayton, guided by the note on the screen door, would seek her offspring at the Wellses, she called to the wide-eyed girl, "I wanted to leave this baby with her! He belongs to Mrs. Clayton, so please tell her he is at Mrs. Edwards' and she'll understand!"

Casting that rather incoherent and breathless explanation behind her, Mrs. Gray, with what dignity the fleeting minutes allowed, hastened down the avenue toward the pretentious elm-shaded dwelling of the Edwardses.

To the emphatic clang of the big bronze knocker, Mrs. Edwards herself came to the door. "Thank goodness, you're home!" was Mrs. Gray's greeting. "I've been peddling this child all over town!"

Mrs. Edwards' blank look soon gave way to one of amusement as her friend narrated her hurried tale of woe. They were both laughing tearfully by the time Mrs. Gray finished.

"Of course I'll take him," said Mrs. Edwards. "I may have to be out for a little while, but, if I do, my laundress, Emma, is here, and she can be trusted to look after him. Go right along. Come here, precious."

Her ambiguous commands seemed intelligible to all concerned, for there was a quick transfer of Anthony, whose drooping eyelids indicated that any port that included a pillow among its mooring facilities was acceptable to him.

It was still early in the afternoon when Anthony, having finished his nap, was busily taking stock of his new surroundings; his hostess sat on the rug in front of him explaining the intricacies of a rubber lamp that had a cheerful squeak in its interior.

The squeak was suddenly drowned in the racuous note of a motor horn, and Mrs. Edwards, snatching up Anthony Junior, hastened out of the side door and down the path to the gate. An electric coupé was standing by the curb with Mrs. Edwards' correctly gowned and becomingly hatted sister beaming from the plush interior. Her expression, however, changed to one of chastened resignation as she surveyed Anthony Junior, who began to stretch gloating arms toward the shining mechanism of the car.

"So you are keeping him again, are you?"

Mrs. Edwards' tone was apologetic as she explained. "Mrs. Clayton had to go to the city."

"I should infer as much," commented her sister. "Well, you'll have to excuse yourself to him and come with me. We just have to pay this call and it won't take long. Emma's here, of course, and she can take care of him. She ought to know how, with six pickaninnies of her own. Hurry up!"

Mrs. Edwards capitulated and sought the obliging Emma, who was launching a flotilla of flatirons on the kitchen range.

"Oh, yas'm, Ah'll look aftah him!" Emma said, and beamed broadly.

By a little contrivng, — propping open doors and making a barricade of chairs to keep Anthony Junior from roving,—Emma was able to iron and at the same time to keep an eye on her charge. The gurgles with which he answered Emma's sociable chat were not less hearty than those that accompanied his farewell salute to Mrs. Edwards.

The afternoon wore on, the last piece was ironed, and still Mrs. Edwards had not returned. Emma glanced at the clock.

"Laws!" she ejaculated. "Whatever is keepin' Mis' Edwards this long time?"

Anthony Junior's reply was not elucidating, and Emma, who was not extensively familiar with the ways of motor cars, could not be expected to know that the electric coupé had lapsed into inaction at the most inconvenient point of a lonely road; but she did know that six kinky heads were waiting for her at home, and that she had to get dinner before Sam came in from his arduous day of janitor work.

The situation called for action of some sort, and after much cudgeling of her brain Emma hit upon a plan that sent a broad smile of gratification over her face. With the stub of a pencil and much labour, she wrote on a paper bag the following note:

Deer mis edwards i have took the baby hoam with me i cood not wate. Pleas tell mis klaton where he is. Yours trooly Emma Green.

Not a few passers-by looked curiously after the rotund, smiling coloured woman with her hat tilted rakishly over one eye who was carrying in her arms a fair-haired, contented baby whose pink-and-white skin looked the fairer by contrast. She finally turned down a street that was little more than an alley. As she neared the end of it, an avalanche of small pickaninnies descended upon her and her burden and virtually buried them from sight.

LATE that afteroon, Mrs. Clayton stepped lightly from the train and turned to her companion, whose smooth locks and gleaming eyeglasses under a frankly utilitarian hat proclaimed a mind on serious subjects bent.

"Here we are!" Mrs. Clayton cried happily. "I am so glad you could come at last! No we'll start directly home."

As they walked up the street she chatted on vivaciously. She was elated at the prospect of introducing a social lion of her own acquiring into the quiet life of the community. Behind her airy conversation her busy brain was already planning the details of an introductory tea.

Professor Miller's keen eyes were busily taking stock of her surroundings while she listened benignly to her hostess' chatter.

"I am anxious to see your little son," she remarked, as they passed a group of children playing in a gateway.

Mrs. Clayton gave an almost imperceptible start. "Oh, yes! I'm rather anxious to see him myself," she said. "you see, I left him with a friend this morning."

Professor Miller's "Oh!" had an intonation that caused Mrs. Clayton to continue rather hurriedly:

"I shouldn't think of leaving Anthony Junior with a maid, even if I had one. In fact, I never leave him unless it is absolutely necessary, and then only with some one I know well."

"Of course," agreed her distinguished guest. "Young children are more susceptible to influence than most people imagine. Psychologically speaking, I mean."

Mrs. Clayton turned upon her an admiring gaze. "Oh, if I could only grasp these great principles of child taining and apply them!" she said. "But I don't seem to have time to study. All I can do is to take good care of Anthony Junior and try to keep him away from all influences the least bit—er—contaminating, if that is the word."

"You are doing as much as anyone could ask. I am sure your child is receiving superior advantages, for, as you are aware, environment is the great thing. I'm sorry that my arrival should have made it necessary for you to entrust him to the care of strangers."

"Oh, he isn't with strangers!" Mrs. Clayton explained somewhat hastily. "Mrs. Gray is my nearest neighbour, and a very superior woman. She is secretary of our home club and has served on ever so many committees. Anthony Junior always loves to stay with her. He will go to anyone."

"How fortunate!" murmured the professor, and Mrs. Clayton began to wonder whether she had said something more than she intended.

By this time they were approaching the end of the street, and, glad to change the topic of conversation, Mrs. Clayton announced, "I think we'll take a short cut, if you do not mind passing through what we call the West End. It really isn't so bad—just a little colony where the poorer families live."

"Oh, indeed, I do not object!" And the professor's interest brightened visibly. "I always make it a point to see the slum district of every community I visit. I have made many interesting observations."

They left the paved streets and began to pick their way along a board sidewalk that sagged and dipped on its meandering way up the hill. The dooryards on either side were largely populated with chickens, puppies and children. The road was full of them.

"What an environment for children! Professor Miller remarked. "Of course it is not so bad as the city slum, but it puts almost as great a handicap on the young."

"Yes, indeed! Poor little mites! I never bring Anthony Junior through here, for fear he might catch something. We are trying to organize a section in our club—"

The details of the home club's ambition were lost. At that moment, around the corner careened a procession that caused both women to seek hasty refuge in a doorway, in order to escape a collision. Heading the array were two small shouting coloured boys, who grasped between them the tongue of a wagon. Seated in state in the triumphal car was a small charioteer who, beneath a generous layer of grime had unmistakable Caucasian features. A multitude of dusky retainers and a wildly barking puppy brought up the rear. . .

The two women gasped simultaneously with amazement.

"A white child!" gasped the professor.

"Anthony!" was Mrs. Clayton's horrified cry.

The procession came to an abrupt halt. The various members of it rolled their eyes in awe at the tableau as their honoured passenger waved aloft his dimpled hands, in one of which he held a half-demolished "raised" doughnut, and broke into delighted gurgles that were smothered the next instant in the ruffles of his mother's blouse.

Above the child's rumpled curls, Mrs. Clayton lifted horror-filled eyes to the face of Professor Miller. That lady, who was really quite human, surveyed the scene in one quick, comprehensive glance and then burst into a hearty and unacademic gale of laughter. In another breath Mrs. Clayton capitulated and joined her.

"I scrubbed Anthony Junior till he howled," concluded Mrs. Clayton some time later, while "Anthony Senior leaned weakly against the door casing and wiped the tears from his eyes. "Oh, yes, of course it is dreadfully funny,"—she was smiling herself.—"but you don't know how awful I felt."

Anthony Senior finally got his mirth under control. "Perhaps a little nursemaid would not be such a bad idea after all. Of course you never have approved of it, but — er — you would still be able to keep an eye on Anthony Junior's environment, wouldn't you?"

"Anthony Baxter Clayton!" said his wife sternly. "You'll go with me on Monday to look for one! And I'm going to put a shawl strap around Anthony Junior and take him, too!"

CONTROL THE TENT CATERPILAR.

Now is the time to control tent caterpillars. The whitish webs constructed by the insects are only too commonly seen on neglected fruit trees, and on roadside trees, especially wild cherries. The caterpillars may be readily killed by spraying infested trees with lead arsenate 2 lbs. in 40 gallons, or by destroying the tent by hand when the caterpillars are inside them, which is usually on cloudy days and early in the morning. Burning the nests with a torch is effective but may injure the trees.

SIMPLE INSECT CONTROL.

The control of most vegetable insects is not a very difficult or complicated matter if the grower will bear in mind one or two simple facts which can be quickly learned by watching the habits of the pests causing the damage. Insects, according to the type of injury they do, can be divided into two general classes; those known as biting insects, which in feeding actually bite a piece out of the plant attacked, and those known as sucking insects which suck the juices out of the leaves or stems without noticeably changing their outline. For biting insects (caterpillars, cutworms, etc.) three poisons are commonly recommended, arsenate of lead, arsenate of lime, and Paris green. Sucking insects (aphids, plant bugs, leafhoppers, etc.) are customarily controlled by nicotine sulphate, either in liquid or dust form.

TRAPNEST IS BEST TEST.

Trapnesting being to the laying flock what the scale and Babcock test are to the dairy herd, it is the only means of accurately determining the production of the individual hen. At the Cap Rouge Experimental Station, the hens are selected by the trapnesting method and the poor layers are marketed after their first year's laying. Hatching eggs are selected from high producers, and should weigh at least 24 ounces per dozen. Unthrifty chicks, and cockerels except those from the best hens are marketed during the summer. By mid-September the pullets which are strong, vigourous, healthy and active, which have a large, deep head, stout beak, and large, bright, prominent eyes, are kept, while the birds which are unthrifty or unhealthy, which have a crow head, long shallow beak or small sunken eyes, or are off-types are eliminated.

SOFT BACON.

The further expansion of our bacon trade with Great Britain depends to a large extent upon quality improvement. Recent advices from the British market criticize our supplies on the score of underfinish in a large percentage of bacon sides, as indicated by softness and flabbiness. This soft, flabby bacon is most likely the product of underfinished hogs, of which there are considerable numbers being marketed at yards and plants in Canada at the present time. The remedy lies with the producer in holding back unfinished hogs. In most cases another week or so on feed would put on the finish so necessary for the making of firm bacon. All hogs of bacon and select weights should be properly finished at their weights. Underfinish is as detrimental as overfinish, and in this case is a very serious obstacle to efforts being made to popularize Canadian bacon with the British consumer. Every hog raiser is asked to co-operate to the best of his ability.

CONTROLLING CUTWORMS.

Cutworms are usually active and feeding before most crops are even in the ground. Hence it is most important to be prepared for their attack at the very first of the season. Bran bait has given the most effective control for many years, and is made up with the following ingredients: Bran, 20 pounds; molasses, one quart; Paris green, one-half pound, and water, about two and a half gallons.

In making the bait, the dry ingredients should first be thoroughly mixed. The molasses is then stirred into the water and added to the bran and Paris green. In mixing the bait, only enough water should be added to make the material the consistency of wet sawdust. It must not be made sloppy but should be in the condition of crumbling in the hands and slipping easily through the fingers.

Land that was heavily infested the year before should be treated prior to the plants being set out. This is done by broadcasting the bait at the rate of 15-20 pounds per acre a few nights before transplanting. One application should be sufficient but, if the cutworms are numerous, a second should be made two or three days after the first. The bait should always be spread in the evening just before dusk, and if possible, a warm still night should be chosen for the work.

If the attack of cutworms is unexpected and the plants are already in the field, the bait should be applied around the base of each plant, using about one-half teaspoon in each case. Should one application not kill all the cutworms, a second treatment should be made two or three nights later.

THE REAL DRIVER KNOWS THE ANSWERS

Improved roads, and the increasing volume of fast traffic have added to the responsibility of every individual user of the highway to conform to standard rules of safe behaviour.

The following questions and answers have been prepared with the definite intention of making you a more competent driver by providing a better understanding of the traffic regulations and the rules of safety.

1. What does the law require of you when involved in a motor vehicle accident?

You must stop and give all necessary aid, give your name, address, and permit number of your motor vehicle. You must also, if the accident results in personal injury or in property damage apparently in excess of $50.00, make a report forthwith to the nearest police officer.

2. Which vehicle has the right of way when two vehicles reach an intersection at about the same time?

The Vehicle approaching from the right.

3. Must a driver of a vehicle approaching an intersection yield the right of way to any vehicle which has entered the intersection?

Yes.

4. What is the speed limit at a street intersection where the driver's view is obstructed?

10 miles per hour. On rural highways—15 miles per hour.

5. What is the speed allowed when driving across a level unobstructed railway crossing?

6. In what position must a car be before (a) turning to the left?

As close to the centre-line as possible.

(b) Before turning to the right?

7. What must you do when turning away from the curb?

Look to see that you can turn out safely without interfering with other traffic. It is wise to signal intention to turn out.

More of these helpful suggestions for motorists will follow next week.

CANADA'S SPINSTERS.

IT was once an English maxim that a young woman should never be married until she had spun herself a set of body, table and bed linen. Hence the name "spinster."

Formerly the title "spinster," was given to unmarried women of the gentle classes, from a viscount's daughter down, and often retained by them on their marriage, especially when the husband was not of the gentry. Nowadays, a spinster in the popular mind is an unmarried woman somewhat advanced in years.

However, we may be allowed to say that all unmarried women in Canada, twenty years old and over, are spinsters. There are over 660,000 of them. There is one spinster for every three or four married women in the Dominion, or women who have been married. Twenty-six thousand of these married women are under twenty, and twenty of them are under 15, most of these twenty are Indians.

There are not so many spinsters as bachelors so it might be agreed that there is no dearth of husbands and that cannot be the cause of their spinsterhood. There are about one million bachelors in Canada who have passed their twentieth birthday, so numerically there are plenty of husbands available for all the spinsters, and plenty to spare.
